Lights, Camera, Action: All Eyes On Alverno High School Community Meetings, Public Hearings Scheduled To Discuss Use and Expansion

The City of Sierra Madre will be considering a Temporary Use Permit to allow private rental events (non-school related events) to occur in the Alverno Villa Del Sol d'Oro, located on the school's campus, at 200 N. Michillinda Avenue. The purpose of the meeting on September 8, 2009 is to receive public input on the matter. The council will continue the matter to September 22, 2009, to receive additional public input and will consider the request at such date.

According to Ann Gillick, Head of School, the rental the beautiful Villa and grounds helps keep tuition costs down for this private school, though these special uses are governed by a strict set of rules on times, filming, etc. in respect for the neighborhood surrounding them.

Alverno, a Catholic High School for Girls that has resided in Sierra Madre since 1960, sits on 13 acres of land and includes the historic Villa Del Sol d'Oro, the site of photographic shoots, movies and television shows. Living With Wildlife - Meeting Draws Standing Room Only Crowd

SMPD Chief Marilyn Diaz, along with Sergeant Donna Cayson, held an informative meeting Friday evening to discuss Living With Wildlife for residents. The city is a wildlife sanctuary and killing animals is illegal. Our wildlife friends include bears, raccoons, coyotes and an occasional mountain lion. Representatives from the Pasadena Humane Society and National Park Service were also present. Presenter Kristine Hutchinson, a Sierra Madrean with the NPS, discussed in great detail many of the myths associated in living with bears. According to SMPD Captain Larry Giannone, the city has four bears that frequent the area, however, while being a nuisance, they have not posed a threat to residents. It was also noted that although a bear was killed in Duarte this year, no bears have been harmed in Sierra Madre. One way of minimizing the presence of unwanted critters is not to provide food for them. The council chambers were packed as the community learned how to live and not be threatened by our animals. Real Live Wire!

On Friday, Sierra Madre Fire Department and Paramedics were called to the parking lot of the Woman's Club after a live electrical wire fell to the ground. There were no injuries, but the Club was without power for the rest of the day. Firefighters Picard and Garcia secure the area.

I'm always amazed that the Friday Family Lemon to Chestnut, it is unbelievable to see popularity after all these years, but keeps getting bigger and better every week, closing down for only about two months a year. I sound like my Dad, but it seems that only yesterday, the early '70s, we were trying to convince the merchants on Myrtle Ave, that a change was needed in Old Town. Half of the stores were vacant and the other half refused to allow the City to dig up the street from Lime to Olive for redesigning with a new plan for survival. Every month was the wrong time of the year; finally, while Stan's Sewing Machine was still grumbling and threatening, we had to bite the bullet and "do it". Most of the merchants, in fact, all of them, had back door entrances so it wasn't a total loss for the extensive time it took to give Monrovia Old Town a new look.

By the time all was completed I was the first woman Mayor and rumors were rampant that there would probably be hanging flower baskets on the new street lamps. Never passed my mind, but that wouldn't have been too bad. At one point along the way, midst all of the torn up construction, Sam Silverman from Box Jewelers and I had coffee served to us in the middle of the intersection at Myrtle and Lemon.

to see how things are these days. The entire the street. Gloria has owned and operated business started as only the Farmers' Market and was very popular. Then, like Topsy, it really grew, the idea being to feature local arts and crafts items. I understand it has become pretty non-arts and crafts with people bringing in jeans, women's clothes, shoes and anything else they can get their hands on, probably from outlets on the outskirts. From Festival has not only maintained its that sea of white-pointed-covered booths and food stands, solidly packed in on both sides of the street. One could do entire Holiday shopping right now: every kind and make of jewelry, hats, handbags, dresses, sports shoes, you name it. It's hard to take it all in and people come regularly with the entire family from all over the valley every week.

> The Farmers' Market was at the south end of the avenue, covering at least two blocks. All of the fruits, vegetables and breads looked beautifully fresh and were doing a land-office business. I had a chance to visit with Kathy and Emmy Mueller at the Monrovia Bakery before closing time at 5 pm. They have been in Monrovia forever and said they had no plans for retirement at this point, although the economy had hit them slightly but things were once again picking up.

Rudy's Mexican Restaurant is one of the popular eating places on the avenue and they have set up a big stand on the corner of Colorado, next to their restaurant, to entice everyone on Fridays. Ran into Marcia McCarville and Gloria Huss having a bite at the outside tables. Marcia's Mom, Phyllis had been on the Council and City Treasurer before her death a few years ago. Her Dad, Ray belongs to our Senior Club and is recovering So, yesterday I ventured down to Old Town from hip surgery at the Leven Oaks Hotel up Monrovia Floral for umpteen years and has been active in Downtown affairs.

> All in all, The Family Festival is one huge success and has been a model around the state, even in my day, probably more so now. Having the Krikorian Theater just north of the festival is also a drawing card. Postrye@ netzero.com

Mother, Boyfriend Charged in Torture Death of Toddler

Police announced Wednesday the arrest of a mother and her boyfriend in the alleged torture and death of their 2 year-old toddler Rene Torres.

Both, Maria Pelaez, 29, and Gabriel Diaz, 32, of Pasadena were arrested Tuesday night police said. They were later charged with taping the feet, legs and arms of Torres who had died earlier in the night of asphyxiation.

According to Lt. John Dewar, Torres was found deceased by paramedics in the 500 block of Summit Ave. at 6 a.m. Tuesday after Pelaez called 911. Police Thursday released the audio of the call in which Pelaez sounds frantic.

The suspicious nature of the death led police to open an investigation they said. The suspects were arrested after interviews and examination of evidence pointed to foul play. Detectives, at the residents, found clothing which had been taped.

The suspects later admitted that they had repeatedly bound the child over the last several months as a form of discipline. Police also said, "on occasion," the victim's mouth was taped shut.

Their bail was set at $1 million each.

Pasadena Police Chief Bernard Melekian said, "It is unfortunate that too many times, we find that children have died at the hands of another and it is particularly disturbing when the evidence leads us to those who are the primary caretakers."

Fraud Alert: PWP Credit Card Scam

If you get a call from someone claiming to be representative from Pasadena Water and Power and asking for a credit card number for a pastdue payment, or offering to come by and pick up cash for the payment, don't do it!

Anyone who receives such 'a call should contact Pasadena Police Department at (626) 744-4241 so a report can be filed.

