POLICE OFFICER ASSOCIATION CLAIM REOPENS CONTRACTING DEBATE By Susan Henderson

Sierra Madre residents who support the outsourcing of public safety services may look at the recent claim filed by the SM Police Officers Association (POA) for new ammunition.

The complaint, filed in June with the state's Public Employment Relations Board, alleges that the city, "negotiated in bad faith" when it negotiated the Terms and Conditions of Employment imposed after the city and POA failed to reach an agreement late last year.

Although the SMPD officers are employees of the city of Sierra Madre, because they are represented by a union, a separate agreement, known as a Memorandum of Understanding is the mutually agreed upon governing document. The last MOU expired in December 2011 without the city and the Police Officers Association reaching a new agreement.

When that happens, the city imposes Terms and Conditions that govern the department until such time as a new MOU is executed.

According to Michael McGill, of Lackie, Dammeier, & McGill, attorneys for the Association, the city was well aware that there was no provision for holiday pay in the governing document under which the Police are currently operating. However, City Manager Elaine Aguilar denies the allegation. Says Aguilar, "When the not file a grievance with the city, an Terms and Conditions were imposed in December, all previous MOUS were no longer valid. The city implemented the provisions that were in the new terms and conditions and the holiday provision was different than the old

At issue are the 48 hours of holiday pay per officer that the SMPD earned from December 22, 2011 through June 30, 2012. They are known as floating holidays, as officers are often assigned to work on holidays. When that happens, their holiday pay is accrued, or banked, until the officer chooses to use it. The terms and conditions imposed by the city that went into effect in December starts the 'floating holiday' accrual on July 1, 2012, rather than in December, 2011 when the MOU expired. On July 1st the officers received 104 hours of floating holiday

Further exacerbating the concerns of the officers is the fact that on January 1, 2012 when SMPD received their paychecks, the floating holiday hours accumulated were shown. The following pay period, according to SMPOA Vice Present Esther Doyle, they received a note from Personnel Director Elisa Weaver that those hours were shown in error and had been avenue available to all employees.

The date of the hearing by PERB is not known at this time. Ironically, POA and City continue negotiations on a new Memorandum of Understanding.

KENSINGTON PROJECT MOVES FORWARD

Councilman Koerber's Official Statement

After an exhaustive review of the Kensington proposal nine Planning Commission meetings and three City Council meetings – I am pleased that the city is moving forward with the November vote to approve what will undoubtedly be an asset to the Sierra Madre community.

While the proposed Kensington Project is not a perfect project, it is nonetheless a very good project.

I am particularly pleased that the project maintains the spirit of Measure V. Allowing citizens to vote on such an important project helps to ensure that the community has a say in major city changes – especially those located in the Downtown Central Core.

I'm especially pleased that private funds are being used for the Kensington – thus avoiding further burdens on Sierra Madre's budget.

I thank the applicant Fountain Square Development West, for their cooperation with the city and also for their request agreeing to put the project up for a Measure V vote.

I look forward to this important the project moving forward (pending the results of the November 6, 2012 vote), both for the important services it will bring to our community and also for the revenue it will generate for for the citySierra Madre as well.

Captain. Snyder has an extensive background in the fire service and is often called upon by other agencies in California and Arizona for his expertise in building construction and fire codes. Snyder served on the original State committee that developed the current Urban Wildland Interface Code. He is also considered "the expert" in fire sprinkler systems

Perry Goth - Captain Goth has been working with the City as a part-time Fire Engineer since October 2011. He has Greg Christmas- Captain Christmas has been employed over 12 years of fire service experience, including 4 years as a company fire officer at Atascadero State Hospital in Atascadero, California. Perry is also certified by the State of California as a Fire Marshal, and as a fire instructor in multiple subjects related to the fire industry. His instructor experience will be a huge asset to Sierra Madre as we will be able to use his expertise to provide instruction for our Firefighters. He possesses an Associate of Science degree in Fire Science and has worked for City of Santa Paula Fire Department, Riverside County Fire Department and most recently as a Fire Captain for the Department of Mental Health.

