It Definitely Rains In Southern California

Cities Recover From The Wet Weather and Mudslides - Dry Week Ahead Governor and Congressman Dreier Visit Area

Sierra Madreans Are Finally 'Alert Free'

After almost two weeks under either again warnings, the city survived. green, yellow or red alerts, it appears that residents in Sierra Madre and the entire San Gabriel Valley will be able to take a break from the rain. From heavy, unpredictable downpours and intermittent showers, Mother Nature had city staff working round the clock trying protect residents and their property.

Evacuation orders were issued when the risk of a mudslide was too great to that some felt with the on again, off unconscionable."

There were many, however, who did not adhere to the Police and Fire officials who remained in their homes. And others ignored warnings to stay out of Bailey Canyon. As one resident put it, "Between the squalls yesterday, I saw four people on the Bailey Canyon trail below my house. Idiots, all, but the cost to the city to tease them out (especially those helicopter calls like last Saturday afternoon), and possible ignore. And, despite the frustration danger to our PD and city personnel is

Sierra Madre's Resident Weather Watcher

Way back in the early 1970's, Sierra Madre resident Dave Felt was working at Meterology Research, Inc., a weather research firm in Altadena, CA. MRI had a line of electronic weather stations used all over the world, and Dave thought how nice it would be to be able to monitor the weather at his home. The early 70's were well before the internet came into use, and for a long time after the internet came into being, weather stations weren't online for many

By the late 2000's, internet connected weather stations were coming online, and it became financially feasible for Dave to both install a weather station and to connect it to his internet connection. His Honeywell Instruments based weather station (above) reports to the University of Minnesota's Wunderground.com web site, and by searching on ZIP codes, one may interrogate internetbased weather stations anywhere in the country using any web browser.

Dave's installation used his experience with professional weather stations in the 70's, as well as his computer and internet networking skills (he also operates a local computer repair service) to install his weather station's components over a year ago. Most of the components, a rain gauge, temperature and humidity meters, and wind speed and direction sensors, have been replaced at least once, and with a wireless connections to the master weather console, the remote sensor batteries don't last as long as one might like, and need changing every few months. Weather station system prices have dropped to the several hundred dollar level in the > last year or so, and keeping the various components updated isn't too expensive.

> Rain is an easy weather component to measure, but Dave found that his initial rain gauge usually measured much less rain that did his older glass tube rain gauge, which is mounted a few feet from the electronic rain gauge, (below) and which should be measuring about the same amount of rain. A replacement rain gauge, installed just in time for Sierra Madre's recent 7-plus inches of rain, finally agreed with the glass tube gauges, so he's happy that his weather station is now reporting accurate information for his location near Baldwin Avenue. Readers may look at Sierra Madre weather on Wunderground's website, and by searching for KCASIERR3 or ZIP code 91024 for Dave's weather station.

and debris damage after the flash flooding, and received a briefing on the status of recovery efforts. "First, my thoughts are with those whose homes were damaged or are no longer inhabitable," Dreier said. "In visiting with some of them, I'm grateful nobody was injured and that so many volunteers have come forward to

today with Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger to see the mud

help their friends and neighbors with mud removal." Congressman Dreier is working with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the LA County Public Works Department to expedite the process for clearing and removing the debris and mud from the Mullally Debris Basin off of Ocean View Boulevard and the Pickens Canyon debris basis near Ocean View and Foothill Boulevards. There was a boulder weighing 6-10 tons clogging the drainage pipe in the Mullaly basin which caused much of the overflow mud and debris. Over 80 homes have been directly impacted or damaged.

"Emergency crews have been working non-stop to get the debris basins cleared. It is imperative that they not face any unnecessary bureaucratic nonsense in doing their jobs," Dreier continued, "I am committed to ensuring that the necessary resources and equipment are available and that no red tape stands in the way of getting the job done."

The state of emergency declared on January 21 in LA County due to the severe storms still remains in effect. Dreier echoed the calls of law enforcement and the fire department urging residents, especially those who are near the mud slides, to use caution in returning to the area and to heed instructions given by local authorities.

"It is absolutely critical for anyone who is in the immediate damaged areas to follow the instructions of law enforcement," Dreier said.

"Zorro: Myth and History"

A "One Book One City" Author Talk at Sierra Madre Library February 26

Author and Zorro expert Sandra R. Curtis will speak at the Sierra Madre Public Library on Friday, February 26, at 7:00 p.m. The program, part of Sierra Madre's "One Book One City 2010" celebration of Isabel Allende's novel Zorro, is free and open to

Ms. Curtis is head of creative development for Zorro Productions, Inc., in Berkeley CA. Conversations with Ms. Curtis about her book, Zorro Unmasked, the Official History, piqued Ms. Allende's interest and inspired her to write her own historical novel on Diego de la Vega's early life and his evolution into Zorro, the beloved 19th century folk hero and champion of the oppressed. Amazon.com hailed the book as "A must-read for Zorro aficionados," noting that "Sandra Curtis's thorough compendium offers a rich historical cross section of one of pop culture's most influential icons. Beginning with his debut in 1919 in a pulp magazine to Antonio Banderas's high-profile impersonation in The Mask of Zorro, every factoid and trivial tidbit about the masked muchacho is included." Ms. Curtis has also written a series of young reader Zorro novels and worked with Jan Adkins in developing his Young Zorro series.

One Book One City hopes to inspire members of our community to share in reading the same good book at the same time and to participate in events honoring the book. The final program will be a docent-guided tour of the San Gabriel Mission, a prominent location in Zorro, on Saturday, February 27, at 2:00 p.m. Limited free transportation will be available (first call, first reserved) leaving the Library at 1:00 p.m.; reservations will need to be made by February 22. Contact the Library at 626-255-7186. Cost for the tour is $5 per person.

Thank-you to the Sierra Madre Civic Club, the Friends of the Sierra Madre Library, the Rotary Club of Sierra Madre, Santa Anita Race Track, and Tom Southwell for contributions to this

Copies of Zorro in English and Spanish and on CD, as well as Allende's other works, are available for checkout at the Library and for purchase at Sierra Madre Books in Sierra Madre. The Sierra Madre Public Library is located at 440 W. Sierra Madre Blvd., Sierra Madre 91024. FEBRUARY AT THE ARBORETEUM

February 18 Aussies You Should Know with Jan Smithen

Inspired by their vigor in Los Angeles-area landscapes, Jan's illustrated lecture proclaims the unusual and durable beauty of Australian plants from Adenanthos to Westringia (and sneaks in South African members of the Proteaceae). After the talk there will be a plant for sale donated by Jo O'Connell and her Australian Native Plants Nursery (australianplants. com). Jan is the author of Sun Drenched Gardens: The Mediterranean Style. For over two decades, she taught the popular Fanatic Gardeners classes (that had a two year waiting list!) at The Arboretum, and is now very excited to tell everyone about this whole new pallet of plants! Part 2 of Jan's talk will be in the spring.

February 25 Three Tantalizing Taxa with Jim Henrich Plant nuts: Board the tram with The Arboretum's curator of living collections! Learn about the Magnolia collection (55+ taxa) and the Quercus engelmannii grove (one of the largest remaining stands in Los Angeles County). In transit, he'll enlighten us about other Arboretum collections and history. The morning ends with a rare tour of the orchid collection, with details on its diversity and acquisition protocols. Jim has held various horticultural positions at the Conservatory of Flowers, San Francisco Botanical Garden, Denver Botanic Gardens and Missouri Botanical Garden. Pre-registration required.