Pasadena Water and Power typically does not call residential customers who are delinquent on their water and electricity bills to request immediate credit card payment to prevent shutoff, and does not send staff to residential households or commercial businesses to collect money. Instead, notices are mailed customers inviting them to call a customer service representative to provide payment or set up a workable payment schedule.

The PWP customer service number is (626) 744-4005 and the website www.cityofpasadena. net/waterandpower/ customerservice.

Pasadena City College to Induct New Campus Center

Pasadena City College will be inaugurating the brand new Industrial Technologies Building and Campus Center/Bookstore, as well as breaking ground on the Center for the Arts Friday. Festivities begin at 7 a.m. and will include a number of speeches by elected officials and PCC representatives.

The ceremony will feature a series of remarks by Dr. Jeanette Mann, president of the Pasadena Area Community College District Board of Trustees; state Sen. Carol Lieu (21st District); Assemblyman Anthony Portantino (44th District); City of Pasadena Mayor Bill Bogaard; and PCC officials.

With the addition of the new Industrial Technologies PCC greatly Building, enhances its automotive, construction, building drafting, electronics, electricity, and welding programs for decades into the future. All of the latest technologies are featured in order to make the learning experience relevant in the modern world. It has 15 new laboratories and classrooms, along with faculty and administrative offices, on two stories. The building measures 66,558 square feet. The new Bookstore will be almost double the size of the previous store. It will also be a two-story building, with the Bookstore occupying the entire first floor, along with about half of the second floor. The remainder of the second floor will house Campus Police and Student

Business Services. The new Campus Center greatly improves Food Services on campus through the completion of a modern instructional and functional kitchen. The new servery and dining facilities provide students with an up-to-date, inviting area to eat, study, and socialize. Wireless computer access will be present in all areas.

Associated Student Body offices and workrooms are key features, along with the Student Affairs offices. The Journalism Department will be able to better serve the needs of the students in its modern, second-floor suite. For more information

Tour Pasadena 'Moveabouts'

Everyone who lives or works in Pasadena is encouraged to take the MoveAbout Tours from Aug. 22 through Sept. 27 to experience the city in a different way and share their thoughts with city planners.

Each of the six self-guided tours have been designed to highlight specific issues such as residential density, walkability, bikeability, architectural design, open space, re-use of historic buildings and more.

The tours are part of a communitywide outreach effort to help Pasadenans with four of the most important elements of the General Plan: Land Use, Mobility, and Open Space and Conservation.

Guidebooks with simple instructions, background information, questions to consider, maps and more will be available beginning Saturday, Aug. 22, at locations throughout Pasadena including City Hall, public libraries and community centers. A guidebook will also be posted online at www.cityofpasadena.net/ generalplan. Guidebooks in Spanish will be available as

Those who take one or more tours will be able to get their guidebooks stamped by merchants along the route, which will make tour-takers eligible for free prizes at a General Plan community open house in November. The ARTS Bus and Walking Tour combines a ride through Pasadena biotechnology healthcare district and a walking tour through one of the community's oldest residentialneighborhoods.

On the Bicycle Tour cyclists will experience a variety of streets designated or soonto-be designated for bicycle travel, visit several parks and see the city's latest solar installation.

Drivers will have the choice of taking an east or west tour, or both. On the Driving Tour East they will experience a neighborhood that is transitioning from residential to industrial uses, a group of suburbanoriented residential and commercial developments, and some of Pasadena ethnic commercial business districts. Those who take the Driving Tour West will experience the diversity of Pasadena 's built landscape as they drive from the health care and biotechnology corridor to a thriving transit-oriented urban center and historic northwest neighborhoods that are in transition.

People who take the Gold Line Tour will visit four of the six stations in Pasadena

STAR Test Results Show PUSD Improving

Student achievement in public Pasadena Unified School to rise in 2009, according to the California Standardized Testing and Reporting (STAR) results released today by Elementary Education. school student achievement continued to rise in all subjects, particularly at schools targeted for improvement in 2008, while most middle and high schools posted gains in English Language Arts.

"I am pleased that PUSD achieved some of the highest one-year gains ever in the number of students scoring proficient or advanced on the state test," said Superintendent Edwin Diaz. "Due to our sustained emphasis on powerful instruction, improvement, and several middle and high schools showed significant improvement."

The STAR program assesses ten or higher percentage point Hamilton, Roosevelt, San school students' increase. knowledge of the California District (PUSD) continued academic content standards in grades two through 11. These standards specify what students should learn in each grade level for the following California Department subject areas: English Language Arts, Mathematics, Science and History/Social Science. Under the California Standards Test (CST), one of six components of the STAR program, student performance is reported in five levels: advanced, proficient, basic, below basic and far below basic. Only advanced and proficient levels are considered as meeting grade level standards.

District-wide, 46% of PUSD students scored at or above proficient in English Language Arts, an increase of 5% from the prior year. The percentage elementary of district students scoring schools continued to accelerate at proficient and advanced increased for all grades from 2008 to 2009, except grade 9, and seven schools showed a Free for Life" – Freedom is often misunderstood. Christian freedom does not mean we can do anything we like, whenever we like. Real freedom comes in restraint for the right reasons. Faith can set us free from some powers in order to be available for others. Discover the freedom God gives.

interview former George McGovern (D-S.D.), the host out that pointed although of what we know of the Watergate Scandal revealed during Richard Nixon's second term in office, enough was known about the break-in, hush money and connections to the Committee to Re-Elect the President prior to the 1972 election that it could have been made an issue during McGovern's presidential campaign. "Why wasn't it?" McGovern replied that it had been considered, discussed and argued among his top campaign staff. Finally, they decided not to inject the issue into the campaign, with the consensus being that the American people simply wouldn't believe that the President of the United States could be a party to such things. Although in view of what's happened over the past eight years that notion seems a bit quaint, there's still a lot of truth to it - especially if the officeholder is someone you voted for. There's also a tendency to, as President Obama put it, "Look forward, not backward" (which is how I wanted to respond to a reminder of an overdue parking ticket). rather just take Karl Rove's word for it that the documents which, according to Judiciary Committee Chair John Conyers (D-Mich.), describe Rove as a "driving force" behind the firings, in fact exonerate him. It's not just a matter of choosing between letting bygones-be-bygones and settling scores, but in recognizing that past actions have caused real damage, to institutions and to people, that is ongoing and needs to be rectified. Just ask Don Siegleman.

