What's Going On In Sierra Madre? Part 1 of 2

A Flurry of New Business Investments: New Openings, Store Expansions, Plans on the Drawing Board and Proposals at the Planning Commission by Chris Bertrand, On Special Assignment

-Arcadia-

Though opening or expanding a business in Sierra Madre can be a lengthy process, City Manager, Elaine Aguilar, and Director of Planning, Danny Castro, have seen a significant uptick in interest, new applications and applications in process within the city system.

In an interview on Friday, April 15, with both Aguilar and Castro, Aguilar commented "Even though cities around us have come to a standstill, we are going through a little resurgence. Property values are somewhat stabilizing locally, making business investments a little more optimistic here. Business owners are realizing that while unemployment rates are in double digits in many communities around us, Sierra Madre's is just 3% as of January, 2011, per the California Employment Development Department (EDD). That translates to mean there's disposable income here in town, making Sierra Madre a little more advantageous as a location."

"Danny Castro and I can tell you that other cities have come to a screeching halt, but Sierra Madre has been very busy. We're excited to see these kinds of investments and interest in the community."

Of the many business projects in various stages of planning, construction to opening, the following are highlights of the status of nine downtown business projects, three residential projects and one school project.

NEW: Taco Fiesta, 345 W. Sierra Madre Boulevard

At 345 W. Sierra Madre Boulevard, the site of the former Kentucky Fried Chicken sports a new sign as of April 19, Taco Fiesta. As the sign was hoisted into place, restaurant owners, Moises Larios, and his sister and brother-in-law, Guadalupe and John Calkins, happily responded to smiling inquiries from walkers, bus riders and drivers, some of whom lowered their windows to shout out congratulations or just to show their thumbs up approval.

With only minor parking lot details to complete, a "soft" opening is planned for the week of April 25, with a grand opening planned for May. "We have people knocking on our door every day, asking when we'll open. Everyone's been very supportive and welcomed us."

The family has Sierra Madre ties, including the Calkins' son, who attended preschool here in town. Their artistic stainless steel sign was also fabricated by a local Sierra Madrean, Jamison Wians, through John Calkins professional connection with Global Entertainment's scenery and set makers. New executive chef, Sean Roache, new name & menu planned for Charcuterie, 120 W. Sierra Madre Boulevard

As of April 10, Sean Roache has taken over the culinary reigns at Charcuterie. Roache and the owners are in the process of a name change and a major menu revamp and plan a grand reopening on May 7.

A graduate of Le Cordon Bleu in Pasadena in 2003, Roache, an Arcadia native, has returned home after years on the road. He worked first at Chateau Marmont in Hollywood, and then spent the last seven years splitting his time between two tony country clubs, West Palm Beach's Loblolly Country Club in Florida and Thousand Islands CC in New York.

We have changed vendors and will now feature meats from the upscale, Newport Meat Company and fish from Honolulu Fish Company that promises fish from the boat to our kitchen within 24 hours," said Roache. "People have noticed the change, and it's busier already," commented Roache. "Currently, we're open for lunch Tuesday through Saturday at 11 and for dinner Thursday to Saturday. On weekends, we'll now open bright and early at 7 a.m., for breakfast."

Sierra Madre Medical: New Expanded Offices in Planning Stages at 147 W. Sierra Madre Blvd.

Hani and his architect, Norberto Nardi of Monrovia and Cal Poly Pomona, have worked with the city about a year on Sierra Madre Medical's proposed 7,000 square foot building planned for the rear of the current office site.

They and their supporters have several appearances at city meetings during that time. According to Aguilar, the project has been approved by the city council, and the plans are in engineering plan check with the city.

Dr. Sami, who is also an Assistant Clinical Professor at USC's Keck School of Medicine, opened his Sierra Madre practice in 1997 at another location, then moved to the current, 2200 square foot building in 2000. With more space, the Sierra Madre Medical project is intended to bring added medical staffing and pediatric (cont. pg. 3) opens with the ringing words, In the beginning God created Here we see the bookend for the heavens and the earth. The the Old Testament, as Genesis inspired vision of God's creation sprinkles the universe with pristine perfection through the initial chapter of the Bible, which closes in...God saw all that he had made, and it was very good. Chapter Two introduces the reader to the magnificent glories of the four living waters and the jeweled lands they traverse, forever known to us as the Garden of Eden. And just as the reader is safe in believing they will be getting their feet wet, we come to discover that we are only teased by the thought of the Garden of Eden. For in the next Chapter Adam and Eve do not escape the page before God has banished the two from the Garden.

The remainder of the Old Testament can be partitioned into numerous categories but central to its theme is the recorded history of mankind. Presented to us with due care, the jury, for examination and reflection. Each piece of evidence being revealed and then chronicled over thousands of years. For every God loving Job we are to encounter in the heart of the Bible an envious Cain surfaces. For every pure Esther we are greeted with, a wicked Jezebel rises from its pages. The finest single example of our better strengths and wretched failings is showcased in David. David's heart is truly an amazing vessel for it possesses an uncommon depth of feeling as evidenced by the evocative Psalms he wrote, which still bristle in our time with an emotional permanency. Including the most celebrated Psalm of all - 23... Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me. David's heart reigns supreme, but it betrays him as well when he falls in love with Bathsheba, a married woman. He will have her husband killed and take her for his wife. The sin of David is extreme, and to be sure most of us believe ourselves incapable of such an action, thankfully, but if we look not at the action of David but view it through the lense of a lesson it is most useful for us. For it is the reminder that even the best examples of mankind are stained by sin and flawed. The Old Testament closes with a particularly ominous sentence... He will turn the hearts of the fathers to their children,

The Old Testament famously their fathers; or else I will come The disciples and most of the and strike the land with a curse. opened with the beauty of God, them from the toilsome chains Malachi closes it with a warning of the Romans, but the purpose and a curse.

Where we find the Old Testament as a lesson book, the New Testament is presented to us as our answer book. For in these pages we discover the embodiment of one of the themes that is spoken of in the Old Testament, the dawn of a New Chapter for mankind in the redemptive form

The disciples (believers/followers) of Jesus are composed of from the torches that sought out many characteristics of people that we know personally: highly religious, emotionally giving, intelligent, suspicious, curious of The people that had walked with mind, envious, and possessing the natural fears and beliefs that are shared by each of us. These were not angles plucked from heaven but common men. In the fled the streets and sheltered up period that the disciples are with in a home as frightened animals. Jesus they will witness the profound experience of the Sermon personally risked themselves on the Mount, Jesus walking on water, and Lazarus being raised from the dead after being in the abandoned their jobs for what? grave for four days. The number A dead Messiah. four is important here because the popular Jewish belief of the day was that the soul stayed with the body for three days after death. Raising someone from the dead is one major issue but placing the soul back into the body after three days would have been impossible to the thinking of the Jews. The message is very clear and would have been understood by the Jews of the day. Jesus is showing them that I not only have power to raise the body but the spirit as well.

The New Testament and the story of Jesus is not all of miracles and speeches. So when Jesus goes to the garden of Gethsemane to pray if another way is possible to fulfill his purpose in life, he is told that no other way exists. After his marathon prayer the pools of blood mingle equally with his sweat and drop from his forehead as the anguish and burden and what must occur overwhelms his senses. In a short time he will be on trial and carrying the cross to Golgotha (place of the skull). The Jews had long believed that a King would one day rise up and free them from their bonds. This belief was heightened by hope during this period as the cruel and burdenand the hearts of the children to some reign of the Romans daily reminded them of their plight and promise.

Jews that believed in Jesus thought that he had come to reigning as a living King and free of Jesus reached beyond their own moment in time into the Old Testament and the promise of a victory for all of us. As Jesus was taken down from the cross and placed in the tomb, the voices of those that were his dissenters in life grew in the wildfire of a mob. Condemning words assaulted those that believed in Jesus; I told you so - he is no Messiah, you are fools and followers of devils. The accusations rang the believers of Jesus, and it is during this time that Peter denies he knows Jesus three times. Jesus and had seen his miracles and lived upon his words did not possess the strength to defend him. The disciples of Jesus now All that they believed in and for was lying in a tomb. They had left family and friends and

The sky was still dark that early morning as Mary approached the tomb of Jesus. The stone covered the entrance of the grave was a massive rock. It had been placed into positioned by several Roman guards. As Mary came closer that morning she was astonished to see that the stone had been rolled away, she rushed into the opening of the tomb to discover the body of Jesus was stolen. She hovered over the place he once rested and wept. She could not recognize them as such but two angels asked of her, Woman, why are you crying? They have taken my Lord away, she replied, and pleaded with another figure in the room. But he called her name, Mary, and it was then that she recognized it was the risen Jesus.

Through much of early church the image of the cross was considered gruesome. When one thinks of victory it is not the beaten figure of a bloody Jesus upon a cross that logically rises to mind, but the victorious image of a stone rolled aside. It is only when we consider our own sins that we can truly appreciate the beauty that is the cross. In life we have the great and rare occasion to discover individuals that are so vitreous of spirit, so patterned in kindness, and so lovely of character that a single prick from a thorny rose is a massive injustice. How infinitely better is the person of Jesus than those imperfect souls and how much more is our burden for forcing Jesus upon that cross.

Remember the cross this Easter but remember the stone that is thrown aside as well, for it is done so for all of us to enter.

We often lose important customs through the passage of time. A very Old Russian tradition on Easter is to greet a person with... He is risen and the responder to rejoin... He is risen, indeed.

and specialty care to the city, adding better healthcare access to local residents, an increase in employment and ancillary complementary business use by patients and staff.

Dr. Sami also notes that the facility will, by its location north of I-210, add to the city's earthquake and emergency preparedness. Since Sierra Madre could face difficulties in accessing hospitals south of the freeway after a quake, this larger medical facility could aid in providing medical care in a catastrophe.

After a lull, contractors are once again hammering away at the former Lozano's restaurant site. While the outside has been mostly complete for months, the interior is not.

The building, now owned by the Ribolis of Maddalena Restaurant and San Antonio Winery, will house a new iteration of the culinary inspirations of Mike and Anne's Restaurant in South Pasadena, named for restaurateur, Steve Ahn's parents, Mike and Anne. He plans an American bistro menu, similar to the South Pasadena location.

The restaurant has sent representatives and taste tempting delights to both the Wine and Jazz event in October, 2010 and the Library's fundraiser in early 2011, but earlier hopes of a late 2010 opening have left this prominent Sierra Madre spot dark. Their manager indicates a current target opening in late May, for the approximately 60 seat eatery, starting with dinner and weekend brunch.

Though the posted license application lists Wisteria Grill as the proposed name, Ahn is working through changes to reflect the local preferred spelling, now Wistaria Restaurant and Bar.

The Bottle Shop Hopes to Expand Pending City Nod, 58 W. Sierra Madre Blvd. (right)

Owner Bill Sullivan proposes to enlarge The Bottle Shop westward into the adjacent storefront and to extend the structure 190 square feet to the south. In the proposed, expanded 1190 square feet of space, Sullivan hopes to build a tasting area, incorporate extra display space and add a bathroom. He notes this is, "Not a wine bar, but an area to offer tastes of wines we sell," in the context of food and wine pairing, etc., said Sullivan.

Assisted Living Developer Under Contract to Purchase Former Skilled Nursing Facility, 225-45 W. Sierra Madre Blvd.

With the weeds growing through the cracks in the pavement at the former skilled nursing facility across from City Hall, the site has become more of an eyesore each year that it stands empty and dilapidated. Fountain Square Development West LLC partner, Billy Shields, confirmed April 20th, that they have entered into a contract to purchase the site, but have not closed on a purchase.

