MATHESON DEPORTED FROM CANADA - RETURNS TO SIERRA MADRE By Susan Henderson

Sierra Madre resident Robert Matheson, who was arrested, convicted and jailed for possessing and smuggling child pornography into Canada lasat year, was deported by Canadian Authorities earlier this week and returned to his home in Sierra Madre.

Matheson, 66, pleaded guilty to the charges after he was arrested on October 17th at the Halifax Stanfield International Airport. The sentence imposed was 120 days with 12 days credit for time served. He was detained in Canada under house arrest from the time he posted bail until sentencing. Prior to his arrest he owned a home in Pictou, Nova Scotia, a small, close knit town, much like Sierra Madre. According to Canadian news reports, that home was sold to cover legal expenses and bail. There is a great deal of concern that after his release he will be deported back to the United States and return to Sierra Madre.

In a press release from the Sierra Madre Police Department, Chief Larry Giannone states,

"Matheson voluntarily came to the police station and met with Interim Police Chief Larry Giannone. Giannone said "Mr. Matheson voluntarily came to the police station to advise us that he was back at his residence and simply stated; "There are two sides to every story". The Police Department has confirmed at this time Mr. Matheson is under no obligation to register as a sex offender based on California law.

Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) officials were notified that he would be released at the end of February, but were unsure of the exact date. The ICE investigation regarding Matheson is still on-going.

Robert William Matheson, 66, of Sierra Madre, Calif., enters Dartmouth provincial court Tuesday. He pleaded guilty to possessing and smuggling child pornography. Photo Courtesy Krochak/Herald

Giannone said "ICE is still actively working on the Matheson case, however it is a lengthy process and I am not at the liberty to discuss details of the investigation. Mr. Matheson is aware of the continuing investigation".

Matheson was caught with more than 2,500 pornographic photos of children and almost 300 video

After Matheson was jailed by the Canadian courts, a search warrant was executed by local and federal public as to who the children were or the origin of the photos.

The fact that at this point Matheson does not have to register as a sex offender has many residents upset. However, the Federal Investigation is still underway and may result in additional charges against Matheson.

In another local matter concerning Meaghan's List, MV News learned of the recent passing of a very elderly child molester who lived unnoticed in the community for authorities of his house on Liliano years. His name and picture were in Sierra Madre. No information posted on Meaghan's list and the has been made public as to the public was encouraged to go to the items removed from the home, nor website to get more information. has any information been made He was in his 80's when convicted.

SIERRA MADRE'S LEGENDARY PEPPER TREE TO COME DOWN

By Bill Coburn

The big pepper tree in Kersting Court, the one with the crevice in the trunk that you took a picture of your kid standing in, the one that was a "mature" tree long before it was part of a set on the film "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" in 1954, the one that has come to serve as an identity for the downtown, the one that many consider to be an old friend, will be cut down on the morning of Wednesday, Feb. 29th, according to the Public Works Dept.

The tree, which I'm told by town historian Phyllis Chapman was planted in the 1880s (I think she said 1887) by a teacher at Sierra Madre School (which was located there at the time), was recommended for removal by the City's arborist, and the Tree Commission agreed. The tree suffered some damage during the recent windstorm, but interestingly, it actually had a major branch break off the day the winds came, several hours before the winds arrived. SMFD came and cordoned off the area, and then the winds hit later that night.

According to Pat Alcorn of the Community Services Commission, "The Community Services Commission and the Tree Commission met jointly on Tuesday night and even though as a group mourned the demise of the tree, agreed that it had to come down. The wood will be saved, and perhaps some time or another can be used for something in Kersting Court. The Community Services Commission and the Tree Commission will have public hearings about what will be done with Kersting Court once the tree is gone."

A local resident suggested to me that perhaps a bench could be made out of the tree that could go in Kersting Court, and I thought that was a good idea. I asked Public Works Director Bruce Inman if the contractor cutting the tree could cut it in big enough pieces that slabs could be cut to make a bench, and he said they could. Of course, nothing will be done without the Community Services and Tree Commissions approving it.

Also, Patricia Ancona of the Friends of the Arts has suggested that between now and Wednesday, people take pictures of the tree, with family, friends, animals, etc. to be used in a public presentation as a memorial to the longtime "city elder."

RUSNAK TO RUN FOR ASSEMBLY

In an unforeseen move, local auto dealership executive Victoria Rusnak threw her hat in the ring, announcing her intent to run for the 41st state Assembly District seat. According to reports, she filed papers to run last week.

"For any non-politician to decide to run for elected office today requires careful evaluation of several factors... the personal fortitude to enter into a political campaign, the passion and commitment to tackle the tough issues facing our communities and lastly, the experience and knowledge required to make a difference, Rusnak said.

In a letter rusnakforassembly.com went on to say,

"After careful evaluation consultation many community leaders, I have decided to offer our communities an alternative to the failed political approaches of the past.

As a former environmental lawyer, I have fought hard to protect our natural environment. I will continue this personal commitment in Sacramento working with all sides for innovative and practical solutions & policies.

As both a parent and community leader education, I am determined to support and reform our educational system. One out of four K-12 students in California is not English proficient and half qualify for free or reduced price meals. We have made improvements in test scores but we have a long way to go. I will work to increase education funding, give more authority to teachers and local school districts and support magnet schools and career programs."

Leaders Offer Solutions to PCC Cuts an initiative to tax oil to fund management, "Everything is on

Pasadena City College President Dr. Mark Rocha made a passionate plea Wednesday night for students to work together with the school after days of protests triggered by course cuts that left many students scrabbling to find open classes the first day of the spring

'These cuts, 46 sections on 2,300 sections are serious," Rocha said during a packed board of trustee meeting. "But it's not the world coming to an end. There are people out there, who are not in college, and hearing this would think, I'm not coming."

Rocha said he was worried that they were sending a message the school was closed for business, "it is not," he said.

Rocha said cuts were in response to a $2.8 million decrease in funding, from Sacramento, to the college announced just weeks before the start of classes. He cautioned that more cuts were coming next year, although did not say if the school had plans to nix Summer or Winter intercessions, a move implemented by other nearby colleges such as Glendale.

Antonovich Criticizes Control of Cell Towers

Supervisor Antonovich criticized President Obama's signing of a law that denies local governments' right to reject applications to co-locate cell antennas in their communities - the second such action taken by the federal government recently.

"Once again, the federal government is meddling in local land use and preventing residents from voicing concerns over cell towers," said Antonovich. "Without local control, cell carriers will be able to install in our communities without any public input." This attack on local landuse control, buried on page 273 of the "Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act of 2011" bill reads "a State or local government may not deny, and shall approve, any eligible facilities request for a modification of an existing wireless tower or base station that does not substantially dimensions."

FRASER FAMILY DANCE GROUP HAS SECURED 210 1ST PLACE AWARDS AT 10 COMPETITIONS IN 2 YEARS

The Fraser Family Dance Group continue to astound ballroom dance judges as they win a total of 30 1st place awards in International Latin at the California Open Dancesport Championships Feb. 16 – Feb. 19 in Irvine. Thus far the family has secured over 210 1st place awards at 10 competitions within two years. Up next is the San Francisco Open Dancesport Championships March 23 – March 25.

Kari, Grace and Holden started dance lessons as a family activity in 2009 and began competing nationally by 2010. Kari is a former N.Y. actress (Kari Gibson), who initially portrayed Dixie Cooney on the ABC daytime soap All My Children. Grace is a 14-year-old freshman at Pasadena's Mayfield Senior School. Holden is a 6th grader at Clairbourn School in Pasadena and he's 11 years old.

The Fraser's dance instructors are Boris Rudenko and Ekaterina Fedosova. In 2009 they ranked 2nd in the U.S. for Ballroom Sport Dance Pair. During the competition phase Kari and Grace dance with Boris and Holden dances with Ekaterina.

The Fraser's have also enlisted Paul Killick as their private coach. A former professional ballroom dancer, Killick and his dance partners were finalists in all major world competitions. One of his dance partners was Dancing With The Stars dance pro and celebrity, Karina Smirnoff.

The family trains at various ballrooms in Glendale, Eagle Rock and the Westmor Dance Studio in downtown Los Angeles. For upcoming competitions they practice two to three hours a day five days a week. During non-competition dates they practice 1 ½ hours four days a week. It's a balancing act between the children's homework and dance practice, but the Fraser family loves dancing and spending time together.

When the Fraser's began competing nationally they never knew they were part of a wonderful family legacy. As a young man their grandfather, Albert "Scotty" Fraser won several awards in international smooth dancing and competed throughout Scotland. Today "Scotty" is 85-years-old and lives in Westbury, Long Island with his 75-year-old wife, Beverly.