Former Alabama Governor Siegleman earned his law degree at Georgetown, was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, and served as Alabama's Secretary of State, Attorney General and Lieutenant Governor before being elected Governor in 1998. He was instrumental in expanding auto manufacturing in his state and was a tireless advocate for universal education. A close race for re-election in 2002 ended with the Associated Press declaring Siegleman the winner and a victory

Shortly after midnight on election day, however, Republican election officials in Baldwin County discovered a "technical glitch" and found that Republican Bob Riley had in fact won with less than one-quarter of one percent of the vote. Although Siegleman's allies found it odd this "technical glitch" effected only the governor's race among all the other measures on the ballot, the governor eventually declared, "I've decided that a prolonged election controversy would defense team notes from interviews held Attorneys prior to the hurt Alabama", and conceded. That with this witness. Risking her job, a 2006 elections, want to same year, Siegleman was indicted see those responsible on federal fraud charges, which were held accountable for dismissed when the judge threw out the prosecutor's evidence.

Republican lawyer Dana Simpson signed a declaration that she'd heard Bob Riley campaign strategist Bill Canary assure other supporters that "Karl" was working with U.S. Justice Dept officials to make sure Siegleman wouldn't present a threat, and had herself been ordered by Karl Rove to "catch Siegleman cheating on his wife". (Soon after making these charges, Simpson's house burned down and her car was driven off the road. "Anytime you speak truth to power, there are great risks. I've been attacked.")

As Siegleman campaigned to reclaim the governorship from Riley in 2006, he was indicted and tried on charges of fraud, bribery and obstruction of justice. It was alleged that while in office, Siegleman traded a seat on a state regulatory board for a contribution to the (unsuccessful) campaign for a state lottery to fund education, though the donor had already been serving on that board under three previous Republican administrations. Although supposedly having recused herself, the prosecution was guided by U.S. Attorney Leura Canary, wife of Republican strategist and Rove associate Bill Canary. There was talk that presiding judge Mark Fuller, appointed by President George W. Bush a few years earlier, would "hang Don Siegleman".

A major prosecution witness was convicted of extortion, and it was confirmed he'd not been present at a key event (the writing of a check) he claimed to have witnessed. Prosecutors failed to turn over to Siegleman's

Justice Department staffer turned over documents confirming the prosecution's inappropriate contact with jurors allegations Judge Fuller refused to pursue. Leura Canary continued to advise subordinates handling the case, arguing that Siegleman's charge that his prosecution was politically motivated was grounds for a stiffer sentence.

Prosecutors asked for a sentence of thirty years, but Judge Fuller sentenced Don Siegleman to more than seven years in federal prison and a $50,000 fine. Siegleman was denied the customary 45 days to "get his affairs in order" and was led out in shackles to a maximum security prison, with much of the time spent in solitary confinement.

In July 2007, a petition signed by 44 former states Attorneys General, Republicans and Democrats, petitioned Congress to investigate the matter. They noted that in the case of Alabama Governor Guy Hunt, a Republican accused of pocketing $200,000 (no one was accused of profiting in the Siegleman case), the same prosecutor had recommended probation. In March 2008 the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals approved release during appeals, but a year later upheld most charges though agreeing to review the sentence. It's easy to simply avoid such stories and pretend they couldn't happen - not here, not today. But it's important to pay attention and to encourage coverage in the media, as this story was covered in a segment on 60 MINUTES last year. The segment aired all over the country except for Huntsville, Alabama, where the CBS affiliate claimed they briefly went dark because of another "technical

a two-part Q and A I economics professor I know who lives in the United States, about some American myths about the Canadian health care system:

Myth: Taxes in Canada are extremely high, mostly because of national health care. "In actuality, taxes are nearly equal on both sides of the border. Overall, Canada's taxes are slightly higher than those in the U.S. However, Canadians are afforded many benefits for their tax dollars, even beyond health care—tax credits, family allowance, and cheaper higher education - so the end result is a wash. At the end of the day, the average after-tax income of Canadian workers is equal to about 82 percent of their gross pay. In the U.S., that average is 81.9 percent."

Myth: Canada's health care system is a cumbersome bureaucracy.

"The U.S. has the most bureaucratic health care system in the world. More than 31 percent of every dollar spent on health care in the U.S. goes to paperwork, overhead, CEO salaries, profits, etc. The provincial single-payer system in Canada operates with just a 1 percent overhead. Think about it. It is not necessary to spend a huge amount of money to decide who gets care and who doesn't when everybody is Myth: The Canadian system is significantly more expensive than that of the U.S.

"Ten percent of Canada's GDP is spent on health care for 100 percent of the population. The U.S. spends 16.2 percent of its GDP, but 16 percent of its population has no coverage whatsoever and millions of others have inadequate coverage. In essence, the U.S. system is considerably more expensive than Canada's. Part of the reason for this is uninsured and underinsured people in the U.S. still get sick and eventually seek care. People who cannot afford care wait until advanced stages of an illness to see a doctor and then do so through emergency rooms, which costs

This is the first part of considerably more than primary care services. "What the American taxpayer may not realize had with a Canadian is that such care costs about $45 billion per year, and someone has to pay it. This is why insurance premiums increase every year for insured patients while co-pays and deductibles also rise rapidly."

> Myth: Canada's government decides who gets health care and when they get it.

"While HMOs and other private medical insurers in the U.S. do indeed make such decisions, the only people in Canada to do so are physicians. In Canada, the government has absolutely no say in who gets care or how they get it. Medical decisions are left

"What the American taxpayer may not realize is that such care costs about $45 billion per year, and someone has to pay it. This is why insurance premiums increase every year for insured patients while co-pays and deductibles also rise rapidly."

entirely up to doctors, as they should be. "There are no requirements for preauthorization whatsoever. If your family doctor says you need an MRI, you get one. In the U.S., if an insurance administrator says you are not getting an MRI, you don't get one no matter what your doctor thinks - unless, of course, you have the money to cover the cost."

Next week's myths: In Canada there are long waits for care, which compromise access to care; Canadians are paying out of pocket to come to the U.S. for medical care; Canada is a socialized health care system in which the government runs hospitals and where doctors work for the government; and Canadian health care is rationed because there aren't enough doctors in Canada.

