SMPD CHIEF MARILYN DIAZ RETIRES

Los Angeles County's 1st Female Police Chief Retires After Nearly 38 Years in Law Enforcement by Susan Henderson

Sierra Madre-

Marilyn Diaz served her last day as Chief of the Sierra Madre Police Department on Thursday, December 29, 2011 after almost 6 years in that capacity. During her tenure as the city's 'Top Cop' she has been credited with bringing a new level of professionalism to the department and building a more positive relationship with the community and the city's police officers. The respect she has garnered from the citizen's was very apparent on Thursday evening, when a reception to honor her was held.

More than 100 Sierra Madre residents, including members of the Police and Fire Departments, paid tribute to a woman who was described as, "professional, kind, nurturing and a role model" by a variety of speakers. Presentations were made to her from the City Council, city staff, and the Police Officer's Association. In addition, the Sierra Madre Kiwanis Club announced the establishment of the 2012 Marilyn Diaz Teen Support Fund for the Foothill Unity Center, to honor Diaz's outstanding work town Sierra Madre checking to see if merchants were in need of any assistance and greeting citizens. Everywhere she went citizens stopped to greet her and express their sadness at her retirement.

Although her time in Sierra Madre has not been without controversy, lawsuits from members of the department; and even efforts to have the county take over the department, Diaz has managed to prove her critics wrong. As she departs, she leaves the Sierra Madre Police Department better trained, more professional and literally better organized. She was at the helm of the department during some of the city's biggest and/or most horrific crimes - a murder victim found at 1 Carter; a stabbing in Memorial Park; the largest financial crime in the city's history, the EVG credit card scam andon the heels of her retirement, the developing story of a well known resident arrested for possession of child pornography. Diaz, herself a resident of Sierra Madre, for 20 years, Diaz was born in Los Angeles and attended Cal State LA and the University of Southern California. She has been in law enforcement since 1973. In 1974 she joined the Pasadena Police Department where she remained for 32 years. She was the first woman assigned to a patrol office. She retired from the PPD in 2006 and joined the Sierra Madré department within a week.

Marilyn Diaz has received numerous awards and citations for outstanding professional and civic service, including, partial listing, the Pasadena YMCA Woman of Excellence Award.

SMPD Čaptain Larry Giannone will become the city's Interim Police Chief upon Diaz's retirement.

REMEMBRANCES

MARIE PEDERSEN

On Friday, December 23, 2011 at 11:01pm

Marie Pedersen, beloved wife and mother, died on Dec. 21, 2011, following a battle with brain cancer. She spent the last hours, days and months of her life surrounded and embraced by her husband, her five children and their spouses, her grandchildren and close friends. She was 83 years old.

Born in Jersey City, New Jersey to Elie Pierre and Helen Leroy, Marie and her beloved older brother Robert spent their early years on the east coast, before the family decided to move west in 1939. The trip, which Bob documented as the family crossed the country, helped crystallize Marie's lifelong love of the west and Native American culture, which began with her early readings of James Fennimore Cooper's The Last of the Mohicans. Once settled in Los Angeles, Marie's beauty and kindness made her popular at her new school, Blessed Sacrament, where she made many lifelong friends, continuing to meet up with classmates for decades afterward. When her mother Helen needed to take on a fulltime job, the teenager learned to manage a household along with her other duties. She attended Corvalis high school where her good nature and integrity caused the school newspaper to do a story celebrating her as "soft-spoken and dignified."

Following her graduation, Marie worked in the publicity department for KHJ Radio in Hollywood. The teenaged Marie not only developed her own fans among the stars who visited the studio, but she had a small army of protectors keeping an eye out for her. As much as she appreciated it, her protectors needn't have worried. Marie's gentleness was matched by her integrity, inner strength and iron-willed feistiness. Not only could she look out for herself, but she could also keep an eye on those around her with a remarkable sensitivity, always finding time to stop and offer a word of encouragement to someone seemingly at just the right moment. Though she had suitors, Marie held out for the Right One, and found him in Aksel Pedersen. The pair married in 1956 after dating for six months and enjoyed a 55-year marriage that produced five children—Aksel, Dana, Kirk, Lynne and Erik--and $eight\ grandchildren.$

A caring, deeply involved mom—and with the amount of coordination it took to manage five children, her job could hardly be called "stay at home"--Marie kept house, looked after her mother after her father died in 1963, took in many a stray animal and raised her children with great love, care and a gentle strength she found in her Catholic faith. She took great pride in her children and grandchildren and let them know it, pleased by their accomplishments and supportive through their endeavors.

Once her youngest was in school, Marie went back to work, first as a secretary and later in the office of the Sierra Madre News. From there, Marie took a job in the front office of La Salle High School, joining the staff the same year that her youngest child enrolled (which often led her to joke that they were freshmen together). It was a perfect match for Marie, who not only was an involved, compassionate Catholic throughout her life, but who also had enough love and kindness to share with the hundreds of students who came through the door of the front office.

Many students over the years have shared stories of how Marie seemed to seek them out when they needed a friend or word of encouragement the most: It was as if she had such an abounding source of love that it was inexhaustible—even when managing her marriage, family and the death of her own dear mother.

Marie worked at La Salle for three decades, eventually transitioning into working with the principal, and the community there was one of the great loves of her life along with her husband, faith and family.

Marie, who had previously bounced back from a broken hip, finally retired as her beloved Aksel battled his own cancer diagnosis, and their last few years were spent quietly together in the home they loved and shared for so many years.

Throughout her life, Marie Pedersen lived with integrity, compassion, love, strength and great pride in her husband, children and friends. She cared for others more than herself, looked out for those in need and lived an exemplary life of service to those around her. The love that she shared so freely in this life seemed to grow stronger in her final days and will continue to resonate long after she is gone. She is irreplaceable.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be sent in memory of Marie Pedersen to La Salle High School, 3880 E Sierra Madre Blvd., Pasadena, CA 91107 to the attention of Irene Santucci. Donations will provide tuition assistance to La Salle Services were held at Cabot & Sons, on December 27, 2011.

THE YEAR AT A GLANCE

MOTHER NATURE MADE MORE MEMORABLE HEADLINES IN 2011 THAN ANYONE ELSE OTHER THAN HOMETOWN HERO JOHN SHEAR

IT STARTED WITH THE FIRST EVER RAINED OUT WISTARIA FESTIVAL! (Above left - March 26, 2011 MVNews Archives) Visitors waited patiently in pouring rain to view Sierra Madre's historical Wistaria Vine. Although there have been other rainy festivals in other years, this was the heaviest rainfall in the festival's history. Old Fashioned California Trolleys were scheduled to take visitors from owntown Sierra Madre to the vine. Trolley service continued until a combination of the winds and rain made the trip to the vine too risky. Tour buses rom various parts of the state also made the journey to Sierra Madre. The rains never stopped for more than a few moments all day.

But by August, (above right MVNews August 27, 2011), the wet cold weather was totally forgotten when temperatures soared past the 100 degree mark.

However, the worst and best of 2011 came the first week of December, (right MVNews December 3, 2011), when hurricane strength winds, 85 - 100 mph by some measurements, destroyed hundreds of trees and damaged more than 30 homes. The town was without power for several days, some areas as long as 5 days.

City staff did an extraordinary job under the circumstances utilizing what resources were available to keep residents safe and as informed as possible. The public works department and outside contractors such as Osti Tree Service had the majority of the town cleaned up before the holidays.

The good news that was drawn from the windstorm was that miraculously there were no deaths or injuries.

MINDSET FOR SUCCESS IN 2012

The definition of success is specific to each you need to do to bring those reasons to life. business owner. For some of us, it's having the flexibility to pick children up from school, or taking an active role in local civic and community organizations that meet during typical business hours. Perhaps those who work from home enjoy taking a relaxing walk to the local coffee shop for a quick rendezvous with other entrepreneurs for inspiration.

For many, it's the idea of being one's own boss, setting financial goals that aren't restricted by an employer's salary scale, or simply having a sense of freedom to decide when and how to work. Self-employment has become one of the most popular career paths for university graduates in recent years. Officials at Temple University were somewhat surprised after reviewing the results of a survey of its 2009 graduating class - it revealed that the selfemployment was ranked among the most popular career choices along with banking, healthcare and education.

It's not the easiest road, but it's well worth it. If things didn't go as well as you would have preferred last year, it's a good time to take a personal inventory of what really makes you tick as an entrepreneur. It's important to rekindle the fire that prompted you to choose the path of self-employment. Think about why you made the decision to leap into the the business that you truly envision. world of self-employment and consider what

Let's face it, your success as a business owner is indelibly tied to your bottom line of whether you're turning a profit and whether it's sufficient to sustain your livelihood. If you are among those who dared to step into the shoes of self-employment, then you have already demonstrated that you have the gusto needed to keep taking steps needed to reach your goals.

Looking to generate more profit throughout 2012? Need more customers willing to give you money for what you sell? In the midst of these challenging economic times, some small businesses are actually gaining steam. The question for every entrepreneur is, "Am I doing everything within my power to generate the type of success that I desire?"

Those who dream of greatness on a personal and business level are well served by a popular adage for success, "The difference between a dream and a goal is a plan with a deadline." Understanding and applying this distinction will propel your business and your income in an upward direction. The list of what's needed to bring your plan to life is not long at all, it's simply a matter of focus, discipline and consistency. The start of this year presents an opportunity for a fresh new start to pave your way, blaze your trail and commit to building been. Did I make all the gaffes I possibly could? Did I fill my quota? What is my quota, anyway?