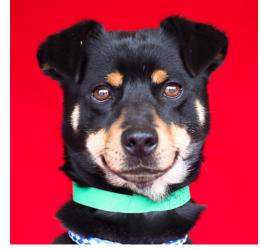

"Scotty's son, Bruce Fraser, Kari's husband and Grace and Holden's father seemed to inherit the dance gene. As a junior in high school Bruce spent one semester abroad in Linz, Austria. He was exceptionally talented and served as an example to the other students on how to properly dance the Waltz. Bruce attended Columbia University and Harvard Law School and today he's a partner at Sidley Austin LLP in downtown Los Angeles.

The ballroom dance circuit has been a blessing for the Fraser Family Dance Group. Grace would like to one day compete at the Blackpool Dance Festival, the world's first and most prestigious ballroom dance competition held every May in Blackpool, England. An avid fan of Dancing With the Stars she would also like to be on the show and teach children ballroom dancing. Holden is 11-years-old and still has his future ahead of him. Kari will always be a ballroom dancer but also loves being an actress and hopes to return to television.

There was of course the official "Ribbon Cutting" Ceremony. Many presentations were made and a delicious free lunch was provided by Tasty to Go.

Tasty to Go, which is located at the corner of Second Avenue and Duarte Road, brought quite a delicious meal which included Fried Rice, Chow Mein, Beef and Broccoli and Orange Chicken. Beverages were provided by Au 79.

Arcadia Chamber of Commerce President Bob Hoffman of Merrill Lynch presented the member plaque to John Sun. Other presenters included Steve Johnson from State Assemblyman Tim Donnelly's office, Hovanes Gasparian from State Assemblyman Anthony Portantino's office, Brenda Daniels representing Supervisor Mike Antonovich, and David Monray on behalf of State Senator Bob Huff.

The Arcadia Chamber of Commerce has great networking meetings on the first Thursday at 8:00 each month. There are always local officials or their representatives who give community members updates on what is happening in our areas. For instance, Supervisor Mike Antonovich was at the first meeting I attended. He addressed the issue of the state's transfer of prisoners to county jails and early release of prisoners. Another Chamber meeting had Secret Service members speak about counterfeit money!

MONROVIA - DUARTE

Sierra Madre-Altadena--Pasadena-Arcadia-

THE MONROVIA CITY MANAGER'S REPORT From Our Desk to Yours

California Green Communities Silver Certification

According to Environmental Media Association President Debbie Levin, Monrovia is a leader among Southern California cities who are modeling sustainable practices for others. The City was presented with the honor of achieving the "Silver" status as a California Green Community, and was one of only four cities to be honored. Monrovia was able to achieve this outstanding status by completing projects in each of 10 resource areas, including solid waste reduction, greenhouse gas reduction, energy and water efficiency, and green building. Congratulations to our Public Works staff, and specifically Heather Maloney and Sharon Gallant, for spearheading this effort. Great job, team!

Economic Development Action Plan... Round Two

City Council got encouraging news that staff has been steadily implementing activities described in the Economic Development Action Plan, which is a blueprint for how the City plans on attracting, retaining and growing businesses in Monrovia. This spring, Staff will continue to focus on economic development by launching a campaign aimed at reducing the vacancy rate in Old Town, creating a Business Visitation Program, and finally, revamping economic development marketing efforts to cross-promote all the services available to businesses when they choose Monrovia. These services range from the project coordination to the Fire Department's Business Emergency Response Training Program to rental facilities available at discounted rates at the Canyon Park Cabin.

So where does the City go from here? Well, the future of economic development will look a little different today than it did a year ago without redevelopment funding. Moving forward, the economic development staff will continue to utilize existing resources and focus our energy on proactive ways to help attract, retain and grow business in Monrovia, through things such as the business visitation program and the business blogs.

Gold Line Deal...at the Eleventh Hour.

The City of Monrovia has been working with the Gold Line Construction Authority (Gold Line) for the past two years on a deal that included the sale of land from the City and Successor Agency to the Monrovia Redevelopment Agency to the Gold Line for the use of a Maintenance and Operation (M&O) Facility. The M&O facility is a critical component of the Foothill Extension Phase 2A project, which is an 11.5 mile extension of the Gold Line that will add six light rail stations in the cities of Arcadia, Monrovia, Duarte, Irwindale, and Azusa. The Gold Line is an independent transportation planning and construction agency created by the State to manage the design and construction of the rail extension.

The Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro) will be the agency that will operate and maintain the light rail after construction. One of Metro's stipulations to the Gold Line was the requirement that a site be secured for an M&O facility in order to commence construction of the rail alignment of Phase 2A. The City of Monrovia, recognizing the importance of regional transportation, was the only city in the San Gabriel Valley willing to work with the Gold Line to accommodate an M&O facility. The site is generally located on the block bounded by Evergreen Avenue, Shamrock Avenue, Duarte Road and California Avenue. Throughout the negotiations with the Gold Line, City staff was explicit that a sale of the site to the Gold Line would only be considered if the purchase price included all costs incurred by the City and Agency, as well as the loss of potential future revenues and the mitigation of environmental

In the midst of signing the negotiated Agreement between both parties, the Monrovia Redevelopment Agency was hit with the ABX1 26 legislation that froze the Agency's activities, and later killed the Redevelopment Agency. In addition, the Agency and the Gold Line were sued by a property owner right next to the proposed M & O facility

To date, all lawsuits have been settled, and we are looking to move forward with the plans for the M&O facility and ultimately the Phase 2A project. Since the Redevelopment Agency was frozen last summer, the Gold Line has progressed with obtaining the land that would be used for the M&O facility through condemnation procedures. To that end, the Courts have requested to settle the purchase and sale of Monrovia's land through a settlement, since both parties have a negotiated agreement at hand.

As part of the previously negotiated agreement, the Gold Line agreed to contribute funds towards necessary public improvements throughout the 80-acre Station Square Transit Village area, and to construct a 350-space parking structure. Staff brought both of these Agreements (the Parking Facility Agreement and the Public Improvements Funding Agreement) to Council Tuesday night. There was a 4-to-1 vote that approved each of the Agreements. These approvals, however, are subject to approval of the Stipulation for Entry of Judgment for ongoing litigation associated with Los Angeles Superior Court Case No. BC 476000.

MONROVIA HONORS SIX BLUE STAR FAMILIES

By Joan Schmidt

Last November, I attended the special Veterans Day ceremonies at Duarte and Monrovia. While at the Monrovia ceremony, I found out about the Blue Star Families. I had never heard about them or their organization. Recently I contacted Kristen from the San Gabriel Valley Chapter of Blue Star Families and she shared the following information with me.

The Blue Star Program is nothing new. The Blue Star Banner was designed and patented in 1917 by United States Army Captain Robert L. Queissner of the Fifth Ohio Infantry, in honor of his two sons who were serving in World War I. It was quickly adopted by the public and government officials.

A Blue Star Flag displayed in the window of a home has become an American tradition. This banner lets others know that a member of the household is proudly serving in the U.S. Armed

On September 24, 1917, an Ohio congressman read into the Congressional record: "The Mayor of Cleveland, the Chamber of Commerce and the Governor of Ohio have adopted this service flag. The world should know of those who give so much for liberty. The dearest thing in all the world to a father and mother: their children."

The Blue Star Families Support Group was created with this in mind. They all have family members who have chosen to fight for our country and freedom. And although there are not enough words to describe their pride, they have many fears and questions. It is their hope, that if they come together, they can give each other strength and understanding, so they can be strong for their family and country.

This group meets the 2nd and 4th Thursdays of the month at the Monrovia Coffee Company, 425 S. Myrtle Ave. at 7pm. All family members of service men and women are welcome. At the special February 21st meeting, the families of Captain Alexander White, United

From American Legion Post #44 were Commander Earle Sweeney and Service Officer Chuck Keene. Chuck reminded everyone of the windstorm and the damage it caused-especially to many of the Blue Star banners honoring Monrovia's military. The City of Monrovia had generously supplied these banners. However funds are being sought to cover the cost of replacing the banners:

'The City of Monrovia has always paid for our banners. (Thank you, Monrovia!) Now it is time that we pitch in and try to help the City pay for the replacements. We'd love to see all our banners back up."

There are TWO ways that we can help. First of all ANY donation would be greatly appreciated. Checks can be made out to the "City of Monrovia" and on the subject line, write "banner replacement". Then either drop off or mail the check to City Hall at 415 South Ivy Ave., Monrovia, CA 91016 Attn: Rachel Hughes.

Another way to help this cause is the Fundraising Breakfast to be held at Immaculate Conception Church on Shamrock in Monrovia on Sunday, March 4, from 9 a.m.-12 noon.

There were two special ladies representing Blue Star Families, Joy Smith and Isabella Aragon. Isabella recently received a special Certificate in recognition for her support of her son's troop in Iraq. Isabella was very happy to say the troop is now back in the states.

