Alverno Neighbors Remain Concerned Over Master Plan

Research Supporting Mitigated Negative Declaration Called "Woefully Inadequate"

By Susan Henderson

On Thursday, the Sierra Madre Planning Commission heard from both supporters and opponents of the Final Mitigated Negative Declaration (MND) for the Alverno High School Master Plan. The plan includes expansion of the school's facilities that include a 12,860 square foot, two story multi-purpose building; a 2,900 square foot amphitheatre and a new multi-purpose sports field to replace the existing softball field.

Currently the school is operating under a Conditional Use Permit that was originally approved in 1959. Alverno has not done any major renovations since that time.

After years of negotiations with neighbors and city officials, an Initial Study was done in March of this year commission in July. to review the overall impact of the Photo by project on the community. In May, a Final Mitigated Negative Declaration was prepared for the Sierra Madre Planning Commission. On Thursday, the MND was reviewed and the commission requested additional information from city staff before approving the document.

Residents who live in the area surrounding the school are split in their opinions of the project. Many of the more vocal opponents have lodged their complaints with the school and the city. As a result, a series of community meetings were held last year that resulted in the school and the city of the expansion.

According to CEQA, a Negative Declaration (or Mitigated Negative Declaration) can be prepared only when there is no substantial evidence that the project may have a significant effect on the environment. And while the city has submitted documentation to support a MND, opponents do not agree. The consensus of those opposed to the

SIERRA MADRE LIBRARY LAUNCHES CHILDREN'S ROOM RENOVATION CAMPAIGN

Rotary Club Donates $20,000 To Jump Start Fundraising

Sierra Madre Families are invited to the Children's Library Family Pizza Party Fundraiser at the Sierra Madre Public Library, 440 W. Sierra Madre Blvd., on Saturday, June 25 from

The event will help raise money for the remodel of the Children's Room. The afternoon event will feature pizza, a silent auction, storytelling, games, craft project, face painting, a "co-author a book" table, and more fun for the whole family. Please RSVP 626-355-4672. It has been nearly 20 years since the Children's room was updated and in that time the needs of families has markedly changed. The Children's room will be upgraded to make the most of new child-centered services and improve the use of space in the room. Plans include creating a preschool zone and a study/reading area for students, and devoting more space to computers and technology, making the room more usable for children from birth through sixth grade.

Currently, a large corner of the Children's Room is rendered unusable by an emergency exit that will be relocated, regaining valuable space. Replacing four old windows with higher, more environmentally efficient ones will save money on utilities, keep the room more comfortable for everyone and create space for new bookcases that can hold substantially more picture and board books.

Construction is expected to start this summer and a ribbon cutting ceremony is tentatively set for this coming November.

The subject was found deceased near Chantry Flat.

Multi-incident callout, Chantry Flat: Sometimes, when it rains it pours. The Team responded to a report of a trauma patient in the Hermit Falls area near Chantry Flat. A "bash crew" -- a rapid, first-response element of SMSR team members -- reached the site within minutes, and the patient was extracted by the L.A. Sheriff's Department's Air Rescue 5 helicopter. While making their way back to the trailhead Team members and U.S. Forest Service first responders were able to assist two other parties with minor injuries, delivering them safely to L.A. County Fire Department paramedics in the Chantry Flat parking lot. While these two patients were still being treated, a lone hiker informed SMSR that their hiking companions were overdue and possibly injured. SMSR immediately dispatched Team members on a hasty search and the parties were located. Both were treated by Team members for minor injuries and were given a ride to their car in the parking lot. This kind of multiincident callout is not unusual for the Team, particularly in the busy summer months, and it is a good example of the interagency cooperation that is common in SMSR's operational area.

Stranded hiker, Chantry Flat: SMSR responded to a report of a hiker stranded off-trail in a steep location near Chantry Flat. Team members prepared for a stranded hiker rescue, a technique the Team practices regularly in order to safely rescue those who fall victim to the steep and unstable slopes of the local mountains. Air Rescue 5 helicopter was alerted and its crew was able to lower a paramedic to the subject, secure them, and hoist them out of harm's way.

In addition to performing rescues and training, SMSR was proud to participate in two local sporting events during the past month: the inaugural Monrovia Fountain to Falls Run/Walk, and the legendary Mount Wilson Trail Race in Sierra Madre.

Preparing for the Mt. Wilson Trail Race is one of the highlights of the Team's calendar every year. Hundreds of pounds of rescue gear must be hauled up the trail and pre-positioned: from rope's to litters to oxygen tanks. The Team prepares for any eventuality that may arise when hundreds of runners face the challenge of an 8.6-mile course, 2100 feet of elevation gain, and steep, rocky mountain trail. This year the Team aided several runners with minor complaints, and all were able to walk down the trail under their own power.

SMSR has a long history of providing support to the Mt. Wilson Trail racers, and the Team is fortunate to be the beneficiary of the proceeds of the pre-race pasta dinner and the post-race beer garden.

Sierra Madre Search and Rescue is an all-volunteer nonprofit organization that has been serving the local community for 60 years. The team has a proud history of never refusing a call for help no matter what the conditions, and also provides a range of public programs on wilderness safety. The Team never charges for any of its services.

For more information, including how to arrange a wilderness safety demonstration for your school or group, visit www.smsr.org.

The City of Sierra Madre has a number of vacancies on commissions and committees looking for people like you to join!

The Sierra Madre City Council encourages citizen participation in its decision-making process through the use of citizen commissions. Currently, there are six citizen commissions established by the Council to advise and assist them in dealing with specific problems (presently the Planning Commission has the responsibilities of the Cultural Heritage Commission).

These advisory bodies are able to study a variety of issues and problems in detail. After gathering all pertinent information, hearing arguments, and weighing values, they recommend to the Council what they consider the best action to take. In certain situations, commissions are empowered to make specific decisions, subject to appeal to the Council. Public notice on all commissions are prepared in compliance of the Maddy Act. Applications may be obtained at City Hall or the City website at www.cityofsierramadre. com should you wish to apply. Applications will be accepted until all positions are filled; however the first review will take place on June 14, 2011. For more information please call 626-355-7135.

DUELING MAPS: How Will Your District Change? Free Public Forum on Redistricting for Los Angeles County June 15

There's still time for voters to speak up about how their political districts will change as the groundbreaking Citizens Redistricting Commission comes down the home stretch in drawing new boundaries for state Assembly, Senate and U.S. Congressional Districts.

The League of Women Voters Pasadena Area is offering a unique opportunity to participate in a community conversation about "Dueling Maps: How Will Your District Change?" -- a free public forum on redistricting for Los Angeles County on June 15, 7-9 p.m. at the KPCC Crawford Family Forum, 474 S. Raymond Ave., Pasadena.

For the first time in California history, citizens rather than politicians are redrawing the lines of political districts to assure that communities have a voice in government. This is thanks to a 2008 initiative designed to prevent gerrymandering of district boundaries to keep political parties in office.

Dr. Morgan Kousser, professor of history and social science at Caltech, will moderate the discussion centering on the latest draft maps for Los Angeles County from the Citizens Redistricting Commission and maps proposed by ethnic, business and environmental coalitions.

Woman Signs Over Custody of Rescued Cats

By Dean Lee

As an ongoing police investigation into 253 cats rescued from Pasadena location in December, officials from the Humane Society said over half of them had already been placed after the owner gave up custody last month.

"Some of them have been adopted, "said Ricky Whitman Vice President of Community Resources. "If you could imagine that amount of cats in that kind of space, many were not handable, so we were able to place a number of them in situations such as 'barn cats."

She said a number of agencies had stepped forward taking cats they felt strongly they could place.

"The cats were all in reasonably good health, they just are not social," she said. 'So they are not accustom to a lot of human contact, so they need a specific type of home." Whitman said the Pasadena

Humane Society has less than 100 cats left adding that they expected the process to take a while. She also said no criminal charges had yet been

"They're [the district attorney's office] still going over all the information," she said. "It's over 250 cats so each cat has its own record that has to be reviewed."

Whitman said when they first arrived at the back house on Altadena Drive December 15 they found cats in both carrying cages and communal cages stacked up to six feet, "some were not contained and just running around," she added. She also said this was the largest incident of this kind in the city's history.

News reports at the time also said there were 34 dead cats found in a large freezer.

In Pasadena, Whitman said, residents are limited by law to owning four cats.

Detective Bureau - Case Follow-ups - This week, the Detective Bureau filed two significant cases with the District Attorney's Office and completed a third case for filing consideration:

Felony Filing for Second Degree Commercial Burglary

Patrol arrested a subject on May 23, 2011, at 0455 hours for the suspected burglary of the cigarette kiosk business at 336 W. Huntington Drive. This suspect was in possession of 96 packs of cigarettes from the business. The handling detective processed all of the cigarette packs for latent print evidence. The detective recovered four latent prints from the cigarette packs. The On May 23 at 6:17 a.m., an officer was dispatched detective obtained the owner's fingerprints and on the report of a vehicle burglary that occurred had a forensic fingerprint expert compare the latent (evidence) fingerprints to the own the victim's vehicle was broken and items inside fingerprints. The latent (evidence) fingerprints belonged to the owner. This is important because it eliminated the argument of a second suspect actually committing the crime. The person arrested with the cigarettes was wearing gloves when he was arrested. This person is suspected of committing other burglaries and he was arrested two weeks before and charged with trespassing. The detective presented the cigarette case to the District Attorney's Office and the District Attorney filed a felony complaint against this subject for second degree commercial burglary.