The New Year offers the opportunity to start over. Actually, what happens is people simply make new mistakes curiously similar to the mistakes made during the old year. What a waste of time.

What is wrong with my old mistakes? The only thing I can think of is that I did not work hard enough to make the most of them. It is one thing to make a mistake, but it is quite another thing to perfect the art of making a mistake so that you do not have to repeat it ever again. Too many amateurs have given mistake-making a

Some mistakes take lots of time to fully mature, but when its time comes, I want to make sure it is implemented as smoothly and as perfectly as possible. I refuse to execute any mistake before

If I am any judge of character, the majority of people will not make any new mistakes this coming New Year. Oh, they think they are making new mistakes, but in reality, they are dusting off old ones and re-dating them for the current year.

For those who take mistake-making seriously, allow me to offer some help to guide this pursuit in the coming New Year. Look back over the old year and make a list of

> Go over each mistake on your list and determine if it needs repeated for the New Year. It does not make sense in doing new mistakes if you are not finished with the old ones. Nothing is more disheartening than a half-baked mistake.

For every mistake from the previous year not needing repeating, place a nice red star in front of it. That mistake can now go into your Hall of Blame, which you will never have to repeat again.

Of course, you will have some mistakes, even though they have been perfectly executed, which are well worth repeating.

Now look at all of those mistakes listed for repeating during the New Year. Prioritize them so you can begin the New Year with a good plan. Prioritize this list and think of ways in which you can improve on your mistakes from this past year. No satisfaction compares with doing something as good as you can.

Some people have the strange idea that they live a completely mistake-free life.

The Bible, an authority on mistakes, says this; "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make Him a liar, and His word is not in us." (1 John 1:8-10

The great hope we have is that there is no mistake bigger than God's ability to forgive.

exciting day. We met newly-acquired friends visiting from the Philippines.

The Saga began several months ago when I was on the Internet and in a "Pro Basketball" mood. Years ago, as a college senior in Newburgh, New York I had friends on the Knicks. I met a young lady, Bonnie Wright, who eventually married Emmette Bryant and we attended games together. Red Holtzman, the Knicks then-coach actually gave money for a room to be rented and we had a surprise birthday party for the late Nate Bowman. "Clyde", (Walt Frazier) was a great dancer and Cazzie Russell, "Captain Willie" (Willis Reed), and "Head and Shoulders" (Phil Jackson) were among attendees. It was a blast! Emmette was traded to the Celtics, so we met several players there including the late Larry Seigfried. Every so often I go on the Internet to see how people are doing.

I am a really big Pete Maravich fan. I never personally knew Pete but admired him greatly from his playing time at Louisiana State under his Dad, Press. Pete tragically died here in Pasadena, while working at the Church of the Nazarene at a basketball clinic. It was so sudden; he was dribbling the ball and just collapsed. Pete had been born with a heart defect which no one realized. To this day, I still have a heavy heart when I pass by that

The day I was in the "basketball mood", I found out Pete had two sons, Jaeson and Josh. I connected with them and found a "Choy Lu' who also was a great fan! Choy and I became Facebook fans and shared Websites on line. My favorite link is the "Fifty Greatest NBA Players of all Time." The link shows halftime at an All-Star Game where the 50 GREATEST NBA players are mentioned. Pistol Pete was the only one who had passed away, and was represented by young sons Jaeson and Josh. I was blown away by the amazing trip down Memory Lane and seeing SO MANY stars whom I watched in high school and college. And I am 63! I even saw Bob Cousy as a high school freshman in New Jersey. We rode on two buses to the old Garden. We were in the highest bleachers and everyone kept saying how

Last Friday was a very fan! So many players I had watched over the years were introduced. Presently, a few have passed away, such as "Wilt the Stilt" Chamberlain and Dave DeBusschere. Pete was represented by his two young sons, Josh and Jaeson.

Choy Lu is such a Pistol Pete fan that his dream was to come to the USA, meet Pete's two sons and visit Pete's grave. Choy, his wife Connie, son Josh and daughter, Maroushka are currently here in the USA. They have been visiting relatives in Riverside, with outings that included Disneyland, Sea World and the San Diego Zoo. It's up in the air if they will make the trek to Louisiana because there are no direct flights and the expense. Choy has spoken to Pete's sons; if he makes it to Louisiana, he will meet them.

This past Friday they came to our home and I prepared Italian food, which they greatly like. The children said they were tired of "American food" and were glad they did go to a Chinese restaurant a few days before.

Choy is actually Chinese and manages a trucking business. Connie, his wife is Filipina. Usually it is frowned upon if you marry someone not of your own nationality. However, Choy's real grandmother passed away when he was very young, and his "adoptive" grandmother is Filipina, so that helped his family accept Connie. And why would they not? She is beautiful, warm, friendly and an excellent mother. Choy noted that their children, Josh and Maroushka have a maid at home, but I couldn't believe it. They served the food, wouldn't let me clear the table and were so gracious. Josh and Maroushka speak FOUR languages, English, Tagalog, Mandarin and Cantonese! They are involved in sports, musically inclined, do well at school and love to

My hubby Bob and I learned a lot from the Lu's. In the Philippines, Pro Basketball is king. American football is not a favorite. We spent the afternoon talking about basketball, sports, our families and customs. I would mention a player. Then Choy would say a date and tell you that on that day, Pistol Pete played against that player and describe the action! It blew my husband away that Choy had so much knowledge. He is only 47. So what he tells us is from games he saw in much later years! Pro Basketball is GREATLY loved in the Philippines. If someone has a TV that gets Internet reception, a group will watch an old game together-like our Super Bowl parties!

We were so thankful to meet this wonderful family and learn a little more about the Philippines. It was fun to reminisce about the old NBA! We hope Choy fulfills his lifelong dream to great Cousy was! That was before I became a real visit Pistol Pete's grave and meet his sons.

When asked about Paradiso, Charlie responds, "Some people might say that starting a float company in this economy is crazy, but for us, the timing fell together perfectly. Arcadia adopted a Redevelopment Agency for the city in 1973.

The state Supreme Court landed a second blow when it disallowed the state's offer to have cities like Arcadia pay a "ransom" from city property taxes to keep the money coming. Arcadia City $1.5 million in ransom.

> Of broader impact, Thursday's ruling struck a serious blow to the entire Gold Line project from Pasadena to Azusa, with the critical mandated maintenance and operations facility in Monrovia owned entirely by the Monrovia Redevelopment Agency. Gold Line officials say they will "review (their) options." (It was one of two blows to the Gold Line Thursday, the other from a different court judge who threw out the Supplemental Environmental Impact Report that would have allowed the Monrovia facility to be used for the Gold Line. Officials will challenge that ruling and hope for a reversal.)

Although Rusnak is once again threatening to leave Arcadia unless the City ponies up another $3 million in incentives to cover $1 mil. in lost annual onuses from Mercedes for the past three years, Arcadia had hoped to use Redevelopment money to attract new businesses to the buildings that have been vacated.

Redevelopment money was responsible for the creation of Old Pasadena and San Diego's Gaslamp Quarter. Merchants in the Downtown Arcadia area along First Avenue and Huntington Drive have spent the past year laying plans to create a legal business district in early 2012 that would work to revitalize Downtown Arcadia into something akin to Old Monrovia on Myrtle Avenue. The Arcadia City Council previously approved $20,000 in Redevelopment money to pay for a consultant to help the merchants explore the project and recently tentatively approved additional Redevelopment Agency funding to create the Business District. That plan is now in limbo as the result of Thursday's ruling.

Also up in the air is the ongoing employment of the people in the City's development department since cutting off state Redevelopment funding would drastically cut the City's ability to finance any development. That includes Economic Development Manager Jerry Schwartz, whose entire salary is paid by Redevelopment funds. BILLY SPICER TO FILL SHAW'S SEAT BY MONROVIA CITY COUNCIL

By Joan Schmidt

At the Monrovia City Council December Meeting 20, 2012, Billy Spicer was appointed to sit on the Council as a replacement for Clarence Shaw until Shaw returns from active duty with the military. The vote was 3-1, with Council Member Tom Adams voting the only "no". Mayor Mary Ann Lutz and Council Members Joe Garcia and Becky Shevlin voted in favor of the appointment.

This saga began last July when Shaw was activated to military duty. The Monrovia City Council had operated smoothly for the next five months. On December 1, at a special council meeting, there was a deadlock vote of 2-2 on a vote pertaining to the city's parks programs.

California Law permits a city council to appoint a temporary replacement t for a Council Member who has been called to active duty. However, a city council is not required to do so. Monrovia's City Council seemed to be operating fine until the December 1 deadlock park programs. At

Pasadena, CA - The Pasadena Unified intendent Jon R. Gundry. PICTURE THIS

The human mind is an incredible thing - the greatest super computer that has ever been created. It can add, remember, envision, create, inspire. It has the subconscious that allows us to breathe, our blood to flow, our heart to pump without us even being aware that it is regulating everything so that we can function. Even today, in 2011, the mind is still an enigma to mankind. Freud scratched the surface, but there is still so much more to be investigated and discovered. But the mind is also one of the best modes of playing and entertainment, and can bring people together through more than emotions and hormonal connections.

