Lucile Pepper Bailey was the youngest of four girls who grew up in a household of women because her father died when she was six. At that time, my mother was the oldest at 18 and she went to work in the local school as a teacher to help support the family. They lived in the little town of Salem, West Virginia. At 18 she grduated from high school and began teaching in Salem. She continued to take classes at Salem College with a degree in English and a minor in French and Social Studies. After graduation, she was hired to teach fifth and sixth grades in Williamson, West Virginia and was there for the next three years. In those days, she would have been considered a "women's libber." She decided that life had more to offer and went to George Washington University in Georgetown where she got he degree in Library Science. The next year she was hired as an English teacher in Bridgeport High School in Bridgeport, West Virginia. A year later she became the school's Librarian where she spent the next four years.

She married Harry Miles Bailey and eventually. in the early 1940's, they moved to Richland, Washington where miles worked at the top secret Hanford Nuclear Plant. Soon after their three children were born, Lucile went back to work as the Librarian of the local High School. She loved books and felt they were a world to explore. Her inquiring mind kept her informed on a myriad of subjects.

As the years went by, she became the matriarch of our family. She loved to play word games and when we had family gatherings, there were many games of Trivial Pursuit, Scrabble or Perquacky and Aunt Lucile could trounce us all.

When she was 90, she bought a computer and went to school to learn how to use email and to surf the internet. She wanted to keep informed and to be able to communicate with her family in various parts of the United States. She was an excellent driver but at 96 she decided it was time to quit driving and use Dial-a-Ride to do her errands. That same year she had her ears pierced because she wanted to have diamond earrings before she died.

On her 100th birthday, the family gave her a huge party. Many of her family attended, coming from all over the United States. There were also some of her former students in attendance, as well as those friends who were still living. Amazingly, she could remember them all.

When she was 102, her mind was still strong but he legs forced her to navigate in a wheelchair. One day she told her daughter, Mary, that she would like to learn how to play gin. A few days later, they were eating dinner and Mary said, "After dinner we will have a game of gin." As Mary was helping Aunt Lucile into her wheelchair, suddenly she slumped over and died. She left a gaping hole in our family but an extraorinary exmple to follow.

RENATTA COOPER, ED HONOWITZ RE-ELECTED TO LEAD PUSD BOARD FOR SECOND TERM

Pasadena, CA - The Board of Education of the Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) voted unanimously to re-elect Renatta Cooper as board president for the 2012-2013 school year. Ed Honowitz was also re-elected as vice president at the annual organizational meeting held Monday, May 7. The board elects officers for onevear terms.

"I'm honored to be reelected unanimously," said Cooper, who will serve her second consecutive term as president. "I hope to work closely with Superintendent Jon Gundry and Chief Academic Officer Brian McDonald to implement 21st century learning in our classrooms, work to close the achievement gap and continue to strengthen our child development program."

Since her election to the board in 2007, Cooper has focused on early childhood education, closing the achievement gap between groups of students, English learners and stronger engagement of parents and the community. She was recently named one of this year's Women of Influence by Pasadena Magazine for her advocacy for the education of all children. An expert on early childhood education, Cooper formerly taught graduate-level child development programs at Pacific Oaks College and has been a member of the First 5 Los Angeles Board of Commissioners. This is her second term as president of the board of Education.

Board members also re-elected Ed Honowitz by a vote of 4-3 to serve in the role of vice president.

"It is an honor to be re-elected to help move the board forward to educate all students," said Honowitz, who served as vice president in 2011-2012. First elected to the PUSD board in 2001, Honowitz also served as president of the board for two years. He is an alumnus of Pasadena public schools and his children attended PUSD schools as well. He has been elected twice to serve as a member of the California School Boards Association delegate assembly.

Board member Kim Kenne was elected as clerk of the board of education. The board clerk certifies actions taken by the board, maintains records or reports as required by law and serves as the presiding officer in the absence of the president and vice president. Kenne was elected to the board in 2011.

The board named Kim Kenne as its delegate to the Los Angeles County School Trustees As-

HAPPY MOTHER'S DAY TO MY SPECIAL MOM ANGELINA(JULIA) MARY PALMA ALLEGRINI OCTOBER 4, 1918- DECEMBER 2, 2010

Mom and Mayor Sheng Chang

Mom's story began on together as a family.

October 4, 1918 in Waterford N.J. Because of the influenza epidemic, she was delivered by her father, Philip. Perhaps he looked at an angelic face and chose that name- it certainly described my mom. However, her older brother Frank couldn't say "Angelina" and somehow Mom was dubbed, "Julia." They shortly moved to South Philly and my grandfather worked on the railroad.

Mom's childhood was hard, because her mom was sickly. As a ten-year-old, my mom got up and even mopped floors for her mom before school. She had five siblings: Frank, Mary, Micky, Joe and Rita, and they all remained close throughout their lives. They were a loving family and their mother, Susan was special.

When Mom was 17, her Dad left home. Although her brother Frank had a scholarship and both she and Frank had excelled in school-they were in the National Honor Society, they went to work. They gave their Mom their paychecks to help keep the family together. My Mom told me this after I was married and she felt so lucky to have my Dad. She felt God gave my Dad to her because she had helped her own Mom.

There are so many qualities to describe my mom. She was a hard worker. Even though my Dad had a good job, she still mopped the floors. To this day it amazes me how she kept the four story house spotless and cooked everything from scratch!

My mom was a very intelligent woman. She went to South Philadelphia High for girls and always made Honor Roll. Although she didn't go to college, she loved to read and watched the news. She was a knowledgeable woman.

My mom had a deep faith in God and practiced what she preached. She was always kind and generous to others and willing to help anyone in need. Although my older sister was divorced from her first husband, my mom sent him a "Get Well" card when he had a bout with cancer. It also was my mom and sister who visited my sister's former mother-in-law in the nursing home. We were taught never to hold grudges and to be kind to others.

She was the best Mom we could ask for. Once she and my dad drove all the way to Newburgh NY from Westfield NJ just to bring me a gown for a dance at West Point. She handed me the gown, jacket and gloves, kissed me, and then they drove all the way back to Westfield.

My Mom was devoted to my Dad. She always made his pasta on Sundays and holidays. She took care of him for one-and-a-half years after his first strokes. Then he had to go into a Nursing Home. Every day, she got up, ate breakfast, and went over there for the day. She fed him and visited him. Then she came home at 5pm because she didn't like to drive in the dark.

After Daddy passed away, Mom did not feel sorry for herself. She joined Women's and Church's group and was "Miss Sunshine"- she did birthday cards and other special things for the ladies in the group. She traveled to CA to visit us and Massachusetts and Arizona to visit Mary and her family. She always was ready to try new things and brought sunshine everywhere she went. When she came to California, I was still on The Monrovia-Arcadia –Duarte Town Council. We went to Sheriff's Headquarters to drop off a homemade pie for the late Sheriff sherman Block and we also toured the Emergency Operations Center. She met my friends Natalie Salazar, Director for Community Policing with the Sheriff's as well as Margaret Finlay from the Duarte City Council. Captain Sam Dacus was at the Marina Del Rey Sheriff's Station and Sgt. Gary Thorton took us on a boat ride that she loved! Another happy memory-guests of former Mayor Sheng Chang at a "real" Chinese restaurant. Mom loved all new adventures.

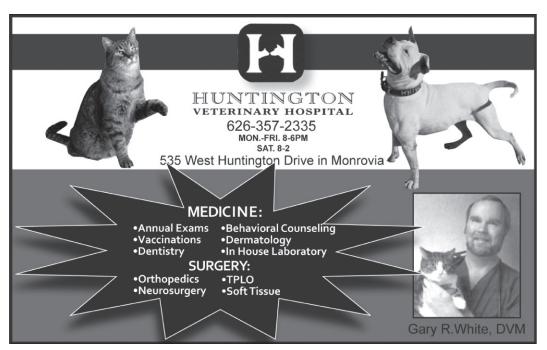

If I could be half the person she was and touch so many lives in a positive way, I would be grateful. Happy Mother's Day, Mom! I love you!

Pet Of The Week - SKIP: Animal ID #A4418567

Meet the most exuberant, joyful boy at the shelter, Skip (A4418567). Skip is a cheerful two-year-old black male Labrador Retriever mix who was discarded at the Baldwin Park Animal Care Center on April 18th because his former owner's other dog attacked him. Weighing sixty pounds, Skip is okay on the leash although he doesn't seem to have had formal training. Very playful, he loves other dogs and is quite well-socialized. Skip will be the perfect indoor pet for an active individual or family living in a private home, and we think he would be an exceptionally great family dog. He is sure to bring lots of laughs to anyone who adopts him. In his debut video, one can see what a hilarious character he is! To watch a video of Skip please visit: www.youtube.com/watch?v=--WAwQQkLZE

REVVING UP ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

It's a question we get asked often... Redevelopment ended, now what? Rest assured, the end of Redevelopment in Monrovia does not mean the end of Economic Development- we still have plenty of tools left in the toolbox. While Redevelopment funding is gone- it's gone for everyone throughout the state of California. That puts our City at a great advantage because one of Monrovia's greatest strengths is our penchant for productive relationships, and those relationships will hold the key to successful economic development.