Felony Filing for Three Counts of Second Degree Commercial Burglary

Patrol arrested four subjects for burglary on May 18, 2011, for stealing alcohol from the Pavilions store at 130 W. Foothill Boulevard. These four people matched the descriptions of the four subjects who had just previously committed a burglary of alcohol from our Albertsons store at 725 E. Huntington Drive. These four subjects also had alcohol bottles our Pavilions' store determined to have been from the Pavilions store in Arcadia. The four subjects made bail and were released from custody. The handling detective conducting his supplemental investigation obtained evidence these four individuals were responsible for the Albertson's burglary and had indeed committed a similar burglary at the Arcadia Pavilions. The detective presented this case to the District Attorney's office and the District Attorney filed three counts of second degree commercial burglary against all four suspects.

Case Submitted to the District Attorney for Filing Consideration

Patrol responded to a residential burglary at 133 E. Pomona on February 20, 2011. The suspect stole $5,950 worth of women's jewelry. The handling patrol officer obtained a latent print from a cigarette wrapper found on the residential property. The latent print was processed by the Crime Lab and the print was identified. The handling detective conducted his supplemental investigation and discovered this subject had been arrested by deputies from the Temple City substation on the same day as our burglary. Our detective coordinated with the Temple City detective and learned this subject was arrested with women's jewelry in his possession which the deputies booked into their evidence system as property under observation. Our detective contacted the victim and the victim identified the jewelry as hers. The jewelry was returned to the stop, but the man drove through the red light victim. The detective has submitted this case to at Myrtle. He continued east on Lemon and ran the District Attorney to obtain an arrest warrant

Pension Reform Takes Center Stage In Monrovia Budget Talks

by Scott Ochoa

Although the redevelopment elimination drama has not yet played out, another major policy initiative is being introduced - but what a difference some actual strategic policy analysis makes. Pension reform is a very hot topic, and understandably so. To folks not in state and local government service, the pensions drawn by some government employees can seem downright opulent. When you move past the examples identified by the media to enflame folks' anger and when you set aside the cartoonishly extravagant - and unlawful - situation in the City of Bell, however, the pensions come back into a more normal focus for street crew workers, planners, teachers, etc. The question, I think, then becomes: "Can the California Public Employees Retirement System (PERS) afford this current system?" Increasingly, the answer appears to be "no."

It is important to remember that it was not too long ago that PERS was making huge amounts of money in its investment portfolio, it and its members cities were "super-funded" (meaning that they had more than enough money to pay out any and all retirement promises), and that PERS was creating and offering a variety of retirement plan options such as "3%@50" for public safety employees and "2.7%@55" for nonsafety employees. With these plans available, city councils were petitioned by employee groups and many of us did. To be sure, in consultation with PERS, the long term costs were identified and were reportedly minimal - after all, PERS was making so much money on its investments that the cost of the benefit enhancements was marginal. And faced with the relatively minimal costs, cities found it difficult to deny the requests. After all, if the benefit doesn't cost much and many other agencies are adopting it, how can you maintain your agency's ability to be competitive in the market - especially in the face of equally powerful and popular public safety unions? And after the police and fire unions received the benefit, nonsafety benefit enhancements trickled into the miscellaneous employee unions. For our part, in Monrovia, City Councils required that the unions "purchase" the benefit enhancements by forgoing raises for a period of time.

None of this is meant as a slam or indictment of PERS, or employee unions, or the cities, or councils. Looking back, I think all parties did what you might expect them to do (save PERS employees' alleged indiscretions, of course). Rather, it is important for all to note that the world has changed since the summer and fall of 2008. PERS' failure to see the "iceberg" on the horizon has at least some similarity to Bear Stearns, and/or Lehman Brothers, and/or AIG, and/or the federal governments' failure. All of these folks (save the ideas has shifted over the last three years.

Fed, of course) were making huge amounts of money and couldn't help but believe that the housing bubble would continue to grow - or at least slowly deflate, instead of pop. Or as Julius Caesar once observed, "Men willingly believe what they wish." For that matter, in the late 1990s and early 2000s, no one at all seemed too concerned about pension reform. Thus, in my humble opinion, it is important that we maintain an even-keel and we more toward reform in a fair, sober and judicious

Now that the dust is beginning to settle from the financial meltdown, we must take steps to ensure that our system is sustainable. And "sustainability" requires that we examine the assumptions that our retirement system is based on. While the Great Recession of 2008-09 exposed the weakness of the system, I believe the system's failures must be addressed in broader context.

Already, the Little Hoover Commission, the League of California Cities, as well as individual cities are studying and preparing for this new reality. Indeed, many cities are already moving in a direction to assure their communities of this sustainability and still provide employees with fair and competitive compensation.

In Monrovia, this endeavor has been taking shape for the last two years and has allowed us to avoid the crushing impact of these benefits. Indeed, Monrovia has changed its compensation unions to adopt the more lucrative options - and negotiation strategy (by moving away from the spiraling compensation surveys previously used to examine salaries and benefits) and we have implemented a hybrid/defined contribution retiree medical program. Additionally, last year, we negotiated with employee groups so that they would begin to pay for a portion of their retirement costs.

> These steps, taken in partnership with our employee groups and management team (who all appear to understand the new economic reality), will pave the way for additional changes in the coming years. Over the next three years, Monrovia will implement a two-tiered retirement program for new employees; we will negotiate with employees to absorb increasing amounts of their own retirement costs, until they have reassumed the entire employee share; and we will adjust the structure by which employees accrue bankable hours and expend such hours. Again, all of these changes require that we meet and confer with our unions; however, the City Council is indicating its intention to move in a direction that is fair, competitive and sustainable for the long term.

> I fully expect there to be thoughtful and provocative discussions about alternatives, and suggestions as we head down this direction. Still, the trajectory of our thoughts and

FUTURE TROJAN PEYTON MCMILLAN WINS DIGITAL VOICE AWARD

A few weeks ago, Peyton McMillan, a second grade student at Sierra Madre Elementary School did something that no other student and Peyton's submission was among them. To view the event log on in the Pasadena Unified School District or in the County of Los Angeles has ever done. He became the first elementary student in the PUSD and County to win the Los Angeles County Office of Education 's (LACOE), Digital Voice Award as an individual.

When Peyton was assigned a video homework project by his teacher, Ms. Yolanda Munoz, he chose to use the endangered African Wild Dog as his subject. After completing his research online, across Los Angeles County tuned-in to watch clips from winning 2011 Digital Voice Award projects from across the K-12 curriculum to: http://dva.lacoe.edu/

The Digital Voice Awards were given to forty-three classroom projects, inclusive of the special focus award of "Cultural Connections," where an award was given to an elementary and secondary project. Of those 43 award winners, Peyton was the only one from the Pasadena Unified School District and the only individual elementary winner from LA County.

This is not the first honor for this creative and talented young man. Last year, he was honored by the Los Angeles Lakers. In January 2010 he was chosen as the Laker's "Student of the Month" for his philanthropic activities and for being a great student. That award is given to two teachers, two students and two principals each month of the season. Peyton was the only representative from the PUSD.

In addition to his academic activities, Peyton had a keen sense of responsibility to the world around him from a very early age. He has raised over $1500.00 for various organizations by participating in fundraising efforts such as sickle cell anemia research through Little Legs, Big Hearts. He started at he went to the Los Angeles Zoo where he interviewed Zookeeper 2 years old for friends who have sickle cell. Veronica Munoz (no relation to his teacher), about the animals. The interview was captured on video tape and became part of the Peyton used his creativity and developed a live news segment called, "Trojan News". In it, he discusses the animal and its' habits and includes the interview with zookeeper Munoz. His teacher Ms. Munoz and Dawn Tully were so impressed with his work that they submitted it to the Digital Voice Award Competition.

Peyton's "Trojan News" was selected by LACOE as the Digital Voice Winner in the "English/Language Arts - Video Individual ing future. While he has yet to decide exactly what he wants to be Elementary Student" category. On Thursday, May 19, 2011, the when he grows up, he knows one thing for certain, "I want to go to Digital Voice Awards-DVA held its first online "virtual" celebra-

At 6 years old, he had his first lemonade stand. The catch was to sale "pink lemonade" as a symbol for breast cancer awareness. Peyton wanted to donate half of his earnings to another set of friends whose mother had stage 4 breast cancer. She passed away last year when Zack and Xavier were just 4 and 7 years old.

He also shook up his piggy bank to donate to the Red Cross for the Haiti and the Japan disaster relief efforts. His next project is to help the victims of the recent tornadoes in Mississippi and Missouri.

Peyton McMillan is a very busy young man with a very promis-USC". And, as you may notice in the picture above, his microphone tion where hundreds of teachers, students, and their families from is a metal version on Tommy Trojan. We think he is really serious.

Take Me Out to the Ballgame!

People always say never let an opportunity pass you by. I agree with them. This past weekend, when some family friends called us up and asked up to go to the Dodger game an our before it started, my dad and I conceded without blinking an eyelash. Boy was I surprised when I found out that we were sitting in the United Airlines Suites. I hadn't been to a game in years, so any seat would have been fine, but the suite was amazing. Filled endlessly with Coca-cola, pulled pork sandwiches, Dodger Dogs and Cracker Jack, I was in heaven. Then the dessert cart came, and I have never in my life seen so many delicious things in one place at one time. From the caramel apples to the mudslide brownies, it was a cart filled with my sweet tooth dreams. I eventually decided on an eight layer s'mores cake after five minutes of painful deciding, and it was one of the best things I have ever eaten. It was layer after layer of graham cracker, chocolate and melted marshmallows, and took me almost the entire game to eat - a large feat considering I usually annihilate anything that is put in front of me. Fully content after the game - we beat the Marlins 8-0 with Kershaw pitching his 2nd ever shutout and smashing a line drive foul ball right into our suite- I thought the day couldn't get any better. It did. As we were leaving the suites, I saw Adam Sandler. Not only did I see him, but I actually got to go up to him and get his autograph. I about passed out my heart was beating so fast. To me, Adam Sandler is up there with God, anyone from Harry Potter, and a few others. Leaving the parking lot that day, I was so glad that we had said yes.