"Three of us are involved, and I will be leading the development out here in the West," noted Shields. "We plan to build, then become owner operators of this residential community."

In March, Shields appeared before the City Council, not with a formal plan or formal application, but to open an exploratory dialogue with the community. The organization's idea is to develop a fully licensed, assisted living community housing about ninety, with a staff of approximately 25, including 24/7 nursing. A part of the facility would accommodate Alzheimer's or dementia residents.

Owner Bill Sullivan hopes to open a Wine Tasting

Room next to the Bottle Shop

Shields explained further, "We've made preliminary application to the city, which allows them to respond to some of the basic parameters we are proposing. We're anxious to get their comments and key questions answered, and to have the different departments look at the plans. Within a month of that meeting, we plan to meet requirements for the formal application."

Shields, a resident of Poway, played for the San Diego Chargers, the New York Jets and 1984 Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers, before moving to senior living community development at Virginiabased, Sunrise Senior Living, where he spent 17 years. "I've enjoyed the senior living business, particularly when we open new communities... when we see the families and the residents move in a frail elderly resident. It's so much more rewarding than building apartments and commercial real estate," reflected Shields.

The Fountain Square team all came with experience from Sunrise, before creating their own senior development organization. Sierra Madre will be their third project, after their first in suburban D.C., and a second in White Plains, New York. Shields invites Sierra Madreans to view the website for their New York assisted living residence at www.TheKensingtonAL.com, with the sidebar note that each development is customized to the style of the community. The group welcomes input on Fountain Square's development ideas from neighbors and the community at 858-748-0201. The group also plans forums, perhaps on the site grounds, as the process evolves.

Masuda Wins Runoff Election

To the surprise of some, Gene Masuda, the well known Eaton Blanche Park Neighborhood Association President, beat out candidate Jill Fosselman in Tuesday's runoff election to become the city's next District 4 councilmember.

Masuda told reporters at city hall, as the ballots were being counted, that his first goal was to look at spending saying the city had not had a balanced budget in three years. His opponent Jill Fosselman made no appearance.

Masuda immediately put the word "victory" in large red letters on his website. He also called his win a landslide receiving 55.7 percent of the vote. Masuda got 1,975 votes to Fosselman's 1,566 votes.

City Clerk, Mark Jomsky, said Tuesday night the results still needed to be finalized and approved by the city council. The swearing in will take place in May, he said.

Guns in Old Pas

Opposed to a bill authored by Assemblymember Anthony Portantino that would make it illegal to carry an unloaded handgun in any public place or street, a group of guns rights advocates took to the streets of Old Pasadena Thursday night in protest. Member of the Brady Campaign, in favor of AB 144, also demonstrated and Portantino himself also made an appearance.

"I think most Ĉalifornians would agree that they don't want people walking around in parks or in coffee shops with a gun strapped to their hip," Portantino said. "Whether it's loaded or not, it creates some very real public safety issues."

Member of the South Bay Open Carry strolled down Colorado Blvd with Glocks, revolvers, .357s and other handguns proudly displayed looking for somewhere to eat ending up at The Cheesecake Factory.

As they dined a number of Pasadena police officers stood outside. One officer asked an Open Carry group member if they had planned the demonstration. He said it was part of their monthly dinner meetings.
Gene McCarthy, President of South Bay Open

Carry told reporters earlier in the night they usually dine somewhere in the South Bay although chose Pasadena because of Portantino's bill. "With Portantino's Assembly Bill 144, that bill if

Arcadia Police Blotter

For the period of Sunday, April 10, through Saturday, April 16, the Police Department responded to 894 calls for service of which 112 required formal investigations. The following is a summary report of the major incidents handled by the Department during this period.

Sunday, April 10:

At about 6:40 p.m., officers and paramedics responded to an injury traffic collision in the 600 block of West Duarte Road. The investigation revealed that two 16-year-old females (one Asian and one of unknown race) were crossing Duarte Road on foot when they were struck by a vehicle traveling westbound on Duarte Road. The Asian female died as a result of the injuries sustained in the collision, while the other female was transported and treated at Huntington Memorial Hospital with serious injuries. The driver of the vehicle was a 19-year-old, Asian male.

Around 4:00 p.m., officers were dispatched to Arcadia Methodist Hospital in regards to a cold battery report. The victim, a 20-year-old Hispanic female, stated that on Saturday, April 9th at approximately 2:00 p.m., she was walking home from the mall westbound on Huntington Drive when she was assaulted by four unknown Hispanic females in their early 20's.

Monday, April 11:

Shortly after 7:30 a.m., officers responded to the 700 block of Duarte Road in reference to a deceased person. The subject was an 82-year-old White male who had apparently passed away in his

Shortly after 10:00 p.m., units responded to Phoenix Chinese Cuisine, 1108 South Baldwin Avenue, in regards to an unknown disturbance inside. Upon arrival, officers were advised that an intoxicated White male in his 30's had just left after yelling and harassing customers inside the location. Officers located the subject in front of 1020 South Baldwin Avenue. While being questioned, a check in the records system revealed he had an outstanding warrant and was then placed under arrest for both the warrant and for being drunk in public.

Tuesday, April 12:

About 2:00 a.m., units responded to a 911 call received by Sierra Madre PD regarding an auto burglary in progress. The location was the 1400 block of Caballero Road, which is in Arcadia's jurisdiction. The reporting party advised Dispatch that he had seen two male subjects break into a vehicle in front of his home and then flee in a white or silver pickup truck. While conducting an area search for the vehicle, the responding officer observed a white pickup truck, occupied by two males, turn abruptly from northbound to southbound Santa Anita at Orange Grove, with a Sierra Madre police car behind it. A traffic stop was conducted. The investigation revealed stolen property and tools commonly used in the commission of a burglary. Both 19-year-old Hispanic men were arrested for auto burglary and possession of burglary tools.

Just before 7:00 p.m., officers responded to the Arcadia Police station lobby in regards to a missing person report. The missing person was a 78-year-old Hispanic male with dementia who had just moved to Arcadia. A critical missing person's alert was disseminated via BOLOs (Be On The Look Out), Medic Alert Center and Nixel. At approximately 10:00 p.m. the man arrived in good health at a family member's residence in Burbank.

Wednesday, April 13:

Between 2:00 a.m. and 7:30 a.m., an auto burglary occurred in the 500 block of Vaquero Road. Unknown suspect(s) shattered the right front passenger window and stole the vehicle's DMV registration certificate and an auto insurance card.

Shortly before 11:00 a.m., units were dispatched to the Westfield Shopping Center, 400 South Baldwin Avenue, in regards to a report by mall security of a suspicious male walking through several jewelry stores. He resembled a suspect who had stolen jewelry from the Ben Bridge jewelry store in the Westfield Topanga mall. The subject was questioned by officers and a records check revealed an outstanding misdemeanor burglary warrant. The 32-year-old Hispanic male was placed under arrest for the warrant.

Áround 12:06 p.m., officers were dispatched to Rancho High School, 150 South Third Avenue, in regard to a student with marijuana on the property. An investigation revealed that a 17-year-old Hispanic male handed a piece of folded paper to another student, a 13-year-old Hispanic male, who was on his way to the bathroom. The folded paper contained marijuana. The 17-year-old suspect immediately left the classroom when the marijuana was discovered and fled on foot westbound. An area and residence check were conducted, but the suspect was not located. A follow-up investigation

Between 10:30 a.m. and 3:00 p.m., a residential burglary occurred in the 100 block of West Santa Anita Terrace. Unknown suspect(s) entered the home through an open window, ransacked the house and stole jewelry, cash and a wallet from the master bedroom for a reported loss of about

Friday, April 15:

Shortly after midnight, an Asian female victim arrived at home in the 1100 block of South Third Avenue. She was walking to her door with her 2-year-old son when she was accosted by a Black male, in his early to mid 20's. The suspect demanded her purse and a laptop that she was carrying. The victim did not immediately comply and the suspect brandished a dark "handgun," discharging it at the victim. The victim was struck in the cheek and the suspect grabbed the purse and computer, running off to an awaiting vehicle. It appears that the weapon was a BB or pellet gun. The child was not harmed.

Monrovia Incumbents Survive Challenges

from the Desk of the City Manager, Scott Ochoa

Tuesday's general municipal election was executed without any real complexity or controversy. Indeed, the only drama arose when confusion developed on the day after the election - the City Clerk's chart of unofficial results listed "ballots cast" as well as "votes cast." Essentially, because we have so many voters opting to exercise a vote-by-mail (VBM) option, the City Clerk disseminates thousands of ballots in the weeks prior to the election. As reported, the turnout for this election - both VBM and precinct walk-ins - was very low, at 13.6%. This turnout rate translates into 2,682 votes cast - meaning that only 984 voters went to the polls and only ,1698 of the VBM voters actually mailed in their ballots. The confusion arose when the City Clerk's chart led some to mistakenly believe that there were still VBM cast ballots floating around that had not been counted (listing the total VBMs mailed out as ballots "cast," as opposed to ballots "distributed" or "disseminated"). By Wednesday afternoon, the City Clerk changed the terminology the confusion was abated.

As far as the preliminary election results, Mayor Mary Ann Lutz - running unopposed - received 2,295 votes, Councilwoman Becky Shevlin received 1,936 votes, and Councilman Tom Adams received 1,615 votes. Congratulations to these returning community leaders; and thanks and best wishes to the other three Monrovians who appeared on the ballot. It takes conviction and courage to put your name on a ballot and ask folks to judge your message and platform.

I believe this election, both the outcome and the turn-out rate, are indications of the community's overall satisfaction with Monrovia's trajectory and prospects.

The Monrovia Police Department's classes for the Formative Years Project are scheduled to begin May 5. The Formative Years Project is a program aimed at parents and their children, grades 1 through 3, and introduces important life values and skills to children at an early age. Providing this training when children are young begins the process of building healthy and safe practices that can set the stage for a lifetime of success and healthy living. Topics include bullying, media influence on children, internet safety, child personal safety and gang and drug awareness. For information and class reservations, call (626) 256-8098.

During the last seven day period, the Police Department handled 499 service events, resulting in 99 investigations. Following are the last week's highlighted issues and events:

On April 7 at 7:49 a.m., an officer responded to the report of a vehicle burglary in the 900 block of Diamond. The victim had parked her vehicle in the driveway the evening before, locked it and set the alarm. She returned to her vehicle in the morning and found the left rear window shattered. She never heard the alarm activate; however, she did hear a vehicle speed away around 4 a.m., but did not think anything of it. The items taken were a computer, a DVD player, and a black wallet and purse.

Residential Burglary

On April 7 at 11:25 a.m., an officer was dispatched to the 200 block of West Lemon regarding a burglary. The victim reported that someone broke into his garage overnight. The suspect(s) used some type of pry tool to force open the east door of the unattached studio. It is unknown if anything was

On April 7 at 11:30 a.m., an officer responded to a residence in the 1600 block of Pilgrim on a vehicle burglary report. The victim reported that his vehicle was broken into during the night. The suspect(s) broke the right front passenger window, reached in and removed a radar detector from the windshield, where it had been attached.

On April 7 at 1:56 p.m., an officer was dispatched to the 200 block of South Shamrock on a residential burglary report. The victim believed his house was broken into between 8 a.m. and 1:55 p.m. The officer checked the property and determined the suspect(s) made entry through a closet window. He checked the window and noted the locking mechanism was loose and he wiggled it open. The suspect(s) left through the side kitchen door.