Over the past few weeks, our Economic Development staff has started conducting business visitations with local Monrovia businesses. The goal? To learn what business are looking for, what they need, and how the City can help. Even if the businesses are not currently in a drastic situation, these visits allow them to meet the Staff they may call down the road when something does come up.

The City of Monrovia represents the largest area of economic potential along the Metro Gold Line Foothill Extension due to the vast area of land slated for development. Establishing a strong economic development push now is essential in capitalizing on our potential once that train starts coming down the tracks.

If you have question or comments about our Economic Development programs, please contact Darlene Sanchez at (626) 303-6604 or by email at dsanchez@ci.monrovia.ca.us

Vehicle Burglary

May 8 at 4:20 a.m., dispatch received a 9-1-1 call from a cell phone. When the dispatcher answered, she could hear an open line with suspicious background noises. The noises varied from the sound of something being dragged, to papers being shuffled through, to a door chime from a vehicle. The dispatcher used GPS to plot the location of the cell phone to the 500 block of King Street. Officers responded to the area and located a female subject hiding in a vehicle. She had stolen property from at least three different vehicles in her possession, two of which were locked. It appears the suspect accidentally dialed 9-1-1 while she was burglarizing cars. Investigation continuing.

Injury Traffic Collision - Vehicle vs. Pedestrian

May 7 at 12:50 p.m., officers responded to a traffic collision involving a vehicle and a pedestrian in the area of Ivy and Walnut. When officers arrived, they found a subject in the street who had been riding a motorized scooter. The subject was riding east on Walnut and failed to stop for the stop sign at the intersection. He was struck by a motorist traveling south on Ivy. The subject suffered a deep laceration to his left leg, but was responsive and appeared to be okay. He was taken to an area hospital to treat his injury.

Commercial Burglary

May 9 at 5:00 p.m., two male Armenian suspects, one in his 20's and the other in his 40's, stole $500.00 worth of wire from the Home Depot. An employee obtained a vehicle description and license plate number. Investigation continuing

Critical Missing Person

May 9 at 8:06 p.m., a 12-year-old girl was reported missing from her foster home in the 500 block of East Walnut. Earlier that day, she was caught stealing money from another foster child. She said she did not want to live at the location and apparently ran away. She is not from the area and has no connection to anyone locally. Patrol and Special Enforcement Team officers conducted an extensive search. Officers went door-to-door attempting to locate the missing girl or witnesses, but the subject was not located. She was entered as a missing person in the computer system and a teletype was sent to notify surrounding agencies. During the investigation, it was learned that the missing girl had been entered into the system as a runaway from a group home and has an outstanding protective custody warrant. Investigation continuing.

Recovered Stolen Vehicle

May 10 at 12:28 a.m., a resident in the 600 block of Hacienda reported that a male subject parked a vehicle in front of her house, left the door open and ran northbound down the street. Minutes prior to the resident's call, Sheriff's deputies were in pursuit of a similar vehicle, which had been stolen the City of Rialto. The deputies lost the vehicle in the area of Evergreen and Buena Vista. Officers responded to the location on Hacienda and searched the area, but were unable to locate the suspect. The vehicle was confirmed to be stolen. Investigation continuing.

Detective Bureau Case Follow-Up

A case of child molestation was brought to the attention of the Monrovia Police Department Detective Bureau and an investigation was launched. The child molester in this case started molesting his 15-year-old second cousin many years ago. The suspect was arrested, charged and convicted for the ongoing molestation, and he was sentenced to 18 months in prison in April of 2010.

The suspect in this case was released in early 2012, and he reestablished a relationship with the victim. The victim is now over the age of 18, but the suspect was specifically ordered by the judge in this case to not contact the victim when he was released. Monrovia Police Detectives went to a location in the City of El Monte and arrested the suspect for violation of court order. He was brought before the judge and sentenced to 3 years in State Prison.

Tip of the Week

VEHICLE BURGLARY PREVENTION

Thieves look for easy and inviting targets when it comes to selecting a vehicle to burglarize or steal from. It is up to you to make every effort to prevent your car from being targeted. Here are some basic tips that will make your vehicle a little less inviting to a thief:

 $Most\ importantly\ -\ LOCK\ your\ vehicle!$

Always park in well-lighted areas.

Install motion lights in your driveway.

Install and use a vehicle alarm.

DO NOT leave valuables in plain view.

Leave all items of value at home if possible.

Look around when you park. Notice anyone or anything suspicious? Write down license plates and descriptions. Alert on-site security or staff and call the police.

Many auto burglaries or thefts from cars occur right in a residential driveway, and too often it is because the vehicle was never locked. Suspects will often target cars that are left unlocked, walking up and down a street trying car doors all the way. Take the time to secure your vehicle.

Other thieves target victims by watching what is placed inside a trunk or hatch. If you plan on stopping by the gym, park, or elsewhere after work, take the time before you leave to place your belongings safely in the trunk. Don't wait until you park to then transfer your laptop, purse, bag, or briefcase to the trunk. Thieves may be watching and targeting your car.

These are just a few tips to help prevent you from becoming a victim of vehicle burglary. Be proactive, look around, and most importantly, don't hesitate to call the police if you see something or someone suspicious.

DUARTE RELAY FOR LIFE SET FOR JUNE 9TH

Cancer never sleeps and neither will participants of the 24-hour long Relay for Life event to be hosted by the City of Duarte and the American Cancer Society on June 9 and June 10 on the campus of Northview Middle School, 1401 Highland Ave.

Participants of the 3rd Annual Duarte Relay for Life will honor cancer survivors and pay tribute to lives lost by the disease while striving to raise $50,000 to help fight cancer in the community. Mayor John Fasana will kick off the event, hosting opening ceremonies at 9 a.m. on June 9, while Mayor Pro-Tem Liz Reilly will preside over the closing ceremony at 9 a.m. the next morning.

9 a.m. the next morning.

Last year more than 20 teams participated raising more than $30,000 for the fight against cancer. Event Chair, Katherine Whatley, a Duarte Walmart employee, said she is expecting another record year.

"We are so excited to be working with so many groups in the community again. I'm sure we will have even more participation and exceed our goals once again."

This year's theme, "Mardi Gras," will provide the teams with lots of inspiration for creative décor and activities throughout the Relay. Teams will maintain a 24-hour community presence, camping out overnight on the field at Northview Middle School. The event will feature food, games, tributes and fellowship. Every penny earned will go toward cancer research. The City of Duarte itself is sponsoring a youth team consisting of representatives from Duarte's Promise —The Alliance for Youth, Northview's Cardinals Helping Youth Live Life (C.H.Y.L.L.) and Duarte Area Resource Team (D.A.R.T.), who are gathering donations by selling "Feet" and Luminaries which represent people who have been diagnosed, died, or have beaten cancer.

The Relay for Life began in 1985 when Dr. Gordy Klatt, a colorectal surgeon in Tacoma, Washington ran and walked around a track for 24 hours to raise money for the American Cancer Society. Since then, the Relay has grown from a single man's passion into the world's largest movement to end cancer.

For more information about how to start a team, join a team or volunteer, visit www. relayforlife.org/duarteca, or call Katherine Whatley at (626) 404-3537.

ALVERNO HIGH SCHOOL HOSTS MOTHER-DAUGHTER TEA

Alverno mothers and daughters celebrate their bond with a tea in the Villa

There is no doubt that mothers and daughters share a special bond and on April 21, Alverno students and their mothers got to celebrate that bond with a special tea and fashion show in the Alverno Villa. The annual event, put on by Alverno fathers, is a time-honored school tradition.

This year mothers and daughters were invited to wear hats or fascinators and then strut their stuff in a special fashion show. Categories for the fashion included "Most Alike," "Most Retro," "Most Spring," "Most Modern," and "Most Sophisticated." A special prize was also given to the youngest participant in the fashion show, the 4 year old daughter of an Alverno alumna.

"I'm so glad that Makayla got to attend the event and participate in the fashion show," said Sophia Calles, Class of 1999, "She's a future member of the Alverno Class of 2025!'

Following the fashion show, daughters were invited to read special letters they had written to their mothers. The afternoon concluded with a raffle for the antique Gay and Johanna Obedicen Photo courtesy Belle n' Beau Photography teapots on the table that had diligently been collected by the Alverno fathers in the weeks leading up to event.

"Our mothers are the first and most important role models we have in life," said Ann Gillick, Head of School, "It is a pleasure for me to see so many young women and their mothers who treasure the special relationship they have with one another. I am grateful to these mothers for raising such incredible young women and sharing Alverno's mission of empowering their daughters to be exactly the person she wants to be."

VITA-MIX

My dad and I saw it at the fair this fall, and it wowed us. The magical blending machine that could make ice cream, cabbage-ino coffee that is downright delicious, a tortilla soup that is bomb, and so, so much more. It is the blender that Starbucks uses to make their frapuccinos and Jamaba Juice their smoothies. This amazing machine is called the Vita-Mix, and after the fair I knew I had to have one. I told everyone about the Vita-Mix, even my interviewer for UChicago – I had almost become an unofficial spokesperson I told so many people. Whenever my dad and I would go into Bed, Bath, and Beyond we would check out the Vita-Mix, saying 'one day', because this blender isn't cheap, but it sure is worth the price.

