"CITY SETS THE RECORD STRAIGHT"

Last month, when the Sierra Club of Los lar permit fee. Angeles issued a public report on Solar Permit fees, it listed Sierra Madre as being one of the most expensive fees in the County for Commercial properties. Since that report was published, there has been continued concern among residents regarding the solar permit fees the city charges. As a result of other news reports and the Sierra Club report, the city decided to 'Set The Record Straight': (This notice appeared on the city's website and is being reprinted verbatim in its entirety.)

The city has received a number of inquiries as a result of news articles that list the City of Sierra Madre as having among the highest fees for solar projects in the County of Los Angeles; City staff and officials would like to clarify a number of items and provide answers to common questions that have been received.

The figures in the local news articles come from data produced in the "Executive Summary of Commercial & Residential PV Permit Fee Report, Los Angeles County by Sierra Club, Los Angeles and Loma Prieta Chapters, 4/27/2011, updated 6/18/2011." The data includes fees for residential and commercial solar projects for 89 cities in the County of Los Angeles. It is based on a survey to each of these cities that was conducted by the Sierra Club.

Residential Solar Project Fees:

More than two years ago, the City of Sierra Madre reduced residential solar permit fees to a flat fee (not valuation-based) of $515.00, as reflected in the Sierra Club survey. The previous fees were valuationbased and ranged from approximately $700.00 to $1,200.00. On June 14, 2011, the City Council adopted the Fiscal Year 2011/2013 Biennial Budget that further reduced the fee to $473.00 beginning July 1, 2011. Due to the fact that we have a very small commercial district and have never received an inquiry, nor received any applications for commercial solar permits, we did not create a commercial so-

Commercial Solar Project Fees:

In order to complete the survey, a "sample commercial project" that was provided to us by the Sierra Club to calculate the cost for a commercial solar project using the appropriate permits (building, electrical, etc.) that the City would use in the event that such an application would be made.

The "sample commercial project" that was provided was for a $1.2 million solar project, with the installation of 648 panels and producing 131KW annually. The approximate size of the commercial roof was 12,500 square feet. The calculation of this hypothetical commercial solar fee was based on current valuation-based permits that would apply to general construction projects, and the result placed Sierra Madre in the top three most expensive commercial solar fees in the County.

The City would like to point out that the "sample commercial project" we were asked to use for the calculations is not representative of a project that could exist in our commercial district. The largest roofs in the district are less than 50% of the square footage of the "sample commercial project".

The City would like to encourage any Sierra Madre businesses that are contemplating a solar project for their commercial project to contact the Development Services Department. Staff will be happy to provide an accurate and site-specific commercial solar project fee for consideration.

In the meantime, staff is also compiling information for the development of flat commercial solar permit fee in anticipation of its potential future incorporation to our Development Services' fee schedule.

NEW FUNDRAISING EFFORT FOR SIERRA MADRE'S VETERANS WALL

One of the most beloved monuments in Sierra Madre is the Veteran's Wall in Memorial Park. Built in 2003 by volunteers lead by the late John Grijalva, the site is a unique tribute to veterans who have served our country and lived in Sierra Madre. Located in Memorial Park in the center of town, the wall is a collection of photograhs of soldiers and personalized bricks that pay tribute to the men and women of Sierra Madre who served in the Armed Forces.

Grijalva and his group of volunteers also maintained the wall and decorated it with donated flowers until John's passing in December of 2007.

Today, volunteers continue to carry on John's mission. These volunteers are embarking on an effort to re-educate the public on the significance of the wall and how to participate and support it.

Auction for A Very Special Flag Ed Clare, one of the sponsors of the wall, recently announced a new fundraising project. "We are auctioning off the original Veteran's Wall Memorial flag. It is the flag that was given to us by the U.S. Congress that flew over the White House and was the flag that was used for the memorial to this point.

It is in very good condition It is a 8'x5' flay and we are holding an open auction in order to sell the flag so that we may raise money not only for the replacement flag but the additional Veteran's flag that now flies over the memorial.

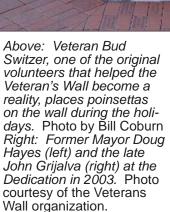

Any extra money that is generated from this auction will go toward the upkeep and maintenance itself and for the purpose of purchasing additional picture plaques to put on the wall.

We will keep the bidding open until Labor Day then whoever has offered the highest bid will be awarded

The starting bid is $150 by Miner Harkness. If you would like to bid on the flag you can contact Ed Clare either at 626 355-4424 or email ed@ edclare.com.

Sponsor A Brick Program

Another means of generating income for the support and maintenance of the memorial is the "Sponsor A Brick Program". Families can show their gratitude to veterans by becoming either a Gold Sponsor for $350 and purchasing an 8" x 8" brick that can contain up to 6 lines and/or graphic image or they can become a Silver Sponsor by purchasing a brick for $150 which can contain up to 3 lines. Bricks are placed at random around the Memorial. More information can be obtained on this program by going to www.

Veterans Photo Wall

One of the most popular aspects of the monument is the Photo Wall. It contains Legacy Etchings of men and women from Sierra Madre that have served in the Armed Forces. The etchings are generated from photographs of the service person and permanently etched onto stainless steel. Any Veteran who lives or has lived in Sierra Madre for more than a year may have their photo included on the wall at no charge. Just fill out the "Sierra Madre Veteran Military Service Record Form" and send it along with a photo to:

RALPH MCKNIGHT - A MAN OF MANY PASSIONS - DIES

By Susan Henderson

Early Tuesday morning, the voice of a Lion was silenced forever. com-munity leader, community legend, Ralph McKnight died peacefully while sleeping in his Pasadena home with his wife Kitty at his side. In May, he suffered a stroke from which he never recovered.

At age 78, Ralph had lived through a lot. A veteran of the U.S. Navy, he was born and reared in Washington D.C. at a time when his uniform was meaningless when it came to battling dena Foothills Democratic Club. the rampant racism that our country was afflicted with. But that didn't deter Ralph one bit. in fact it inspired him to become a life long activist, working on making the world a better place for Self described as "an angry black man" his work was not limited to the plight of African Americans. He worked tirelessly within the ranks of the Democratic Party on both the statewide and local levels. And in Pasadena, he was well known in political, social and artistic circles.

His accomplishments were many. He was among the first African Americans to serve as an Air Traffic Controller in the 1960's. He ran many community based organizations in Washington, D.C. and the Los Angeles Area.

Politics was his number one passion. A Democratic activist, he was a champion for all people. He served in a variety of positions over two decades including serving as chair of the statewide Rainbow and African American Caucuses. He served as Chair of the statewide Organizational Development Committee. He was very active with the Los Angeles County State Central Committee and was very involved with the Pasa-

Ralph also loved Pasadena. He was instrumental in the development of the Levitt Pavillion in Pasadena and served as an Ambassador. He served as a board member of the United Nations Association; he worked with the Pasadena Community Access station and was a member of the ACLU.

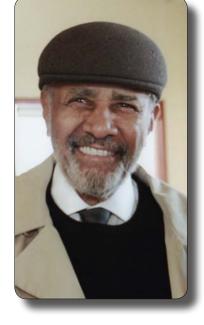

The Arts were also one of Ralph's many passions. Among other things, he served on Pasadena's Arts Commission until recently.

A gifted percussionist, Ralph loved jazz. He also was a writer, contributing to this publication during Presidential elections. Prior to his illness, we discussed plans for him to resume his contributions to MVNews' "The Ballot Box" feature in 2012. He was also President of The Pasadena Collection, which specialized in custom tiles that he designed.

But perhaps Ralph's greatest passion was for the future. He spent countless hours educating and encouraging young people to get involved and bring about change in our society. Despite his difficult dealings with the realities of the South in the 50's, Ralph believed in America's tomorrow. On of the most memorable moments in his life was when "someone like me" became President of the United States.

Sometimes considered to be intimidating and steadfast in his ways, he had the roar of a lion and underneath it all, the gentleness of a lamb.

For more than 30 years, his constant companion was his wife Kitty, who cared for him until the end. worked side by side, sharing their lives in an effort to make the world a better place. He is also survived by his mother-in-law, Kat, daughter Kareim, sons, Ralph, Jr., Scott, Mark McKnight, step sons Dino and Mark White and a host of grandchilren, other family and Pavillion. legions of friends.

To the surprise of only those who did not know him, Ralph was a committed atheist. He did not wish to have a funeral or memorial service in his honor. However, there will be a very brief tribute to Ralph on August 7th, just before the Billy Mitchell concert at the Levitt

Vicious Dogs Definition Expanded

By Dean Lee

In a move cracking down on a rise in dog attacks, the L.A. County Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday in favor of amending the law over what constitutes a dangerous dog —including that a dog does not have to bite someone to be labeled vicious.

The new ordinance also speeds up the hearing process by taking some dangerous dog cases out of the courts, and instead, allows for an administrative hearing. This would also save money board members

The changes now expand the definition of "severe injury" to include serious physical illness, such as someone having a hart attack after a threatening dog encounter. The law also includes injuries, other than biting, caused by an attack.

Any administrative hearings would now also take into account pervious determinations, from other cities, of currently listed dangerous dogs.

A vicious dog also includes animals that have been trained for, or engaged in, exhibitions of fighting.

Administrative hearings will be done by a judicial officer or an administrative hearing officer authorized by the department of animal care and control. The officer would have the authority to make finding including euthanizing an animal.

An officer would also all reports, oversee evidence and witnesses. They could also shorten the time to produce evidence as opposed to the courts documents show.

Pasadena Humane Society Spokesperson Whitman said Ricky individual cities have separate jurisdiction and laws surrounding vicious dogs. The new county ordinance does not apply to Pasadena although does apply to Altadena and unincorporated areas near Arcadia.

the Museum. Scientist to Build A Solar-Powered Portable Toilet

Environmental scientist and engineer Michael Hoffmann of the California Institute of Technology (Caltech) has received a $400,000 grant from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation to build a solar-powered portable toilet that could help solve a major health problem in developing countries. The grant, announced July 19 at the AfricaSan 3 sanitation and hygiene conference in Rwanda, will be used to complete the initial design, development, and testing of the unique sustainable system. Designed for use by up to 500 people per day with minimal maintenance, the sanitation unit will have the added benefit of turning waste into fuel.