Pictionary was a game that I had never played. I always expected it to be long, boring, childish and cause problems. I was wrong. Over Thanksgiving I played Pictionary for the first time and discovered how great it is and the capability of the human mind. The fact that we can realize something is a fax machine because there is a box with little squares or that something is the Space Needle after three seconds of drawing is absolutely amazing let alone hilarious. After Thanksgiving I thought I wouldn't see Pictionary for a while, but then I went to dinner with my friend to her close family friend's home, strangers to me, and had a blast. Part of it was that the parents were a little buzzed from drinking wine, another from the absurd drawings of monkeys and catfish. It is a reat icebreaker and way to have family fun but also a great way to learn and stretch the amazing vessel that is the mind.

GOOD FOOD & DRINK

THE HAPPIEST OF HOLIDAYS to you all!!!

I hope that you were able to spend valuable time during Christmas with your family and friends. Next up on the calendar, The New Year! I think time is speeding up on me. One of my favorite subjects is joyfully known as "Bubbly." I do not wish to be a referee with zebra stripes but I think it is important to discover some of the more intriguing historical elements of the liquid that tingles within our glass upon the stroke of midnight. There is a difference between "Champagne" and "Sparkling Wine." Champagne is a distinct region in France and by strict French Law, only grapes grown and produced in the region can be called Champagne. Many states and countries produce a sparkling wine using very similar methods as the French. In California the procedure is called, "Champione Method." In Spain they call it Cava, and South Africa uses Cap classique. An Italian sparkling wine is called Asti. In Germany, Sekt is a common sparkling wine. Other French wine regions cannot use the name Champagne, i.e. Burgundy and Alsace produce Crémant. Sparkling wines mislabeled Champagne can be and are often seized and destroyed by legal authorities.

How did this wonderful bottle of Bubbly come into our world? Most believe that the monks of France developed and began the process some four hundred years ago. It appears that these guys have a lot of free time on their hands. Like some many of our greatest discoveries, Champagne was actually a mistake. Can you believe that! Most wines were drunk very early, but some were transported long distances and through the journey, the casks would warm and set off a secondary fermentation. A strange bubbling would be noticed when these casks were opened. Dom Perignon gets the credit for one of the first successful deliberate capture of the "mousse" in a bottle. Since then many a ship have set sail and many weddings have started and ended with Champagne. Here are a few of the funnier quotes I found...

"I only drink Champagne when I'm happy, and when I'm sad. Sometimes I drink it when I'm alone. When I have company, I consider it obligatory. I trifle with it if I am not hungry and drink it when I am. Otherwise I never touch it - unless I'm thirsty." (Lily Bollinger)

"I drink Champagne when I win, to celebrate . . . and I drink Champagne when I lose, to console myself." (Napoleon Bonaparte)

In victory we deserve it, in defeat we need it." (Winston Churchill)

"Champagne makes you feel like it's Sunday and better days are just around the corner." (Marlene Dietrich)

Niven)

"My only regret in life is that I did not drink more Champagne." (John Meynard Keynes)

"Champagne is the only wine that leaves a woman beautiful after drinking it." (Madame De Pompadour)

"Three be the things I shall never attain: envy, content and sufficient Champagne." (Dorothy Parker)

"Two warm bodies and one cold bottle of Champagne will produce something more wonderful than would happen without the Champagne." (Helen Gurley Brown)

"Champagne offers a minimum of alcohol and a maximum of companionship." (David

"Champagne is the wine of civilization and the oil of government." (Winston Churchill)

So, if this has got you in the mood for bubbly, I can't blame you. In fact, I toast you!! Drink responsibly! Wear eye protection if you insist on letting the kiddies rocket the cork with a bottle opening!

Each New Year's, revelers around the world chow down on specific foods to summon good luck for the next 365 days. While some traditions call for noodles and others call for fruit, all the edibles connote forward movement, prosperity and health. Whether or not you're superstitious, take a look at our list of common celebratory eats. If no luck comes your way, at least you'll go into the new year with a full belly.

Long Noodles

In China, Japan and other Asian countries, it's customary to eat long noodles, signify longevity, on New Year's Day. Since the noodles are never to be broken or shortened during the cooking process, the typical preparation for "Long-Life Noodles" is a stir-fry.

In some countries, including Cuba, Spain, Portugal, Hungary and Austria, pigs symbolize progress. Some say it's because these animals never move backward, while others believe it's all in their feeding habits (they push their snouts forward along the ground when rooting for food). And it's not limited to pork-foods shaped like pigs (think cutout cookies) count,

Round Fruits

Though the number of pieces varies by region, eating any round fruit is a common New Year's tradition. In the Philippines, the custom calls for 13, considered a lucky number; in Europe and the U.S., it calls for 12, which represents the months in a year. In both cases, their shape, which looks like a coin, and their sweetness are the common denominators.

According to Doris Lum, a Chinese cuisine expert, the Chinese word for "fish" sounds like the word for "abundance," one of the many reasons fish has become a go-to good luck food. Also, Rosemary Gong writes in Good Luck Life, her book on Chinese celebrations, that it's important for the fish be served with the head and tail intact to ensure a good year, from start to finish.

Pomegranate

Pomegranates represent good luck in Turkey for many reasons: Their red color, which represents the human heart, denotes life and fertility; their medicinal properties represent health; and their abundant, round seeds represent prosperity-all things everyone hopes for in any fresh start.

Greens

From the coastal American South to Europe, people eat green leafy veggiesincluding kale, collards and cabbageon New Year's Day because of their color and appearance, which resembles paper cash. Belief has it, the more you eat, the more prosperous you'll be (and the healthier, too!).

A popular New Year's meal in Italy is Cotechino con Lenticchie (green lentils with sausage) because of the legume's greenish color and coin-like appearance. Deeper into the myth: When cooked, lentils plump with water, symbolizing growing wealth. Lentils are also considered good luck in Hungary, where they're preferred in a soup.

Pickled Herring

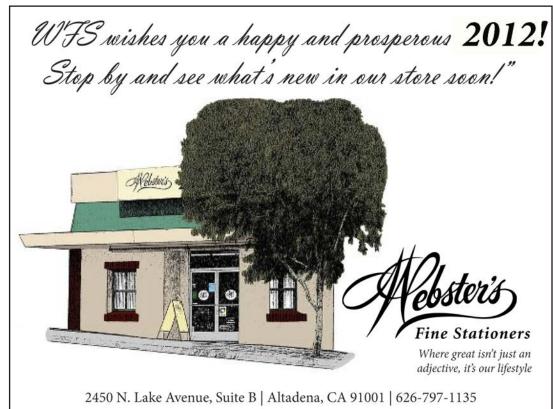

In Germany, Poland and Scandinavia, it's believed that eating herring at the stroke of midnight will ensure a year of bounty-as herring are in abundance throughout Western Europe. Also, their silvery color resembles that of coins, a good omen for future fortune.

Black-Eyed Peas

Considered good luck due to their penny-like appearance and abundance, these peas, enjoyed in the southern United States, are traditionally served in a dish called Hoppin' John. On the day after New Year's Day, leftover "Hoppin' John" becomes "Skippin' Jenny," meant to demonstrate frugality and promote prosperity in the new year.

A favorite throughout the year, cornbread is especially venerated as a New Year's treat in the southern United States. Why? Its color resembles that of gold. To ensure extra luck, some people add extra corn kernels, which are emblematic of golden nuggets.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS: WAR HORSE

set in World One about a miraculous super horse that touches the hearts of many, especially one young lad. Albert Narracott, portrayed by newcomer Jeremy Irvine, is a teenage boy from a poor family. His broken down father purchases a vigorous horse he sees at an auction in hopes of saving his house and farm. Albert names the horse Joey and attempts to train him to plow through the rugged terrain of the farm. On the cusp of England going to war, the man must sell his horse to the cavalry when things don't go as hoped for him and his family. By this time, Albert has grown especially fondly of Joey. He's become super-connected with the animal and is absolutely heartbroken that his beloved horse will be shipped off to war. Throughout the film, this "war horse" goes through the hands of many individuals and makes a lasting, indelible impression on them. The story is pretty remarkable, if not far-fetched at times. Despite a heartwarming story, the film starts off considerably slowly out of the gates and is pretty deliberately paced all the way up to the end. What could have been an amazing, epic, and exceptional movie turned out to be rather simplistic, ordinary, and sappy.

The cinematography for "War Horse" was passable, at best. It evoked a seemingly generic landscaped that appears overproduced and not at all authentic. The battle scenes were top notch, but the rest of the movie's aesthetics looked artificial. On the other side of the coin, the score was marvelous. The arrangements were bold, beautiful, and lovely. They easily warm your heart as the sentiment it releases sinks into your soul. It's one of the few true highlights of the film

S t e v e n that will play with your emotions. I did become S p i e l b e r g misty-eyed toward the end of the film, but returns to the never balling. What I was seeing was a façade of $\frac{1}{2}$ frontlines with manipulation. I mean, how could you not tear up WAR HORSE, a bit after seeing an animal, that's gone through (based on hell and back, become reunited with the boy that children's loved him ever so dearly. Add in the grandiose soundtrack and facial expressions of characters displaying hope, excitement and relief, there's no denying the outcome for the viewer at hand.

> "War Horse" Directed by: Steven Spielberg Written by: Lee Hall and Richard Curtis (based on the novel by Michael Morpurgo) Theatrical Release Date: December 25, Rated PG-13 for intense sequences of war violence Grade: 3 out of 5.

Unfortunately, getting up this point is a tedious and sometimes implausible journey that isn't as affecting as it could have been. Spielberg's magic is present in bits and pieces, but even he settles for the easy way out that truly ends up disappointing rather than inspiring.