WEIGHTING

Please notice my title. In a way (weigh) the one word says it all. As you may recall, I started writing this column almost two years ago with my description of my successful weight loss program. I had thrown away my diabetic medications and wrote of my joy at attaining new levels of overall health and energy. Later columns described my continued weight loss and the surprise of doctors at the ease at which I maintained my new life style.

I awoke at dawn, walked my dog as we enjoyed the sunrise. I meditated. I ate my vegan meals and arrived at work on time. I played golf and tennis several times a week. There's more but it's pointless to go on because now it is no more.

Alas, I have gained over fifty pounds. (I'm afraid to get on a scale and learn my actual weight.) I am having trouble getting up from couches and getting out of car seats. My closest friends are secretly telling my wife that she must do something. They are all concerned and I pretend not to notice. My life of pretense has begun as I portray to myself a kind of daily unconcern as every day I get FATTER. Really, I should go out and buy new clothes as my tight fitting; button popping wardrobe has become a disgrace. I am like a man in a burning building focusing on reading a book while everything around him is about to go up in flames. Really, I like that analogy. I am like my country occupying itself with pointless debate while the whole planet is being destroyed.

No, I am not going to allow myself to be distracted by shifting to some sort of description of political concern. All right, one more sentence. This article is not just about me; it is about all of us and our own compliance in self-destruction. Okay; back to me. As the title of this article proclaims I am WEIGHTING --- waiting to die. How unpleasant it is to write this. Really, I don't believe it. I imagine that I have some control of my behavior. The creation of this very article is my attempt at lighting a flare that will illuminate my internal being enough to force me to notice so that I can RESCUE myself. I must become my own search and rescue team. The weight of this realization is staggering. I think we all know we make choices as to how we live our life but we do not want to be held accountable for these choices.

I am already tired of the subject matter of this article; probably you are tired of reading it. I know what I have to do to lose weight. Yes - the secret is EAT LESS and notice what I eat. On my former diet, which lasted about a year and a half I avoided soda, (diet soda especially), alcohol, caffeine, starchy vegetables like potatoes and white rice, fried foods, white flour, meat, fish, and all dairy products. I drank lots of water; oh and I almost forgot. I declared war on elevators and walked the lonely stairways of the county courthouses.

Now, I'm really concerned. Just writing that last my paragraph has exhausted me. How did I do it? Really, I haven't a clue. It just happened sort of the way shaving off my beard or shaving my head just happened. It happened but did I have anything to do with these choices? Did I make them happen? My answer right now, to myself, seems crazy. It feels like I had little to do with these choices and, believe it or not, none of it was very hard.

Well, what can I say? I want it to happen again. I'm tired of weighting around. I'd like to say I'm committed but right now I don't trust myself. No matter what I say I'm going to do, I have great doubts about my ability and actual desire to do it.

Okay, here's my commitment. One breath at a time I'm going to do the best that I can do. I'm going to imagine that we're all in this together---supporting each other so that we won't be weighted down by our own fears and doubts. I guess that's what this article has helped me to do. I kind of understand that I can't do it alone. I am reaching out to you—opening my eyes to the wonders of this world that WE are so fortunate to share. I hope this is the only SURVIVAL SKILL WE NEED....

WEIGHT NO MORE I may be a bit carried away; after all, it's only our lives.

GREG Welbourne How To Rescue Healthcare (from the politicians)

As summer draws to a close, we've all had a chance to catch up with our elected representatives as they've ventured out into the hinterlands. But while we may have enjoyed seeing them and giving them a piece of our mind, I'm not so sure that they share the sentiment. It appears that the public reaction to the "public option" being proposed by the administration has been more pronounced and certainly more negative than any of these representatives ould have imagined.

People are scared, especially seniors, and while there is ample justification for that fear, there are also some fabrications, rumors and embellishments which need to be clarified. So let's clear the air. First of all, the claim that the government will institute "death panels" is a bit over the top, if only because no politician or bureaucrat would be stupid enough to use that name. However, the concern that healthcare - and especially healthcare in the last 6 months of life - will be rationed by bureaucrats is very

If healthcare becomes a right and is perceived as a free service, it is both common sense and one of the bedrock laws of economics that demand for that free service will increase astronomically. This means that the cost of providing this service (born by the government) will soar as well, which will inevitably lead to higher taxes to support the burden. When taxes reach the breaking point, the public will scream "enough", and healthcare will have to be rationed. There is no other possible outcome, and it has occurred in every other country where "free" government healthcare has been tried.

Given that healthcare costs are highest in the last 6 months of life, it is only logical that this is where the bureaucrats and politicians will focus their cost-cutting efforts. This also has happened in other countries. When it comes to end-of-life healthcare decisions, somebody has to make the call about how much to spend - the government or the patient.

So, I pose a logical question. What would you be willing to spend to extend your life another 6 months? If you lived in England, you wouldn't be allowed to answer that question. The National Health Service makes that call and won't pay more than $22,000 to extend life by 6 months. Now according to Johns Hopkins University, the cost of chemotherapy drugs alone can cost $30,000. Add in a hospital stay, and you're way over the maximum allowed. It's quite conceivable that the government would refuse Facing rising costs to supply the "free" service to millions of Americans, the government is going to have to make these calls if the administration's current plan goes forward. There will also be tremendous incentives to "coach" terminally ill patients into ending life early. Think I'm exaggerating? The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) does just that right now in their "Your Life, Your Choices" document which they give to all veterans facing such issues. Doubt me, look it up on line.

The central debate concerning healthcare reform is about control. Liberals believe that the government should control these major decisions, while Conservatives believe that the individual should control decisions concerning their own life. While polls show that the vast majority of Americans support the conservative philosophy here, there are problems which need to be addressed.

The central problem with our current healthcare system is the loss of insurance coverage when changing jobs or getting divorced. Some people transition easily from one job to another, but if you are in between and happen to get sick, new insurance is almost impossible to purchase. While I don't deny the severity of this problem, I must point out that government rules and regulations cause the problem. If employer-provided healthcare weren't tax subsidized at the expense of

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

To: Citywide

From: The City of Sierra Madre

Subject: Consideration and Adoption of Citywide Sewer System Management Plan (SSMP) Applicant: City of Sierra Madre, 232 West Sierra Madre Boulevard, Sierra Madre, CA

The City of Sierra Madre gives notice, pursuant to State of California law, that on September 8, 2009, the City Council will consider adoption of a citywide Sewer System Management Plan (SSMP.) The California State Water Resources Control Board has adopted a Statewide General Waste Discharge Requirement and Monitoring and Reporting program through issuance of order No. 2006-003-DWQ. Adoption of an SSMP is a requirement of that order, applicable to all agencies operating sewage collection facilities of a mile long or greater.