Vehicle Burglary On April 8 at 6:44 a.m., an officer went to the 1200 block of South Magnolia regarding a vehicle burglary. The victim had parked his vehicle across the street from his residence in the evening and secured it. He returned in the morning and found the driver side door was unlocked and the interior was ransacked. He checked the trunk and discovered his stereo amplifier and subwoofer were missing. The vehicle does not have an alarm and there were no signs of forced entry.

On April 8 at 2:18 p.m., an officer was dispatched to the 500 block of East Walnut on a grand theft report. The victim is a gardener and had parked his truck, leaving his gardening tools in the truck. While he was busy working on a client's house, the suspect(s) removed his equipment and loaded it onto their truck, a white, four-door, crew cab, 2007-2009, Chevrolet Silverado. The suspect vehicle fled southbound on California from the location. Fight / Officer Injured

On April 10 at 1:30 a.m., an officer on patrol observed a fight in progress in front of a business in the 300 block of South Myrtle and immediately requested additional officers to respond. During the course of restoring order, officers encountered a combative male suspect and his female associate who would not comply with their orders to disburse. Officers used their pepper spray on the suspects and they were detained and arrested. As the officers were attempting to put the male suspect into the back seat of the police vehicle, he continued to struggle and resist. During the struggle, one of the officers received minor injury to his hand.

Traffic Collision / Vehicle vs. Child
On April 10 at 12:22 p.m., a family looking to rent an apartment in the area of Magnolia and Linwood became distracted and their two year old child wandered off. The boy ran between two parked cars and into the street. He was struck by a vehicle and sustained abrasions and bruises over his entire body. He was conscious and crying when officers arrived and was taken to a hospital. Outside Assist - Torrance Police Department

On April 11 at 8:42 p.m., Monrovia Police Department received a Department of Child and Family Services referral and contacted the reporting party by telephone, since she did not reside in Monrovia. Officers learned the victim was at Torrance Police Department filing a report, since the crime occurred in that city during 2006 to 2008. The investigating detective informed Monrovia Police Department of possible additional victims living in Monrovia at a residence in the 800 block of South Canyon. Officers responded to the location to conduct a welfare check and discovered the possible victims did not reside at the location, but the suspect did. Torrance Police Department requested we arrest the suspect. The suspect was arrested and Torrance Police Department responded to take him into custody for multiple sex crime offenses. The investigation is continuing.

WATER DISTRICT GRANT FUNDS DUARTE'S 2011 GLOBAL YOUTH SERVICE WEEK APRIL 18-21

The City of Duarte and Duarte's Promise -

The Alliance for Youth will celebrate Global Youth Service Week April 18-21 with a series of four school based beautification projects with the help of a $1,500 grant from the Upper San Gabriel Valley Municipal Water District (USGVMWD).

Under the leadership of Duarte's Promise - The Alliance for Youth, students from various Duarte Unified School District's programs and campuses including Think Together, leadership classes, Beardslee, Valley View, and Maxwell elementary schools, and Northview Intermediate School, will plant drought tolerant and native plant gardens on their respective campuses. The plant species and gardens were selected and designed by David Karp, an instructor at Mt. Olive alternative school who heads the award winning Mount Olive Outdoor School Experience (MOOSE) program.

Global Youth Service Week is one of a number of volunteer programs and events sponsored by Duarte's Promise - The Alliance for Youth. In 2000, Duarte was officially named an America's Promise "Community of Promise." Since then, more than 200 Duarte and other local businesses, organizations, individuals, government, schools, and communities of faith have partnered in a commitment to ensure that the needs of young people are served through five promises: ongoing relationships with caring adults - parents, mentors, tutors, coaches, safe places and structured activities during non-school hours, a healthy start and future, marketable skills through effective education, and opportunities for youth to give back through community service.

City to Celebrate Improvements at Otis Gordon Sports Park

It's a potty party. A grand opening and ribbon cutting will celebrate the newly completed restrooms at Otis Gordon Sports Park in Duarte. The festivities, Thursday, April 28, at 8:30 a.m., will be followed by the opening day softball game between the Duarte 66ers and Duarte D-Crew teams.

'Yes, in Duarte we celebrate everything, especially new community facilities made possible with the help of grant funds," said Parks and Recreation Director, Donna Georgino.

The project was funded utilizing a portion of a $220,000 grant from the State of California 2002 Resources Bond Act. Installation of the prefabricated restroom facility at Otis Gordon Sports Park cost $130,000. Last year, the City utilized $50,000 of the grant to replace old playground equipment at Andres Duarte Satellite Park with new equipment that meets State and Federal guidelines for safety and accessibility.

The community has long awaited the installation of permanent restroom facilities at Otis Gordon Sports Park. In 1995, the City of Duarte applied and received a $500,000 grant to renovate the sports field at Mt. Olive High School, later renamed Otis Gordon Sports Park, and the field at Andres Duarte Elementary School. But the grant funding was not adequate enough to allow for restrooms to be constructed. Up until now, park users have had to rely on portable facilities at the site provided by the City, an arrangement that Georgino notes has been less than desirable.

Otis Gordon Sports Park is one of the City of Duarte's most popular and well-used parks. The five-acre park is used by senior citizens for their softball league, and by the Recreation Department for the summer t-ball league and spring youth mini soccer. The sports park is also the home of the City's adult softball program, and is used by many outside groups including DYAC, the Hawks, and Anita Oaks School. The park is also available for rent by other organizations and individuals.

"STOP, HEY, WHAT'S THAT SOUND?"

"There's something happening here. What it is ain't exactly clear"....

by Kim Clymer-Kelley

It was a rainy, soggy Sunday afternoon when I got a call from a good friend of mine inviting me to attend a meeting of group she had found that she though might interest me. I really did not relish driving into the L.A., especially on such a miserable day. "I HATE the city!" I whined. "Come on, I think you will really like it," she said, hoping to persuade me to give up my cozy dry table at Beantown where I planned to spend the day working. I reluctantly agreed, packed up my stuff, and headed home to put on some waterproof boots and a raincoat and meet her for our ride into the city.

The meeting was being held near "Not a Cornfield", a living sculpture in the form of a field of corn in an industrial part of the city right outside of China Town. The facility in which the group was meeting belongs to Farmlab, a group of artists who have created, according to their website "a short-term multi-disciplinary investigation of land use issues that are related to sustainability, livability, and health."

When we left Pasadena, the weather was still holding out however, by the time we arrived at the site, we were in the middle of a full-fledged downpour. We wound our way through some narrow streets through a collection of old warehouses eventually coming upon a few of the members standing on a street corner directing other members to parking. We parked along a side street and walked across the street and tromped through the puddles along the edge of the overpass that ran between two of the buildings. Stored under the overpass was a fascinating array of oddities, huge bladders marked "potable water", a row of banana trees in wooden planters, tables, chairs and cabinets, sculptures and painted walls, and vehicles in various stages of repair...one served as a planter with all kinds of flowers and vegetable growing out of the trunk, the roof, the hood, and the windows. Under the far end of the overpass was a small group of 10-15 cold, wet people...a group that calls themselves"The Backwards Beekeepers". One of their leaders was unlocking a door to the warehouse to let them in out of the rain. We all entered the building. It was filled with a lovely collection of 50's and 60's vintage furniture. A large circle of assorted chairs in the center was an obvious indication that the building was, upon occasion, used for meetings. We seated ourselves and one member passed out some homemade cookies he had brought as we chatted and waited the 10 minutes we had until the 11 am meeting was to begin. In that time the group grew and grew as one by one other member filtered in. By the time the meeting got underway, there was a crowd of about 60

A man, who was apparently their leader ers might help to change the world? casually called the meeting to order. He started by introducing himself as Kirk, the founder of the group and a master Backwards Beekeeper. The group continued to grow as the meeting proceeded. To begin the meeting, they went around the room and introduced all of the mentors of the club. These are the people who helped "newbees" to learn the ins and outs of urban beekeeping. They fielded questions in the next part of the meeting on how to capture a swarm, how to build a hive, how to know if you have a queen in your hive, how to remove a hive from inside a wall and why their bees deserted their hive.

As the meeting progressed, the group continued to grow to about 75 people. I listened intently to the each of the members questions, answers, and contributions. It was fascinating information and exciting to hear that many people so passionate about what they are doing. They were from all over the LA area...the "Valley", the "Inland Empire", the "West Side", Simi Valley, and even as far away as Ventura. Aside from the beekeeping they all had one other thing in common, the underlying concern of them all was sustainability...and organic beekeeping was the one tiny corner of this overwhelmingly huge issue that they had decided to take on as their main contribution to the effort.

As I sat and listened to the conversation, I began to ponder the enormity of what I was witnessing.

"There's something happening here...What it is ain't exactly clear ".

The words to that era defining Buffalo Springfield song that I had grown up with started to sound in my head...

"Think it's time we stop, children, what's that sound? Everybody look what's going down.

Here in the confines of a warehouse tucked along side of a freeway overpass on a dark and rainy day was an organization of totally dedicated and passionate people...75 of them....who knew there were 75 urban beekeepers in LA?...all quietly supporting and tackling the issue of sustainability. And here also was the headquarters of another group of artists who were promoting and advancing urban agriculture. I imagined how many other secret enclaves there were in the city where such things were going on?...how many other organizations were quietly meeting in little corners all around the country...around the world?...if there were 75 people doing something as obscure as beekeeping in one city, how many people there must be passionately pursuing one or more of the thousands of niches that form the sustainability movement. I could not help but feel that what I was witnessing was the undercurrent of a movement that has quietly grown into something of great power and scale and is about to burst out and engulf the entire globe...a movement that will cross all age, gender, and cultural barriers and will change the way we all live and think. The energy in that room at that moment...that tiny little corner of the planet... was greater than that of the tsunami that devastated Japan, and it is growing every day. Who could imagine that beekeep-

SMART CHOICES FOR A GREENER HOME

(NAPSI)—Why settle for celebrating Earth Day once a year? The choices you make when building, remodeling or repairing your home can help protect your wallet, your home and the planet every day of the year.

Here are a few environmentally smart choices for your home:

- Need new flooring? Consider using environmentally sensitive building materials for your flooring. Elegant bamboo, forgiving cork and practical linoleum floorings are a few eco-friendly alternatives.
- Look for the label. When buying new appliances, look for the Energy Star label. These energy-efficient products can save you
- Improve your view. Energy-efficient windows not only help seal in heat that might otherwise be lost; they are easier to clean and help freshen a home's exterior.
- Save water. Put a rain barrel in your garden. Collecting rain means you can water the garden without adding to your water
- Start at the top. Opt for roofing materials and products that are eco friendly. It makes environmental sense to look for durable, high-quality materials that will last and are at least partially made from recycled or recyclable materials. Investing in a long-lasting roof can be the easiest and least expensive way to be environmentally friendly. For example, all of GAF's laminated shingle products, including the popular Timberline shingle, carry a lifetime limited warranty that is even transferable to a second owner. That means less shingles being torn off and shipped to landfills. The shingles are also manufactured using Advanced Protection technology, resulting in a lighter but more powerful shingle that uses fewer natural resources.

To really make an impact and potentially reduce a significant amount of energy use, use a highly reflective shingle, such as the Timberline Cool Series, which reflects sunlight to help reduce attic heat buildup and save energy. Further reduce energy use by improving attic ventilation. An attic vent allows unwanted heat and moisture to escape from your attic—which helps to reduce energy costs.

Vents such as the company's Cobra attic exhaust reduce the load on your AC by moving superheated air out of your attic before it builds up and causes damage. To be even more eco friendly and further reduce energy costs, opt for MasterFlow Green Machine attic and ridge vents.

