-Altadena-

As summer begins, the Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) received word this week that it was reconstruction at Sierra Madre Middle School located at 160 N. Canon, Sierra Madre. Funding for the project comes from the passage of the 2008 Measure TT Bond Measure.

At passage, most of the PUSD campuses were nearly 50-75 years old, including Sierra Madre Middle School, which was built in the 1960's. The 14.73 acre site currently houses only 334 6th, 7th and 8th grade students, but the completed school will have capacity for 1289 students, according to the district's Measure TT website, www. MeasureTT.org.

Garrett Newsom, administrator for the middle school (upper campus)

The middle school functioned in this configuration during the 2010-11 school year and will operate this way for about two more years, during the construction phase which is about to begin.

> In summer 2010, according to Newsom, many of the structures and playfields were razed, and the construction site was rough graded and fenced. Temporary classrooms, given the name "bungalows" instead of portables, were assembled in a "south village" for the 6th and 7th graders, who do not mix academically with 8th graders.

HAPPY JULY 4TH!

PETS & THE 4th

The most memorable Fourth of July celebrations often involve water, sun, noise, food, and lots of family fun. While the family dog loves a party just like we do, our Fourth of July celebrations are rife with dangers for our four-legged friends. Abandoned alcoholic beverages, stray paper plates decorated with delicious bits of tasty treats, loose packs of matches, lighter fluid at eye level, and mysterious squishy tubes of sunscreen are all temptations for the curious

For a trouble-free time, a little planning ahead will hopefully stave off the worst kind of endings, such as chasing down Rover through your best friend's neighborhood, screaming in panic, clutching a towel around last year's bikini. Here are some suggestions for a safe and fun holiday with your four-pawed friends.

- For parties at home, keep your dog away from items like glow sticks and citronella candles, and busy with some special or favorite
- Keep your pooch away from forgotten plates of food and drinks. Alcohol, grapes and raisins, macadamia nuts, chocolate, and onions are especially dangerous.
- For Fourth of July outings, plan ahead and bring a fresh supply of water and a doggie
- Never leave your dog in a hot car.
- and doors and loud, startling noises from fireworks, intakes at animal shelters spike during the Fourth of July weekend. Whether you are at home or away, make sure your pet is microchipped and wears an ID tag with a current phone number at all times.

- If your dog is fearful of fireworks, speak with your vet for a recommendation for a mild sedative. Trembling, pacing, and heavy panting are all signs your dog is stressed.
- Keeping your dog inside with soothing Unfortunately, due to open gates music playing during fireworks can help him feel safe and secure.

To help homeless pets who get lost over this July 4th weekend and aren't lucky enough to be reclaimed by their owners, sadly all-too-frequent reality, United Hope for Animals, a Sierra Madrebased animal rescue, will be holding Glamour Shot Day at the Baldwin Park shelter on Saturday, July 9 from 9 am-2

If you'd like to lend a hand while volunteers photograph, video, and spend quality one-on-one time with some homeless dogs and cats, contact laurak@hope4animals.

FREEDOM IN A THOUGHT!

Some of the most onerous chains to bind the human species are confined to that of the mind. An idea or lack there of can enslave a person with a strength unknown to the strongest of chains. As we take the time to set aside a day to march in our parades and become mesmerized in the beauty of exploding fireworks. It is right and proper on this day, The Fourth of July, that we celebrate the gift of an idea.

A masterpiece is said to never fatigue the senses. It speaks to successive generations in a fresh and enduring spirit, and many of the greatest masterpieces of the world contain the simplest grains of truth or expression, and so declares our Declaration of Independence.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

The Declaration of Independence is not only the espousal of a separation from another country it is a Declaration to our own Senses. It is a lasting reminder of God. A reminder, that all citizens of the world are bestowed with rights from a Heavenly Ruler, and no nation, can lawfully dissolve those Heavenly Gifts. The words contained within the Declaration of Independence fasten to our mind without an act of force and are easily recalled after a single reading. The great and lasting beauty of the thirty-five-word passage is discovered in the poetic simplicity of the language and the foundation of the idea. The recital of which never withers under repeated readings, instead, reinforcing the strength of character

When Thomas Jefferson completed the thought in the Declaration of Independence he knew the world would be changed. He called the document a "little ball of liberty." Confident there was a permanency in the expression of its thought. The man with greatest imagination in America; imagined the idea in the Declaration freeing minds of every continent. So, we as Americans find ourselves, the once simplest of acorns having grown into the largest of oaks.

Being nourished in the lasting power of a masterpiece.

Happy Fourth of July. CraigHakola@aol.com

A Word From Our Publisher & Editor:

SUSAN HENDERSON

Well, it's America's Birthday and hopefully we are getting wiser as we get older right? I don't think so. Right this country is in a mess. I am not speaking of our economy (which is in tough shape), but rather our inability to stop acting so sophomorically when it comes to everything else in our society. I wonder what the

be like in a hundred years when teachers are reviewing this our history? What will students think when they consider:

We make celebrities out of people who abuse the boundaries of everything regardless of who gets

We ignore the inevitable consequences of hateful rhetoric for the sake of ratings and money.

We worry about sports franchises losing millions of dollars because fat cat owners and players fight over getting more money and ignore the huge number of people they have put out of work?

What will they think when they learn that we constantly allow legislators to hold innocent people hostage just to prove a point with political bickering and posturing just for the sake of being

We waste millions on political candidates and yet won't fund our educational institutions.

AND WE TURNED OUR NOSES UP?

And what will they say when the look at how many of us do not vote or vote based upon whatever propaganda has been spoon fed to us, rather on the real abilities of the candidates.

No, I don't think we are getting wiser and I don't think we are painting a pretty picture for the

While many of us looked down our noses at what the Romans and other ancient societies did for entertainment or the means used to rule themselves, (barbaric - hideous behavior we cried), just what in the hell do you think posterity is going to say about us?

It's the country's birthday and the best present that we could ever give ourselves would be to immediately start taking responsibility for what is happening in the U.S.A. We have to get serious. Next year we have a Presidential Election and from the looks of things its going to be another vear of trash and burn campaigning. We will get lots noise and very little substantive conversation about exactly what they will do to make things better. And that's because we, the American public allow it.

Yes, I'm afraid that when future generations study our history they won't be looking down their noses at us, they will be on the floor laughing.....or crying depending on what we leave behind.

RESCUE LOG SIERRA MADRE SEARCH AND RESCUE

During the month of June, Sierra Madre Search and Rescue (SMSR) responded to 11 calls for assistance, including six in a single weekend.

Missing Hikers, Monrovia Canyon Park: The Team was notified that the Monrovia Police Department was investigating a report of two hikers missing overnight in Monrovia Canyon Park. SMSR sent several search teams into the field and discovered the subjects' footprints. Team members tracked the footprints to the subjects, who were in good condition.

Fall Victim, Sturtevant Falls: SMSR responded to a report of a fall victim at Sturtevant Falls near Chantry Flat. The patient was treated by paramedics from the Sierra Madre Fire Department and the L.A. County Fire Department in addition to EMT-certified SMSR personnel. The Team evacuated the patient via litter wheel-out to an ambulance at Chantry Flat.

Missing Hiker, Yosemite National Park: Yosemite National Park Search and Rescue requested the assistance of SMSR in the search for a missing hiker. SMSR team members departed Station 108 in the evening and drove through the night to be on hand for the following morning's search. Team members were inserted by helicopter to search a remote section of the park and then airlifted out. The hiker has not yet been found.

Other SMSR News and Notes:

In June the latest class of SMSR probationary members completed their multi-day final field test and graduated to full member status, earning the right to wear the blue Mountain Rescue Association patch. Of nine prospective members who began the training last year, only four successfully completed the arduous process.

New member training for SMSR members lasts 18 months and represents a serious commitment of time and effort. Probationary members must attend a training class one night per week, two team trainings per month, and a monthly team meeting. After an initial six-month training period they are expected to participate in field operations as well. Outside of official Team activities, trainees spend much of their "free" time practicing and perfecting the skills they learn in class. Between scheduled trainings, operations, and practice, it is not uncommon for probationary members to devote 20 hours a week to the Team.

The time commitment is immense but necessary to learn what it takes to function as an SMSR team member, including high-angle rescue, land navigation, radio operations, man-tracking, patient packaging, snow and alpine travel, helicopter operations, and swiftwater rescue. All these skills must be performed in extremes of heat and cold, at any time of the day or night. As the team motto says: "Anywhere in the wilderness that someone needs help..."

After a short break, new team members begin the next phase of their training: three months of night school to earn their EMT certifications, a requirement for all Team members.

The commitment to joining the team is a financial one as well. Probationary members must purchase much of their personal equipment themselves, spending on average $1,000-2,000 dollars during their first year with the Team.

SMSR is currently recruiting for its next probationary members' class. The only requirements for consideration are that candidates live within 20 minutes of Sierra Madre, be 25 to 55 years of age, and be physically fit and comfortable in the outdoors. And, of course, that they have a desire to work hard to help others. Visit the Team's website for application information.