A very vocal group of Sierra Madre residents may see this latest claim as another reason to contract out public safety services as the cost of defending such actions is an additional strain on the city's budget.

Ellins, sued the city and former Police Chief Marilyn Diaz in 2009. The City won that lawsuit, however, an appeal is currently pending. (See related story on right).

The Saga Continues.....

FORMER SMPD OFFICER JOHN ELLINS LOST HIS LAWSUIT AGAINST THE CITY - APPEAL STILL PENDING

Among the actions handled by the law firm of Lackie, Dammeier, & McGill, the 'police officer's lawyers', a federal lawsuit filed in 2009 still lingers. At that time, former SMPD Officer John Ellins sued the city and SMPD Chief Marilyn Diaz alleging that Diaz did not readily sign his advanced Police Officers Standards and Training (POST) certificate in retaliation for his leadership in a vote of no confidence against her by the rank and file.

When the lawsuit was filed, Ellins was also President of the Sierra Madre Police Officers Association (from 2006 until January 2010). Ellins has, since then, left the SMPD.

According to the official court records, Diaz delayed signing his certificate because, when the documents were presented, Ellins had two internal affairs investigations against him; had recently been reprimanded by Internal Affairs after another investigation, and was also under investigation by the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office.

The two investigations that were pending resulted in suspensions. Ellins was suspended for 125 hours for "associating with a convicted narcotics offender and attempting to dissuade a Sergeant from issuing a parking ticket to this ex-convict". He was also suspended "for not citing or arresting a marijuana suspect". Ellins' earlier reprimand was for "stating to a city employee that residents who did not follow a fire evacuation plan 'deserved to die'.

The LA District Attorney's office was investigating Ellins for "allegations of selling and using anabolic steroids, assault with a deadly weapon, and sexual misconduct while on duty". No charges were filed against Ellins as a result of that investigation

When the investigations were completed and Ellins completed the suspensions were imposed upon him, Diaz eventually did sign the certificate and Ellins received the retroactive pay increase to which he was entitled.

The court ruled against Ellins and in favor of the City and Chief Diaz in January, 2011. However, Ellins immediately filed an appeal which is still pending. Ellins left the department in 2010. He was President of the POA from 2006-2010.

The City Attorney and Council discussed the appeal in closed session at the last council meeting.

Curiosity on Track for Early Landing

A maneuver Tuesday adjusted the flight path of NASA's Mars Science Laboratory spacecraft for delivering the rover Curiosity to a landing target beside a Martian mountain.

The car-size, one-ton rover is bound for arrival the evening of Aug. 5, 2012, PDT (early Aug. 6, EDT and Universal Time). The landing will mark the beginning of a two-year prime mission to investigate whether one of the most intriguing places on Mars ever offered an environment favorable for microbial life.

The latest trajectory correction maneuver, the third and smallest since the Nov. 26, 2011, launch, used four thruster firings totaling just 40 seconds. Spacecraft data and Doppler-effect changes in radio signal from the craft indicate the maneuver succeeded. As designed by engineers at NASA's Jet Laboratory, Propulsion Pasadena, Calif., the maneuver adjusts the location where the spacecraft will enter Mars' atmosphere by about 125 miles (200 kilometers) and advances the time of entry by about 70 seconds.

"This puts us closer to our entry target, so if any further maneuvers are needed, I expect them to be small," said JPL's Tomas Martin-Mur, the mission's navigation team chief. Opportunities for up to three additional trajectory correction maneuvers are scheduled during the final eight days of the flight.

The maneuver served both to correct errors in the flight path that remained after earlier correction maneuvers and to carry out a decision this month to shift the landing target about 4 miles (7 kilometers) closer to the mountain.

It altered the spacecraft's velocity by about one-tenth of a mile per hour (50 millimeters per second). The flight's first and second trajectory maneuvers correction produced velocity changes about 150 times larger on Jan. 11 and about 20 times larger on March 26.