"Life expectancy correlates to the accessibility of clean water and proper sanitation practices," says Hoffmann, the James Irvine Professor Environmental Science at Caltech, who has been working for years on the electrochemical technology to create a sustainable toilet and waste-treatment system. "All of our efforts in biomedicine may go for naught if we don't take care of sanitation."

Superscooper Approved For Duty in L.A. County

To prepare for the 2011 fire season, County Mayor Antonovich Michael announced that the Board of Supervisors authorized a contract to lease two CL-415 SuperScoopers firefighting aircraft from the Government of Quebec for use by the Los Angeles County Fire Department.

"To ensure our County Fire Department has the tools they need to be fully prepared for fire season, these vital aircraft have been requested to supplement the Department's water-dropping helicopters and been warned the electricity was going to be off intermittently from 8AM-3PM. We were up early, but heard the recognizable alarming noise of a tree branch breaking apart and crashing to the ground or whatever is in its path! The HUGE tree branchover 18 inches wide-began to pull apart from the tree and then a LARGE CRASH! In the photo, what looks like a high hedge is actually the branch of a tree, two doors down from us. It came with a few inches of my neighbor's front window. He called Public Works, they came and within two hours, the entire mess was gone! Good job, Public Works!

What concerns me is this is the THIRD time this has happened. The first time, a couple years ago, was diagonally across the street from us. The huge limb landed on the renters' car and did damage. (Just five minutes before the limb came crashing down, they had arrived at the house and were taking their toddler out of the car! The car damage meant nothing; they were elated they were safe and in the house when the limb came down!) Then less than a year ago, it happened again- this time, my next door neighbors. Besides the huge branches presenting a safety issue, there are the trees' sticker balls and people have tripped because of them. These trees also have made a mess of the sidewalks. They are NOT my kind of tree!

Last Friday, before the electricity was turned NO LIGHTS: (626) 458-1700 off, the Edison Company came to the intersection of Camino Real and Myrtle and put up 4-way Last Friday was an unusual day. First we had stop signs. They are to be commended. The intersection of Camino Real and Myrtle is a disaster under normal circumstances. Cars fly up and down Myrtle and disregard the traffic lights!

It's not unusual for three cars in a row to barrel down Myrtle Ave. and run the red light! When electricity has gone off unexpectedly, it IS beyond dangerous. Our traffic lights are off, and people going north or south on Myrtle just speed through the intersection,. A few accidents have occurred. Now, we call immediately when the traffic signals are completely off.

Because of these situations, I would like to remind Monrovia-Arcadia -Duarte County Area residents of a few important numbers.

The Late Bloomers (Folk Rock)

The Late Bloomers are an acoustic folkrock band with some intriguing originals in its repertoire. Now two married couples, they cut their teeth on the music of Dylan and Neil Young while still in high school in the sixties and have since found their own sound by putting their individual stamp on favorites from that era. All four are accomplished vocalists and pleasing harmonies dominate the sets. They have individually been part of the Pasadena and LA music scene for many years and have played with other bands and are now enjoying their collaboration as The Late Bloomers.

Duarte Puts Edison on Notice to Address Plans to Resolve Ongoing Power Outages that have Plagued City Since 2007

DUARTE, CA, July 21, 2011 - Frustrated over years of frequent scheduled and unscheduled Southern California Edison power outages which continually disrupt service to Duarte residents and businesses, the City has sent a letter to Edison demanding the utility address plans for correcting the ongoing equipment failures.

Sierra Madre-

For the last four years, Duarte residents and businesses have been plagued with dozens of power outages, most due to breakdowns of antiquated Edison underground equipment. More than half of a list of 42 outages, cited in a letter from City Manager Darrell George to Les Starck, vice president of local public affairs for Edison, shut down power to parts of the City for as many as 5 to 12 hours. There have been 18 power outages in Duarte between January and July of 2011. In the most recent, on July 12, residents were adversely affected by both a planned outage which shut down electrical power to 56 structures for 7 hours, and an unplanned outage initially affecting more than 2,100 homes, with 300 homes left without power for more than

George noted that despite a $4 million upgrade to Edison's Ambrus circuit completed and launched last fall, the upgrade "has neither resolved nor slowed down the problem of frequent outages in Duarte. Equipment on the Ambrus Circuit has failed twice in the past several months, knocking out power to 2,200 residents and businesses for 12 hours each time on May 27-28 and on June 27. Many outages also continue to occur on antiquated underground equipment on Edison's Honeywell circuit.

Experience suggests heat combined with the recently identified unstable underground equipment on the Honeywell Circuit will result in monthly or more frequent outages with hours of interruption to residents and businesses in the area," George wrote.

He said City staff has been inundated with calls from residents tired and angry about the power writing at 505 Van Ness Ave., San Francisco, CA has constructed in Duarte neighborhoods as part of its Tehachapi Renewable Transmission Tower Project, and "are out of valid reasons to give the public as to why the outages keep occurring."

The City has given Edison a deadline of July 26, 2011 to state its plan to resolve the lengthy and repetitive outages related to underground equipment failure. Duarte also wants Edison's agreement to conduct a peer review, at its expense to objectively analyze the service reliability and adequacy in Duarte with technical recommendations for system improvements, 'so that we can thoughtfully determine a path forward to gain the consistent electrical service our residents deserve, but have had to live without," said George.

In addition, Duarte has asked Edison to

A complete listing of all outage complaints received by the Customer Service Center since January 2007 within the same boundaries.

The utility's thoughts and possible support on whether the second phase of Edison's current General Rate Case is a proper venue to explore rate designs that would set baselines for reliability with adjustments based on tiers of unreliability and repeated service interruptions to residents and businesses.

Duarte residents and businesses are encouraged to lodge their questions and complaints about power outages and other issues relating to Edison service to Edison Customer Service Center at (800) 611-1911. # How's Our Watershed's Water? Five Year Report Released

The Council for Watershed Health released its Puddingstone Lake had "elevated" levels of State of the San Gabriel River Watershed Report at a symposium held earlier this week. The report, which covered the period from 2005 -2009 covered intensive water quality monitoring including the safety of swimming in lakes and streams and the impact of consuming fish caught in the watershed. It also questions whether or not the regulated dischargers met water quality standards and if water quality improved or declined. The report is part of the Council's San Gabriel River Regional Monitoring Program (SGRRMP).

Speakers included representatives from the LA County Sanitation District, So. Cal. Coastal Research Project, the Office of Information Management and Analysis, the National Forest Service and the LA County Environmental Health - Recreational Waters Program. Mary Ann Lutz, Mayor of Monrovia was the keynote speaker.

The report also indicated that "E. Coli levels during 2007-2009 were typically below California standards indicating that it is safe to swim."

Elevated Levels Found in Certain Fish

Although the report indicates that high toxic levels occurred "infrequently" and that the incidence of dangerous chemicals exceeding safe levels was rare, it did conclude that several of the most popular fish caught in the SG Valley's watershedhealth.org mercury (Large Mouth Bass and Carp). Further the levels of other contaminants found in carp, bass, and striped mullet from the Upper Estuary warranted a caution. According to the report, "suggesting that their consumption be limited to one meal per week."

The Council for Watershed Health supports a healthy watershed for the region by serving as a robust center for the generation of objective research and analysis. The Council has established a platform for meaningful collaboration between governmental organizations, academic institutions, businesses and other nonprofit organizations with a vested interest in preserving the watershed.

Founded in 1995 by leading environmental activist Dorothy Green, the Council for Watershed Health produces continuing research programs that examine water usage and quality as well as create and enhance preservation and conservation tactics. The trustworthy expertise and analysis that comes from the Watershed Council's ongoing programs connects a diverse set of groups with overlapping missions in an effort to drive polices that will continually improve watershed quality.

NATIONAL NIGHT OUT AGAINST CRIME

On Tuesday, August 2, neighborhoods throughout Monrovia have been invited to join forces with more than 34 million people from thousands of communities nationwide who will be participating in the Annual National Night Out Against Crime. This event is designed to: 1) Heighten crime and drug prevention awareness; 2) Generate support and participation in local anti-crime efforts; 3) Strengthen neighborhood spirit and police/community relations; and 4) Send a message to criminals, letting them know that our neighborhoods are organized and are fighting back. This event will also kick off the start of our new "Keep Kids Alive - Drive 25" residential speeding traffic safety campaign.

Monrovia Police Blotter

Department handled 609 service events, resulting in 102 investigations. Following are the last week's highlighted issues and events:

72-Hour Mental Evaluation

On July 8 at 10:30 a.m., a caller reported seeing a female subject carrying a pistol in the 100 block of West Foothill. Officers located the subject, who was now walking on Lime, approaching Magnolia. The officers observed that the female was carrying a pistol. Once the female saw the officers, she immediately complied with their bike, was secured by locking the front wheel to commands. The pistol turned out to be a very realistic replica of a semi-automatic pistol. As the officers interviewed the female, it became apparent she was a danger to herself and others, and she was taken to a hospital where she was held for 72-hour mental evaluation.

Juvenile Problem / Fighting in a Public Place -Suspects Cited

On July 8 at 8:44 p.m., officers responded to a park in the 300 block of South Myrtle regarding a fight. Three female juveniles were involved in an altercation over a boy. # Traffic Stop / No-Bail Warrant - Suspect

On July 9 at 12:20 a.m., an officer stopped a vehicle for a traffic violation. The driver said that he did not have his driver's license with him, but identified himself and provided a driver's license number. The officer became suspicious and with further investigation discovered that the driver did in fact have his license on him and he had provided a false name to the officer. A computer check with the driver's actual name revealed a no-bail warrant. The subject was arrested and taken into custody.

Driving Under the Influence - Suspect Arrested

On July 9 at 4:25 a.m., a vehicle was stopped for a traffic violation in the 700 block of West Huntington. The driver was determined to be under the influence of alcohol and was arrested.