Pasadena, CA - The Community Advisory Committee (CAC) of the Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) Special Education Department hosts its annual Recognition Awards Ceremony on Monday, June 6 at the University Club of Pasadena. The event celebrates the academic achievements of students served by Special Education by honoring the teachers, support staff, and administrators who are responsible for that growth. The event underscores that, in an environment of limited resources due to state budget cuts, resources invested for special education students actually benefit the entire classroom: techniques used to help special education students access the curriculum also are used to help general education classmates who are struggling with certain concepts or academic subjects.

Pasadena resident Marlee Matlin will receive the CAC's "Albert Einstein Leadership Award," which is presented to an individual who, through personal success or extraordinary effort, is helping tear down lingering stereotypes. Deaf since the age of two, Marlee became the youngest recipient of the Best Actress Oscar and one of only four actresses to receive the honor for her film debut. More recently, she was a finalist on this season of NBC's The Celebrity Apprentice, raising more than $1 million for the Starkey Hearing Foundation.

The award is named after Albert Einstein, who lived in Pasadena for three summers while a visiting professor at CalTech. If he were born today, many believe Albert Einstein would be a special education student: he had a learning disability as a child, did not speak until the age of 3, struggled with math and had difficulty expressing himself through writing. Einstein's life serves as a brilliant reminder that genius can be developed from the most unlikely of beginnings.

ALVERNO SENDS 100% OF ITS 62 GRADUATES OFF TO COLLEGE

Story and Photos By Chris Bertrand

Seniors at Alverno High School, a private Catholic girls' school in Sierra Madre, proudly traded their school uniforms for caps and gowns on Friday evening, June 3. Ceremonies were held on the terrace of the historic Villa d'Oro estate located on the school grounds.

At the inspiration of one senior and the approval of the Alverno administration, all the seniors signed a petition asking Channel One News reporter, Steven Fabian, to be the ceremony's keynote speaker, and were thrilled at his acceptance. On the air since 1990, the Peabody Award-winning Channel One News bills itself as "the leading television news network for teens nationwide. Our mission is to inform, educate and inspire by making news relevant and engaging for young people and sparking discussion around the important issues impacting youth today."

The school released its valedictorian and salutatorian honors on May 27. Candace Siegle, Alverno's Director of Admissions, was pleased to announce that Yale-bound Erica Tavera was named Valedictorian for the Class of 2011. Salutatorian, Karineh Minissian, will attend UC Berkeley. "Between the two of them, these young women were accepted to a variety of different colleges, but Yale and UC Berkeley offered the programs and majors they wanted with the campus environments they were looking for," said Siegle.

Tavera, an AP Scholar, National Honor Society (NHS), President and member of the California Scholarship Federation (CSF), has also served as the Supreme Court Chief Justice at Alverno. "It is such an honor to represent my class at graduation," she commented. "I'm so blessed to be in a class with so many inspiring girls who each have so much going for them. I can't wait to see where everyone ends up in 10 years."

Minissian will double major in Political Science and International Relations at UC Berkeley. A member of CSF and NHS, she served as the Secretary of International Affairs at Alverno, and as a Tournament of Roses ambassador. Minissian attended Marshall Fundamental Elementary School in Pasadena. "Coming from a public school, I really didn't know anyone and I was astounded at how welcoming and friendly everyone was," she says. "If it wasn't for the philosophy that Alverno instills in us, I probably wouldn't be as well-rounded and focused as I am today."

Alverno is proud that 100% of its graduates are headed to college next year, including Yale, USC, Brown, UC Berkeley, University of San Francisco, University of the Pacific, UC Santa Barbara, Fordham, UC Davis, University of La Verne and Marymount University. Alverno High School (www.Alverno-HS.org) is located at 200 N. Michillinda in Sierra Madre.

WASC Accreditation Review and School Year Evaluation Completed

This Spring two lengthy processes took place at St. Rita, accreditation and an evaluation of the length of the school year. Harabedian explains, "Catholic schools actually go through a dual accreditation process every 6 years through Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC), along with the Western Catholic Educational Association (WCEA).

She continued, "From March 29-31, a team of 5 educators, (2 principals and 3 teachers) from schools in the Los Angeles Archdiocese spent 3 full days observing all of the wonderful teaching that happens in our classrooms and reviewing our 100+ page report. In 2005, St Rita School earned the highest accreditation (6 year), and in fact the school has received the full 6 year term since the early 1980's when the process was put in place for all schools. By 2008, we had already achieved all of the goals from the 2005 WASC accreditation."

Key goals identified in 2011's WASC/WCEA report for the next 5 years include: Integration of technology into the classroom and all areas of the curriculum, Differentiated instruction, expanded faith formation for families and professional development in technology. An annual report is submitted to the department of Catholic schools along with an yearly update of how the action plans from the formal WASC visit are being achieved.

According to Harabedian, "The technology integration is already in process with interactive boards. Our key area for professional development this past year was differentiated instruction. On a simple level, differentiated instruction is teaching with student learning styles in mind. It means starting where the kids are rather than adopting a standardized approach to teaching that seems to presume that all learners of a given age or grade are essentially alike.

In addition, this spring, the St. Rita School staff, families and administration went through a careful examination of a proposed school year extension to 200 days, recommended by the Catholic Archdiocese. After listening extensively to input from the community, Principal Joanne Harabedian and Pastor, Monsignor Krekelberg came to a joint decision to keep the current 180 school day calendar.

Joanne Harabedian and Pastor, Monsignor Krekelberg came to a joint decision to keep the current 180 school day calendar. "The process for the decision began with a town hall meeting," said Harabedian, "where parents, grandparents (many are involved in both public and private education) voiced their opposition to the extended school year. The primary concern was the value of family time over the summer break and the need for teachers, students and parents to relax and recharge. 80% of our parents were opposed to the extension. Those who supported the extension are parents who struggle with child care over the summer months.

"Our test scores are excellent, proven by the outstanding acceptance of our 8th grade students into the local Catholic and private high schools," continued Harabedian. "At the same time, we will commit ourselves annually to revisiting the concept of a 200-Day Year, in order to track its potential for any future advantage to our school."

Krekelberg commented in a letter to the St. Rita community, "This episode of parish and school life was an opportunity to surface the best of ourselves as an educational Catholic faith community. May our resolve to offer excellence in Catholic education only be enhanced!"

I sat on the enclosed patio and found it to be comfortable and acoustically perfect, as you can have a nice conversation without the bother of shouting or the need to whisper so that no one hears you.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills

As I tilted to look above my table I noticed the rich wood beams that spanned the room and brought to mind a chalet in Aspen.

The restaurant is owned and operated by the husband and wife team of Horacio and Alicia Lavanchy. My server, Luis, followed Horacio from his restaurant to Montrose and has been serving age to excepwith him for all of the 19 years. He was lightning tional. This quick, and his service reminded me of the professionalism that is lacking in too many restaurants.

I was fortunate enough to be able to try an array in the past of dishes. I soon discovered that all the breads are vear. made right in Divina's kitchen. Soup of the day was a delightful Mushroom Soup and I also took a sampling of the Squash Soup as well. I have long since said, that if the soup is good, that usually leads to a great dining experience.

I don't know what they could have done to improve these two liquid delights.

Continuing with the house made theme, I moved on to the pastas, which are all made from scratch at Divina Cucina. The pastas offer so many layers of intriguing flavors that it was self-evident that their preparation was under the watchful care mail me at thechefknows@yahoo.com

In a word, Perfection. The sprinkling of olive oil, shallots and Gorgonzola cheese made you want to sing as you dined on this dish. For beef lovers, I highly recommend the Filetta con Porcini. A thin fillet of beef grilled in porcini mushroom sauce (MP). Yes, there are pizzas here, and no, I didn't have the room to sample one, but the owner, Horacio, guarantees that they are great as well. ### REVIEWS: DALE EARNHARDT JR. JR. The behind

silly

Earnhardt Jr. is Detroit natives, Daniel Zott and Josh Epstein. They joined forces sometime last year to release the much buzzed about EP, Horse Power. It was a four-song collection of psychedelic indie pop tunes that included the Beach Boys cover, "God Only Knows". With their highly anticipated debut LP due out on June 7th, the twosome expands on their eclectic sound. Epstein and Zott both sing in other bands, The Silent Years and The Great Fiction, respectively and share vocal duties on It's A Corporate World. The amalgamation of the two singers/songwriters were able to craft soft, airy, electronic produced rhythms with their new venture. It's A Corporate World is a moderately solid debut, but an uneven one at that. There may be plenty here that will resonate with particular listeners. Some will find more to love than others. When Dale Earnhardt Jr. Jr. strives in specific tracks, there is no denying the magic these guys can bring. However, it's when they depart from that signature sound that leaves us to some extent empty within. Luckily, none of the tracks on It's A Corporate World feel overblown in nature. Actually, only two tracks, "Nothing But Our Love" and "When I Open My Eyes" cross the fourminute mark. In retrospect, the 12-track record is relatively short-lived at 37 minutes and 25 seconds. The first half of the album starts off reasonably strong. Opener, they've set out to be. It's A Corporate World "Morning Thought" provides us with does feel special and unique sometimes, but glistening patterns, electrifying drumbeats and mellow vocal harmonies. Like I previously mentioned, this is a relatively respectable first effort. I would have expected a bit more given my deep appreciation for Epstein's better pop indie band, The Silent Years. Adding electronics and synths to your soundscape is all the rage right now. Dale Earnhardt Jr. Jr. uses them to their advantage most of the time. Some of the songs (toward the second half) start off fairly strong, but somehow manage to get stale and unrewarding by the time of completion. I like to think the band's name is more than a gimmick. If they decide in the future to work on a follow-up album, I'll still check it out with no hesitation. Growth and progress is inevitable, yet I hope Dale Earnhardt Jr. Jr. can figure out a way to become the band those moments aren't everlasting. Hell, those moments rarely last at all.