War Horse" is far from being a complete dud. It does have some really fine scenes and proves that people from all different countries display a strong affinity toward animals. If only humans could treat other humans with the same kindness and benevolence is somewhat of an underlining theme. In the end, lofty expectations once again this year got the best of me. I was in fact hoping for a deep, inspirational and exceptionally poignant film. It rarely reached those grand heights, which results in a middling, second-rate effort from a first-rate director. At just shy of two and a half hours, I say skip the theater and wait for DVD.

Jeff's Pics The Book Report by Jeff Brown

Presence: The Art of Peace and Happiness - Volume 1

by Rupert Spira

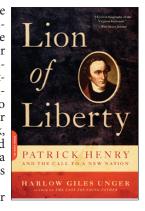

Your self, aware presence, knows no resistance to any appearance and, as such, is happiness itself; like the empty space of a room it cannot be disturbed and is, therefore, peace itself; like this page, it is intimately one with whatever appears on it and is thus love itself; and like water that is not affected by the shape of a wave, it is pure freedom. Causeless joy, imperturbable peace, love that knows no opposite and freedom at the heart of all experience...this is your ever-present nature under all circumstances. Presence is a profound and luminous book with great power and is obviously the fruit of many years of contemplation. These two volumes together are a relentless and utterly thorough examination of the nature of experience, exploring every square centimeter of the territory with absolute excellence and ruthlessly precise analysis. Their astuteness and clarity will be extremely exciting to those readers who are ready for the next steps in lifting the veil of separation.

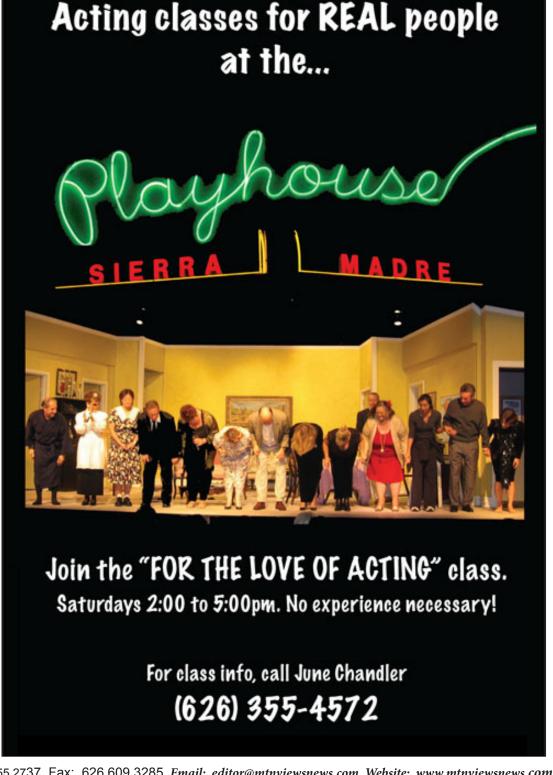

Presence: The Intimacy of All Experience - Volume 2

All that is known is experiencing and experiencing is not divided into one part (an inside self) that experiences and another part (an outside object, other or world) that is experienced. Experiencing is seamless and intimate, made of 'knowing' or Awareness alone. This intimacy, in which there is no room for selves, objects or others, is love itself. It lies at its heart of all experience, completely available under all circumstances. "Presence is one of the most exciting and illuminating books on non-duality I have encountered and its precision, articulateness in naming the nameless, unparalleled depth and ability to inspire were constantly appreciated. This book succeeds in taking the reader beyond concepts and into the experiential level. The irony is that this work, which is so advanced and sophisticated in its use of language, thought and conceptualization, is inexorably directed towards pure experiencing. It is a brilliant and lucid work carrying great strength and authority suggesting it is an indisputable source of Truth.

Victoria Ritchie, Former Manager of Watkins Bookshop and Editor for Eckhart Tolle.

Trivia time: Bill Schneider made that comment on CNN about which leading Republican candidate, following a debate performance coming on the heels of a convincing first-place finish at the Iowa caucuses in 2008?

Remember Mike Huckabee? (He conceded to John McCain barely two months later.)

Here's a couple more on the same subject: In the 2008 Iowa Republican caucuses, Huckabee came in first, Mitt Romney second and eventualnominee McCain fourth. Who came in third? (Answers below.)

As an eagerly-anticipated quadrennial event, many are looking forward to the Summer Olympics in London. Nothing is more distinctly American, though, than these on-year (as opposed to off-year) elections.

It doesn't look like we'll be seeing a repeat of 1980 on the Democratic side, when a president's record of accomplishment was overshadowed by challenges from his own party, and Sen. Ted Kennedy's attempt to wrest the nomination from President Jimmy Carter left a weakened party going up against Ronald Reagan.

The party today is rallying behind the president, and so are many Americans. Recent Gallup figures show the president's approval ratings once again topping his disapprovals (47% December to 64.5. (According to the AP, analysts predicted it wouldn't go above 59.)

100,000 new jobs have been added every month now for five straight months, despite Republicans' efforts to keep unemployment high by laying-off thousands of government workers. (We were losing 750,000 jobs a month at the end of the Bush years.) Our troops are coming home from Iraq. Bin Laden is still dead.

Those 47% to 45% figures for President Obama contrast with a recent ABC / Washington Post survey showing approval for Republicans in congress at an all-time low: 20% vs. 72%

Aside from true-believers convinced our president is the vanguard of a Muslim force intent on imposing Sharia law, growing numbers dismiss Republican talking points as the bogus product of overly-compensated marketing consultants – reminiscent of those 1940s Camels ads where doctors tout smoking as good for your

> A Congressional Budget Office analysis found that repeal of the Affordable Care Act would add $230 billion to the deficit from 2012 through 2021, and 32 million Americans would be added to the roles of the uninsured. (House Speaker John Boehner replied, they're "entitled to their opinion".)

> Just a few months ago, Republicans threatened to shut down the government over the deficit, yet refused to touch its major cause - the Bush tax cuts. The unblemished credit rating of the United States would be sacrificed to prevent setting a tax rate for income over a million a year that would still be lower than it was under President Clinton.

Thanks in part to Occupy Wall Street, voters realize the deficit was a smokescreen to divert And on the Dem side: Barack Obama had a attention from the real issue: unprecedented solid first-place finish. Who came in second? income redistribution and destruction of the middle class. The National Priorities Project points out that for 2011, the average Bush tax cut for the richest 1% ($66,384) is greater than the average income for the other 99% ($58,506)

Democratic initiatives have succeeded, while Republicans' have failed. The CBO estimates President Obama's stimulus bill added 0.9 million jobs in 2009, 3.3 million in 2010 and 2.6 million Republicans have long argued that reduced government spending boosts economic growth. The Center for American Progress compared the 24 states that cut government spending from the start of the recession (December 2007) through 2010, with the 25 that increased spending. (Alabama's data was unavailable.) Those that increased spending saw a drop in unemployment, to 45%), for the first time since last summer. The an increase in private sector employment and Consumer Confidence Index surged 10 points in economic growth. Those that cut spending saw a rise in unemployment, decreased private sector employment and economic contraction (relative to the national economic trend).

Republicans will be challenged to provide evidentiary support for their arguments. In early December, as Democrats proposed a1.9% surtax on the top 0.2% of income earners to pay for an extension of the payroll tax break for middleclass families, Republicans argued this would hurt small businesses and job creation. National Public Radio then put out a call to "numerous Republican congressional offices, including House and Senate leadership" for help in finding an effected party for them to talk to, but "they were unable to produce a single millionaire job creator for us to interview" (probably because this surtax would only effect 2% of those reporting business income).

I wonder how I might be starting off a column four years from now - "Remember Donald Trump? Tim Pawlenty? Sarah Palin?" In any event, these next several months are sure to be memorable ones - and not just for the games in London.

WHY WE NEED BETTER BS

From The Right

TOM PURCELL

It's all over television, in magazines and in newspapers -- and even in our serious papers, such as The New York Times. It is spouted by politicians and pitched by product spokesmen.

Here's something we can do with less of in 2012:

Modern life is manufacturing an unprecedented tax cuts and increased

BS "is unavoidable whenever circumstances require someone to talk without knowing what he is talking about," writes Harry Frankfurt, philosopher emeritus at Princeton University, who authored "On Bull (expletive)."

Thanks to cable television there are numerous opportunities for people to yap about all kinds of things they know nothing about.

Nowadays, our news folks are almost as bad. It used to be that the press existed to catch folks in the act of BS-ing. But our press has been shoveling out a fair share of its own.

Didn't the run-up to the last presidential election show that some of our "objective journalists" were in the tank for Obama all along?

Republicans have produced a lot of BS, too. During the Bush years, they used words such as "fiscal responsibility" and "limited government," while they wasted more dough and expanded government faster than you can say "we're broke."

Then again, maybe it's not the BS that bothers us so much — maybe it is that BS is being so practiced so poorly.

The truth is BS has a long, proud history in America. During our early years, the "tall tale" was an accepted form of BS. Exaggeration lent more credence and color to stories, and yarnspinning became a celebrated part of American

From our beginning we've had our share of snake-oil salesmen and flimflam artists. These scoundrels weren't judged on the rightness or wrongness of their scams so much as the skill with which they practiced their craft.

The sorry truth is that we want to be lied to in America. Whereas the truth can be painful, costly and time-consuming, we're suckers for a skillfully told yarn that puts us at ease and helps us sleep better at night.