Suspicious Toolbox

On July 9 at 4 p.m., security in the 100 block of West Huntington saw a suspicious toolbox in the parking lot on the north side of a building. The security officers had made foot passes in the area and had not seen the toolbox prior to 4 p.m. Officers were dispatched to the location to inspect the toolbox. Based on a recent threat reported in the news and the unusual location of the toolbox, the Los Angeles County Bomb Squad was requested and responded to the location. The toolbox was opened by the bomb squad and no suspicious items were found.

Vandalism - Suspect Arrested

Harry Potter!

For as great as the summer has been, there was one negative aspect: I wasn't going to be home for the final Harry Potter film. That meant that I wasn't going to be able to stand outside the theater for hours with my friends and dress up in crazy costumes or read the books to each other aloud or have epic wand duels. I was going to be somewhere in the middle of the country, possibly hours away from the nearest movie theater, and just think about all that I was missing out on! It also did not help that my Harry Potter mania was at an all time high because my dorm at Brown was Emma Watson's dorm, so my dorm-mates and I were constantly watching Harry Potter clips and quoting the movies. And they were all talking about how excited they were to see the midnight showing and how they were going to make Hedwig or Dobby costumes. Everyone except me.

As my dad and I were driving west back home this sad truth bothered me as we passed posters and billboards for the movie. I thought it was a hopeless cause to try and see the film anytime close to is release, thinking that it would be a sold-out show. Then luck struck. We were driving through Cleveland, Ohio and my dad suggested we try anyways. We found a Regal Theater in an odd part of town, and I remember that as I approached the ticket-lady my heart was pounding with anxiety, waiting for a rejection that never came. She sold me the two tickets for $7.50 each and I felt as though I had won something great. Ultimately I saw the movie only 12 hours later than the rest of my friends, not bad in my book.

PUSD NAMES SCHOOL PRINCIPALS

Pasadena, CA - The Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) welcomes two new school principals in the 2011-2012 academic year and is conducting a search for a new principal of Marshall Fundamental Secondary School.

Marcheta Williams, Ed.D., has been named principal of Norma Coombs Alternative School, which serves approximately 375 students. Dr. Williams joins PUSD from the Alameda Unified School District, where she was an elementary school principal and the district's Gifted and Talented Education (GATE) coordinator. Previously, she was a music educator in the Oakland Unified School District, where she also served as principal and assistant principal. Dr. Williams began her career as an elementary music teacher in the Los Angeles Unified School District.

"Dr. Williams brings leadership and a strong instructional background to Norma Coombs," said interim PUSD Superintendent John Pappalardo. "Her experience will be beneficial to the students and families of Norma Coombs."

Dr. Williams has a Bachelor of Music from the University of Cincinnati College Conservatory of Music, a Master's of Education from the University of Southern California (USC), and a Doctorate of Education from the University of California, Berkeley.

Earlier this spring, Sierra Madre School assistant principal Garrett Newsom was promoted to planning principal of Sierra Madre School's middle school campus, and will lead the development of curriculum and support services. The campus is under construction and is scheduled to open in fall of 2013. The search for a principal of the elementary school is currently underway after the retirement of long-time principal Gayle Bluemel in June.

PUSD is conducting a search for the new principal of Marshall Fundamental Secondary School following the departure this summer of Keith Derrick, who accepted a position as principal of San Marino High School.

Miss Palmer's 3rd Grade Class, 31 talented and creative students, have published a book! It is called, "Miss Palmer's Third Grade: Once Upon A Wayside" and it includes the work of each of the students in her class. We will publish the book in its' entirety this summer, with 3-4 stories each week. The stories will not be edited, well maybe a few spelling corrections. They are all entertaining and original!

Inspired by the book series they read in class, The Wayside School Series by Louis Sachar, the children created their own episodes of life at Wayside. (Hint: Louis Sachar's Wayside School was supposed to be 30 classrooms, one story high; but by mistake it was built straight up 30 stories. That should give you some insight into the kind of stories you will read from Ms. Palmer's 3rd Grade Class!)

A teacher for six years, Ms. Palmer has been at Sierra Madre Elementary for two years. She was born and reared in Sierra Madre, played on the SM Girls Softball Team and was a Sierra Madre Rose Princess in 2000.

This is a series of stories that will enlighten, inspire and keep you laughing

MAC IS MISSING

One fine day at Wayside School, Mrs. Jewels took attendance and noticed that Mac was absent. The class thought this was weird because he was never absent. They figured he must be sick.

class was worried. decided to go look for Mac. The class felt really bad because there was no one to do show and tell or play kickball

The got lots of stuff to look for Mac like Mac's pet dog also named Mac.

First they went to his there. house. They knocked on his The door but no one was there.

They playground but no Mac.

Finally, they saw smoke coming from the distance so they ran toward the smoke. They saw that a bus had broken down. They went to see if everyone was ok. They looked in the window and there was Mac just sitting

They took Mac back to school where he shared the Next, they went to the story of his bus accident.

"RETHINK YOUR DRINK"

Campaign to Help CA Kids Kick Soda Habit by Lori Abbott

"Rethink Your Drink" is the and sports drinks. message health advocates are sending to parents and kids, as First 5 Los Angeles launches a campaign to help young children kick the soda and sugary drink

Francisco Oaxaca, First 5's director of public affairs, become healthy habits as says the average four-yearold in Los Angeles County eats or drinks almost 65 pounds of added sugar a year, which is usually more than their body weight. He says the single biggest source of added sugar in a child's diet comes from sugar-saturated beverages: soft drinks, fruit juices, punches

Something very important for parents to realize that making water the beverage of choice both in the home and outside the home can go a long way towards developing healthy habits for their children, which

Through the end of August, First 5 LA will work with other groups to distribute about 200,000 free copies of a new bilingual book, Potter the Otter: A Tale About Water. Oaxaca explains it includes fun activities to reinforce the sugar-free message.

"It features an otter who is walking throughout the forest, meeting his different animal friends along the way, and he's carrying a glass of water with a straw in it. And he's telling them how important it is to drink water - that maybe they should trade the soda, juice or the sports drink that they're drinking."

Oaxaca says childhood obesity frequently leads to adult obesity, and can cause serious health problems now, and later in life. Learn more about the Rethink Your Drink campaign at www. ReadySetGrowLA.org/ RethinkYourDrink.

THE RETURN OF JANE SMITH by Katie Vita

Jenny entered Wayside School and started to the elevator. When she pressed the button, the door opened but nothing was inside to stand on. Way down the elevator shaft, three kids were trying to climb on the brick wall and were screaming for help. (Well, one was sleeping.) '
Jenny looked down all the way, and then she went to Mr. Kidswatter's office to tell him about the broken elevators.

"Mr. Kidswatter, I think the elevators are broken", Jenny said.

"Oh, Jenny, nice to see you. Uh, don't worry, the repairmen are late again.'

As they were talking, Jenny noticed under Mr. Kidswatter's suit he was wearing a Hawaiin shirt and he had a sun hat on. "Um, Mr. Kidswatter, what's that on your head?" "Oh that, nothing," Mr. Kidswatter said taking it off.

Jenny walked out of his office and up the thirty flights of stairs. Back in Mr. Kidswatter's office he sighed in relief. 'Phew! That was close!'

When Jenny got back to class "I know. I se she asked, "Mrs. Jewels, what's Maurecia asked. going on with Mr. K.? This morning I went to go talk to him and he's like, wearing a Hawai-ian shirt and a sun hat." Sev-

The Scoop on Sugar

A can of soda here, and a box of juice there, amount to a lot of added sugar in your child's diet. The average child consumes 17 teaspoons of added sugar a day, that's 65 pounds of sugar a year! Cutting back - or cutting out - the amount of sugary beverages your child drinks can help him maintain a healthy weight.

Water Woes: Having a hard time getting your child to drink water?

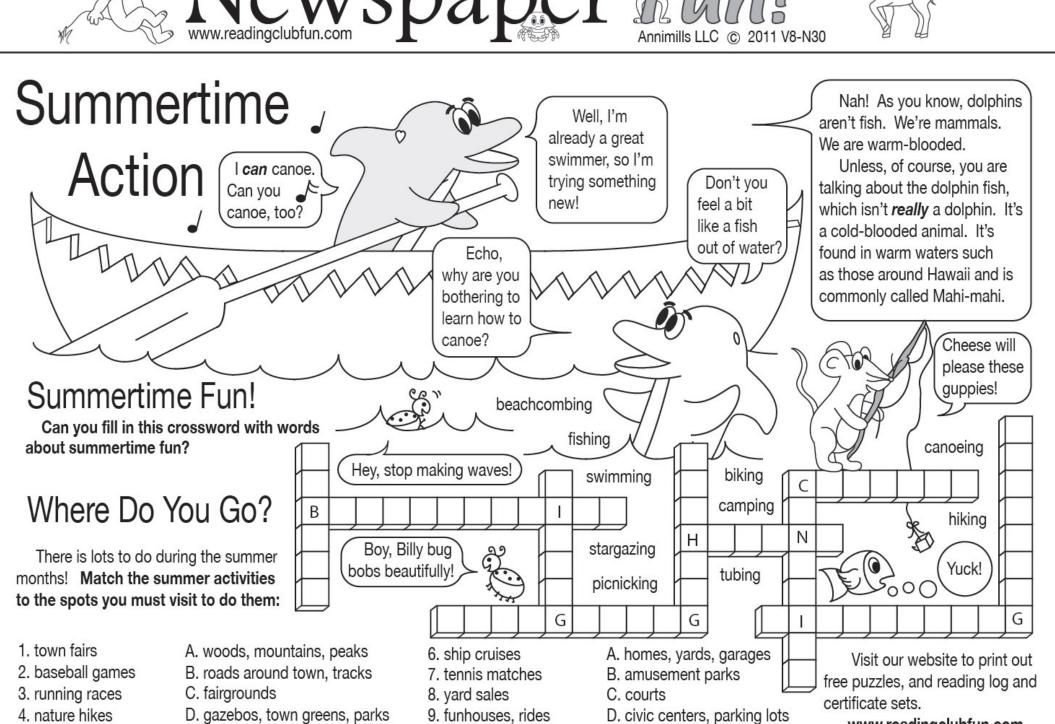

Sometimes choosing water over sugar-sweetened beverages is easier said than done. It can be difficult to explain to your child why she can no longer have several servings of her favorite fruit juice or a can of soda as a treat. Here are some tips on how to make the transition from sugary beverages to water easier!