Last week my dad and I are watching TV after getting our cable installed, and, what do you know, a Vita-Mix infomercial is on QVC with a deal for the newer, better machine. We watched the hosts make sorbet, macaroni and cheese, and three types of soup. I was foaming at the mouth. My dad turns to me and asks, "Want to get it?". I was in shock, I knew that he was going to get me one eventually for graduation, but not now, and not the best one. Naturally, I said yes, and five days later my Vita-Mix arrived. Since getting my Vita-Mix I have made tortilla soup, vanilla ice cream, smoothies, avocado chocolate pudding, vegan chocolate truffles, blueberry sorbet, and I have only just begun. For anyone who wants to eat healthier and have a machine that can do it all,

I highly recommend the Vita-Mix, because it's fantastic.

GOOD FOOD & DRINK

THE PARTY CONTINUES AFTER CINCO DE MAYO

Just this past week I had the opportunity to sit down with one of the most determined and dedicated restaurant owners that we have in Pasadena area, Blair Salisbury owner of the El Cholo Café. Though, his restaurant is well known, Blair still looks after his baby with the greatest of care.

Self described as "nuts and crazy," Blair's lineage is that of a restaurateur. The Borquez family launched the Sonora Cafe in 1923 in a small storefront on Broadway

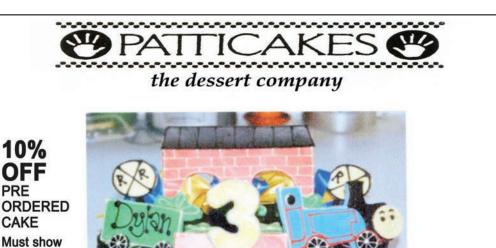

Blair still desired to move into the heart of Old Town and his hopes were realized with the opening of the restaurant at the Paseo. Blair said, "It feels as though it has been here all along. It just felt like the staff and surroundings didn't miss a beat." Truly Pasadena feels like home to El Cholo Café, and Blair wouldn't have it any other way!!!

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

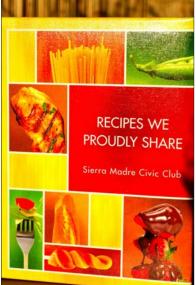

The restaurant is expansive, with a patio that overlooks Colorado Blvd. and the snow capped San Gabriel Mountains. They offer two different bars, one as you walk in, akin to a service bar, and a great place to wait for a table and enjoy a "Killer" Margarita, and a back bar just next to the Patio. Offering large screen TV's and perfect for slumbering and enjoying the show as they make your Guacamole tableside. The menu is full of different combinations, Blair believes that the more selections there are.... the better, and he tries to give a little bit of selection for everyone. I descended upon the PLATO DE CARNITAS, roasted pork, served with fresh avocado relish, Pico de Gallo, Nopales, rice and beans ($12.75). When I go to a Mexican Restaurant I always try the pork. It was stunningly tender and fresh, and may be the best that I have ever tasted. My dinner companion gave two thumbs up to the Shrimp Sizzling Fajitas ($14.75). I was just about stuffed when Blair brought out the Blue Corn Chicken Enchilada for us to try. It is item that made El Cholo famous. A must try for anyone eating at the restaurant. Of course I had a Margarita. A Single Margarita that seemed to have the power to bust a piñata. If you love Mexican Food like I do, or just want to spend a sleepy Sunday at the bar with guacamole and chips. Save a seat for me.

CIVIC CLUB ASKS 'WHAT'S FOR DINNER?'

coupon when

picking up order.

> The answer is easy if you have your own copy of the Civic Club's Cookbook "Recipes We Proudly Share"

Every delicious recipe is a time-tested, family-approved dish of love passed from friend to friend, family to family and generation to generation. The test kitchens were those of grandmas and aunties, friends and neighbors and are included in this collection because they are requested repeatedly at celebrations, holidays, and gatherings.

For example there's Grandma's Chicken Casserole contributed by Jeanne Peterson. According to Jeanne, "Virginia 'Grandma' Peterson's family is a direct descendent of the Mayflower and... her family settled in Sierra Madre 70 years ago. According to Grandma, this recipe is about 80 years old....This recipe is always a hit with kids...It's really good!"

For an easy BBQ recipe try the Bourbon Glazed Salmon submitted by Gail-Ann Skiles. Made with Alaskan wild salmon, marinated in a blend of lime juice, bourbon, brown sugar, ginger and other savory seasonings, grilled up and then topped with sesame seeds, tomatoes and onion, she says, "One of our favorites - great for entertaining."

Or serve up some award winning 5-Alarm Texas Red Chili submitted by Amy Putnam. Elmer Dills picked this as his favorite at the 2006 Sierra Madre Chili Cook-off. "I used Taylor's meat, Miller High Life because it was the only beer in cans in Billy's Bottle Shop's cooler. I used conventional chili powder but I added unadulterated New Mexico red chili powder." Stand by to sound the alarms! Comfort food abounds in this book, both in taste and memories. Linda Wochnik contributed her recipe called Mom's Spaghetti Sauce, an easy, from-scratch sauce that brings back tasty times. "Mom's spaghetti sauce was delicious - only to be matched by the tantalizing aroma while it was cooking." There's Tagliarini, a casserole dish of ground beef, noodles, vegetables and cheese added by Sue Quinn. "This was a favorite of my aunt, Alice Jones, and I enjoyed it many times at her home on Orange Grove."

Is crunch what you want? Gloria Giersbach's Killer Coleslaw will fill the bill with a blend of crunchy cabbage, apple, pineapple, cranberries and a handful of sunflower seeds, pine nuts or walnuts, sure to satisfy. Ĝloria notes [&]This is a favorite that is served during family reunions in Vancouver BC each

You'll find many more recipes for appetizers through desserts and beverages, all presented with pride and warm affection by the members of the Civic Club, and just in time for summer entertaining! Jeff's Pics The Book Report

Prague Winter: A Personal Story of Remembrance and War, 1937-1948 by Madeleine Korbel Albright

Before Madeleine Albright turned twelve, her life was shaken by the Nazi invasion of Czechoslovakia, the country where she was born, the Battle of Britain, the near total destruction of European Jewry, the Allied victory in World War II, the rise of communism, and the onset of the Cold War. Albright's experiences, and those of her family, provide a lens through which to view the most tumultuous dozen years in modern history. Drawing on her memory, her parents' written reflections, interviews with contemporaries, and newly available documents, Albright recounts a tale that is by turns harrowing and inspiring. The book takes readers from the Bohemian capital's thousand-year-old castle to the bomb shelters of London, from the desolate prison ghetto of TerezÍn to the highest councils of European and American government. Albright reflects on her discovery of her family's real heritage many decades after the war, on her Czech homeland's tangled history, and on the stark moral choices faced by her parents and their generation. Often relying on eyewitness descriptions, she tells the story of how millions of ordinary citizens were ripped from familiar surroundings and forced into new roles as exiled leaders and freedom fighters, resistance organizers and collaborators, victims and killers. "No one who lived through the years of 1937 to 1948," Albright writes, "was a stranger to profound sadness. Millions of innocents did not survive, and their deaths must never be forgotten. Today we lack the power to reclaim lost lives, but we have a duty to learn all that we can about what happened and why." At once a deeply personal memoir and an incisive work of history, Prague Winter serves as a guide to the future through the lessons of the past, as seen through the eyes of one of the international community's most respected and fascinating figures.

For You" garnered a lot of attention both with critics and fans. Two years later, the current sound of Best Coast is both refiner and shaper. The lyrics are similar to the ones found on "Crazy For You" as they equally deal with breakups, love, and relationships. With the help from mega-producer Jon Brion, Cosentino and company drop their fuzzy fidelity for elevated production values and a polished soundscape. In translation, Best Coast really hasn't sounded any better than they do now. Their surf-pop resonance is blithe and dreamlike. While some fans may show dissatisfaction with the change, those who can embrace it will be captivated. Granted, Best Coast may not transform your life, but their latest songs will be the soundtrack to your summer, no matter the results.

"The Only Place" zips by fairly quickly. At shy of 35 minutes, the eleven estival induced tracks are fun and pleasing to the ears. Nonetheless, besides the closing track, "Up All Night", the rest of the songs never really stick with you. Nearly all the songs here are gems, but despite having the shiny demeanor there's not much else to report on. Sometimes you don't need to be completely moved or enthralled by the music you listen to. If you simply find contentment with Best Coast's elegant surf-pop sound and their lyrics about yearning for past lovers, then you'll be overwhelmingly satisfied.

Best Coast never come up short on making the listener either singing along, bobbing their head, or even dancing to their joyous material. The title track plays out like a cheesy love letter to California. It's harmless, but quite good. "How They Want Me To Be" is the centerpiece for the record. It's a dance ballad that shows the ultra sensitive side to Best Coast even if most of their songs already deal with mixed emotions. At any rate, the abovementioned song is one of the finest off the record. In the end, nothing beats "Up All Night" the longest song off the record. It closes out this occasionally uneven affair and leaves you contemplating many things. It's distressing, painfully nostalgic, and wonderfully beautiful. It kind of makes you take a step back and recognize why the rest of album doesn't give off the same everlasting appeal. Even with some minor blunders along the way, "The Only Place" secures a spot as a definite summer album to listen to even if fades away faster than the season itself.

thought Fred was practicing self hypnosis or got stuck in a weird yoga position.