The Board Order and resulting SSMP's are intended to improve water quality by the reduction of sewer system overflows. The SSMP establishes sewer system maintenance procedures, overflow response and reporting procedures, record-keeping procedures, legal authorities for controlling illegal connections and discharges to the sewer, sewer system design standards, and sewer system capital improvement needs. The SSMP also establishes baseline sewer system conditions through video inspection and metering/measurement of existing privately purchased healthcare, this problem 5. Allow individuals to make large contributions wouldn't exist. So here is a conservative proposal for how to "fix" healthcare. 1. The tax treatment of health insurance purchases should be equal. Whether you purchase your health insurance on your own or do so by the employer paying for it (which means he has reduced your wages accordingly), it shouldn't matter. If this change were made, most insurance would be purchased privately (and wages would increase correspondingly), and people would "own" their coverage and be able to take it with them when they change jobs or suffer a divorce. 2. Eliminate all government rules which impose "minimum coverage" on insurance companies. By forcing insurance companies to cover birth control or other non-essential procedures, the price of insurance is increased for everyone. We should allow individual freedom to rule the market place. If I want birth control for my family, I'll buy the coverage. If I don't, I should be allowed to purchase a lower cost policy which

3. Allow people to purchase a guarantee for future health insurance. This is a great cost saving idea that is allowed in some insurance markets. The individual is allowed to pay a small amount to an insurance company which then promises to sell them a certain amount of health insurance in the future regardless of their health at that future time.

4. Repeal all the anti-competitive laws which prohibit insurance companies from competing for business across state lines. This monopoly power is granted to insurance companies by the government and increases costs. Again, well intentioned regulations ended up benefiting the regulated at the expense of the consumer.

to tax-deductible Health Savings Accounts. When individuals have some skin in the game, they tend to be very wise with their purchases of healthcare services, and costs go down.

6. Level the playing field between insurance companies and those who file lawsuits against them. Right now the burden of defense on the insurance company (because of law suit abuse) is so high that many doctors have to pay $200,000/ yr. for liability coverage. Guess who really pays for that?

7. Lastly, reform Medicare by making it pay fair compensation to doctors and hospitals and charge fair premiums to cover those costs for those who want to have Medicare. Medicare is broke, it just hasn't gone bankrupt yet. It will soon, and this is exactly what will happen to our entire healthcare system if we nationalize healthcare.

Healthcare is too important to allow government bureaucrats to make the key decisions. It is an issue which is critical to everyone and is at the cornerstone of what it means to have individual rights. If I can't make my own healthcare decisions and decide what I want to spend (either in insurance premiums or medical procedures) then I really don't have many rights after all. Conservatives believe in the common sense and freedom of the individual. Liberals believe in the wisdom and power of the government. Healthcare reform is simply the current battleground for this century old debate.

TABLE FOR TWO

POP

I am on a roll with these wine bars. Last week I felt like I met my first love again, as I visited Noir Restaurant. Today

I'm at POP. This is not a family restaurant (as the name may suggest) rather it is a Champagne Bar as its corks announce. I think that it's the first true Champagne Bar in the area - am I wrong? Of course wine bars have been springing up like town hall meetings around these parts for the last few years, but I am always ready to spring upon a Champagne Bar. I may not be the ultimate Francophile, but I have to hand it to them, these beret loving people may just have something with this champagne thing. I hope it sticks around for a little while. Let me start off the review with a detective's observation and question: the restaurant is closed on Mondays and Tuesdays? What do they do with all the champagne they opened on Sunday, waste it? Maybe a touch, but I got permission to let you know an inside secret. Sunday Nights are the best night to go, I had a five flight sparkling and champagne selection for ($16). Good Gosh Ozzie and Harriet, that's cheap, am I time traveling

Pop Champagne and Dessert Bar has placed the wonder of a child in me again. I think they may have permanently restored hope in this creature. Now, I have only been there twice. I have visions for this place. I think this place is ready to uncork some good times for everyone. The cocktail room is spaciously open with a line of vision to the bar when you are seated in the center of the room and the middle of the action. It's a great place to meet friends at the bar or enjoy a table. The menu includes sparklers, Champagne and a variety of reds and whites. The list is split 50/50. Of course, to be addressed as the celebrated Champagne, the grapes must be grown from the region of France named Champagne. A thousand condescending remarks from a French companion if you missed that one. Maybe you have been going to a Sparkling Sunday Brunch all these years. More of these great places are to be found on my TV show "The Chef Knows," so tune in as we take measures each week to assure that you don't offend our friends from Paris. The sparkling wine and Champagne aren't cheap, but I find the prices to be competitive here. Let's compare a glass of Veuve Clicquot... My memory tells that a glass at Madelienes is around ($18) and at Ruth's Chris in the range of ($23) a glass. At "Pop" It is only ($15) a glass and - get this - on Wednesday Night only ($10)!!!! Thursday Nights 33% off all bottles of wine, the owners are crazy!!! Not sure what to order? I suggest the tasting flights. Prices range from ($10) to ($19) and you can enjoy three different samples of some great Champagne, then after that you can decide on the glass you would like to

Sharpest Views of Betelgeuse Reveal How Supergiant Stars Lose Mass

Using different state-of-the-art techniques on ESO's Very Large Telescope, two independent teams of astronomers have obtained the sharpest-ever views of the supergiant star Betelgeuse. They show that the star has a vast plume of gas almost as large as our Solar System and a gigantic bubble boiling on its surface. These discoveries provide important clues to help explain how these mammoths shed material at such a tremendous rate.

Betelgeuse—the second brightest star in the constellation of Orion (the Hunter)—is a red supergiant, one of the biggest stars known, almost 1,000 times larger than our Sun. Betelgeuse is so huge that if it were at the center of our Solar System, the star's surface would extend out almost to the orbit of Jupiter, engulfing Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars and the main asteroid belt.