- Be a role model for your family! Let your child see you drink plenty of water and they will want to do
- Don't stock your refrigerator with sugar-sweetened beverages; the temptation will be too great. Instead, keep pitchers of water with fruit slices in the refrigerator.
- Dilute your child's juice with more and more water each day until he gets used to drinking plain water instead of a sugar-sweetened
- ater at hand every you go. Try buying a steel water bottle and refilling it at home.
- Offer your child fresh fruit instead of fruit juice. Fresh fruits are a great source of fiber and are a great option for snack time! Check out the USDA's new recommendations for a healthy balanced diet. ----
- If your child resists drinking water instead of sugar-sweetened beverages, keep trying! It may be hard to convince your child to drink water now, but in the end, the health benefits of drinking water instead of sugary drinks will be worth the effort.

MORE NAPKINS PLEASE: SLAW DOGS IS A MESSY DELIGHT.

Reader, fellow foodie and Facebook friend, Matt Tuchscherer poised this summer filled question, "Peter, isn't a hot dog a hot dog?" Perfect submission considering we are closing National Hot Dog Month. Yes and No to the question, Slaw Dogs offers two intangible items. Number #1 the service staff is one of the friendliest in all of Pasadena, and if that doesn't move you from the seat, owner Raymond Byrne and his mom have worked up some of the best side dishes in Pasadena. The Thai Slaw ($2.99) is made with real coconut milk, and cleverly enough constructed to summon a queen in the form of Rachel Ray to appraise the Solomon like ingredients.

Listen to Peter Dills' Radio Show

Dining with Dills every Sunday at 4 p.m. on Talk Radio 790 KABC AM.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills

Slaw Dogs is known to often swagger in a hungry line of patrons stretching from the outside sidewalk to the front counter. Lines such as these are often reserved for give away events. Put they testify here to the suggestion of approval from previous diners. Since my last visit they've added beer and wine, which I ordered on this sitting. The Olympia beer, it's old school and dances with every gosh darn dog there is at Slaw Dogs. It's a simple hot dog joint, or so I once thought. The menu is extensive, and that Japanese guy that you see eating 50 dogs, in twenty minutes on ESPN every Fourth of July, would be very proud. Slaw Dogs is much more than just the proverbial hot dog hut. Its menu boosts: links, sausages, bratwurst and hot dogs. One of the attractions here are the toppings as the possibilities are endless here. A small sample: chili, celery, cheese, Russian dressing, carrots, garlic, mayo, feta, olive mix, mustard, coleslaw... enough! You get the idea. You can dine on the "Original" Slaw Dog for ($4.99); it arrives with chili, cheese, and mustard. Or go all out as I did and get the "Green Monster" at ($5.59). This was a good choice with roasted green chili, chipotle mayo, grilled onion, pepper jack and spicy

One of the stars of the show was the corn on the cob for ($2.99). It would make a scarecrow proud f his work. I read a few things on the Internet about the prices being a little high, and my friend Kevin, a bartender at Parkway Grill, thinks so too. Who is he to talk, charging me $7 for a beer that tastes the same as the $3 one down the road. The prices are reasonable and there are combos and kid plates available to give balance to the experience. For hamburger lovers there are choices in that medium as well. I think even for people on the fence about hot dogs, Slaw Dogs may be enough to push you into the other yard and ask fro another bun.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS: SEAPONY

is the dreamy, newcomers, Seapony.

Originally from Seattle, this 3-piece band consists of songwriter Danny Rowland, vocalist Jen Weidl and bass player Ian Brewer. Actual drums are nonexistent, but in its place is a vintage synthesizer/ drum machine. Seapony's debut record is composed of seamless fuzzed-out guitar melodies, reverb vocals, and beats from the aforementioned drum machine. The songs are hazy and wistful, but sometimes the lo-fi vocals make it difficult to decipher the lyrics initially. Often times you don't know when a particular song starts or ends. Majority of the tracks are under three minutes and nearly all of them have similar arrangements and chords. Go With Me is a completely chilled-out record that doesn't require all that much from the listener. Personally, I'm fine with that as long as you're in that particular mood. If you seek higher meaning, take heed to another audible outlet.

Like many summer indie albums pouring in by the dozens, Go With Me is idyllic and gentle. It's the quintessential bedroom music played in of diversity, Go With Me still delivers given the the background of other things you are attending to. The twelve tracks fly by while it may be a good thing if you become tiresome of the same sound for 35 minutes. At the same token, if you dig the first track or two, you'll most likely be content on how the rest of the album plays out. It's a breezy and uncomplicated listen from start to finish. Seapony's sound is surf rock meets noisepop. Songs like "Always" and "With You" feel like they were recycled off Beach Fossils' debut

Go With Me record. The best comparison to another band they sound like is Best Coast (also with a female s i m p l i s t i c singer). Both bands suffer from not having all that and melodic much variety in their respective songs. However, oeuvre from there's no argument that the tunes on Go With Me are lovely and cheerful, but don't expect any songs to be grounded into your head after completion. Truth of the matter, you'll probably have a difficult time remembering which song is which because of the overwhelming resemblance each consecutive song has to one another. At the end of the day, Seapony isn't going to change you, but that's just it. The expressive charm behind Seapony's debut record is simplicity. The lyrics are lucid and the arrangements seem nearly identical in most songs. Despite the lack genre it's coming from. It's a sweet and carefree record that's ultimately very likable. If you're a fan of the effervescent pop rock complexion like myself, Seapony is definitely worth checking out. The replay value on Go With Me may not be present like other standout albums from this year, but played here and there should be just the right medicine. Like all good remedies, once you get too used to it, there's really not much more need

CONVERSATIONS ON NON-DUALITY: TWENTY-SIX AWAKENINGS by Eleanora Gilbert

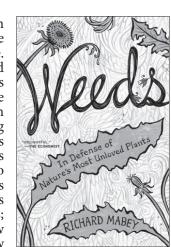

A fascinating compilation of the 26 life stories of perfectly ordinary people and the different paths they've taken on their spiritual journey searching for oneness, completeness, and unity. From a rich variety of backgrounds, the people profiled here have been through extraordinary experiences leading to amazing new perceptions. They all shared a common sense of dissatisfaction with their lives and a longing for happiness, connection, health, love, fulfilling relationships, wealth, and freedom. As they reveal the means by which they each went about achieving an end to their suffering, from therapy to study with gurus, their stories range from funny to moving and tragic to inspiring, but there is a common element in their engagement with nonduality. In simple terms, nonduality means no separation, although it appears that there are separate individuals and objects in our world, in reality there is only oneness. It is this realization that has transformed the lives of these 26 ordinary men and women from many cultures and from a wide range of social, economic, and ethnic backgrounds. Here they share their insights and wisdom.

WEEDS: IN DEFENSE OF NATURE'S MOST UNLOVED PLANTS by Richard Mabey

The true story and true glories of the plants we love to hate From dandelions to crabgrass, stinging nettles to poison ivy, weeds are familiar, pervasive, widely despised, and seemingly invincible. How did they come to be the villains of the natural world? And why can the same plant be considered beautiful in some places but be deemed a menace in others? In Weeds, renowned nature writer Richard Mabey embarks on an engaging journey with the verve and historical breadth of Michael Pollan. Weaving together the insights of botanists, gardeners, artists, and writers with his own travels and lifelong fascination, Mabey shows how these "botanical thugs" can destroy ecosystems but also can restore war zones and derelict cities; he reveals how weeds have been portrayed, from the "thorns and thistles" of Genesis to Shakespeare, Walden, and Invasion of the Body Snatchers; and he explains how kudzu overtook the American South, how poppies sprang up in First World War battlefields, and how "American weed" replaced the forests of Vietnam ravaged by

Agent Orange. Hailed as "a profound and sympathetic meditation on weeds in relation to human beings" (Sunday Times), Weeds shows how useful these unloved plants can be, from serving as the first crops and medicines, to burdock inspiring the invention of Velcro, to cow parsley becoming the latest fashionable wedding adornment. Mabey argues that we have caused plants to become weeds through our reckless treatment of the earth, and he delivers a provocative defense of the plants we love to hate.

Mindspring Education Center One-to-One Instruction for All Ages

37 Auburn Ave., Suite 7A Sierra Madre, CA 91024 (626) 355-1972 www.mindspringEDC.com

Due to the high demand for her tutoring and education services, bookstore owner, Sally Morrison, is opening a new learning center here in Sierra Madre. Mindspring Education Center will cater to students (children and adults) interested in furthering their reading, writing, math, spelling, and comprehension skills. In addition, Sally offers assistance in study skills, homework, and test preparation. She also specializes in helping students with dyslexia and other learning difficulties. Those interested in summer sessions should contact Mindspring soon because space is limited.

As a result of this business expansion, Sally Morrison and Jeffrey Ingwalson, owners of Sierra Madre Books, will be closing the bookstore in June 2011. "We appreciate all the support we've received from our customers over the past few years, but are excited about our new venture. We look forward to continuing to be part of this community."

Japan has been hurt and so many lives have been affected. We cannot change that but Japan is coming back and this was our chance to represent our nation and show that we never stop working. This is like a dream to us and we hope our country shares it with us."

- Homare Sawa

If you're a regular follower of Limbaugh, O'Reilly, Hannity or Beck, you're familiar with the name Saul Alinsky. It appeared in last week's MVN, in Hugh Hewitt's "Right Turn" offering for the week. He both began ("Obama unleashed his inner Alinsky-ite") and ended his column with references to Alinsky, included the obligatory reminder of the president's own background as a "community organizer", and railed against the prospect our nation's healthcare dollars might be spent on healthcare, rather than million-dollar bonuses for insurance execs.