It was a little difficult removing him from the cage, because Jocko has a nasty tendency of lunging at me with his needle sharp beak (I like him, but the feeling isn't mutual). He squawked and squawked as I removed Fred wrapped in a paper towel to the backyard. The whole scene must've really confused him. I came straight from work and had to dig a little pit wearing my fake leather flats. I packed down the dirt to make sure no night animal would try to steal the body, and lied to my parents when they phoned that night, "Everyone's fine...'

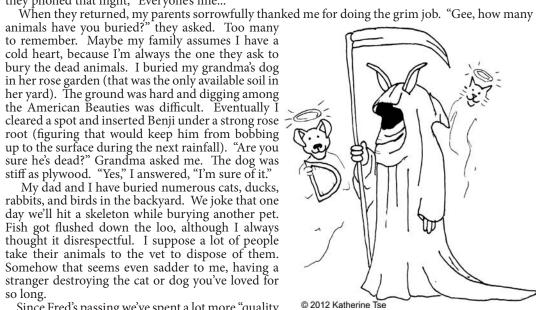

cold heart, because I'm always the one they ask to bury the dead animals. I buried my grandma's dog in her rose garden (that was the only available soil in her yard). The ground was hard and digging among the American Beauties was difficult. Eventually I cleared a spot and inserted Benji under a strong rose root (figuring that would keep him from bobbing up to the surface during the next rainfall). "Are you sure he's dead?" Grandma asked me. The dog was stiff as plywood. "Yes," I answered, "I'm sure of it." My dad and I have buried numerous cats, ducks, rabbits, and birds in the backyard. We joke that one day we'll hit a skeleton while burying another pet. Fish got flushed down the loo, although I always thought it disrespectful. I suppose a lot of people take their animals to the vet to dispose of them.

Since Fred's passing we've spent a lot more "quality time" with Jocko. We were afraid he would die of a broken heart, but he appears to be taking the loss quite well. Maybe he thinks Fred went on a long vacation. There are times when you wish animals could talk, but I'm glad we don't have to explain Fred's absence to Jocko. Perhaps we humanize the animals too much. I do believe they experience empathy, but maybe they don't dwell on things as much as we do. Who knows? If Jocko could speak he might just remark, "Oh, I see you bought the cheaper seeds this week. What's up with that?" Jocko isn't spoiled per se, but he's demanding. Yes, taking care of pets can be a handful at times, but I'd prefer that to burying them any day!

THE INS AND OUTS OF FELINE FRIENDSHIP

Several months ago, after all the excitement sitting on the front porch of my neighbor's house, the question as to whether or not kitties could be kept in became much more pertinent to me, than ever before. Whether or not domestic cats should be indoors "24-7", versus being allowed to wander in and out of the house at will, has been an on-going debate for many years. As for me, I guess you could feline friends are safer from harm and more secure indoors than out, but on the other hand I also realize that cats, even those domesticated and bred to be pets, possess the natural instinct to want to explore the great outdoors. Are cats really happy being pent up in a home constantly? Are they ever truly content with taking part in the daily life activities of only the human being? Or, are walls? Wouldn't they rather be out enjoying the fresh air, sunshine, sounds and smells of nature? And finally, would the freedom they so naturally long for give them a healthier, more balanced, satisfying experience in life, and perhaps even prolong their lives by instilling in them a stronger will to live? These are very good questions to which I do not claim to have the correct answers, however I will admit that my experiences with cat ownership have always included a "kitty door", and up until earlier this year, I was very lucky to never have lost any of my cats to a coyote or a car, nor did any of them simply go missing...until earlier this year. For of days, then in keeping with my philosophy the first time in my long life of owning pets, I

Every cat owner must make their own decision as to whether they will allow their pet to enjoy the great outdoors, or be kept inside. Take the time to get to know your pet, and do what you feel is right. Use consistent commands such as the cat's name, a specific whistle call or a yelp that he or she gets to missing, don't beat yourself up for it. THE JOY OF YOGA

YOUR LIFE OR THE REFLECTION OF IT?

By Rene Quenell, Founder/Owner Yoga Madre - Sierra Madre

So we live in an image-conscious world. From fashion magazines to billboards and ads on the street, in stores and everywhere else, it has become impossible to avoid the constant reminder of what we are expected to look like and what is considered "beautiful" by today's standards.

Do you find this annoying? Pervasive even? Personally, I do. One reason is that behind this never ending visual assault hides a simple purpose: to make us buy stuff. Stuff we don't necessarily need, but we buy it anyway, because - ever so briefly - it'll make us feel good.

Another reason is the pressure to be perfect. Perfection is a self-defeating goal that takes us away from what is truly essential: who we really are.

Look at yourself in the mirror: who do you see? Mirrors can be deceptive: while we're caught up in the reflection, we don't see the person, just the image that's projected. It's the same with life. Are you really living your life as you want it? Or are you so caught up in trying to live up to standards that perhaps are not completely yours, that somewhere along the line you have lost sight of what's truly

In your yoga practice, there's no room for that. No competition, no standards, no being judged and looked down at.

In your yoga practice, there's no need for mirrors. You are encouraged to be yourself. Actually, there's no other option: you can only be yourself. With your abilities and your limitations. No one there will push you to be something you're not, or to make you do something you don't want to. For the length of time you are on your mat, you get to be as genuine, as authentic, as free, as much yourself as is possible. In your yoga practice, you are always perfect, because you are always you.

So stop looking at yourself in the mirror! Live your life, not the reflection of your life. And if you're not sure where to start, may we suggest: your yoga mat?

HOW TO MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR DOCTOR'S VISIT

Dear Savvy Senior:

Can you write a column educating patients on how to prepare for doctors appointments? I manage a number of small health clinics, and have found that patients - especially seniors - that come prepared when they visit our doctors are much more satisfied with the care they receive. Thanks for your help. Patient Educator

Dear Educator:

You're right. Studies have shown that patients who help their doctors by providing important health information and preparing themselves for appointments tend to get better care than patients who don't. Here are some simple things we can all do to help maximize our next visit to the doctor.

Before Your Appointment

Gathering your health information and getting organized before your appointment are the key steps to ensuring a productive meeting with your doctor. This is especially important if you're seeing multiple doctors or are meeting with a new physician for the first time. Specifically, you need to:

Get your test results: Make sure the doctor you're seeing has copies of your latest X-ray, MRI or any other test or lab results, including reports from other doctors that you've seen. In most cases, you'll need to do the leg work yourself which may only require a phone call to your previous doctor asking them to send it, or you may need to go pick it up and take it yourself.

List your medications: Make a list of all the medications you're taking (prescription drugs, over-the-counter medications, vitamins, minerals and herbal supplements) along with the dosages and take it with you to your appointment. Or, just gather up all you pill bottles and put them in a bag and bring them with you.

Gather your health history: Your doctor also needs to know about any previous hospitalizations, as well as any current or past medical problems, even if they are not the reason you are going to the doctor this time. Genetics matter too, so having your family's health history can be helpful. The U.S. Surgeon General offers a free web-based tool called "My Family Health Portrait" (see familyhistory. hhs.gov) that can help you put one together.

Prepare a list of questions: Make a written list of the top three or four issues you want to discuss with your doctor. Since most appointments last between 10 and 15 minutes, this can help you stay on track and ensure you address your most pressing concerns first. If you're in for a diagnostic visit, you should prepare a detailed description of your symptoms.

During Your Appointment

The best advice when you meet with your doctor is to speak up. Don't wait to be asked. Be direct, honest and as specific as possible when recounting your symptoms or expressing your concerns. Many patients are reluctant or embarrassed to talk about their symptoms, which makes the doctor's job a lot harder to do. It's also a good idea to bringing along a family member or friend to your appointment. They can help you ask questions, listen to what the doctor is telling you and give you support.

Also consider taking some notes or ask the doctor if you can record the session for later review. If you don't understand what the doctor is telling you, ask him or her to explain it in simple terms so you can understand. And if you run out of time and don't get your questions answered, ask if you can follow up by phone or email, make another appointment, or seek help from the doctor's nurse.

Savvy tip: The National Institute on Aging offers a booklet called "Talking With Your Doctor: A Guide for Older People" that provides great information including a variety of questions to ask that can help you be a more informed patient. P.E. DEANS OPENS ITS DOORS New Sierra Madre Retailer Combines Upscale Furniture Consignments, Accessories & Gifts beloved pillars of the Sierra Madre business community in the last five years. "Can you believe it?" chuckled Sherry Grossi. "In November, Zugo's Cafe (their restaurant originally named Ugo's) will celebrate its fifth anniversary!"

Sherry and Cesare (Chez) Grossi have become

The energetic couple, who began their popular Italian bistro in 2007, has branched out across the street from their restaurant with Sherry's new venture, P.E. Deans. Named after her mother, the store celebrated its official ribbon cutting on May 4, two weeks after its soft opening on April 21.