Ghost Hunters: William James and the Search for Scientific Proof of Life After Death by Deborah Blum

A Pulitzer Prize winning author tells the amazing story of William James's quest for empirical evidence of the spirit world . What if a world renowned philosopher and professor of psychiatry at Harvard suddenly announced he believed in ghosts? At the close of the nineteenth century, the illustrious William James led a determined scientific investigation into "unexplainable" incidences of clairvoyance and ghostly visitations. James and a small group of eminent scientists staked their reputations, their careers, even their sanity on one of the most extraordinary quests ever undertaken: to empirically prove the existence of ghosts, spirits, and psychic phenomena. What they pursued and what they found raises questions as fascinating today as they were then. Deborah Blum is a professor of science journalism at the University of Wisconsin and has written for the New York Times, Los Angeles Times, and Psychology Today.

From the author of the acclaimed The Brother Gardeners, a fascinating look at the founding fathers from the unique and intimate perspective of their lives as gardeners, plantsmen, and farmers. For the founding fathers, gardening, agriculture, and botany were elemental passions, as deeply ingrained in their characters as their belief in liberty for the nation they were creating. Andrea Wulf reveals for the first time this aspect of the revolutionary generation. She describes how, even as British ships gathered off Staten Island, George Washington wrote his estate manager about the garden at Mount Vernon; how a tour of English gardens renewed Thomas Jefferson's and John Adams's faith in their fledgling nation; how a trip to the great botanist John Bartram's garden helped the delegates of the Constitutional Congress break their deadlock; and why James Madison is the forgotten father of American environmentalism. These and other stories reveal a guiding but previously overlooked ideology of the American Revolution. Founding Gardeners adds depth and nuance to our understanding of the American experiment and provides us with a portrait of the founding fathers as they've never before been seen.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

people are well-informed, their own government; that, whenever things get so far wrong as to attract their notice, they may be relied on to set them right."

- Thomas Jefferson

the rationale behind Republicans' targeting education and teachers. They've targeted public education specifically; an institution Jefferson felt so strongly about, he (unsuccessfully) sought to have federal support for education codified as an amendment to our Constitution.

'(W)henever the people are well-informed", they tend to question assertions that budgetary concerns are behind education cuts; as in Texas, where 97,000 teachers face lay-offs while lawmakers push for a $250 million taxpayer commitment to bring Formula 1 auto racing to Austin; and Kentucky, which endured cuts to "education at all levels" and a teacher pay freeze while offering over $50 million in support to a theme park featuring a full-size replica of Noah's ark.

Along with an educated electorate, Republicans have reason to fear one with a memory. In his column last week, Greg Wellborn advised we remember the "message" of the 2010 elections. As I see it, voters are expresselected in the first place.

Greg cited the recent election of a Democrat in the historically-Republican 26th Congressional District in New York. Of more consequence for 2012 is the shift in electoralvote-rich swing states.

Two weeks ago in Florida, the first Democrat in twenty years was elected mayor of Jacksonville, the state's largest city. A Suffolk University poll found Republican Gov. Rick Scott with a 32% approval rating. According to Suffolk Political Director David Paleologos, "It's taken Gov. Scott less than 100 days to begin a free fall in popularity and to generate negative perceptions about job performance and damaging the state he was elected

Gov. Scott resisted voter-approved antigerrymandering legislation, turned down $2 billion in federal high-speed rail funding (workers were to have union protections) and followed the party line in sacrificing education for millionaire tax-cuts. In solidly-Republican Jacksonville, President Obama now enjoys higher approval than Gov. Scott.

In Ohio, the CEO of a Columbus railcar manufacturer described Republican Gov. John Kasich's decision to turn down federal rail funds as "mind-boggling". "The only thing I can compare it to is the interstatewould Ohio be today if it opted out of the interstate highway system?"

After cutting millions from the budgets of Republicans have reason to fear an eleclocal schools, nursing homes, children's hostorate with a memory in 2012. The people Kasich sought to eliminate the estate tax to 26th District, Jacksonville, FL, throughout ease the burden on millionaires. Utilities and Ohio and Wisconsin, however, they couldn't oil companies saw their taxes cut, with state wait any longer, and have already shown how parks offered to the highest bidder for oil and "they may be relied on to set them right". gas exploration.

Within a month, Ohioans have gathered 214,400 signatures on a petition to reverse

. . whenever the Kasich's decision taking away collective bargaining rights from public employees - 90% they can be trusted with of the total needed to put the referendum on the ballot. A recent Quinnipiac poll shows the governor's approval at 38%.

Wisconsin election officials have now certified sufficient signatures and given approval for the recall election of six Republican state senators this summer. As noted in the Milwaukee Journal-Sentinel, "At no time in U.S. I wrote last week about history have attempts been made to recall so many legislators at the same time over the same issue", Republican Gov. Scott Walker's attempt to strip state employees of their collective bargaining rights.

Gov. Walker's numbers haven't been helped by his moves to consolidate power in the governor's office (over natural resources, veterans' affairs, Medicaid), attempting to evade oversight by the legislature and accountability to the public. Nor have voters approved of his declaring the affirmation of domestic partnership rights, such as hospital visitation for gay couples, to be "unconstitutional".

According to a recent Public Policy poll, half of Wisconsin's likely voters want to see Walker recalled; a hypothetical match-up shows former Democratic Sen. Russ Feingold beating Walker 52% to 42%.

Nation-wide, "the people are well-informed" enough to see through Republicans' playing chicken with the debt ceiling, described by Rep. Sander Levin (D-MI) as a "ploy so egregious that (they) have had to ing buyers' remorse over those they voted for, spend the last week pleading with Wall Street who don't seem to remember why they were not to take it seriously and risk our economic National default is threatened in order to impose the "budget" prepared by Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI). They've largely abandoned the pretense of referring to "debt", rather than just "spending", reduction; if the proposal had anything to do with addressing the deficit, it wouldn't be calling for ladling out billions more of taxpayer funds to those already holding 90% of our wealth.

The prize Republicans seek for their benefactors is Medicare, because, quoting bank robber Willie Sutton, "that's where the money is." Seniors may be left with little more than a voucher to try and find private coverage, along with responsibility for hundreds a month in out-of-pocket expenses, but insurance conglomerates will have their 20-30% cut for million-dollar executive bonuses and dividend checks, courtesy the taxpayer. And, thanks to Rep. Ryan's budget, we'd remain the only developed country on earth where a family can be financially ruined if a member gets sick.

A "well-informed" people, however, might not easily relinquish that prize. A February WSJ/NBC poll finds 76% of Americans view cutting Medicare to address the deficit as "unacceptable". An April Washington Post/ ABC poll shows 72% supporting a tax hike highway program back in the '60s. Where for those making over $250,000 a year. In the same poll, 67% support the right of state workers to unionize.

The Debt Limit Fairy Tale

The news this week from the mainstream press articles describing the is that failure to raise the country's debt limit will disaster that awaits us if end the American way of life and ruin the U.S.'s reputation for years, if not multiple decades, to come. That story line has about as much truth to it as your typical children's fairy tale.

Let's first explain some terms that are being economists (including the thrown around without proper understanding. The debt limit is the legal amount of debt that the U.S. government can have outstanding at any one time. It's almost exactly like the credit limit that you and I, along with the rest of America, have on our Visa card. We're allowed to borrow only so much. The debt limit has nothing to do with whether or not our obligations will be paid. Again, just like our credit cards. If I reach my limit with my Visa card and Visa is unwilling to increase the amount I can borrow, it doesn't mean that I'm going to default on the debt I owe them. What it means is that Visa is unwilling to lend me more money until I show that I can start paying down the amount I already owe. That's actually a good thing, and so it would be with our country.

To hear the professional political class tell it, the U.S. will immediately start defaulting on allowed to borrow more money than it already has. Hopefully, this is starting to sound a little weird to the readers of this column, because it should. If the debt limit is reached and no furlonger be allowed to spend more than it takes in and finance that deficit by borrowing. It will have to cut back somewhere.

Now, it is possible that the government would choose to cut back by missing interest payments on its bonds, but that would be a purposeful move on its part, not a natural and unavoidable result of reaching the debt ceiling. The government could just as easily cut back on discretionary spending in other areas or reduce the entitlement spending that's on autopilot right now. Those are actually the more rationale responses, and I suspect that when push comes to shove, it is exactly what the

That's not the same thing as saying it's what the government wants to do. There are plenty in the current administration and in Congress that want to continue to spend. They will resist with every fiber of their body cutting back on their cherished programs, which are the foundation of their power and position. What's a humble politician to do without the ability to spend some money in his or her district? The reality remains, though, that if the ability to spend more is removed, they will be forced to cut back the profligate spending that has so badly hurt this country.

economists who have signed petitions or Op-ed reached at gregwelborn@earthlink.net.

the debt limit isn't raised. Fascinating because there has been almost no media attention paid to the 150 likes of former Treasury Secretary George Schultz and the Nobel Prize winner, Robert Mundell) who signed a statement explaining that increasing the debt limit without incorporating meaningful and enforceable reductions in spending would actually be the most damaging thing one could do to the economy.