For 60 years the all-volunteer Sierra Madre Search and Rescue team has been responding to calls for help in the local mountains and beyond. Funded entirely by private donations, SMSR provides a range of public programs on wilderness safety in addition to its search and rescue activities. The Team never charges for any of its services.

City Cuts $2 Million From Fire Depart-

By Dean Lee

The city council voted, during a special meeting Monday night, to eliminate $2 million from the city's $40 million fire department budget which includes having to take Station #39 out of service for a period of six months for unrelated safety issues. The closure will save the city $886,303.

"This solution allows us to keep intact the city policy of four firefighters on an engine or truck," Councilmember Steve Madison said. "And to continue to have that policy implemented throughout the city fire stations."

Madison went on to explain other changes including civilianization of fire inspectors, converting one ambulance from an Advanced Life Support (ALS) to a Basic Life Support (BLS), defunding two positions —a Deputy Fire Marshal position for six months and Staff Assistant II position— and other contracts in medical insurance.

He said they struck a balance between the city and Fire Fighters Association.

The city's public safety committee had looked at reducing a long standing policy of staffing four persons per fire company to three.

City Manager Michael Beck said they were also looking at the future possibility of changing the entire ambulance fleet from ALS to BLS.

The conversion of one ambulance would save $180,000 over six months Beck

Fire Chief Dennis Downs said BLS treats injuries and

"It's the higher level but not a paramedic," he said. "They will be non-safety, non-fire fighter people but still under the control of the fire department, hired by the fire department at a lesser pay and benefits."

Currently, the department also uses sworn firefighters to perform fire inspections by switching to trained civilians, similar to Building Inspectors, Beck said the city would save $46,400 per position.

Station #39, Downs said, was vacated in April after a citywide report on earthquake building safety deemed the station a hazard. He said they have looked at more than 300 temporary sites although added that a temporary station won't open for at least five months.

The cuts were part of the city's overall 2012 Operating Budget, unanimously approved Monday night by the council, which also included transferring $15.4 million from the Pasadena Water and Power fund to the $215 million general fund.

THE FIRST GRADUATION OF ICA

By Joan Schmidt

Something really exciting and special happened at Annunciation Church last Friday at 4apm. A Baccalaureate Mass and Commencement Exercises were held for 39 very excited and elated students. "Wow, we ARE the FIRST graduates of the new school model." "Aren't we very Special?" These were just a few of the comments I heard!

This graduation was the FIRST ever for "ICA", Immaculate Conception-Annunciation School. This school merger came as a result of the economy and a low enrollment for both Immaculate Conception School in Monrovia and Annunciation School in Arcadia. The merger was not an easy daecision and was not done overnight. First there was a special committee appointed to do a complete study of what the option were for these two schools. The committee looked at other schools and saw that mergers worked.

This past year saw the evolvement of the new school model, Immaculate Conception-Annunciation, dubbed, "ICA". On the IC campus were grades K-4. The middle school campus at Annunciation housed grades 5-8. Did this plan work? Could two schools merge and students come together to learn and work as "ONE"? Yes it

As a substitute teacher this past year, I saw the results firsthand. Sure, there were a few glitches, but overall improvement. There now was a science lab, more field trips which gave students new experiences and participation in both the Monrovia District Spelling Bee and Archdiocesan Decathlon.

The FIRST Graduation and Mass of the new ICA School were beautiful. The Valedictorian was Carly Cheap. Academic Awards were presented in the following areas: Literature, Language Arts, Religion, Beatitudes, Mathematics, Science, Spelling, and Social Studies. Twelve muchdesrving students were awarded Gold Chords (First Honors). And sixteen students received Blue Chords (Second Honors)! That's a great number when you consider there were 39 graduates! Congratulations to the FIRST-EVER graduating class of Immaculate=Conception-Annunciation School, dubbed "ICA"! Well done, "Grizzles"!

sane. When things go wrong with fireworks, they typically go very wrong, very fast. Fireworks are particularly attractive to children. If children are present to watch, they may be tempted to touch. Children can be badly hurt in the blink of an eye if they are close to fireworks, as they inevitably are at home fireworks displays.

On July 4th alone, reported fireworks fires are roughly twice as numerous as the daily average of all types of reported fires combined. On July 4th, when fireworks use is at its peak, fireworks Arcadia Municipal Code (3124.8) prohibits account for more than half of all reported fires the use, light, fire, discharge, explode, set off, sell, and are a leading cause of related property display for sale, possess, store, or manufacture loss. However, because most people encounter fireworks once a year, many do not realize how great the threat of personal injury or property

According the National Fire Protection "Safe and Sane" fireworks are neither safe nor Agency, in 2009, fireworks caused an estimated 18,000 reported fires; including 1,300 total structure fires, 400 vehicle fires, and 16,300 outside and other fires. These fires resulted in 30 civilian injuries and $38 million in direct property damage. The risk of fireworks injury was highest for children ages 10-14, with more than twice the risk for the general population.

A VERY SPECIAL YOUNG MAN ATTAINS SCOUTS' HIGHEST HONOR

By Joan Schmidt Clayton

Annunciation Church Hall, Arcadia, was the site, this past Saturday of Steven Andrew Taylor's Eagle Scout Court of Honor. Just a few weeks ago, my husband Bob and I had attended his graduation party from Loyola High School, where he did quite well. In the fall, Steven is off to Cal Poly Pomona to major in Civil Engineering, which attests to his academic achievements.

I have known Steven for many years. His family are parishioners at Annunciation and I taught him in 6th grade all subjects and in 7th and 8th grade after our school departmentalized. Steven is a hard- working youth, generous with his time and willing to help others. Although he was in High School, he came back to our elementary school on a Saturday morning and spent three hours with me! Steven helped supervise a group of youths who were making Christmas cards for Veterans. We had so much fun visiting and working with these youths!

The Court of Honor began with a Welcome by David Bond, Scoutmaster for Troop #140. The Presentation of Colors was by Jason Richardson, Zackary Campos, Mathew Dela Paz, and Paul and followed by Father Eugene Herbert's Invocation. David Mayard, from the San Gabriel Valley Council BSA did the Eagle Scout Charge. Special presentations were made by Mayor Mary Anne Lutz and Steve Baker, representing the City of of the City of Duarte and Steven's sponsor for the project.

For those who don't realize- there is A LOT involved in achieving the Eagle award. Several years ago, when I wrote for newspapers, I found out. It is a process that can cover a long period of time. There are several badges that MUST be earned and then a special project chosen. Steven chose to improve an area outside the YMCA Building in Monrovia. It had been a patio, but was so overgrown with weeds. Members of Steven's scout troop #140 and his family were involved in the project. Tzeitel was the supervisor. First the area was cleared. Then a bench was sanded down and repainted. Then new plants purchased and put in. Lastly arrangements were made for a watering system. What an improvement! It's an area that even senior citizens enjoy.

Congratulations to Steven, Troop Leader Robert Drust. Jason lead the Pledge of Allegiance, David Bond and his family for doing something so special for the community to enjoy. I would like to personally thank Steve Baker, Mary Anne Lutz and Tzeitel for coming to Steven's Court of Honor and making it so special. There were many congratulator letters and certificates including Monrovia and Tzeitel Paras Caracci, the Mayor ones from Supervisor Mike Antonovich and Congressman Davis Dreier. Both of these fine men always come through for special occasions. And a special "Thank You" Tzeitel, a "Bundle of Energy" for agreeing to be the supervisor of the special project! To Steven's parents, "Thank you for being wonderful caring parents who support and encourage both Steven and his sister Alicia in academics and all worthwhile activities." Steven is a "Chip off the Block" as his dad Mike also achieved Scout's highest honor! And of course, Steven, CONGRATULATIONS! God bless you and I wish you success and happiness in the

Monrovia Police Blotter

During the last six-day period, the Police Department handled 541 service events, resulting in 77 investigations. Following are the last week's highlighted issues and events:

National Night Out Against Crime

On Tuesday, August 2, neighborhoods throughout Monrovia have been invited to join forces with more than 34 million people from thousands of communities nationwide who will be participating in the Annual National Night Out Against Crime. This event is designed to: 1) Heighten crime and drug prevention awareness; 2) Generate support and participation in local anticrime efforts; 3) Strengthen neighborhood spirit and police/community relations; and 4) Send a message to criminals, letting them know that our neighborhoods are organized and are fighting back. This event will also kick off the start of our new "Keep Kids Alive Drive 25" residential speeding traffic safety campaign.

Structure Failure

On June 23 at 4:45 p.m., Police were called to the Vons Pavilion's store in the 100 block of West Foothill regarding a structure failure. A loud bang was heard and the roof began to collapse. The Police and Fire Departments responded and helped to evacuate the building. There were no injuries. The air conditioning unit had a water leak and had weakened the supports. The building recently had solar panels installed on the roof, adding weight.