Our service men and women make great sacrifices for us. Let's show our gratitude by making a donation or attending the breakfast at Immaculate Conception, so ALL the banners can be replaced!

The issue is that two current board members have spent more than $40,000 over that amount during the last five years. The two members are Ken Bell and Reyna Diaz. Ken Bell and Reyna Diaz are two fine community members who have done much for Duarte over the years. Reyna is a personal friend she would give you the shirt off her back. She helped form the Monrovia-Arcadia-Duarte Town Council and helped the Hispanic community in southern Duarte so much. She has done so many fundraisers over the years to send money to areas hit by natural disasters. She and her husband would bring mismanagement of school funding. The toys and clothes to Mexico and El Salvador every year during Christmas.

> When questioned about spending more than the teachers on health insurance, both Reyna and Ken said they did not realize this was happening.

> I believe them because no one can be the person that Reyna is and do something that would hurt other people. She started the "Our Lady of Guadalupe" celebration at Annunciation many years ago, because so many Hispanics live in this area. And she got Bishop Zavala to officiate at the special Mass.

FREE MULCH

Available through February!

Recent windstorms generated lots of mulch from downed trees and limbs. Help us to keep this material out of landfills by using the mulch locally. Mulch is great for landscaping planter areas and around trees. Here are just a few benefits of mulch:

- Mulch inhibits weed germination & growth
- Holds in soil moisture
- Protects plants from drying out
- Moderates soil temperature fluctuation Keeps plant roots cooler in Summer
- Prevents raindrops splashing soil onto plants; stops soil erosion
- Improves soil structure
- Protects tree trunks from lawn equipment damage
- Prevents soil compaction
- Improves root structure

School Board brought out a record number of attendees-more than fifty teachers and fifty residents, many of whom were angry

During the last school board election campaigns, there was mention people who were seeking answers were labeled as "trouble makers" and when a meeting was called to address these issues, the incumbents who were running for office were "no-shows". (I attended that meeting and only David Hall, Tom Reyes and Dolores Ortiz attended)

The election happened and Tom Reyes was elected. Tom made a promise during his campaign, and he felt that these issues needed to be resolved. The teachers are angry because their health coverage package is $6,000 per year, has not been increased in years and is approximately $2,000 less than

2008 Attempt Murder Case Follow-up - Suspect Jimmy Santana Convicted

In February of 2008, a male subject/victim was riding his bicycle in the 2500 block of South Peck Road. He was approached by a suspect with a gun who walked up to him and shot him. The suspect, Jimmy Santana, is a known gang member. The incident was found to be gang related; however, the victim is not a gang member. This incident occurred in the county area of Monrovia and was investigated by Los Angeles Sheriff's Department Homicide Bureau detectives. Monrovia Police Department detectives and officers played a major part in the conviction of this suspect in testimony regarding gang affiliation.

In February of 2012, the suspect in this case, Jimmy Santana, was convicted of willful, deliberate and premeditated murder; the jury also found he personally and intentionally discharged a firearm, causing great bodily injury to the victim. Santana was also convicted of shooting from a motor vehicle and assault with a firearm. The jury found the gang allegation true as to all counts. Sentencing is set for March 15, 2012.

SUCCESS

I do not think that I have ever been more nervous in my entire life. For days I was anticipating this interview, looking up questions, how to dress, act, etc. but I still felt I wasn't prepared enough. For the one block I was at school, the clock seemed to stop and time dragged on. I was to be at USC by 2 for my interview with Lt. Matt Stewart of the Air Force, even though it was scheduled for 2:15. I left school at 9:50 so I had time to take deep breathes and change into appropriate attire. Everyone told me to relax, that it was going to be okay, but I don't think they understand how much I have riding on the outcome of that interview. If I am granted a scholarship with Air Force ROTC, all my colleges will remain an option, but if I don't, my college option pool shrinks drastically.

The drive to USC wasn't bad at all, and I arrived to the USC campus at 1:15, but parking was a nightmare. As I walked up the Physical Education building steps at 2, home of USC's ROTC, I was so glad I had left home at 12:30, especially because it took me about five minutes to find the AFROTC office. As I entered, my nerves seemed to melt away, and once Lt. Stewart took me into his office for the interview, I was ready. Talking was easy, and although I could have been more coherent in some of my explanations, he said I interviewed very well. He even introduced me to his Captain before I left, something I don't know how to feel about.

As I left campus my outlook on my future brightened and I couldn't help but feel confident in my success. In three weeks I will know, all I have to do now, is wait, and think, "Air power!".

Memoryhouse

Review by: Sean Kayden

After an EP record and a few singles, the attractive duo behind Memoryhouse finally releases their debut LP, "The Slideshow Effect". Does it live up to expectations for a band with such a dreamy sound that you're often put into another world of utter bliss? In a

Memoryhouse The Slideshow Effect Artist: Album: Sub Pop Label: Release Date: February 28, 2012

nutshell, yes, it lives up to most expectations, but I firmly believe Memoryhouse could have benefited slightly more by not releasing two old tracks on this record, which ends up having the album only consisting of eight brand new tunes. If it holds any merit, they did slightly tweak the two previously released songs, "Heirloom" and "Bonfire". "The Slideshow Effect" is a very intimate record that is delicate, but rather celestial in nature. The vocals of Denise Nouvion are a thing of incomparable beauty. Her singing is heightened by the magnificent background work of composer, Even Abeele. The two together are a match made in heaven, much like how the album sounds, heavenly-like.

A zestful vibe embodies the entire record. Deeply romantic and intoxicating stunning, Memoryhouse's sound has never sound so gracefully refined. I would think that's mostly contributed to being signed by Seattle's well-known indie label, Sub-Pop. However, despite the slick production values, the record isn't overproduced and still carries a tone that could have been created in the artist's bedroom. "The Kids Were Wrong", undoubtedly the most upbeat track off the record is an absolute gem. Idyllic vocals, passionate lyrics, and an infectious guitar riff over a subtle synth pad gives the song not only heart, but a soul. The standout track, "Walk With Me" is starkly blissful and exquisite. There's rarely anything to complain about with each consecutive song off the record. Each track is a story in its over right where postalgia, remembering the better times and yearning for comething out story in its own right where nostalgia, remembering the better times, and yearning for something out of reach play vital roles. Keep in mind you won't be blasting this record while driving, but listening to it when you're at total ease. As an upfront warning, you may become vulnerable when listening since these songs are reflective and wistful.

I'm well aware sometimes it may difficult to completely enjoy a record with a solemn sound such as "The Sideshow Effect". These are songs that'll have your mind traveling to different places, familiar and foreign. Most mainstream and commercial bands these days don't produce the same effect. The music from Memoryhouse is the kind you can revisit anytime because there will be always room for it in your life and heart. It has such an everlasting and timeless sound. It's a new world out their people, so the time has come to embrace emerging artists such as Memoryhouse. Do yourself a big favor and discover the undiscovered. I hope success is imminent for this band because they deserve every bit of it.

- Rep. Bob Morris (R), Indiana State Legislature

I left a number of blanks in the above quote, to was referring to.

I considered different topics for this week's column. There's that issue, foremost in voters' minds, of whether President Obama is really a Christian. In Ohio, Rick Santorum described the president's agenda as based on "some phony theology, not a theology based on the Bible."

The Rev. Franklin Graham, asked if he could rule out the president being a Muslim, replied, "I can't say categorically because Islam has gotten a free pass under Obama." According to Islamic law, he asserted, "Islam sees him as a son of Islam".

the president this morning for about 45 minutes, and amazingly he didn't bring this up.")

Another topic is the ongoing battle for the White House, with the field narrowed down to Paulson, Adelson and Friess. (Hedge fund manager John Paulson, worth $16 billion, behind the "Restore our Future" Super-PAC backing Mitt Romney, made $3.5 billion betting against the housing market in 2007. Casino tycoon Sheldon Adelson, worth $21.5 billion, behind the "Winning Our Future" Super-PAC backing Newt Gingrich, is under federal investigation for bribing foreign officials and involvement with organized crime says although perpetrators constitute a small in China. Wall Street investor and supporter of Islamophobia Foster Friess, worth $530 million, behind the "Red, White and Blue" Super-PAC backing Rick Santorum, made news by recalling Bayer aspirin as an effective contraceptive when "the gals put it between their knees".)

I had to return to a topic addressed last week, though, when I found the above comments of Rep. Morris, contained in a letter explaining his refusal to sign a resolution passed by the Indiana a probe in a "transvaginal procedure" to obtain Legislature acknowledging the 100th anniversary of the Girl Scouts of America.

In an astonishing development, we see a national debate targeting not a race, religion, ideology, economic class or sexual orientation, but an entire gender.