Located in the space formerly occupied by Iris Intrigue, P.E. Deans features carefully selected, quality consignment furniture and accessories, interspersed with brand new gift items. As opposed to the Bay Area, which features a plethora of strong consignment furniture stores, the San Gabriel Valley seems to have been ripe for Grossi's new business.

"Things have been flying off the shelves," said Grossi, very pleased and almost startled at the very brisk response to the new business. In this reporter's several visits to the store, merchandise is definitely turning over daily, even hourly. Items on display just hours before the ribbon cutting on Friday were already gone by late afternoon.

Grossi says realistic pricing keeps the inventory moving quickly. After agreeing on a sales price with a buyer, Grossi pays her consignors 55%, a higher split than many other consignment retailers. She says items will a higher split than many other consignment retailers. She says items will have a wide range of value, from about $25 to $2500.

With her critical eye toward value and quality, Grossi has already offered high end furniture items at aggressive prices, like eight Kreiss Collection dining chairs offered at $1920, a Biedermeier chest and an Italian game table, to a charming hand painted, twotiered table for $45.

Grossi brings a wealth of retail and home goods experience to her new Sierra Madre store. Her career spanned both sides of "the pond" in Boston and Italy, with corporate, VP and Senior VP positions at major retailers including the home products division at Filene's Department Store in Boston.

Known even more widely across the country is Filene's Basement. According to Wikipedia, Filene's Basement "was founded in Boston in 1909 by Edward A. Filene as a way to sell off excess merchandise from his father's department store upstairs. Before long, other retailers and manufacturers were bringing their unsold goods to him to sell, and the concept of the "off price" store was born."

A six year stint as a luxury lingerie manufacturer in Italy also gave both Grossis European business experience in Chez's home country. After moving back to the states in 2001, they eventually tired of snow shovels and inclement weather, heading for LA... and the rest, they say is history.

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed

by Luther Tsinoglou Realtor®

A CHORE NEXT DOOR

While not a very common problem, if you've got it, it can have a terrible impact on your listing: The Messy Neighbor. If you live next door to a "neglected" property, you might lose up to 20% of your home's market value, particularly with buyers looking for any excuse to reduce their offer.

It's technically not your problem, but ask not for whom the bell tolls. It's well worth your time and effort to resolve this situation amicably. Always be respectful, and don't let your emotions get the best of you.

Unless you believe your neighbor is "unhinged," you should begin with a visit to their home and a positive attitude - no name-calling or finger-pointing. Don't grab everyone on the block and gang up on your neighbor - you'll get better results if you go alone or with one other person.

If you find your messy neighbor is unwilling to take care of their maintenance, it may still be in your best interest to do the work yourself or with the help of other neighbors. No, it's not fair, but if you want a fair sales price, this may be your only option.

UCLA REVIEW

Three weeks ago I gave my review of USC Spring Football. As I said, their "spring" started with the announcement that Matt Barkley and TJ McDonald would return to USC.
"Spring" for UCLA" began with the announcement of a coaching change. For the first time in a long while, the new head coach was a non-UCLA graduate. Jim Mora, a football coach and the son of a football coach -- with coaching experience at the NFL level and a brief stint at Washington State as a Graduate Assistant.

Emphasis at UCLA needed to be put on talent. Mora said that one of his main objectives was to select a recruiting staff who were not only familiar with southern California, but also with the PAC 12 and the competition.

His first recruiting class appears strong, demonstrating that his new coaches (who I cannot mention here individually) went out and competed aggressively. This first class will not be tested or really evaluated until September when Fall camp opens. Coach Mora no doubt hopes that some of this talent will assist the Bruin football program immediately.

Most of the suspense this spring centered around who would be the starting QB. My opinion, is that over the last few years UCLA has not found the general needed in the QB position. Either that, or the offense run has not suited the skills and talents of the quarterbacks they had.

I attended Saturday's Spring Game Scrimmage at the Rose Bowl. It was hard to determine whether the offense was that good, or the defense was that bad. I understand that the defense had many defensive starters missing. But throughout the scrimmage the offense dominated.

The offensive coordinator, Noel Mazzone, demonstrated at least to me, that he had a plan of attack which seemed to be lacking over the last several years: Spread the field, throw the ball and the run comes off of the pass.

All spring, the quarterbacks, Hundley, a redshirt freshman, Kevin Prince, Richard Breihault and the rest of the UCLA QB's including Rich Neuheisel's son, Jerry rotated with equal reps. In fact, in the scrimmage, Coach Mora was smart in keeping the competition equal so each QB had an opportunity to show what he could do. .

Brett Hundley showed through his athletic ability that he could be the QB of the future. Great potential, runs the ball well, and fits into the scheme of the offensive look. His lack of experience and improvement of his passing ability will be two main issues for the Fall. Richard Brehault had a great scrimmage throwing for 200+ yards, as did Kevin Prince also a senior. Both have playing experience, but I think the future is moving towards Brett Hundley.

Ron Franklin ran the ball well, One of the most impressive newcomers, was number 33, Steven Manfro, a freshman redshirt running back from Valencia High School. Haven't heard many details about him, but Mora's been raving about him. This kid did surprise me with his ability. It was hard to evaluate the competitive skills of the offensive line since there were so many injuries to the defense.

The defensive line should be one of the strengths of the defense of UCLA. They have returning players, Jones, Marsh and Brandon Willis. They seem to have depth at those line positions. The three starting linebackers missed the scrimmage due to injuries, but from last season's performance, I consider them tough hard-nosed kids.

The Secondary has some gifted athletes. Aaron Hester will be a starting corner, and should be one of the leaders in the secondary. It's difficult for me to evaluate the defense since I wasn't sure of the level of the match-ups: (ones against ones or ones against threes.) and to asses the effectiveness of the offense over the defense in running the football and

For you who can remember the Arizona State offense over the past several years, this is the same offense they used with Brock Osweiler, their outstanding 6'8" quarterback who was drafted by the Denver Broncos.

I will have to hold my prediction for UCLA. I'm sure they will be an improved team and are hoping that their recruiting class can contribute and fill holes in their depth. However, that doesn't mean they will win more games.

Why? Competition. The Pac 12 will be a better conference this year with new coaches at Washington State, Arizona and Arizona State. There's no question that Colorado, Utah, Washington, Cal, and Oregon State will be better as well. Don't forget Oregon (they're one the best teams in the country) or the USC Trojans.

About 6000 attended the UCLA scrimmage. 15,0000 attended at USC. Now add both together. Oregon had 44,000. I doubt if the total attendance of all PAC twelve spring games equals 44,000 in attendance.

But really, Spring doesn't count. Each team has 12 regular schedule games coming up. What a great season all you college fans have to look forward to.

One thing for sure, I know fans will be impressed by UCLA's home at the Rose Bowl. The new construction going on is big time. The Rose Bowl press box and improvements are fantastic. Wait until you see it. Get to a college football game!

The Baseball Reliquary Presents VEECKFEST

Saturday, May 19, 2012 ~ 1:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Arcadia Public Library, 20 W. Duarte Road, Arcadia, California

In conjunction with its current exhibition, "Bill Veeck: Baseball's Greatest Maverick," the Baseball Reliquary presents "VeeckFest," an in-depth look at the life and times of Bill Veeck, on Saturday, May 19, 2012, from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m., at the Arcadia Public Library Auditorium. The event will include a panel discussion, film screening, and book signing.

"VeeckFest" will begin at 1:00 p.m. with opening remarks by author and historian Paul Dickson, whose biography, Bill Veeck: Baseball's Greatest Maverick, was the inspiration for the exhibition of the same title. A panel discussion between 1:30 and 3:00 p.m., including Q&A, will include Dickson; sportswriters John Schulian and Ron Rapoport, who covered Veeck for the Chicago Sun-Times and other publications; and screenwriter/filmmaker Ken Solarz, who owns the movie rights to Veeck's 1962 autobiography, Veeck—as in Wreck.

A film screening will be held between 3:00 and 4:00 pm, which will include Veeck: A Man For Any Season, a 28-minute documentary produced and directed by Tom Weinberg and Jamie Ceaser, and originally broadcast on WTTW/Chicago in 1985. Produced the year before he died, the documentary is an intimate portrait of the man and his world, narrated by Veeck's wife, Mary

LIFE AND TIMES OF AN AMERICAN LEGEND

In the annals of baseball, nobody has been more creative, charismatic, and controversial than Bill Veeck. He was born into baseball. His sportswriter father became president of the Chicago Cubs when Bill was four, and America's pastime became his lifelong passion. As Paul Dickson chronicles in this first full account of Veeck's life and legacy, he would change the business, and convicience and consciences.

In addition to candid interviews with Veeck revealing his indomitable spirit and zest for life, the film incorporates historic footage of Comiskey Park, Wrigley Field, and many of the promotions that Veeck was famous for creating. Other film footage to be shown includes a collection of commentaries Veeck did from a bar stool on the Emmy Award-winning television show, Time Out, in 1984-85, and clips from a rare interview with Veeck in the 1960s filmed at his home in Easton, Maryland by a Cleveland television crew.