In America we want our spending. We want our politicians to limit spending and build a new bridge in our backyard. We want "free" health care and fatter Social Security checks, and we want somebody else to pay for them.

But our politicians and the press are doing a horrible job these days spinning their mistruths. I think it is because they are lazy.

I remember the "good old days" when "news" shows, such as "Dateline," went to elaborate lengths to pull one over on us. They rigged up a truck with explosives, then blew it up on-screen.

Some time ago, cigarette companies said smoking wasn't bad for us and we believed them. Lyndon Baines Johnson said he was going to end poverty, and we believed that, too.

I'm really missing Bill Clinton's presidency. He could twist and contort any mistruth into the prettiest and most convincing words. We knew he wasn't telling the truth but we didn't care. We loved the way he didn't tell it.

As for President Obama, he can't possibly believe some of that stuff he is saying -- that his health plan will reduce costs or that he has a strategy to reign in runaway spending -- or does he?

Heck, I don't know who or what to believe anymore, and I sense millions of others feel just as

If our press and political leaders have any hope of restoring their credibility, one thing is for

They better come up with a better line of BS.

CURBING BAD BEHAVIOR

As another year in 2012. comes to an end and Conte individuals globally will profess to make changes in their lives in the new year, I am reminded of the words spoken by former Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew.

WHAT ABOUT YOU?

Mr. Kew, a well respected political leader and the individual who has been credited with Singapore's rise as an economic world power, said "Have I made the world around me a better place with my decisions? Is my family proud of me?" He intimated if these predicates occurred, then he is "blessed." On 2011 New Year's Eve, individuals will declare many promises during celebratory moments regarding their individual and collective change of behavior. Some individuals will assert to lose weight (have you notice the American education system is in need of fixing increase of recognizable celebrities who are promoting weight loss programs on televison?), others will pledge to exercise more consistently, some will affirm to spend more time with their families and some will profess to help others in need. The question is what good is it if we are not difficult period in our history. Americans are making our environment a better place, because of our presence in it? This has been my mantra and ambitous. I plan on doing my part to aid in in 2011 and my pledge is to continue this journey America's revival. What about you?

Contemplating our future in 2012, the United States of America's Baby Boomer generation is set to become a major economic force in America. We are living in an America which has seen dramatic social changes yet boomers control over 80% of personal financial assets and more than 50% of discretionary spending power. We are responsible for more than half of all consumer spending, buy 77% of all prescription drugs, 61% of OTC (Over The Counter) medication and 80% of all leisure travel and yet we feel anxious. Many Baby Boomers are living in a world they did not expect. High unemployment sometimes equate to our children not leaving home to start their lives independent of boomers' financial assistance; a collapse of the housing industry has seen the erosion of our personal wealth; the high cost of health care remains a problem; the and the high cost of the wars we are engaged in are contributing to the increase of our huge national deficit.

As America is tested on all fronts, I am betting that this great country will blossom from this

According to the World English Dictionary the word perspective means (among other things), "a way of regarding situations, facts, etc, and judging their relative importance".

My good friend, Juan's, sister died suddenly and unexpectedly Christmas morning. She was 35 and the cause of death was a ruptured aorta. I'm sorry to share this sad news with you. However, my motivation is to offer perspective on your lives and mine as well.

We all have our crosses to bear. We have a continuous stream of conflicts looming in our families, our workplace (if we're lucky enough to have one), our towns (especially in Sierra Madre), and a myriad of other facets that encompass our lives. By the way, I use the word 'facets' pointedly. If you look up the meaning of 'facet' you will find than yesterday.

the word, among other definitions, to mean, "one of the small, polished plane surfaces of a cut gem." We are all precious gems, at least according to my faith. God views each of us as the most precious part of his entire creation.

For most of us in the last week of 2011, even the most distressing facet of our lives is bright in comparison to the loss experienced by my good friend Juan. So, let me toast in the Year 2012 for us all. May you have:

Enough success to keep you eager, Enough failure to keep you humble, Enough joy to share with others, Enough trials to keep you strong, Enough hope to keep you happy, Enough faith to banish depression,

Enough friends to give you comfort, Enough determination to make each day better

SECLUDED MOUNTAINSIDE LIVING ABOVE BAILEY CANYON

Pristine Remodel Offers Views and Extraordinary Privacy

Situated just above the mouth of Bailey Canyon, a unique single level home has just come on the market. Though the original structure was built in the 1960's when the street was cut, this Sierra Madre home was reconfigured and nearly entirely rebuilt in the early 1990's, with essentially the central fireplace as the only remaining identifiable feature.

Perched on a promontory point shaded by a mature oak, the home and property enjoy views of downtown LA and the valley below on one side, and the San Gabriel Mountains to the North., Even a strip of shiny ocean appears in the far distance every once in a while.

The home's location and configuration are unique, with a pie shaped footprint fanning out from the entry. Formal living and dining rooms span the south side; a great room for casual living with kitchen and family room and eating areas to the west, and a private bedroom wing with four bedrooms to the north. Three areas enjoy expansive, exposed beam, cathedral ceilings for added visual space in the formal living room, great room and the master suite.

The current owners reconfigured and extensively remodeled within the home's footprint since 2006 with the help of LeVeque Construction, and had planned to retire and "age in place" here until a grandbaby arrived in Northern California. They had even ensured that the home was easily wheelchair accessible from the street and driveway through the home and much of the yard.

The kitchen was stripped to the studs and expanded in 2006 into a custom cook's dream, with maple cabinetry slab granite and upscale appliances including 30" double convection ovens. A huge slab granite island is the focal point for entertaining and allows for guests to watch meal preparation, grand buffets for large parties, or for homework while dinner is being prepared.

When the ceiling was raised in the kitchen as part of the remodel into a great room, the owners added double stacked Andersen windows as part of total window replacement, to capture more views and the full silhouette of the oak perched on the end of the yard. Now the oak can be viewed from the foyer through the great room to the back

The owners laugh remembering their initial puzzlement on furniture placement when moving in. "We didn't even realize there were many five sided rooms. Once we did, we were delighted, because it will never be a cookie cutter home. It's very very well planned out for comfort, privacy and entertaining, and multiple activities without stepping on one another's toes. There's not a bit of wasted space. The best of all for us... the grand piano sounds fabulous in the acoustics of the five sided living room, too!" said the owner.

In the master suite, one can fall asleep or awaken to magnificent views with no concern for privacy, magnificent agaves threaded through flax, and fall asleep to the soothing sounds of the fountain, or enjoy the natural sounds of the forest beyond. The master suite is located separately, the home through seven sets of sliding Andersen for added privacy, and includes cathedral ceilings doors, for easy casual entertaining. with exposed beams. The master bath was also

Outside, the landscape has been mostly converted to low water usage or drought tolerant plantings, including a recent project redesigning the north bed with over a dozen huge and photinia, sedum and rare, dark blue 'Storm Cloud' agapanthus. The back yard flows seamlessly from

A smaller, lower patio creates an intimate seating area, perfect for a glass of wine and sunset watching.

Dr. John Talevich, D.C. has practiced in Sierra Madre for thirty years. His clinic, LifeWorks! Chiropractic, offers patient-specific approaches to the alleviation of pain and individually tailored wellness programs.

In the final week of the year 2011, the holidays rapidly vanishing in our rear view mirrors, we find ourselves considering the possibilities of the new year. Some of us my not be inclined to set resolutions at all, while others are fearlessly doing so. That said, what are your goals for the coming year? Among the most common are: spending quality time with loved ones, getting fit, quitting smoking and/or drinking, getting out of debt, taking on something new, volunteering, getting organized, and being happy. Not so surprisingly, many of these are the most commonly broken resolutions, as well.

Self Acceptance

In all the studies done on successful goal setting, the most important factor is the ability to find pleasure and joy in the process. Included in this equation is the attitude of self acceptance, to be a good steward for our growth; in other words, to "accept as I perfect." With this in mind, I'd like to share my ten goals for the new year, the first I've made in a long time:

Learn a new mindfulness/meditation practice each month.

Go for a stroll every day.

- Find a path in the woods and walk it at least once a week.
- Eat a diet richer in fruits and vegetables.

5. Get my lab work done.

- Develop a person-specific supplement plan.
- Find a writing group/finish at least one of the projects gathering dust in the file 7. cabinet.
 - Make the family reunion this year.
 - Take a honeymoon adventure.

Win the lottery.

Take better care of my shoes...oh, wait...boy, once you get started! And that last item, number ten, as good as it sounds? Maybe I need the struggle, and....no. I'll take the millions and trust myself enough to know what to do with it.

Happy New Year! Dr. John

HOW TO GET FINANCIAL AND RETIREMENT ADVICE ON A BUDGET

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can you recommend any resources that provide affordable one-shot financial advice for folks on a budget? I'm about six years from retirement and would like a quick financial checkup and get a few questions answered, but I don't want to pay an ongoing financial is great for one-shot questions and second advisor to manage my money.

Seeking Advice

Dear Seeking, There are actually a number of services you can turn to for occasional financial and investment advice without tying yourself down or spending a fortune. Here are several to check out.

Fee-Only Advisors

If you only want a one-time financial checkup, have a few financial questions you need answered, or are looking for some occasional investment advice, a fee-only financial advisor with a certified financial planner (or CFP) certification is one of your best options. The CFP certification serves as the gold standard for personal financial planning, and fee-only advisors charge on an hourly basis, versus advisors who earn a commission by selling you financial

A great place to find fee-only advisors is at the Garrett Planning Network, which offers the services of 300 independent advisers nationwide. The cost for a Garrett advisor ranges between $180 and $300 per hour.