Dr. Greg DeMuri, an infectious disease specialist at American Family Children's Hospital, says Lyme disease may cause flu-like symptoms, fever, fatigue, rash and joint and body aches. Ticks get the Lyme bacteria by biting wildlife, such as deer, and the bacteria spread when the ticks bite human skin. This treatable disease can have serious long-term effects if it's not detected early in its course.

DeMuri says Lyme disease is quite common in younger people who are more likely to be outside in the spring and summer months.

hours for a tick to spread Lyme disease?

DeMuri, who is also an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health, says if a tick is found in the skin, it should be removed immediately, preferably with a pair of tweezers.

"Washing the skin or using other remedies such as gasoline, alcohol and petroleum jelly will not work," he says. "You should use tweezers to grab the tick by the head and not leave any part of it in the skin. Forcible removal is the key."

But prevention is always preferable. DeMuri says children can most easily avoid Lyme disease *tucking their pants inside their socks * wearing clothing that is not loose-fitting *using repellents such as DEET, which he says is and will last on clothing for a number of weeks," he says. Untreated, Lyme can cause chronic joint pain and complications to the heart and central nervous system. However, if caught early, the disease can be eradicated with the use of antibiotics. "It's very unusual to die from Lyme disease," says DeMuri.

Alverno to Offer Multi-Media Harry Potter Studies

"Hogwarts Haven" is one of the new courses offered this summer at Alverno Summer Institute's Middle School Summer Session.

Why a class in Harry Potter?

Teacher-and avid Potterite--Katharine Guerrero explains that J.K. Rowling's series of novels are more than just great reading. "The Harry Potter books are classic examples of the hero's journey, which is one of the basic patterns of narrative going back to the earliest literature and myth." She adds, "Think of the moment when Harry receives the letter that invites him to Hogwarts. It's a perfect example of the hero's first step in the journey—the Call to Adventure.

She says that middle school is the perfect time for students to begin recognizing the hero's quest in what they read. "Once they see how these elements work in Harry Potter, they can make the connection with other literature. Understanding the hero's journey can help kids unravel more complicated literature as they advance in school."

Of course, any class called "Hogwarts Haven" will be fun as well as educational. Guerrero will concentrate on the final book in the series (with the film coming out this summer) Students will explore the nuances of the Harry Potter novels, and will ultimately create their own hero's journey using various forms of media.

"Hogwarts Haven" is only one of many classes offered for middle school boys and girls this summer at Alverno. For more information contact ASI Director Suzy Ares at sares@alverno-hs. org or 626-355-3463 x 312.

ROXOLANA

My dearly departed father and the inspiration for my career, Elmer Dills, made it his life's work and inspired a legion of readers in the process by investigating and writing about the restaurants that meld into the landscape and seldom win the curiosity of a visit by their appearance. His job carried many investigative practices but I believe he enjoyed this type of commando experience the most. For he retained an American pride in discovering uncommon food among the com-

Ever vigil in his search for the great people and fabulous dining that composed the dining experience. I thought of my Dad when I made such a discovery this week in Old Town Pasadena. On my routine visit to Red White and Bluezz for a glass of bubbly, and the free customer supervision I lend their operation. I happened to park on Raymond in front of the Roxolana Restaurant. Now if you have been there or have heard the rumors through a friend, you may have just beaten me to this story. I sauntered in and was greeted by a lovely young lady named Veronica, her accent punctuating her salutation. I asked her my usual crime scene Restaurant reviewer questions: What's going on here? How long have you been here? And what type of cuisine are you featuring? She didn't even bat a brow as she led her opening with..... You are in for a treat, have you ever had Ukrainian food before? Hmmm...I don't think so, and she didn't need to throw in that Ukrainian part, because she had me at....You are in for a treat.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills

I started off with the wine list and pursed their impressive selections, many by the glass. I may not be a regular in the Ukrainian chow line, but I do have a familiarity with their wines, and sure enough, a name that I recognized surfaced, Khvanchkara, a red wine. I am not certain of the origin of the grape but my palate did not appear to mind my lack of knowledge in the subject. I began my dining exploration with a Pierogi ($5.95). This a delightful pastry stuffed with mixed meats, bacon and onions. The soup settled upon the table, the Borsch ($7.95) with pampushki, carrot, potato, and beets. It's the peasant soup of Russia, and if their vodka doesn't add a smile to your face this will perform the act. The soup made such an impression that I stopped in for another bowl and a glass of wine

For you less adventurous palates there are plenty of salads in the ($5) range. There are a couple of intriguing Ceaser Salads that I didn't sample but appear to have the makings of nirvana. The entrees on the menu are a bounty filled of chicken, fish and lamb dishes. The Shashlik appeared to be a dish with a handsome reward. The pork, beef and lamb dish all fall in the ($17) range and are accompanied by steamed vegetables. For the adventurous diner, go with the Varenki, the owner and chef, Alex Balinschi, assures me this is the authentic Ukrainian experience. A dumpling stuffed dish with a choice of potatoes, mushrooms, cabbage, meat, friend onions and cherries ($13.95). There also feature a host of pastas on the menu.

Thursday completely reinvented their artistry. Once upon a time they spearheaded the bygone era known as "emo", but failed to make an indelible impression with the mainstream masses. They still had some great material in their back catalogue, but now in 2011, they've creatively expanded on their everso-evolving style. With "Sparks Against The Sun", it's one huge leap forward for a band that always seemed to have the aptitude to reformulate themselves. Ingrained in this song is some ambience and traces of their post-hardcore roots included with beautiful dark melodies and plenty of reverb. Make no mistake, Thursday created an arsenal of powerful tunes on their latest opus. "No Devolucion" needs your undivided attention.

New Animal – "Last Winter" - Born in Atlanta, GA., New Animal is the intrepid duo of Derek Burdette and Kris Hermstad. Together they've created an incandescent, expansive, and hypnotic self-titled record. Beautiful and daring, this is a rhapsody that translates vision into meaning. Take a little voyage into the wonderland of "Last Winter" - a new breed of sound to captivate all your inner sensibilities. I personally believe there aren't any boundaries for how far their artistic endeavors may go. And whatever journey they travel, I'll be along for the ride. You can download their entire debut LP for free at http://newanimal. bandcamp.com. Don't hesitate; go discover what will seemingly become the most underrated (and unfortunately overlooked) album of the year.

Work Drugs – "Sunset Junction" - Despite never visiting the city of Philadelphia, I'm starting to love what the city has to offer in the sense of independent music. First it was Sun Airway and now it's the sedative-wave / smooth-

Despite only have a handful of songs in their repertoire, I suggest stop following the herd toward mainstream mediocrity and check out Work Drugs as soon as

This is a sound to fall in love with over and over again. You won't find a more honest, ethereal or divine tune like this around. It's the quintessential dream-pop song to navigate you during the most memorable summer nights.

Jeff's Pics The Book Report

The Moonflower Vine: A Novel by Jetta Carleton

A timeless American classic rediscovered, an unforgettable saga of a heartland family. On a farm in western Missouri during the first half of the twentieth century, Matthew and Callie Soames create a life for themselves and raise four headstrong daughters. Jessica will break their hearts. Leonie will fall in love with the wrong man. Mary Jo will escape to New York. And wild child Mathy's fate will be the family's greatest tragedy. Over the decades they will love, deceive, comfort, forgive and, ultimately, they will come to cherish all the more fiercely the bonds of love that hold the family together.

A Sea in Flames: The Deepwater Horizon Oil Blowout by Carl Safina

Carl Safina has been hailed as one of the top 100 conservations of the 20th century and A Sea in Flames is his blistering account of the months-long manmade disaster that tormented a region and mesmerized the nation. Traveling across the Gulf to make sense of an ever changing story and its often nonsensical twists, Safina expertly deconstructs the series of calamitous misjudgments that caused the Deepwater Horizon blowout, zeroes in on BP's misstatements, evasions, and denials, reassesses his own reaction to the government's crisis handling, and reviews the consequences of the leak and what he considers the real problems, which the press largely overlooked. Safina takes us deep inside the faulty thinking that caused the lethal explosion. We join him on aerial surveys across an oil coated sea. We confront pelicans and other wildlife whose blue universe fades to black. Based on extensive research and interviews with fishermen, coastal residents, biologists, and government officials, he has some surprising answers on whether it was "Obama's Katrina," whether the Coast Guard was as inept in its response as BP was misleading, and whether this worst unintended release of oil in history was really America's worst ecological disaster. Safina writes: "In the end, this is a chronicle of a summer of pain and hope. Hope that the full potential of this catastrophe would not materialize, hope that the harm done would heal faster than feared, and hope that even if we didn't suffer the absolutely worst, we'd still learn the big lesson here. We may have gotten two out of three. That's not good enough. Because: there'll be a next time."

could get pregnant, abortion would've been legalized a hundred years ago." That was probably the last time the subject appeared in a comedy act - until a few weeks ago.

Sen. Jon Kyl (R-AZ) started the ball rolling on the Senate floor during debate on the Republican proposal to cut funding for Planned Parenthood ($75 million through Title X - about half the amount of the tax rebate given to Exxon/Mobil). Although federal law prohibits funding for abortion, Sen. Kyl insisted the move was necessary because abortions are "well over 90% of what Planned Parenthood does".

Actually, it's about 3% of what Planned Parenthood does. What the organization does do, on a yearly basis, is perform about a million cervical cancer screenings, 830,000 breast exams, 4 million tests and treatments for sexually transmitted diseases, and helps prevent over 600,000 unwanted pregnancies.

What got the late-night comedians going, though, was the response when CNN contacted Sen. Kyl's office to point out that "well over 90% of what Planned Parenthood does" is unrelated to abortion. His office explained the Senator's "remark was not intended to be a factual statement". The spokesman later back-pedaled and disavowed that explanation, saying instead it was a matter of the Senator having "misspoke". The Think Progress website observed, "So neither refutation of it were intended to be factual statements." (Google "Stephen Colbert Jon Kyl" to get loads of priceless material.)

Sen. Kyl isn't the only one on Capitol Hill making statements far from "factual". We're according to Congressional Budget Office figures, the deficit would go down faster if we simply did nothing, rather than adopt GOP proposals. Republicans complain of high corporate taxes, while many of the largest not only don't pay any, but receive sizeable be stopped."

oil exploration, though oil companies won't further deregulation.

They say they're against abortion, yet argue for steps to ensure it becomes more prevalent

For a "factual" look at the effects of legislation, there's research by the Guttmacher Institute. Established forty years ago, the Institute was named after Dr. Alan Guttmacher, one of the founders of Planned an obstetrician/gynecologist abortion.

According to the Institute, publicly financed family planning services in the U.S. prevented 1.94 million unwanted pregnancies in 2006, resulting in 810,000 fewer abortions.

The effects of another Republican initiative, withdrawing U.S. support (currently $648.5 factual statement.

In the late 1960's, the years million for FY 2011) for international leading up to Roe vs. Wade, organizations that offer family planning Richard Pryor had a line in services would result in five million more his stand-up routine which abortions world-wide, with four million of went something like, "If men those being "unsafe", 33,000 maternal deaths, and 150,000 children losing their mothers.

> Abortion is less prevalent, and safer, in parts of the world where laws are less restrictive. Obviously, where access to women's health and family planning services are greater, the incidence of abortion is less.

> The debate on the House floor was jarringly brought back to the factual. After Rep. Chris Smith (R-NJ) recited a lurid, detailed description of a procedure, complete with references to a "tiny dead baby" and "child abuse", Rep. Jackie Speier (C-CA) responded with reality: "I had planned to speak of something else, but the gentleman from New Jersey has just put my stomach in knots because I'm one of those women he spoke about just now . . . that procedure that you just talked about was a procedure that I endured. I lost a baby."