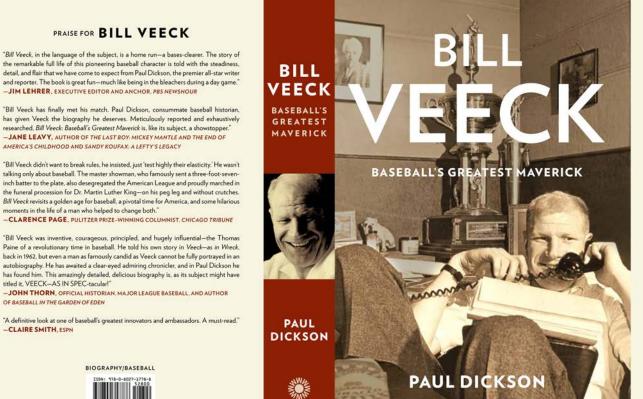

A book signing will conclude the day's festivities from 4:00 to 5:00 p.m. Authors featured will include Paul Dickson, signing copies of Bill Veeck: Baseball's Greatest Maverick, and John Schulian, signing copies of Sometimes They Even Shook Your Hand: Portraits of Champions Who Walked Among Us, which includes an essay on Bill Veeck.

HAIL Hamilton My Turn Operation "Geronimo" Coverup Continues

A year ago, President Obama announced: "I can report to the American people and to the world that the United States has conducted an operation that killed Osama bin Laden, the leader of al-Qaeda and a terrorist who is responsible for the murder of thousands of innocent men, women and children." But does anyone still believe the official story of Osama bin Laden's death?

It's been a whole year since Osama bin Laden was allegedly assassinated in a Pakistani Navy Seal raid, Operation "Geronimo," but that hasn't stopped the corporate media and the White House from ratcheting up fears of terrorism, painting the potential for an "anniversary attack."

Not surprisingly, a federal judge recently ruled, because of "national security," the Obama Administration does not have to release photos or video of the raid. We were told by the White House the Seals had helmet cams running in real-time during the operation. However, now they claim that no video exists because the feed allegedly, and coincidentally, experienced an apparent "black out" during the actual raid itself.

In a 2011 60 Minutes interview, a week after the raid, Obama said, "We have done DNA sampling and testing... we are absolutely sure it was him." If they've done DNA testing to prove it, why can't they show us that evidence? Perhaps because it raises more questions; for example, why would they need to do DNA testing at all, unless his body was unidentifiable to the naked eye.

Two weeks ago, an Obama-appointed federal judge ruled in favor of the government in a national security case, when he denied a FOIA request to obtain all photos and videos taken during and after the raid in Pakistan that resulted in Osama bin Laden's death. The DOJ responded to the lawsuit by arguing that the requested materials "are classified and are being withheld from the public to avoid inciting violence against Americans overseas and compromising secret systems and techniques used by the CIA and the military."

Among other things, disclosure of these materials would have helped resolve the seriously conflicting statements made by White House officials about what happened during the raid and what its actual goals and operating rules were. But while the Obama administration has insisted to the court that all such materials are classified and cannot be disclosed without compromising crucial National Security secrets, the President's aides have been continuously leaking information about the raid in order to create politically beneficial pictures of what happened.

Last August, The New Yorker published what it purported to be a comprehensive account of the raid, based on mostly anonymous White House claims, that made Barack Obama look like a mix of Superman, Rambo and Clint Eastwood; The Washington Post called it "a fascinating, cinematic-like account of the operation that killed Osama bin Laden."

The coverup appears to be continuing. Pentagon officials recently disclosed to the Associated Press that they could not find any photo or video evidence to confirm that Al Qaeda leader Osama Bin Laden was killed in the Navy Seal raid in Pakistan a year ago.

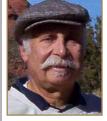

Moreover, in February "bin Laden's compound" was totally demolished. On February 27th, it was reported that "Pakistani authorities began tearing down the house on Saturday night, working under floodlights, with the local population subject to a strict curfew and Pakistan Army soldiers and police personnel reportedly deployed in large numbers", and how the "total destruction of the death scene makes it much less likely independent verification of the official narrative will ever be established".

President Obama said a year ago after the raid, "We have put out the results of the DNA testing as well as the facial recognition." Have we all been asleep for a year? The government hasn't "put anything out," nobody has seen the DNA tests or the facial recognition results. Nada!

We may never know whether it was really Osama bin Laden we killed. But one thing is certain, the Operation "Geronimo" coverup continues....

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE STAYING IN TOUCH

A couple of days ago I had this dream that I was standing on this corner and an old classmate from Law School passed by in a car. I chased the car and I was sure it contained my old friend but I couldn't catch him. After I awoke I tried to locate the guy on Face Book and have now heard from him. I have learned that he does some work in an attempt to assist people in African villages and I kind of imagine that I will connect with him and start doing something honorable and significant. It probably won't happen but I certainly can feel the need.

This morning my cousin in Arizona sent me an e-mail containing a You Tube of a more than thirty year old Johnny Carson show. In viewing the old show there was mention of other old Johnny Carson shows which reminded me that I had briefly appeared on the show in 1965. Now I am immersed in the adventure of trying to find the record of that show in some sort of wild attempt to locate myself in the world. I think this attempt at reconnecting with my past has something to do with the fact that I have reached retirement age even though I am still working. My birthday was last week and driving the Freeways in an attempt to get to Court on time is becoming more and more arduous. I was reminded of my advancing age as I drove home tonight after a Doctor's appointment and passed the now closed Café 322.

Really it's upsetting to notice this formerly vibrant restaurant now empty and dark. Just a couple of Tuesdays ago the last game of Trivia Pursuits was played there and my wife and I and my fellow columnist Rich Johnson had been the winning team Now I hear that the landlord raised the rent. Who knows? It all just emphasizes the horrid truth that what was is no more and that it is all inevitable and undoubtedly will also happen to me. This is one of the most unfortunate aspects of being a nonbeliever. I don't need a belief in the metaphysical world of talking snakes and everlasting Fathers to accept the reality of this troubled and at the same time utterly miraculous opportunity for life that has come my way; but in retrospect it seems like it has lasted for such a short time.

Just yesterday I was a kid finishing my paper route and riding my bike to Little League tryouts and being afraid that I wasn't good enough. Well, in a way, I still fear that I am not good enough but when I look in the mirror I l expect to see the same kid. Instead, what do I see? Some sort of almost unrecognizable weird old man with my eyes is grinning back at me. Yesterday my friend Charles came over to watch the basketball game and while we were having dinner he noticed a picture of me sitting with three old friends. "It's almost iconic", he said. "You all look like John Lennon." Well, it was the 1970's and I guess that was about when Charles was born; a long time ago for him and just yesterday for me.

I don't relate very much to thoughts about my body after I die. Burial seems like a waste of space and cremation or being tossed into the sea and melting or burning away seems fine. Actually, to me, my body has always just felt like a carrier for my head. And my head is just a carrier for my thoughts. That's where my real world is, in my awareness and I hate the idea of my awareness disappearing. Maybe instead of storing decaying dead bodies it would be possible to retain the awareness of people. Maybe there's a way of downloading all of a person's thoughts and memories and storing it somewhere in cyberspace. I never saw the movie the Matrix but I have heard that the film contains the concept that information can simply be uploaded into a person's brain while that brain continues to exist in a vat someplace.

I admit that this idea of a brain in a vat is not very attractive but it's no less attractive than the thoughts of bodies decaying in coffins. Maybe our individual awareness could be stored in some way such that if anyone, at some future time, wanted to converse with us a conversation would still be possible. information about this future present world could be uploaded into whatever was containing our old awareness and in that way we would still be made aware of what was happening after the death of our

Okay, maybe this is all getting a bit far-fetched but really is it any crazier than me dreaming about someone I haven't seen for forty-five years and then presto, after pressing a few letters on my key board, we are reconnecting. All right, it's not eternal life but still it is more than I ever expected to be possible. We now all take it for granted that we can reconnect with the past so WHY NOT THE FUTURE?

Well, let's stay in touch.

7 WONDERS OF THE WORLD

Remember the 7 wonders of the world? Before you answer you should know there are really at least 28 wonders of the world, not counting Barry Schwam. Also wondering what you are going to have for lunch is not considered one of the 7 wonders of the world unless you are Neil the Pig. Then really the shorter list is to wonder what Neil is NOT going to have for lunch.

There are 4 generally accepted sets of 7 wonders of the world. They are: The 7 Wonders of the Ancient World; the 7 Wonders of the Medieval World; the 7 Wonders of the Natural World; and finally the 7 Wonders of the Modern World. If you ask me nicely, I will tell you what all these wonders are. In my minds eye I can see my Fresco's friends Linda and Bob asking me nicely. Thank you. OUT TO PASTOR

One of the great joys of getting older, and there is at least one joy involved in this grueling process, is discovering that you were right all the time. I try not to boast here because, well, that's just the kind of person I am. And, I'm not going to make a list of all of the things I was "right" about. No sense in boasting, but I just can't resist one. Some of these things centered on my relationship with my mother. One advantage a mother has over her children is that sense of authority and being right all the time.

Looking back, I can see that she was not right all the time. As a young person, my mother told me things I have since learned not to be true. For

It takes more than clean underwear to survive an accident.

The boogieman under my bed does not exist... any more.