Attempt Robbery - Suspect Arrested

On June 24 at 8 p.m., Police received a call from a female victim who reported that a male subject had tried to take her purse by force in the 700 block of East Huntington. The suspect failed and fled the area out of sight. The suspect was seen on video surveillance approaching the victim and trying to take her purse. The video provided a good image of the suspect, which was given to officers. During the investigation, an officer located a subject matching the description, and the victim and a witness positively identified the suspect. He was arrested, and during a subsequent interview, admitted to the

Chemical Extraction / Chemical Synthesis of a Controlled Substance

On June 24 at 8:45 p.m., the Fire Department was dispatched to an apartment complex in the 700 block of West Foothill regarding a burn victim. When they arrived, they were told a male and female were burned while cooking in the kitchen, but there was no evidence to support their statements, the Firemen requested Police. The burn victims had already been transported to a hospital when officers arrived. During the investigation, officers discovered what initially appeared to be a pipe bomb. Further examination and questioning of the male victim revealed the item was not a pipe bomb, but a homemade plastic device used to extract a chemical from marijuana. The male and back. The investigation is continuing. Charges will be filed with the District Attorney's office.

JON R. GUNDRY CHOSEN AS NEW PUSD SUPERINTENDENT

The Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) Board of Education introduced Jon R. Gundry as the new Superintendent of Schools on Thursday. The public announcment was held at Altadena Elementary School following a unanimous vote of 7-0 earlier in the week.

Gundry, hails from the Los Angeles County Office of Education (LACOE) will replace Superintendent Edwin Diaz, who retired June 30th.

"Our four-month search for a new leader to continue the momentum of accelerating student achievement is at a close," said Board President Renatta Cooper. "Jon is an accomplished leader who can focus on moving forward and working together for our children's future, so that all children learn and our students are prepared for college and careers."As the interim superintendent of the since 2010, chief executive officer of LACOE and secretary of the County Board of Education, Mr. Gundry was responsible for ensuring the financial and academic stability of 80 school districts that serve more than two million preschool and school-age children, and for overseeing $16 billion in school district funding and a staff of nearly 4,000. He was appointed interim superintendent by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors following the retirement of Darline P. Robles last summer. Previously as deputy superintendent, he had been a vital member of LACOE's Executive Cabinet, developing policy and overseeing strategic projects and initiatives.

"I am honored to be selected to lead this community in making further academic progress and addressing the challenges its students and families face," said Mr. Gundry. "I look forward to working with families and members of the communities to inspire and prepare students for their future."

Prior to joining LACOE in February 2008, Mr. Gundry served in the Houston (Texas) Independent School District. His tenure there included 12 years as an administrator, ultimately serving as an executive principal overseeing 17 campuses

SUMMER READING CLUBS AND EVENTS FOR CHILDREN AND TEENS

"One World, Many Stories," is the theme for Sierra Madre Public Library's 2011 Summer Reading Club for Children. The program begins Monday, June 20, and runs through Saturday, August 13. Children of all ages are invited to go online or stop by the Children's Room any time on or after June 20 to register for this free, eight-week activity. Each registrant will receive a reading log, bookmark, and a theme-related book bag. Age-appropriate books, read at home, are recorded on the log, or online, and a prize awarded after the weekly reading requirement is completed.

Children may enter one of three reading divisions: "Discoverer," for our very youngest patrons, who are not yet able to read on their own; "Adventurer," for school-age readers in Grades 1-6, and Challenger, for children in Grades 2-6. Challenger is the most demanding division, in which 35 hours of reading must be completed in eight weeks.

You Are Here" is the theme for the Summer Reading Club for Teens, Grades 7 and up. Participants read eight books in eight weeks and earn prizes for every two books read.

Two family-friendly Summer Reading Club events are scheduled in July and August at the Library. "Cookie Einstein: The Cockapoo Math Whiz" will appear at on Monday, July 11 at 10:00 a.m. This former shelter dog will amaze young and old alike as she barks out the answers to math questions from the audience. "The Wonderful World of Stories and Songs," a fun, interactive show with puppets, music and storytelling, will take place on Monday, August 8 at 10:00 a.m. For more information, call

Miss Palmer's Third Grade ONCE UPON

SULVILLER

Miss Palmer's 3rd Grade Class, 31 talented and creative students, have published a book! It is called, "Miss Palmer's Third Grade: Once Upon A Wayside" and it includes the work of each of the students in her class. We will publish the book in its' entirety this summer, with 3-4 stories each week. The stories will not be edited, well maybe a few spelling corrections. They are all entertaining and original!

Inspired by the book series they read in class, The Wayside School Series by Louis Sachar, the children created their own episodes of life at Wayside. (Hint: Louis Sachar's Wayside School was supposed to be 30 classrooms, one story high; but by mistake it was built straight up 30 stories. That should give you some insight into the kind of stories you will read from Ms. Palmer's 3rd Grade Class!)

for two years. She was born and reared in Sierra Madre, played on the SM Girls Softball Team and was a Sierra Madre Rose Princess in 2000. This is a series of stories that will enlighten, inspire and keep you laughing S. Henderson/MVNews

Mrs. Gorf Comes Back

by Lily Cimino

One Day Maurecia and Todd were running down the stairs to recess. When they saw a strange shadow. They slowed down to get a closer look. They slowly turned the corner when they saw her.

They were looking straight at Mrs. Gorf walking up the stairs. They ran straight down and out to the playground to see Louis. They both started talking at the same time. "Stop", yelled Louis. "What's

At the same time the said, "We saw Mrs. Gorf!"

"That's not true", said Louis. "She left forever."

"No," said Marecia, "We saw Mrs. Gorf!"

Right as she said Mrs. Gorf the whole class crowded around.

"It's just your imagination", said Paul.

"No", replied Todd. "We're sure we saw her said Maurecia.

"It's not true. You think you saw her but you couldn't have", replied Joy.

It was hard for Todd. If he got through the day, it would be his first time ever.

"We'll prove it", shouted Todd.

The next day Maurecia and Todd were running up the stairs. Unfortunately, this time they did not

"See", said Louis. "She's not here!"

Both Maurecia and Todd knew she may not be here At the end of the day, Todd had survived on full day right now, but they had definitely seen her! They at school! were sure of it.

Wayside School: The Nightmare

all summer long!

Once upon a time Eric Bacon jumped off the highest roof at Wayside School. Everyone thought he was going to die, but no one knew he had a parachute on

As everyone looked up at Eric, he was coming down slowly into a hot lava volcano. Everyone screamed, "Eric Bacon, steer your parachute to the right or you ar going to be cooked alive and you won't taste good."

Mrs. Jewels said, "Let's call the cops."

Five minutes later the cops arrived and place a lot of pillows so Eric Bacon would have a soft landing.

The End!

TALKER

by Luke Vlcek

One peaceful morning in Mrs. Jewel's class, the classroom was quiet as everyone worked in their arithmetic books. All of a sudden, Mrs. Jewels yelled, "Todd! Go write you name on the black board under the word for Discipline for talking to DJ."

Todd was used to doing this because he wrote his name everyday on the board! In fact, he always had a check and a circle by his name too. In Mrs. Jewel's class this meant that you got sent home early on the Kindergarten bus.

Todd always went home on the Kindergarten buss. All he wanted was to make it through the day once to see what the class did after 12:00.

At 10:00, Todd got a check next to his name for talking to Maurecia. Todd was hoping not to get his name circled. He was curious about the afternoon activities.

Todd said, "Get it together, you can do it!"

Todd was dying of curiosity and wasn't sure he would make it through the day. He tried to relax and remain calm.

At 12:00, Todd still did not have his name circled. He was so happy. He started to jump up and down. So at 2:00 Jenny erased his name.

Hot Diggity Dog Happy 4th of July

Although the history of the Hot Dog goes back a long way, hot dogs are as American as apple pie. There is no certain etiology of the term hot dog, but two theories are the most prominent.

The popularity of the term hot dog is generally attributed to sports cartoonist T. A. "Tad" Dorgan, who caricatured German figures as dachshund dogs just after the turn of the 19th century. His talking sausage cartoons generally denigrated the cheap wieners sold at Coney Island, crassly suggesting they contained dogmeat. It was such bad publicity that in 1913, the Chamber of Commerce actually banned use of the term "hog dog" from signs on Coney Island. The term actually first appeared in print in the Oxford English Dictionary in 1900.

German Americans brought us weinerwurst, German for Vienna sausage, which eventually became shortened to wiener. Other German immigrants referred to smoked sausage as bundewurst, which is German for dog sausage. By the late 1920's, wienie roasts became the rage, with guests bringing their own hot dogs to roast over an open fire.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills

Credit for putting the hot dog into a warm bun and topping it with various condeiments goes to Harry Magely, catering director of New York City's hots! Get your red hots!"

Also credited for the idea of warm buns is Charles Feltman, of Feltman's Gardens in Coney Island amusement park.

Corn dogs were introduced in 1942 at the Texas State Fair, created by Texan Neil Fletcher.