You can also find fee-only advisors through the National Association of Personal Financial Advisors website, which lists 1,400 accredited advisers at napfa.org.

Other Services

Another convenient service you should know about is My Financial Advice (myfinancialadvice.com), which provides hourly advice via phone or email. You select the topics you want help with, like retirement planning, investing, insurance, employee benefits, debt management and more, and then choose a financial planner who is standing by to answer your question. This opinions. The cost for this service averages $150 per hour, but simple questions can be answered for less.

If you're looking for help with your 401(k), 403(b), 457 plan, federal Thrift Savings Plan or SEP IRA, a company called Smart 401k (smart401k.com, 877-627-8401) is worth a look. They provide personalized investment advice either over the phone or online based on the funds available in your retirement plan. The cost is $200 per year.

And for do-it-yourself investors, Financial Engines (financialengines.com, 888-443-8577) is an online company that offers investment advice for retirement accounts, including guidance on employee stock options for $150 a year. Or you can get comprehensive investment advice that includes non-retirement accounts for $300 per year.

Free Services

If you're an AARP member, you can now get a free financial consultation through a new partnership program between AARP and the financial services firm Charles Schwab (www.schwab.com/aarp, This program provides a complimentary, no obligation financial consultation with a Schwab financial advisor either over the phone or in person at one of their 300 branches nationwide.

Another resource that offers free financial advice is Jump-Start Your Retirement Plan Days. This is a completely free public service program provided by the National Association of Personal Financial Advisors (NAPFA) and Kiplinger Personal Finance magazine. On Thursday, Jan. 12 and Tuesday, Jan. 17 you can call toll free 888-919-2345 anytime between 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. eastern standard time, and a NAPFA advisor will be standing by to answer your financial and retirement questions. OOKIN A Christmas Comet in the Southern Sky

The recently discovered Comet Lovejoy has been captured in stunning photos and time-lapse video taken from Paranal Observatory in Chile. The comet graced the southern sky after it had unexpectedly survived a close encounter with the station

This bright comet was also seen from the International Space Station in another stunning time-lapse sequence on December 21 as the crew filmed lightning on the Earth's night side.

Comet Lovejoy has been the talk of the astronomy community over the past few weeks. It was discovered on 27 November by the Australian amateur astronomer Terry Lovejoy and was classified as a "Kreutz sungrazer," with its orbit taking it very close to the Sun. In mid-December, the comet entered the Sun's corona, a muchanticipated event, passing a mere 52,000 miles from the Sun's surface. A close shave indeed....

The comet had been expected to break up and vaporize, but instead it survived its steaming hot encounter with the Sun and re-emerged a few days later, much to everyone's surprise. It is now visible from the southern hemisphere, appearing at dawn, and features a bright tail millions of miles long, composed of dust particles that are being blown ahead of the comet by the solar wind.

Lovejoy will now continue in its highly eccentric orbit around the Sun and once again disappear into the distant Solar System. It would be interesting to know if it will actually survive to re-appear in our skies in 314 years as predicted.

International Space Station Commander Dan Burbank captured spectacular imagery of Comet Lovejoy, viewed from about 240 miles above the Earth's horizon on Dec. 21. Burbank described the comet as "the most amazing thing I have ever

FOR WATCHERS OF THE SKY, THESE ARE EXCITING DAYS. The discoveries during the past year pointing toward the possibility of life beyond the Earth encourage this writer to wonder: Will mankind finally discover a second habitable planet in 2012? And what other marvels will the New Year bring? These days are filled with enough starry wonders to make everyone who looks skyward an "astropoet."

Speaking of which, the Pulitzer Prizewinning poet Mary Oliver writes, in her poem, MYSTERIES, YES, "Truly we live with mysteries too wonderful to be understood... / Let me keep my distance, always from those who think they have the answers. / May I keep company always with those who say, 'Look!' and laugh in astonishment, and bow their heads.'

To which I will add an astropoem of my own as a fond farewell to 2011:

A STAR BEYOND

When dry winds from the east blow down on us And beat our ocean's breath back out to sea. We know December's here: a sharp-edged month Of golden afternoon and sudden dusk.

This beach at evening wears a desert face, Deserted and forgotten by the crowd Whose distant rush goes silent at the boom

And hush of water, working in the gloom.

We love these desert winds that shape our sky Into a polished lens for seeing through, And at some midnight hour bring into view A star beyond the stars we thought we knew.

TOP TERRIBLE TECHNOLOGY BLUNDERS OF 2011 By John Breeden II (excerpts)

The year 2011 was a good one for technology. We saw a lot of great products and ideas, some of which could lay the groundwork for an even better 2012 and beyond. But like Las Vegas, for every winner, there were lots of losers. Not everyone or every technology made the grade this year. This is an A-list ticket to a D-grade affair. So here they are, technologies and people and news stories that made history this year, but for all the wrong

1. Taliban tweets to victory

In 2011, those wacky Taliban folks attacked Twitter, but not in the way you might think. Instead, they set up shop with that most Western of excesses, the self-promoting Twitter page. Perhaps they thought they would strike fear into the hearts of the United States with their rants. Instead, their claims were the stuff of storybooks. In one day alone, they claimed to have destroyed a dozen mainline battle tanks and taken over two U.S. airports. Dan Brown better watch out if these guys keep up the outlandish narratives. They might start to outsell computer networks, the Chinese got caught peacocking a bit too much, and fell into their own lies. A government-sponsored video shows off the country's military might with displays of artillery shooting, planes attacking targets, ships rolling across the ocean and, oh yeah, a computer specifically designed to launch cyberattacks against targets within the United States. Launching from, In the tech world imitation is a time honored of all things, a drop-down menu of targets, the there for all to see. That the Chinese government results for queries and then passing them off as targeted because they were feds, but if you follow

3. HP loves the TouchPad, loves it not

In a terrible case of "we're so large we don't know what everyone is doing," Hewlett-Packard released the HP TouchPad to great fanfare, while at the same time working behind the scenes to remove the entire computing division from the company like its big rival IBM did a few years ago. This was after paying billions to buy Palm, so it could own the WebOS used in the TouchPad in the first place. Did anyone at HP ever go to business school, or successfully balance a checkbook?

The TouchPad was a good product, and people really liked it. So when HP announced that it was getting the boot, there was outrage. Well, there was nerd rage, in any case. It wasn't pretty. Then the company had to start selling them for $99, which really ramped up demand to the point that nerds were boxing in the streets over them, replacing homeless brawls and funny cats as the No. 1 thing After years of denying any intrusion into U.S. to watch on YouTube when you don't want to get but the damage might have already been done, as a touch sad. any work done. So who knows what will happen reports are that Chrome is now the second most As for WireDoo, we don't really know what to with HP and its schizophrenic management style? Maybe the TouchPad will save the computing division, or make a fitting tombstone. But its follies made for fun watching this whole year.

would film something that contradicts its "we are their own. Microsoft promptly denied the charge, an innocent, wrongly accused nation" stance is accusing Google of using the spammer tactic of 'click fraud' to make Bing look bad.

Google apparently laid a clever trap, making up search results for nonsense queries, such as "juegosdebenlogrande." When they went to Bing and typed in those nonsense words, guess what happened? The same fake search answers came up. Was Bing looking at Google for answers? Not according to Microsoft, which accused Google of a "spy-novelesque stunt" to falsely prove Bing was lifting results and called the ploy a "backhanded compliment." But whoever came out on top of the dust-up earlier this year, it just goes to show that among arch rivals, reverse engineering may be the sincerest form of flattery.

5. Crazy like a Firefox developers of the Firefox browser thought it would be a great idea to remove version numbers from the browser, you know, so people would have no idea if their system was up to date. Somehow they thought this would cause more people to keep Firefox updated. Instead, it almost caused a cyber riot. The version numbers on Firefox are back now, with Hammer would be funny, but really, it's just popular browser in the world. Perhaps removing version numbers was crazy like a fox, just without beta application to be approved. Perhaps in 2012? the fox part.

6. Feds take the bait

One of the least technical and easiest types of attack to defend against is phishing. Yet in 2011, lots of feds fell for it, including those who got snagged in the attack on Google's Gmail. Granted, many were the simple advice of not opening attachments in e-mails or following them to Web pages, you will be 100 percent protected. It's that simple. Go forth, and don't get fooled again. This is the last time we want to see any feds on this list. Oh, and just in case it comes up, don't take candy from strangers or hop into any weird vans.

7. WireDoo or don't

Please Hammer, don't hurt em! When rapper MC Hammer showed up at a Los Angeles tech convention saying he was working on a search engine that would beat the tar out of Google, everyone thought it was a joke - at first. But WireDoo exists, or at least the top page of a Website that offers users the ability to sign up to beta test the new search engine is real.

