SIERRA MADRE ARTIST CREATES ACCIDENTAL ART

By Dean Lee

Artist Richard Jackson traded in paint brushes Sunday, opting instead, to use a large model A-10 military aircraft with a 17-foot wingspan loaded with Christmas ornaments filled with paint, to create an abstract image slamming the plane into a large canvas covered wall at the Rose Bowl!

outcome Jackson's "Accidents in Abstract Art" ended with a rainbow of splattered paint after Pilot Wyatt Sadler made a perfect bull's eye hit in the center of the large 20 foot canvas wall.

"It was exactly what I hoped for," Jackson said pictured with the Art (right).

Jackson built the large backboard in his Sierra Madre art studio on Mendocino

He said the colorful collateral damage is part of a larger exhibit at the Armory Center for the Arts.

"All this gets picked up and taken down to the Armory," he explained. "So it's like military, military airplane, and then there is another piece called 'The War Room' that goes with it."

Communications Manager Calvin Phelps said of the War Room, City officials, including Police Chief "Jackson's ode to the second Iraq War Phillip Sanchez and Interim Fire Chief this scenario ducks dressed as generals are running the show, dramatizing the absurdity of combat as well as the problems of climate change and depletion of natural resources relevant issues in Jackson's work."

Event organizers confirmed reports of the projects cost, $27,100 saying, part of the funds came from the Getty and part from the National Endowment for the Arts. Phelps also said that publication documenting the event and the exhibition, with video documentation of the spectacle, would be published in spring with support from the Pasadena Art Alliance.

were unaware of the event Wells said the Fire Department should have been involved in the safety of crashing a plane near a crowd of people.

"When we don't know about it, it's hard to regulate," Wells said "There is a permit process but sometimes people don't always go through it."

Organizers said Sunday they had gotten permission for the event, although at press time it was unclear who that was. Sanchez suggested the issue be looked into by the city attorney.

Sunday's well attended show, with hundreds watching, was part of Pacific Standard Time: Art in L.A. 1945-1980, a 10 day festival throughout Southern

YOURS? MINE? OURS? EXPLORING PRIVATIZATION

The League of Women Voters Pasadena Area will tackle the challenging and controversial topic of privatization at a free community forum Saturday, Feb. 11, 2012, from 8:30 a.m. to noon, at the Neighborhood Church, 301 N. Orange Grove Blvd, Pasadena.

The forum title, "Yours? Mine? Ours? Exploring Privatization" captures the ambiguity of privatization. People who appreciate using public resources such as libraries, roads, parks and schools tend to resist privatization.

Cash-strapped communities and those opposed to taxes see privatization as a way to cut government costs. Few people, however, understand the full implications and complications of transferring public services, assets and functions to the private sector, what works and what doesn't work. What happens when a municipality or government privatizes services such as libraries, roads, park and other functions? What are the impacts? Are there savings to governments? Does it make sense for cash-strapped cities? Does it make sense for everyone in the community -- residents and businesses alike?

The emcee and panel moderator will be Jan Sanders, director of Libraries and Information Services for Pasadena.

Cynthia Kurtz, former city manager of Pasadena and currently president and chief executive officer of San Gabriel Valley Economic Partnership, will lead off the program with an overview of privatization.

Refreshments and a resource table with handouts on the issue of privatization will be available. The forum is free, but donations are welcome.

Reservations are requested by calling the League office, 626-798-0965, or e-mailing office@lwvpasadenaarea.org.

SIERRA MADRE ELECTION COVERAGE - REVISED

(This is a revision of the previously published schedule) On April 10, 2012, voters in Sierra Madre will go to the polls and select three people from a field of seven to sit on the City Council and elect a new City Treasurer and City Clerk. They will also vote on a local ballot measure on whether or not to extend the User Utility Tax and a related advisory measure.

The city council race will fill two seats for new four year terms and one seat for the unexpired two year term vacated by former Mayor Joe Mosca. The Mountain Views News will provide our readers with comprehensive coverage of this election. Each week, as we have done in the past, we will profile the candidates and give each of the candidates the opportunity to introduce themselves to our readers by answering the following questions: (All candidates are being asked to answer the same questions): 1. Why are you running for Office? and 2. What are your plans if elected?

The paper will also review the pros and cons of the User Utility Tax ballot measures. The schedule:

February 4th The User Utility Tax Extension - The Pros and Cons AND Candidates Richard Mays for City Treasurer and Nancy Shollenberger (incumbent) for City Clerk

February 11th Incumbent Mary Ann MacGillivray for City Council - 4 year term

February 25th March 10th March 24th

February 18th March 3rd March 17th

Candidate John Capoccia for City Council - 4 year term Candidate John Harabedian for City Council - 4 year term Candidate Colin Braudrick for City Council - 2 year term

It is our sincere hope that each candidate will submit their answers so that we can share them with our readers. A separate letter has been sent to each candidate asking them to participate. In addition to the candidate spotlights, we will attempt to cover the various forums sponsored by local organizations. Where possible, the unedited video of these forums will be broadcast on the paper's website.

Our reporting on this election will be as fair and objective as possible. However, please keep in mind that our columnists are always free to share their opinions. Their opinions are their opinions and may or may not reflect the position of the paper. This is true in all things, not just this election.

We will also provide for you the calendar of important dates regarding the election. It is our goal to do whatever we can to help you make an informed decision on April 10, 2012. Susan Henderson, Publisher and Editor

THE 2012 SIERRA MADRE LIBRARY READ™ CAMPAIGN

Association (ALA) launched the READ™ campaign which has proven immensely effective in promoting literacy among all age groups. Comedian Bill Cosby was the first notable to appear on a poster; since then, more than 150 celebrities have donated their images for these posters, which convey the simple, but potent message—READ. Although endorsements by popular stars have certainly been effective, the ALA encourages libraries throughout the U.S. to use local Doyle. community leaders—adults as well as youngsters—as "celebrity models." The ongoing response to the program has been so consistently and overwhelmingly positive that READ™ has become one of the most successful grass roots literacy campaigns ever created. The Sierra Madre Library launched its READ™ campaign in January 2011, which featured Jeffrey L. Throop, the 2010 President of the Tournament of Roses®, who posed with Afghanistan/Iraq War veteran Marcus Luttrell's memoir, Lone Survivor. Every quarter throughout 2012, a new poster will feature one or more Sierra Madre residents who are active in the 1985, the American Library posing with a favorite book. Souvenir bookmarks bearing the same design as the poster are also made available for takeaway at the Library.

This winter our local READ campaign features Sier-ra Madre resident Barry Schwam as Sherlock Holmes. In case you're wondering, "Why Sherlock--?," the poster is dovetailing with Sierra Madre's One Book One City read for 2012, which is The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan

Barry is an actor who has played nearly 50 character roles on stage, television, and in films. He also works as a voiceover artist and can be heard as the voice of the automatronic Col. Sanders at the Colonel Sanders Museum in Kentucky. Barry is an accomplished musician, and is well-known for his skill on the theremin, the only instrument in the world that is played without touching Barry's favorite Sherlock Holmes story is The Hound of the Baskervilles.

ORDINANCE NO. 1327 ATTACHMENT "A"
RATE AND METHOD OF APPORTIONMENT CITY OF SIERRA MADRE
COMMUNITY FACILITIES DISTRICT NO. 1 (STONEGATE DRAINAGE)
SPECIAL TAX RATE AND METHOD OF APPORTIONMENT

I. Basis of Special Tax Levy

Commencing in Tax Year 2012-13, a Special Tax shall be levied on each parcel in CFD No. 1 as set forth in this Rate and Method of Apportionment. All of the real property in CFD No. 1, unless exempted by law or by the provisions hereof, shall be subject to the tax.

II. Duration of the Special Tax Parcels in CFD No. 1 shall remain subject to the Special Tax in perpetuity.

Maximum Special Tax

The maximum Special Tax against each parcel for Tax Year 2012-13 shall be $238.00. The maximum Special Tax for each subsequent tax year shall be calculated by multiplying $238.00 by the CPI for the April preceding the start of the tax year, and dividing by the Base CPI. For purposes of this paragraph, "CPI" means the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers for Los Angeles-Riverside-Orange County, CA as published by the US Bureau of Labor Statistics (or the successor to such index) and "Base CPI" means the CPI for September of 2011. For reference, the CPI for September of 2011 is 233.022.

Setting the Annual Special Tax Levy

The Special Tax shall be levied against each parcel at the maximum rate determined pursuant to Section III, unless the City Council of the City of Sierra Madre, by resolution, determines that (for one or more tax years specified by the City Council) a lesser rate will be sufficient.

Any taxpayer who feels that the amount of the Special Tax assigned to a parcel is in error may file a notice with the Finance Director of the City of Sierra Madre appealing the levy of the Special Tax. The Finance Director will then promptly review the appeal, and if necessary, meet with the applicant. If the Finance Director verifies that the tax should be modified or changed, a recommendation at that time will be made to the City Council and, as appropriate, the Special Tax levy shall be corrected and, if applicable in any case, a refund shall be granted. Interpretations may be made by Resolution of the City Council for purposes of clarifying any vagueness or ambiguity as it relates to the Special Tax rate, the method of apportionment, or any definition applicable to CFD No. 1.