Right-wing propagandists seem to assume we're familiar with the name, and will ascribe dubious intent to anyone linked with it.

Saul Alinsky was born and raised by Russian Jewish immigrant parents in Chicago at the beginning of the last century. He later acknowledged anti-Semitism at the time to have been "so pervasive you didn't really even think about it; you just accepted it as a fact of life."

As a young man Alinsky turned to labor organizing for awhile, then returned to the slums of Chicago to begin a lifelong dedication to "community organizing", or, as he put it, to "turn scattered, voiceless discontent into a unified protest." His early efforts were among workers at the Union Stock Yards, those depicted in Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle". Illinois Governor Adlai Stevenson said Alinsky's efforts "most faithfully reflect our ideals of brotherhood, tolerance, charity and dignity of the individual."

These efforts took him to the slums of Kansas City and Detroit, and the barrios of L.A. By the 1950's he focused on the black ghettos of Chicago and Oakland, which earned him the hatred of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, and a resolution from Oakland's City Council banning him from

His work inspired "community organizers" from Cesar Chavez in the fields of central California to Barack Obama in the slums of Chicago. He was the subject of a senior honors thesis by Wellesley College student Hillary Rodham (Clinton).

The about a little more than greatest crimes in history have been perpetrated just a football tournament. by such religious and political and racial fanatics, If winning this makes one from the persecutions of the Inquisition down to Communist purges and Nazi genocide."

His work informed the anti-war movement of the 1960's, but he criticized actions such as burning the American flag and alienating the middle-class Nixon referred to as the "silent one moment, then we have majority". Where others saw enemies, Alinsky saw potential allies. A decade before the Reagan presidency, Alinsky warned this increasingly troubled middle-class might be "ripe for the plucking by some guy on horseback promising a return to the vanished verities of yesterday."

> Saul Alinsky has been gone almost forty years (a heart attack at 63), but his message carries special resonance today: a call to action across classes and borders, to reject passivity and engage in nothing less than "eternal war"; a "war against poverty, misery, delinquency, disease, injustice, hopelessness, despair, and unhappiness." "I love this goddamn country", Alinsky said, "and we're going to take it back."

No wonder this "community organizer" continues to unnerve the right.

Like many an old sci-fi movie, the problem comes not from the "outsider", but from those who fear what they don't understand. There's an inability, or unwillingness, to understand the definition of "community" in its broadest sense one that spans class, geography, and generations. There are those who can't understand how one who's achieved success in life can feel a sense of community with those who haven't. They assume an inherent phoniness when the likes of a Sean Penn or Brad Pitt espouse shared community with the suffering in Haiti or Namibia.

They're perplexed that those over 55 aren't satisfied with assurances their own Medicare coverage won't be affected under the Republican proposal. It's not them, but the next generation who'd be given a voucher and sent on their way, so why should they care?

A sense of community brings feelings of shared concern, and also shared triumph. Attendance and TV ratings broke records when the New Orleans Saints returned to the Superdome in 2006, the year after Katrina.

Last Spring I wrote of the numerous Japaneserelated events taking place in the San Gabriel Valley, and how the community affected by the earthquake and tsunami extended across the Pacific Ocean all the way to Sierra Madre. We can commiserate with the ladies of Team USA, while also sharing the joy of Ms. Sawa and her

Community organizers from Saul Alinsky to Barack Obama have sought to bring political and economic empowerment to communities at home and abroad. # Your 70% Tax Rate Will Be Transformative

The debt ceiling debate in Washington has the to be to feed, clothe and feel of theatre in that it appears simply to be so house a family when that much political posturing without meat or merit. While there is truth in the sense that both sides are trying to position their argument so as to garner the most public support, the issue at hand is anything but insignificant. We are witnessing it necessary to turn to the one of the defining debates of our generation, the results of which could very well accomplish the transformation of our country which candidate Obama made such an integral part of his campaign.

If the conservatives lose this battle, the marginal tax rate for the middle class will quickly and our culture as a people in fundamental and levels of taxation. devastating ways.

The top federal rate is 35%, but it's scheduled to rise to 39.6% in 2013. Payroll taxes are 12.4% for also state taxes which are now 10.5% for those of us in high-tax states like California. Thus, which apply to all this, the combined top tax rate is currently 44.1%.

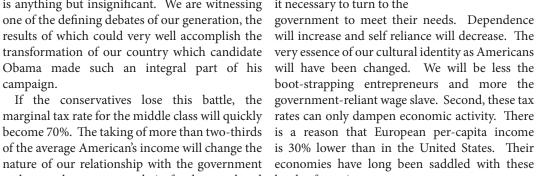

When the Bush tax cuts expire and when Obamacare payroll taxes kick in, the combined tax rate will rise to 58.4%. As bad as that sounds, the situation gets worse. The administration's own projection of the necessary rise in ALL income tax rates is 31.7%, which will take affect in 2016. This is needed to cover the deficits built into the spending plans the President already successfully rammed through the last Congress. This will raise the top combined tax rate to near explaining the amount of the deficits. The 68.8%. The government will be taking 2/3rds of culprit is the amount of spending voted in by the Americans' hard earned wages.

While the argument is made that these rates would "only" apply to the "rich", the truth requires a different extrapolation. Given the projected deficits in future years, tax rates on the middle class (let's say a couple earning as little as $60K in California) will rise to 70% by 2035 and 80% by 2050. That middle class couple is currently paying a combined rate of "only" 45%, but because so largely be complete. Sadly, it won't be a change many of the payroll taxes are disguised or taken bit by bit in small amounts from each weekly paycheck, most middle class earners don't realize freelance writer and has spoken to several civic what they're already paying.

Some have argued that even if the conservatives Consider the current tax structure for a minute. lose the argument today, there will always be other elections and opportunities to reverse the situation. Theoretically, that may be true, but as social security and 2.9% for Medicare. There are time progresses it does become harder and harder to reduce spending. The reason is simple. All government spending ultimately creates a class of considering the offsets, caps and phase outs recipients that come to "depend" on that income. Naturally, they resist all efforts to reduce their income. As more and more Americans are forced to become dependent on government spending of one stripe or another, the tougher it becomes to reverse the trend and reduce the spending.

> The answer to this problem lies in taming government spending now. Our current and projected deficits far exceed anything that has ever been experienced in this country before, but they are not simply due to the faltering economy. Decreased tax revenues don't come anywhere last liberal Congress at the behest of the Obama administration. The battle in Washington is whether that level of spending and government control of the economy and our lives is going to be the new norm, or whether we're going to return to the traditional balance between individual control and government control. If the liberals win this one, America's transformation will for the better.

Marketing vs. Advertising - Part I Promoting Your Small Business

by La Quetta M. Shamblee, M.B.A.

It is important for business owners to understand the differences between marketing and advertising. Both are very important, but each one serves a specific purpose toward the primary goal for a for-profit business – that is, to generate

Think of marketing as the umbrella that encompasses the full range of business activities available to bring buyers and sellers together for the purpose of exchanging or trading something of value. The term marketing refers to an entire process of strategic planning, implementing and managing all of the activities available to make this happen. The overall goal of marketing is to promote goods or services to increase sales.

The marketing strategy for AARP to sell its services is going to be dramatically different from the strategy developed for a new line of skateboards. Why? First of all, the customer groups are very different, not only in age, but in terms of how and where a business will be able to reach them. Telling a group of seniors to follow your company on Twitter is probably not a good idea. By the same token, sending hard copy letters to teenagers with instructions for them to call or write in for information on skateboards is likely a waste of time and money. A sound marketing plan takes key factors like this into consideration to be sure that the mix of activities is appropriate for your target audience.

Advertising is defined as any paid form of nonpersonal presentation and promotion of ideas, goods, or services by an identified sponsor. Advertising is a single component in the marketing process and it has three primary goals: to inform, persuade and remind. Due to the expense, it is important to have a plan for how to incorporate types of advertising are television, newspapers, direct mail, radio, magazines, billboards, newsletters, brochures, telephone and the evergrowing internet.

Large corporations spend billions on advertising, and most commonly, in the form of an advertising campaign that can be repeated and sustained to ensure that it will have an impact. One memorable example is from 1997 with the launch of a series of television commercials that featured a little brown Chichihuahua uttering, "Yo Quiero Taco Bell!" Due to the sustained use of the concept, including new commercials with the same dog, this would be considered an advertising campaign.

Owners of small businesses don't have the deep pockets for advertising on this scale, so they must be savvy about how, where and when to expend resources for advertising. Let's take the case of a local restaurant. Investing time and resources to develop an advertising campaign to place in a local community publication or for online e-ads that reach specific target groups will be much more cost effective than regional media that may reach an impressive 1,000,000 readers. What good will that do for your restaurant if 900,000 of those readers reside 50 miles or more from your location? However, if you're promoting a new cookbook or some type of services that can be ordered or used online, then the large-scale publication with the broader reach may be a good

Water Safety: Instinctive Drowning Response

I'm asking that everybody do their part by keeping our eyes open and being extra vigilant, especially where kids are swimming. It really does take a village where water safety is concerned. If you're not familiar with Instinctive Drowning Response (IDR) you should be for the simple reason that drowning doesn't usually look like drowning and is often silent. Ironically, the involuntary reactions that cause drowning to be a quiet struggle are founded in the Here's how lifeguard instructor and water safety expert Frank Pia describes IDS:

"Except in rare circumstances, drowning people are physiologically unable to call for help. The respiratory system was designed for breathing. Speech is the secondary, or overlaid, function. Breathing must be fulfilled, before speech occurs. "Drowning people's mouths alternately sink below and reappear above the surface of the water. The mouths of drowning people are not above the surface of the water long enough for them to exhale, inhale, and call for help. When the drowning people's mouths are above the surface, they exhale and inhale quickly as their mouths start to sink below the surface of the water. "Throughout the Instinctive Drowning Response, drowning people cannot voluntarily control their arm movements. Physiologically, drowning people who are struggling on the surface of the water cannot stop drowning and perform voluntary movements such as waving for help, moving toward a rescuer, or reaching out for a piece of rescue equipment. "From beginning to end of the Instinctive is loud and full of splashing and shouting. A real Drowning Response people's bodies remain upright in the water, with no evidence of

They can grab lifelines, throw rings, etc."