It is also one of the most luminous stars known, emitting more light than 100,000 Suns. Such extreme properties foretell the demise of a short-lived stellar king. With an age of only a few million years, Betelgeuse is already nearing the end of its life and is soon doomed to explode as a supernova. When it does, the supernova should be seen easily from Earth, even in broad daylight.

Red supergiants like Betelgeuse still hold several unsolved mysteries. One of them is just how these behemoths shed such tremendous quantities of material—about the mass of the Sun—in only 10,000 years. Two teams of astronomers have used ESO's Very Large Telescope the ground). (VLT) and the most advanced technologies to take a closer look at the gigantic star.

The first team used the adaptive optics instrument, NACO, combined with a so-called "lucky imaging" technique, to obtain the sharpest ever image of Betelgeuse, even with Earth's turbulent, image-distorting atmosphere in the way. With lucky imaging, only the very sharpest exposures are chosen and then combined to form an image much sharper than a single, longer

The resulting NACO images almost reach the theoretical limit of sharpness attainable for an 8-meter telescope. The resolution is as fine as 37 milliarcseconds, which is equivalent to seeing a tennis ball on the International Space Station from the ground.

Thanks to these outstanding images, we have detected a large plume of gas extending into space from the surface of Betelgeuse," says Pierre Kervella from the Paris Observatory, who led the team. The plume extends to at least six times the diameter of the star, corresponding to the distance between the Sun and Neptune.

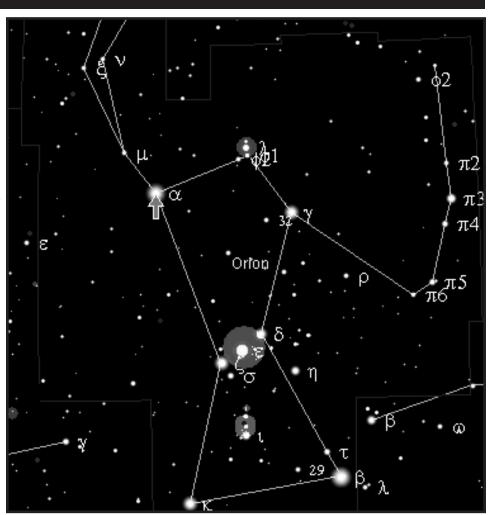

To understand why Betelgeuse behaves as it does, astronomers needed to probe the behemoth in still finer detail. For this, Keiichi Ohnaka from the Max Planck Institute for Radio Astronomy in Bonn, Germany, and his colleagues used a technique called interferometry, which combines light from two or more telescopes. With the AMBER instrument on ESO's Very Large Telescope Interferometer, which combines the light from three 1.8-metre Auxiliary Telescopes of the VLT, the astronomers obtained observations as sharp as would be obtained from a single telescope 48 meters in diameter. With such superb resolution, the astronomers were able to detect indirectly details four times finer still than had been seen with the amazing NACO images (i.e., equivalent to seeing a marble - a marble - on the ISS from

The play centers on two roommates ~ one who is strong in her faith, the other who is equally strong against that faith \sim and the conflict that, naturally, escalates between them. An endearing cast of supporting characters helps to bring the plot to life.

"The Christian character is not an angelic, perfect 'saint' as some may expect," explained playwright/director Sandy Boikian. "She has flaws, scars, heartaches, and frustrations. It's my hope that audiences will identify with her and her struggles, and be encouraged to never give up on anyone, even if the situation appears hopeless. Nothing is impossible with God.

A True August Celebration (Revisited)

Ī guess it feels like cheating. However, I so enjoyed researching this column a few years back that I thought many of you might enjoy reminiscing a time long ago in a galaxy not so far away. Enjoy (please!)

I'm going down to Yasgur's farm, going to join in a rock and roll band with Joni Mitchell

This week is the 38th (40th) anniversary of the Woodstock Music and Art Fair held August 15-18, 1969 in the State of New York. It actually should have been called the Bethel Music and Art Fair, as the closest town to the event was Bethel, not Woodstock. I suspect the organizers didn't want it to be confused with some Lutheran event. So, instead, they called it Woodstock. And besides, Woodstock has that earthy beads and sandals sound to it.

Anyway, they used Max Yasgur's dairy farm, actually setting up shop in his alfalfa field (I wonder how many attendees tried to smoke the alfalfa stalks that week, but I guess it never caught on.). Max Yasgur's name was immortalized in the song Woodstock, written by Joni Mitchell who, incidentally, didn't perform there. Her managers told her appearing on the Dick Cavett Show would benefit her career more than performing in front of 500 kids in the middle of a field. (Ironically, Crosby and Stills, and Jefferson Airplane, who performed at Woodstock, were also on Dick Cavett with Joni.). Rumor has it Joni wrote the anthem while watching the 500,000 people at Woodstock on television (and sobbing for making poor choices). You probably don't remember who-all performed at Woodstock, so let your intrepid

I've never submitted a columnist remind you: On Friday Richie previous column before. Havens opened the festival. Then Country Joe and the Fish, John Sebastian (of Loving Spoonful fame), Sweetwater, Incredible String Band (?), Bert Sommer (??), Tim Hardin, Ravi Shankar, Melanie, Arlo Guthrie, and Joan

> Saturday opened with Quill, followed by the Keef Hartley Band, Santana, Canned Heat, Mountain, Janis Joplin, Sly and the Family Stone, the Grateful Dead. Creedence, The

> Who, and Jefferson Airplane. Sunday opened with the silver throat of Joe Cocker, Country Joe and the Fish (again), Ten Years After, The Band, Blood, Sweat and Tears, Johnny Winter, and Crosby, Stills Sears and Roebuck. Sorry, I meant Nash and Young. Forgive me. The Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Sha Na Na, and finally the Jimi Hendrix

> Now, you might find it interesting who didn't appear. Iron Butterfly got stuck at the airport. John Lennon was invited to appear IF he brought the Beatles. John said he couldn't, but could get his Plastic Ono Band. "Pass" said the promoters. The Doors were invited but Jim Morrison didn't like playing outdoors (I think he was a vampire). Led Zeppelin didn't wanna be "just another band on the bill", Jethro Tull said "No" figuring it was no big deal, as did the Moody Blues. Tommy James and the Shondells said no, because Tommy's secretary described it as some pig farmer wanting them to come play in his field. Paul Revere and the Raiders said no, as did Bob Dylan, Frank Zappa and the rock group Free.