Attention Sierra Madre Canyon Residents: Please attend a Canyon Community Meeting on the planning process for the RESIDENTIAL CANYON ZONE

Two meetings:

February 22 and March 22, 2010 – 7p.m. Recreation Center 611 E. Sierra Madre Blvd. Sierra Madre Room

Regulations pertaining to the development of the Residential Canyon Zone have been discussed and studied over the past 27 years. Beginning with the 1972 General Plan Canyon sub-committee, this process continued with the 1996 General Plan Canyon subcommittee and again with another Canyon Committee, in 2005 yet the Canyon Zone was never finished.

In April 2009 the current 5-member committee began reviewing the 4th draft of the zoning provisions goals and objectives that were previously developed for the Residential Canyon Zone designation.

The committee has been reviewing zoning guidelines as they apply to the unique nature of the canyon, such as building massing, height limitations, property line setbacks, building square footage and lot coverage, parking requirements, design, landscaping, fencing, protection for the 1972 Wildlife Sanctuary designation of the city, night-sky lighting and noise. The circumstances for allowable deviations or exceptions from standards, the permit process and Conditional Use Permits have been discussed.

Foremost in the discussions has been the goal of preservation of the unique residential setting and rustic and historic character of the Canyon. Your input is important to this process. These two community meetings are in addition to the regular open monthly meetings, held on the third Tuesdays of the month at 7p.m. in the City Council Chambers.

The final draft will go to the Planning Commission for further discussion and public input and then to the City Council for public hearings and adoption after further discussion and subsequent revisions.

Sincerely,

Canyon Residential Zone Committee Members: John Herrmann, Chair; Caroline Brown, Vice-Chair; Michael Howard, Jim Monachino and Sherry Robison

SIERRA MADRE GROCERY COMPANY OFFERS NEW GOURMET SALSA

Explore the aisles of any gourmet food store and you'll encounter scores of specialty salsas and bruschettas. But the unique and flavorful products of Sierra Madre Grocery Company are different. They are all-natural, healthy and low-fat, and they are the result of more than 26 years of experience by Karen Swisher, a highly trained food scientist who created successful products for such leading brands as Carnation/Nestle, Lawry's Foods, Jenny Craig and Van de Kamp's. Sierra Madre Grocery Company offers a fine selection of gourmet products cooked in small batches with the best ingredients.

Local gourmet food shop, Savor the Flavor, prides itself in offering products not found in other local markets and concentrates on bringing their wide base of San Gabriel Valley customers new and delicious products from all over the world.

They love to showcase new local businesses and award winning specialty products. Last Saturday, Karen Swisher brought her salsa, bruschetta and Sierra seasoning to the streets of downtown Sierra Madre, demonstrating several uses for the specialty products in appetizers and recipes inside and outside Savor the Flavor.

The new products are currently available at Savor the Flavor, 11 Kersting Court in Sierra Madre, and soon online at www.SierraMadreGroceryCo.

Duarte

Concern Growing Over Vulcan Mining Expansion Plans

DUARTE, CA, Feb. 12, 2010 - Alarm is growing among residents over the risk to public health from potential increases in the emissions of crystalline silica dust if a mining company is allowed to expand operations to a mountain ridge in close proximity schools, to playgrounds and hundreds of family homes in Duarte and Azusa.

Vulcan Materials Company, which has a permit from the City of Azusa to mine 190 acres of its 270 acre property, is seeking approval to swap 80 acres currently approved for mining on the east side of its property for 80 acres on the west above Duarte. If Azusa agrees to approve the plan, Vulcan has pledged to immediately begin reclamation work, using a new micro-benching technique on already mined the plan, Vulcan said it will delay reclamation work until the end of its City of Duarte. current agreement in 2038.

The Azusa Planning Commission is currently reviewing the plan and held its third and ular meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 24 at 7 p.m. when Azusa City staff will present an in-depth overview of the Draft Environmental Impact Report (DEIR). The presentation will include photo simulations with a special emphasis on how the mining project will affect Duarte's view of the ridgeline, disclosed in the DEIR as being an unavoidable impact.

More than 150 people attended the Feb. 10 public hearing to voice their concerns, among them parents and children from Valley View Elementary School which is located just 3000 feet from the proposed mining site. School Board member, Pam Kawasaki read a letter from Superintendent Dean Conklin asking the commission to vote down the plan.

Fred Ortega, aide to Congress member Judy Chu, whose district includes both Duarte and Azusa, read a letter to the commission from Chu in which she wrote:

"While the project in question does reside within your commission's jurisdiction in the City of Azusa, the effects of the project, if approved, will not be limited to the residents of your city." Chu had several recommendations for the commission pertaining to the DEIR, including:

- Mitigation measures be clearly delineated in precise language, with specific steps described and a requirement that such measures be implemented, as opposed to being addressed through the issuance of future reports.
- Aesthetic impacts be properly considered, particularly viewing the project from the west
- Additional, indirect impacts of the proposed mining be adequately studied, including effects on housing, additional traffic generated, noise and air pollution, and other issues.

Several of the 51 people who spoke at the hearing agreed that the decision was too big and the impact of the project too far reaching for the City of Azusa to make alone, suggesting that perhaps Congresswoman Chu could conduct a town hall meeting for Valley residents in general to discuss the proposal.

By the next day, Duarte Deputy City Manager, Karen Herrera, said she had called Congresswoman Chu's office to request such a meeting for the pubic and is awaiting an answer.

Duarte has also sent a written request to the Air Quality Control District (AQMD) to conduct a town hall meeting to address residents' health concerns about the mining dust and Shauna Pierce, whose children attend Valley View Elementary School in Duarte, tells the Azusa Planning Commission that she fears for the health of children at the school who would be exposed to dangerous crystalline silica dust if Vulcan Materials Company is permitted to expand its mining operations. The school is only 3,000 feet from the out areas. If the city rejects proposed mountain mining site.

discuss resuming air quality monitoring in the

The nearly five hour Planning Commission hearing began with Vulcan spokesman, Todd Priest giving a brief power point presentation on final public hearings on the project on Feb. 10. the plan. At the Feb. 3 hearing, Priest had refused The commission will take up the issue again at its requests by commission chairman, Christopher Dodson and later Duarte Mayor Margaret Finlay to make such a presentation to the more than 200 people attending that meeting.

in addition to the health concerns, many Duarte homeowners talked about their fears that the visible destruction of the mountain in clear view of their homes would result in a loss of property values. There were also concerns raised over the damage to the plant life and wildlife habitat.

Azusa staff and legal team has advised the planning commissioners that they do not need to wait for the final EIR to vote on plan. Therefore, a planning commission vote could come as early as Feb. 24. The final EIR will only be presented to the Azusa City Council for its deliberations and

The public is encouraged to attend and speak at the Feb. 24 planning commission meeting and the Azusa City Council meetings held on the first and third Monday of the month at 7 p.m. In March, when the Azusa City Council is expected to begin its deliberations on the Vulcan plan, meetings will be held on Monday, March 1 and Monday, March 15.

Azusa will accept written comments on the DEIR through Feb. 20. Comments may be submitted to azusarockeircomments@ci.azusa. ca.us or by mail to: Conal McNamara, City of Azusa, Department of Economic & Community Development, 213 E. Foothill Blvd., Azusa, CA

The entire 1,000 page DEIR on the Vulcan Material Company's request for a Revised Conditional Use Permit and Reclamation Plan is available for review on the City of Azusa's official website, www.azusalw.com. The Save Our Canyon website, www.saveourcanyon.org offers detailed information and graphics about the project.

Videotaped coverage of the public hearings is available for viewing on Duarte Public Access (DCTV), Charter Cable Channel 3 in Duarte, and on-demand on DCTV on the Web, www. dctvduarte.com.