The Center for Disease Control says IDR is the number two cause of accidental death in children, age 15 and under (just behind vehicle accidents) of the approximately 750 children who will drown next year, about 375 of them will do so body's uncontrollable instinct to survive. within 25 yards of a parent or other adult. In ten percent of those drownings, the adult will actually watch them do it, having no idea it is happening.

Eyes closed Hair over forehead or eyes

JJ JUKEBOX

Well, I've gone ahead and done it. My mother wouldn't be surprised if she were still alive. She predicted this the minute I picked up a guitar all those years ago. My road to ruin and perdition is all but assured.

What have I done? I hesitate to come clean. All right, I have joined with three other wellintentioned guys and formed a rock and roll band (shriek). The four of us are calling ourselves J J Jukebox primarily because we do songs from the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s. You know, the Beatles, the Beach Boys, the Turtles, Van Morrison, Roy

The other three members are Barry Schwam, Steve Cipriani and Mike Gallegos.

I don't want to sound arrogant but out of the 4 members of J J Jukebox I am easily the fourth best musician. And my ranking is secured (unless we add a 5th member).

We have two performances under our collective belts. One was a July 4th pool party, and the second was the Sunday morning music at Mary's Market a few weeks back.

We have two upcoming gigs (a gig is the musicians term for a professional engagement.) We are performing the evening of Wednesday, August 10th, back at Mary's Market for their once a month BBQ event. The event starts at 6:00 pm and Mary's is at the mouth of the Sierra Madre canyon area, 561 Woodland Drive (head north on Mountain Trail, east on Sturtevant, left at the stop sign and wind up a couple of turns) Their phone number is 355-4534.

We are also performing Saturday night, August 13th at Corfu Restaurant, 6:30 until we're asked to leave:) That restaurant is at 48 W. Sierra Madre Blvd (just west of Baldwin on the south side of the street) If you want to come, please make reservations as the seating capacity is limited. The number to Corfu is 355-5993. They are closed Mondays. The food at both restaurants is terrific.

Since I don't want this to be totally a self-serving plug for my band, I want to pass along some interesting trivia that can be used as conversation consciously tried create optimistic articles.

These articles reflect my view that although I recognize that great problems presently exist it is my feeling that somehow humankind will come up with an acceptable solution. feedbacks from readers that I have received indicate that many feel that the endings of my articles seem unrealistic and insincere. People seem to agree with my criticisms but disagree with my solutions. These solutions generally say that if people just start thinking for themselves and eat right and get enough sleep and treat each other civilly then everything will be all right. People say they iust don't buy it.

Last weekend I talked to some friends and couldn't help noticing that many people feel doomed. Not only does the ongoing world economic crisis frighten everyone but personally people seem to be having problems. Maybe it is a reflection of the economy or the endless wars. Famines threaten Africa and dust storms and intolerable heat waves are in the news. Perhaps there is a connection between these conditions and the personal problems some people are experiencing. Husbands are lying to their wives and having secret affairs and teenagers who are having trouble finding jobs are having all kinds of problems drugs. Many seem bored with their lives and are searching for new adventures dissatisfaction their present lives just makes everything worse. Everyone seems to be looking for some sort of escape and expensive fantasy films like the Harry Potter movies offer some relief, but it is only fleeting and the movie ends and it's back to regular lives. This weekend, along with the crowd my wife and I paid eleven dollars to see the Harry Potter film. The next day we went to the art house and saw the movie Project Nim. There were only six people in the theatre but nevertheless I found the movie very worthwhile. The film, a kind of semidocumentary, describes the human child, while attempts results were disastrous as the family completely overlooked chimp. the members of the family who few were completely unprepared weeks I have to deal with what grew to be a primate with the strength of five adults. Eventually the chimp was moved from place to place and finally was used as a subject of medical experiments. The chimp became a very sad, damaged animal living an isolated half-life while the humans who had worked with him grieved but could do little about his situation.

After seeing the film I went home and searched around for my book about Bonobos. I found the book entitled Bonobo The Forgotten Ape by Frans De Waal and Frans Lanting. It is a large beautiful book which describes the nature of the Bonobo, which is a primate closely related to the chimpanzee and to humans. Perhaps you are already familiar with Bonobos, which biologically speaking are the closest you can get to being human without being human. Bonobos look more like humans than other apes and display many behavioral similarities as well. They differ from their cousins the chimpanzees in that their primary behavior can be described as making love not war. While chimpanzee society is male-dominated and war-like, Bonobo society is very different. Bonobos use sex to bond with each other; relieve tensions, and exchange energy and pleasure. They maintain their peaceful society by regular sexual contact homosexually, heterosexually, between older individuals and younger individuals and in groups. Interesting, isn't it?

What I am suggesting is that it is quite possible that human nature at its core is similar to the Bonobo. Perhaps we are all suffering from sexual deprivation, which results in an inevitable dissatisfaction with our lives. Perhaps somewhere along the line humankind lost its way and became frightened of itself. We are all aware of the very limited way sexual expression is accepted in our society. Yet with all the pressures telling us what the rules are supposed to be, it is clear that many people break these rules and, as a result, suffer great personal losses. Increasingly societies have been forced to recognize that the one size fits all mode is no longer applicable. As homosexual and non-married contacts are increasingly accepted worldattempt by a research scientist wide, perhaps this is recognition to place a chimpanzee in the that humankind is becoming home of a family who would more accepting of itself. Possibly treat the chimp just like another we are moving toward more satisfying lifestyles, eliminating were made to teach the animal the need for diversions like wars American Sign Language. The images received to date reveal a complex surface that seems to have preserved some of the earliest events in Vesta's history, as well as logging the onslaught that Vesta has suffered in the intervening eons."

Vesta is thought to be the source of a large number of meteorites that fall to Earth. Vesta and its new the giant asteroid Vesta. On Friday, July 15, Dawn NASA neighbor are currently approximately 117 became the first probe to enter orbit around an million miles away from Earth. The Dawn team

Engineers have been subtly shaping Dawn's trajectory for years to match Vesta's orbital speed "We are beginning the study of arguably the around the Sun. Unlike other missions, where dramatic propulsive burns put spacecraft into orbit around a planet, Dawn simply eased up next to Vesta. Then the asteroid's gravity captured the spacecraft into orbit.

manager at JPL. "It is fantastically exciting that we will begin providing humankind its first detailed views of one of the last unexplored worlds in the inner solar system."

Although orbit capture is complete, the approach phase will continue for about three weeks. During approach the Dawn team will continue a search for possible moons around the asteroid; obtain more images for navigation; observe Vesta's physical properties; and obtain calibration data. In addition, navigators will measure the strength of Vesta's gravitational tug on the spacecraft to more accurately compute the asteroid's mass.

Dawn will spend one year orbiting Vesta, then leave in July 2012 to travel on to a second destination, the dwarf planet Ceres, arriving there in February 2015.

Ask jai...

Ask jai is a weekly column that will strive to honestly answer your job search questions relating to job searching techniques, networking skills, resume writing and interviewing. The employment situation is getting better, however, it is still a challenge finding were the jobs are located and how to get pass the "gate-keepers". As an Executive Recruiter I was privy to working directly with Corporate Recruiters and understanding their process in selecting which candidates to interview and hire. I will candidly answer your questions, possibly bluntly answering your questions, but I will be totally honest. My objective is to help you achieve your employment goal.

About a month ago I had my resumé critiqued and revised by a professional Resumé Writer. The resumé writer charged me an arm and a leg to write it. I felt the final resumé was a waste of my money. The resume was awful! She removed all my work history and reduced my resumé to 1 page! The end result was a useless piece of paper. I originally had a great 3-page resumé that included all my work history and described everything I had ever done for an employer. I have over 20 years' experience as an Administrative Assistant in the Healthcare industry. I was with my last employer for 10 years and worked in several different departments. Previous to that I was employed by 5 different employers. The Resumé Writer explained to me that she felt that the resumé she had written would better represent me to employers and that the employers did not want to receive nor read a 3-page resumé, especially for an Administrative Assistant position. She re-formatted my resume as a Functional Resumé. I really feel like my previous work history was meaningless and as she put it..."totally irrelevant to my future employment". Don't employers want to know that I am committed to long-term employment, that I am loyal, and not a job hopper? I don't want to post this resumé on any job board or send to any employer. Should I go back to using my old resumé? Really Upset

Dear Really Upset:

A Resumé Writer's objective is to write you an effective resumé that will get you results. Employers and recruiters really do not want to read a three-page resumé. Any information on your resumé that is older than ten years is considered obsolete. A resumé is basically an introduction regarding your work history, skills, and accomplishments. The key objective of a Resumé Writer and the resumé is to get you an interview. The goal is to make the resumé interesting and content oriented enough for the employer to invite you to interview for their position. I expect the Resumé Writer composed you a functional resumé instead of a chronological resumé. This sometimes is a shock to their clients. A functional resumé summarizes your past ten years of experience and accomplishments in a summary format and then list the job title, company and years of employment separately. This really is the best format for someone like yourself who has worked for one company over ten years and in similar positions. It is a shock sometimes when you have your resumé revised, updated and re-written, especially by a professional resumé writer. However, they have your best interest at heart and their goal is for your resumé to "grab" the attention of the employer and to contact you for an interview. Submit the revised resumé and see you if start getting results. I bet you will.

Everything you ever wanted to know about how to get a job ...but did not know who to ask. Send your questions to jai@resumeandcareerservices.com or visit website www.resumeandcareerservices.com.

As a youngster growing up in a rural setting in the deep south, I was lucky enough to have had lots of farm animals and domestic pets throughout my childhood. I remember enjoying the luxury of allowing my dogs to roam freely at will, knowing that they would most likely wander through the woods in our back yard, head off to the neighbor's house to play with their dogs and beg for left over scraps, then return home just in time for supper. That was indeed a luxury of freedom for both myself and my pets, and I imagine there are many Sierra Madre locals who have similar childhood memories of their own.