Their logic is inescapable. Government spending in recent years has risen from about 18% of the economy to 24% today. Because tax payers haven't yet been forced to pony up more of their hard earned dollars, that increase in spending has created the deficit and debt limit problem we face today. If politicians are allowed to raise the debt limit without agreeing to spending cuts now, they're never going to agree to them. All the leverage in the negotiations would be removed. debts owed, lose its standing in the world and If spending is allowed to stay at its new, higher generally suffer a terrible economic fate if it's not level, then it is almost a foregone conclusion that taxes will have to increase - and not just on the rich. As has been explained in countless articles, there aren't enough billionaires and millionaires in this country to meet the current spending levther borrowings are allowed, the U.S. will have to els - let alone pay down existing debt - even if start cutting back on its spending. It would no they were taxed at 100% of their earnings. The middle class will inevitably be asked to pay more. These higher taxes will depress economic activity and force us into a deeper recession. Smart business owners and investors know this. If they believe that government spending will continue unabated, they know that taxes are going to increase, and they will choose not to invest their hard earned capital today. That reduction in investments will cause further unemployment and recession today.

> So, the debt ceiling debate is really a debate about whether we're going to further shift assets and power from the private sector into the hands of government bureaucrats. It has nothing to do with whether we'll default on existing debt. President Obama is wedded to his "transformation of America", and he's not above playing a very high stakes game of chicken with our future and our children's future. Let's hope that the debt limit stays right where it is and the U.S. is forced to start paying off its credit card.

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE DREAM BIG

Early this morning as I was inattentively watching the fourth or so hour of the French Open Tennis Matches I heard the announcer, Martina Navratilova, describing an incident relating to one of the participants. Martina described watching the young woman (I believe she was Eastern European) warming up before a match at the Wimbledon Championships. This was the most important match of the young woman's life, probably the culmination of a life-long dream and yet something was very wrong. Martina, one of the greatest players of all-time, noticed that the young woman was warming-up with her father. She described the father as being unable to hit hard enough to break an egg and knew that it was impossible for the father to adequately prepare his daughter for the real match. Soon after the young woman took her place on the Court and in less than 45 minutes she was defeated and completely destroyed by the power of her opponent.

I imagine that the father had introduced his daughter to tennis at an early age.. I see them hitting the ball back and forth for countless hours together dreaming of the day when the daughter grew so expert that she qualified to play at Wimbledon, the most famous and important tournament in the world. Together they dreamed of that moment before her first match when the father would proudly warm-up with the daughter as she prepared to play. This was the culmination of the dream. As soon as she stepped onto the Court after hitting with her father the dream was fulfilled. Winning or losing the actual match made no difference. Together they had achieved their dream. Hallelujah!

Alas, their loyalty to the dream led not to victory but instead guaranteed defeat. Their long held fantasy did not grow with the possibilities of reality. Perhaps to win the match a part of the dream had to be released and coaches and trainers other than the father had to be retained. This is the point of my article. In addition to motivating our own dreams can restrict.

Throughout history people have always dreamt of a better way of living. Sometimes they called it freedom.. Countless wars and revolutions have been fought in the name of giving power to the people and countless lives have been lost; but in the end the power remains elsewhere. How can the goal of freedom ever be reached? Removing the reigning tyrant is only the beginning rather than the end of the dream. Often all that happens is more fighting and subsequent battles for control together with resultant brutality,

Right now the Arab Spring has succeeded in removing, or almost removing, unpopular tyrannical leaders. This is a fulfillment of a dream and the world remembers the recent moving celebration of the Egyptian People as they rejoiced at the departure of Mubarak. Alas, tis cannot be the end of the dream but only a beginning. Reforming the system is what is important not just changing the name of the leader. The hard work is just starting but the energy of the people seems to be disappearing.

Looking at the United States, we really thought we had accomplished something when we elected Barack Obama. Hip, hip, hooray. We've done it! What have we accomplished? I do not want to live in a country filled with poverty, unemployment, and ignorance. I want educational reform, and medical service availability, and a sane environmental policy. I do not want war and I especially do not want to live in a country that thinks it is okay to torture. I do not want to be surrounded by commercialization and misinformation and silliness. I want the mistreatment of the poor and the vulnerable to stop right now. The ruling powerful elites inevitably attempt to create dream-worlds that manipulate and mislead the population. We are often told that our rulers are our Gods. They are not! Our own individual responsibility is to stay in touch with our own personal dreams while still looking realistically at our own lives..

My imaginings concerning the tennis player and her father may have little to do with any actual reality but I think they stand as a powerful metaphor. Often we are accepting participants in the limitations placed upon us, easily satisfied and sleep-walking through our own lives. Simply put I cannot answer the question of why we are here but I am certain that the reason for existence is not about being good consumers and being entertained. Neither is it about winning and defeating others. I believe that my mostly imagined father and daughter tennis players were on the right track. They cared about one another and worked hard and achieved and I think experienced a kind of love. To expand that love as much as possible to the world is my dream for humanity. Let us keep dreaming and remember there are no limits to dreaming. Let us dream BIG.

Curbing Bad Behavior: THANK YOU

by Ron Carter

When I first started writing the "Curbing Bad Behavior" (CBB) Blog, I had no idea how it would be received. After more than three months of publishing CBB, I am grateful for the support it has received. While navigating through our daily lives, it seems like the words "please," "excuse me," "how can I help you!" and "thank you" are disappearing from our vocabulary, I would like to say THANK YOU to Views News, for including my blog in your newspapers. You ladies and gentlemen are the best! You have demonstrated that in our world which can sometimes overwhelm us with strife, you took the time to support and encourage me. I am truly blessed by your gratitude.

As I continue to write about topics that are interesting to me and hopefully to you, I will remember that without your kindness and support, "Curbing Bad Behavior" would not exist. Again, I say thank you for the encouragement, love and support.

BETRAYED AGAIN--OBAMA EXTENDS PATRIOT ACT!

The Patriot Act was then, wrong" in a Senate speech. and is now, nothing short of a complete abom-ination to our Constitution and it is completely un-necessary to the fight against terrorism.

All it does is allow our government to spy on its own citizens without justification or probable cause, much the same as the laws in most communist countries. By keeping this law on the books, our government is telling it's citizens... buckle under, your constitutional rights mean nothing any longer.

Is there any Bush policy Obama hasn't renewed? Maybe Bush should have gotten the Nobel Peace Prize? The Patriot Act is evil, and subjects us to internal, bureaucratic terrorism backed by law. What's ironic is the liberals who hated Bush for the Patriot Act now support it under Obama.

Rahm Emanuel, then Obama's new chief of staff, summed it up best when he told a Wall Street Journal conference of top corporate CEOs right after the inauguration, "You never want a serious crisis to go

He elaborated: "Things that we had postponed for too long, that were long-term, are now immediate and must be dealt with. This crisis provides the opportunity for us to do things that you could not do before.

If that's not a slippery slope nothing is! There will always be another crisis down the road. What other freedoms and liberties will we be asked to forfeit in order to be "safe" then?

Extending the Patriot Act reveals just what a twofaced scoundrel President Obama is -- someone who will say and do anything to get reelected. I feel sorry for his diehard supporters -- what few he still has -- who continue to defend his flagrant reversals and blatant betrayal of real progressive reform. Obama is a hypocrite; his supporters are fools.

In 2003, Senator Obama branded the Patriot Act "shoddy and dangerous" and pledged to end it. In 2005, he pledged to filibuster a Bush-sponsored bill that included expanding several of the Patriot Acts more draconian provisions, calling them "just plain Sierra Madre.

He argued: "Government has decided to go on a fishing expedition through every personal record or private document -- through library books they've read and phone calls they've made... We don't have to settle for a Patriot Act that sacrifices our liberties or our safety -- we can have one that secures both.

Let's add up the score card: Obama was against being in Iraq and that George Bush went there for oil. Obama said we will get out of Iraq. Three years later we're still in Iraq: Score one point for George Bush. - Obama said we would get out of Afghanistan. Three years later we're still in Afghanistan:

Score one point for George Bush.

Obama said Guantanamo needs to close and George Bush keeping it open was damaging U.S. credibility. Three years later Gitmo is still open: Scone one point for George Bush.

- Obama said the Patriot Act was an intrusion of the constitution and he will halt its use. Three years later Obama extends the Patriot Act: Score one point for George Bush.

- Obama said the "rich" are not paying their fair share and will not extend the "Bush tax cuts." December 2010 Obama extends the Bush tax cuts: Score one point for

That's George Bush 5; Barak Obama 0! Hmmm... Obama looks like he agrees MORE with Bush than he disagrees with him!!!

President Obama's extension of the Patriot Act, like so many other questionable things he has done, is only possible because the American public is so poorly served by the mainstream press. Once you take out the sports scores, ads, crime stories, obits, and human interest fluff there really isn't any "news" left in the daily newspapers. The same is true for the nightly newscasts. What few legitimate stories they do have are too often reported by some bonehead who you wouldn't trust to watch your dog.