In 2008, the Duarte City Council established a $700,000 fund entitled the "Fight Against Vulcan Expansion" fund (FAVE) in response to the anticipated expansion plans by Vulcan and its potential adverse impact on Duarte residents. For more information about the City of Duarte's Fight Against Vulcan Expansion activities, call Duarte Deputy City Manager, Karen Herrera at (626) 357-7931, ext. 221.

Police Release Response to Investigation

The Pasadena police department released Friday their response to an independent investigation following the Leroy Barnes, Jr officer involved shooting last

The statement said the following, On February 19, 2009, two Pasadena police officers conducted a traffic stop on Mentone Avenue in the City of Pasadena. This encounter resulted in an armed confrontation between Leroy Barnes, Jr. and police officers.

In an effort to inform the community of the facts surrounding this incident and to ensure a high level of transparency, the department requested an independent investigation by the Office of Independent Review Review (OIR). Once the report was made available to the Police Department, the department distributed it to the public.

The department has completed its written response to the OIR report. "It was essential for us to respond to the OIR report, as it allows the public to readily view the changes that have been completed. Publishing our response is consistent with our efforts to be transparent," says Interim Chief of Police Christopher O. Vicino.

The department altered or updated policies and procedures in order to accept 13 of the 14 recommendations. The department has also begun the process of institutionalizing a training regiment to patrol officers. This training will increase tactical expertise at the patrol level. "It is my belief these modifications will serve to strengthen and enhance the effectiveness of our police department," says Interim Chief of Police Christopher O. Vicino.

The summary portion of this report also mentions patrol officers conducting "community days". The police department has devised a regular community outreach program for each Service Area that directly involves every patrol officer. This will enhance community relationships and supplement the connection to the neighborhoods each officer patrols. None of this will happen overnight, but the department aims to be consistent in approach and application.

The police department's review of the OIR and follow-up action steps have played a critical role in improving the quality of police work and increasing police accountability and commitment to the Pasadena community.

[Editorial note: The rejected policy recommended that the department modify its officer involved shooting protocols to ensure that training personnel are part of the rollout

City Budget Shortfall Larger Than Expected

By Dean Lee

The city council got the bad news Monday night that in October what looked to be a $5.5 million shortfall in General Fund revenue is now more likely $7.7 million leading to more cuts, all aimed at city employees, including more furloughs, reducing work hours and layoffs.

The city currently put furloughs in place for 290 employees.

Also suggested was increasing percent eight employee contribution towards retirement costs and reducing or eliminating anticipated salary increases. Although before taking any drastic steps city staff said they should look at freezing all 192 existing vacant positions.

"One of our strategies to deal with this additional shortfall [$2.2 million] and some of the $5.5 million shortfall, that we were not able to get so far through discussions with the labor unions, is to really look at and scrutinize the filling of the vacancies that are outstanding," said Director of Finance Andrew Green.

Freezing all vacancies, through the end of the year, would save $9.9 million he explained estimated by an average salary of $80,000 to $100,000 per year.

While the alternative event has enjoyed much popular success in the Old Pasadena retail and entertainment district, organizers are excited to bring the eclectic parade to the town-like setting of East Pasadena. "Old Pasadena has been a terrific backdrop and host for the Doo Dah Parade," says organizer Tom Coston. "But with Doo Dah we see an opportunity to keep it fresh and interesting. We fondly leave Old Pasadena on the cusp of predictability. We look upon East Pasadena as an exciting frontier with its own local character and possibilities."

An Activity For The Whole Family On President's Weekend

Great Backyard Bird Count

Friday, February 12, through Monday, February 15.

The Great Backyard Bird Count is an annual temperatures influence bird populations? four-day event that engages bird watchers of all ages in counting birds to create a realtime snapshot of where the birds are across the continent. Anyone can participate, from beginning bird watchers to experts. It takes as little as 15 minutes on one day, or you can count compare with past years? for as long as you like each day of the event. It's free, fun, and easy—and it helps the birds. We'll be adding updated GBBC materials for the next count as they become available.

Participants count birds anywhere for as little or as long as they wish during the four-day period. They tally the highest number of birds of each species seen together at any one time. To report their counts, they fill out an online checklist at the Great Backyard Bird Count website

As the count progresses, anyone with Internet access can explore what is being reported from their own towns or anywhere in the United States and Canada. They can also see how this year's numbers compare with those from previous years. Participants may also send in photographs of the birds they see. A selection of images is posted in the online photo gallery.

Why Count Birds?

Carolina Wren, Jim Lockyer, CA, 2009

Scientists and bird enthusiasts can learn a lot by knowing where the birds are. Bird populations are dynamic; they are constantly in flux. No single scientist or team of scientists could hope to document the complex distribution and movements of so many species in such a short

We need your help. Make sure the birds from your community are well represented in the count. It doesn't matter whether you report the 5 species coming to your backyard feeder or the 75 species you see during a day's outing to a wildlife refuge.

Your counts can help us answer many questions: How will this winter's snow and cold

- Where are winter finches and other "irruptive" species that appear in large numbers during some years but not others?
- How will the timing of birds' migrations
- How are bird diseases, such as West Nile virus, affecting birds in different regions?
- What kinds of differences in bird diversity are apparent in cities versus suburban, rural, and natural areas?
- Are any birds undergoing worrisome declines that point to the need for conservation

American Goldfinch - Gail DuBois, NY, 2009 GBBC

It's as easy as 1, 2, 3!

- 1. Plan to count birds for at least 15 minutes on one or more days of the count. You can count for longer than that if you wish! Count birds in as many places and on as many days as you likeone day, two days, or all four days. Submit a separate checklist for each new day. You can also submit more than one checklist per day if you count in other locations on that day.
- 2. Count the greatest number of individuals of each species that you see together at any one time. You may find it helpful to print out your regional bird checklist to get an idea of the kinds of birds you're likely to see in your area in February. You could take note of the highest number of each species you see on this checklist.
- 3. When you're finished, enter your results through our web page. You'll see a button marked "Enter Your Checklists!" on the website home page beginning on the first day of the count. It will remain active until the deadline for data submission on March 1st.

Not Even Heavy Rain Could Stop These Scouts

Photojournalist Lina Johnson Shares Her Observations

It was not easy getting out of presenting bed on the morning of Saturday, February 6, 2010 to attend Girl various ways on stage. They Scout International Day, which officially started at 9:30 am. Although the weather forecast Hall with samplings of was "light rain" it seemed like food from their chosen "heavy rain" to me. It felt like a nice day to sleep in but I got myself out of bed and prepared my photographic equipment for rainy weather. I arrived at Saint Rita Church, O'Malley Hall at 8:45 in the morning and found the parking lot already completely full. There was a myriad of umbrellas surrounding the entrance to the hall. Once inside, I discovered a frenzy of young girls and their wooden clogs. This troop troop leaders, mothers and was considerate enough information also created exhibits to be displayed around O'Malley country, which could be purchased with tickets. Dressed in costumes, each troop performed a dance, a game or a song and recited facts or a combination of these. The presentations were entertaining and brought a smile to my face. Taking it all in, I was glad that I slipped out of my pajamas to attend the event and to see with my own my eyes the diligence of being a girl scout.

Fourteen troops participated in the International Day Event with the majority of the scouts residing in Pasadena and surrounding areas. Each of the troops had picked a country to represent and took a turn walking around so not to cause others and their performances.

A distinctive feature of this International day was that it was being hosted by Troop 2581 which consists of five girls who acted as Master of Ceremonies.