Manner of Collection

The Special Tax will be collected in the same manner and at the same time as ad valorem property taxes; provided; however, the City may, at its discretion, directly bill the Special Tax.

PORTANTINO PREPARES OPEN CARRY BILL BANING UNLOADED RIFLES

Assemblymember Anthony Portantino has introduced AB 1527, a measure that will prohibit individuals from openly displaying unloaded rifles and shotguns in public. Portantino introduced the legislation at the urging of law enforcement as a follow up to last year's successful AB 144, which banned openly carrying an unloaded handgun in public places.

In reaction to the enactment of AB 144, Open Carry Organizations across the State began hosting open carry events brandishing rifles and shotguns in place of the now illegal handguns. In at least once instance, they showed up at a police fundraiser wielding unloaded rifles.

"Last year, the state made it clear that this type of behavior had no place on Main Street, California," said Assemblymember Portantino. "Unfortunately, the Open Carry community has decided to once again force our hand by escalating their unnecessary activities and entering our communities with AR-15s and other long guns. I had hoped cooler heads would have prevailed and this law wouldn't be necessary, obviously that hasn't been the case and I must once again take action to ensure the safety of our communities."

AB 1527 builds on the newly enacted law authored by Portantino last year and provides a similar list of exemptions to enable safe transportation, lawful hunting, and use by law enforcement officials.

"The Brady Campaign supports AB 1527," said Dr. Dallas Stout, President of the California Brady Campaign Chapters. "These public displays of shot guns, rifles, and live ammunition intimidate and scare people. This is not the kind of society Californians want to live in, and we support ending this dangerous practice."

AB 1527 currently awaits referral from the Assembly Rules committee and will likely be set for hearing in the Assembly Public Safety committee sometime in late March or early April.

"What's Going On?" FIRE SERVICE IN THE COUNTY AREA

News and Views from Joan Schmidt

The residents of the unincorporated areas of Monrovia-Arcadia-and Duarte are serviced by the Los Angeles County Fire Department. When our Town Council was formed back in 1993, our services were provided by Los Angeles County Fire Station 44 on Highland Avenue, just north of Huntington Drive in the City of Duarte. But a lot of changes have

Back in those days, the Pamela Park area was a war zone and Goodall Avenue was the worst. The Sheriff's Department brought in a lot of their resources, not only their gang and drug units, but also OSS - the Operation Safe Street unit - and they all worked together to clean up the area. The county also helped, because a blockade was placed at the end of Goodall. The downside was when Fire Station 44 answered a call, they couldn't go through the intersection so they had to back up and go around!

Captain Steve Cate from Station 44 told me of this, because El Monte Fire Department was being taken over by the county. Fire Station 169, on Peck Road, just south of Hemlock would serve our area. One day, I passed the Mayflower Market and saw Fire Engine 169 parked. I identified myself as a Council Member to Captain Amador and asked him if he was covering our area now. I then asked if he knew about the blockade. He did not. They drove over to investigate, and later in the day I received a phone call that they did see the blockade and thanked me for alerting them, so it could be marked on their map. (Their map is wall-sized and actually has to be replaced every so often as

There are three shifts at Station 169. Each shift has three men, the Captain, the Engineer, and the Firefighter. Currently for Shift A, there is Captain Alex Haua, Engineer Glenn Ewart and Fire fighter Andy Pontious. The B Shift is staffed by Captain Miguel Garcia, Engineer Robert Santhoff and Fire Fighter Brent Griebenow. Lastly, the C Shift includes Captain Larry Burke, Engineer Tom Borolin, and Firefighter Brandon

When I hear the sirens, (I am two houses from Myrtle Avenue,) usually Fire Engine 169 is coming north and turns either right or left on Camino Real. Within a few minutes, there is another siren and soon Paramedics from Station

There are actually four Los Angeles County Fire Stations in El Monte. Our Station, 169 is small and only has the Fire Engine and a threeman shift at all times. Down the road at Peck and Bryant is Station 169. It is larger, has a couple engines and paramedics. They send the paramedics when there is a need in our area.

When El Monte Fire Service was taken over by the county, many El Monte residents grumbled. They didn't realize finances played a part - it was more cost effective to go county with all its extensive resources.

When our Town Council formed, I got so tired of people complaining that we didn't get fire service from the little station 2 blocks north on Myrtle. I tried to explain it was the City of Monrovia's Station - paid for by the City of Monrovia and its city residents pay city taxes. However, because of the Mutual Aid Agreement, the Monrovia Fire Station has sent engines to our area as needed. Several years ago - right on Shrode Avenue! And a few minutes after Monrovia arrived, our county fire truck was there. People shouldn't worry. Monrovia even sent their engine to Arcadia - to Mayflower Avenue because there was a garage fire and they were closer, so they arrived first.

Today I spoke with Captain Miguel Garcia, whom I met for the first time and new fire fighter, Brent Griebenow. Griebenow has been a firefighter less than one year! When you become a County Fire Fighter, you are on probation for one year and serve at two stations for six months each. His first six-month stint was at Station 59 in Whittier and now he is at 169 in El Monte. When the six months are up, it is his choice whether to stay or transfer.

Over the years, there have been transfers and it is beneficial for the men to work in different types of areas. Captain Haua has been at 169 for at least ten years! I met Captain Burke over twenty years ago when he was a Fire Inspector! County residents should be grateful for our GREAT fire service

MY PAL OTIS

CHRISTOPHER Nyerges

For more information on his books and classes, he can be reached at School of got up, and he died a week later, on Hannukah. Self-reliance, Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CĂ

When it was clear that my pot-bellied pig Otis was dead, I wrapped him and carried him to my car, and drove him to Highland Park where I buried him in the "family graveyard." I had prepared a hole for him west of where I buried Cassie. Helen and Î had to dig the hole a little deeper because Otis was a bit bigger than I realized. I wanted to bury him deep enough so that stray dogs wouldn't come by and disturb his body. After we buried Otis, we put some flowers on his grave, and I placed his "Otis, Kansas" license plate (which I always kept on his gate) nearby. Helen then played a song, Aad Guray Nameh, by Shatam Kaur, as we sat thinking about Otis for a bit. I was sad, but I knew that Otis had a good life and a long life, for a pig!

After all, Otis lived over 19 years. My vet once told me that that was well over twice the average life for a pot-bellied pig. He'd gotten much slower in the last two years, and in the last six months, he was slow and unsteady on his feet, and he began to eat less and

He was up every day to eat when I was gone to Guatemala for two weeks in early December of 2011. But when I got home, Otis was lying on his bed and just grunted when I greeted him. I hugged him and I hand-fed him, and I felt that he experienced a certain ease that I was back. But I could also tell that he was on his way out.

I felt a great empathy for Otis. He was a big guy, for sure, but his personality was such that he always seemed like a little boy. I told him that everything was OK and that I was happy we had [Nyerges is the author of several books, a good life together. I thanked him. I told Otis including "Self-Sufficient Home," and he body had become a burden. I whispered in his ear that it was OK, and that I loved him. He just grunted his friendly "oink" in return. Otis never

> It was the spring of 1993 when Otis came into our family. Dolores and I had talked about getting a pig, and the pot belly "craze" was fading out. Though we toyed with the idea of breeding pot-bellied pigs, Otis had been neutered, so that was not a viable idea. But that was OK, because we fell in love with Otis right away.

We learned a lot about the nature of "pig-ness" during Otis' life. In fact, this was partly why we got Otis in the first place - we were going to learn about the nature of pig-ness, which is also an aspect of human-ness.

We learned that he certainly had a good memory, especially as it related to food. He once discovered a bag of carob pods that I had in the living room, and he nearly ate half the bag before I caught him. After that, any time he got into the house, he always went right to that spot where the carob had been. Though we've heard pigs are very smart, you can't really compare them to dogs, for example. Dogs might not have pigs' great memory, but they seem smarter due to their loyalty to their masters. I'm sure that Otis always recognized me from other people, but loyalty? I don't think so. Pigs don't seem to want or need close affinity to people in the way that dogs do. Nevertheless, later in his life when Otis was mostly alone, we did develop a "closeness."

Yes, Otis was a pig, and yet he was such an individual! I learned to know what his sounds and grunts meant, so I knew when he was happy, when he felt threatened, when he was worried, and when he liked (or disliked) someone. His range of vocal sounds was broad and fascinating.

For his last few years, our cat Popoki would sleep with him, often lying on Otis' big belly, which was always very warm. The two of them seemed to not just tolerate one another, but appeared to be good pals.

Since a pot-bellied pig's expected life is about 7 to 9 yeas, we estimate that he was about 200 years old (by human standards) when he died.

Finally, when I went to Guatemala in 2011, Otis greeted me when I came back. He was lying down and didn't get up. I tenderly rubbed his big nose and hand-fed him some hay. I kept him covered, and comfortable, and felt sad that my friend was departing.

And though I was sad, I felt a certain inner joy that he lived a long life with me, and that Helen was there to help me bury him and give him a special ceremony. I thought that I would go through a period of great sadness, but I didn't. We had a good life together, and I was able to be there with him in the end of his very long life. I feel that some part of Otis will always be with me.