Wake up folks! What Obama does in Washington effects us all -- even those of us lucky enough to live in Paraprosdokian: A figure of speech in which the latter part of a sentence or phrase is surprising or unexpected usually in a humorous or dramatic way. Sounds like your dubious columnist here has spent a lifetime spouting paraprosdokians without knowing just exactly what they were. You might have favorites of your own. Here are some that caught my attention.

> Let me end this column with a clever little story chock full of paraprosdokians written about a mythical Greek hero. (I edited for space considerations.) You can find the unedited full version on Uncyclopedia.com

Paraprosdokian was a legendary hero. He was not a citizen of any organized nation - he was a Greek. He was a great warrior. His legacy is stained only by facts. Despite his legend, the true story of his days was not recorded by any reliable Greek historian. It was written by Herodotus. If modern day historians have correctly translated the accounts of his life, I would be very

As a school youth he was very skilled with the girls, though his teachers did encourage him to participate in boys' athletics instead. The face of this young child could say it all, especially the mouth part. As a young lad, he fought and killed an elephant using nothing but an oak branch. But this deed remains dubious - an elephant using an oak branch is no match for a warrior using sword and shield.

He never went into a battle without his father's trusty sword. Or with it, for that matter. It was well known that on the battlefield he wouldn't sleep for three days, because that would be far too long. But despite the hell of war, he pictured in his mind a land without war, a land without hate. And he pictured his army attacking that land, because they would never expect it.

He was a skilled archer, though he did occasionally miss his wife. In his early days, he would bring a new woman to his bed each night. But it got to be too crowded, so he sent them all away. Everywhere he went he sought the woman of his dreams but since he never slept, he could never meet her.

He died like a true hero - peacefully in his sleep, not screaming and shouting like the people hit by the chariot he was driving.

human population takes things way too seriously for their own good. The strange anomaly is that most people laugh at the wrong thing and fail to laugh at the right thing. This serious incongruity has robbed people of a healthy attitude towards life in general. Those who take life too seriously are in danger of missing the great joys of living in a crazy world like ours. I am not sure about the scientific research but I would guess that for every sad moment it takes one hundred laughs to balance the books. Some people are about ninety-nine laughs short of a real sane moment.

I like the old English proverb that says, "Laugh and the whole world laughs with you, cry and you cry alone." From my perspective, if you cannot laugh with someone you will not be able to cry with him or her and have it mean anything.

According to some medical advice, it takes more facial muscles and energy to frown than it does to smile. Of course, the only exercise some people have is frowning and who am I to take that away from them. I am determined, no matter what, to exercise my right to smile and laugh and enjoy the world around me. I must confess that I get this attitude quite honestly.

My paternal grandfather was a Past Master in the area of practical jokes. No amount of time was too much to spend preparing for one of his famous practical jokes. His favorite holiday was April 1 and began preparing for this holiday right after Christmas.

The fact that his practical jokes at times got him into trouble did not seem to affect him at all.

Once while in the hospital for an extended period he had somebody smuggle in to him a can of snuff. For some reason he liked chewing snuff. It is the most disgusting habit I know of on earth.

He no sooner received his smuggled goods then he began chewing it. If you know anything about chewing snuff, you know it is accompanied by a lot of spitting. As usual, his timing was impeccable. Just as the head nurse passed his door and looked in, he leaned over and spit in to the garbage can he had next to his bed. The nurse, not knowing about the chewing snuff, thought he was spitting blood and immediately went into emergency mode. Immediately my grandfather was rushed into the operating room and the surgeon and medical team were not think he would get out of the hospital. Just as they got him situated in the operating room he pulled from under his sheet his can of chewing snuff and smiled at them. The only person in the room

A healthy dose of medicine for the soul

A large segment of the that thought this was in any way amusing was my grandfather. The doctors were so angry with him but they refuse to see him for three days and confiscated his can of chewing snuff.

My aunt and uncle lived right next to my grandfather. My aunt was hyper clean when it came to her house. Dirt in any form was not welcome under her roof. She had a broom that was always within reach because she never knew when a piece of dirt would try to invade her domicile.

That year my grandfather found something new. I am not sure where he found it but he probably spent a lot of time looking for something like this. It was a rubber facsimile of a very nasty looking piece of vomit. To him it was a prized possession.

Most of his practical jokes were executed on April 1. Whenever we saw grandfather coming on this particular day we usually ran for cover. He went over to visit my aunt and was sitting on the couch in the living room. They chatted for a little while and then my grandfather began to cough a little bit. He said to my aunt, "I haven't been feeling good lately. I really don't know what it is." Then he started to cough a little more seriously, to which, my aunt got up and went to the kitchen to get him a glass of water thinking that might help him. When she got back, she was shocked to see on her new coffee table a very horrible sight. My grandfather was bent over the coffee table hacking and coughing as though he was in the process of dying. On the coffee table was very nasty looking piece of vomit.

My aunt went into hysterics. She whirled around and within a moment had grabbed her broom and started towards my grandfather. My grandfather was laughing but not for long.

Suddenly he realized that the flailing broom in my aunt's hand was aimed at him. She chased him out of the house, down the driveway and for at least three blocks yelling obscenities at him that I dare not repeat in public society.

Laughter is the fresh air of the soul. Even the Bible thinks so.

"A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance: but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken" (Proverbs 15:13 KJV). And, my favorite, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the ones" (Proverbs 17:22 KJV).

I recommend a healthy dose of medicine for your

Science, Truth, Language: Communicating With Non-Science and Public Audiences

HOW MANY TIMES DO WE HEAR that some scientific view is "only theory" or that it is "not proven"? The hidden implication is that if we have not "proven" the case, then we do not know anything for certain about it, and any idea is as good as any other. A recent and vivid example of this problem is the ongoing argument in the popular media about global warming. Do we need to be absolutely certain before we take action?

These same issues and doubts come up in university science classes for non-science students, and in public lectures with scientific themes. The problem, described by McMaster University astronomer William Harris at the 2011 meeting of the Canadian Astronomical Society (CASCA) in Ontario, Canada, boils down to a misunderstanding about the way science really works. Contrary to the way it is often portrayed in public, science is not about "proving theories." An effective way to discuss these issues is to imagine a continuous line stretching from "totally right" at the top, to "totally wrong" at the bottom. Any scientific idea, hypothesis, or theory can be located somewhere on that line. If it has a lot of evidence supporting it, it lies near the top (for example, that the Earth is round; DNA is the basis of the genetic code). Old ideas example, that dinosaurs coexisted with early humans, or that the Sun revolves around the Earth).

A new scientific idea, just beginning to be explored, sits somewhere in the middle of the line. As more evidence comes in and our tools for interpretation get better, we might find that the idea site, HYPERLINK "http://www.mtwilson.com" is wrong ("disproven") and it immediately drops to www.mtwilson.com. the bottom of the line. But with luck, we might find that it agrees with a lot of evidence and so our confidence in the idea grows. Over time, it might move upward into a full-fledged body of knowledge that is much more secure.

Another way to think about this line is to ask how much you would bet that a given scientific idea or theory is right. We literally bet our lives that Newton's laws are right, but we wouldn't be quite that confident in a new and untested statement. The key to understanding science is the role Plain Sight." played by constant testing and real-world evidence.

Ask jai.....

Ask jai is a weekly column that will strive to honestly answer your job search questions relating to job searching Rest techniques, networking skills, resume writing and interviewing. The employment situation is getting better, however, it is still a challenge finding were the jobs are located and how to get pass the "gate-keepers". As an Executive Recruiter I was privy to working directly with Corporate Recruiters and understanding their process in selecting which candidates to interview and hire. I will candidly answer your questions, possibly bluntly answering your questions, but I will be totally honest. My objective is to help you achieve your employment goal.

Dear Jai: I have been unsuccessful at finding employment for the past 6 months. I spend at least 5 hours a day searching the internet and calling employers, but nothing seems to happen. I just believe there is nothing out there for me and I will never find employment. I am getting discouraged and very depressed. Most of my friends are employed, and they sincerely try to help and keep me optimistic. I am very fortunate to be surrounded by a supportive and understanding family, but sometimes I just feel all alone. What should someone like me do? All alone

Dear All Alone:

First, you are not alone. There are thousands of people in your circumstance, and saying this is not to make you feel better. It is only to reinforce that searching for employment in these economic times is not an easy task and you should not try to go it alone. Seek out support from those who can assist you mentally and socially. Join a Job Club or Employment Support Group. As I always say, first, do your research. Find out where they are located in your community and which groups have been successful. Attend and assess their meetings before joining and committing. Assess if they have common goals, meet your goals and objectives; personality types; meeting time of day, professional levels, general industries, where the meetings take place.

Job Clubs can be found at your local library, churches, community organizations, club associations, workforce centers, private industry groups, schools, colleges and universities, posted on community bulletin boards, listed on the internet or newspapers in their calendar of events. Job Clubs usually meet once a week for at least one-hour. The meetings are usually free, although some groups will charge a small nominal fee for services. Group size can range from 5 to 25. I prefer small groups of 10-15 people. A good facilitator should monitor and lead the sessions as well as provide weekly agendas; insure the meetings stay on track and that everyone gets time to share in the discussions. The ideal facilitator is a professional career coach or advisor because they know how to listen, motivate, and hold people accountable for their job searching efforts. In these groups you will meet other job seekers, share resumes, help and support others, expand your job search network and referrals, and possibly create special events, invite guest speakers, recruiters and employers to meet with your group. You will also discuss your efforts in looking for work, salary expectations, cover letters, and interviewing techniques. Being a member of a support group usually shortens you length of time in finding employment.