These girls, Kate Jones, Fiona Eustace, Monica Perez, Olivia Pope and Andrea Hurtado were in the process of earning their silver award by coordinating second highest award a Girl Scout can receive and can only be earned by Cadette Scouts in the 6th through 9th grade and ages 11-14. It has taken these girls two years to get to this point and this particular service project required a 40- hour commitment. The girls exhibited poise and professionalism as they held the role of leaders during this exuberant event. It was evident that the process of earning the silver award had developed the girls as strong leaders.

The countries represented were India, Armenia, France, Ch ina, Australia, Japan, England,

The event opened with a flag ceremony and a prayer led by Saint Rita's Pastor Father Richard Krekelberg. The troops were also given the opportunity to earn badges after the International Day presentations. TABLE FOR TWO most affordable and noteworthy restaurants in our metropolis.

Maybe, I could rush in, get a quick meal and move unto the next restaurant and never stop. But even that approach would not allow me to sufficiently embrace all of the dinning opportunities that are offered in Southern California. I stumble upon more than a few restaurants that are worth having us at their tables; unique places, family run establishments and food artists. Many of my readers also double as detectives and email me these secret spots from time to time. I'm even on Facebook, for those of you who are the computer sort and enjoy connecting with people, and sharing restaurants. I have seen a number of things over the years and I recently heard some news that made me reflect on a landscape of excellence. When I think of the best Pizza around, my mind drifts to Domenico's on Washington Blvd. For the best margarita, it has to be Jamie's and Roger's Ranchero Mexican Restaurant on Foothill. For a Heavenly Cheeseburger, I go to Tops on Allen and Walnut, and for succulent Ribs, it is Robin's on Rosemead!!!

What about the staple of the "blue collar" man, the reliable sandwich? The Pasadena Sandwich Company on Sierra Madre Villa is the Gold Medal winner. I would go there everyday if I could, but the sandwiches are so big I would need a consistent companion to share just one. There is a common thread with all of my favorites. They are all owned and operated by families and they all carry the pride of American excellence in their

This past week we lost a special man, a man yahoo.com. that had positioned his eatery on a pedestal of excellence. Stephen Fink, the owner of the Pasadena Sandwich Company passed away.

Sometimes I wonder if Stephen created beauty in the world; he was I am getting to the best, an artist in spirit and in operation. There is something very endearing in a man that loves his work, especially when it's what many of us would describe as common work. Sometimes you meet someone special and they remind you again that loving something, even something simple, is what gives the world its lasting beauty. The world is different because of Stephen; it is a better place because he forced it to be better and he nurtured

> When you'd walk into his shop, Stephen would see you from the corner of his eye. He was working away, of course, but he could sense you were there. He worked standing up, and he understood that he operated an assembly line just as well, if not better, than Henry Ford. Stephen's was a Sandwich assembly line. Steve would yells out, "Pickle with that today, Peter?" "Sure, Steve, that sounds good."

> For those who weren't sure what to order, even if he sounded impatient he would still – and gladly - give you his reassuring look and add, "Trust the cook." You were never disappointed.

> We might be amazed by the number of people that a simple sandwich man touched, but he was much, much more than that, Stephen was an

> Stephen is survived by four children and, at this writing, my understanding is that they will carry his bright torch forward. My heart and our prayers are with the family.

> The PCS was opened in 1995; Steve had worked for his parents for twenty years prior to that. Yes, you guessed it in a deli!

HOWARD Hays As I See It

FY 2009 federal budget deficit to as "the last budget of President Bush". Actually, the 2009 budget is the last prepared under the Bush administration. Remember the TARP bailout? That was a parting gift, $700 billion courtesy of U.S. taxpayers, to the Wall Street oligarchy ("those members of society who are most productive") from the outgoing Bush team - leaving the incoming Obama administration to deal with the consequences.

Then there's the budgetary trick during the Bush years of keeping the costs of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, estimated from $8 billion to $12 billion a month, off-budget (and unpaid for) - through "emergency supplemental" legislation. President Obama ended that practice and the costs are now included in the budget. It may result in higher deficit figures, but at least

Going through newspapers, there's something to be learned in exploring connections between articles seemingly unrelated. Last week in the L.A. Times, there was the swearing-in of Scott Brown, the new Republican senator from Massachusetts (he's been in office two weeks, so is now working on his memoirs). Elsewhere was an article on California families receiving notice their health insurance premiums will increase by Senator Brown has been heralded as the "41st vote" needed to kill healthcare legislation, elected by Massachusetts residents already protected under their state's plan - one similar to what's being considered in Washington, and which Brown himself supported. That vote number has meaning only if one considers the likes of Sens. Joe Lieberman (I-Ct) and Ben Nelson (D-Neb) to be supporters of healthcare reform. It refers to filibuster and cloture rules (appearing nowhere in the Constitution) which can be used as an excuse by those professing concern (add Sens. Mary Landrieu D-La and Max Baucus D-Mt to the list) to avoid taking actions that might displease corporate donors.

Despite the arrival of Senator Brown, presuming the death of healthcare reform is premature, at best. Nonetheless, the prospect made carriers so giddy they dispensed with all pretense of responsibility (and morality) and jacked up premiums while asserting their "right" to do so as often as they please. According to the Times, the 2.5 million Californians holding individual policies are becoming the first victims. A Bay Area couple said their 39% increase to $1,658 a month, plus a $130 increase for their 26-year-old daughter, means that as of March 1 their monthly premium will exceed the mortgage payment on their home in pricey San Rafael. Anthem Blue Cross assures they "share our members' concerns", and attributes the increase to "rising costs". A few days earlier, they reported an eightfold increase in profits for the last quarter of

First off, I'd like to go back to the chart Greg used in his column last week. It shows an approval. The only catch is that 70% of premiums must be spent on medical care - and Insurance of $1.4 trillion, more than triple Commissioner Steve Poizner vowed to make the 2008 deficit of $455 billion - which Greg refers sure that's still the case. (Anthem says they hired their own actuary who's already determined everything's okay.) HHS Secretary Kathleen Sibelius wrote to Anthem Blue Cross president Leslie Margolin, stating, "These extraordinary increases are up to 15 times faster than inflation and threaten to make health care unaffordable for hundreds of thousands of Californians, many of whom are already struggling to make ends meet in a difficult economy." She notes that Anthem's parent company, WellPoint, earned $2.7 billion in profits in the last quarter of 2009, and wonders whether "premium increases would be invested in better medical care or insurance company overhead costs like salaries (WellPoint's CEO received $9.8 million total compensation for 2008), profits, and advertising.

Secretary Sibelius might also have mentioned money going to buy off Congress and prep talking points for Fox News; WellPoint spent $2.4 million on lobbying in 2009. There's also legal costs, such as the $10 million settlement Anthem paid to the California Department of Managed Health Care in 2008 when it had to reinstate 1,770 policy holders kicked off the rolls to improve their balance sheet.

For the benefit of insurance CEOs turning to my column for advice, I would suggest such rate increases are ill-timed from a public relations standpoint as we enter a new phase of public debate. Going into it, there are a number of misconceptions to be straightened out. A recent Pew Research survey made three things clear: First, people don't like the healthcare bill; second, eople like the things that are in the healthcare bill; and third, people don't know what's in the healthcare bill. A number of Massachusetts oters stated they didn't like the healthcare bill but would if it included a "public option".

When President Obama meets with Republicans later this month to hear their ideas in front of TV cameras, familiar talking points will be repeated. We'll hear about "tort reform" as a means of reducing costs, though where it's been tried, it hasn't. There's being able to sell policies "across state lines", but that's already in the bill - it's called the "exchange". Nobody wants a bureaucracy coming between ourselves and our doctor, but for most of us anything would be preferable to a forprofit insurance company. According to a report from the California Nurses Association, between 2002 and mid-2009 insurance companies forcibly came between patients and their doctors 48 million times in California in rejecting 22% of submitted claims. And yes, people died as a

Back in 1992, President Bill Clinton predicted that forty years from now we'll find t inconceivable there was a time we allowed families to face financial ruin because a child got sick. As I see it, the more insurance companies feel emboldened, the more people will find it inconceivable we're allowing it to happen today.