THE SOLID GOLD CADILLAC

By Despina Tsiknas-Arzouman

This play is a comedy. And while there weren't a whole lot of outbursts of loud laughter, this play was wrought with humor. The Solid Gold Cadillac is about a corporate mega-conglomerate (General Products Corporation) whose "business as usual" tactics illustrate that when it comes to greed, such greedy business practices haven't changed in decades! Yep, and while this play was first performed in 1953, and fashion styles and trends are different now, it is clear that evolution of human nature hasn't budged. You'd think this story was ripped from today's headlines. The gentlemen seated to my left was chuckling and snickering at almost everything; while I, an altruist at heart, was on the verge of feeling outraged over every nuance of the sly humor. (I thought to myself: "hmmm, I wonder where that guy works?")

Anyhow, there we be, watching four greedy board of directors of the General

Products Corporation holding a shareholder's meeting, and who are on the verge of running a distinguished firm into the ground by looting the company in order to line their own pockets. Meanwhile, an unassuming young woman [Laura Partridge, played by Georgan George], who was recently widowed and inherited 10 shares of stock in General Products, attended that shareholder's meeting. But, when she began innocently questioning the board of directors machinations regarding how they were allocating the other company's funds, the board of directors started getting nervous. Initially, the board of directors thought Mrs. Partridge wouldn't be too much of a threat because when they learned she used to be an actress, was interested in astrology, and had a lucky number of 17, they figured she wouldn't be able to follow along or outwit them in their maneuverings. Nevertheless, they offered her a job to keep her quiet. But, Laura Partridge was determined to find a way to stop the corporate crooks from bleeding General Products dry. Will the larcenous bigwigs get their comeuppance? You bet they will. And so, a new cycle will begin. But, stay mindful: 'tis true that when anyone behind the theatre.

steps into a position of authority and 'power,' the test challenges of real honorability and morality do come a'knocking at honesty's door.

Including Georgan George who plays Laura Partridge, the cast also includes Kevin Allesee, Jill Bartlett, Michael Bruce, Tony Cicchetti, Aric Cushing, Jessica Fox, Sasha Golberg, Norman

Igar, Jeremy Mascia, and Kent Vaughan. And, while I am not familiar with Ken Salzman's previous directing credits ("Leading Ladies" and The Sensuous Senator"), I very much enjoyed how this play was done. Of course, I always love adding how fascinated I am with the stage settings at the Sierra Madre Playhouse. Every part of the stage was perfectly designed and utilized.

I think it would benefit everyone if they supported their local Sierra Madre Playhouse Theatre, as well as all the actors who work so hard at their craft. So I have to say: come'on folks, reserve your tickets today. It'll make you think, and laugh, and do you good to support your coction of solid songwriting, lush melodies and washed-out aesthetics. There's an innate charm and allure to this record. It's the ideal compilation to be playing while lying in one's futon on a hazy sunny day. Since that's the case, little work is required for one to soak up the tunes, "Worse For Wear" and "Hard To Break". Such beauty and blithe best describe the aforementioned songs. The Errant Charm will take you on a journey without ever realizing you were actually on one. It gently guides you to serenity. There are rarely any surprises with Vetiver, but they constantly deliver what you want and possibly need. However, tracks like "Ride Ride Ride" and the closer, "Soft Glass," slightly weave off the road a bit. Despite those minor calamities, you're still left with an accessible album that has considerable depth.

"It's Beyond Me", the lengthiest track from the album, starts things off in a promising fashion. It's definitely a suitable preview to the adventure you're about to embrace. However, it's the few sequential tracks that standout from the rest. As I previously mentioned, "Worse For Wear" and "Hard To Break" are dazzling in every way. These songs either symbolize relationships on the fade-out or receiving second chances. "Fog Emotion" is a leisurely sort of tune that has the can do these days.

Independence: The Struggle to Set America Free by John Ferling No event in American history was more pivotal or more furiously contested than Congress's decision to declare independence in July 1776. Even months after American blood had been shed at Lexington and Concord, many colonists remained loyal to Britain. John Adams, a leader of the effort, said bringing the fractious colonies together was like getting "thirteen clocks to strike at once." Independence takes readers from the cobblestones of Philadelphia into the halls of Parliament, where many sympathized with the Americans and furious debate erupted over how to deal with the rebellion. Independence is not only the story of how freedom was won, but how an empire was lost. At this remarkable moment in history, high stakes politics was intertwined with a profound debate about democracy, governance, and justice. John Ferling is professor emeritus of history at the State University of West Georgia and a leading authority on American Revolutionary history

Revolutionaries: A New History of the Invention of America by Jack Rakove

In the early 1770s, the men who invented America were living quiet, provincial lives in the rustic backwaters of the New World, devoted primarily to family and the private pursuit of wealth and happiness. None set out to become "revolutionary" by ambition, but when events in Boston escalated, they found themselves thrust into a crisis that moved from protest to war. In this remarkable book, Rakove shows how the private lives of these men were suddenly transformed into public careers, how Washington became a strategist, Franklin a pioneering cultural diplomat, Madison a sophisticated constitutional thinker, and Hamilton a brilliant policymaker. Rakove shakes off accepted notions of these men as godlike visionaries, focusing instead on the evolution of their ideas and the crystallizing of their purpose. We see the founders before they were fully formed leaders, as individuals whose lives were radically altered by the explosive events of the 1770's. They were ordinary men who became extraordinary. Spanning the two crucial decades of the country's birth, from 1773 to 1792, Revolutionaries uses little known stories of these famous (and not so famous) men to capture in the intensely creative period of the republic's founding. From the Boston Tea Party to the First Continental Congress, from Trenton to Valley Forge, from the ratification of the Constitution to the disputes that led to our two-party system, Rakove explores the competing views of politics, war, diplomacy, and society that shaped our nation. Revolutionaries is a majestic blend of narrative and intellectual history, a rare book that makes us think afresh about how the country came to be, and why the idea of America endures. Jack Rakove is the William Robertson Coe Professor of History and American Studies and a professor of political science at Stanford University and winner of the Pulitzer Prize in 1997.

Due to the high demand for her tutoring and education services, bookstore owner, Sally Morrison, is opening a new learning center here in Sierra Madre. Mindspring Education Center will cater to students (children and adults) interested in furthering their reading, writing, math, spelling, and comprehension skills. In addition, Sally offers assistance in study skills, homework, and test preparation. She also specializes in helping students with dyslexia and other learning difficulties. Those interested in summer sessions should contact Mindspring soon because space is limited.

As a result of this business expansion, Sally Morrison and Jeffrey Ingwalson, owners of Sierra Madre Books, will be closing the bookstore in June 2011. "We appreciate all the support we've received from our customers over the past few years, but are excited about our new venture. We look forward to continuing to be part of this community."

Gregattributes our loss in Vietnam to the fact "the the North Vietnamese commitment to defeating same goes for nations. us". But here's what really happened:

In 1968, Republican candidate Richard Nixon ran as having a "secret plan" to end the Vietnam war, and warned that Vice President Hubert Humphrey would simply continue Johnson's war policies. (Johnson had earlier decided not to seek reelection, and instead devote the remainder of his term to ending the war.)

As the election approached, Johnson made progress in arranging three-party peace talks in Paris between Hanoi, Saigon and Washington. Nixon realized continued war helped his chances among an electorate seeking change. But an end to the war brought by successful talks would boost the campaign of Democrat Humphrey. A Republican victory could best be assured by sabotaging the peace talks.

According to Don Fulsom, who covered both presidents for UPI, "When the phone was hung up after at least one of these Nixon lies, Nixon and his cohorts reportedly burst into loud and sustained laughter."

Other recordings document conversations between Johnson and Senate Republican leader Everett Dirksen, in which Johnson lays out what he knows; "They're contacting a foreign power in the middle of a war." Johnson suggests he might go public with the information, but instead asks Dirksen to contact Nixon and put an end to it; "They oughtn't be doing this. This is treason." Dirksen replies, "I know."

White House aide Richard Holbrooke later wrote that Nixon "massively, directly and covertly inalienable rights, among these are Life, Liberty, interfered in a major diplomatic negotiation . . . and the pursuit of Happiness." probably one of the most important negotiations in American diplomatic history."

In Greg's column on "lessons from Vietnam", those last six years apparently don't count.

As for my view on "human nature", I think great liberal, President Johnson, misunderstood most folks don't like to be told what to do. The

> Again, Vietnam serves as an example. A thousand years ago, Vietnamese repelled Kublai Khan and Mongol invaders. For centuries they fought off Chinese dynastic incursions. From the late-nineteenth century they resisted efforts by the French to turn their land into a plantation colony, fought off the Imperial Japanese Army, and then French colonial powers again after

The power of people defending their homeland overcame the most powerful militaries of the day, regardless of whatever slogans the invaders claimed as justification; whether spreading "Christianity" in the case of the nineteenthcentury French, or "freedom and democracy" for the Americans.

There will always be those who'll side with the Nixon had a good intelligence source in Henry invaders and occupying powers, if they see some personal benefit for themselves. Unfortunately, it's been our alliances with these people that have doomed foreign adventures from the start.