> She continued, "But for you to stand on this floor and to suggest, as you have, that somehow this is a procedure that is either welcomed or done cavalierly or done without any thought is preposterous."

> House Republicans had earlier attempted, through H.R. 3, to redefine "rape" as it pertains to exceptions from abortion restrictions, by adding the modifier "forcible". If there was no violent resistance involved, if the victim were an acquiescing child or a drugged-out adult, then sorry - you weren't really "raped", and would have to carry to term.

Ultimately, seven Republicans, including Kyl's original statement nor his press aide's Rep. Mary Bono Mack of Palm Springs, defied their party's leadership and voted to maintain funding for Planned Parenthood. Rep. David Dreier did as he was told and was not among them.

In the U.S. Senate, Sen. Dianne Feinstein told of the urgency of deficit reduction, yet saw the issue as "an opportunity for the right wing in the House to really sock it to women." Planned Parenthood President Cecile Richards noted that "Attacking Planned Parenthood hurts women, does not cure the deficit or fix the economy, and must

The battle extends to state capitals. In They say we should open more lands to Indiana, Republican State Senator Vaneta Becker pointed out the irony of seeking to drill on leases they have. Gas prices rise reduce access to women's health services because of poorly regulated commodities at the same time they were cutting aid to speculation, while Republicans push for mentally disabled children; "If we are so concerned about pregnancy before children are born, why are we not as concerned after children are born?"

> "In many areas that are rural, without these kind of services, women will be stripped of health care", noted Sen. Becker, and added, "This piece of legislation will increase

Legislation in Kansas, as in Indiana, tells Parenthood, an obstetrician/gynecologist doctors what they are to tell their patients who found his calling back in the 1920s as he about abortion. Kansas Republican State watched a young woman die from a botched Rep. Barbara Bollier says, "... it's based on false research . . . and I would be embarrassed to be a state that bases its laws on untruths."

> If I were Rep. Dreier, I'd be embarrassed to belong to a party whose policies would endanger women's health and lead to more

And that was indeed intended to be a

Are We Really Serious?

Last week I asked, without the benefit of any information from the credit rating agencies or from our president, whether we were serious in addressing our fiscal problems and whether we would rise to the occasion of this defining moment in our country's history. While I addressed and referenced the fiscal issues, at its heart this was, and is, a political issue. Our financial crisis can be solved, but it will only happen if our politicians take the situation seriously. Sadly, this week Standard & Poor (an independent credit rating agency) downgraded the U.S.'s long-term outlook to "negative", being forced to the conclusion, as we all are now, that the current resident at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. and his fellow travelers are anything but serious.

In making their decision, S&P acknowledged that they made a "political judgment", but they weren't doing this in the normal sense that most of us use the word. Fiercely independent and neutral, S&P does not pull for or campaign for one party or the other, or for one candidate or the other. In this sense, they don't care who resides in the White House, in the House or in the Senate. On a more significant level, however, S&P does have to look at who is in leadership and assess what actions, or lack thereof, those leaders will take. That is a quintessential political calculation, but one that must be made in assessing whether any country will be able to meet its obligations. S&P's analysis of the U.S. economic situation was overwhelmingly focused on whether Washington will be able to do anything about the massive deficit we're running and projected to run next year. There can be only one reason that S&P downgraded the U.S.'s rating this week: President Obama's speech at George Washington

The President purposefully scheduled his speech to follow the Republican's budget proposal. The timing provided an opportunity for him to respond to that budget and to demonstrate that he was rising above rank politics and was accordingly addressing the issues in a serious manner befitting his sworn obligation to all Americans. Instead, President Obama delivered what must be seen as the first speech in his reelection campaign and was pointedly partisan in his demonization of Republicans in general and specifically of Representative Ryan Paul, the author of the proposed Republican budget.

The stridency and harshness of the President's words poisoned the water between Republicans and the White House, demonstrated that the President cannot be trusted to negotiate in good faith and ultimately forced S&P to conclude, "the political negotiations over when and how to address both the medium and long-term challenges will persist until at least after the national elections of 2012. In so doing, S&P also reminded us that these aren't trivial issues or

GREG Welborn

"in 2003-2008 the U.S.'s general (total) government deficit fluctuated between 2% and 5% of GDP. Already larger than that of most 'AAA' rated sovereigns, it ballooned to more than 11% in 2009 and has yet to recover." If anything, one might actually accuse

S&P of going a bit easy on good ole Uncle Sam. If we were just some other country, we might easily imagine that S&P would have downgraded the rating on our existing (and future) debt from the gold plated triple A rating to something lower. When/if this ever happens, our nation will be in an unfathomable world of

The left will of course immediately jump on this as a reason to increase tax rates to close the deficit. But this is not what S&P called for. In fact, their analysis conclusively leads one to acknowledge that this would cause further financial problems. Looking at countries like Greece, which chose tax increases rather than significant spending cuts as the answer to their financial problems, it's clear that tax increases only serve to decrease economic activity further. Taxing the entrepreneurs and business owners that are responsible for most of the growth and the employment in this country will only hurt their ability to hire and grow their

It is only through meaningful spending cuts, budgetary reform and significant long-term tax cuts that we will start to see employment and growth rebound. The good news is that S&P didn't actually down grade our debt rating. There is still time, but we're getting into the last few meaningful moments of what too many politicians see as a political game. They play with our economy and our money as if it is nothing but a means to keep themselves in power. Those that play this game don't see much beyond the D.C. beltway. What happens outside - here in the towns, farms and factories of this great nation - doesn't mean much to them. Fortunately, there are a few politicians – like Representative Paul Ryan – who do think beyond political games and who do care about this great nation and its fate. The Republican budget was criticized by our politician-in-chief as being heartless, but it is he, and those who would gamble our future in a cynical political game, who are the heartless ones.

Let us hope that at this defining moment leaders on both sides of the political divide will side with the American people rather than with the man whose promise of fundamental change has only made things worse.

Due to the high demand for her tutoring and education services, bookstore owner, Sally Morrison, is opening a new learning center here in Sierra Madre. Mindspring Education Center will cater to students (children and adults) interested in furthering their reading, writing, math, spelling, and comprehension skills. In addition, Sally offers assistance in study skills, homework, and test preparation. She also specializes in helping students with dyslexia and other learning difficulties. Those interested in summer sessions should contact Mindspring soon because space is limited.

As a result of this business expansion, Sally Morrison and Jeffrey Ingwalson, owners of Sierra Madre Books, will be closing the bookstore in June 2011. "We appreciate all the support we've received from our customers over the past few years, but are excited about our new venture. We look forward to continuing to be part of this community."

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE

about future of the planet and, when not thinking about that, I'm wondering about the origins of life. The problem is that while I'm unforeseeable futures, the present seems to be falling apart. For me it feels something like being a child whose parents have gone out for the evening and have forgotten to call a baby sitter. It feels like I'm all alone and I don't feel safe and I don't know what to do or who to

It's like the whole Nation is supposed to root for the Yankees without ever noticing that we are not Yankees. Forget the tricklerest of us. Throughout our history up, the Recruiters would come to the School and explain that we guys all had a 6-year military obligation and were subject to the Draft. I don't recall hearing any objections; it was too early for anyone to think for themselves. At UCLA, military training (ROTC) was mandatory. I remember because I got a D in it. (I could never get the hang of marching or shining shoes). The major war that my friends and I fought was our fight to stay out of the Draft and to convince our parents that this was the right thing to do. At that time ,everybody had fathers who fought in World War II who believed in the United States as the land of opportunity and were willing to fight for it. This generation had grown up in the Depression and were living a life much more prosperous in the 1950's than the life they had lived through in the 1930's. Slowly the times they were achanging.

In the 1960's we fought an unpopular war, but still it was for some agreed upon ends - we were stopping Communism, and the Nation agreed that this was a good thing to do. I guess, of course, that during the war the top one or two percent were making millions like they always do. Certainly, one of their sons was President and making love to movies' stars, but somehow most of us believed that he was busy saving the world and that we were in good, responsible hands. I believe that

I keep the eventual cancellation of the worrying draft resulted in a kind of decadesthe long generational political the indifference. During this time the March continued and, while the I'm rich got richer, the rest of us were diverted and became increasingly powerless without really noticing. We were useful for awhile to help the rich get richer. Those of us who went to College incurred thinking about distant pasts and huge debts which required us to accept jobs that would allow us

We were encouraged to take financial risks, and we bought properties and made more money for the banks. After a while the bubble burst and all this money was given to the banks to save them from going under. Sure, we were told, the bankers had made mistakes but they were too big to be allowed to fail and they down theory - what helps the rich had to be bailed out. Now, in and powerful does not help the this very disappointing Obama administration, these the general population has been bankers are running the country manipulated to lose sight of their and there is a new Scapegoat. Who own interests. When I was in High is it? Of course, it's us: the poor, School and Viet Nam was starting the aged, the Middle Class, the debt-ridden non-special people. We had the gall to get old, to get sick, to buy houses, to belong to Unions, and to believe in - the new naughty word - Entitlements. We expect to get our pensions, our Social Security, and our Medicare.

> We are not the bad-guys. We are just the 98 per cent; the noninnovators, the passive people who do what we are told and hold down the jobs. Already there are not enough jobs. Does that mean we are now useless and redundant? If we are not needed by the Special People, who may well be on their way to forming their own nation-less global government, will we be prohibited from reproducing like in China. Maybe we will be starved to death by artificially induced droughts, as was the case in the Soviet Union wherein twenty million people died unnecessarily.

> Help. I'm scaring myself. Maybe a positive way of looking at this potential horror-show is to view the Tea Party Movement as simply a way of not going along with a program that leads to our own destruction. No more passivity; Demonstrations in the Street; Homer Simpson for President.

> Really, remember how we celebrated when Obama was elected? Time marches on. Let's just all work toward marching in a new direction and I wish I could point the way.

RIP VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

It is really disturbing that local newspapers and local gossipers have failed to take note of one of the darkest days in Sierra Madre's recent history with the dissolution of the Sierra Madre Volunteer Fire Dept. by the city council at its last meeting. They have replaced the last volunteer fire department in Los Angeles County with a part-paid/part-volunteer department.

For those of us that have responded to thousands of calls as volunteers, it is a bitter pill to swallow. Of course, with the mandates being made by the state and federal government,, plus changes in personal phiolosphies (let John do it), other commitments, we should have expected this to happen.

There was a close call like this back in 1963 but was averted by the city administrator and fire chief actively recruiting and seeking a change in fire department by-laws to permit people who lived outside the community, but worked in town, to join the department. A daytime fire at a malt shop on Baldwin when only four firefighters responded. Between Sierra Engineering and the Sierra Madre News six new members were added to salvage the department. Unfortunately we don't have those resources available today and thus the blot in our history.

The cost will be high and with the addition of perks that will have to be offered, probably including retirement at 55 with personnel being on the dole for more years then they worked, and the chance to 'double dip', we are putting our future generaton in a debt volunteer fire department were created to avoid.

Luckily, we are left with many fond memories of the past and sad for those that did not have the opportunity to serve the community on a department that served this city for 75 years.

MR. PRESIDENT PLEASE!

It has become increasingly common, that news outlets refer to President Obama as Mr. Óbama. Mr. Obama? As a veteran of the US military that served my country with pride for 10 years, I find this trend to be disturbing and disrepectful. At the moment of his inauguration, Mr. Obama became President Obama. The President of

United States of America is an institution not a person, and should be respected at all levels of citizenship. In one day this week, two different radio stations and every network news channel that covered the president's visit to Southern California reffered to our president as Mr. Obama. Presidents Regan, Bush(both), & Clinton were always addressed properly and it is shameful that we offer any less to PRESIDENT ÓBÁMA.