GREG Welborn Islam Needs A Civil War

"The test of every religious or political system is Even with these examples, the man that it forms - Amial"

February 11th marked the anniversary of the birth of the Islamic revolution in Iran, and somewhat ironically, the Iranian Mullahs promised a great wrath would be visited upon the west on this day. Sadly, the only wrath visited on anyone on this day was directed by the Mullahs on their own people who sought to demonstrate for democracy. The conflict in Iran between the Mullahs and Iran's citizens is symbolic of the battle between good and evil which must be waged within Islam. It is not a conflict between America and the Middle East or between Christianity and Islam. As painful as it is and seminaries today. to realize, a civil war between good and evil must be waged within Islam itself, just as Christianity its genesis in the streets of Tehran right now.

Today, there are two predominant strains of Islam. We hear on the news that Islam is a peace-loving religion, but we have also seen vast crowds of Muslims calling for the destruction of America. Trying to reconcile this contradiction is impossible unless you realize there are truly two with a long history of tolerance, and then there is the repressive strain of Islam, which has been visited on us only recently by historical standards.

First, there was classical Islam that spawned a great culture and established a body of law, which to this day condemns terrorism and does not permit suicide. Even jihad was restricted to retaking your own property and contains strict prohibitions against wholesale slaughter of noncombatants. The Islam of old was quite tolerant of other religions in its midst. Classical Islam still exists today, and we should pray that it survives.

On the other side, is the Islam we should do everything in our power to vanquish. This Islam, dominant since the early 1970s, dismisses the teachings of classical Islam along with the Islamic and Judeo-Christian concept of an absolute moral code. It dismisses women and non-believers as unworthy of basic human rights. This Islam produces Muslim clerics and intellectuals, like those who rule Iran and those in Al Qaeda who seek to rule the world, who justify terrorist attacks and highjackings.

Pretending that the repressive side is small and confined to a few isolated patches of real estate would be self-deluding. Most self-proclaimed Islamic states are repressive towards their own populations. Countries such as Iran, Iraq, Syria and the Taliban-controlled parts of Afghanistan not only strike out at the western world, but they also suppress their own women, ethnic minorities, and the average Muslim-in-the-street who dares to challenge the beliefs of the ruling order. Even the supposedly more moderate Islamic states such as Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan or Indonesia repress various sectors of their population. In these countries, state policy is intolerant of other religions, and political dissent is quickly and children and is active in the community. He can be severely punished. In several Islamic countries, reached at gregwelborn@earthlink.net. slavery is widely practiced and condoned.

some may still resist the notion that the darker strain of Islam is dominant today. But how else are we to explain that not a single Egyptian mosque observed even a minute of silence for the victims of the terrorist attack? Why did the vast majority of the people in Pakistan and Indonesia indicate that they supported the 9-11 terrorists? Why don't the vast majority of Muslim clerics condemn terrorism outright? The only plausible answer to

Any honest assessment forces us to conclude that underwent its own civil war, and we may be seeing the darker side of Islam is dominant and seeking greater ascendancy. But, and herein lies the hope for Islam, in this honest assessment we would also find a corollary to Christianity's struggle with these questions is that the hateful, repressive strain

of Islam dominates Islamic schools, governments

Many centuries ago Christianity was intolerant, repressive and in most places thoroughly corrupted. In essence, it took a long and protracted civil war Islams. There is the peace-loving strain of Islam to restore Christianity's original vision. The birth of Protestantism started this battle, leading to the 30 years war. The American Revolution continued it, establishing freedom of religion. The battle was ultimately successfully concluded through the abolitionist movement and our American civil war, which finally eliminated slavery as an acceptable Christian practice. Thankfully, because brave believers were willing to fight the good fight, intolerance and repression in the name of God are no longer accepted by most faithful Christians.

> Islam must also fight its own civil war if it is to again resume its role as a moral religion. Today, the dominant strain of Islam at every institutional level is at best repressive and at worst inhumane. Muslims in most parts of the world are fed a daily diet of hatred toward the west. Without an effective counter message, they believe it. This is why Islam needs its own civil war just as Christianity had to undergo that conflict.

> We can hope and pray that only a few lives will be lost. But if we truly love our Muslim brothers, we must refrain from that very human tendency to simply pray for peace. When any culture is conquered, it can be said that there is peace. But peace, at the price of subjugation, is not the answer. The conflict between good and evil within Islam must be waged. Islam must be purged of the hate which seeks to consume it. It may be starting in Iran, but this battle will have to be waged across the globe by Muslims of all nationalities. Only then will Muslims escape spiritual emptiness and attain a measure of the grandeur that it once commanded. Only then will there truly be peace.

In 1976, the Fraser Government introduced a 2.5% levy As I have written in earlier editorials, and split Medibank in two: a universal universal health care is necessary for scheme called Medibank Public and the US to expand health coverage a government-owned private health Boards. Under the Labour coalition

This was part of an US, I was told, buy travel insurance to In Australia, Medibank — as it was effort by the Coalition to encourage take-up of private health insurance. According to WHO, government funding covered 67.5% of Australia's health care expenditures in 2009; private sources covered the remaining 32.5% of expenditures.

> The healthcare system of New Zealand has undergone significant changes throughout the past several decades. Currently, New Zealand has a mixed public-private system for delivering healthcare.In New Zealand hospitals are public and treat citizens or permanent residents free of charge and are managed by District Health pharmaceuticals depending upon their category. Co-payments exist however these are ignored if the user has a community health services card or high user health card. In 2005, New Zealand spent 8.9% of GDP on health care. 77% was government expenditure.

So how does our health care system compare with the Australian and New Zealand systems—not very well? The US sends 17.5% of its GNP on health care including Medicare, Medicaid and Veterans hospitals. Yet still not everyone is covered. Presently fortyseven million Americans have no health insurance at all. This is totally unacceptable. Our lack of universal health care is morally wrong and economically unsustainable. The US should be leading the world in health care. Instead, we are falling further behind. We can learn a lot from our mates down under.

STUART Tolchin On...LIFE WE HAVE TO TALK TO ONE ANOTHER

lives would be like. I'm doing my best the arbitrariness and seeming unfairness to try and make some sense out of this of life. We need some help. difficult time in our lives and I'm trying to answer my son's question of why difficult stuff is happening to him. Without thinking much about it I brought along. stories to my son. The Book of Genesis thinking much about it I brought along a copy of the Book of Genesis Illustrated with me and was describing some of the woman seated next to my son. Yes, she was a religious person, and a Social Illustrated is compiled by R. Crumb, the former infamous Underground Comics werbally, at least at first, that she strongly creator, who carefully explains in the introduction that he "does not believe that the Bible is the word of God or in a public waiting room and by the fact inspired by God" and that it is solely the that my son and his bandage-covered eye words of men. I agree completely with the author and also agree that "nonetheless, it (The Bible) "is a powerful text with steaming! It bothers me that, despite my certainty of the non-existence of any super-natural creator, religious people still make me feel like a rebellious smartass teenager too full of himself to even engage in a conversation.