Those who see "democracy and freedom" as being achieved through fear and military intimidation display not just an ignorance of "human nature", but of history. FOURTH OF JULY

THOMAS Sowell

The Fourth of July may be just a holiday for managing editor, Richard fireworks to some people. But it was a momentous Stengel, manages to day for the history of this country and the history

Not only did July 4, 1776 mark American independence from England, it marked a radically different kind of government from the first, pointing out in big governments that prevailed around the world at letters that those who the time -- and the kinds of governments that had prevailed for thousands of years before.

The American Revolution was not simply a rebellion against the King of England, it was a rebellion against being ruled by kings in general. That is why the opening salvo of the American Revolution was called "the shot heard round the Autocratic rulers and their subjects heard that shot -- and things that had not been questioned for millennia were now open to challenge. As the generations went by, more and more autocratic governments around the world proved unable to meet that challenge.

Some clever people today ask whether the United States has really been "exceptional." You couldn't be more exceptional in the 18th century than to create your fundamental document -- the Constitution of the United States -- by opening with the momentous words, "We the people..."

Those three words were a slap in the face to those who thought themselves entitled to rule, and who regarded the people as if they were simply human livestock, destined to be herded and shepherded by their betters. Indeed, to this very day, elites who think that way -- and that includes many among the intelligentsia, as well as political messiahs -- find the Constitution of the United States a real pain because it stands in the way of their imposing their will and their presumptions on the rest of us.

More than a hundred years ago, so-called "Progressives" began a campaign to undermine the Constitution's strict limitations on government, which stood in the way of selfanointed political crusaders imposing their grand schemes on all the rest of us. That effort to discredit the Constitution continues to this day, and the arguments haven't really changed much in a hundred years.

The cover story in the July 4th issue of Time magazine is a classic example of this arrogance. It asks of the Constitution: "Does it still matter?" A long and rambling essay by Time magazine's create a toxic blend of the irrelevant and the erroneous.

The irrelevant comes wrote the Constitution "did not know about" all sorts of things in the world today, including airplanes, television, computers and DNA. This may seem like a clever new gambit but, like many clever new gambits, it is a rehash of arguments made long ago. Back in 1908, Woodrow Wilson said, "When the Constitution was framed there were no railways, there was no telegraph, there was no telephone,"

In Mr. Stengel's rehash of this argument, he declares: "People on the right and left constantly ask what the framers would say about some event that is happening today."

Maybe that kind of talk goes on where he hangs out. But most people have enough common sense to know that a constitution does not exist to micro-manage particular "events" or express opinions about the passing scene.

A constitution exists to create a framework for government -- and the Constitution of the United States tries to keep the government inside that framework.

From the irrelevant to the erroneous is a short step for Mr. Stengel. He says, "If the Constitution was intended to limit the federal government, it certainly doesn't say so."

Apparently Mr. Stengel has not read the Tenth Amendment: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

Perhaps Richard Stengel should follow the advice of another Stengel -- Casey Stengel, who said on a number of occasions, "You could look

BUSINESS TODAY The latest on Business News, Trends and Techniques

WORKING AS A CONSULTANT A BASIC CHECKLIST (PART II)

by La Quetta M. Shamblee

"I'm a consultant," is jokingly referred to as "I'm unemployed," but make no mistake about the fact that many consultants make a very good living by selling their expertise. Last week's column provided an initial overview of the first things to consider. This week's information provides a snapshot of three key areas that every consultant must master (or manage) to build and maintain a successful business.

The acronym "ALORE" should be a familiar term to every entrepreneur. It is a great memory tool to introduce Accounting, which is regarded as "The language of business." "A" stands for Assets (things/resources owned, purchased, rented or leased that are used to operate the business), "L" stands for Liabilities (amounts owed - as in "debt," loans, credit accounts with vendors), "O" stands Owner's Equity (Assets minus Liabilities - the amount remaining if all debts are paid), "R" stands for Revenue (amounts earned by selling your goods or services) and "E" stands for Expenses (amounts paid to operate - rent, salaries, taxes, inventory, etc.). Whether your business is a oneperson consulting practice or a multi-billion dollar corporation, these are the five categories of accounts. The goal is the same, to generate a healthy net profit (after taxes are paid) by bringing in more Revenue than what you incur in Expenses over specific periods of time. This will result in a favorable and growing Owner's Equity to build your company's value in the manner that you would want the equity in your real estate to grow.

Open any college-level, business textbook and you'll find the 4 P's of Marketing which deals with how to build a bridge between you and your customers. The P's stand for Product (what are you selling?), Price (how much will you charge?), Place (where will you sell/distribute?) and, Promotion (what mix of advertising, promotion and other outreach activities will you use?). You can develop a basic outline for your marketing plan by jotting down your response in each of these areas.

"If you plan to fail, you plan to fail," rings true in every area of life. Although things never go exactly according to plan, it is imperative to spend time in this area - initially and on an ongoing basis. Start with your long-term goals for your business. What do you want to accomplish? Then, take a step back and consider what you know and understand in the present to make it happen. Don't worry about what you don't know right now. Just proceed with your planning and start planning for shortterm goals that will keep you moving toward the ultimate goals for your business.

If you're serious about getting started, in next week's column, you'll find a list of local resources to help you move in the direction of planning, launching and building a successful consulting practice.

REV James L. Snyder

Gracious Parsonage and Yours Truly just finished supper were we resting in the living room watching the TV news. Actually, my wife was watching the news while I was perusing a book. As far as I am concerned, nothing equals the relaxation of a good book after a good supper. My definition of a good book is the one I am reading at the time.

I had just settled into my book when I heard a groan coming from the other side of the room where my wife was setting. Thinking it was her just winding down after a busy day, I paid no attention to it.

Then I heard it again followed by, "I just cannot believe that!" Assuming she was talking to herself and not addressing me in particular, I ignored her and continued in my book.

Then she said, "Do you believe what live in America? they did?" When I looked at her, I discovered she was looking at me. The question was addressed to me. Not knowing what she was talking about I responded with my typical, "Huh?" Huh, as most people know, is short for "I have no idea what in the world you're talking about." This seems to be where I am most of the time.

ON PLEDGING MY ALLEGIANCE

Then my wife explained to me the story though there are things about this country math, but not by much. Mistress of the on the news. It seems, in some school somewhere, someone was objecting to standing and pledging allegiance to the American flag. My wife, and right she should be, was irritated at these people refusing to pledge their allegiance to the American flag.

"What in the world is wrong with these people?" she queried me. Then she went into her typical diatribe about how important it is to be a good citizen. "How can you call yourself an American," she refusing to pledge allegiance to the flag continued, "and not want to salute the American flag?"

Well, I think she has a good point. I tried to go back to my book and she went back to watching the news but I could not get back into my book. I thought about all of these people objecting to pledging their allegiance to the American flag.

What is the big deal? What is their objection? Why are some people offended by the American flag? I think the biggest question I might ask, why do they want to

I am a firm believer in the First Amendment and the right of everybody to express his or her opinion. If people do not want to pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, that is their right. I just do not get it.

I would be the first to admit our country is not perfect. After all, we have politicians running this country. Even course, I could be a little wrong on my that are not right and that I do not agree with all the time, I still pledge allegiance to the American flag, I still pray for our country and I pray for the president of the United States and all those in leadership positions.

I have thought further about these people refusing to pledge allegiance to the American flag and how inconsistent they are in their whole life.

For example, most of these people will pledge allegiance to some credit card. They will sign up, gladly paid the fee, willingly accepts a high interest rate and then go on a spending spree. Every month they will salute and pledge allegiance to that credit card by sending in a check.

Others will pledge their allegiance to some mortgage company for their house. Month after month, these people pledge their allegiance to the mortgage company or the bank by writing out a hefty check, including interest and fees.

The same people will pledge allegiance to some car loan company in order to buy a new car. Month after month as regular as the sun rising in the morning, these people will pledge their allegiance to the car loan institution by sending them a check. By the time they have paid for a $20,000 automobile they will have given to the car loan institution $60,000. Of

It seems a little amusing to me that the same people who object to pledging their allegiance to the American flag and who object to prayer in any public setting will pay their allegiance to the credit card company, the mortgage and loan company, and the auto loan institution with money that has printed on it in bold type, "In God we trust."

Let those who object to these things object to them but not in such a way as to hinder me from pledging my allegiance to the American flag. If you do not believe in prayer, fine, but do not force your unbelief on me. If there is no such thing as God, why are some people so upset when someone like me prays to God?

I go by the scriptural admonition, "I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty" (1 Timothy 2:1-2 KJV).

I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America...