Postscript: A few days after I buried Otis, when I parked my car near his pen, I heard his distinctive oink. A trick of the mind? I like to believe Otis was saying goodbye to papa.

COURT ORDERED DISSOLUTION OF REDEVELOPMENT AGENCIES MAY SNAG RUSNAK EXPANSION

Small Businesses in Path of Project Struggle to Vacate by February 8

Story and Photos by Chris Bertrand

As the city of Arcadia struggles to comply with California Supreme Court ordered dissolution of redevelopment agencies, both Rusnak Auto Group and the small businesses still operating on property the city acquired have a myriad of questions on how Rusnak's years long plan to expand their Arcadia Mercedes dealership will play out under the state's new rules under Assembly Bill 26.

Under strict timelines to dissolve their holdings, Arcadia has named their city council as the successor agency for the dissolution, with the understanding, as well as the associated angst, that various oversight individuals and agencies have veto power over how they proceed.

According to Assistant City Manager Jason Kruckeberg, "The city and agency are going ahead with the relocation process. We sent out the 90 day (vacate notice) ending February 8. It is considered an obligation under the AB 26 that dissolves Redevelopment. We have written a letter to our relocation consultant informing him of that fact."

Last week, after a Pasadena Star News article published on the topic, a flurry of anxietyfilled discussions took place at Trendy Tresses owned redevelopment project. With imminent expiration of their 90 day notice to vacate no later than February 8, the city appointed relocation consultant and Trendy Tresses owner, Renee Newman, and most of the stylists in her salon have not yet finalized any financial agreement. Without that guarantee in hand, it is difficult for small businesses to undertake the mandated Down the block at U.S. Pagers and Cellular, Owner Steve Terzian feels squeezed by not only the non-negotiable deadline to vacate from the city, but also from corporate decision makers at metroPCS, one of the cellular dealerships he owns. MetroPCS has declined to approve sites individuals as well as State officials. So, when Terzian has suggested in a move, leaving him and his customers between a rock and a hard place.

Yes, we were told over a year ago, that we would have to move," Terzian said. "But we were also told it could take a long time. Some businesses on the block moved right away. We liked it here so we stayed." Now, with time running out, Terzian is in a tight spot, with neither side relenting.

"Each tenant works with our relocation consultant, who sets up a payment program for the cost of move and other factors," said Kruckeberg, "Typically half is paid up front, and other half at vacation of the property.

About six businesses are left in operation on the site, he said, and the buildings were scheduled for demolition. Now with the redevelopment agency dissolution is process, "We won't have the ability to enter into new contracts as a redevelopment agency, so there won't be a contract to demolish the building" at this time. This is an unfortunate circumstance. It is a rough one. We have all worked on it together. There's still a lot of unknowns, as far as how the process is going to work itself out, said Kruckeberg.

"It's a disappointment that we are having to face this now," said Rusnak President, Victoria Rusnak Pearson. After nearly a decade on Huntington Drive, Rusnak Auto Group, based in Pasadena is poised to proceed on an expansion of their Arcadia Mercedes dealership from approximately four to six acres, enlarging to about 40,000 square feet, fronting on Santa Anita, just a block south of the impending Gold Line station. As a major source of sales tax revenue in Arcadia, an expansion is expected to secure more jobs and more sales tax revenue for the city.

The ball is in the city's court to move through the process due to the Supreme Court," said Pearson. "We are waiting for them to take the lead from a procedural standpoint. It's a long Salon, 101 N. Santa Anita, located on the city process. We are still hopeful that we can come to an agreement with the city. We like to be in the city of Arcadia. Our clients like coming to Arcadia. We're hopeful that the city can deliver the properties as promised."

Arcadia City Manager Don Penman summarized the dilemma faced by the city and Rusnak. "As the City becomes the successor agency from our Redevelopment Agency on February 1, there is a great deal of uncertainty over how the process will work. Our Redevelopment Agency owns five parcels in the downtown, comprising about 2.5 acres, which we will be required to sell, and that sale must be approved by an oversight committee comprised of seven and to whom we must sell those parcels is of significant concern because they were purchased in order to promote economic development and jobs in our downtown and we don't know if some type of 'fire sale' process is going to achieve those

Unfortunately, in the meantime, long established Santa Anita Avenue businesses like Trendy Tresses and U.S. Pagers & Cellular will dissolve, relocate or close, eliminating the rent paid to the city coffers, while demolition plans and the Rusnak expansion circles in a holding

MONROVIA - DUARTE

Sierra Madre-Arcadia-Pasadena-

This Week In Monrovia from Mark Alvarado Interim City Manager

TEAM MONROVIA CAN PREVAIL ONCE AGAIN

Tuesday's State of the City address was delivered in front of a packed house at the Krikorian Premiere Theater. Mayor Mary Ann Lutz outlined both the challenges and opportunities facing Monrovia in 2012. The main message of the address was that we still have challenges ahead, but if we pull together, Team Monrovia will prevail – just like we always do!

We were hit with two major storms in December, one being the windstorm and the other being the State's elimination of redevelopment agencies. There is still much to be decided, but Monrovia has been through storms before, and is ready to tackle this one. The community's gains over the past several years, coupled with the ongoing organizational and financial restructuring of public business, has positioned Monrovia well for short-term recovery and long-term stability and prosperity. If projections hold true and sales and property tax revenues rise over the next two years then new resources and opportunities will begin to open. And of course we will be looking to the City's Economic Development steam engine to help us move forward. As for the challenges, we will continue to work toward solutions, and to effectively work together to find those solutions. The full State of the City speech can be viewed on our City website at http://www.cityofmonrovia.

This year's State of the City event came in under budget, thanks to generous sponsorship. I'd like to thank NAI Capital for providing the refreshments, and the City Manager's Office staff for putting together another great event.

Update on Redevelopment

Wednesday's special City Council meeting was held to further tackle the issue of dissolving our Redevelopment Agency. We are still waiting to hear from the League of California Cities ("League") and the California Redevelopment Association ("CRA") representatives on what type of new "version" of redevelopment is being roposed to the Legislature and the Governor. However, in order to comply with the bizarre terms and process the State established with the passing of the ABX1 26 legislation, all redevelopment agencies must be dissolved by February 1, 2012. In order to do so, a successor agency must be formed to carry out the liquidation of all the former Monrovia Redevelopment Agency's assets and obligations. At Wednesday's meeting, the City Council appointed themselves as the successor agency, and will now take on the responsibility of winding down the former agency's affairs. In the meantime, we'll continue to keep you posted

Her program is created for both the child and a parent resulting in a changed relationship. The back-to-basics approach sets goals for better grades, respectful behavior, integrity, discipline, at drdiane@drhernandezoptometry.com.

the program is an intensive, 9 week program on Saturdays. Her entire staff is all volunteer, and once the parent and child commit to the program, great strides are made. Looking Into The Life Of A Teenager

LEAVING NEVERLAND

It is so tempting to hit the cruise control button and just glide through these last few months of high school. Applications are in, time is ticking, and school is dragging on and on. Many of my fellow peers have begun to call it 'quits', and just sit back this semester, party and enjoy the last moments of high school bliss.

But there is the ever present nagging and cautious voice in my head that tells me to just keep pushing, 'one more semester', and prepare myself for the best years of my life. Part of that pushing, however, is getting a job. It's hard to consider binding myself to something that will restrict my ability to spend the ever dwindling time with my friends, but really, how bad can it be? At worst I will miss a Friday night here and there and maybe some Saturdays. On the upside, however, I will have money for when I enter into college. Money for food, trips, movies, clothes, etc. and I will also have experience for future jobs and something significant to add to my resume.

I think that the hardest part of this struggle, aside from the time with friends, is grasping the reality that I am no longer a kid searching for Neverland. I am a high school senior, soon to be a registered voter, and someone who needs to begin fending for myself in the world before it consumes me before I even stand a chance. It's time to realize that yes, high school may be ending, but reality is starting; it just all depends on which option I decide to choose.

...and trying some Chinese dishes too. We're making lanterns to hang... www.readingclubfun.com

*Gung Hay Fat Choy (Best Wishes and Congratulations!)

The Chinese New Year celebration started this year on Monday, January 23rd and will last 15 days ending with the Lantern Festival on Monday, February 6th. The Chinese Calendar has a 12 year cycle with each year that the people born in each animal's year have some of the characteristics of that animal.

The New Year is a time of family. In many of our large cities, like San Francisco, there are lots of fun family events: dinners, parades, concerts, races, zoo visits and fireworks. Vendors sell flowers, fruits, candies and pastries. The U.S. Postal Service has a new stamp with the design of a dragon on it for the year of 2012. Everyone can join in the fun!

Read the clues to fill in the puzzle about the Chinese New Year: 1. This year, 2012, is the Year of the _

2. It is to be full of _____ - following the quiet Year of the Rabbit. The dragon is one of the best known symbols in ____

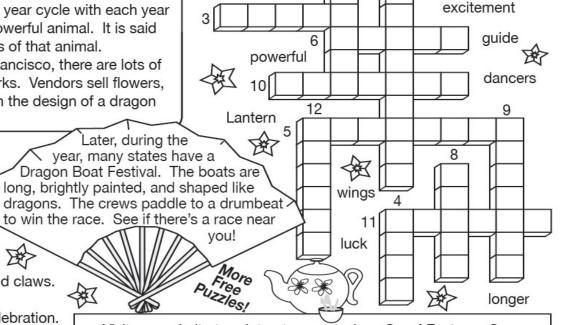

The dragon is said to come from the sky – a heavenly, ___ Dragons are wise and said to visit the Emperor to _____

8. Some are pictured with _____ and some are not, but they all can fly. 9. A dragon dance is part of the Festival held on the last day of celebration.