The same thing happens when I meet people who have children who have enlisted in the military. I have been anti-war for all of my life and I think that families that encourage their kids to enlist are really child-abusers who deserve to be punished. Yet, it's impossible for me to say this to a person with a child in the military risking his or her life fighting for no apparent purpose in some distant place. I wish I had the courage to be inappropriate. Maybe we wouldn't have wars if nobody was willing to go and fight. Similarly what would happen if all of us who disapprove of the behavior of banks and corporations would stop utilizing these institutions? That is the message of Thoreau. Live and act in accord with your own principles and don't worry about convincing other people. If you have enough courage change will come.

Strange, isn't it, that the lady within the waiting room was acting in accord with her own principles and I was the one think this is the right road to anywhere.

who really wasn't willing to talk about the disagreement. My asserted certainty that the Love, Memory, Dreams, and Gods of Mankind are simply the products of random accidents that have influenced the evolution of the human brain is simply not very sexy. It's almost a century and a half since Darwin, and most Americans still don't want to forsake the belief in some overseeing Creator who cares about us and presents us with a path to salvation, immortality and eternal tranquility. Even I wouldn't kick that out of bed.

To finish the metaphor do we risk sleeping alone if we take a risk and talk to people with whom we disagree? What would happen if we expressed our disapproval of wasteful government and stopped paying taxes and even mentioned this to other people and were willing to talk about it? Personally, I'm not even ready to take the first step. It's so much easier to feel superior to other people rather than to confront my own fears and try and live consistently. Anyhow, complaining about others is about the only thing most people feel free to talk about as long as the "others" aren't there to respond. God or no God I just don't

Canyon Zone Committee One Sided?

Dear Editor:

The current Canyon Residential Zone Committee appears to be one-sided and noticeably absent of differing views which gives the appearance that equal representation is not important. It is purported this current committee group was selected with the express view not to allow 'builders' and 'architects' to serve. One would think that divergent views and expert advice would be a good thing from people who deal with zoning as a matter of profession on a daily basis, thus providing pertinent perspective to the Committee's agenda. Otherwise it would seem unfair and unwise to the total Canyon population.

Citizens have a strong sense of fairness and this Canyon Zone Committee appears lopsided in its makeup which could be interpreted as not representing a true sampling of the views and opinions of fellow Canyon residents. Why else would builders or architects be purposefully shunned? If the current committee is attempting make the canyon zone solely with their own ideas, and lock out other views, it is fundamentally unfair in its representation of all citizens of the Canyon. Obviously, it is assumed any group endeavoring to create a new canyon zoning would be interested in achieving well-rounded representation of the entire community. Group think should be avoided in developing a new zoning ordinance.

The establishment of this Committee to preserve the Canyon's "unique residential setting and (its) rustic and historic character" seems honorable, but how did the Canyon become this unique setting, this rustic sylvan paradise we have all enjoyed all these years WITHOUT such a committee? Why is what we have had for countless years no longer sufficient? Micro-managing the properties of Canyon citizens could become more of a problem than a solution. We do not need more local intrusive government intervention. We can be trusted to manage our own properties under current ordinances without a select group telling us we need more regulation. Where is the outcry for such changes, other than from a micro group of unsolicited advocates?

Why not first put to vote whether the Canyon residents want a zoning revision and more local government supervision? Why do we need this Canyon Residential Zone Committee? Why is this advocacy group necessary for maintaining the Canyon in its present state? If it can be proven we are losing our uniqueness, that the Canyon is disappearing as we know it, then maybe we could organize a representative group of concerned citizens to tackle the issues; otherwise it Hey! What About Our Restaurants? appears to be an oligarchy dictating more regulation just because they think they know better than the rest Dear Editor:

It is understood there will be public meetings (Feb. 22 and March 22) where we can challenge and question the proposals of this Committee, but who will write the final draft? If the current group writes the draft, will other opinions and input be represented? The appearance of this group could have been more sensitive in creating a more balanced cross segment of our community which is a basic right. It is hoped that we could do a better job at administering a local government for ALL Canyon

Greg and Mary Prout, Sierra Madre

I have been a faithful reader of your paper since its beginning. One thing that has bothered me for some time is the lack of coverage of local Sierra Madre restaurants by your restaurant critic, Mr. Dills. I actually went through all your archived issues just a biased canyon zoning panel does not bode well for fair representation of all. Whoever gave their blessing to approximately 140 columns, there were nine or ten approximately 140 columns, there were nine or ten mentions of Sierra Madre restaurants. Six or seven of those mentioned were in name only being lumped together in columns listing several other restaurants. There were only two columns devoted solely to Sierra Madre restaurants. And one column promoting both Lozano's and Zelo Pizza in Arcadia. I wondered why I saw several restaurants mentioned multiple times > over the years including at least two columns on the Balboa Bay Club all the way down in Newport Beach. One particularly frustrating column doing a critique of the best pizza around mysteriously ignored Village Pizzeria whose pizza, in the opinion of many, is the best.

> It's a shame your paper devote doesn't more attention to the restaurants in our own back yard. They sure could use the support. I have made a few suggestions to Mr. Dills over the years but they fall on deaf ears. I have never seen one of my suggestions ever acted upon. Maybe you could find a critic with a little more interest in the local places.

ORDINANCE NO. 1305

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SIERRA MADRE, CALIFORNIA AMENDING SECTION 17.60.100 OF CHAPTER 17.60 OF TITLE 17 OF THE SIERRA MADRE MUNICIPAL CODE REGARDING PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE SIGNS permit applications is required pursuant to Sierra Madre Municipal Code Section 17.60.100:

WHEREAS, Sierra Madre Municipal Code Section 17.60.100 currently requires that notice be provided in two ways: 1) Public notices shall be given by United States mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the owners of property within a radius of 300 feet from the external boundaries of the property to which the application relates, and 2) A notice of public hearing sign, measuring not less than eight and one-half inches by eleven inches (8 ½" x 11"), and clearly visible to the public street or alley, shall be posted on the property to which the application relates, a minimum of ten days prior to the scheduled public hearing;

WHEREAS, concerns from the community and the Planning Commission have been raised that the minimum size of the notice of public hearing sign (8 ½" x 11"), is not large enough in size to be visible and legible as viewed from the public or private street or allev. and that the sign should be posted an additional number of days prior to the scheduled public hearing in order to effectively serve its purpose and provide sufficient time to notify the surrounding community of a proposed land use change or development project to be reviewed before the Planning Commission and City Council: WHEREAS, the Planning Commission at its November 19, 2009 regular meeting recommended that the City Council adopt an amendment to

Section 17.60.100 to revise the minimum size of public hearing notice signs, the minimum days for posting, its location on the subject property, and the contents of the sign;

WHEREAS, this amendment to the public notice requirements regarding the posting of property is consistent with the General Plan in that it provides sufficient notice and informs the surrounding community and public about pending projects, it provides information to allow interested persons to attend public hearings and learn about a pending project and its review for consistency with the land use goals and objectives of the General Plan:

WHEREAS, this ordinance qualifies for a Categorical Exemption under Section 15061 of the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) as a code text amendment is not a project and it can be seen with certainty that it will not have a significant effect on the environment; and WHEREAS, the City Council held a public hearing at its regular meeting of January 26, 2010 to take public testimony on the proposed

THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SIERRA MADRE DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Code Amendment. Sierra Madre Municipal Code Section 17.60.100 (Public notices) subsection B is hereby amended Section 1.

"B. Posting of Property. A notice of public hearing sign, meeting the criteria set forth below, shall be posted a minimum of 14 days prior to the scheduled public hearing, and the sign shall remain in place until the expiration of the appeal period following a decision by the planning commission. If an appeal to the city council is filed, a new public hearing sign complying with this section shall be posted. Failure to post the sign on the property by the applicant shall result in the automatic continuance of the project to the next available planning commission or city council meeting. The sign shall be posted in the following manner:

1. The sign shall be located in a conspicuous place on the property abutting a public or private street or alley not more than 10 feet inside the property line. 2. The sign shall be 12 feet square in sign area, generally measuring three feet by four feet.