In last week's issue of this paper Kim Clymer-Kelly bemoaned "the dwindling of power of common citizens who have little input into our government, a government that was designed at its inception as a government 'of the people, by the people, and for the people." Unfortunately, Kim eight-seven years (four score and seven years ago) describe a kind of government that never-was. President Lincoln, was a Railroad Lawyer, a great writer, and a master-politician. He was dedicating a bloody battlefield as a cemetery and trying to heal a war-torn nation by describing a kind of government that never truly existed. Furthermore, I believe, probably even more unreasonably, that at some time in my lifetime a new myth will be created. It will be communicated from one person to another all over the world and will maintain that the strength and power of mankind has always been to combine and work together. Examples will be described these words uttered by President Lincoln of prehistoric man coming together to hunt and to protect themselves from vicious animals and the cruel, uncaring environment. People will be told that they must work together and cooperate for the common good because that's what human have always done. We humans will believe this, myth or no myth, and humankind will meet the environmental challenges no matter what they are and our specie shall endure for another millennia.

Two rituals for young women that were once common but have faded in popularity are the "sweet sixteen" party and the debutante ball. Both of these events (especially the latter) served a function similar to that of more traditional young woman's availability for dating and marriage. The customary la quinceanera ("sweet fifteen") celebration for young Latinas serves a similar purpose among Hispanics in the United States.

Aside from the lack of a clearly defined point of entry into adulthood, another difference between modern industrialized societies and those with clear rites of passage is that in the latter there is usually no equivalent to the prolonged period of adolescence common in developed countries. Initiates of most non-Western cultures start out as children and become adults.

Some view the entire period of adolescence in American culture as female initiation rituals: announcing the analogous to the disorienting middle stage of van Gennep's classic threepart scheme: an extended period of transition characterized by uncertainty and confusion that eventually leads to the adult taking his or her place in society. In this view, coming of age in America transition to adulthood. One reason cited the end of secondary schooling: the remains a rough road for most teenagers, prom and high school graduation. The made all the more hazardous with its high school graduation, which may be many sharp rocks, deep potholes and

Space Scientists Call for Volunteers to Help Guide Mission to Solar System's Edge

Looking for a cutting-edge science project for science/article/pii/S0019103511000078) effort as well as educate—and it doesn't require org/2041-8205/734/1/L1/). anything but a computer.

A team from Southern Illinois University in Edwardsville has developed the website IceHunters: http://www.icehunters.org which challenges the public to discover potential destinations for a NASA mission to the very edge of the solar system.

"I think it's a great idea," said Yanga Fernandez, a University of Central Florida physics assistant professor and comet expert. "Actually that's kind of how I started. When I was 10 years old, I used to search the sky for interesting objects with my dad. And in high school I worked hard to find Halley's Comet, which wasn't easy in suburban Florida. I learned a lot of astronomy along the way."

Today Fernandez holds a Ph.D. degree in astronomy and is among the world's experts on comets. He is part of an international team that recently published two articles about comets visited by spacecraft. The articles appear in recent issues of Icarus (http://www.sciencedirect.com/and your youngster? Here's one that will help the space The Astrophysical Journal (http://iopscience.iop.

Fernandez said the IceHunters challenge will not only excite people about space exploration, but it will also give scientists potentially hundreds of extra eyes.

"Up to now, what we know about comets is based on comets of opportunity," Fernandez said. "There are several comets like Halley that people can probably name. We know quite a bit about them because they have come close enough to earth or are bright enough for us to take a pretty good look. But we don't know much about the vast majority of comets out there because they are so far away."

For the contest, dozens of images from the Kuiper Belt—an area beyond Neptune at the outer edges of the solar system—have been taken by powerful telescopes and posted on the website. Participants are invited to view the images and mark potential targets of interest.

volunteers interpret what to look for in the images. The site is called IceHunters because objects far from the Sun should be cold and icy.

But this isn't simply an academic exercise. The Guidelines and a brief tutorial will help New Horizons mission that launched from the MtnViewsNews.com.

Kennedy Space Center in 2006 is on its way to the outer solar system. The spacecraft flew past Jupiter in 2007, giving scientists a wealth of new data. It is scheduled to rendezvous with Pluto in 2015.

If the right object or objects can be found anything from comets to asteroids to other unknowns-the spacecraft will take images and other measurements and beam them back to Earth for study. After the rendezvous, scientists believe the spacecraft will have just enough fuel to head deeper into the Kuiper Belt.

For Fernandez, the challenge recalls that spark in his childhood that led to a lifelong career.

"Most of us start out as amateur astronomers whether it's in our backyards with a pair of binoculars or on a balcony with a low-powered telescope," he said. "This is just a way to take advantage of all the passion and interest and, hopefully, inspire the next generation of space explorers."

Ask jai.....

Ask jai is a weekly column that will strive to honestly answer your job search questions relating to job searching techniques, networking skills, resume writing and interviewing. The employment situation is getting better, however, it is still a challenge finding were the jobs are located and how to get pass the "gate-keepers". As an Executive Recruiter I was privy to working directly with Corporate Recruiters and understanding their process in selecting which candidates to interview and hire. I will candidly answer your questions, possibly bluntly answering your questions, but I will be totally honest. My objective is to help you achieve your employment goal.

I read an article recently that said that some employers are only considering employed candidates for their positions. Is this against the law? Jonathan

Dear Jonathan

If this is not a law it should be. This would seem to be a form of discrimination. I suspect these employers are not actually advertising or publicly stating that they will only consider employed candidates for their open positions. However, what employers do behind closed doors in regards to how they make their hiring decisions, is and will always remain confidential. Do not let some article like this keep you from seeking employment. Continue to apply for positions that match your skills, experience and education. Submit an effective resume that addresses the employer's requirements and qualifications. Write a dynamic cover letter that focuses on your accomplishments and states your interest in their company and the position. Do not let statements, newspaper articles or anyone keep you from pursing a position you are interested in being considered as a candidate.

Is it OK to go around recruiters and directly contact the hiring manager. Would it be considered inappropriate or healthy assertiveness? Audrey

Dear Audrey

It would depend on if the recruiter is working for you or the employer. There are two type of recruiters, agency and in-house. The agency recruiter is retained or commissioned by an employer to fill a position. The agency recruiter recruits, screens and selects a candidate to present to the employer. This type of recruiter is working on your behalf and the employer. Their goal is to recruit the ideal person who will eventually be hired by the employer. The employer expects the recruiter to partner with them in their search for candidates. A hiring manager might consider it inappropriate behavior for a candidate to go around the recruiter and directly contact them. This action might also reflect badly on the recruiter and hurt a candidate's chances at being hired. If this is an in-house recruiter, who is employed by the company, I would advise you to also be cautious. You do not want to offend anyone and possibly lose an employment opportunity. The right thing to do in either situation is to ask the recruiter for permission to directly contact the hiring manager and state your reasons. If the in-house recruiter or agency recruiter approves, then go for it. If they do not approve, you will have to trust and leave it in the hands of the recruiter.

MORAL OF THE PRICKLY, PRECARIOUS PORCUPINE

on it's back may serve as an important means of survival for the porcupine, they can sometimes get in the way of simply snuggling with their siblings but more importantly, they can also teach a very valuable lesson that can lead to a longer life. The fond fable of the porcupine in my e-mail goes a little like this: It was the coldest winter ever, and many of the wild animals in that region had already died from exposure to the freezing temperatures.

Realizing the situation, the thoughtful porcupines decided to group together to keep warm. It seemed like the logical thing to do, to share the warmth of each other's bodies and thereby survive the cold, however the closer they came together, the more the quills of each one began to inflict wounds on the soft under flesh of the loved ones they were closest to. After a while, the little porcupines decided to distance themselves from one another to prevent the poking effect, and before long they each began to die alone and frozen like the other animals that season. Soon it became clear that they had to make a choice; either accept the painful pricks of their closest companions' quills, or die alone. Wisely, the young porcupines opted to stick close together and learn to live with the wounds caused by the quills of their siblings, in order to share the warmth and survive the chill. So, the moral of the story is that the best relationships are not those which bring together perfect people who do not chafe, cause us pain or "rub us wrong", rather one must learn to live with the little wounds that come with close relationships and learn to appreciate the good qualities of a companion and the warmth they share in order to survive and thrive in this

For what it's worth, this simple, short but sweet story nails! The basic gist of the "porcupine moral" given in the had a huge impact on me. It was actually quite timely and

I received a forwarded e-mail from my good friend, Kathy Shiffs this past week, offering an interesting moral derived from a somewhat controversial survival technique of the porcupine, and I was immediately inspired to write about this curiously contentious, yet undeniably cute creature. The e-mail was entitled "The Moral of the Porcupine" and it included a few photos of baby porcupines nestled in a humans' hand. To me, the baby "porcs" in the pictures look a lot like small bundled-up balls of fur with minute mouse-like faces that you can't help but fall in love with.

As far as my memory serves me, I don't think I have ever seen a baby porcupine before, and I was amazed at how adorable they are as little infants. The photos in the e-mail somehow reminded me of the Woodlouse, which is a very strange, pre-historic looking insect that most of us often see crawling about in our yards and gardens.