This became apparent at a hearing called by House Oversight Chairman Darrell Issa (R-CA), to address contraception coverage in employees' health plans. The hearing was notable not for who was present to give testimony, but for who

The panel of witnesses was not comprised of health and medical professionals, but of clergy. Testimony was not offered as to medical need, but on religious tenets. Rep. Elijah Cummings (D-MD) noted that the witness list was further limited by excluding representatives from the many Catholic organizations supporting the administration's proposal.

The key question was asked by Rep. Carolyn Maloney (D-NY): "What I want to know is, where are the women? I look at this panel and I don't see one single individual representing the tens of millions of women across the country who want and need insurance coverage for basic preventive health care services, including family planning. Where are the women?"

Rep. Maloney decried efforts "in dozens of see if you can guess the organization Rep. Morris states to roll back the fundamental rights of women to a time when the government thought what happened in the bedroom was their business and contraceptives were illegal. Tens of millions of us who are following these hearings lived through those times - and I can tell you with certainty - we will not be forced back to that dark and primitive era."

She addressed the clergy: "... though you have every right to follow your conscience and honor all the dictates of your faith - no one should have the power to impose their faith on others - to bend them to your will - simply because (Asked about Rev. Graham's comments, Obama they work for you. That in itself - is an assault spokesman Jay Carney replied, "I did meet with on the fundamental freedoms enshrined in our Constitution."

Responding to a Defense Department report on an increase of violent sexual assaults on women in the military, Fox News commentator Liz Trotta remarked, "Now, what did they expect? These people are in close contact." She went on to dismiss the issue as the product of "pressure from the feminists".

Former Marine Corps officer Anu Bhagwati of the Service Women's Action Network responded by pointing out it's a matter of "power and violence, not about women's presence". She minority, the problem is that they have successful careers with no repercussions, that victims fear almost certain retaliation if they report abuse. As for Trotta's comments, they are "grossly ignorant".

Virginia Governor Bob McDonnell (R) has gone on record opposing TSA pat-downs at airports as too invasive. He's also recorded his support for a measure passed by Virginia's Republican legislature calling for the insertion of an ultrasound image. This is not at the patient's request, nor at the recommendation of her physician, but imposed by the state upon women who seek an abortion.

I also noted a story last week covered here in the MVN; A Pasadena resident was arrested on suspicion of domestic violence towards his girlfriend. Regardless of family ties and affection, his father condemned the son's actions and expressed concern for the girlfriend. At least one individual in the news seems to have it right when it comes to gender issues - and it's Hugh Hefner.

DOUBLE STANDARD FOR RICK SANTORUM

Any Republican candidate who rises in the polls and starts to challenge the presumptive nominee, Mitt Romney, gets a place squarely in Mitt's crosshairs. That's the nature of political contests, and ultimately will make and bedrock principle of every major culture the actual nominee that much stronger and religion in history. Pro-marriage is not a candidate. But what should bother us is anti-gay!! How odd and down right deceitful the double standard the press employs as it it is to call those who want to defend the targets conservative candidates if they rise above a certain base line level of electability.

This time it's Rick Santorum's turn. Not too long ago, candidate Obama declared unequivocally that marriage is between a man and a woman. This assertion and largely ignored by the press. It was a nona bad flea infestation would have been a bigger story.

was ignored and Santorum crucified. The reason is that the mainstream press knows a cultural piety in order to placate the great what's affectionately referred to as "fly-over country" - in other words, those voters with good old-fashioned traditional Mid-western values.

I can't think of a more obvious and significant double standard in public life or of a more obvious example of the condescension with which the mainstream press regards the average American. Consider a few inconvenient facts on this issue.

According to the most recent CBS News/ New York Times poll, taken this month, 60% of Americans oppose gay marriage. That leaves only 40% approving it. This isn't an extremist position. To date, voters in 31 states, including deep blue California, have rejected same-sex marriage. The media elites would have us believe that 60% of the population are homophobic, hateful, backward and extremists - unworthy of public office probably of the right to vote.

It's a ridiculous claim. One can support the rights of any two people to associate with one another, live with one another or engage in consensual relations while at the

On the broader scale, the mainstream elites are opposed to anyone who supports normative, Judeo-Christian social and promise to defend traditional marriage was moral values. Hence when an artist puts an image of Christ in a jar of urine, it's called issue, a complete non-starter. A dog getting artistic expression. When a Westerner dares draw a cartoon about Mohammed, it's called hate-speech and offered as evidence of the intolerance of Western Christians. > Returning to Obama Vs. Santorum, the President used the annual prayer breakfast to state that Luke's Gospel mandated raising taxes on the rich. Rick Santorum had the poor taste to point out the theological stupidity of that statement, and he's called extreme, intemperate and hateful. Go figure.

LEAP YEAR IS UPON US AND ACCORDING TO 800 YEAR OLD LORE DATING BACK TO ST. PATRICK THE TIME IS RIPE FOR ANYONE HOPING FOR MORE LOVE OR MONEY.

To all the dreamers out there, get ready because your day fast approaches Get some rest, dust off your plans and start talking up your new idea. The cosmos are on your side, and in this instance, it only happens once every

After a Great Recession that has dragged on for almost four years the desire to finally hope for more and grow our lives a little probably includes just about all of us..

The one day stuck on the end of the month, February 29th, which makes this a leap year, is also thought to be particularly good for making money and finding love. Children who are born on this day are also thought to have a shot at a more abundant life. It's all good.

The practice of a leap day started as more of a simple solution to an accounting error that was finally noticed in 1582. Ironically it was the 13th pope, Pope Gregory XIII who mandated the new calendar because the old Julian calendar had strayed by ten days over the years.

Every four years the Gregorian calendar self-corrects with an extra day stuck on the end of February, the shortest month as a means to keep us on the straight and narrow. It doesn't sound like much but eventually the growing season would have been stuck in November on Black Friday, which could throw off shoppers.

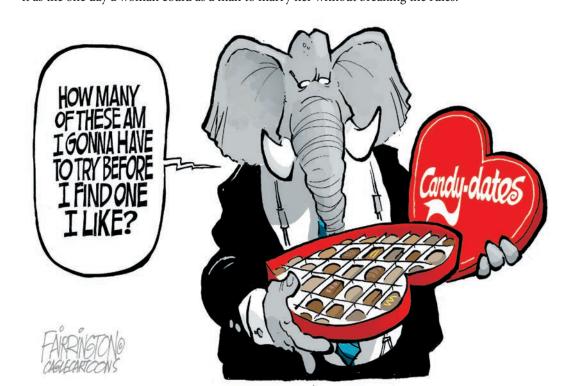

There's a certain order to things. Tomato and squash seedlings in May and bargains on electronics in Besides, there's already very little that's predictable to just being human and having the seasons stick to the months they were originally assigned is a little comforting. Spring will come again in May and the first leaves will start to drop somewhere in October, at least here in Chicago. My mother takes a little bit of pleasure in pointing out that she's blissfully unaware of that in Florida.

True to our nature, however, no one would listen to Pope Gregory, and it wasn't until the 18th century that most of Europe agreed to finally fix the calendar. That's another truly human characteristic. We don't care to change until the error personally affects us and we're uncomfortable enough. It's not very often that we're inspired en masse to set out and mix things up just because we're hoping for something better. First we have to hate where we are just enough to risk the familiar.

It's also a part of human nature to look for signs. No matter how much we pooh pooh the whole notion, we all still do it.

For once, though someone wanted to attach something good to this odd little bonus day and the two biggest motivators, love and money got a nod. The straight-laced Victorians who were big on social conventions and following the rules saw that this day was already outside of the norm and designated it as the one day a woman could as a man to marry her without breaking the rules.

DOES RICK SANTORUM HAVE WHAT IT TAKES?

Rick Santorum is the former two-term Republican senator from Pennsylvania. He was first elected to Congress in 1990, and was elected to the Senate in 1994, at the age of 36. Rick ascended top GOP leadership during his time in the Senate, and distinguished himself as a staunch social conservative. Rick's meteoric rise ended in 2006, however, when he lost reelection. Since then he has made ends meet practicing law, and serving as a senior fellow at the conservative Ethics and Public Policy Center.

Now Rick wants to be the next President of the United States. Here's where he stands on the Jobs: Rick's jobs plan rests on lowering tax rates, cuts to government spending, repealing the Dodd-Frank and Sarbanes-Oxley regulatory reform laws, and allowing increased domestic energy production.

Balanced Budget: Rick has said that the size of the federal government should match 18 percent of gross domestic product. He would seek changes by way of a Balanced Budget Amendment.

Entitlement Programs: Rick suggested at a September debate that he would prefer to see Medicare administered privately. Proposed partial privatization of Social Security and raised retirement age during congressional career.