3. The sign shall not exceed six feet in height from the ground level; provided that if the property is surrounded by fences, walls, or hedges at or near the street property line, additional height may be permitted with the approval of the director of development services to ensure visibility of the sign from the public right-of-way. 4. The sign shall not be illuminated.

The size, style, number, and color of the sign's lettering shall be the specifications approved by the director of development services, and the director may approve deviations to these requirements in order to meet the intent of these noticing provisions.

6. Support elements for the sign shall be made of four-inch by four-inch wood posts, or similar; provided however, that a sign may be posted in a window, on a fence, or on a building wall when there is an existing structure on site that is set back less than 10 feet from the street.

7. A building permit shall not be required for the posting of a sign installed in compliance with this subsection.

8. The applicant shall submit proof of posting to the director of development services or his or her designee in the form of a signed affidavit Any costs associated with complying with this subsection shall be borne by the applicant."

Section 2. Severability. Should any provision of this Ordinance, or its application to any person, parcel or circumstance, be determined by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unlawful, unenforceable or otherwise void, that determination shall have no effect on any other provision of this Ordinance or the application of this Ordinance to any other person, parcel or circumstance and, to that end, the provisions Section 3. Construction. To the extent the provisions of the Sierra Madre Municipal Code as amended by this ordinance are substantially the same as the provisions of that Code as they read prior to the adoption of this ordinance, they shall be construed as continuations of those prior provisions and not as new enactments.

Section 4. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall take effect thirty days after adoption as provided by Government Code Section 36937. Section 5. Certification. The City Clerk shall certify to the passage and adoption of this Ordinance and shall cause the same to be published

PASSED, APPROVED AND ADOPTED, this 9th day of February 2010.

LOOKING Upwith Bob Eklund Imaging Pluto's White, Dark-Orange and Charcoal-Black Terrain

NASA has released the most detailed and dramatic images ever taken of the distant dwarf planet Pluto. The images from NASA's Hubble Space Telescope show an icy, mottled, dark molasses-colored world undergoing seasonal surface color and brightness changes.

Pluto has become significantly redder, while its illuminated northern hemisphere is getting brighter. These changes are most likely consequences of surface ice melting on the sunlit pole and then refreezing on the other pole, as Pluto heads into the next phase of its 248-yearlong seasonal cycle. Analysis shows the dramatic change in color took place from 2000 to 2002.

The Hubble pictures confirm that Pluto is a dynamic world undergoing dramatic atmospheric changes, not simply a ball of ice and rock. These seasonal changes are as much propelled by the planet's 248-year elliptical orbit as by its axial tilt. Pluto is unlike Earth, where the planet's tilt alone drives seasons. Pluto's seasons are asymmetric because of its elliptical orbit. Spring transitions to polar summer quickly in the northern hemisphere, because Pluto is moving faster along its orbit when it is closer to the Sun.

The images will help planetary astronomers interpret more than three decades of Pluto observations from other telescopes.

Hubble's camera can only resolve surface variations a few hundred miles across—too coarse for understanding surface geology. But in terms of surface color and brightness, these images reveal a complex-looking world with white, darkorange, and charcoal-black terrain. The overall color is believed to be a result of ultraviolet radiation from the distant Sun breaking up methane present on Pluto's surface, leaving behind a dark and red carbon-rich residue.

The Hubble images are a few pixels wide. Through a technique called dithering, multiple, slightly offset pictures are combined through computer-image processing to synthesize a higherresolution view than can be seen in a single exposure. "This has taken four years and 20 computers operating continuously and simultaneously to accomplish," Buie said.

These Hubble images, taken by the Advanced Camera for Surveys, will remain the sharpest-ever view of Pluto until NASA's New Horizons probe "The Hubble observations are the key to tying is within six months of its flyby during 2015. THE ROOTS OF SAINT VALENTINE'S DAY

By Christopher Nyerges

Valentine's Day. Hearts. Chocolates. Flowers. Pretty cards to your sweetheart. The newspaper advertisements tell us what Valentine's Day is all about: jewelry for your loved one, chocolates, and sexy underwear for your wife or girlfriend. So this is nothing more than a day to flirt and arouse passions in your loved ones, right?

Hold on! At least one of the newspaper advertisements says "Saint" Valentine's Day. What's that all about?

That's right. February 14 is the day set aside to commemorate a real historical person named Valentinus. With just a little bit of research, we learn that this Valentinus person was stoned, clubbed, and beheaded in about the year 270 A.D. He was violently killed by an unruly mob. That's the meaning buried there in that word "martyr." But why? And how have we come to associate Valentinus with chocolates and hearts

It turns out that there were at least two people called Valentinus - possibly more - who lived in the 2nd and 3rd Centuries. One - who the Catholic Church now called Saint Valentine was beheaded in 270 A.D.

Another Valentinus lived about a century earlier and founded one of the most important sects of Gnosticism. He was born in Egypt and educated in Alexandria. He settled in Rome during the reign of Pope Hyginus and taught there for more than 20 years. He attracted a large following to his beliefs, due in part to his intelligence, his eloquence of speech, and his forceful arguments.

But the teachings of this Valentinus differed in some ways from the Christian church of that time, and thus he was not selected for the office of Bishop. So Valentinus broke off from the Christian church, left Rome, and continued to develop his doctrines.

There are no original surviving documents from the teachings of Valentinus. So, if you want to discover what he actually believed and taught, you have to study fragmentary quotations found in the writings of his orthodox Christian opponents. Through research, we learn that Valentinus was influenced by Plato (the main source of the teachings of Socrates), Zoroastrianism, and Christianity. Valentinus also spoke of a spiritual realm which he called Pleroma, which consisted of a succession of aeons, or "emanations," evolving from an original divine being. These aeons have been described as the layers of an onion, with each layer being a wholly complete reality.

The term Gnosticism came from the word "gnosis," defined as spiritual knowledge. Those who followed this line of study were called the Gnostics, and many were referred to as Christian Gnostics. But by the third century, the more orthodox Christian church (and the political power of the day), decided to oppose and persecute the Gnostics. By the end of the third century, Gnosticism as a distinct movement had largely disapppeared.

Now, here's the guiz: Where in all this did you hear anything about chocolates, hearts, greeting cards, bunnies, jewelry, roses, or lace underwear? Plus, there doesn't appear to be any historical connection with any of the individuals named Valentinus with the date of February 14.

It turns out that in the pre-Christian days, there was a celebration in honor of Lupercus, a pastoral god, sometimes identified with Faunus or Pan. Faunus is depicted as having the body of a man but the horns, pointed ears, tail, and hind legs of a goat. That is, Faunus is more or less identical with the satyr, who was said to be lecherous, lustful, and always ready to party.

The pre-Christian observance of this day was called Lupercalia, which fell on February 15. Most of what people do today in the name of "celebrating St. Valentine's Day" has its roots in the ancient feast of Lupercalia. On Lupercalia, cards were given (often with subtle or overt sexual overtones), and men reportedly chased women through the streets (sounds somewhat like Mardi Gras).

It is difficult to ascertain why the commemoration of Valentinus was used to supplant, uplift, and supercede the already-existing commemoration of Lupercus, but that's what happened. Yet, very little of the trappings of modern St. Valentine's Day have anything to do with the historical Valentinus.

And that's really a shame, since Valentinus was as important as perhaps Socrates or Pythagoras, and yet most of us only associate him with the silly commercialism of Lupercalia's remnants.

Certainly it's possible that the Church engineered this substitution so that people would elevate their practices on this day, though there is no evidence that that has happened.