Very much like the Woodlouse (or, better known to me as the "rollie pollie"), baby porcupines know how to curl themselves up into a tight round ball, in order to protect their soft undersides from attack when they feel threatened by an intruder. Both the porcupine and the oddly armored Woodhouse termite have upper sides to their bodies that serve as an effective protective defense mechanism against potential predators. The difference is that the upper side of the Woodlouse termite's body is a hard shell, whereas the porcupine's upper side is more like a prickly bed of forwarded e-mail, is that while the long, pointy pokers valuable, and I hope my readers will agree.

Line By PJ Carpenter ZERO DAY

A frequent topic of computer security headlines is the so-called "Zero-Day exploit". A Zero-Day exploit is defined as the taking advantage of vulnerability the same day as the vulnerability is generally known. There are typically "zero days" between the discovery of the exploit and the attack, hence the name. In most cases when a vulnerability is found in computer code the discoverer will notify the company responsible for creating and publishing the software (and sometimes the computing community at large) so that a fix can be found and implemented before any real damage is done. Even if hackers happen to learn about the exploit as the same time as the software publisher they may not be able to take advantage of the vulnerability before it is fixed. When the hacker happens to be the discoverer of the exploit and the vulnerability wasn't generally known in advance, there may be no effective way to guard against an attack using this new vector. For these instances, security software companies have devised programs (and sub-routines) that look for specific, suspicious activity (such as requests to format drives that do not originate from the console) and disallow such actions.

The name "Zero-Day exploit" itself is a bit misleading because in many instances the vulnerabilities that are taken advantage of have been know to either the software company or hackers themselves for quite some time before "something bad" happens. Many of the larger software manufactures have entire well-financed sections of their operations devoted to identifying, tracking and repairing security holes in their products. Sometimes there are differing opinions as to what constitutes a vulnerability needing immediate attention and a bug to be fixed in the next scheduled software update. The best thing you can do to protect against zero-day exploits is to follow good security policies in the first place. By installing and keeping your anti-virus software up to date, blocking file attachments to emails which may be harmful and keeping your system patched against the vulnerabilities you are already aware of you can secure your system or network against 99% of what is out there.

One of the best measures for protecting against currently unknown threats is to employ a hardware or software (or both) firewall. You can also enable heuristic scanning (a technology used to attempt to block viruses or worms that are not yet known about) in your anti-virus software. By blocking unnecessary traffic in the first place with a hardware firewall, blocking access to system resources and services with a software firewall or using your anti- virus software to neip detect anomaious benavior you can better protect yourself against the dreaded zero-day exploit.

LIKE SELLING ICE TO ESKIMOS

It's July and school is OUT! While this is great for kids and teachers, it does not come without some necessary house-keeping duties. Kids have to clean their desks (or lockers) and teachers have to pack up their rooms. For most teachers, this might take a day or two. But if you're retiring after 30+ years in the saddle, like my mom is, clearing out can be an arduous task!

It would be one thing if she had only been teaching nearly as long as the Israelites wandered in the desert. It would've been one thing if she had only stuck to the mandated curriculum instead of veering off into enrichment subjects like patriotic songs, Medieval history, and the many cultural, artistic, and emotional facets of "The Wizard of Oz." It would've been one thing if she'd only bought products to accompany these units rather than creating a plethora of her own, original material. But my mom is one of a dying breed, one not afraid to throw in a little life along with the bone-dry state standards (e.g., "recognize alliteration and onomatopoeia"). Needless to say, there was a veritable hoard of books, worksheets, games, and seasonal decorations brimming over the bookshelves and out of the closets in her classroom. Luckily she had my dad and me to bail her out, proving that blood is thicker than water.

Among the more farcical items we excavated over two and a half days of intense cleaning was a dusty binder, part of a very expensive program her district had purchased. For our purposes, I'll call it "Thinking Pathways." (Those of you in the know will recognize the actual product). I flipped through pages that showed large empty circles, boxes connected by lines, and circles radiating out from one another. By this time my mom noticed the pause in my nonstop cleaning and came over to explain "Thinking Pathways" to me.

For one of the "pathways" students would write the topic of what they were studying in a central circle and then fill in details in surrounding little circles (e.g., Bats: mammal, flying, nocturnal, vampires).

Wow, that's deep. I recalled completing similar graphs as a kid in grammar school, but my teachers didn't have fancy binders. Surely the other pathways must be more sophisticated than this. Oh yes, there was more! Another graph had three squares side by side. The first box said "Beginning." Can you guess what the other two said? Apparently the great minds at "Thinking Pathways" were the first to theorize that all stories must have a beginning, middle, and end. Gee, I could've sworn Aristotle thought that one up, but I could be wrong. Perhaps the crowning accomplishment of "Thinking Pathways" is it's elegant graph of a single blank circle entitled "Circle Pathway." Within this hallowed space students write -wait for it!the main idea!

How someone could market this is as astounding as the feat of writing enough verbal padding to fill a binder with endless explanations of the same obvious concepts. What's even more amazing is that districts where my other teacher friends work are currently "training" them in this method. Let's hope the money for this came from some other funding source than that used for salaries, because it'd be a shame if they chose this over saving someone's job. All in all, I have to congratulate the "Thinking Pathways" people on their killer marketing campaign. If I had those skills I'd be set for life. I hear they're also trying to sell the school system a popular bridge in New York.

THE GOOD LIFE YOUR HEALTH MATTERS

Today's Subject: Visualization in Pain Management

Dr. John Talevich, D.C. has practiced in Sierra Madre for thirty years. His clinic, LifeWorks! Chiropractic, offers patient-specific approaches to the alleviation of pain and individually tailored wellness programs.

The use of visualization in pain management has been around since the beginning of the human race. In primitive societies, various techniques were used to create images that had powerful healing effects. In modern times, physicians such as O. Carl Simonton have used these techniques in the treatment of cancer. You may be familiar with the practice of imagining the cancer cells being destroyed by an intense light or aggressive Pacman-like figures. How does this work, and is it worth trying?

Not too long ago, the consensus was that, after a certain age, there was very little growth and change within the neurons making up the brain. Recently, the concept of neuroplasticity has evolved; this concept describes a process wherein the nervous system is capable of dramatically reshaping itself. A handy picture of this is a potter's wheel with either a dry, hard block of clay or a wet, malleable one. With a bit of water and movement, the clay can be shaped and reshaped.

So it is with the sensations that are generated by the body. By extending a series of prompts in the form of pictures, ideas, movements and other practices into this "sensorium," we can shape the experience just as the potter shapes her clay. For instance, that nagging headache? Instead of fighting it, take a moment to reshape the pain pattern by having a glass of cool water, taking a few deep breaths and scanning the body for areas of tension. You may want to add an image, such as being showered by a cleansing, soothing rain. Can you see how these simple reinforcements reshape the already existing neural pathways? Instead of just letting them run their course, we can assist in their resolution. As we apply these methods to all forms of stress and pain, we become students of our own unique inner workings, thereby establishing more of a partnership with them. In the long run, this cooperative experience leads to relief from discomfort and a vital, more conscious life.

Have a wonderful week! Dr. John

HOW TO FIND AFFORDABLE DENTAL CARE

Dear Savvy Senior,

Where can seniors turn to find affordable dental care? I had dental insurance through my work for many years but lost it when I retired. What can you tell me? Flossing Frank

Dear Frank,

Very few U.S. retirees have dental insurance today. Without coverage from traditional Medicare, and with private dental insurance typically costing too much to be feasible, most seniors are stuck paying full out-of-pocket prices every time they visit a dentist. While there's no one simple solution to affordable dental care there are a variety of options that can help cut your costs. Here's what you should know.

Dental Discounts

One way you may be able to trim your dental care cost is by simply asking your dentist for a senior discount, especially if you're paying up front. Out-ofpocket payers save the dentist office the cost and hassle of filing an insurance claim, so asking for a small 10 percent discount is not unreasonable.

Another cost-effective way to reduce your dental expenses is to join a dental discount network. How this works is you pay an annual membership fee roughly $80 to $200 a year - in exchange for 15 to 50 percent discounts on service and treatments from participating dentists. To find a network, go to dentalplans.com (or call 888-632-5353) where you can search for plans and participating dentists by zip code, as well as get a breakdown of the discounts

Local services: There are a few states, as well as some local programs or clinics that offer discounted dental care to those with limited means. To find out what may be available in your area, check with your state dental director (see astdd. org for contact information), or your state or local dental society (see ada.org/statelocalorg.aspx).

Dental Life Network: Offers several programs that provide free dental care for elderly and disabled people who can't afford to pay. To learn more or to apply for care in your state, visit nfdh.org or call 888-471-6334.

Savvy Tip: The best way to keep your dental costs down is through prevention and good oral hygiene. So remember to brush your teeth at least twice a day using fluoride toothpaste, floss daily and get routine checkups every six months or at least once a year.

Recipe of the Week:

Old-Fashioned

Homemade Ice Cream

INGREDIENTS:

• 6 eggs

• 2 cups sugar • 1/4 teaspoon salt

• 1 tablespoon vanilla extract

• 13-ounce can evaporated milk (1-1/2 cups plus 2 tablespoons)

• 1 gallon whole milk

chipped ice

rock salt

DIRECTIONS:

In a large mixing bowl, beat eggs. Add sugar gradually, stirring constantly. Add salt, vanilla and canned milk. Add about a pint of the fresh milk and mix.