Foreign Policy: Considered a "hawk," Rick had urged President Obama to act more decisively in Libya, and was a strong supporter of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, although he never served in the military himself.

Energy/Environment: Rick favors an energy policy using oil, natural gas, coal, and nuclear energy. He opposes new regulations on natural gas, and would allow drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Same-sex Marriage: Rick is a vocal opponent of same-sex marriage, and would seek a Constitutional amendment banning such marriages.

Taxes: Rick would halve the corporate tax rate, and reform the individual tax code. He would permanently extend current rates on dividends and capital gains, and end the estate tax. He would tax repatriation of companies' foreign earnings at a rate of 5 percent.

Regulations: Rick says he would freeze all Obama regulations and reverse any antibusiness executive order. He says he would tell the businesses around the world that "America is open for business and you have a president who wants vou here."

Health Care Reform: Rick has pledged to repeal President Obama's health care law, and would seek to do so using the budget reconciliation

Immigration: Rick opposes in-state college tuition for the children of illegal immigrants, and favors making English the official language of the U.S., along with building a fence along the border between the U.S. and Mexico.

Abortion: Rick opposes abortion rights even in the case of rape. He also opposes government support of family planning and contraception.

Climate Change: Rick has called the notion of climate change "junk science."

Rick's positions are clearly not mainstream, even for conservative Republicans. Moreover, his long, colorful history of making bizarre, inflammatory and just plain ridiculous statements about all sorts of important issues should give any voter pause for concern.

"The reason Social Security is in big trouble is we don't have enough workers to support the retirees. A third of all the young people in America are not in America today because of abortion, because one in three pregnancies end in abortion."

On Social Security, 3/29/11

"I find it almost remarkable for a black man to say 'now we are going to decide who are people and who are not people'."

On President Obama's race and prochoice beliefs, 1/19/2011

'I think it's harmful to our society to have a society that says that sex outside of marriage is something that should be encouraged or tolerated, particularly among the young. I think it has, as we've seen, very harmful long-term consequences for society. So birth control to me enables that and I don't think it's a healthy thing for our country."

MY LEAP YEAR QUANDARY: ANY-BODY HAVE A DAY TO SPARE?

During the last political election cycle, we were promised change but I have not seen any of it, especially in my pants pocket.

Then something wonderful happened. I was taking some mail to the post office and as I got out of my truck, I noticed a penny on the ground. At my age, if I have to bend down I make sure there are at least two or three things to do while I am down there. A single penny just will not do it for me. After all, what can you do with a penny?

As I looked at that penny, I saw another penny, then another, then several. By the time I was done, there was a pile of 20 pennies there. Now that is something to bend down for.

I know what they say, "a penny for your thoughts." Here was 20 pennies and I did not have to think too much about bending down and collecting all 20 and put into my pants pocket. Nothing is quite as melodious as change jingling in my pants pocket. I walked into the post office with my pocket jingling with some spare change.

Some may complain that 20 pennies does not really amount to very much. I remember what wise old Benjamin Franklin said, "A penny saved is a penny earned." I am not sure what he would say about a penny rescued or even 20 pennies rescued, but I think he would have had something very witty to

The Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage would say to me something to the effect that 20 pennies cannot buy a good lunch. Who needs a good lunch when you got 20 pennies jingling in your pants pocket? The better part of wisdom on my part would be to allow these 20 spare pennies be my little secret.

A few days after finding this penny cache, my wife made a comment that changed my week. "What are you going to do with the extra day this year?"

I had no idea what she was talking about. Normally, I have no extra days to spare. Even if I happen to catch up on my chores on one day, there are always the next day's chores staring me in the face.

I was not a Beatle's fan but I did understand their one song that talked about "eight days a week." I have often thought I might be able to get caught up if there was an extra day in the week. Then, on scrutiny of the facts at hand, my good wife would find something for me to do on that eighth day.

Getting back to her "extra day" question. I had no idea what she was talking about and so I responded with a very sophisticated, "huh?"

"What are you going to do with the extra day we have this year?"

I searched the cobwebs of my memory and could not find anything resembling her comment. She saw the quizzical look on my face, more quizzical than normal, and realized I had no idea what she was talking about.

"Don't you know we have an extra day this year?"

I did not know that so I pled with her to explain what she was talking about. I was thinking she was going to give me a day off so I could do nothing, then on second thought I do not believe she would do something like that. Not her!

"This is leap year and the month of February has 29 days instead of the normal 28."

I thought for a moment and understood what she was talking about. I had forgotten this was leap year, which gives us an extra day. Instead of 365 days this year, we will enjoy 366 days. I am not quite sure who arranged this phenomenon but the extra day is tacked on to the end of February.

I have often thought it would be great to be born on February 29. That way you only celebrate your birthday every four years. Instead of being 60 years old, I would be 15.

Then a very terrible thought rumbled through my mind. I remembered what it was like to be 15. No way in the world would I ever want to be 15 again. Imagine taking 60 years to get to 15 and then staying there for four years. Talk about dragging out your misery?

My wife gave me, as usual, some fodder for my thinking. What would I do with an extra day?

The more I thought about this the more things I thought I could do on that extra day. By the time I got through thinking about all the things I could do with an extra day I was exhausted and needed to sit down for a cup of coffee. In order for me to satisfy all my proposed projects, I would need at least one extra day a month, and I would not complain about one extra day a week.

I really do not think having an extra day is going to make much difference for me. The Bible says,

"This is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it" (Psalms 118:24 KJV). Someone said, today is the first day of the rest of my life. And so it is. Enjoy the day you have, is my philosophy of life.

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE WITH NO DIRECTION HOME

This morning I had a conversation with a client that really started me thinking about the future of our society. The facts of the case are not important here: what is interesting is the view of this young man's life that I received as we talked about his case. One of the great benefits of my work as a defense attorney appointed by the County to represent indigent people is that I have the opportunity to speak with people who inhabit very different life spaces from the rather privileged place I live in. You probably live there too, here in friendly, safe, a little removed Sierra Madre. Yes we have our fires, floods, windstorms, evacuations, and loss of electricity but I feel pretty fortunate to have lived here for over thirty years and really have no great desire to go anywhere else.

This is not the life lived by my client. He grew up in the barrio and was raised by a single mother of three. His teenage gang involvement was very typical - I have heard the same story many times - but there was something about this conversation that really reached me. For almost fifteen years this young man has worked as a carpenter. The company he works for encourages him to recruit young men from the barrio who are looking for the opportunity to change their lives and, allegedly, that was what he was doing when the arrest occurred. Listening to the young man I really got the sense of how hard it is to pull yourself up by your own bootstraps and how important it is to have the feeling that there is someone you can always count on.

Like most of my friends and colleagues I grew up in a twoparent family. In my day, many mothers were not required to work out of the home and most of us were pretty closely supervised as kids. Sure, there might have been problems resulting from being too sheltered or too indulged. In fact, a friend of mine sent me a study that found evidence showing that no matter what parents do, they will ruin their kids in one way or another. Still most of us felt that we were cared about. This was not the experience of my client.

As I left the Courthouse, I heard a statistic on the radio that reminded me of what my client had said. According to NPR, over half of the women under thirty who have kids are unmarried. Thinking about it, I realized that in my lifetime there have been great changes. The instability that formerly was characteristic of the ghettos and barrios has now become typical of the rest of society. I have lived here, in the same house, in the canyon for over thirty years and during that time I have seen the marriages of almost every person in town break-up. Really, how important is this? Certainly, being married does not guarantee happiness. I bet you knew that already. Well, I venture a guess that in every broken marriage the kids somehow think that it is their fault and yearn for their parents to get together. Furthermore, I think that most break-ups involve a bunch of lying to the kids. Maybe the kids learn they can never trust anybody, or maybe they can accept it they way they learn there is no Santa Claus. As I think about it, the sadder I get for my own kids and everybody else's kids. Maybe it is better to just play video games and tweet to your friends. Maybe there is some stability there, but I really don't think so.

All right, I reach the same point again. Divorce is bad just like war is bad and poverty is bad and so is dependence on foreign oil I guess. So what is to be done? What once was a problem mainly for the lower class is now a problem for all classes. Perhaps the whole society has become classless - often it really seems that way. Maybe I should just learn to adjust and to understand that the paradigm has shifted and that mommies and daddies don't have to stay together for a lifetime. Really, we can't go home again. Everything is different and I have learned that wisdom does not automatically come with age.

I like to imagine that somewhere we can get some help learning to adjust to the changes in life. I heard once on Prairie Home Companion that in Minnesota, students are provided with Storm Families, where they can go when they cannot reach Home. Maybe this was a joke, but I like the idea. Perhaps each of us can become parent committed to the person and that commitment would be life-long and unchanging. Is that too far-fetched? Maybe it should become a part of some candidate's platform along with plans for a moon colony?