So rather than waste money and time on chocolates and red cards, why not take the time to study something meaningful about the great teacher Valentinus. Do this with your loved ones, and your family. You may discover that much of what he taught is very much relevant

Go and visit your family! It is interesting to note how many seniors are separated from their children by distance and yet make little effort to go and visit them, usually asking, "When are you coming to visit me?" Children of seniors with children of their own are most likely at the stage of life where earning a living and children's activities keep them very busy. While many children desire to spend time with senior parents, they are usually too involved to pack up, leave jobs, deal with grandkids, and travel. Seniors rationalize that they don't want to intrude on these busy lives. In many cases, this is not valid. Grown children often hunger for interaction with their parents. I know I do! We can become that incredible grandpa or grandma to our grandchildren who could benefit so much by this historical role. Balance and Mobility

One of the most powerful ways to stay active and independent is by preventing slips and falls. According to the CDC, falls have become the leading cause of injury deaths in the elderly. Complications from falls can create loss of mobility, complications from surgeries, increased risk of infections and death. Dr. Licata DC will have a special health presentation teaching you; how the brain and body controls balance, ways balance and mobility declines with age and ways to maintain and improve coordination to stay active and independent.

The lecture will take place Tuesday, February 16 at the Arcadia Community Center, 365 Campus Drive, Arcadia. If interested in attending please call or register at the Arcadia Senior Services Department, 626.574.5130 before February 10, 2010.

For additional information please contact Arcadia Senior Services at 626.574.5130. This medical presentation is for individuals age 50 and over.

Home & Property

Featuring unique homes & gardens and the people who create them Story and Photos By Chris Bertrand

One Of A Kind:

Chris Bertrand

Restoration architect, Fortunato Raymond Spanó, his wife and their brood of nine children

set up residence some thirty years ago in a neglected, Craftsman home on Rubio Drive in a gracious area of Northern Altadena. Actually, the Spanós had only eight children when they moved in. The last child made an appearance some time later.

Designed by George J. Webster and built in 1909 by Pasadena's Gunnison and May at a cost of $5400, the home is believed to be the first constructed on Rubio Street. Beautiful wrought iron gates provided privacy from the street, three fireplaces promised elegance and charm. Most importantly, the home had those "great bones" architects and interior designers talk so much

"The property was so overgrown to the brim with wisteria and ivy," Spanó recalls, "We didn't discover the second floor terrace until our third visit to the house as I was working hard to convince my wife that it was the house we would

Slowly, the Spanós set about peeling back the years and layers of paint, wall coverings and the like. They literally spent thirteen years removing as many as nine of paint from the woodwork that Craftsman homes are known for. Spano laughs that the job was so huge that they enlisted paint removal assistance from many friends, children, relatives and college students during that period. They uncovered an entry detailed in beautiful Douglas fir and an oak balustrade on the stairs.

The delivery of baby number nine motivated a remodel project of its own, but not of a bedroom as one might imagine. The couple who watched over their offspring during labor and delivery didn't quite make the tight turn in the porte cochere originally attached to the house, gashing their brand new VW camper on a corner of the Altadena Architect's steps. Unfortunately, they weren't the first. The Own Craftsman: A formerly square brick column had been rounded thirty year journey of off from many vehicles challenging the turn and

> As a result, architect Spano redesigned the porte cochere as an enchanting, bougainvillea and grapevine covered walkway with shaded seating area, and then moved the long driveway to the east edge of the property. Just a few years ago, Spano expanded and redesigned the small garage at the back of the property into a magnificent Craftsman outbuilding. It now showcases the exquisite work of "cabinet-door-furniture-and anything else Ray Spanó thinks of"-maker, Ramon Ramirez, 'Altadena's premier master craftsman," according

> The breathtaking mahogany doors fold back instead of rolling up, and are detailed with ebony plugs, just like best of vintage Craftsman millwork. Ramirez not only created these incredible garage doors, but was commissioned to build several furniture pieces for the home, like the dining room's buffet under the front window, including wings that extend the meal display for larger

> In the living room, the slow restoration work uncovered Douglas fir paneling which had to be laboriously and meticulously stripped. Further investigation revealed that fixtures had been removed from the walls and ceilings. Spano remembers, "When we stripped the paint off of the wood beams and wood moldings around the fireplace in the living room, and grass cloth off the plaster wall sections we discovered eight hidden fixture connections in the living room, two in the entry and two in the dining room. Wall sconces and hanging pendants from beams and the ceiling were all live and intact in the wall."

> Spanó commissioned a firm named Art Manufacturer's of Santa Ana to recreate many fixtures on the property. The company's specialty is duplicating any fixtures style desired. Replications now grace all the intended lighting locations in the grand yet comfortable room, many with custom, Craftsman-style wood support framework or ornamentation, made by Ramirez, as was the table and sofa frame.

Altadena Architect's Own Craftsman:

A 30 Year Journey of Restoration, Updating and Enjoyment

The incredibly overgrown landscape on the 34 acre parcel required the removal of over thirty trees, though today, you'd never know it. Spano chuckled that he's never needed to purchase any firewood for the home's fireplaces, and probably built-in the roof gutters into a roof system similar to the Greene and Greene Brothers' Gamble House probably the way it had been originally constructed.

The kitchen was reconfigured from several rooms, including a laundry porch, into a warm friendly space more conducive to a current day lifestyle yet in keeping with the architectural style of the

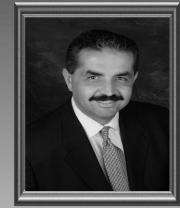

He brought in a bulldozer to make the yard more functional, terracing an upper area for a hidden seating area. All the retaining walls were built with stones gathered on the property. A deck and trellis outside the kitchen was constructed in joyful anticipation of a daughter's wedding.

Many years ago, one son began building what he described as a tool shed. As bedroom space was always at a premium with a large household, the lovingly built outbuilding grew into his own quiet

Nearly every year brought a new project. He Spanó moved his forty five year architectural practice of private corporate institutional and public buildings to his home three years ago, anticipating a gradual wind down of his career. But, he muses, it hasn't happened yet, and his firm, SpanóArchitects is amid four restoration and addition and new design projects currently.

> His office space reflects his love of Craftsman design, filled with more of Ramirez's remarkable creations, doors, cabinets, and a private, mini patio opening to the gentle Altadena breezes to freshen thoughts and ideas.

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed by Luther Tsinoglou

please consider the following proven suggestions again, make yours look like the best value. to produce a quick sale.

Remember that there are myriad possibilities for exposure in today's internet-driven society. In addition to your agent's traditional print and online marketing tools, use social networking sites like facebook and Twitter to promote your listing to younger first-time buyers.

When setting your price, place it ten to fifteen percent below your competition. All other things being equal, your home will readily appear as the best value.

Also consider the price "range" your home will fall into, and make sure you're on the lower end

If you're under pressure to sell your home of that range. For example, a $199,000 home falls quickly in a challenging market, you may have into the upper end of the $150,000 to $200,000 to swallow a large dose of reality and take some range, but that same home priced at $201,000 radical steps to increase your home's visibility. is in the lower end of the $200,000 to $250,000 While making concessions can seem difficult, range. Buyers tend to look in ranges of prices, so

> Finally, talk with your agent about incentives you can offer, like paying buyer closing costs or a decorating allowance. If you have a strong need to sell quickly, any or all of these suggestions should produce results.

> Luther Tsinoglou has just been named the top producing sales agent in Dickson Podley Realtor's Sierra Madre office for 2009, making the top 10% at the company overall. Luther has been licensed and practicing real estate since 1992. He specializes in residential and income property in Southern California.