I have only one warning about Job Clubs or Support Groups - do not let them become or turn into pity, crying, or pessimistic sessions. If they do, leave as quickly as possible and find another group. You always want to stay up-beat and goal oriented in finding employment. Job Clubs and Employment Support Groups can be the ideal solutions to not feeling alone in your job search. You should join one as soon as possible.

Everything you ever wanted to know about how to get a job ....but did not know who to ask. ASK jai. Send your questions to: jai@resumeandcareerservices.com or visit website www.resumeandcareerservicesc.

Pet Poisoning - Prevention and Prompt Response

Spring is my favorite time of year, and this spring has turned out to be uniquely awesome! The weather has been absolutely gorgeous, the trees are budding, the flowers are blooming in a wide variety of brilliant colors and the wildlife is thriving at its peak! Who could possibly disagree that our quaint canyon village becomes a virtual paradise during the spring season of each year? In the evenings I have been hearing the high pitch hooting of young owlets, echoing from a nest in the huge eucalyptus tree just across the wash, and I have seen more deer with young fawns and coyote families with pups passing through my neighborhood, than I have seen in years. A client of mine who lives in the Monrovia canyon even told me that she saw an adult mama bear with two baby cubs hunkering down beneath the sprawling oak canopies on the wooded property behind her house last week. I have not been so lucky as to see that bear family myself, but I keep my camera poised while visiting her gorgeous golden retriever, "Gus" just in case I do get that lucky! One of the things I love most about this season, is the feeling that it brings to my soul. That fresh feeling of cleansing and starting anew. Replacing dead plant materials with new flower beds and vegetable gardens speaks volumes to my heart and gives me a renewed positive outlook for a fresh start. "Out with the old...and in with the new".

For many local residents, this season brings with it a long list of gardening tasks, not the least of which is tilling the soil and adding fertilizers to enhance the growth of fresh plantings. There are numerous products in today's market that are specifically designed for the purpose of enriching the soil or killing the weeds and encouraging new plant growth. That is all good, however most commercial grade products contain additives that may be great for certain plants, but could have a detrimental effect on the health of wildlife and domestic pets, not to mention long term effects they may have on the environment. In fact, most of the gardening products likely to be found in our local nurseries and department stores are full of toxic chemicals and synthetic ingredients that can cause major damage to the health of the human as well. (But, that's a subject for someone else's article!)

If your pets are like mine, they love to explore the great outdoors. To them, the back yard is their playground; a well-prized, well-protected personal possession of their very own! And why not? They deserve it, right? My bloodhound could sleep all day if uninterrupted, but the minute she senses another creature lurking about in "her" yard, she springs to life in an instant, and leaps into action to chase whatever it is she thinks might be infringing on her territory. When Tater is not on "back-yard border patrol", her other favorite activity is foraging for avocados, or any other potential eatable she might find half buried in the dirt in her back yard, and let me just say that with a nose like hers, she leaves no stone unturned! That is the main reason why I am very selective when it comes to the yard and garden products I use. Don't get me wrong, my intention is not to over-dramatize a simple seasonal task such as home gardening. I just want to emphasize the importance of taking great care when using potentially toxic products that your pet (or child, for that matter) might come into contact with. Take the time to read all of the instructions on the package, particularly notes regarding proper use and storage of the product, and commit to taking necessary measures to prevent accidental poisoning. It's just a matter of being aware and being very careful...basically, be a responsible consumer and pet owner. How hard is that?

Sometimes accidents do happen, as we all well know. If your pet should gain access to toxic substances that can cause damage to their health, it is important to recognize the symptoms and take immediate action to remediate the situation. Educate yourself on what to watch for. There are several websites on-line that offer important information about pet poisoning, including symptoms to look for, how to best be prepared should such an unfortunate scenario take place, and important information that the vet will need in order to treat your pet as promptly as possible. Always have your veterinarian's phone number close to the phone. Prompt response and preparedness is paramount when it comes to pet poisoning. Time is of the essence, and the quicker you get a poisoned pet treated the better. Enjoy the spring season and the inspiration that it brings, but don't forget to protect your beloved furry four-legged friends who so depend on you to provide them with a safe and healthy environment!

An experiment being billed as the largest of its kind on the Internet is being slated to run on Wednesday June 8, 2011 and will be aiming at no less a lofty goal than changing the way billions of internet-enabled devices will communicate with each other in the future.

The main reason for this test is the simple fact that the internet as we know has truly outgrown itself. IPv4, or Internet Protocol version 4, is the current protocol of choice and by design it support slightly more than 4.3 billion unique addresses and while this was considered more than enough address space in the earlier days of the internet, these days the internet engineers are scrambling about looking for a solution to the problem of "IPv4 address exhaustion." IPv6, which support virtually an unlimited number of devices, is the solution of choice and it will be put to the test on June 8th as hundreds of websites serve up the IPv6 version of their pages, alongside the regular IPv4 version, in order to test the load in real time. Some of the internet's biggest players (including Google, Facebook, Yahoo and Microsoft) and up to 300 corporations, universities and government agencies will be participating in the US and around the world.

The sponsors of IPv6 Day are hoping that this high-profile event will hasten widespread adoption of the new protocol and will also be looking for unforeseen technical challenges and solve them before widespread adoption of the new protocol. One major stumbling block for IPv6 deployment is the fact that it's not backwardcompatible with IPv4. This means that website operators world-wide will have to upgrade their network equipment and software in order to support IPv6 traffic.

As technology innovators and providers supply the marketplace with more advanced technology, and more of it comes out of the box IPv6-enabled, widespread IPv6 adoption will be happening sooner or later and everyone involved pretty much knows it at this point.

SO GLAD I'M NOT YOUNG ANYMORE!

KATIE Tse .....This and That

Youth is a wonderful thing. The young are mostly healthy, beautiful, and, in middle and upper class America, blissfully unacquainted with the harsh realities diminishing metabolism. Youth involves rites of page involves rites of passage. Kids learn to drive. Girls get training bras; boys' voices go through a crackling journey to manly tones. Everyone needs to use deodorant, contrary to the belief that "some people don't sweat every day." And usually somewhere in there is a "formal dance." Stopped in traffic by the Arboretum the other day, I noticed a fashion shoot taking place on a grassy knoll. Five women, in thigh-high halter-top dresses, posed as the photographer fired off shots in rapid succession. Apparently finished, the group headed toward a group of young men in suits and tuxedos. As the women awkwardly stepped into a stretch Hummer it dawned on me. "Holy rhinestones, Batman!" That's not a fashion a shoot - that's someone's prom! It goes without saying that proms have changed over the years. My mom enjoys telling how she fooled her date (a well known prankster) by descending the stairs in a dumpy dark turquoise taffeta dress and her Stouffer's waitress shoes (think the Queen Mum). She and her dad got a big laugh after he snapped a picture of the boy's horrified face. She then changed into her real dress. Yes, times have changed.

There are some things I regret about my youth. I wish I put more effort into my second language courses (although I doubt it would've helped), and I suppose it might've been good to attempt a sport. But one thing I sure don't regret is not going to prom! I know that sounds bitter and antisocial, but even after 10 years I can still say I don't think I missed anything.

In the same vein as class elections, prom seemed to be another means of social exclusion. Every detail of the night involved decisions about who was "in" and who was "out." Who's house do we meet up at? Who's riding in the [fill in the vehicle of choice]? Who's sitting at our table? There's only room for eight, so that eliminates [fill in the least-liked acquaintance]. It gave me a nervous ulcer just listening to it. In confirmation that prom was overrated, my friends without boyfriends all complained about their dates' behavior the next week at school. Heck, even some of the girls who had boyfriends complained! Of course, my alternate reason for nixing the prom was because I am cheap. I just couldn't rationalize the cost of the tickets, dress, etc. Even as an unemployed teenager, I had some concept of the value of money.

Besides all this, prom tends to bring out the craziness in people -administrators as well as students. Recently a boy in some Mid Western state created a large poster asking his crush to go to the prom with him -and she said 'yes!' Aww! But there was trouble in paradise when the villainous principal banned the boy from prom because his placement of the sign was against school rules. Several co-workers of mine were truly upset by the boy's plight. My little cold heart could care less, but I wasn't going to share that. In response to the national outcry against her decision, the principal finally reneged and allowed the young lovers to attend prom. It would be one thing if this were an isolated incident, but it seems every year there's some news story about a power-crazed administrator who concocts frivolous reasons for excluding students from prom. One girl was denied admission because she came without a date. As if it's not bad enough you can't get a date let alone the school broadcasting it! Like Maurice Chevalier crooned, "I'm glad I'm not young anymore!"

YOUR HEALTH MATTERS Today's Subject: BUGS AND MEN

Dr. John Talevich, D.C. has practiced in Sierra Madre for thirty years. His clinic, LifeWorks! Chiropractic, offers patient-specific approaches to the alleviation of pain and individually tailored wellness programs.

When Dr. Hans Selye developed the original theories describing stress responses in the human body, he coined the term "general adaptation syndrome." He observed three distinct changes taking place when long-term stress is experienced: the adrenal glands get larger as demand for adrenaline and cortisol increases; the digestive tract begins to ulcerate; finally, the immune system dries up. The longer and more severe the stress is, the more likely the body will default to this "fight/flight" behavior, ultimately burning the furniture to heat the house. The Bugs Have Gotten into the Act

In the March 2011 issue of "Brain, Behavior and Immunity," there is a study describing changes in the kind of bacteria found in the intestine when high levels of stress are present. Under normal circumstances (is there such a thing these days?) the bacteria in the gut contribute to healthy immune development, but these are diminished in the presence of stressrelated hormones such as cortisol. A simple way of putting it is "the gang's taking over the neighborhood."