The Rat Pack and Humphrey Bogart

Who gave the Rat Pack its name? I'll tell you in a minute. There actually were two Rat Packs. The 1950s Rat Pack centered around Humphrey Bogart and was referred to as the Holmby Hills Rat Pack (where the Bogarts lived). The first Rat Pack included among others: Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Judy Garland, David Niven, Katharine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy, Cary Grant, and Rex Harrison. Associate members included Errol Flynn, Nat King Cole, Mickey Rooney and Cesar Romero.

The 1960s Rat Pack included Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr., Joey Bishop and Peter Lawford. These guys never referred to themselves as The Rat Pack. They called themselves 'The Summit', or 'the Clan'. You never knew when or where this group would meet up. Over a seven-year period beginning around 1960, whenever one of the group had a performance, the rest of the Pack might show up for an impromptu show. In fact, the Marquee of the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas would read, "DEAN MARTIN - MAYBE FRANK MAYBE SAMMY". The Rat Pack Mascots included Marilyn Monroe, Angie Dickinson, Juliet Prowse and Shirley MacLaine. I guess I should list members of the 2001 "Rat Pack" actors who remade the film "Ocean's Eleven". That would include Brad Pitt, George Clooney, Matt Damon, Andy Garcia, Julia Roberts, Don Cheadle and Bernie Mac. Clooney wisely said at the time, "we're not as cool as those other guys."

Who gave the Rat Pack its name? Humphrey Bogart's wife, Lauren Bacall, gave the name to Bogie and his friends after seeing them return from a night in Las Vegas.

When asked how he got the nickname "Chairman of the Board" Frank Sinatra responded. 'I'm trying to figure it out, chairman of what board? People come up to me and seriously say, "Well, what are you chairman of?" And I can't answer them.

Speaking of Humphrey Bogart, permit me to share a few of the famous quotes from the film, Casablanca:

Illsa (Ingrid Bergman): 'Play it, Sam. Play "As Time Goes

Rick (Bogart): 'Of all the gin joints in all the towns in all the world, she walks into mine.'

Illsa: 'Kiss me. Kiss me as if it were the last time.'

Captain Renault (Claude Rains): 'Realising the importance of the case, my men are rounding up twice the usual number of suspects.

Captain Renault: 'I'm shocked, shocked to find out that gambling is going on here!' (Then, after he is handed his winnings) 'Oh, thank you very much.'

Rick: 'We'll always have Paris.'

Rick: 'Here's looking at you kid.'

Rick: '...it doesn't take much to see that the problems of three little people don't amount to a hill of beans in this crazy

Rick: 'Louis (Renault), I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship?

February 22, 2012

Dear Editor,

Recently Fountain Square Development commissioned a national polling group to conduct a random survey of Sierra Madre households. On behalf of the proposed Kensington Assisted Living project we would like to thank those people who were kind enough to spend some of their valuable time providing responses.

As you may be aware, we recently asked the City Council to allow our project to be placed on the ballot in November, subject to the review by Planning Commission and approval by City Council. We are prepared to make a large investment in Sierra Madre and it is important for us to understand what the citizens of Sierra Madre want developed on the old nursing home site across from City Hall and whether the citizens felt our project was a good addition to the community. We did this by asking the public, in a scientific and even-handed manner, what they think about The Kensington.

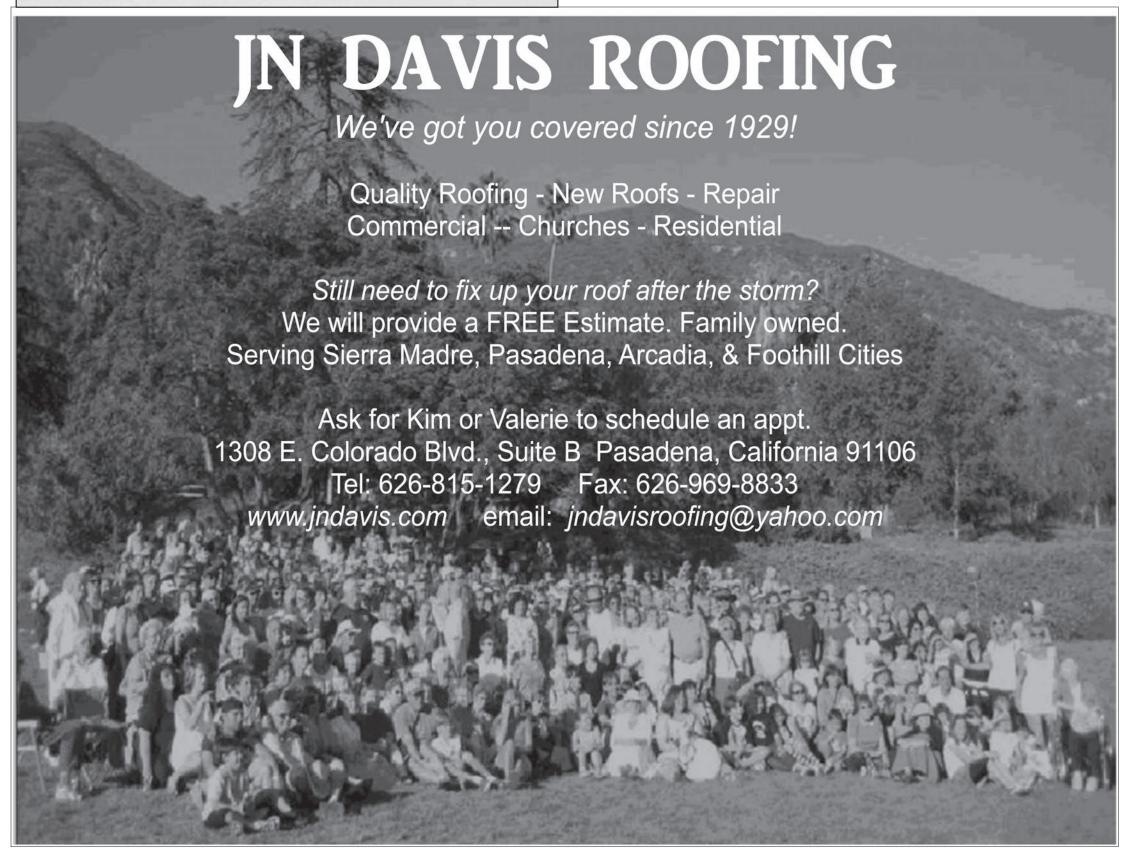

We were pleased with the results and we look forward to continuing to demonstrate our desire to be a thoughtful, honest, open, and hardworking citizen of Sierra Madre. Thank you again for your help.

Sincerely,

The Kensington Assisted Living

ROCKET LAUNCHED INTO NORTHERN LIGHTS TO STUDY GPS FFFF ) with Bob Eklund

As the brilliant colors of the aurora borealis, or northern lights, delight skygazers, researchers are discovering how they affect GPS satellite signals here on Earth.

A NASA-funded collaborative research team led by Steven Powell, Cornell University senior engineer in electrical and computer engineering, launched a sounding rocket from Alaska's Poker Flat Research Range on Saturday, Feb. 18, to collect data straight from the heart of the aurora.

The project - the Magnetosphere-Ionosphere Coupling in the Alfvén resonator (MICA) mission - involves 60 scientists, engineers, technicians, and graduate students from several institutions and NASA. Researchers from Dartmouth College, the University of New Hampshire, the University of Oslo (Norway), Southwest Research Institute, and the University of Alaska Fairbanks also are making significant contributions

'We're investigating what's called space weather," said Powell, who has been stationed at the rocket launch site, 30 miles north of Fairbanks, since the end of January. "Space weather is caused by the charged particles that come from the Sun and interact with the Earth's magnetic field. We don't directly feel those effects as humans, but our electronic systems do."

These include global positioning systems (GPS). One of the scientists' main goals is to investigate the effects of space weather on GPS satellites.

The rocket is a 46-foot Terrier-Black Brant model that was sent arcing through the aurora 217 miles above Earth, sending a stream of real-time data back before landing 200 miles downrange. Instruments on board sampled electrons in the upper atmosphere that are affected by a form of electromagnetic energy called Alfvén waves. These waves are thought to be a key driver of "discrete" aurora - the typical, well defined and famously shimmering lights that stretch across the horizon.

The rocket payload separated into two parts once launched. One extended antennas to measure electric fields generated by the aurora. Other antennas and sensors measured electrons and ions interacting with the Earth's magnetic field. In this period of high Sun activity, called solar maximum, gases from the Sun are likely interfering with GPS transmissions, satellite Internet and other signals.

'We are becoming more dependent on these signals," Powell said. "This will help us better understand how satellite signals get degraded by space weather and how we can mitigate those effects in new and improved GPS receivers."