STARBUCK'S FOR BEER AND MY JOURNEY FOR MEXICAN FARE CONTINUES

Ordering a "Short or a Tall One" at Starbucks will soon take on a whole new meaning. The Seattle-based coffee house said that, yes indeed the rumors are true, beer and wine will soon be available in six stores in Southern California toward the end of 2012. Is our sleepy little town ready for a latte and an ice cold beer? Not likely; no area stores are on the list. Starbuck's started this brewing experiment in the 2010, with beer costing $5 each and glasses of wines listed between $7 and $9. Beer will only be available by the bottle and for now there are no plans to change the name to Starbucks Old Town Brewery. Figuring that serving adult beverages and premium food is the wave of the future, Clarice Turner, Starbucks' senior vice president of U.S. operations, said Monday, "As our customers transition from work to home, many are looking for a warm and inviting place to unwind and connect with the people they care about."

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

Now that we have that issue out of the way, it seems every single day I get the question, "Peter, who has the best Mexican Food in the Pasadena area?" That, just so you know, is a different question than, Peter, which is the best Mexican restaurant in Pasadena?" The best food or the best restaurant is subjective. But, as the key holder of this prestigious position of authority, I better at least come up with a few answers for you. My daughter Lauren and I go to Rosarito on Colorado whenever we want good Mexican food. It's simple, good and we get it to go. We love their carne asada tacos and I always get a chicken burrito. I wish there were full-service Mexican restaurants that had the tastiness of Rosarito's. I wonder out loud, "What is real Mexican fare?" I did a little research and here is just a glimpse of how we got to all of these Mexican restaurants in the area.

Food historians tell us Tex-Mex cuisine originated hundreds of years ago when Spanish/ Mexican recipes combined with Anglo fare. Te-Mex, as we Americans know it today, is a twentieth century phenomenon. Dictionaries and food history sources confirm the first print evidence of the term "Tex-Mex" occurred in the 1940s. Linguists remind us words are often used for several years before they appear in print. Tex-Mex restaurants first surfaced outside the southwest region in cities with large Mexican populations. The gourmet Tex-Mex "fad" began in the 1970s. Diana Kennedy, noted Mexican culinary expert, is credited for elevating these common Mexican street foods - burritos, tacos and enchiladas - to trendy fare, partly because they appealed to the (then) younger generation. Now, here in the states we have embraced it as Mexican Cuisine. I suspect that since we now view Mexican food as inexpensive, it has gained greater popularity through our limited budgets.

I decided to put my math model to the test. Good food, a good margarita, good service and a nice atmosphere. The restaurant is La Fiesta Grande, also on Colorado. Located right near the Pasadena Playhouse. Charlie, the bartender, is tops in his class: he pours a blended or an on-the-rocks margarita that is consistently top notch; you don't need three margaritas here. On many nights there is a strolling band of three musicians playing your favorite Latin tunes. Sorry, we can't call them mariachis until there are at least seven musicians.

The food is good as well. For this article, I dined there twice in the past two weeks. I had a Chicken salad that was muy bueno and just recently the Carnitas plate for $12.95 proved to be about the best carnitas that I have had in Pasadena amongst the restaurants involved in the Mexican Restaurant Wars. My friend, Kind Ken, always gets the Carne Asada Nachos, here, and he swears they, too, are the best in town. My producer Madd Maxx, whom I have come to know as a soup expert, gave their meatball/ Wedding soup two thumbs up. So, that is my vote for one of the better spots in town. Check it out. My up front apologies to all the 75 other Mexican restaurants that I have dined at in the past twenty years.

INGREDIENTS

- •3 large russet potatoes, cleaned, skins pierced 3-4 times with a fork
- •1/4 cup butter or margarine
- •1 small yellow onion, chopped
- •2 cloves garlic, minced
- •1/4 cup flour
- •2 cups chicken broth (or one 14-ounce can)

- •2 tsp seasoned salt

•Optional toppings: shredded cheese, diced ham or crumbled bacon, chives or scallions, Tabasco sauce, croutons

DIRECTIONS

Microwave the potatoes 8-9 minutes until baked through. Set aside to cool slightly. Melt the butter in a soup pot over medium-high heat and add onion. Cook 6-7 minutes until softened. Add minced garlic and cook 30 seconds, until fragrant. Add flour and stir several minutes to make a thickened roux. Gradually stir in evaporated milk and broth. Scoop the pulp from one potato, mash it slightly and add to soup. Cook soup on medium to bring to a boil. Add seasoning salt (to taste). Dice the remaining two potatoes and empty skin of the third potato. Add to soup and heat through. Serve alone or topped with anything that sounds good to you.

PORCELAIN RAFT

Italian born musician, Mauro Remiddi, who performs under the moniker Porcelain Raft, has released, "Strange Weekend." Although he's been associated with different acts, this is the first album behind the name, Porcelain Raft. "Strange Weekend" is bedroom-pop at it's absolute finest.

A mixture between spacey electro-rock and dreamy pop, the record swirls and dazzles every step of the way. It's the kind of album that absorbs your inner thoughts and emotions. It carries this magical ability to transfer your entity to another world or perhaps in this case, a celestial utopia. Porcelain Raft combines shoe-gaze and 90s alt. rock with shimmery melodies and a palpable gracefulness.

Overall the execution is impeccable and the results are nearly off the charts. The beauty found and discovered in "Strange Weekend" will stimulate your body, soothe your mind and capture your soul.

There's not much not to like here. While some songs like "Unless You Speak From Your Heart" and "Picture" may take a few listens to win you over, rest assure, they will since their vital pieces to this puzzle. "Is It Too Deep For You?" starts off like a hauntingly slow hip hop jam and while remains fairly slow throughout is mesmerizing in tone. "Backwords" is divine, internally captivating, and simply moving. "The End Of Silence" will have you remaining silent, as the song is enormously magnetic and gorgeous. Remiddi's vocals are bliss, full of heartache as he sings directly to you (and for a moment you feel as if he is singing only to you). The aforementioned song, much like the album, is profoundly intimate and deeply personal. This is the kind of album that can make all the difference in the world to you on any given day. The capabilities of the record go far beyond any words I can muster. The limitations on this record are that it only sprawls to ten tracks. Whereas the music may end after 34 minutes, the feeling you get while listening lasts for much longer.

"Strange Weekend" moves you, tears you apart and finally becomes you. It'll percolate your mind and ruminate there for a while. It gathers a great feeling because it allows you to observe the things that were troubling you and wash away any trepidation that was associated with them. Porcelain Raft's music pays respect to the sound it's influenced by, but effortlessly comes together feeling strangely original. "Strange Weekend" offers so much in such a small package. An intensely fulfilling experience from start to finish, Porcelain Raft knows how to get straight to your heart without ever appearing manipulative or disingenuous.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

about these things, he's like an actor watching the audience."

- Andrew Sullivan Writer, blogger and TV talking-head Andrew Sullivan is known for expressing what he thinks is true, rather than what he thinks conforms to defined ideological cubby-holes.

He supported George W. Bush in 2000 and

He calls himself a conservative supporting limited government and a flat tax rate, while opposing capital punishment and condemning our use of torture. He supports gay rights and gay marriage (Sullivan and his partner were married in 2007), but opposes anti-discrimination laws as an example of government overreach.

Sullivan initially supported the war with Iraq, but later explained, "After 9/11, I was clearly blinded by fear of al Qaeda and deluded . . . into thinking we could simply fight our way to victory against Islamist terror. I wasn't alone. But I was surely wrong." He characterizes supporters of the war who have yet to acknowledge they were wrong as "cowards".

Andrew Sullivan raised his profile with a cover story in last week's Newsweek, "Why Are Obama's Critics So Dumb?" Characteristically, the article targets the president's critics on both ends of the ideological spectrum: "The attacks from both the right and the left on the man and his policies aren't out of bounds. They're simply

- empirically - wrong."

Sullivan recounts the facts: 750,000 jobs a month being lost at the time Obama took office, and the last quarter of 2008 seeing a drop in growth at an annualized rate of nearly 9% the worst since the 1930s. Measures taken to address the crisis were "far more successful than anyone has yet fully given Obama the credit for."

The jobs situation began improving in early 2010, right at the time Obama's $787 billion stimulus program took effect. Since then, the economy's added 2.4 million jobs - more than the net gain during the entire eight years under George W. Bush. At the same, a greater percentage of government jobs have been cut than during the early years of the Reagan Administration. Regarding the stimulus, "It's not an exaggeration to say it prevented a spiral downward that could have led to the Second Great Depression."

Sullivan states the tax and spending polices under Bush cost the taxpayers $5.07 trillion over two terms. The policies under Obama are projected to cost $1.4 trillion over the same period. Non-defense discretionary spending grew by twice as much under Bush and the Republicans than it has under Obama.