Could We All Get Along?

While many bacteria are essential to the health of the body, some are not. If we keep in mind that the number of bacteria outnumber the cells in the body by ten to one, and are highly organized to the point that they manufacture chemicals acting like neurotransmitters, we need to cultivate an effective good neighbor policy! It could be argued that much of who we are is a result of the kinds of bugs living in us. Hmmm. Some Considerations

We know that, under stress, those with conditions such as Crohn's disease, irritable bowel syndrome and ulcerative colitis can feel worse. The new research may further explain why this is so. In order to offset the proliferation of harmful bacteria in the colon, a simple program of probiotics, plant-based digestive enzymes, and dietary changes can go a long way in shaping our body's response to stress. Your local health-minded practitioner, pharmacy and health food store can further enlighten you on this subject. Have a healthy week! Dr. John

ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS FOR LOWER-INCOME SENIORS

Dear Savvy Senior,

What kinds of programs are available to help low-income seniors with their Medicare costs and other expenses? My 81-year-old mother has gone through her savings and is having a tough time getting by on her Social Security benefits. What can you tell us? Worried Son

Dear Worried,

There are actually a variety of under-utilized ity costs, insurance, taxes and more. The average programs that can help lower-income seniors with their Medicare costs, grocery bills, utility expenses and more. Here's what you should know.

Medicare Savings Programs

For millions of seniors who are having a tough time paying their out-of-pocket healthcare costs, help is available through Medicare Savings Programs (MSPs). These are Medicaid-administered programs that pay Medicare Part B premiums deductibles. To qualify, her income must be under $1,246 per month (or $1,675 for a married couple), and her assets must be below $6,680 ($10,020 per couple) not including her house, items. To find out if she qualifies, or to apply, contact her local Medicaid office – call 800-633-4227 You can also call the National En Referral project at 866-674-6327. for contact information.

Extra Drug Help

If your mom is eligible for a MSP, she's also eligible for "Extra Help" in paying her Medicare prescription drug plan costs. If, however, she's not eligible she can still get Extra Help if her annual income is below $16,335 ($22,065 for a married couple living together), and her cash assets are under $12,640 ($25,260 for married couples) excluding her home and vehicle. For more information, call Social Security at 800-772-1213 or see www.ssa.gov/prescriptionhelp.

Food Assistance

In addition to the Medicare programs, your mom may also be able to get some help with her grocery bills. Food assistance programs like SNAP (Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program) are available to seniors, age 60 and older, with cash assets under $3,000, and a "net income" below $903 per month ($1,215 for a family of two). Net income is figured by taking your mom's gross income minus allowable deductions like medical expenses, rent or mortgage payments, util-monthly SNAP benefit is currently around $101 per person. To find out if your mom qualifies, use the SNAP pre-screening tool at www.snap-step1. usda.gov or contact her local SNAP office - call 800-221-5689 for contact information.

Utility Assistance

There are also resources available that can help low-income seniors reduce their utility bills. The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, and depending on your mom's finances may even pick up the tab on her Medicare copayments and organization help millions of Americans each year with their home heating and cooling costs. To search for help go to energynear.org, a web portal that provides information on all energy assistance programs in each state, along with qualivehicle, burial fund, furniture or other household fication details, how to apply and who to contact. You can also call the National Energy Assistance

Supplemental Income

Another program to check into is SSI or Supplemental Security Income. Administered by the Social Security Administration, SSI provides monthly payments to very low income seniors (age 65 and older), as well as to those who are blind and disabled. To learn more or find out if she's eligible, visit www.ssa.gov/ssi or call 800-772-1213.

Savvy Tip: To search for other assistance programs go to benefitscheckup.org, a comprehensive web service developed by the National Council on Aging, that contains a database of more than 2,000 federal, state and local programs that can help seniors in need. The site will help you locate programs that your mom may be eligible for and will show you how to apply. This service is only available online.

Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior.org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today show and author of "The Savvy Senior" book.

One Of A Kind: Featuring unique homes and gardens and the people whoe create them. Story By Chris Bertrand Photos clly, ourtesy of Terra Bella 1908 Craftsman Style... Sensitively Renovated for 21st Century Living

1908 Craftsman Style... Sensitively Renovated for 21st Century Living

The proud owners of this 1908 Craftsman have lovingly spent the last two decades stripping away the wayward remodels of the 60's and 70's, restoring this 4 BR 3 BA home to its beautiful roots. They ruefully recollect the huge pile of ugly blue carpet that was immediately ripped out and piled at the street when the restoration began.

Along the way, they researched and added amazing period sensitive accoutrements, inspired by the Gamble House and other significant Craftsman homes, plus components to complement modern, 21st century living.

The custom, Craftsman style kitchen, handcrafted front door, leaded glass, living room fireplace with built-ins, amazing bedroom suites and much more, blend current artisan craftsmanship with century old, vintage features like the dining room breakfront and wainscoting, wonderful window seats, hardwood floors, molding, etc.

As one approaches the home, the front porch, a well-loved outdoor living space with ample room for relaxation and even a porch swing, speaks volumes about the home's welcoming personality. The front door, handcrafted for the current owners, is complemented by custom designed leaded glass surrounds, which match the dining room breakfront.

Inside, the eye is immediately drawn to the living room's fireplace wall. The fireplace was beautifully tiled in the remodel and features a mahogany mantle, flanked by built-in seating with footrests, and complemented by a white on white beamed ceiling and the expansive use of hardwood flooring, which ties the rooms together architecturally.

The formal dining room is generous, and features a built-in breakfront for storage and display, high wainscoting, dual French doors opening to the cozy den, plus one of several large window seats that provide additional storage beneath.

The family room, to the left of the foyer, offers a vintage, brick-faced faux fireplace, built-ins for books and display, stained wainscot paneling and a large, original picture window.

The kitchen's amazing oak and glass cabinetry provides extensive storage and display capability, including hideaway laundry facilities, a center island with gas cooktop, a built-in casual dining area, cabinet front Sub-Zero refrigerator-freezer.

Upstairs, another window seat provides a delicious, view-oriented respite from the bustle of life, at the staircase's landing. Amid sumptuous Craftsman ambiance, the master and second bedroom include dramatic vaulted ceilings, windowfront desk niches, a generous walk-in closet and built-in storage space, ceiling fans and more. BR #2 shares a connecting bath with BR #3, which overlooks the lush yard and pool.

The master suite also boasts a fabulous builtin headboard reflecting Craftsman influence, plus a beautiful private bath with plate glass shower, the cooling shade of mature, overarching trees. deep soaking tub and dual sinks with mahogany counters.

In the back yard a wisteria covered patio bridges the indoor to outdoor living spaces, providing filtered shade for the kitchen and den, as well as a delightful venue from which to enjoy the pool, spa and yard. After dark, the night lit back yard and entertaining.

Attached to the two car garage, the pool changing room and equipment room may offer reconfiguration options if the buyer desires an outdoor office or workspace.

This block, one of the prettiest in highly desirable South Pasadena, is movie-perfect with Though the yard is low maintenance and very manageable, the homesite benefits from its location backing to homes with about 300' deep lots, creating a private "greenbelt" enjoyed at the

They say a picture is worth a thousand words, but in real estate, a picture could be worth a thousand dollars (or more). Most agents aren't photography professionals, but there is an understanding that better photos get listings more attention, and ultimately, a higher selling price. The absolutely best photos are taken not with "point and click" cameras, but with SLR (single-lens-reflex) cameras. Without getting too technical, just know that SLR cameras give the photographer more control and produce higher quality images.

While an SLR camera costs more than your average point-and-click shooter, consider that quality photos sold for anywhere between $934

The beetles are attracted to the color, as well as a scented lure used to bait the traps. In the spring, EABs fly around, nibble on ash tree leaves and look for a mate. If one lands on a purple trap, it will get stuck in the glue. But don't worry, purple this is a device traps pose no risk to the trees—or humans, pets

> Purple traps do not draw the beetle to an area rather, they help detect it if it is already present.

What You Can Do

You can play a role in stopping the spread of EAB and destruction of ash trees. Start by talking to your friends and family about the serious threat this beetle poses to America's ash trees. discovery in 2002, this beetle has killed tens of Understand that the beetle typically doesn't move millions of ash trees and threatens to kill millions far on its own. Even though better photos attract more online attention, only about 15% of listings make use of the superior technology. Obviously, high-end listings stand to reap the greatest benefits, so if you've got a million dollar home, why would you skimp on such an important facet of marketing it?

However, there is a caveat: the study found that homes listed under $300,000 didn't see any real difference in sales price with the finer photos, so realistic and competitive pricing a recent study found that listings with high is the most effective marketing tool in those

NEW LAW REQUIRES CARBON MONOXIDE DETECTORS IN HOMES

Sacramento - Starting July 1, 2011 them to install a carbon monoxide new legislation will go into effect requiring homeowners to install carbon monoxide detectors in every California home; a move CAL FIRE officials say will save lives. "Carbon monoxide is a silent killer, each year claiming the lives of an average of 480 people," said Acting State Fire Marshal Tonya Hoover. "And sending more than 20,000 people to emergency rooms across the nation."

Carbon monoxide (CO) is a colorless, odorless gas that is produced from heaters, fireplaces, furnaces and many types of appliances and cooking devices. The best way for homeowners to stay protected from CO is to have a carbon monoxide detector installed on every floor and outside each sleeping area. A recent study found that nearly nine in 10 California households did not have a CO detector. "Having a CO detector is a small investment that really can help save your life and Hoover.