None of my friends wants to jump off a bridge.

I will grow up even if I don't clean up my plate. And, it's almost impossible to behave yourself and have a good time simultaneously.

My mother, like other mothers, was not a bad mother. She just had bad information, much of which she got from her mother. I'm not sure where grandmother got her information, but it too was wrong. And, when you have bad information, there is nothing more you can do but inflict it upon your children. And my mother inflicted away at us

This week another one of these "not true things," was revealed. This one was the mother of all untrue things mothers tell their children.

I must confess there is a bittersweet sense of victory in this recent announcement.

I can't tell you how many times my mother told me to "Eat your spinach. It's good for you." When I would protest she would further admonish me by saying, "Finish all of your spinach on your plate, it won't kill you."

Boy, was she wrong. I hate to say, "I told you so." However, the temptation is beyond my ability to resist. After all, I'm only a man. I guess I never ate enough spinach for the strength to resist everything.

For years, I told my mother that spinach was not good for me. Now, I have scientific proof as well as verification from the United States government that spinach can kill you.

Where was all this information and government verification when I was young and being force-fed spinach? Some things should be retroactive. If I could find a way to give back all the spinach I have eaten from my mother's table I certainly would do it right now. (Could someone find me a porkbarrel?)

to kill me. No, after further thought, I'm sure that is far from being true. But don't think I haven't been pondering this, lately. She had plenty of evidence to incite this kind of attitude toward me, I assure you.

Of course, there is always the idea that my mother knew this and was simply trying

My mother used everything she could think of to get me to eat my spinach. She used intimidation, arguments and a good old-fashioned thrashing. None of it seemed to make her spinach taste any better.

One of the arguments my mother used to get me to eat spinach was good ole Popeye. "Popeye eats spinach," my mother would taunt me. "Look at all of the things he does because of eating spinach."

Of course, from my observation, Popeye only ate spinach when he was in extreme trouble and his life was being threatened. I tried to have an agreement with my mother that I would eat spinach every time my life was threatened. Then she threatened my life.

Her arguments continued. "Certainly you want to be like Popeye, don't you?" my mother pleaded. To which I responded, "Yes, and he smokes a pipe too. Can I smoke a pipe?" I did not think it fair for my mother to make me eat spinach and then not allow me to smoke a pipe.

If you choose one the other comes too. At the time, my mother was not too amused with my argument concerning Popeye's pipe. I tried explaining that Popeye's use of spinach was only occasionally but his use of the pipe was continuously. This argument had no effect upon my mother, but it did cause severe pain in my left ear as she led me by my ear back to the table to finish my spinach

At the time, my mother had a one-track mind, which led to a plate of spinach. I, on the other hand, had a one-track mind, which led as far away from that plate of spinach as possible. Nothing would do but clean up my plate of spinach. Only one mind could win, and it sure wasn't mine.

I listened with amusement to all this news concerning spinach this past week. Reflecting upon this incident from my past, a verse of Scripture came to my mind. "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." (James 4:17 KJV). At the time of my spinach eating frenzy, my mother thought she was doing the right thing. At the time she was, much to my consternation. It's not so much, what we do, as it is what we know. The Rev. James L. I didn't know colleague Greg Welborn had advance notice that I wouldn't have a column last week. Rather than his usual fare of conservative viewpoint, he covered for me by instead devoting his column to describing how liberals look at things. He even began his column, as I occasionally do; by commenting on recent observations by Bill Maher. (I wonder if Greg includes me in his category of "hip-left-media

In Greg's column last week, the subject was "charity". The conflict arises from differing definitions. For most of us hip-left-media types (I'm beginning to like that phrase), charity can be defined as selflessly helping out someone in need.

For far-left-ex-hippie types like me, you can take it further and relate it to the concept of "karma". One of those riddles from ancient Buddhist literature (stop me if you've heard it) goes, "How can a cupful of water be more powerful than a whole ocean?" The answer is that a cupful of water given in an act of selfless kindness to a thirsty elderly or sick person creates a karma that lasts long after the

A more contemporary story is of the guy who contributes $2,000 to his temple, then finds a misprint in the monthly bulletin where his gift is listed as only $20. He goes to complain to his Sensei, asking that a correction be printed the following month. The Sensei responds, sure – they'll be happy to do it. But his wanting to make sure he gets credit just wrecked whatever good karma he might have

The definition of "charity" for others is less nuanced. For Mitt Romney, charity is what you get a tax deduction for.

What set Greg off was Bill Maher's ridiculing of Mitt Romney's characterizing his regular donation to the Mormon Church as charitable giving. To make his point, Maher held up a picture of a storefront HIV/AIDS clinic and said, "Giving to this is charity". He followed that with a picture of a huge Mormon temple, looking like something out of Frank Capra's LOST HORIZON, on a mound of real estate that would make the Beverly Hilton seem low-rent, and said, "Giving to this is not".

Greg accuses liberals of having difficulty separating the personal from the political. I'd say it's more of a concern about separating the sort of activity warranting taxpayer subsidies from those that don't. I couldn't denigrate the value of world-wide health and literacy programs sponsored by the Mormon Church. Four years ago, the Mormon Church contributed some $8.4 million in support of Proposition 8, to overturn the California Supreme Court ruling permitting gay marriage.

Greg might argue a church is a charity, no matter how it decides to spend its money. I'd suggest it's one thing to work towards alleviating poverty in third-world countries, and another thing to establish statutory bigotry here at home.

What's most puzzling is Greg's suggestion that different racial and religious groups take care of "their own". He further suggests that without government efforts to alleviate poverty, there would be

This brings up other philosophical differences: Conservatives see an amalgamation of separate and often competing religious and ethnic groups. Liberals see America. Conservatives see government as a distant, distinct body threatening the private sector. Liberals see "We the People". Conservatives see charity as a noble gesture by our betters towards the less fortunate. Liberals see getting together to help our fellow Americans as an expression of who we are as a people - regardless of whether we can write it off on our taxes.

When it relocated to Sierra Madre Boulevard, we stopped by on a night they featured an improv comedy troupe. Then, another transformation. There was Dixieland. There were big bands. There was jazz, Western swing, Flat-Top Tom, quiz night on Tuesday and Opera on Sunday. There were the dulcet tones of V.R. MARRIAGE AS A POLITICAL STUNT GREG Welborn

President Obama's statement that he now supports gay marriage should be complimented for its honesty and abhorred for its rank manipulative timing. Everyone already knew that President Obama's true beliefs lay. After all, his Attorney General refused to defend the constitutionality of the Defense of Marriage Act. So there's some other reason for the announcement's timing, and, as with so much from this President, it has little to do with what's good for the nation and more to do with what's good for him politically.

Some political observers have floated the theory that Vice President Biden's earlier public comments were meant to force Obama's hand. Even if true, this only affirms the rank political manipulation of the move, although it does so by crediting Biden with more political chops than the President. No, it is much more likely that this came from the top. Biden's earlier comments must have been sanctioned. His were the opening salvo. More than plausible, in fact overwhelmingly probably because Team Obama, if nothing else, has shown itself to be amazingly political in its policy calculations. Gay marriage is an issue which promises to energize flagging components of his base without much damaging support among the President's black and Hispanic constituencies. Even though a large majority of blacks are morally opposed to gay marriage, interviews this week with several prominent black religious leaders made it clear that disappointment with this decision won't translate into disaffections. So on a worst case basis, Obama captures 93% instead of 2008's 94% of the black vote. The same loyalty seems to be present among Hispanics that voted for him in 2008.

It is the rest of the liberal base that needs to be rallied. The economy, the failed stimulus, the amateur mistakes and foreign policy blunders have taken a heavy toll on many traditional Democratic constituencies. This is especially true among younger voters. As bad as the economy has been for the rest of us, unemployment among young adults is about 30%. Young adults also happen to have a more uninformed view of marriage. To the extent that conservative opposition to gay marriage can be portrayed by the Obama election team and mainstream media as ignorance, bigotry and homophobia, young adult turnout in November could be reinvigorated.

Team Obama is clearly counting on the uninformed to be riled up and turned out to stand against conservative bigotry and hatred. Allow me therefore to quickly recap the importance of maintaining marriage as it has been defined by all major religions and cultures for more than 2,000 years - as if that fact alone were insufficient to warn people against tampering with so significant and foundational an

1. If love becomes the sole basis for marriage, which is the reasoning offered by gay activists, marriage will be weakened. Why shouldn't 3 people who love one another get married? Why shouldn't a brother and sister marry? If marriage between one man and one woman isn't uplifted as special, the crazy combinations we'll see will cheapen the entire institution.

2. Traditional marriage is better for children. A mother and a father each give something different to a child. There's simply no way for either to be an equal substitute for the other.

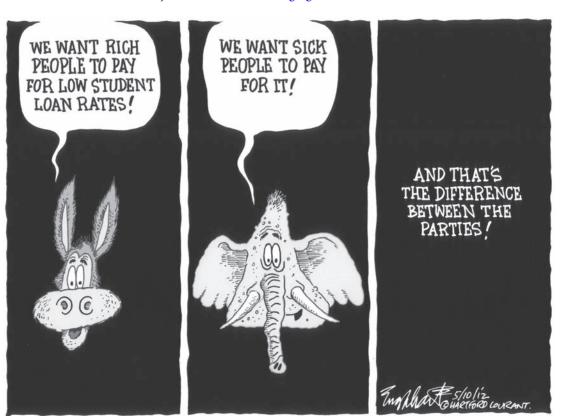

3. Traditional marriage is also better for men and women because each compliments the other, making them whole, in a way that a relationship with the same sex cannot.