As for the Affordable Care Act, Sullivan points out that we already have universal healthcare, but in the least cost-efficient manner: when "I write what I think is someone shows up at the Emergency Room, true. I don't give a damn about 'reputation.' If I'm is adopt a policy once championed by Newt wrong I correct or re-think.

Once a writer worries Foundation – that of the "individual mandate". "Making 44 million free-riders pay into the system is not fiscally reckless . . . It is, dare I say it, conservative."

Sullivan reminds how "Obama reversed Bush's policy of ignoring Osama bin Laden overruled his vice president and secretary of state in approving the eventual plan, and personally ordered the extra helicopters that proved crucial. Had Bush done the same, acquiring a "treasure trove of real intelligence" in the process, "he'd be on Mount Rushmore by Obama's foreign policy is compared to Dwight Eisenhower's and George H.W. Bush's in pursuing "long term strategic advantage" - and it's worked: we're now able to exercise a leadership role in the world as we haven't been for nearly a decade. Sullivan attributes the left's frustration with Obama to his similar approach in domestic policy; playing the "long game" rather than scoring short-term political points he can take immediate credit for.

Sullivan describes Obama's strategy for dealing with an obstructionist congress as first reaching out to the other side, and as they refuse the gesture "he demonstrates that they are the source of the problem". He then pursues his original proposal "without being effectively tarred as an ideologue or a divider.

The same approach was on display in the State of the Union address. The president began by extolling the unity of purpose exemplified by our military, but then vowed he'd "fight obstruction with action", and "fight any action to return to the policies that created these problems in the Close-ups of opposition leaders listening to the speech revealed to a nation-wide audience which side of the argument they were on. House Majority Leader Eric Cantor (R-VA) scowled in disapproval as President Obama suggested that we "stop rewarding companies that ship jobs overseas and start rewarding those that keep

As others roared approval, House Speaker John Boehner (R-OH) pouted at the suggestion women should earn equal pay for equal work.' Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) looked like he got a jolt of bad news when Obama announced that the percentage of oil consumption from foreign sources is the smallest it's been in sixteen years.

President Obama seemed to be looking beyond congress to the rest of us when he said, "I'll do what I can by myself, but I could do a lot more with your help. There's nothing that together we can't achieve.

Andrew Sullivan made his observations in a Newsweek cover story, but Chris Matthews of MSNBC summed it up in a brief comment a few moments after the president finished speaking: Mitt Romney and his supporters point out that the incumbent has never run a company. They're right – but Barack Obama has shown he knows how to run a country.

A Tempestuous Wind Blows Through The GOP Primary

instance, take Texas Gov. Rick Perry.

Many Texans still love Perry and felt badly about his wipe out on the national political stage. The Dallas Morning News had this big headline: "Perry's dream dashed...With S.C. out of reach, he bows out, backs Gingrich." A story underneath that: "After failed bid, Perry: you have Texas to call home."

Some analysts now predict Perry faces a new era: he returns with reduced clout and is viewed by foes as weaker. Texas House Democratic Leader Jessica Farrar is already demanding Perry reimburse the state money the Governor spent on out-of-state-security costs during his failed White House bid. And the liberal group Progress Texas has collected over 3,000 signatures online to try and force Perry pay the state back.

But Perry's new era is nothing compared to the new era facing the Republican Party.

It's now in a new era where the conventional wisdom has been upended, its former presumptive front-runner is on the run and the party's traditional establishment seems about to be evicted. Is former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney about to lose yet ANOTHER well-funded presidential bid? Is former House Speaker Newt Gingrich on track to become the party's nominee despite having enough baggage to occupy six TSA inspectors?

The Republicans' new political era was best summarized by The National Journal's Ron Fournier: "Gingrich's stunning South Carolina victory, coupled with his surge Presidential election is to win the country's in Florida polling, has created near-panic among Republican consultants, lobbyists, elected officials and staffers, particularly to shove it towards its own center. Which in Washington, who believe Gingrich is too volatile and scandal-plagued to defeat

Romney once enjoyed a 22 point lead going into the Florida primary, but then he caught front-runner-itus and did his best Thomas E. Dewey imitation, while Gingrich roared in the South Carolina debate, becoming the kind of polarizing Rush Limbaughesque candidate that many 21st century performances and politically negligent www.mavenproductions.com.

AUSTIN, Tex. - handling of the tax issue then sparked a It's a new, unsettling huge shift: a Rasmussen poll gives Gingrich era for Republicans a 41-32 point lead. Public Policy Polling puts on many fronts. For Gingrich ahead of Romney 38 percent to 33 percent: a Gingrich gain of 12 points during a week when Romney dropped 8 points. Still, poll numbers are fluid.

The bottom line? Before the South Carolina primary Romney was Big Mo. After the primary he was Big Shmo.

Mitt Romney now has more riding on

Florida than Lady Godiva had on a horse. Gingrich is preaching to the very what's his future?" Columnist Jacquielynn conservative Republican primary voter choir Floyd's headline: "Take Comfort, Rick on stage right and Romney is preaching to on stage right and Romney is preaching to the national audience in the middle as well as the choir on stage right -- and the choir does not like or trust the signals Romney's giving to the general audience. Primary voters seem to be looking for a Talk Show Host in Chief. Meanwhile, a new ABC News/ Washington Post poll puts Gingrich's negatives at 51 percent and Romney's at 49 percent -- a whopping 15 percent increase in Romney's negatives since the Post's last poll.

Where is this all heading?

To another new era. If the current pattern holds, a Republican win would mean the consolidation of the Republican Party's Tea Party movement, talk radio political culture, and Republican infomachine as the new Republican establishment. "Country Club Republicans" will have definitely gone the way of some country clubs in the recession: out of business. But if the Republican nominee loses big time in November, it'll likely mean the emergence of a Jeb Bush or Christ Christie to pick up the pieces -- GOPers closer to the 20th century's Republican World Order.

Many say the secret to winning the center, but the question will be where the country's center is and which party can try could be center left – or far right. And will

The Real State of The Union

President Obama's state of the union address should more appropriately have been titled "the first. How much should state of my campaign strategy". It had less to do with where we really are after 3 years of his governance than it did with admitting that the rich pay in taxes is a fair question. The most recent statistics show only way Liberals are going to win in 2012 is by hoping Lincoln was right about being able to fool all of the people some of the time.

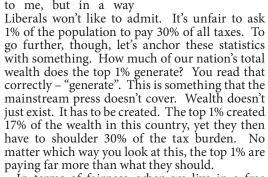

This really shouldn't be a surprise. President Obama doesn't dare admit on national television that the state of the union has gotten worse on his watch. His administration has exploded government spending with no real benefit, ballooned the national debt and promises to inflate it even more, co-opted the independence of the Fed Chief to create an inflationary bubble which inevitably will burst, pushed unemployment to unacceptable highs, vastly increased the authority and meddling of the federal government in our daily lives, achieved only one major legislative program - Obamacare - which is hated more now than when it was passed and promises to be despised when actually implemented, and his administration has turned its back on the promise of decreasing dependence on Middle East oil by killing the Keystone

When you can't base your re-election campaign on your accomplishments, what's a sitting president to do? Create a new story line, of course. You can count on the mainstream media to carry the story for you and lob only softball questions to you and your representatives. Hence, we are told that this election will be about some contrived problem with fairness and inequality which demands more Liberal policies to solve.

This isn't really all that new. We've seen this story line before and lived through the logical results. Think back to the Jimmy Carter years when we were treated to the then-unheard of phenomenon of "stagflation" - economic stagnation and inflation simultaneously. The story has been updated a bit. Today we hear about the 99% vs. the 1%. Somehow this is meant to portray a society struggling under the burdens unfairly imposed by the rich 1% on the poor 99%. of the rich and the Democrats the champions of myobserver.com. the downtrodden. Sadly, few of our media elites even ask if the story is true.

Let's look at inequality that the top 1% pays 30% of all taxes. The middle 60% pay 15% of all taxes. Ironically, that does sound unequal to me, but in a way

In terms of fairness, when we live in a free society, we have to accept the fact that some people will succeed at a different rate than others. In fact, some people will fail. They will start a business or take on a job that they can't perform. This doesn't make them bad people. We've all had our failures. But if we don't let successful people reap rewards, they will stop investing their money to build businesses and employ people. If we protect people from their bad decisions, there won't be any motivation to make better ones in the future. Freedom to succeed and freedom to fail are fair by definition.

President Obama is a masterful politician, and he may yet be successful in selling us his story. But a true state of the union has to acknowledge that he has ruined our economy, and that's not

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES... GET REAL!

Having a baby needs to be a woman's choice always and action than ever before. Becoming a mother in today's world isn't a thing to be taken lightly.

Republican presidential candidates nevertheless are opposed to abortion, even in the case of rape or incest. They say their their solution is adoption. This means they would condemn the victim to nine months of further trauma and degradation reliving their assault. How out of touch with reality are these rich white guys? Apparently, a whole lot.

Rapists and incestuous fathers should be vigilantly sought out and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, for a great many reasons, not least of which is their attempt to take that choice away from the women they abuse. It's hard for me to believe that anyone on either side of the aisle would disagree with that.