Those were the days, weren't they? With acres of undeveloped land surrounding us, ample space between our homes, and a heck of a lot less traffic passing through our neighborhoods, the risks were minimal for a pet with a nose for wanderlust who wanted to explore the great outdoors. It just seems natural, right? Well, unfortunately the open acreage and broad land gaps that used to exist between homes have shrunk dramatically in most parts of America over the years, and few & far between are the moments of silence without a vehicle passing swiftly by on the boulevards and streets that divide our properties. Let's face it folks, as residents in America, or at least most certainly in Los Angeles County, the days of "freerange" pet ownership are far-and-away long-gone.

Not only is it extremely risky to allow a dog to run free these days, it is also against the law. Pet owners who live in Sierra Madre and other parts of LA County should now know better than to think it is OK to let their dogs roam off-leash. I learned my lesson several years ago, while living in Hermosa Beach with my dog, "Lady". She was a friendly pup, so I was never concerned that she might hurt anyone, and at the time it never dawned on me that she herself could be hurt by roaming free. I lived 2 blocks from the beach, and I loved to let "Lady" go play on the sand during the off-season months when there was minimal traffic and there were few tourists in town. One day, I let Lady go and a cop stopped and cited me for having my dog offleash. The leash laws were new to me, so I was taken very much by surprise when I was told I had to take a day off work to appear in court and pay a fine. That was the last time I ever allowed my dog to roam free. Although I admit that it seemed ridiculous at the time, I have since learned to respect the leash laws, particularly in LA County (one of the most densely populated places in the entire US) and I guess I have become a self-appointed advocate for full compliance, mostly for the sake of the animals.

While we would all love to think that our own dog is smarter than most ... smart enough to stay out of the street and behave properly no matter what, it is simply an unsafe assumption that amounts to nothing less than negligence. A domestic dog is a creature driven more by instinct than taught intelligence or allegiance to its master, regardless of how much training he has received. In fact, the human's delusion of owning the perfectly obedient dog is an excellent example of how, in some ways the dog is indeed smarter than the human being. No offense to those responsible owners who have taken the time to properly train and discipline their pets, it's just that humans need to come to grips with the fact that a canine will do what comes naturally to itself, and much of the time the instinctual behavior of the canine is not in tune with the natural behavior of the human being.

Even a well-trained, very obedient domestic dog harbors a tendency to chase a squirrel scrambling up a tree, a bird taking flight or a cat meandering by on the opposite side of the road, and, when he does see such playful prey within his proximity, his instincts are likely to override any obedience training he may have had, prompting him to cross the street and take chase after whatever it was that caught his attention. It only takes one time for a fast-moving vehicle to pass by the wrong place at the wrong time, to end the life of a beloved pet, so I say set your "pet pride" aside, and take proper precautions. The risks are simply not worth it, and it would be you, not your dog, being blamed if such a tragic accident should happen.

A truly loving, caring pet owner will always protect their pet from harm, and that kind of unconditional love includes educating ones-self and forfeiting some of the freedoms that we would all love to enjoy, such as roaming off-leash like we did in the good old days. If you love them, you will leash them!

It's pretty hard to argue against the tremendous impact that social media has had on modern life. Online dating, in one form or another, almost seems to have overtaken the old-fashioned method of just meeting people through random encounters. Facebook, Twitter and other similar sites now boast total memberships that may be approaching a billion unique users and any pundit who says they predicted this state of affairs way-back-when (and didn't invest every dollar they could get their hands on when they had the chance) can hardly be taken seriously. We knew that things in the future would be different ,but almost certainly not this different. But I guess that's the whole point of social media - for us to get together. And now that we're together - all in one place - the original backers of the Internet would like to use this state of affairs to more closely monitor what's going on online and possibly predict what society as a whole might do probably even before they even know they're going to do it. To this end, DARPA, or the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, are making available $42 million in grants to develop what it calls a new science of social networks. The new program, Social Media in Strategic Communication, is designed to "develop automated and semi-automated operator support tools and techniques for the systematic and methodical use of social media at data scale and in a timely fashion ", DARPA stated. MISC will require the confluence of several technologies including, but not limited to, information theory, massive ☐ scale graph analytics and natural language processing. While SMISC will not directly support natural language processing development efforts, DARPA says, it will certainly use the results of previous programs as well as contribute new challenges to further stimulate ongoing efforts. DARPA went on to say the program has four specific goals. Primary among these is the detection, measurement, classification and measurement of the development and spread of ideas, memes, purposeful information or deceptive messaging and misinformation. Next on the list is the recognition of campaign structures and influence operations across social media sites and communities. The designers of the project are hoping that these steps will lead to better identification of dominant personalities and emergent communities.

It almost seems likes the next logical step in the use of social media for data mining: using what were doing online to predict what we'll do in the real world.

KATIE Tse.....This and That TIGHT ENFORCEMENT

Did you run into Will and Kate during their recent trip to L.A.? I only saw them on TV and in print, but I had hoped they would grace the Sierra Madre British Home with an appearance like the queen did back in 1983. Oh well, maybe they'll come again and visit the largest flowering vine in the northern hemisphere.

You'd have to be living under a rock to not have seen all the articles about how Kate commands a sweeping influence over fashion and lifestyle both in Britain and, some suggest, the U.S.. Kate's great. And I hate to critique someone who shares my name (Although she spells her full name with a "C," so, shouldn't she be Cate?) While I can't say I don't envy her poise, confidence (you'd have to be pretty unshakable to face the queen), patience ("Waity Katie" dated Will for nearly a decade), and figure (say no more), there are some things I'll never allow myself to be induced into using; the first --panty hose!

You've probably read about the royal mandate that ladies at royal events shall wear mid-length skirts, closed-toe shoes, stockings, etc. You also might recall the article by Rita Wilson, Tom Hank's wife, stating that prior to a state banquet at Buckingham Palace, she didn't even own a pair of sheer hose! Kate may be driving up hosiery sales in Britain, but I think it might take a lot more for the trend to catch on this side of the pond. When I think of panty hose, the first thing that pops into mind is "Robin Hood: Men in Tights." Right after that come childhood memories of itchy nylons constricting the circulation in my legs as I attended fancy church or school functions. Besides being generally uncomfortable and impractical (this is why the women's line to the loo is always ten times longer, especially at formal events), nylons create a significant amount of static electricity. I've heard there are sprays for this. I've also heard there are creams to make one thinner and younger. Add this to panty hose's faults: flammability. Apparently they melt to the skin when ignited. Hmm... Friction and combustible clothing... Why would I wear this, again? (This is the only clothing advice I've ever given in this column. I readily admit my total fashion ignorance!)

The second Kate-popularized thing I couldn't be paid to do is her wedding-prep Dukan diet. This French spin on Atkin's involves four phases, starting with an exclusively protein period lasting no more than 10 days (that should tell you something about the safety of cutting out everything except meat and water). After you've lost "enough" weight, you slowly start including some non-starchy vegetables and fruits over the next three phases. You're also expected to exercise to expedite weight loss, although sluggishness from lack of carbohydrates might hinder this. The final phase is supposed to last the rest of your life; you eat normally and practice one proteinonly day per week. But if your previous, "normal" diet was Krispy Kreme doughnuts and chocolate shakes, somehow the idea of a weekly redeeming protein day sounds ineffectual. Admittedly, I haven't exhaustively studied this diet, but I know that protein-exclusive diets are totally counter to our physiology. Besides rotting your kidneys, protein-heavy diets include side effects such as low energy, bad breath, foulsmelling urine, and constipation... real attractive. If the choice is between that and a few extra pounds, I'll choose the latter! Oh, and I'll be doing it sans tights.

THE GOOD LIFE

YOUR HEALTH MATTERS Today's Subject: Compassion Fatigue

Dr. John Talevich, D.C. has practiced in Sierra Madre for thirty years. His clinic, Life Works! Chiropractic, offers patient-specific approaches to the alleviation of pain and individually tailored wellness programs.

A recent article in the L.A. Times described the passage of a new bill restricting the number of hours medical interns and residents can work. In past cases, a shift of 36 hours could be normal. Now, the new ruling restricts those hours to no more than 18. This ruling comes partly as a result of long-term studies indicating that as many as 180,000 people die each year from medical errors and adverse medical events. Although this statistic has been explored both in the medical world and tahe media, the sheer magnitude of the numbers seems so unreal that we are unable to accept the gravity implied. Additionally, there are those in the medical profession who believe these long hours are an essential part of the training. This is in sharp contrast to a survey done on the general population, 80% of whom said they would feel compromised in being treated by sleep-deprived physicians.

A New Model

Rachel Remen, M.D is a Bay area physician and co-founder off the Commonweal Cancer Help Program. Dr. Remen holds workshops that allow physicians to explore their relationship to their work, patients, and themselves. Over the many years she has been doing this work, she has developed a simple set of questions that are used to help doctors heal themselves. On a daily basis, there are three questions asked. First, what touched you today. Second, what inspired you today? Finally, what surprised you today?

Initially, most of the participants had difficulty answering the questions. It became clear that doctors did not think in terms of themselves, always focusing outwardly on others. As they began to seek answers to these questions, a deeply personal interest was revealed. In many cases, this was a missing link to professional fulfillment.

With these new laws being passed, and with advocates such as Dr. Lucian Leape, M.D. of the Harvard School of Public Health, and Helen Haskell, founder of MAME (Mothers Against Medical Error), we can begin to reform a deeply important aspect of health care: the physical, mental/emotional and spiritual health of our physicians.

One more thing: We have made it a happy habit to ask ourselves the three questions before bed in our household. Looking over the day's inspirations and surprises adds greatly to the quality of gratitude in our lives. Try it on!

Have a wonderful week, Dr. John

Assistive Listening Devices Can Help Seniors Hear Better

What can you tell me about assistive listening devices? My husband is hearing impaired but doesn't small speaker that can be placed by his chair, and like wearing his hearing aids, so I'm wondering if some of these devices can help. Loud Talking Spouse Dear Loud, Assistive listening devices (or ALDs) are very useful products that can help hearing-impaired people – with and without hearing aids – hear better! Here's what you should know.