The precision measurements from the rocket's instruments will also shed new light on the physical processes that create the northern lights and further our understanding of the complex Sun-Earth connection.

According to Marc Lessard, an associate professor at the University of New Hampshire Institute for the Study of Earth, Oceans, and Space (EOS) and Department of Physics, the "Alfvén resonator" is a structure in the ionosphere that acts like a guitar string when "plucked" by energy delivered by the solar wind to Earth's magnetosphere high above. "The ionosphere, some 62 miles up, is one end of the guitar string and there's another structure over a thousand miles up in space that is the other end of the string," Lessard said. "When it gets plucked by incoming energy we can get a fundamental frequency and other 'harmonics' along the background magnetic field sitting above the ionosphere."

As for the significance of continued investigation into auroral processes, Lessard noted, "It's all about understanding how the energy of the solar wind gets coupled to Earth's magnetic field and eventually gets dumped into the our upper atmosphere."

but there is a very real chance that the FBI will be shutting down the Internet for possibly millions of users whose computers are infected with the one of the many variants of the DNSChanger virus. This particular brand of malware works by replacing the DNS (Domain Name System) server entries with fake values that direct a victim's computer and internet searches to malicious servers operated by the same bad guys who deployed the virus in the first place. As a result, visitors are unknowingly redirected to websites that distribute fraudulent software or display ads that puts money into the bad guys' pockets through a pay-per-click arrangement.

One particularly nasty feature of the virus is that it alters the victim's system in such a way that the computer is unable to

I don't know if you've already heard, download and install security updates and an already infected machine will disable already installed security software. The FBI took steps to contain the damage caused by this outbreak by replacing the rogue servers with legitimate ones.

> The plan is to leave these servers in place for 120 days and those 120 days are scheduled to expire on March 8th of this year. So the real problem isn't so much that the FBI stopgap measure will be expiring in a few days and this action may affect potentially thousands of users, but that many people and organizations haven't removed the malware from their computers. As many as half of Fortune 500 companies and government agencies are delinquent in updating according to some reports.

So how do you know if your computer or router is infected with DNSChanger? One way is to have a security/malware scan done on your machine by your computer professional or other service provider. Most reputable anti-virus \ antimalware software packages have updated security definitions that detect and remove the infection. You can also contact the DNSChanger Working Group at http:// www.dcwg.org for a list of additional resources in removing the infection from an infected machine.

Since this particular malware affects the way computers find resources on networks and the internet it is an equal-opportunity threat and infects Mac OS, Linux and Windows systems equally. This is one particular instance where all internetconnected machines should be checked for infection.

NED & PRINCE

My dear Auntie Evelyn turned 97 years old this past November, and believe me when I say that you would never know it if I hadn't told you. She is remarkably healthy for her age, she has a "steel-trap" mind that is as sharp as a tack and she still lives on her own! Evelyn Swallow-Leake was born in 1913 in Worcester, Massachusetts. She spent her years as a teen-ager growing up during the Great Depression, which as we all know was a rather difficult time in history. On the other hand, it was a time that seems purely ethereal to me, at least, from the way my Aunt Evelyn describes it. She really enjoys sharing her childhood memories, and I truly enjoy hearing them. I try to write most of what she shares with me down in my journal, and I treasure many of her memories as if they were my own.

In one of my recent conversations with Aunt Evelyn, she recounted a very vivid memory of the many times she accompanied her Uncle Carl Woods (my great uncle) on a horse-drawn carriage, during his lumber deliveries from one area of town to another. Evelyn, who was about 12 years old at the time, would wait by the road side after school had let out, knowing that was when Uncle Carl was expected to pass by with two horses towing a load. She would ride along with him during the latter part of the day, until it was time to take the horses back to the barn.

Even as a young child, Aunt Evelyn was an avid animal lover who was fortunate enough to have had pets of her own. Her face lights up every time she reflects on her memory of showing her appreciation and affection to the two work horses that pulled the lumber truck Uncle Carl drove. She delights in remembering the fact that she made sure each horse got a carrot and a friendly pat on the nose before she was hoisted up and assumed her position in the seat next to Carl, then off they would go. Among the many specific details that my aunt remembers about this experience, most amazing to me is the fact that she recalled the name of the company that Uncle Carl worked for at the time. It was "Stone & Berg Lumber Company" of Worcester, MA. Even more amazing is the fact that Auntie remembered the names of the two horses that pulled the loaded lumber cart. Their names were "Ned" & "Prince".

The day after Aunt Evelyn shared this fascinating story with me, I decided to do a little research on Stone & Berg Lumber Co., just to see if there was any history available on the internet that I could connect to Auntie's childhood memory. Well, I am happy to say that my Google search rendered way more than I had expected to find. First of all, I was so surprised to discover that Stone & Berg Company is still in business! I called the phone number provided on the website, and I was directed to the current owner of the company, Jennie Berg. Jennie was very cordial and kind, taking the time to listen to my story of how my Aunt Evelyn had vivid memories of having been on several Stone & Berg lumber delivery excursions back in the mid 1920's. Needless to say, Jennie was as please as I was with the fact that Auntie had such clear memories about the early days of the Berg family's business, including such specific details as the names of the horses that pulled the cart and delivered the lumber. Jennie confirmed that Evelyn's memories were perfectly consistent with the history of their company, and amazingly accurate down to the last detail. She was pleased to know that my Auntie was able to remember and share her story of having been there when the Berg family business was in the hands of her grandfather, so many years ago!

Soon after we talked on the phone, Jennie was thoughtful enough to send me a package of Stone & Berg Lumber Company memorabilia items, most important of which was a photograph of the two horses Auntie remembered, Ned and Prince, hitched and harnessed to a fully loaded lumber cart parked in front of the Stone & Berg building with a gentleman standing beside. I forwarded the photograph to my Auntie Evelyn as part of her Christmas package this year, and after comparing the face of the man in the Stone & Berg picture to a family photo taken around the same time, we all agreed that the man standing next to the hitched horses is indeed my great Uncle Carl! I can't begin to describe how happy it made me to be able to bring my Auntie's story to life and "full circle"! All it took was a listening ear, a little research and a bit of random kindness from someone I have never even met face to face. As you can well imagine, my Aunt Evelyn and Jennie Berg were also very pleased to have found a bit of their own family history in a place and time where we might have least expected it!

Big Kiss

If you haven't already seen "The Artist," I highly recommend it! Sometimes I just like to plug great films, such as "Forks over Knives" and "The Last Man on Earth," although both for very different reasons. "The Artist" is everything the name implies. It's a black and white, (mostly) silent film produced in France, shot in L.A., starring a Frenchman and an Argentinean. And John Goodman's in it, too! The plot borrows heavily from the 1950's "Singing in the Rain," a love story set at the juncture of silent and "talkie" films. However, director Michel Hazanavicius's does not diminish his film in the

To concisely define its appeal, I would say "The Artist" achieves its charm, poignancy, humor, and romance by mastery of suggestion. Suggestion: this is a foreign concept to the typical American movie goer (Ha ha! "Foreign" Get it?!). To master suggestion is to intrigue through restraint. For example, one of the film's most touching scenes is when Peppy Miller (Berenice Bejo), sneaks into George Valentin's (Jean Dujardin) dressing room. Seeing his tuxedo jacket hung on a coat rack, Peppy strokes the fabric and then envelops herself in it as in an embrace. Suddenly a hand appears from inside the sleeve and grasps Peppy's waist. At first, Peppy looks up startled, but then coyly smiles as © 2012 Katherine Tse the arm hugs her closer. Of course it is Peppy pretending to be caressed by George. So "wrapped up" (Wow, I'm on a pun roll this week!) is she in her fantasy that she initially fails to notice George watching her from the doorway. The gestures are seemingly simple, yet the finesse with which Bejo pulls it off imbues it with such romantic longing. This is just one small example of the film's artistry.

The concept of storytelling through subtlety and restraint isn't just for love stories. Fritz Lang's chilling film, "M," about a serial murderer, is told more through what is unseen than what is visible. In one scene, the viewer first sees the villain in the shadows, followed by a shot of a young child with a balloon. The view pans to the balloon floating away; and the audience is left to their own gruesome subjects can create humor. In Laurel & Hardy's "The Piano," the pair finally pushes a crate containing a piano up a long set of stairs. Once at the top, the wind catches Hardy's hat. He grabs for it, making the piano lurch. The hat delicately hops down the stairs and lands upright, just beyond the sidewalk --only to be smashed by a car. The shot looks down the stairway, with the hat settling at the extreme top of the frame. All we can see of the car is its tires, gently rolling over Hardy's bowler.