How any of the Republican candidates thinks they will take the White House with such blanket, inhumane stance on abortion is laughable. Reproduction is a choice, and nobody has the right to determine what will and will not happen inside a woman's body but that woman

Am I in favor abortion? No... no one is. I am prochoice which is a whole different matter. My feeling is that since I will never get pregnant, it is none of my dam business what Jane Doe does w/her body because she has nothing to do with me and I won't be helping her raise her children. Their overwhelming obsession with women's reproductive functions speaks only of the oppression of forced birthing.

Mitt, Newt, Ron and Rick aren't talking much, if at all, about daycare, balancing work and REAL! family needs, food, education, jobs, pay equality, violence against women, maternity leave, misrepresentation in the media and whatever else you can think of that impacts women's daily lives.

These GOP candidates won't talk about the other women's issues because every one of them and forever. My wife tells me is a lackey totally beholden to their corporate being a mother has been one benefactors. To these guys, you are a fungible of the most wonderful gifts cog in their benefactor's money machine, to be in her life. However, as she paid as little as possible, and discarded when you rightly points out, being a are no longer useful. So they have no intention mother also requires more of supporting anything which might require big wherewithal, resources and constant thought business to treat women (or men) like people, with families and lives outside the workplace. And they will tell you that if, as a woman, you are concerned about work-life balance, you shouldn't have had children.

Not one of these candidates has talked about how the economy and dearth of jobs is effecting whether or not women should wish to carry a pregnancy through to birth. Not one has even touched on issues that are overwhelmingly pertinent to the majority of women, including how they are to adequately care for the children they already have; and not one has addressed the issue of the bulging foster care system, and what that can do to our country.

I think men or most men, especially the GOP that are running for office, are in fact intimidated by women making their own choices with out a man to do it for them. So what better way to make them subservient then to strip them of their reproductive rights? As far as the women who are against women having any reproductive rights, they are either brainwashed or because of the zeal of their religious beliefs see "man" as the supreme being.

It just floors me that we are still doing this. I was just starting college when Roe v Wade was decided and I thought the issue of women's reproductive rights had finally been settled. Boy, was I mistaken. I bet if men gave birth the whole discussion would be mute. Abortion would be a rite of passage and there would be a clinic on every corner, and the feds would pay for three years of maternity leave as well.

So to Mitt, Newt, Ron and Rick I say... GET

As I reflected upon my week past, I duly noted the activities that occupied most of my week. Apart from the funeral, I had several hospital visits to make. STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE

YA NEVER KNOW HOW THE BALLS GONNA BOUNCE

Yesterday, about twenty eight hours ago I was screaming in agony. I was walking around my dentist's office in Chino, about an hour's ride from here, just waiting to be seen by the dentist. My son was with me in the office embarrassed by my behavior and my wife, who had driven me, wouldn't get out of the car. Later she explained that she was tired of me being so needy and besides that she couldn't understand why I insisted on going to a dentist that was so ridiculously far away. To make a bad situation absolutely intolerable the Dentist was short-staffed that day as one assistant was on jury duty and another was taking a class.

I am hesitant to use aspirin or pain killers as I take this warfarin stuff which is a blood thinner to prevent me from dying from a stroke and I was confused as to whether I could take any pain pills at all. In the house I located an old bottle of vicodin which after some hesitation I took but which provided absolutely no relief. After about an hour I was led into one of the dental offices by an obviously inexperienced assistant who was absolutely clueless (at least it seemed so to me) as to how to take an x-ray. I asked my son, who liked me is mainly worthless in these situations, to try and get my able wife to come in out of the car but she wouldn't do it. I guess she was also mad at me for neglecting the situation.

As I was about to give up and just start breaking appliances the Dentist appeared and magic occurred. He injected something and steered it into the tooth and the pain receded to horrible. He made out a prescription for two anti-biotics and for twenty vicodin pills. We raced over to the 24 hour pharmacy at Kaiser Baldwin Park which rapidly filled the prescription and soon I wasn't hurting. We drove home and, get this, the Dentist called my house at about 9:30p.m. and instructed me as to how to take the medication. He warned me that the swelling would probably get worse before it got better and for me not to worry about it.

I got up in the morning and looked in the mirror and beheld a monster with a kind of closed eye and jowels. I didn't care; I was ready. I went to Court anyway looking like that and everybody thought I had suffered a stroke. No it was just a dental problem I explained, feeling all stoic and proud. Unfortunately while I was feeling all stoic and proud I realized that I had forgotten to bring the vicodin with me and was soon in such agony that I couldn't drive home. I hesitantly called my wife, who was still angry with me, and explained that I needed her to drive over to Pasadena from Sierra Madre and bring me the medication. Suddenly, the dam broke and my wife started to laugh and after just a few yells turned into her old loving self and brought me the medication.

I got through the day and drove home arriving just in time to see the President's State of the Union Speech. I don't know about you but I have been very depressed about the state of American Politics lately. The Republican Presidential debates have displayed a level of ignorance, incompetence, and consistent hypocrisy that has made me ashamed of this country. I don't know what I expected from the President but I was overwhelmed by the level of intelligence, vitality, breadth of concern and awareness that he displayed. Maybe it's all a part of some big show but I thought he was wonderful and felt very privileged to have this man as our President. My reaction was a total surprise to me and I thrilled to his repeated use of his word America. It resonated with me and I am right now strangely optimistic about the future.

Right after the speech both my son and daughter called. My ex-wife is coming for a visit from New Mexico and we are all going to meet here on Friday night. As I have mentioned before in these articles my ex has written a fictional novel sort of describing her life. The book is dedicated to our son and daughter and to my present wife and me. She has received some awards for the book, which is entitled Walking Fish, and I am very proud of her and very proud of my whole family for holding things together. Is it okay for me to display this pride? Gee, I hope so. Hooray for my ex-wife, hooray for my family, hooray for my dentist, and hooray for America. Things could be worse.

HOMES AND PROPERTY

One Of A Kind: Featuring unique homes and gardens and the people who create them. Story and photos by Chris Bertrand. Photos

New Construction Contemporary Overlooking Eaton Canyon

Just completed, this sleek contemporary home offers privacy up a separate drive on a private lane, though it has a New York Drive address. Located just north of Sierra Madre Boulevard, the property is perfect for someone who craves a bit of privacy and seclusion, but wants to be close to city and commute amenities. Here, the Gold Line and I-210 entrance are only about a mile away, yet it's tucked away.

Project manager, Dave Stewart, of Nevis Homes in Arcadia, comments that their intent was "a streamlined modern home designed to blend with the hillside, without being obtrusive."

Of the Nevis Homes company, he comments, "I've been with Nevis for six years, and the company has a tremendous track record with the city of Arcadia.'

Known for their design that maximizes the square footage use in homes, Nevis designed the structure's several levels to provide privacy vignettes for each area, while maintaining the open feel. The design thread continues, connected through sleek design, upscale materials and pleasing textures.

The result is a home that feels modern, but not cold.... A study in horizontal lines using the iron railings inside and out, plus various interpretations of rectangles, utilizing interesting shapes, shadows and "framing" with windows, pillars and the outline of the home, contrasted with muted array of colors, to blend with the hillside site.

The sleek kitchen is part of the great room, and features high-end design but very practical Scavolini cabinetry from Italy complemented by Galaxy white CaesarStone quartz counters, an elite five-burner professional stove by Bertazzoni-Italia, a company known for its engineering and culinary heritage, plus additional Bosch

In the great room, the eye is drawn outward to the distant skyline views of Pasadena as well as the hillside oaks and trees, giving the feeling of an aerie. Balconies on two levels provide different perspectives and views, as well as separate outside venues for dual or shared activities.

The baths also utilize the Scavolini cabinetry, and each bath boasts dramatic sinks to provide interest and Toto commodes. Hallways and interior baths also benefit from shared natural light through opaque glass interior windows and solar tubes in the roof.

The opaque glass of the kitchen cabinetry is mimicked in the custom garage door, with brushed metal framing and opaque glass. While increasing the reflectivity and overall design, the inside of the garage benefits from ample natural light, while maintaining privacy through the opaque glass.

This custom 2508 square foot home at 3277 New York Drive, Pasadena, offers three bedrooms, an office or den, plus a two car garage. It is offered at $1,188,000.

ReMax Property Concierge listing agent, Deena Willis, will hold the home open from 2-5 on Sunday, January 29. For more information or a private showing, contact her at 626-483-8840 or visit www.DeenaWillis.com.

Expose Yourself

There is much debate among real estate professionals about the value of holding an Open House. Some insist these events help get the house sold. Others argue it's an outdated practice in the digital age of virtual tours. However, it's been estimated that nearly half of all buyers who visit open houses first learned about them on the Internet.

With all the time and money that an agent puts into marketing your home, an Open House puts those very targeted buyers inside your home and in front of your representative. One of the best aspects of the Open House is the feedback that visitors provide, feedback that can suggest you change your approach or make needed improvements.

Âside from interest generated by the Web, the signs your agent places may also attract curious passersby. While they may not be making a purchase themselves, they may very well know someone who is. An Open House also helps to create a sense of urgency among those who visit, particularly when they see that other buyers are showing interest.