4. Traditional marriage is critical for the health of society. Society is strong only when its basic building block – the family – is strong. Experience in Europe (where gay marriage is allowed) shows that more people simply choose to form a "family" based on a vague commitment to stay together. Most break apart, resulting in greater psychological dysfunction, personal unhappiness and greater poverty for women and children.

Marriage is a foundational element of society. Redefining it bears risks that threaten us all – gay and straight. Obama is to be commended for his honesty, even though it is motivated solely by his desire to stay in power. Whatever the outcome of the 2012 election, nobody can deny the significance of the choices before us.

Mother's Day: No Ifs, Ands Or Buts

By Danny Tyree

"Mom, I love you, BUT..."

I wonder how many times a day that phrase (more ominous than heartwarming) is uttered in this great land.

Certainly there is a lot to be said for putting things in perspective, softening the blow of unsolicited advice and practicing diplomacy – but in too many families the love and the "but" seem inextricably entwined, always leaving the mother feeling "buttered up" and anxiously waiting for the other shoe to drop.

I realize that many of us feel awkward about Public Displays of Affection, but it's downright sad that we also struggle with PRIVATE displays of affection. The Hand That Rocks The Cradle deserves more than occasional watered-down dollops of tenderness that have been hopelessly amalgamated with mundane considerations and petty complaints. Cards (handmade or store-bought), rose bouquets, leisurely Mother's Day brunches, spa certificates and collectible figurines are all admirable choices for acknowledging mom on Her Special Day; but what a change there would be in the national mood if just a few more of us adopted a year-round practice of spontaneous, heartfelt, no-strings-attached expressions of "I love you"!

To be sure, it is a tribute to mom if you use the wisdom she instilled in you and discern when to be firm and when to be sentimental. The "buts" may well be justified when you have hard evidence that mom's new beau is a chiseler or when you and your siblings are in consensus that the family matriarch needs assisted living.

Still, "but" should not be your default value, your "go to" reaction. Shaking your "but" doesn't have to be intimidating; it may be necessary to start out small with your attitude adjustment. Perhaps just one extra time a month, show a little deference to mom. Hold your tongue and listen when you'd really rather "lovingly" express yourself about Needing My Own Space, Finally Finding Mr. Or Ms. Right (and the warden gives such a glowing endorsement!), Waiting For Just The Right Job To Come Along Before I Get Off This Sofa or Being Able To Handle These Substances, No Problem.

Thank goodness moms -- infused with unconditional love and a spirit of sacrifice -- use the "buts" so sparingly. (I'm speaking of mothers in a fairly normal, healthy relationship here. Toxic relationships and estrangement are a topic for another day.) What a dreary place the world would be if children were told "Son, I love you, BUT that ugly crayon drawing would void the warranty on my refrigerator" or "Janie, I love you, BUT I think I can monitor your raging fever just as well from my Pilates class as by hovering over your bedside" or "I would love for you to use my wedding gown, BUT I don't know if I can trust you to pay the dry cleaning bill"!

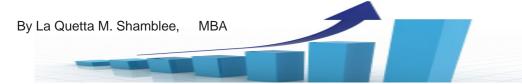

I grew up in a family where Mushy Stuff was something to make family members squirm, so I can understand the awkwardness of openness. But "I love you" needs to be more than an obligatory preface. Say it proudly, without corollaries, codicils, disclaimers or sales pitches. Embrace saying those three little words - before you find yourself apologizing, "Mom, I love you – but your cemetery plot is way on the other side of town."

MANAGEMENT TOOLS CAN HELP ELIMINATE UNWELCOMED SURPRISES by La Quetta M. Shamblee, M.B.A.

"One of the true tests of leadership is the ability to recognize a problem before it becomes an emergency."

- Arnold H. Glasgow

One of my colleagues who works in a high-growth industry was recently faced with having to layoff almost 20% of the employees in her department after being informed that the company had suffered a sizeable loss in profit during the recent quarter. Apparently everyone in the organization was caught by surprise, including the top brass. Accusations and finger pointing ensued, unfortunately with most of the fingers pointing downward from the highest levels of management. It is clear that the individuals with the biggest paychecks either didn't understand, or didn't' care about the importance of putting management information systems in place to provide the types of reports that would have provided them with information needed to monitor and measure key business activities and revenue. Unanticipated and unplanned employee layoffs were the collateral damage resulting from a lack of adequate planning and management.

I had a couple of question for my colleague, "No one saw this coming?" She responsed, "No, everyone in the office was still excited after being told that we had a strong financial performance after the previous quarter." My next question, "What does the company have in place to monitor and track its operations and flow of revenue?" Based on her response, apparently little to nothing. In an era of technology that supports "real time" feedback, it is unfathomable that any company would find itself having to lay employees off with virtually no advanced planning. In the absence of some unforeseen act of God or other catastrophe like a major customer leaving or an important vendor going out of business, it's absolutely amazing that someone wasn't aware of a decline in revenue.

More than 25 years ago, I read about the "real time" management information system (MIS) that was being used by Mrs. Fields Cookies. The data for all key business activities was integrated to the point that Debbie Fields knew the number of cookies sold, and the quantity of flour, sugar and other ingredients per store, per day, per hour. QVC and other television shopping programs have thrived with their mastery of MIS to drive the timing of exactly how many minutes a product is promoted on the air – solely based on how well it is selling. The tools of technology allow virtually any business to immediately gather data and analyze data to make timely and decisions.

M.IS quickly evolved to include peripheral tools like bar codes, scanners and other technology to make it useful for many processes. Special applications were developed for retail sales, and for the first time information from the cash register was could be linked to accounting and inventory records. Just In Time (JIT) systems for production and inventory management evolved as a best practice method for doing business. JIT is defined as a demand driven inventory system in which materials, parts and support items are delivered just when needed ("just in time"), with the objective to eliminate unnecessary product inventory from the supply chain, thus reducing expenses related to warehousing and personnel needed to stock, retrieve and secure the inventory. JIT is also referred to as the Toyota Production System, as the corporation is credited with developing and perfecting the method during the 60's and 70's to meet fast changing consumer demands for electronics and automobiles.

Human beings will inevitably make mistakes, and each mistake presents an opportunity to learn and make improvements. Some mistakes and oversights can be avoided by adopting one of the numerous MIS systems available for businesses, large and small.

"It always flows downhill," is an adage that I was first introduced to by a professor in the late 70's during my undergraduate studies in business. He shared that the root of any problem that is recurring or pervasive, is always the result of what is happening (or not) at the top level of the organization. A recent scenario shared by a colleague who works in management at a corporation with revenue in excess of $20M sheds some light on the adverse impact of poor management and leadership.

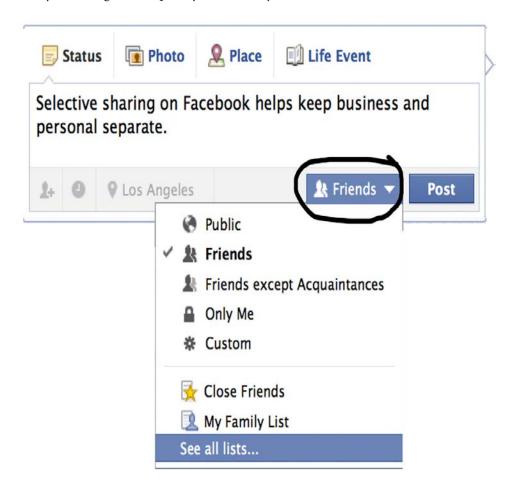

WHAT IF YOUR BEST CUSTOMER "FRIENDS" YOU ON FACEBOOK?

The number one question we get asked when we teach our Facebook class is "how do I keep my personal friends separate from my professional friends?" A big "Ah Ha" moment happens in our classroom when people realize they can do something on Facebook that they have perfected off-line... selective hearing and selective sharing.

If you're like most people, you have friends on Facebook who fall into different categories of your life: personal, business, family, knitting friend etc. If you put them into lists on Facebook, you will be able to manage your different worlds much easier.

Here's how you do it.....

- 1. Sign into to your facebook account then go to www.facebook.com/bookmarks/lists
- 2. Select "Create List" name your lists whatever you want (don't worry, only you will see the names of these lists, think of them as file folders you use to keep organized). Facebook will walk you through the steps so you can add your friends into each list.

Now you can practice selective hearing on Facebook. When you are in the news feed, you can click on one of your lists and just read the most recent new from that group of people.

And don't forget about selective sharing, this will allow you to filter your posts, photos, videos etc. and share them with certain lists. When you are writing a status update, select the "friends" link next to the "Post" button and you will be able to select the list you want to share with. (See screen shot).

The next time a customer "Friends" you, accept the invitation. Put them on the "business" list and stay connected to this important person, but on your terms.