Income for 400 Richest Americans Soars, Tax Rate Falls

Now that all of us incomes. have sent off our taxes

According to a study by the Center for burden has continued to increase for mid-The study reviewed pre-recession IRS data from 1993 to 2007.

The effective federal income tax rate for comes — 3 out of every 1 million filers has declined by nearly half over the past have grown five times larger, new IRS data

The top 400 households paid 16.6 percent of their income in federal individual income taxes in 2007, down from 30 percent in

Even as their effective tax rates were to Uncle Sam (at least declining sharply, high-income filers benefited disproportionately from economic growth, other IRS data show. During the last economic expansion (from the end of 2001 to the end of 2007), two-thirds of the nation's total income gain flowed to the Budget and Policy Priorities, the overall tax highest-income 1 percent of Americans. And between 1993 and 2007, the average dle class taxpayers, while the rich pay less. pre-tax income of the top 1 percent of filers more than doubled, after adjusting for inflation, rising by 114 percent.

The top 400 taxpayers enjoyed even the 400 taxpayers with the very highest in- larger gains in pre-tax incomes. Between 1993 and 2007, their average adjusted gross income increased by over 400 percent, after two decades, even as their pre-tax incomes adjusting for inflation: from $68 million to $345 million (in 2007 dollars). Their incomes grew rapidly between 1995 and 2000, dropped during the 2001 recession, then rose rapidly again from 2002 to 2007.

Because of the steep reduction in effective 1995. This decline works out to a tax cut of tax rates for the top 400 households, their

To make it into the top 400, a household needed an adjusted gross income of at least $35 million in 1993 (in 2007 dollars) and $139 million in 2007.

Avi Feller and Chuck Marr who authored the Center's study say, "The decline in effective tax rates at the very top is due in large part to the capital gains tax cuts enacted in 1997 and 2003. The top marginal tax rate on capital gains is now 15 percent, less than half the top tax rate on wages and salaries. The top 400 taxpayers derived twothirds of their income from capital gains and qualified dividends in 2007."

Over roughly the same period, the top 400 filers enjoyed huge gains in pre-tax incomes. The average pre-tax income of this group rose by over 400 percent between 1993 and 2007, equivalent to a $275 million increase per person, after adjusting for inflation. In extended, the very highest-income filers 2007 alone, average pre-tax incomes rose by 31 percent among these individuals.

$46 million per filer in 2007, or a total of after-tax incomes grew even faster than their pre-tax incomes. Between 1993 and 2007, their average income after federal income taxes increased by 475 percent.

> Feller and Marr conclude, "Although the 2007 data reflect the height of the last economic expansion, effective tax rates on the richest 400 taxpayers will likely remain very low after the current recession, largely because the portion of its overall income this group derives from capital gains has remained relatively constant over the past decade. In the last recession, this figure dropped from 64 percent in 2000 to 55 percent in 2002, before climbing again amidst further capital gains tax cuts and a strong stock market."

This is not good news for those of us unlucky enough to be stranded in the middle class. If the markets rebound, with the preferential capital gains tax rates will continue to enjoy very low effective tax rates well into the foreseeable future, even In short, the top 400 filers now pay much as budget deficits become a more serious he was killed in a car crash in Brooklyn, New York. This young man, Devon Burgess, 19 years old, had ambitous dreams. You can imagine how proud I was of his achievement to attend one of the premier universities in the country. Finally, I was going to have a blood relative on the West Coast (Caliwas going to be memorable while I bond with him. It was not to be.

The headline in one New York newspaper read "Speed Kills Man." Devon was the front seat passenger in a Chrysler Sebring which slammed into a utility pole killing him. The driver, 19 years old, is hospitalized with internal injuries. The two young women who were sitting in the rear are also severly injured. School Pupils to Partner with Research Scientists

The Van Allen radiation belts are a hazardous environment, full of "killer" electrons that can that drop into the atmosphere be lethal to orbiting satellites. And when those electrons sometimes hit the Earth's atmosphere, they alter its chemistry—with implications for radio signals between them. climate variation. Now, students at a school in The Headlands receiver is Yorkshire, England, are set to help scientists better understand the belts. Dr. Andrew Kavanagh presented this innovative project between right under the footprint of the Lancaster University and Headlands School and Community Science College on April 20 at the Royal Astronomical Society's National Astronomy Meeting (NAM 2011) in Llandudno, Wales.

The Van Allen belts were discovered at the dawn of the space age by the Explorer 1 satellite, launched in 1958, but scientists still do not really understand how they form and how they change

In the new partnership, Headlands School will host a sensitive radio receiver supplied by ionospheric physicists from the Space Plasma Environment and Radio Science Group at Lancaster University. The receiver will form part of the global Antarctic-Arctic Radiation-belt (Dynamic) Deposition-VLF Atmospheric Research Konsortium (AARDDVARK) consortium of international universities and will pick up signals from very low projects looking at how the frequency transmitters from around the globe.

Van Allen belt electrons between the transmitters and the receiver will change the particularly well placed as it will monitor signals that cross radiation belts.

Long-term monitoring will let AARDDVARK scientists determine how much of the change in the radiation belts is due to loss to the atmosphere and how much of a direct impact geo-magnetic storms have on the middle and lower regions of our atmosphere. The project will support the aims of the NASA Radiation Belt Storm Probe Mission due to be launched in 2012.

The students from Headlands School will have direct access to the data and will undertake signal varies and will look at sources of radio noise such as lightning. They will also be in direct contact with the project scientists giving them an insight into how modern scientific research is carried out.

Dr. Kavanagh sees the collaboration as a real way to engage schoolchildren with science. "We hope that by interacting with this project the students will get a better feel for how important science can be for their everyday lives, as well as stimulating them to ask questions about the wider Universe," he says.

TO HOME, another program that schools with professional astronomers is being Caltech.

NITARP, the NASA/

IPAC Teacher Archive Research Program, gets teachers involved in authentic astronomical research. According to Dr. Luisa Rebull, Research Scientist at Caltech's Spitzer Science Center, "We partner small groups of educators with a mentor professional astronomer for an original research project. The educators incorporate the experience into their classrooms and share their experience with other teachers."

Dr. Rebull points out that each team does original research using real astronomical data, not canned labs or reproductions of previously done research. "Most, but not all, of our educators are grade 8-13, but informal educators have participated as well, she adds. "The kinds of educators we are looking for are those who already know the basics of astronomy, and are interested in learning exactly how astronomy research is conducted."

The program runs January through January. MEANWHILE, CLOSER Applications are available now and due on September 23.

Ask jai.....

Ask jai is a weekly column that will strive to honestly answer your job search questions relating to job searching techniques, networking skills, resume writing and interviewing. The employment situation is getting better, however, it is still a challenge finding were the jobs are located and how to get pass the "gate-keepers". As an Executive Recruiter I was privy to working directly with Corporate Recruiters and understanding their process in selecting which candidates to interview and hire. I will candidly answer your questions, possibly bluntly answering you questions, but I will be totally honest. My objective is to help you achieve your employment goal.

Q: I received an e-mail from an unsolicited company stating they had a position that they felt I was the perfect match. The e-mail went on to explain that I met all their requirements and qualifications for their position and they wanted to hire me. But, first I needed to send them my resumé and complete an attached application. They requested that I e-mail the items back to them ASAP at info@xcyz. No name, no identifying company, and no information about the job. The e-mail said I would be hired once they received all the request information and documents. The application requested my Social Security number and credit card information, which they said was needed in order to conduct a background check. I don't want to miss out on an opportunity, or to get a position. What should I do? Seriously Confused.

What position? What opportunity are you missing? The fact you are asking me what you should do ... is telling me you know what to do. Do not respond! This most likely is a job scam and the people are out to steal all your personal identity and confidential information. Job scammers have been in existence for over 50 years. However, the scammers have evolved and successfully use the internet to reach out and target disparate job seekers. This can happen when you post your resumé on public job boards (which I can not and will not name). The job boards are not responsible for the scamming so you really can not hold them responsible. You, the job seeker have to be very diligent or thorough in monitoring who contacts you regarding positions. As always, research and investigate anyone who contacts you about a position. My advice is to never blindly submit your resumé, an application or personal information. Don't pay fees to get a position. Never give out your credit card information or Social Security number until you are actually offered a position or hired by a company. Don't give out your bank account numbers, not even on an application. Some scammers ask you to give them your bank account numbers before hiring you so they will be ready to direct deposit your paycheck. Avoid companies you have not researched that ask you to buy their equipment before you are hired. Let's not forget, the old Bait and Switch job scams. This is where you apply for one job, the scammers contact you and say the position no longer exists and want you to apply for a different position. However, the position is usually a sales job and commission base only.

Red flags should always go up when an unsolicited company contacts you and requests your resume. Your first question should be, "why are they contacting me?" Then delete the e-mail or do not return the phone call. It's better to play it safe then to be sorry later.

Everything you ever wanted to know about how to get a jobbut did not know who to ask. ASK jai. Send your questions to: jai@resumeandcareerservices.com or visit website www.resumeandcareerservicesc.

STING OF THE BOTHERED BEE

Walking & Pet Sitting Services As a young child, I was terrified of every bug or insect with which I came into contact, particularly those that I knew could bite or sting me. I will never forget the first time I was stung by a bee. Or, to put it in more specific terms, the first time I was stung by an entire swarm of angry bees. I was five years old, and had not yet learned about how nature works. I did not understand any of those creeping, crawling, flying creatures who inhabited the space beyond the four walls within which I lived. The angry bee attack was my own fault. I had been teasing them as they came and went to and from the hive they had built on the outside sill of my parents' bedroom window. My sister and obnoxiously tapping on the glass, apparently aggravating them to a I stepped out of the front door behind me, several of them flew toward me and found their way plant their tiny, needle-like stingers deeply into the delicate skin of my neck and shoulders. I immediately panicked and began screaming at the top of my lungs, yelling for someone to come and rescue me. Within moments my mother came, yanked my t-shirt off and dragged me back into the house where she prepared a home remedy made of baking soda and milk, and spread it heavily over the bee stings on my back. I don't know which was more

To this day, I am unsure why my sister and I felt the need to pester those poor bees. I guess we were to them buzz and observe them as acting out of fear, knowing that they fly about and do what they they had the power to terrorize were created to do, with no fear us when we were outside, where or concern. This lesson in nature they could get to us. Bees only attack as a response to aggravation; it is not in their nature to do so at random. So many aspects of life depend on the bee's persistent activity, so it is important that the human understand, and allow them to go about their business. A bee can actually feel the vibration of fear being emitted from the human, or any other being capable of emitting fear, much in the same way a dog can smell fear or danger. With this in mind, the best thing to do, if you happen to come in contact with a swarm of bees, is to remain calm, keep quiet, and walk away slowly. If you handle the situation in this manner, bees are more likely to ignore you and the bees had stung, shrank down continue their work than to become aggravated and attack. Conversely, I was so amazed that my mother if you are fearful and make loud baking soda remedy to draw out they are likely to respond with

How many experiences do you know of that have the capacity to teach such a valuable lesson? I guess the proverbial "birds and the bees" story that we attempt to tell our children during adolescence has more substance than we might have expected! It's not just about the facts of life (ie: sex and reproduction), it provides us with a way of explaining what life is all about...you know, the "bigger picture". As I like to say, "love and let live". Relax, and enjoy your surroundings fear-free. Even if this "thought for the day" doesn't mean as much to you as it does to me, if you are willing to apply it, you are certainly way less likely to get

Critics of the cloud computing model are describing it as a real "told ya-so" moment. More than likely this entire episode was just a bad day for Amazon and not much more than that. Users looking for some of their favorite web sites yesterday were greeted with responses ranging from sluggish load times to outright "Site Not Found" messages for hours on end. As of this writing the technical staff that supports the EC2 organization is still scrambling to restore full operation to its massive

Because of the sheer size of Amazon's cloud, the effect of this outage has been felt across the internet although the actual faulty sector of activity appears to be confined to the N. Virginia data centers in Amazon's North American Zone. A visit to the Amazon Web Services System Health Dashboard (http://status.aws.amazon. com/) confirms that several key areas of the North America zone area still experiencing difficulty and users of the service have reported that calls to tech support for an ETA as to the restoration of full service have not been answered with a definite time.