> So, there you have it. Not quite as commercial as we might experience in today's cultural climate. (Hmmmm, I wonder if Bill Clinton was there, not inhaling.)

Not so very long ago the most valuable thing any company had was its good reputation and usually this reputation included all phases of customer service as well as the quality of the merchandise and\or services offered to the public. This system has put an end to some of the more outrageous financial schemes that were running wild around the same time and forced several major business concerns to come clean about some of the more creative accounting tricks that had been used to make their companies appear more profitable than they actually were. Although this system has yet to produce 100% accountabilit, y it has been a step in the right direction. Similarly, the major financial data clearinghouses and credit card processors could be held to a codified standard of security policy, set and monitored by an impartial third-party or government agency, and enforced by the FTC to ensure that positive action has been taken to avoid more incidents like the ones described earlier. Most, if not all, security breaches occur as a direct result of existing systems not being updated and monitored properly. This remains true whether the computer system in question is a single desktop or the huge mainframes that run the financial enterprises in question. The Good Life

For ninety-nine percent of human history, life expectancy was only 18 years. In the last few centuries it raised to about 35 years. In only the last 100 years this has increased to the current 77

To quote Emma Benignus, a professor and counselor, "The reason God has engineered the spectacular increase in life expectancy in the last 100 years is that because the world is so desperately in need of wisdom that God created elders."

I believe there is a difference between being "elderly" and being an "elder". To me an elder is one who can convey the wisdom of a fully lived life to the younger generations who struggle with the decisions and dilemmas of life. As seniors, we have this ability. The process of aging, call it learning or having life teach us, does impart certain wisdom. This experience, albeit by trial and error, needs to be shared with those we care about. This includes our values as well as those lessons we have learned the hard way.

The question is, "are we involved with the lives of our younger family members so that we can impart this?" Are we smart enough to do this without imposing or telling them what to do? Perhaps the asking of leading questions can avoid the sense of imposing. Being a good listener and hearing what is really being said can bring about an appropriate and helpful word of encouragement or a spot of needed advice.

Those younger than us are desperate for guidance. Think back on the days when we underwent those same struggles of career, family, morality, and all of those complex issues. Think how you felt as you struggled with them. If we are honest, we often didn't know what to do. We made decisions, both good and bad. We learned. This is what we need to share with those we care about. These lessons are desperately needed. Perhaps this is our role as an "elder".

We must ask ourselves if we are now beyond the "me" part of life and concentrating on helping others. Most of us have learned that there is little satisfaction in catering to only our own desires. The real rewards come when you help another, either physically or with that thing we call wisdom.

It is said that "those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it". Is this the legacy we want for our family? Use that life of learning, failing, pain, joy, loving, as a tool to help those who really need it. We have such an advantage. Why not share it? Let's loose the "ly" from the word "elderly" and be an elder to those we care

The Real Sport of Kings And Us too!

By Gene Plunkett of the Santa Anita Bowling Green Club

Some say that horse racing is "The Sport of Kings," but we in the lawn bowling community feel that our sport is the real Sport of Kings.

Lawn bowling was established in England long before 1299, when the Southampton Old Bowling Green Club was organized. This green has been in continuous operation since 1299, and is still played upon. That is over 710 years of use.

In the time of King Edward III, the game was restricted, by royal decree, to "Noblemen and others having manors and land." Other kings enjoyed the game also. King Henry VIII, King Charles I, King James I, and according to bowling legend King James I lost over $5,000, in one game with a area. Most of these clubs offer free lessons to any-

tle. His brother, King George VI, was an enthusiastic bowler and patron of the English Bowling other area in the United States.

British officers installed bowling greens in the American Colonies. The first bowling greens were recorded in Boston in 1615. At Jamestown they bowled in the streets, which must have been fun with the wagon tracks, ruts and road apples. Sometime before 1716, a green was built at Williamsburg, Virginia. The sport was played at many taverns and estates, and was listed with other sports in antigambling legislature by the General Assembly in 1728 and again in 1779. George Washington's father installed a bowling green at Mt. Vernon in 1732, the year George was born. After the Revolutionary War, the sport nearly died out in the colonies because of the anti-British feelings by the colonist. Even-Bowling Green at Williamsburg, games are still being played today.

Shakespeare, and Walt Disney.
Mr. Disney said: "There is a certain camaraderie among lawn bowlers not found in any other sport. Good sportsmanship is always present.

Millions of Americans, not just a few thousand, should be playing the game, for once a person becomes a member of a club and gets on the green, he will find that his future will be filled with untold pleasures and many added years."

In the book, "The American Lawn Bowler's Guide: by Dr. Harvey C.
Maxwell, M.C., F.A.C.S.," the Doctor says: "Lawn

bowling presents the perfect substitute exercise. Properly played, there is little physical strain, and ciation, and where lawn bowling clubs are located yet offers an intensely interesting competitive in the United States.

game that will appeal to and hold the former athlete and the man who has always enjoyed athletic sports, but should slow down."

In the Los Angeles area, there are many lawn bowling clubs. You can find bowls being played in Alhambra, Pasadena, Arcadia, Beverly Hills, Hermosa Beach, and Santa Monica. In the general Southern California area, bowling greens can be found at Hemet, Pomona, Riverside, Sun City, Laguna Beach, Long Beach, Newport Harbor, Santa Ana, Rancho Bernardo, San Diego, Irvine, Santa Barbara, and several other sites beyond.

The game can be learned in a very short time, but will take many, many years to master. It s a challenging sport, and it is a sport that can last you a lifetime. A normal bowling green is a flat, level and grass covered. It should be about 120 feet square. The green is usually divided into 8 "rinks," or, in alley bowling terms, "8 alleys." They vary from 14 to 16 feet wide. Being square the lawn bowlers can bowl, say, north and south one day and east and west the next. This helps keep the greens from becoming too worn in one direction.

Lawn bowling is an excellent sport for boys and girls in their early teens. For those of us that are a little older and have to slow down our physical activity due to age, or injury, it is a sport of low impact, light exercise and it's more mental tually, the sport has regained its popularity, but it is still not as popular as it should be. But, at the arm swings, when you deliver three-pound bowl three or four times per end (an end is when all the Other notables have played the sport. Just a few are: Dr. Samuel Johnson, Dr. William Brady, green). You have to pick up the bowls, so bending and pumping of the blood through those tired arteries and veins can help to slow down the hardening of arteries.