Obviously, a successful Open House exposes your property to a broad base of buyers, but even if only three people visit and one makes an offer, it was clearly worth it. Not all homes are ideal candidates for this type of marketing, so ask your agent about the possibilities.

THE GOOD LIFE

YOUR HEALTH MATTERS

Today's Subject: Sick and tired of being sick and tired?

Dr. John Talevich, D.C. has practiced in Sierra Madre for thirty years. His clinic, LifeWorks! Chiropractic, offers patient-specific approaches to the alleviation of pain and individually tailored wellness programs.

It's estimated that 20-30% of us feel tired "most of the time." Aside from the big energy drop between 3:00 and 5:00 in the afternoon, there are those for whom a good night's sleep is not renewing. What's going on here? Some people even say, "I was born tired!"
Some Useful Pointers:

1. Water consumption. Yes, dehydration taxes the system and depresses normal function.

2. Starches. Even complex carbohydrates can be challenging for an already stressed system ~

lean toward healthy proteins.
3. Relaxation. High cortisol levels drain the body's reserves. Herbert Benson, M.D.'s "relaxation response" is a must.

4. Coffee. Yup. What goes up must come down for some of us. Wean yourself slowly to avoid difficult withdrawal symptoms.

5. Toxic overload. A simple cleanse can reduce the effect of built-up inflammatory chemicals in the body. The New Detox Diet, by Elson Haas, M.D., is an excellent source.

6. Get a physical with blood work. A nutritionally-minded doctor will evaluate your findings in order to rule out pathology and measure abnormal physiology.

7. Lighten up. Watching too much negativity on the telly?

8. Get a good night's sleep. Lights out for a few weeks before ten p.m. Turn off all media at 8:00 and read a calming book under a soft light.

9. Join a group. Everyone needs to be heard, seen and appreciated. Heck, start one of your own! 10. Check your prescription drugs. Side effects of many drugs include fatigue. Best yet, seek out a natural health care provider to develop a lifelong wellness program.

There are many reasons for chronic tiredness. We do not understand all the factors that contribute to this. If we work with the basics, and examine and shore up the fundamentals, some of the hidden influences may come to light.

To your excellent health! Dr. John

2011 TAX FILING REQUIREMENTS FOR SENIORS

What are the 2011 IRS income tax filing requirements for seniors? I had to file and pay federal income taxes last year, but my income dropped and I'm wondering if I'm exempt this year.

Recently Retired

Dear Retired:

According to the Tax Policy Center, 56 percent of retirees will not have to file or pay federal income taxes this year mainly because their incomes are under the IRS filing threshold. Here's a breakdown of the 2011 filing requirements along with a few other tax tips to help you determine if you need to file.

IRS Requirements

If your gross income is below the IRS filing limits, you probably won't have to file a federal tax return this year. Gross income includes all the income you receive that is not exempt from tax, not including Social Security benefits, unless you are married and filing separately. You probably don't have to file this year if:

- You are single and your 2011 gross income was less than $9,500 ($10,950 if you're 65 or older).
- You are married filing jointly and your gross income was under $19,000. If you or your spouse is 65 or older, the limit increases to $20,150. And if you're both over 65, your income must be under $21,300 to not file.
- You are head of household and your gross income was below $12,200 ($13,650 if age 65 or older).
- You are married filing separately and your income was less than $3,700.
- You are a qualifying widow(er) with a dependent child and your gross income was less than $15,300 ($16,450 if age 65 or older).

Special Situations

You also need to be aware that there are some special financial situations that require you to file a tax return, even if your gross income falls below the IRS filing requirement. For example, if you had net earnings from self-employment in 2011 of $400 or more, or if you owe any special taxes to the IRS such as alternative minimum tax or IRA tax penalties, you'll probably need to file.

To figure this out, the IRS offers a page on their website called "Do You Need to File a Federal Income Tax Return?" that includes a list of financial situations and a series of questions that will help you determine if you're required to file, or if you should file (if you're due a refund). You can access this page at www.doyouneed2file.info, or you can get help over the phone by calling the IRS helpline at 800-829-1040.

Check Your State

Even if you're not required to file a federal tax return this year, it doesn't necessarily mean you're also excused from filing state income taxes. Check on that with your state tax agency before concluding you're entirely in the clear. For links to state and local tax agencies see taxadmin.org - click on "Links."

Tax Help

If you do need to file a tax return this year, you can get help through the Tax Counseling for the Elderly (or TCE) program. Sponsored by the IRS, TEC provides free tax preparation and counseling to middle and low income taxpayers, age 60 and older. Call 800-906-9887 to locate a service near you.

Also check with AARP, a participant in the TCE program that provides free tax preparation at around 6,100 sites nationwide. To locate an AARP Tax-Aide site call 888-227-7669 or visit aarp.org/findtaxhelp.

WILL YOUR MONEY OUTLIVE YOU?" luncheon and program on Wednesday, February 8, 11:30A.M. at the Altadena Country Club, 2290 Country Club Drive, Altadena. Keegan J. THE WORLD AROUND US something never seen before: plunging into a scorching death as it flew too close to the Sun. That the comet met its fate this way was no surprise—but the chance to watch the event firsthand amazed even the most seasoned cometwatchers.

"Comets are usually too dim to be seen in the glare of the Sun's light," says Dean Pesnell at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., the project scientist for NASA's Sun-orbiting Solar Dynamics Observatory (SDO)—which snapped images of the comet that were then combined to create a movie. "We've been telling people we'd never see one [a comet] in SDO data.

But an ultrabright comet, from a group known as the Kreutz comets, overturned all preconceived notions. The comet can clearly be viewed moving in over the right side of the Sun, disappearing 20 minutes later as it evaporates in the searing heat. The movie of this event is more than just a novelty. As detailed in a paper in Science magazine appearing January 20, 2012, watching the comet's death provides a new way to estimate the comet's size and mass. The comet turns out to be somewhere between 150 and 300 feet long and to have about as much mass as an aircraft carrier.

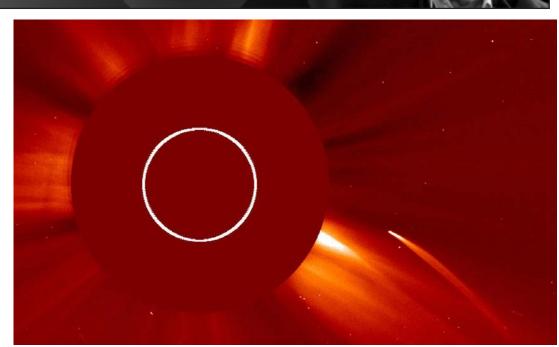

"Of course, it's doing something very different than what aircraft carriers do," says Karel Schrijver, a solar scientist at Lockheed Martin in

On July 6, 2011, a comet was caught doing Palo Alto, Calif., the first author on the Science paper and the principal investigator for the Atmospheric Imaging Assembly instrument on SDO, which recorded the movie. "It was moving along at almost 400 miles per second through the intense heat of the Sun—and was literally being evaporated away.'

Typically, comet-watchers see the Kreutzgroup comets only through images taken by a coronagraph, a specialized telescope that views the Sun's fainter out atmosphere, or corona, by blocking the direct blinding sunlight with a solid occulting disk. On average, a new member of the Kreutz family is discovered every three days, with some of the larger members being observed for 48 hours or more before disappearing behind the occulting disk, never to be seen again. Such "Sungrazer" comets obviously destruct when they get close to the Sun, but the event had never before

The journey to categorizing this comet began on July 6, 2011, after Schrijver spotted a bright comet in a coronagraphic image produced by the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory (SOHO). He looked for it in the SDO images and much to his surprise he found it.

The legislative pair of SOPA (the Stop Online Piracy Act) and PIPA (Protect Intellectual Property Act) are proving to be two of the most unpopular pieces of lawmaking to hit Congress in terms of near public unanimity in opposition to their passage. These two bills (PIPA, which is the Senate version and SOPA, which is the House version) are nearly identical in scope and they both seek to give greater control over Internet content to major media companies and studios.

Were these new laws to pass they would in effect give 6 major media entities (GE, Disney, Viacom, Time Warner, Newscorp and CBS Corporation) the power to decide what can and cannot be seen on the Internet, from either foreign or domestic sources and would have the power of the State at their disposal to enforce the new state of the Internet. The above-listed companies currently produce nearly 90% of what is listened to, read and watched in this country and collectively have spent millions sponsoring this legislation through the halls of Congress. Due to the considerable influence and capital that these corporations collectively wield, it wouldn't have been much of a stretch to think that these bills would pass into law, probably in the form of a rider attached to some vital must-pass legislation or budget, and that would be that.

Not this time, buddy. Once the blogosphere caught wind of what was afoot, the organizing against these laws began in frenzy. One of the first concrete demonstrations against the legislation was directed at popular domain registrar GoDaddy.com. Protest organizers dubbed December 29th, 2011 "Dump GoDaddy Day" and the day saw nearly 15,000 hosted domains transferred away from the registrar in retaliation for its support of the SOPA\PIPA bills. GoDaddy has since switched its public position on SOPA\PIPA support.