Listening HelpersALDs are electronic amplifying devices that will let your husband adjust the volume and tone so that he can hear and understand the television, telephone or other people speaking. It's also important to know that these detypes of ALDs that can help.

Telephone Amplifiers: To improve hearing over the telephone there are a number of handset and in-line amplifiers you can add to your regular phone, or you can purchase an amplified telephone. Most amplified phones allow you to adjust the volume and tone for better clarity and they usually come with extra loud ringers and flashing ring indicators to alert you when a call is coming in. Clarity (clarityproducts.com, 800-426-3738) and ClearSounds (clearsounds.com, 888-965-9043) make a nice variety of these products with prices ranging from $30 up to around $300. Harriscomm.com, teltex.com and soundbytes.com are also good sites to shop. Or, see if your state has a specialized telecommunications equipment program (see tedpa.org) which provides free ampli-

If the amplified products don't do the trick, another option is caption phones. These are telephones that have a built-in screen that will let your husband listen to the caller, as well as read written, word-for-word captions of everything the caller is saying. Go to captel.com (or 800-233-9130), and click on your state to learn more.

TV Listening Systems: If hearing the television is a problem, a TV listening device will let your husband increase the volume and adjust the tone to meet his needs, without blasting out you or the rest of the family. The best devices available toa headset. Many of these devices work with radios and stereos too. Or, if your husband would rather not wear a headset, some systems offer a many work with T-coil enabled hearing aids. TV Ears (tvears.com, 888-883-3277) is one of the best products sold today with prices starting at $100. Personal Listening Devices: Depending on your vices work best for people with mild to moderate husband's needs, there are many different types of hearing loss, you don't need a prescription to buy listening devices on the market, in all price rangthem, and they usually aren't covered by insurance es, that can help. For one-on-one and small group or Medicare. Here's a breakdown of the different conversations, a pocket-sized amplifier that comes with a small microphone and ear buds may do. Or, for a wider range of hearing capabilities consider FM listening devices. These are wireless products that can boost hearing in many difficult listening situations including auditoriums and lecture halls. FM devices come with a small microphone and transmitter placed on or by the person speaking, and the listener wears a receiver that may be used with ear buds, earphones, or with T-coil enabled hearing aids when worn with a neck loop. Harriscomm.com and independentliving.com are two good sites for locating these types of products.

Alerting Devices: There are also a variety of alerting devices that can help people who have trouble hearing the doorbell, alarm clock, telephone or smoke detector. These products use flashing lights, special multi-tone ringers or vibrating devices as a means to alert you. You can find these items at many of the websites previously listed, along with sonicalert.com and silentcall.com for around $50 to $150.

Savvy Tip: For more information and assistance with ALDs, contact an audiologist or hearing instrument specialists (see howsyourhearing.org or ihsinfo.org to find one near you). # RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Orange Bar B Que Chicken

INGREDIENTS:

Marinade:

1/2 cup freshly squeezed orange juice

1/4 cup olive oil

1/4 cup hot sauce 1/4 cup Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon grated orange zest

1 (4 pound chicken) cut into 10 pieces, patted dry with paper towels

Glaze:

4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) butter

1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup freshly squeezed orange Juice
1/4 cup Neely's BBQ sauce

1 tablespoon grated orange zest

2 tablespoons Dijon mustard 1/4 teaspoon allspice

DIRECTIONS:

Mix the orange juice, olive oil, hot sauce, mustard, and orange zest together in a large bowl. Add the chicken and toss to combine. Cover with plastic wrap and let marinate for at least 1 hour and up to overnight in the refrigerator.

Prepare the grill to medium direct heat. Let chicken come to room temperature before grilling.

Drain the chicken from the marinade and pat dry. Grill on each side for 5 minutes, then turn the heat to medium-low and cover the lid of the grill. Continue cooking the chicken until it's cooked through, about 25 minutes more.

While the chicken is grilling, melt the butter in a small saucepan on the grill. Whisk in the honey, orange juice, BBQ sauce, zest, mustard and allspice. Reserve some of the glaze in a small rame-kin for serving.

Brush the chicken pieces with glaze, then flip the chicken, glaze side down, and cook for 2 minutes. Brush second side of the chicken with glaze and flip again. Continue cooking for 3 more minutes. Remove the chicken from grill to a platter and serve with reserved glaze.

HOMES AND PROPERTY

One Of A Kind: Featuring unique homes and gardens and the people whoe create them. Story and Photos By Chris Bertrand

Just Listed: 1908 Craftsman Artfully Restored, Seamlessly Remodeled... Picture perfect!

Mark Dulaney, Sierra Madre general contractor, has worked miracles on his home's original 1000 square foot bungalow on North Auburn, expanding it to 2866 square feet (taped by REST) over the past few years. This home was featured in the 2010 "Coolest Kitchens" tour at Taste of Sierra Madre.

"We used to live next door," Dulaney recalls, "and always loved the neighborhood and the charm of this home. We bought it a decade ago from a couple who moved to the Inland Empire, seeking a much bigger home for a lot less money. I'm sure glad we stayed here in Sierra Madre. The values have held much better than other areas, and the real estate market is still strong here.'

Dulaney, a local contractor for over twenty years, created an expanded Craftsman that reveres the original, while incorporating the needs of today's buyers. "It was important to make the old and the new blend seamlessly together, so you can't really tell where one ends and the other begins," commented Dulaney.

The end result reveals exquisite formal living and dining rooms restored to vintage glory, two refreshed original bedrooms with a connecting bath updated with dual sinks, which then lead to a great room featuring a magnificent kitchen, casual dining nook and family room. A third main floor bedroom is located off the kitchen, as is the side entrance and laundry room.

"I love doing the carpentry. "I built the cabinetry doors myself to my own exacting specs. I wanted them to have modern features, but look beautiful and true to the period. I was especially careful with the small details like the hammered or pebbled finished cabinet and door handles to match the front door, which I carried throughout the house."

Somewhere in the middle of the kitchen's huge center island, clearly destined to be the hub of the home, is the back dimension of the old home, though it's not at all evident today. "I hate when a home that's remodeled 'shouts out' to say, 'Here's the new part!" he chuckled.

Speaking of the island, Dulaney purposely designed the kitchen with multiple chefs and entertaining in mind. The counters are slab soapstone, a material often used in the period, and very practical and "green" for use today. There's no chemical polishing needed. Apply vegetable oil into the stone, and it becomes water and stain resistant. Just keep an eye on it, adding more oil when it begins to dry out. This "old" but elegantly "new" and green solution leaves a honed sheen and brings out the veining in the stone.

Dulaney had the slate flooring of the kitchen laundry and half bath custom cut into a mosaic pattern, giving the room texture and some deep green color, complementary to the soapstone.

The appliances are gourmet chef grade, with a Thermador Professional gas stove with six burners and a griddle, plus two ovens to please any aspiring foodie. The backsplashes feature a mini subway tile, with a faint pebble finish, to continue the feature identified in the hardware.

Perfect for staging party beverages and appetizers, a second sink, wine chiller and extra cabinetry are located adjacent, but not too close. The laundry, appointed in the same quality cabinetry and flooring, can be easily utilized as an extension of the it be a recreation area, studio or other living space will be held next Sunday, July 31, from 2-4 p.m. Adjacent to the driveway, an office or bedroom use, and is plumbed for a sink and bath.

Cool News About Fans

(NAPS)-You no longer have to let your ears suffer so the rest of you can feel cool and comfortable. Using modern sound control technology, some of today's fans enable you to feel cooler without the loud noise of older fans. For example, consider one of the new Honeywell QuietSet fans, which offer multiple levels of "quiet" that correspond to your personal preferences. At the lowest settings, the sound from these fans is virtually undetectable, making them great choices for areas where you don't want additional noise, such as TV rooms, bedrooms, offices and children's nurseries.

Beyond the quiet factor, today's new fans come in sleek, modern designs such as a slim tower or stand fan. You can pick the one that works best with your decorating style and personal space needs. In addition to their attractive designs and ability to keep you feeling cooler with minimal noise, today's modern fans can also help save money on cooling costs. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, cooling and heating accounts for almost 56 percent of the energy used in a typical U.S. home, making this a family's single largest energy expense. You can save up to 20 percent on cooling energy bills in the summer simply by running a whole-room air circulator along with air conditioners or central cooling systems. Using a fan in conjunction with an air conditioner or central cooling system improves the circulation of cooled air throughout a room. Therefore, less cool air is required to produce a cooling effect. This allows you to raise the temperature on your thermostat, using less energy to cool the same space. To find out how much money fans can save you annually, visit www. honeywellfansavings.com, where a free interactive "savings calculator" enables you to quickly and easily determine how much you can potentially save on your cooling bills by using a fan in your home. With advances in sound technology and design, along with their money-saving potential, it's no wonder that fans still rank high on the list for spring and summer "must-have" products. So say good-bye to your old, loud fan and trade it in for a newer model that helps provide quiet, cooling comfort. With today's quiet, efficient fans, you can save some cold cash and increase your comfort in warm weather.

BENEFITS ON BOTH SIDES

There are new rules regarding short sales meant to improve the experience for both sellers and buyers, but the legalities and legwork can overwhelm even the most savvy. Of course, that's where the real estate agent shines, handling the paperwork and the phone calls, leaving you to focus on your

Keep in mind that if you're expecting to buy a home on short sale, you can get a great deal, but don't expect miracles from a bank that has agreed to accept a price lower than what the sellers owe on their mortgage. These short sales often generate multiple offers, and if a home has been approved to sell for $200,000, don't expect to waltz in and offer $125,000.

The real advantage of a short sale deal is that the home will likely be in much better physical condition than its foreclosure counterpart. Often, a foreclosed home will have been abandoned for months, and perhaps trashed before being vacated. A short sale property in better condition is in and of itself a benefit with real value that offsets any lower price you could offer on a foreclosure.

And for sellers, a short sale preserves your dignity, reduces some of the stress, and won't damage your credit history as much as a foreclosure. Whether selling or buying, consult an agent for the best