While system downtime is hardly a new experience for most computer users one of the main selling points of the cloud services model is that the redundancy built into the system would

Earlier this week Amazon's EC2 (Elastic in most cases make downtime a thing possible for as short a time as possible.

> The Amazon EC2 SLA (Service Level Agreement) found on their website guarantees an uptime of 99.95% (4.3 hours of unscheduled downtime in a vear) most users report much better uptime stats. Even when downtime falls within the contractually obligated terms 4.3 hours can seem like forever, especially when that time translates into lost revenue as might be the case with an e-commerce site.

> To those unfamiliar with how Amazon EC2 works and what products and services they offer, go to the Amazon Web Services homepage http:// aws.amazon.com. In a nutshell, AWS offers the opportunity to rent computer services and storage space for individuals and businesses for the purposes of web hosting, program development, site management and other cloud-related services. "Instances" or virtual computers can be rented in a wide variety of sizes and configurations to fit individual user needs ranging from a single-site, single-purpose micro-user to a full-blown program development team's virtual server cloud offering online services to thousands or millions of users. AWS also offers many other monitoring and web support features such as Site Monitoring and DNS Hosting.

KATIE TseThis and That

HAPPY EASTER First off, I want to publicly thank God for sacrificing His Son that we might be saved from the punishment of our sins; for that reason, I see Resurrection Day as the most important day of the year and of history.

Now, on to my typical scintillating commentary on the secular holiday of Easter. Easter is one of the two occasions (the other being Christmas) that you might coerce your non-church-going relatives to attend a service. Since the pastor knows this is his biannual opportunity to win over more souls, you're not likely to hear a fire and brimstone sermon that day. Some churches do a sunrise service, which can be very inspirational and moving. If you're unfamiliar with this practice, the idea is that the service starts (outside) sometime during the semi-dark morning hours, so that sunrise coordinates with the end of the sermon. The one and only time I went to one of these I started to doze off, only to be jolted back to reality by the trumpet blast at the start of a hymn. I knew I shouldn't have sat by the orchestra. These days, I go to the regularly scheduled service. I figure God appreciates my staying awake to worship and learn.

Whether or not church is on your Easter docket, you might have a few traditional Easter activities planned. remember the Easters of old. My grandma would make a lemon meringue pie (almost from scratch) because it was my cousin's favorite. We'd dye at least a dozen eggs and even use all those little stickers, crayons, and plastic egg wrappers. I think we only had an egg hunt once, because I recall finding a very old, smelly egg that had been forgotten by one of our ducks. Best not to look too carefully in our backyard, I suppose. The dyed Easter eggs were always made into sandwich spreads or enjoyed with a generous sprinkling of salt. The odor of boiled eggs has always reminded me of flatulence, so I have never partaken. Maybe I'm missing out on a great taste sensation; I guess I'll never know. As with most holidays, the age of the participants influences the degree of festivity. The equations look something like this: [More kids = More decorations, games, etc.] [Less kids = Less energy required]. Since I am the youngest on my side of the family, and my husband's relatives aren't really into Easter, we've reduced the celebration to a pretty bare bones affair.

The first Easter to really break with tradition occurred when my mom turned vegan. She hosted the meal, which consisted of seitan (phonetically "Satan," maybe not good for Easter), tempeh (another soy manifestation), a variety of legumes, wholewheat eggless muffins (a bit crumbly, but palatable), and numerous greens, raw, baked, or boiled. Since most people mistake me for a vegan anyway, I didn't mind the menu change, except the fruit sorbet. If you're going to eat a healthy holiday meal, you should at least be able to look forward to some creamy, buttery, decadent dessert. I mean, Easter comes but once a year, you know?

In the years since my mom's initial conversion, we've adapted the menu, and for the most part, it's returned to its carnivorous roots with a few vegan alternatives. My pie-baking Grandma has since gone to celebrate Easter with Jesus Himself, so the dessert responsibility has been delegated to me. And I must say, I do provide a decent lemon meringue pie -with the help of Marie Calendar's. Happy Resurrection Day/Easter to you all, and I hope you make it to church and eat decadently!

YOUR HEALTH MATTERS Today's Subject:

My Personal Favorites: 10 Drug Free Pain Treatments

Dr. John Talevich, D.C. has practiced in Sierra Madre for thirty years. His clinic, Life Works! Chiropractic, 4. Homeopathic remedy from BHI-Heel called offers patient-specific approaches to the alleviation of Traumeel. This comes as a gel or a tablet. Use pain and individually failored wellness programs.

Let's face it: When we are in pain, the biggest concern is how soon we can get out of it. Fortunately, in the vast majority of cases, resolution occurs in a relatively short amount of time. If pain persists, we may take an over-thecounter medication; if that doesn't do the trick, we make an appointment to see our health care practitioner. In all cases, the objective is to reduce inflammation and return the body to a pain-free state. With that in mind, here are ten of my most used, most effective tools:

- 1. Ice the area of involvement. In the case of low back pain, 20 minutes each hour. For use in other areas, 15 minutes each hour.
- 2. Water. Got H2O?
- 3. Chiropractic manipulation.
- as directed on the label.
- 5. Eliminate the most common inflammatory influences: sugar, coffee, alcohol, gluten, dairy, corn sweeteners, and exposure to chemicals (paint, carpets, molds, etc.)

6. Turmeric is an anti-inflammatory that also helps brain function. It can be purchased in capsule form at health food stores.

- 7. Fish oils (EPA DHA).
- 8. Biofreeze topical gel, available at the Phoenix Pharmacy in Pasadena.
- 9. Relaxation and deep breathing practices reduce inflammation and redirect pain pathways.
- 10. Meridian-based therapies, such as acupressure, restore energetic flow in the body.

As you can see, most of these are self-help procedures, pointing out once again that, given the right support, the body will move from a state of agitation to one of harmony. If further assistance is needed, low impact, non-invasive forms of therapy may be tried next.

Have a healthy week! Dr. John

Recipe of the Week: STRAWBERRY TART

INGREDIENTS:

For the Crust

1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour (spooned and leveled), plus more for handling dough

1/2 cup (1 stick) cold unsalted butter, cut into small pieces

1/3 cup sugar

1/4 teaspoon salt

For the Filling

1 bar (8 ounces) reduced-fat cream cheese, softened

1 1/2 to 2 pounds strawberries, hulled and halved 1/4 cup seedless red currant jelly

DIRECTIONS:

Make the crust: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a food processor, blend flour, butter, 1/3 cup sugar, and salt until moist crumbs form (this may take up to 1 minute). Transfer dough to a 9-inch round tart pan with a removable bottom.

With floured fingers, press dough evenly into pan and up sides. Dip a dry-measuring cup in flour, and use it to press dough firmly into bottom and against sides of pan. Freeze crust until firm, 10 to 15 minutes.

Using a fork, prick crust all over. Bake until golden, 25 to 30 minutes, pressing down gently once or twice with a spoon during baking if crust puffs up. Cool completely in pan.

Make the filling: In a medium bowl, mix cream cheese and remaining 1/4 cup sugar until smooth; spread mixture evenly in bottom of baked crust (still in tart pan).

MOTHER'S DAY IN MONROVIA:

Celebrate by Touring Victorian Era Homes and 'Leven Oaks Hotel!

Group (MOHPG) will host their yearly Mother's Day tour on May 8th from 10-4, with five vintage homes plus the century old 'Leven Oaks Hotel open for viewing. On this 125th anniversary of the city's inception, all of the single family homes open for the tour this year are Victorians, constructed before 1893.

Included in this year's tour is "Idlewild, built in 1887, and named after the home of a friend of William A. Pile, the home's original owner. The 1893 Burr House, a perennial favorite, will return for its 8th appearance on the tour, last seen in 2002. The 1887 Victorian on Colorado was actually moved from a location in North Monrovia, and was last seen on tour a decade ago. The 1884 "Monroe Cottage" is the oldest home in town. It was first occupied by one of Monrovia's four founders, William Monroe, and his family, while a much larger home, "The Oaks" was under construction nearby. The home features wide plank Douglas fir floors and 13' ceilings. The dramatic, arched keyhole doorway and staircase off the foyer are the most intricate examples of the vintage millwork.

'Leven Oaks Hotel, celebrating its 100th anniversary, is making its fourth appearance on the

Once again, the Monrovia tour. Lovingly converted to a senior independent Old Home Preservation living residence hotel since 1984, the hotel features a vintage lobby with restored original lighting fixtures, now converted to electric, from their original gas. The original mosaic tile floor has been restored and complements the lobby's focal point, a stunning original fireplace, with Gaelic inscription above.

Trolley transportation between the hotel and the five Victorians will be available, for those who don't choose to drive between locations. The Monrovia Historical Museum, which has revamped its exhibits, will also be open that day. A light catered lunch will be available for purchase at the 'Leven Oaks Hotel.

The MOHPG is one of the largest non-profit groups in Monrovia, with an active membership of over 200, who expend great effort to make "a tangible different in the appearance and livability of our community" per the MOHPG website. The organization's first tour took place in 1982, and hosted about 75 people, and has grown ever since. This year, nearly 1000 are expected to tour the seven locations over six hours.

To purchase tickets in advance, the following Myrtle Avenue locations will offer tour tickets: Paint 'n' Play 2, Monrovia Bakery and the Monrovia Chamber of Commerce. MOHPG will also offer a ticket sales booth at Myrtle and Colorado on Friday evenings to sell tickets until May 6. Will call ticket pickup and day of tour tickets will available only at the Monrovia Historical Museum, located at 742 E. Lemon Avenue, Recreation Park. Ticket cost is $17 for adults, $14 for Much of what the Lees have learned about the Monroe "Cottage" comes from historical and heritage organizations, old photographs and just plain hearsay. Debi Lee and I made a visit to the Monrovia Historical Museum on Palm, to see what they might have in documentation and history about their home and its builder, William N. Monroe.

We found a wealth of Monroe artifacts there, some framed copies of packing labels from Monroe's fruit company, two books on Monrovia history (copies available for sale) and two charming and articulate octogenarian docents who brought the town's history alive for us. A photo of the town in the late 1800's shows their home with a young tree at the northwest corner, that could be the young fig or rubber tree (both have been mentioned) that grew to shade four homesites by

According to the Monrovia 1 Review book by Peter C. Ostrye from 1986, Monroe was one of four founders of the community, though not the first resident. After a Union Army stint leading to the rank of Major in the Civil War, he joined his father-in-law, Milton Hall, in the construction of several railroad routes in California, Utah, Texas and Mexico. When he "retired" from that venture and vagabond

The Lees, new LA residents off to Los Angeles in 1875 for a from Connecticut, decided to settled down life of raising fruit purchase a historic Monrovia and a family. In the process of home earlier this year. After deciding where to build a home, months of search for just the Monroe, always a mover and right home, this one tugged at their heartstrings. With its 1884 construction date comes circles, though a brief interlude

> Upon his return, word was out that E.J. "Lucky" Baldwin was selling 30 acre parcels of his ranch. Monroe bought several, amassing 210 acres, and moved his family into a tent at the current 225 Monroe Place in 1884. A single story cottage was erected that year, and the family moved in. Only a year later, Monroe went on to build "The Oaks", a grand residence on Primrose, and Monroe's brother then moved into the cottage.