On January 18, 2012 a protest in the form of a 24-hour Internet-wide "Blackout" was hosted by some of the largest sites on the Internet (by traffic) including Wikipedia, Craigslist, Wordpress, Internet Archive and nearly 115,000 other websites across the globe. Google showed its support by displaying a special "Blackout" graphic. Some observers have commented that these organized protests have marked a "political coming-of-age for the Internet" as it has collectively and effectively communicated its demands for its own growth and had those demands taken

Both SOPA and PIPA have been shelved at this point. Chalk up a win for the "little" guy.... this time around.

Walking Miss Daisy

chime of "Chris, dog walker....Chris, dog walker... Chris, dog walker"! Immediately, Daisy snaps to attention, plants herself at the foot of the bed, and places one paw on top bed sheet with her fluffy white ears and tail fully engaged. Next she begins her usual routine of pacing back and forth from the bedroom to the leash that hangs on the hook by the front door, whining softly as she paces, as if to say, "Hurry, get me ready, Chris will be here any minute". Soon she is greeted on the front porch by her beloved walker (that's me!) who gives her her how special she is and how happy I am to see her, and off we go. Daisy is absolutely elated to be leashed and lead out on yet another exploratory pilgrimage through the local neighborhood sidewalks and hillsides!

Within moments, we are well on our way, ascending briskly up the steep hill that takes us to the upper canyon and ultimate apex of our vigorous hour-long hike. The sun has just made it's way over the eastern horizon, and has begun it's typical daily task of steaming the pavement and warming the windows of the houses as we

Suddenly, Daisy stops in her tracks; her body stiffens and she stares ahead, fully focused on the hillside that runs adjacent to us. Her ears are perked to a point, her tail is bent forward and the hair on her back begins to rise up like a porcupine. I follow her gaze, hoping to see what may have caught her eye and caused such a sudden change in her countenance, but I see nothing out of the ordinary among the massive, meandering oak trees and low-growing fauna covering the open area between the houses on the hill. Seconds later, Daisy relaxes enough for us to resume our steep upward climb and I begin wondering to myself nervous tendencies due to a traumatic experience

It is 7:30 AM when my neighbor's cell phone abruptly at the trail head. It is then that I look comes to life, breaking the serene silence of dawn and rudely awaking all who sleep. The custom, middle of the trail just a few yards ahead, looking voice-recorded ring tone resounds loudly with a directly at us! I am a bit surprised to see so many of them standing so close, but having seen coyotes in the neighborhoods and canyons multiple times before, I know enough to slowly back away and leave them alone, to avoid confrontation. As we head back down the hill, it occurs to me that Daisy's sudden change in demeanor on our way up the hill, had nothing to do with neurosis, nor was it prompted by something she saw far away in the distant woods. Daisy's brief behavioral interlude had clearly been a natural response to her inherently keen sense of olfaction. I had a hug and an affectionate verbal greeting, telling recently read an article that mentioned a dog's sense of smell is said to be 1,000 times stronger than that of a human being, mainly attributable to a vomeronasal organ that is housed in the dog's olfactory chamber. This specialized anatomical feature, unique to the canine, was no doubt what allowed Daisy to sense the presence of the coyotes from so far away, and exhibit a physical response long before they came into her field of vision.

We finished our hike, and I delivered Daisy back to the safety of her home with lots of hugs and praise. Later that day, I was reflecting on our walk and I realized that my initial assumptions about what could have caused Daisy's unexpected behavior had been a prime example of how the domestic dog is often misunderstood by the human being. Daisy's response to the scent of the coyotes that morning, reinforced my appreciation for the dog's sense of smell, but more importantly it taught me that, if acknowledged from the proper perspective, a dog's sensual abilities and responsive behavior can act as a very important tell-tale for the human's safety in the wilderness. Finally, it was a reminder to avoid trying to anthropomorphize the dog. To expect a dog to think and behave the way a human thinks and behaves is to foolishly discount the remarkable unique qualities of the dog that what could have caused her momentary change in can be of great value and benefit to the human. behavior. It crosses my mind that she might have In retrospect, my experience that morning taught me 2 very valuable lessons; to respect the dog and that occurred when she was a puppy, before she was his inherent sensual abilities, and to allow myself rescued and adopted. As I ponder the possibilities, we make our way further up and around the curve Who knew a simple morning walk with a dog toward the fire road, where the pavement ends could offer lessons of such value and importance?

Shopping With My Mom, and Other Rare Occurrences

I love my carpool buddy! Not only do we save on gas, but we get the pleasure of each other's stimulating insights every morning and afternoon. We have many things in common, such as interest in veganism as well as an aversion to the trappings of vanity (e.g., cosmetics, designer handbags, etc. I'm sure I suffer from vanity in some aspects of my life, but fashion isn't one of them). Recently, however, I discovered a major contrast in our life experiences. She was talking about her adult children when she commented, "One of the nice things about having a daughter..." she gave me a knowing smile, "is that she goes shopping with me!" I nodded and smiled as if in agreement, thinking of the ocean of difference between their shopping experiences and that of my own mom and me.

My mom hates shopping. As a child she was forced to accompany her mom and older sister on shopping excursions. She's related the excruciating details of these outings on several occasions. "They would find a dress they liked," she began. "It fit perfectly. It was even reasonably priced. They'd spend an hour dithering over it, and then decide to come back later to get it. Of course, it would be gone. Then they'd say they should've bought it when they had the chance!" I don't know if the love of shopping is inherent in girls, or if it has to be modeled. Anyway, I inherited my mom's dread of searching for clothes.

I'm usually able to postpone clothes shopping, but there are some instances when that is impossible --namely, wedding gown shopping. Being married two and a half years, the minute details of my whole wedding preparation are somewhat fuzzy, but I distinctly remember shopping for my dress. I allotted myself a small amount of time (two weeks) for deciding upon a gown, with the attitude of "Let's get this over with!" I'll spare you the long version and cut to the chase. After scouring Las Tunas Boulevard in Temple City, I narrowed it down to three choices. My mom spared no enthusiasm when she agreed to come and look at them with me. At the first shop, the manager remembered me from before, and was murderously intent upon my making a purchase at her store. I had the feeling that she had a Voodoo doll of me that she'd stab, burn, or decapitate if I didn't buy that dress. She stared me down as I meekly explained that this was the first dress we were looking at, but that we'd definitely keep hers in mind. (Not as if my mom would've argued against buying it in order to go home!).

On the way to the next shop, my mom suggested that we delay the torture until a future date. I was able to convince her to come to one more shop (I should've known three stops would've put her over the edge). The next place we visited had a sales lady who could've sold fur coats to members of PETA. The gown was pretty and nearly fit me (designers don't consider munchkin dimensions when creating wedding gowns). I started to explain that we'd think about it, when she slashed the price by a hundred dollars or so. I thanked her and was about to say we'd let her know in a week, when my mom interjected, "That one's really pretty; I think you should go with it." The lady practically embraced my mom, and went off on a string of fawning compliments about how it suited me perfectly. In the end, I did buy this dress, its price eventually reduced to a very economical sum. I showed the two other gowns to other people before purchasing it, but a single dress-hunting excursion was enough for my mom.

I recently ran into a friend whose daughter is getting married soon. She talked about all the different stores she and her daughter explored over the period of a month or so. Using vivid details, she described her daughter's gown down to its last sequin. In contrast, it amused me to recall my mom's answer to anyone who asked about my dress: "It's white. I think it's sleeveless.'

go to a playoff format similar to the NFL's. I'm not been a fan of a real "playoff" system, but what I am proposing is a compromise.

My stance is we keep the bowl format pretty much in place, but tweak it to the will determine the wild-card and final two benefit of everyone. I am looking at this from the viewpoint of a college coach.

bowl games, plus a championship game. I would have conference champions meet in three of the BCS bowl games and two wildcard teams meet in the fourth. From those results, a final game would be played.

Currently, the championship game teams are determined at the end of the regular season, prior to the bowl selections, and bowl results have nothing to do with the last game of the college season. This does not period, and this would allow more time for seem to a fair way to determine the national championship team.

NCAA President Emmert recently suggested that a four-team playoff - a Football Final Four, if you will -- might be in place by the 2014 season. Why do I think Sundays 9-11 a.m.

This seems to four teams should not meet in semi-finals? be the time of Because that would mean that two teams year when serious play two extra games. The questions I hear you all asking: "Who teams?" and "How will this be decided?" These are legitimate and important questions. I suggest some kind of committee There would be the four traditional BCS of coaches who will not be concerned with how well a team travels, how many dollars they will bring to a game, and other such financial issues.

I'dalsolike to see a two-week break between the BCS bowl games and the championship game, which preferably would be played on a Monday night to avoid competing with the NFL playoffs. The two-week break would allow for the all important promotional coaches and players to prepare and plan for games. Also, staging a major event such as this involves travel and accommodations, To begin with, here would be my BCS and more details than most are aware of.

> I've always believed the college championship game should be played at the Rose Bowl, but that probably isn't going to happen. A more likely scenario would be for the title game to rotate among the BCS bowl game sites, as it does now.

I think such a format would lead to a game conferences or independents, such as Notre equal in stature to the Super Bowl, bringing Dame or Boise State selected according to in no telling how much money.