In a head-scratching moment of weirdness, the Had Hammer demonstrated how his engine was different from Google — like if it concentrated on the entertainment industry, for example — then he might have had something. But details were sparse to say the least, leading many to simply chuckle at the rapper trying to conquer the world's largest search engine. We thought ending this list

LIFE'S TRUE TREASURES -ORIGINAL ROOTS OF HAPPINESS

"In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth." Gen. 1:1

"And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." Gen. 1:29

"Right now at this moment, you have a mind which is all the basic equipment you need to achieve complete happiness." ~ Dalai Lama

Is it just me, or has the majority of the population in our "highly advanced" American society lost sight of what really matters in life? Perhaps the wonders of technology and the seemingly unlimited resources that make our lives so much easier in America, have become a distasteful distraction from life's true treasures. I remember a conversation I had with a couple of close friends at an open house Christmas party a few years ago, during which I lost my audience when I admitted that, in some ways I envy those who live in lesser developed countries where they still practice tribal rites, they value their cultural roots, and have not been tainted by the lures of the western world. If that wasn't enough, I continued my 'monologue' by confessing that if given the option, I doubt I would ever have even invented the clock. I know that sounds pretty radical, but I truly feel that way. Understandably, my friends were quite perplexed by my less-than-conventional comments, and they were rather astounded by my overall opinion that mankind has lost its way in this world by leaving their original roots behind to chase rainbows of power, success, fame and fortune, and last but not least, to trade irreplaceable treasures of nature for the conveniences and comforts of life.

I have been told that moderation is a key component to health and happiness, and for the most part I agree. So, when new cultural concepts arise, I often wonder why people find it necessary to completely do away with, and replace the original ways of living with the new. Knowledge and understanding are God-given virtues that we humans were blessed with from the beginning, and He instilled such virtues within us for an express purpose; to determine and choose the right path for ourselves as part of His creation. While the relatively recent rise of technology & scientific discovery are considered to be positive developments for mankind, they can never replace the basic inherent virtues that God gave us as tools for living on earth, from the beginning.

It seems that few cultures have managed to adhere to the basic premises of life that were taught from the start, but there is one "under-developed" nation, centered deeply in the eastern hemisphere whose people seem to have found a way to maintain their appreciation for their original roots of happiness. An ancient country with a mere population of about 600,000 people, Bhutan is a kingdom neatly centered in the Himalaya, sandwiched between two huge neighboring countries; China and India. Boasting more natural wildlife refuges and more appreciation for nature than any other country on earth, Bhutan is a virtual paradise lost. In a recent survey, 97% of the Bhutanese population declared themselves to be 'happy'. In terms of monetary and material wealth, Bhutan hardly even registers on the world index, so I cannot help asking myself, "What is it about Bhutan that generates so much contentment?". The simple answer is that the kingdom of Bhutan has chosen an alternate path to that of economic development. Ironically, while Bhutan is considered to be among the poorest countries on earth, more of God's creatures thrive in their natural habitat there, than in any other country!

Bhutanese people live by a code of life that is very different from ours in the western world. Their decidedly slow-growth approach in today's society, sets them apart from the rest of the world. The Bhutanese culture is guided by the ideals of sanctity of life, preservation of nature, and giving back to earth what has been taken away, so in keeping with their philosophies they intentionally resist the influences of western "progressive" culture, particularly the idea of making life simpler with technology, and the pursuit of monetary gains. To me, this makes total sense. Indeed, the Bhutanese are people of my own heart. One thing that I really respect about the Bhutanese culture, is the fact that the citizens never assume true ownership of the property they occupy. Not because the government says so, but because they believe that the earth can never truly be owned, but only borrowed for the period of time during which they occupy it. How true this is, regardless of where you live on planet earth. The lessons that can be learned from the cultural lifestyle of the Bhutanese are manifold. They protect the animals with which they share their land-mass. They appreciate every aspect of nature, and are careful to reciprocate to keep a healthy balance. They are calm-spirited individuals who do not let themselves become caught up in the trap of need or greed, and to me that is the ultimate true root of happiness.

Late Entry

Happy New Year! I hope you had a wonderful Christmas and that you don't have too many resolutions stacked up for 2012. This year I had the wonderful opportunity again to serve dinner to the float workers at Dapper Field. The stamina of these people is amazing! I thought it was freezing outside despite the big turkey BBQ, but then I learned that the float building had the air conditioning running to ensure that all the plants stayed fresh. I salute all the workers who spent hours hunched in uncomfortable positions, their bare fingers coated with cold glue.

My mom asked why they were working on the float so early (12/27), seeing as New Years was several days away. She thought the flowers would die by then. Drawing upon my limited knowledge of float construction, I told her that there was plenty of work to be done, since the Parade guidelines consider any once-living plant acceptable material for decorating floats. It's kind of like playing 20 questions; anything that doesn't fall into the animal or mineral category is fair game! Lentils, rag weed pollen, willow bark, straw --it's all good!

After a moment my mom asked, "Why don't they just walk around the neighborhood streets and collect plants for the float? There's still a bunch of branches and leaves from the storm." Hence my inspiration for the "Wind Float!" Wouldn't it be funny, we thought, if they gathered all the storm debris and built a float with it! The most photographed character by far in the wind saga was a very large tree that uprooted the sidewalk. Its roots and attached sidewalk could be at the head of the float. The exposed cement "shelves" would make nice seats for the wind princesses to sit on and wave to the crowd. Big slices of tree trunks could be the wheels (think of "Flintstones," but after the stone age). For the moving parts, giant leaf blowers could swing back and forth, spewing gaseous smoke and leaves. People walking alongside the Wind Float could use rakes as canes and dance to "Puttin' on the Ritz," (of course someone would have to come up with witty, storm related lyrics). And the float's caboose would be a big chipper, shooting out a fine layer of wood shavings onto Colorado Blvd. This would serve a secondary purpose as an absorbent for all the horse droppings and those of other parading animals.

"But who would sponsor such a float?" you may ask. Well, maybe the businesses that profited from the storm would be willing to contribute: tree services (the legitimate ones, not the suspicious guys who come to your door), OSH, Home Depot, and the pizza parlors. Yes, pizza doesn't seem to fit in with landscaping and home improvement, but that doesn't mean they didn't fill a key role in the days without electricity. Empty pizza boxes were a familiar sight on top of the trash barrels lining the street. Taking a walk was like conducting a survey of pizza popularity. With all that cheese, storm victims' cholesterol probably spiked during the power outage. But who worries about cholesterol when you're using a flashlight to tell which shirt you've pulled from the closet?

Although we won't have a Wind Float to memorialize the infamous wind storm of 2011, we can be thankful that we're not identifying our clothes by flashlight, and that our diet consists of more than just pizza. And with that, Happy New Year! And at least the lights are working!

A GREAT GIFT FOR USC AND ITS FANS

Matt Barkley would be back at USC next season? I, for one, made a lot of sense.

Sure, it is pretty costly for Barkley. Yeah we know, there's a big monetary difference between a college scholarship and what an NFL first-round draft pick gets. But he's still on a decided to come back, it went to 80-20 valuable scholarship.

And, money doesn't buy the memories of playing college football in your senior year and possibly vying for a national championship. There is no price tag on such a thing. had already started before he announced his girls were dancing.

Why did I think Barkley would be coming back for his senior season? Because, as he said, "We have unfinished business."

He may have reasoned that there was a way to get even with punishments that are unjustified. The NCAA will be watching and reading and no doubt there will be comments about the unfairness of the penalties bestowed upon USC. (Look at some of the other sanctions.) But let's not get into that now.

The positive thing here is what Barkley's decision means to USC. Athletic Director Pat Haden said, "This is a great day for USC, for our family, for our fans and I would say for college football as well."

Just think about it. With Barkley back for a fourth season as the Trojans' starting quarterback, how many times will USC be on national television? What will it do to seasonticket orders? Better get yours in soon. How about sales of Barkley No. 7 jerseys? And corporate sponsorships no doubt will bring mornings, 9-11 a.m.

How many of you in more money because of the popularity and thought quarterback excitement around USC's coming football

I initially said on my radio shows that it was 50-50 that Barkley was coming back. But that thought there was I hoped he would. As time went on, the odds a 50-50 chance. It improved that he was coming back. When All-American left tackle Matt Kalil decided to go and Barkley said nothing: 60-40. Then defensive end Nick Perry decided to go: 70 -30. But when All-American safety T.J. McDonald

I was at lunch with friends when the Barkley announcement was made. One of my friends, echoing what they all thought, said: "Coach, aren't you going to go listen to Barkley's announcement?" I said, "I don't need to. Also, Barkley could end up becoming the I know he is coming back. Would you have biggest name athlete in Southern California in 2012. That includes Kobe Bryant and Blake Griffin and Chris Paul. Actually, this

Pete Carroll, Barkley's coach during the quarterback's freshman season, told the Times' Gary Klein: "I would have been surprised had it gone the other way. He sees the experience differently than other guys have. There's more that he would like to do and he likes playing college football."

I say congratulations to this young man for realizing that he is finishing what he started and that he has an opportunity of becoming one of the all-time Trojan heroes. Of course there will be added pressure that goes along

We can talk about that later. For now, let's enjoy the offseason and read the publications to see how well USC's recruiting is going. Then, on Sept. 1 with the season opener against Hawaii we'll see what is in store for opponents of the 2012 USC Trojans.

Santa (and Matt Barkley) delivered the team and its fans quite a gift.

How to chip the golf ball with precision

If you want to improve your short game you will have the same flight and roll every time. have to learn how to chip the golf ball with solid contact. I am going to explain to you exactly how to just that. The address position for chipping the golf ball has three components. Today I am going to tell what they are and how to apply

#1. Ball position is critical for consistent impact. It has to be in the middle to middle back of your stance. If it is too far forward you will hit up on it and top the ball or hit it thin most of the time. The other reason you want it in the middle to middle back of your stance is so the clubhead will approach the ball on a steep angle.