In comedy as well, even the most mundane

At the risk of sounding like a total prude, American cinema on the whole has lost any art of subtlety it may have had. I was going to write that the climactic kiss in "The Artist" will probably go down as one of film's iconic romantic moments. And then I realized there was no "big kiss." I was amazed that such imitation is the sincerest form of flattery and passion could be achieved without even the locking of lips! There was a big hug, but that's hardly the same thing. If this were an American movie, it would likely have relied upon a heaping dose of adult content to create a similar emotion.

The same goes for special effects. Granted, many films use them to an appropriate degree. And some stories simply could not be conveyed without However, I'm not the first to say many directors use technology as a crutch rather than a tool. (I mean you, James Cameron!) Apologies to any Cameron fans reading this. Of course I don't blame all this on him, or directors like him. Speaking broadly, the American audience has been dumbed down to the point of needing the plot spoon fed in simple, digestible chunks. We recoil at characters who don't fit nicely into familiar prototypes. And unresolved endings are heretical! Have you noticed that it's possible to enter a movie half way, leave periodically, and still have a good sense of what's going on? As you've probably gathered, I am a cinematic old person. There are many good new movies, "The Artist" being one of them. And I'm sure there are even some good new American ones, as well. But I haven't seen any recently. It's a good thing the Oscars are coming up so that I can be informed of all the great new films I missed over the year. Now if I only had a TV on which to watch them...

LOCAL CONTRACTORS BEGIN SIERRA MADRE'S 1ST GROUND UP BUILD SINCE 2007

Sierra Madre Community Medical's new facilities construction began just last week at 147 W. Sierra Madre Boulevard. The construction fences went up, as the first step, new handicapped ramping to the current building's entrance began. It's the long awaited first ground up construction in five years for the city of Sierra Madre.

Carol Jones is CEO at ACME Construction of Pasadena. The ACME selection has been viewed as a "plus" by many, a highly qualified "hometown" selection, generating income and jobs for and in the San Gabriel Valley community.

At the recent groundbreaking, Jones acknowledged the trust Dr. Sami, CEO of SM Community Medical, the architect and the community put in them. She also pledged to bring the long awaited project to fruition on time and on budget, with respect and sensitivity for the residential and commercial neighbors around the tight fit, in-fill project.

She also put faces and names to the project managers who will be onsite day in and day out for the project, (L to R in photo) Robert Anguiano, Project Manager and Gary Muller, General Superintendent. In a small town community as Sierra Madre, it's very much about the personal connections that make this town work. And ACME seems to understand

Though the ACME entity is relatively new, created in 2007, Carol and David Jones' combined experience brings decades of diversified knowledge and expertise in construction and commercial building.

Their long history in the commercial real estate and construction industry traces back to Carol's ten years at Dynamic Builders, a downtown LA-based firm focused on owner occupied, build-to-suit, ground up construction and her husband, Dave's 32 years licensed in the industry. . Carol also spent a decade with Grubb and Ellis commercial real estate, so offers the ability to see transaction, projects and builds from both sides of the table, a rare perspective.

In addition to the string of affiliations with US Green Building Council, Construction Management, Project Management, LEED certified professionals, other councils and investment associations, Jones is part of a growing, but still very small band of women-owned construction businesses.

"Women are in the minority in the construction industry"; she said, "but I don't feel shut out in any way. I think it's great to be a breath of fresh air; to be a woman in a sea of men.'

"The reverse is much more common here in LA," she continued. "We first build the personal relationship here, and base the rest of the business relationship on the basis of that foundation. I love it. It plays directly to our strengths, to work as partners with our clients, sharing our knowledge and expertise for the best outcome for all."

projects in downtown Pasadena, a new restaurant, Settebello, at 625 E. Colorado. It was clear the post project relationship remained strong and positive, as owner, Brad Otton, happily reflected on the project's challenges and successes amid the lively

"The thing that most impressed me about ACME," Otton reflected, "was the care they showed towards my project. Most contractors that I have worked with are interested in getting done on time and on budget but do not spend a whole lot of time worrying about making sure the project comes out the way the client wants it. From the very beginning I felt like they really cared about the final product and doing whatever it took to make the restaurant fit our initial vision."

The project did present some significant challenges. Since the building was already completed when the restaurant site was chosen, x-rays and core samples were needed to confirm the strength of the floor, located above the building's parking garage in order to bring in Settebello's signature 5,000 pound wood fired pizza oven. Handcrafted in Italy, and shipped to Los Angeles by container ship, the cost to bring the oven the last twenty miles into the restaurant, exceeded the cost to send it across the ocean. But everyone was pleased in the end.

According to David Jones, the required tests climbed to 60 concrete cores and 120 x-rays in an excruciating process. Eventually, all parties were comfortable to perform the installation, a tribute to the patience and care ACME commits to each project.

To everyone's relief, the floor was properly and substantially capable of handling the load, and the nail biting exercise was successfully completed without incident. The Pasadena restaurant, Otton's third, in addition to Henderson, Nevada

"ACME recently completed a total renovation of our new office space updating it from a drab five decades old building into a sleek and modern office environment" said Jeff Manson of Western Psychological Services. YOGA IS JUST STRETCHING.

RIGHT?

by René Quenell

"Yoga is about stretching, weird positions, right?"

Well, one element of yoga and breath work and the list goes on. As a matter of fact a yoga practice can tone all 10 systems of the body, starting with the muscular system (strength and stretching) and moving on through the skeletal system benefits us both. (alignment and bone strength).

SPORTS

By Harvey Hyde

IT'S NOT FAIR TO THE KIDS

We often speak of the value of athletics for young people. How they learn to play the game, the idea of hard work, the building of character, the friendships created. One of the ways we measure success of teams playing any kind of game is by the "win-loss" record. This goes down in history books, into the minds of the players and coaches and they mark the seasons according to those wins and losses.

If you've been following high school and college athletics as long as I have, you know about forfeitures which change the record, take away credits for successes on the field. For high school and colleges, they usually involve some rule breaking, usually an ineligible player. Too often this is brought to light toward the end of the season by an opposing school and results in preventing the penalized team from competing in postseason play.

This recently happened to the Muir High basketball team. Because a valid notification for change of residence for one of its players could not be proven, Muir had to forfeit 20 games. The Mustangs had finished the regular season at 24-2 overall and 13-1 in the Pacific League and in the process ended Pasadena High's nine-year run as Pacific League champions.

The action deprived the entire Muir team of playoff opportunities.

I hate to see all the team members pay the price. The kids work so hard, not just during the season but year-round. There's more to it than just playing the games. These kids have been dreaming about being on a winning team for years. Think about the many hours devoted to practicing. Think about the many days of parents transporting their children to youth league games and such.

And then at the end of a victorious season, they are disqualified and declared ineligible through no fault of their own. It is very likely that the coaches did not knowingly do anything wrong.

Trust me, if you have coached long enough, this has happened. Particularly if you've had winning teams. It somehow always seems to happen to a winning team likely on its way to a championship, or to a team that has already won a championship. You'll rarely see a last-place team have to forfeit games.

Most frequently, forfeitures are because of technicalities. Someone wasn't thorough enough checking up on these rules and technicalities at the beginning of the season. How is this late discovery fair? Team records are changed, playoff chances prevented, and young athletes are punished. They weren't the ones who were supposed to check each player's eligibility.

The real issue here is that an ineligible player is never singled out at the beginning of the season. It is always toward the end of the season, and almost always by an opposing school.

Note to administrators and overseers for teams: Why not do your homework in a timely fashion and file your challenge at beginning of the season or at least before the start of conference play? If this was the common practice and there was found a question of a player's eligibility it could be corrected, or at least determined before the entire season had been played.

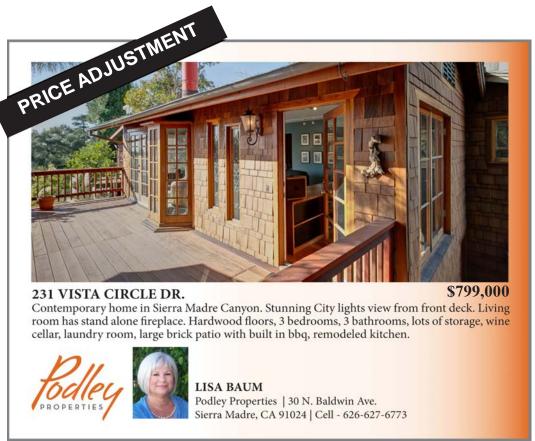

Damaging an entire team's season is the wrong way of monitoring eligibility. Once conference play begins, questions of eligibility should not be allowed. It's too late. Games and championships should be determined on the playing field or basketball court.

My feeling is, don't embarrass a team by avoiding responsibility of monitoring your own teams. And, if you can't beat 'em in competition, don't embarrass yourself by backing in on a technicality.