Recipe of the Week:

Banana Cupcakes With Cream Cheese Frosting

Ingredients:

Ingretherits:
Cupcakes:
3/4 cup granulated sugar, divided powdered sugar
1/2 cup mashed ripe banana
1/4 cup butter, softened
1 tsp vanilla

2 large eggs 1 cup all-purpose flour 1/2 tsp baking soda 1/4 tsp salt

1/4 tsp ground nutmeg

1/4 cup plain fat-free yogurt

Directions: Preheat oven to 350.

To prepare cupcakes, combine 1/4 cup granulated sugar and banana; set aside. Beat 1/2 cup granulated sugar, butter and 1 tsp vanilla at medium speed of a mixer until well-blended (about 3 mins.). Add eggs, 1 at a time, beating well after each addition. Add banana mixture to sugar mixture, beating well. Lightly spoon flour into a dry measuring cup; level with a knife. Combine flour, baking soda, salt, and nutmeg in a bowl, stirring well with a whisk. Add flour mixture to sugar mixture alternately with yogurt, beginning and ending with flour mixture; mix after each addition. Spoon batter into 12 muffin cups lined with paper liners. Bake at 350 for 25 minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes on a wire rack; remove from pan. Cool

Frosting: 1 3/4 cups

1/2 cup light cream cheese, chilled 1/2 tsp vanilla 2 tbsp finely chopped walnuts, toasted

To prepare frosting, beat the powdered sugar, chilled cream cheese, and 1/2 tsp vanilla at medium speed of a mixer just until blended (do not overbeat). Spread frosting over cupcakes, and sprinkle with toasted

For Your Funny Bone

A customer was bothering the waiter in a restaurant. First, he asked that the air conditioning be turned up because he was too hot, then he asked it be turned down cause he was too cold, and so on for about half an hour. Surprisingly, the waiter was very patient, he walked back and forth and never once got angry. So finally, a second customer asked him why he didn't throw out the pest. "Oh, I really don't care or mind," said the waiter with a smile. "We don't even have an air conditioner."

One Of A Kind:

Featuring unique homes & gardens and the people who create them

By Chris Bertrand

Interior and Floral Designers Collaborate for Divine (or Devine) Results!

terior Devine and Leonora Moss have spent the last decade admiring each other's work. At charity events and showcase homes and in private client installations. In the trenches as showcase vendors, they quickly learned they could depend on each other for the little and big things that ease the burden and the burnout of a month of 18 hour days selling their wares to tour attendees.

After earning their stripes, Paul Devine of Interior Devine and Lorie Westmoreland of the mother-daughter team at Leonora Moss, eventually moved up the design food chain to design interiors for the showcase homes. They work together regularly now. Devine's vintage botanicals, framed in his Pasadena store, and other unique floral-related items are offered at the Leonora Moss store in Sierra Madre.

He often taps her expertise to provide the finishing touches for his interior designs. Though they by no means work together exclusively, each feels the other speaks enough of the other's specialty language. Devine and Westmoreland's philosophical and design viewpoints provide a synergy to each other's work.

Of all the designers' work at a 2008 ASID event at Descanso Gardens, I found myself drawn to Devine's work at the Boddy House, the original estate on the garden property. Devine is a man who beams from a source within; a man who knows how to put anyone at ease, yet delivers his message and philosophy intact.

I knew Leonora Moss's work by reputation and her distinctive work first, meeting Westmoreland just this year after three years' residence in town. In my first year in town, two floral gifts arrived after a surgery, and local visitors did a knowing little "ooh and ah" at her signature floral creations.

More and more, both are drawn to arrangements that transcend season. A beautiful front door wreath doesn't necessarily have to go to the garage for the Christmas season. Rather, the two design year round wreaths and arrangements to take on the holiday spirit with the insertion of seasonal accents.

Both feel that floral arrangements are a critical accessory to complete an interior design. Yet gone are the days of silk flowers, in favor of live or dried arrangements, many of which are displayed at Leonora Moss. Most households don't refresh flowers throughout the home weekly, so the use of succulents provides a long lasting and colorful

Home & Property

Though most of us have come to appreciate succulents for their water thrifty nature in the outdoors, rarely do we consider them for a home's interior. The duo's use of succulents as a basis for this type of arrangement has many benefits.

They are living plants that survive very nicely with minimal care. Their fleshy leaves hoard water, and can go long periods without a douse. Just about any piece that breaks off can be rooted into a new plant, too. Succulents can survive well in low light of a home's interior, though in some, color may not fire up without strong sunlight.

For instance, a Euphorbia Tirucalli, commonly known as Firestick, will remain in the green to yellow without strong sunlight, but will still provide a dramatic presence, with its pencil thin intricate branching, as an anchor or accent plant. The soft green hue of an agave can stand alone as a single specimen in a pot, or part of an arrangement.

Succulents are available in a wide variety of hues and textures to suit just about any color palette or decorating style. The silver blue of "Seneccio blue" brings light and contrast to its surroundings. A trailing accent can be attained with "Donkey Tail" sedum. Touches of pink to red can be garnered from the random-looking flapjack stacking of Kalanchoe Thrysfolia.

The Haworthia Fasciata can complement your best black and white design intentions with its zebra like markings. A true character plant, the Echeveria Gibbiflora v. Mauna Loa offers a loose cabbage appearance with crinkled and warty protrusions, that's been likened to an eruption of Mauna Loa volcano.

So if you're considering long lasting floral arrangements for your home, a full home redesign or just want two fun stores to browse, touch base with these two!

Charcoal briquettes and ash from grills/fireplaces can start wildfires. When disposing of briquettes and ash outside, drown the charcoal and ash with lots of water; stir them, and soak again. Be sure they are out cold!

Sparks from lawnmowers and power equipment DO start wildfires. Be careful on hot, dry days, and be sure to get your equipment checked regularly.

Smokers, safe practices require at least a 3-foot clearing around you. Grind out your cigarette, cigar, or pipe tobacco in the dirt. Never grind it on a stump or log. Never throw it away into the brush or leaves. It is unsafe to smoke while walking or riding a horse or trail bike because you never know where the ash will land. Use your ashtray while in your car.

Creating a 30 foot zone of fire-resistant space around your home will help prevent fires from starting near or spreading to your home. In addition, Use fire resistant plants and landscaping.