> Along the way, pieces of the homesite were sold off, and the original street address one block south changed as the lot shortened to front on Monroe Place. Improvements ensued, including plumbing, gas, electricity, and a second story evolved. Since indoor plumbing was added later, the pipes and hot water heater run outside and on the perimeter, instead of up the core, as today's homes often

When the time came to expand the time it was removed in 2003. the cottage, the Lees were told by one Monrovian, the entire one story structure was raised to become the top floor of the current home, intricate roofline and all. The Monroe Historical Museum director was doubtful this was the case, yet I heard this story a couple of times when I mentioned the cottage to local history buffs.

> The first floor now boasts 13 foot ceilings, with a mysterious "dead space" between the first and second floors. The Lees would love to see pictures of that first remodel, or any other photos of the home if anyone has them. Unearthing the fascinating details of earlier iterations of the structure will require some detective work, as much of the home has undergone updating several times. Word around town is that a local antiques collector owns the iron bed from the cottage's early days. Likely, there are other pieces around,

The home the Lees bought in 2007 was already accepted into California's Mills Act status. This act is a two-edged sword of tax benefit with use, maintenance and preservation restrictions. For a property tax incentive intended to preserve historical homes and the heritage of our communities, the homes require earthquake retrofitting, a historical plaque and strict guidelines on exterior changes to the home. Each individual community oversees the Mills Act homes within their borders, and rules and regulations vary from city to city.

The Lees have been on a steep learning curve for historic home maintenance and preservation, after their previous Connecticut home was of 1950's vintage. Their electrician, Yiannis Arvanitidis, is a frequent visitor, slowly unraveling old crawlspace mysteries of electricians past. They've learned more than they probably wanted to know about earthquake retrofitting and cohabitating with local wildlife in the past few months. Each month new challenges arise to maintain or restore the grace and beauty of the past, while raising a growing family in the technology age. Despite the challenges, I don't think they'd trade this special home for anywhere else in LA.

A WARM INVITATION

In spring and summer, it's easy to envision ways to enhance your home's curb appeal with a trimmed lawn, planted and potted flowers, and patios and decks arranged with outdoor. furniture and an inviting grill. But when the leaves fall and the temperatures drop, even homes in temperate climes undergo a winter transformation that can challenge a seller to create exterior appeal.

When it comes to landscaping and colorful plants, there are plenty of ornamental grasses and plants that look great in wintertime. Purple cabbages, fountain grasses, and potted evergreens along pathways and by the door all add seasonal color and appeal. And obviously, your sidewalk, entry path, patio and deck should be clear of leaves and/or snow.

Be sure to keep in mind that shorter days mean that buyers are that much more likely to see your home after sunset, so make sure all your floodlights are clean and in working order, highlighting your home's exterior features. Lamps with soft lighting in all your windows will also offer a warm invitation.

Finally, just to cover your bases, have photos available of your home in all its glory during the spring and summer months. This gives buyers a better sense of your home's appeal during all the seasons of the year. Your agent will have more tips for attracting buyers in any kind

Christian artist Jon McNaughton has created beautiful paintings of Christ in very interesting situations. Be aware that it has a distinct conservative flavor to it. Nevertheless the artwork is magnificent. A lot of effort has gone into Mr. McNaughton's work and whether you agree with his politics or not, the artwork can be enjoyed.

> I saw Mel Gibson's movie "The Passion of I didn't want to see it just to see it. I wanted to wait for the right moment. That right moment was in the home of my friends Chuck and Lisa. I choose to believe it was a divine appointment to experience this extraordinary film.

La Salle Honors Karen and John McAlister at the 12th Annual Crystal Ball

La Salle Principal, Patrick Bonacci, AFSC and La Salle President, Dr. Richard Gray flank the 2011 Lasallian Volunteer on the Year Award recipients, Karen and John McAlister.

Pasadena, CA. - La Salle High School held it's 12th Annual Crystal Ball entitled "Behind the Great Wall: A Night of Mystery and Wonder," on April 15 at the Langham Huntington Hotel and Spa in Pasadena. The 2011 honorees and recipients of the Lasallian Volunteer of the Year Award were Mr. and Mrs. John McAlister P'08,'11,

Our silent auction was held in the theme decorated Langham Ballroom foyer followed by the exciting live auction, award presentations and dinner in the beautifully decorated ballroom. Crystal Ball Chair, Liz Kwong P'12,'14, chose the theme for a magical night in China to share good fortune and delicious Asian delicacies in a celebration that provides an opportunity for our community to come together and enjoy the company of friends in an exotic setting, as well as support the programs and activities La Salle High School provides for its students.

The Crystal Ball is La Salle's largest fundraiser of the year, with proceeds from the evening supporting our academic, athletic, student life, arts and financial aid programs. These funds most significantly support the San Miguel Scholarship Program as La Salle enrolls 5% of each entering freshman class into a need-based, tuition-free program for low-income families.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN NICOTINE-FREE SMOKING MIXES by Christopher Nyerges

Have you ever had to fill out some sort of form, maybe for a job or some sort of poll, and they want to know if you are a smoker? I always check "no." I am not a smoker, and always sit in the no-smoking sections of restaurants. (Well, I used to anyway, back when you could smoke in restaurants). I have long maintained that the real culprit in commercial cigarettes are the chemicals added to the tobacco and paper, things such as moisturizers, flavors, things to keep the cigarette burning, etc. etc. There are anywhere from 70 to 250 such chemicals, depending on who you believe. If the tobacco companies had to list all the ingredients on the label, there'd be no room on cigarette

Let's just assume that "the government," in its ultimate wisdom of knowing what is best for us, decided to put all the tobacco companies out of business and you could no longer buy tobacco at your corner market. Guess what? . Various species of tobacco grow wild throughout the country.

All that said, though I have smoked tobaccos in the past (commercial and wild), today I prefer to make my own non-nicotine smoking mixes for those times when I sit out back and think about important things.

My blend varies from season to season, depending on what wild leaves I have picked and dried.

The blend will typically have some dried peppermint and/or white sage (Salvia apiana). This gives a sweet flavor to the smoke, somewhat like menthol in cigarettes. Any of the sages and mints would do -- even those growing in your garden. This should be no more than 1/5 of your Horehound (Marrubium vulgare) is a European medicinal herb that can now be found throughout most of North America and the world. It has a long history of use for treating coughs and sore throats when used as a hot tea or candy. I learned recently that it can also be blended into your smoking mixes and there still may be some good effect from the horehound, even if you smoke it. It is a true mint, after all, and it smokes well, though it doesn't add that menthol-like quality to your smoking mix as do the other mints.

I often add dried manzanita leaves (Arcostaphylos sps.), which were used by American Indians of the Southwest in their smoking blends. This smokes very well, though there is little taste or flavor. The most commonly known variety is the kinnikinnik, or Arcostaphylos uvaursi, which is not a bush or tree like the other manzanitas but is a trailing vine. Regardless which variety I use, I let them air dry, and then crush them into small pieces. The manzanita leaves are all somewhat tough and leathery so it will be necessary to break them into small bits so they can smoke. I have heard that the flavor of this particular leaf is improved a to slightly ferment, in much the same way that one might age certain tobaccos. However, I have never taken the time to experiment with this, since the dried and crumbled leaves smoke quite well.

I sometimes add dried and pulverized willow bark (Salix sps.), usually red or arroyo willow. This adds a pleasant flavor, and was apparently used in traditional American Indian smoking blends. A tea from the willow bark has effects similar to aspirin, and can be drunk or applied to wounds to relieve pain. In fact, the original aspirin came from the inner bark of willows, which contains salicin. We have heard some folks say that smoking the willow bark in their mixes also provides some pain-relieving qualities. That's braids to the smoking blend. not been my experience, but you can try it and see what you experience.

I add the dried leaves of mullein. Mullein (Verbascum thapsus) is now a common weed in the U.S., though it's a European native. Of the many virtues of mullein, it is good in a tea for breathing problems, even asthma. Interestingly, mullein has long been smoked to improve the breathing passages. If you're going to smoke, you really ought to include mullein in your mix. The large leaves of mullein have the texture of flannel. I generally pick leaves from the first year growth. Mullein lives for two years, and in the second year it sends up a tall flower spike and produces smaller leaves. (By the way, these fresh leaves make pretty good toilet paper). Mullein is common throughout the country in fields and along streams.

I usually add a little bit of mugwort to my mix -- no more than about 1/5 of the mix -- since it produces a very pleasant aroma when burned. Mugwort (Artemisia sps.) is found along streams and the dried leaves, rolled into a cigar shape, were used by early Native American in Southern California as punks for transporting coals. When I collect mugwort for smoking, I typically just collect the leaves from the lower stalk of the plant that have dried on the plant. On the other hand, if I am collecting the leaves for their medicinal values, I would collect the leaves green, clean them, and then dry them for storage.

There are other herbs that I sometimes add in various amounts. I like the leaves of passionflower (Passiflora sps.), a somewhat common vining plant throughout much of the west, the south, Europe, Mexico, and even the Hawaiian islands. The leaves have a sweet odor and don't seem to irritate the throat or mouth. Medicinally, the tea from passionflower is drunk in cases of insomnia or nervousness. The flowers are used medicinally also, but I usually only smoke the leaves.

I also add a small amount of Damiana leaves to the blend which I smoke, moderation is the key.

Yerba Santa (Eriodictyon sps.) is a common southwestern herb found in dry and desert-like places. It is very fragrant, and usually sticky. There are several varieties, and all have a history of being used as a tea for breathing and bronchial problems. It is sometimes added to smoking mixes for its fragrance, and apparently because some folks believe that the beneficial effects on the lungs and bronchial tract still carryover when you smoke it.

Interestingly, you'll notice that many of the herbs I have listed are frequently used as the primary remedy for coughs, sore throats, asthmatic conditions, etc. At the very least, there is the presumption that by smoking herbs that are generally beneficial to the throat and lungs, you will be somewhat counteracting the harmful effects of the smoke. Whether this has any real scientific basis is uncertain.

Coltsfoot is an herb commonly found along roadside ditches and wet areas in the eastern parts of the United States. It is a two year plant, and the large first year leaves are the ones typically gathered for smoking. Coltsfoot has been used as a smoke for at least a few centuries, and there is the belief that it can actually be good for a sore throat to smoke

You can make your own blends and determine what you like.

I don't smoke a lot – I might sit out back maybe once a month or so and smoke my hand-made elder pipe. I'm not addicted to it, like the person who can't stop chain smoking commercial cigarettes. I simply likes to smoke occasionally, at special times, while thinking about a particular subject.

I am quick to reiterate that I am neither encouraging nor endorsing smoking of any sort. I certainly do not advocate the use of regular commercial tobacco, since its use is related to a host of diseases. But perhaps the use of wild nicotine-free herbs can help you cut down on the harmful tobacco. If you do choose to buy from the health food store. This is a plant which supposedly grows in the wild around, but it is a plant I do not know and haven't encountered it. It makes a delicious tea, and a very pleasant smoke. Damiana leaves were also smoked by the ancient Aztecs. I have long enjoyed the fragrance of the damiana tea, and it does create a pleasant aroma when smoked.

When I have it, I add a few pulverized pieces of sweetgrass