Pour mixture into ice cream freezer can. Add enough of the remainder of the milk to fill can to the middle of the top board of dasher. (If the freezer can has a "fill" line on it, fill no higher than that line.)

Assemble the ice cream freezer. Add alternating layers of chipped ice and rock salt to barrel around freezer can. Crank freezer until ice cream begins to freeze (cranking will become harder as ice cream freezes), adding more ice and salt, as needed. When handle becomes difficultto-impossible to turn, remove turning mechanism, and carefully remove top from freezer can; remove dasher. Replace top. Cover can with more ice and salt. Cover ice with an old towel, allowing ice cream to "cure" for at least 1 hour. If yours is an electric freezer, follow manufacturer's directions, but the curing step is essential.

Makes about 5 quarts of ice cream Have A Wonderful Holiday!

HOMES AND PROPERTY

One Of A Kind: Featuring unique homes and gardens and the people whoe create them. Story By Chris Bertrand Photos clly, ourtesy of Terra Bella

The Purple Flowered Majesty of the Jacaranda Tree

The Jacaranda tree, sprinkled liberally throughout Los Angeles, is in full flower these days. At this time of year, it's not unusual to find artists painting plein air renditions of their beauty against the backdrop of the Congregational Church at Sierra Madre Boulevard and Hermosa, in Sierra Madre, or at the historic Episcopal Church of the Ascension on North

Often planted as a street tree, beautiful massings can be enjoyed on Alegria, east of Baldwin, on South Hermosa and along the border between Mater Dolorosa Retreat Center and Bailey Canyon Park off Carter and Grove in town. In Pasadena, a stretch of Paloma between Altadena and Allen is known for it's showy blooms. It's quite a sight to witness the "purple snowfall" under a mature jacaranda.

Known formally as Jacaranda mimosifolia, the treem actually a member of the legume family, thrives in the low rainfall, Mediterranean climate of Los Angeles, especially in sandy soils, according to Sunset

Western Garden Book.

That said, the Jacaranda is usually NOT a good choice around a pool, as its spring leaf litter and summer flower "snow" easily clog the filters. Beautiful as they are in June and July, surface roots can be a problem, too.

Though June is the main flower show, Jacaranda often blooms twice a year as long as it is protected from the salty sea winds. It is also popular in San Diego, Phoenix and along the Sun Belt all the way to Florida, and is also popular on the arid cities of Australia, South Africa and Israel.

Kate Sessions, 1857-1940, the American propagate and grow plants and trees. According botanist, horticulturalist and landscape architect, is generally credited with importing the Jacaranda, a Brazilian native tree, to Southern California, according to the San Diego History Center. The Brazilians are also known to use the wood of this tree to construct acoustic guitars.

Known as the "Mother of Balboa Park" in San Diego, Sessions struck a deal with San Diego's city fathers, to plant a hundred trees a year in the mostly barren park, known then as City Park, and three hundred trees yearly throughout the city, in exchange for use of nursery land there to

to the center, most of the older trees in the park, including jacarandas, are a result of Sessions' propagation and planting, which began in 1892. Sessions is memorialized with a bronze statue in Balboa Park, erected in 1998.

The intense color of the Jacaranda bloom is particularly showy because it drops its fernlike leaves in late spring before bloom, leaving the trunk and branches bare of texture and color

If you're of a mind to create a monochromatic purple theme for your So Cal landscape, think Wistaria for March, Jacaranda and Agapanthus summer. All with complementary hues, they should produce more than enough purple for any gardener's palate!

After you visit this year's Independence Day Parade on Sierra Madre Boulevard, take a walk under the purple majesty of the Jacarandas next to Memorial Park, at the Congregational Church! But beware... there's a reason the Chinese are known to use it as base for an intense purple dye!

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed

BUY, SELL, WIN, WIN

Buyers, sellers, the time for hesitation is over for both of you. Home sales are rising, inventories are shrinking, and even though home values fell dramatically in the last few years, the good news is that houses are now more affordable than they have been at any time during the last twenty years

If you are buying, now is the time to make your move, literally. As the market recovers, the scales are still tipped in your favor. There are still many distressed properties" (foreclosures and short sales) on the market, and other homeowners their confidence.

You can still expect competition for lower end, entry-level homes, but demand is softer in the middle to upper end property market, so you could be in a stronger bargaining position in those two tiers.

If you're a seller, don't be alarmed by the good news for buyers. Buyer confidence and strength makes it more likely that you'll enjoy a sale. Don't try to compete against short sales and foreclosures when you're pricing, though, because improving conditions increase Just complete any needed repairs, get your home into great showing condition, and emphasize your home's strengths and features. We're in an interesting transitional phase where both buyers and sellers can be winners with the right attitude and representation.

STRONACH BUYS SANTA ANITA

Santa Anita Park has new ownership, and although Frank Stronach once again leads that ownership, this time his Stronach Group is the sole owner.

Toronto-based Stronach Group announced in a brief media release today that it has acquired the racing and gaming assets formerly held by Stronach's MI Developments Inc. (MID) as part of a previously announced reorganization proposal approved by MID shareholders on March 29. Stronach's Magna Entertainment spun off these assets into MID last year during a bankruptcy process.

Stronach's daughter Belinda Stronach, whose name is not very familiar to locals, entered the Santa Anita spotlight in a media statement in which she is quoted as President and Chief Executive Officer of The Stronach Group. She mentioned not only horse racing but also gaming in her stateof racing and gaming operations. We also look forward to working with the horseracing industry and all of its stakeholders to ensure the long-term success and viability of the industry."

Group include: Santa Anita Park; Golden Gate Fields; Portland Meadows; MID's joint venture interests in Maryland Jockey Club's real estate and racing assets (Pimlico Race ment properties and real estate assets in North America and Course, Laurel Park and the Bowie Training Center); Gulfstream Park and MID's joint venture interest in an associated retail development; horseracing technology assets, including Xpressbet, AmTote and MID's joint venture interest in HRTV, a cable and satellite television network dedicated to the sport of horse racing; as well as various development properties previously owned by MID.

What this all means is unclear but in theory the Stronach's are more free to make moves of any nature without stockholder approval. Frank Stronach recently said that as soon as he got full control of Santa Anita Park, he would try to get ment: "The acquisition of MID's racing and gaming assets Rick Caruso back to the negotiating table to discuss resurpositions The Stronach Group at the forefront of the Thor-recting their Shops at Santa Anita partnership in some form. oughbred horseracing industry. Ashley Gomez, Sarah Troescher and Eryn Blakely, members of the San Gabriel Valley High Performance Track Club, successfully competed in the USA Track & Field Region 15 Junior Ólympic Championship the weekend of June 24-26, 2011 in Escondido, CA and qualified to run in the USA Track & Field Junior Olympic Championship at Wichita State University's Cessna Stadium in Wichita, Kansas July 26 - 31, 2011.

The top five finishers in each final race of each age category at the Region 15 Championships qualify to move on to the Junior Olympic Championship.

A sixth grader at St. Luke's School in Temple City, Ashley Gomez qualified for the 800 Meters (Midget Girls) with a time of 2:30.87. Sarah Troescher, an eighth grader at St. Rita's School in Sierra Madre qualified in the 400 Meters (Youth Girls) with a time of 1:01.84. Eryn Blakely, a Junior at Alverno High School, Sierra Madre, qualified in the 800 Meters (Intermediate Girls) with a time of 2:24.81.

The student athletes know that their hard work continues as they practice under the guidance of their coaches at SGV High Performance, a USATF Region 15 (So. Cal) sanctioned youth track club formed in 2007. Head Coach Keisha Marvin is a former UCLA All-American and world class hurdler. Assistant Coach Zalika Davis-Heart is a former UCLA middle distance stand out and Fila 2000 Olympic Trials qualifier in the 800 Meters. Together, Coach K and Coach Z bring many years of experience to the track club and to the Team members.

You can watch these students athletes train between now and July 24th on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 5 P.M. at the La Salle High School track in Pasadena.

at La Salle, where he benefitted from the enthusiastic and professional coaching of Coaches Jeff Chase and Nicki Maichrowicz. He is also a member of the Rose Bowl Water Polo Club team, where his team took first place in the US Club Championships, the Gold Medal in the South Florida International Tournament, first place in the John Hale Tournament, and third place in California Cup, among other highlights. He credits Rose Bowl Coaches Dan Leyson and Jason Falitz with teaching him a great work ethic, and the sport of water polo for teaching him how to attain success both in and out of the pool. Kyle is very happy to be able to combine the love of his sport with a college the caliber of Pitzer, where he will also attend classes at Pomona, Harvey-Mudd, Scripps and Claremont-McKenna. He presently plans to major in Business and Ethical Green Technology, with a minor in engineering. He is grateful to La Salle for preparing