#2. The second part is to make sure you have 75% of your weight on your left foot at address. Once you place the weight on your left side, leave it there during the backswing and downswing. If you stay put during the swing the clubhead will swing steep into the back of the golf ball and it

#3. After you have placed the ball in the center of your stance and you leaned over to the left with 75% of your weight on your left leg, it is time now to move the handle over to your left side. Remember when you address the golf ball the handle of the club is in the center of your body. When you moved your weight over to the left, the center of your body is now on your left side. That is why YOU HAVE TO MOVE THE HANDLE OVER TO THE CENTER OF YOUR

When you move the handle over to your left leg it will allow the club to swing UP in the backswing and DOWN in the downswing, thus creating a steep and consistent impact.

If you follow these steps you will chip the golf ball better than ever.

NATURE AND

2012 AND THE MAYA CALENDAR

CA 900411

By Christopher Nyerges

[Nyerges is the author of numerous books on self-rence and survival. He also leads regular outdoor field trips. He can be reached at www.ChristopherNyerges.com, or Box 41834, Eagle Rock,

On December 30, the Los Angeles Times published a cartoon on their editorial page titled Teenage Mayan Prankster," with two youth saying "Yeah, predict the world will end in 2012... that'll really freak 'em out." They are shown carving a large image of the popular Aztec calendar! The cartoon not only is symptomatic of the decline of the Los Angeles Times' attention to details, but it shows the general ignorance about ing of the church. the Mayan calendar. So, for starters, there is a real Maya calendar and yes, one large cycle ends on December 21, 2012, and another cycle begins. But there are no predictions whatsoever about "doom and gloom" by the Maya

In December 2010, I had the opportunity to travel to Mexico's Yucatan peninsula and, among other things, learn about the significance of the December 21, 2012 date to the Maya.

I went to the Mavan sites under the guidance of Miguel Angel Vergara Calleros, PhD. Vergara is the author of numerous books on the Maya. He was the director of cultural services at Chichen Itza for several years and is one of the foremost authorities on the archaelogical site of Chichen Itza. Additionally, he studied with a Mayan shaman for 17 years, and now continues to share in classes and seminars about Mayan spirituality.

[Note: Vergara's latest book, "Sacred Knowledge of the Maya," is currently available from Lulu.com.]

But I wasn't going to learn about 2012 in a vacuum. I was going to spend nearly two weeks immersed in Maya culture, learning significant aspects of their beliefs, spirituality, and monumental architecture. I would learn about 2012 in the proper context.

We began by visiting Mayapan, the last place where Kukulkan was known to reside. Kukulkan, aka Quetzalcoatl, was referred to as the Mayan Christ, a visitor who came from afar, who uplifted the people, and who created Mystery Schools whose ancient universal teachings are still preserved in stone.

We visited Izamal, where the top of a major pyramid had been leveled to create a large cathedral in the colonial days. There, on the large sprawling plaza of the cathedral, Pope John Paul II came in 1993 to ask forgiveness of the native people for the atrocities committed by the Spanish and by the Church. Ten thousand native people showed up to see the Pope and to hear his plea for forgiveness.

Later, we had lunch at Mani, where in 1562 the zealous Bishop Diego de Landa ordered the burning and destruction of Mayan codices and artifacts. Even though de Landa didn't understand what the artifacts meant, he was convinced that they were contrary to the teach-

This destruction was akin to the burning of the library of Alexandria in the ancient world," said Vergara. Interestingly, as an afterthought, de Landa thought there might be something of value in the Mayan writings and he saved 4 codices from destruction, and began to write down everything he could recalled in his famous document, "Relacion de Cosas de Yucatan" ("History of the Things of Yucatan"). It is because of de Landa's writings that much of the Maya writings have been translated and understood.

One night, Vergara and author Richard Jelusich talked about the Mayan calendar. Like our own modern calendar, the Maya had different divisions of time which they kept track of. HOW THE MAYA FIGURED TIME

First, the Maya did not number each year as is our modern custom. Rather, they counted time by the number of days that have elapsed since a day that corresponds to our August 11, 3114 B.C. The historical significance of that date is unclear, but is generally thought to correspond to a mythical date of creation.

So, the first question that arises is, how did we correlate our modern calendar with the Maya calendar? Scholars have used historical evidence, astronomical evidence, and archaeological evidence to arrive at this correlation. Though the majority agree on this date as a point of correlation, there are some who come up with other dates, and therefore, other dates besides December 21, 2012

> Long Count. The divisions of time

> as the end of the current that they kept track of were the following: One day, which is referred to as a "kin"; 20 days, called a "uinal" - roughly a month; 18 uinals or 360 days, called a "tun" – roughly a vear: 20 tuns or 7,200 days, called a "katun"—19.7

vears:

20 katuns or 144,000 days, called a "baktun" 394.26 years.

Thus, a calendar glyph would be represented by 5 symbols, and a number to indicate how many days in each of the periods have elapsed since August 11, 3114 B.C.

The "Long Count" of the Maya calendar is the time it takes for 13 baktuns, counting from August 11, 3114 B.C. This Long Count is a period of 5,125.36 years, and that cycle ends on December 21, 2012. However, the following day does not begin the 14th baktun, but rather, the count from 1 to 13 begins again. One Long Count ends, another begins.

"The calendar doesn't end," says Vergara. "It just begins another cycle. It just rolls on, just like our modern calendar that never really ends." Plus, adds Vergara, "It is important to note that in their calendars the ancient Maya did not say that the year 2012 would be the end of humanity. If so, then why did they include mention of dates after this year?

PREDICTIONS?

There are no "predictions" - except one that specifically refers to December 21, 2012. This is due in part because the majority of the surviving inscriptions describe their current-day leaders and events. Still, there is nothing in the recorded records predicting doom and gloom. In fact, there is hardly any mention about 2012 at all. There are only two known stelae that mention this date.

Vergara points out that "(The 2012 date) is date is found recorded in stone in Stele No.6, discovered in the archeological zone of Tortuguero, Tabasco and in a fragment found in the Olmec-Maya city of Comocalco, Tabasco. What is the stele telling us? What is going to happen on this date? The stele tells us and in a clear and direct way that we are going to conclude a period of time, an era, a sun, a final cycle, and then initiate a new one. Once the 13 Baktuns end on the 23 of December 2012, Bolon-Yokte-Ku [also spelled "Bolon-Yookte' K'uh"], the god of the 9 pillars, will descend from OK, the god of the 9 pillars will descend from the heavens. What does that mean? Is this an actual "prophecy"?

The Tortuguero monument 6 is the only known specific date reference to 2012. In his "The 2012 Story" book, author John Jenkins refers to the work of epigrapher David Stuart who offered his 2012 date.

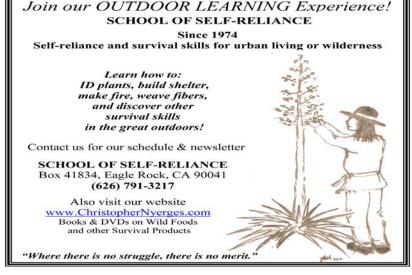

translation of this reference to the end of the 13th Baktun. The inscription actually reads that "something [the something is effaced and untranslatable] will occurIt will be the descent (?) of the Nine Support God(s) to the (?)."

Stuart continues: "This is it. The term following uht-oom is the main puzzle, and largely effaced. The 'descent' reference is highly tentative, too. The enigmatic deity Bolon Yookte' K'uh [the "Nine Support Gods"] has been known for some time from many sources, and I suspect that he (or they) has some tangential relationship to the Principal Bird Deity....Frankly, the Tortuguero passage, buried in lots of other data, hasn't been a huge deal to most of us because it is damaged and very, very ambiguous.... Even if the glyphs there were clear and legible, no Mayanist I know honestly believes that the Classic Maya foresaw something that might actually come true in our day and age.

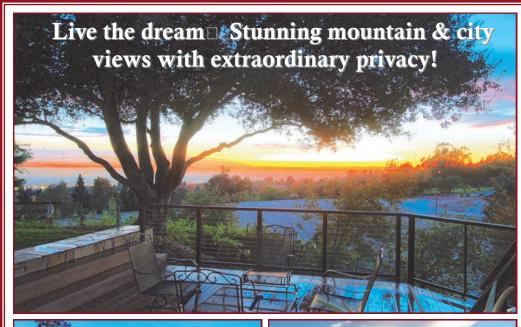

Vergara acknowledges that lots of folks are simply making things up to sell books and fill seminars. "The Maya would have celebrated such a cycle ending, just like everyone today celebrates the New Year." Vergara is aware that many are treating 2012 with great fear, largely due to ignorance.

Richard Jelusich points out that the one astronomical event tied to 2012 – the plane of our solar system crossing through the center of the plane of the Milky Way galaxy – has been occurring from 1980 through 2017. "2012 is a process, not an event," says Jelusich. During my time in the Yucatan, both Vergara and Jelusich downplayed any extraordinary significance of the December 21, 2012 date.

2012 was described as a point where one cycle in the abstraction of a calendar ends, and another begins. It is certainly to be viewed as a moment where one should reflect to consider what has gone on before, and what choices one will make in the future. It should be regarded very much as anyone would regard every January 1st as the "new year," or every lunar new year as the "Chinese new year," and every birthday as our "personal new year." So in this sense, the value of 2012 is entirely up to us. Whether or not we gain, or evolve, is entirely a function of our own physical, mental, and spiritual work and preparedness. There is nothing inherently "good" or "bad" about the December 21,