Shifting the landing target closer to the mountain, informally named Mount Sharp, may shave months off the time needed for driving from the touchdown location to selected destinations at exposures of water-related minerals on the slope of the mountain.

Police Sign Agreement to work with Foreign Police Deparments

By Dean Lee Police Chief Phillip Sanchez signed a partnership agreement Wednesday with Assistant Secretary of State for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs (INL) William Brownfield to utilize the knowledge and expertise of active serving Pasadena police officers to train, advise and mentor foreign law enforcement personnel.

Pasadena joins 28 other U. S. cities participating in the foreign programs. Pasadena Police Sgt. Ed Calatayud spent one week, earlier this month, in Kingston, the capital and largest city of Jamaica, training officers in the use of nonlethal police tactics.

Calatayud said it was not uncommon for Jamaican police to use military tactics, including using assault rifles, during a simple traffic stop. He said Jamaica is the largest supplier of marijuana to the U.S. so police are over cautious dealing with drug cartel. He said his mission was to catalog proper equipment such as pepper spray, batons and stun guns and other equipment the INL might fund.

HONORING A FALLEN HERO: ARCADIA PD MOTOR OFFICER/ARCADIA FD ASSISTANT CHIEF, ALBERT EDWARD MATTHIES

Shortly before midnight, July 18, 1926, Officer Albert Matthies was doing patrol accompanied by his friend, Leo Bartolina. At the intersection of Foothill and Northview, Arcadia, they noticed a suspicious vehicle. When Officer Matthies walked toward the car to question them, he was shot. He later died at 12:07 AM, July 19, 1927. At the time, the three perpetrators escaped, but they were caught a few days later. They were found guilty and sentenced to jail. One died there and the other two died shortly after their release.

At the time of his death, Officer Matthies left a wife and two young daughters; Zora, who was 6, and Minnie, 4. Besides being a Motor Deputy for Arcadia Police Department, he also was Assistant Fire Chief; the two agencies were actually one at that time!

In 2007, at the 80th anniversary of his death, a special Ceremony of Remembrance was held for Officer Matthies. Last year this was done again at the site of his death. When Officer Matthies was laid to rest at Live Oak Cemetery, a simple ground level marker was put in. Members of Arcadia Police Officers Association and Arcadia Firefighters Association felt that this was not appropriate; that a better headstone/memorial was needed for Officer Matthies' ultimate sacrifice. A joint effort, begun two years ago by these two fine Associations accomplished this great feat.

Minnie is deceased, but Officer Matthies' daughter Zora Kristrukek is well and attended Thursday's ceremony. Also present were current Arcadia Police Chief Bob Guthrie, retired Police Chiefs Bob Sanderson and Neal Johnson, and many officers. The Master of Ceremonies was Arcadia Police Officer Joe Jurman, and the Honor Guard was Officer Bob Rajewski. Representing the Fire Department were Fire Chief Tony Trabbie, Deputy Chief Kurt Norwood and Battalion Chief Barry Spriggs, Honor Guard Engineer Drew Pryor, Bagpipe Player, Captain Dave Hutcheson and several firemen. From the City of Arcadia were Mayor Bob Harbicht and City Manager Dominic Lazzaretto; Jack Orswell also attended.

Arcadia Police Chaplain R.C. Reyes performed the Invocation at the beginning of the ceremony and Benediction at the end. Officer Jurman gave an account of how Officer Matthies had lost his life. The Honor Guard was on either side of the podium and then walked to the new headstone for the unveiling ceremony. It brought tears to everyone's eyes- the headstone is made of beautiful black granite with Office Matthies' picture on it. There are the insignia of both the Arcadia Police Department and Arcadia Fire Department on each side of the picture; the inscription acknowledges Matthies was a World War I Vet. The inscription at the base of the monument reads, Officer Matthies made the ultimate sacrifice in the line of duty and in service to the city of Arcadia. You will not be forgotten." Part of the ceremony included Fire Captain Hutcheson playing the bagpipes. It was beautiful.

After the ceremony, there was a reception. It was great to visit with Zora, who thought this was something "really special". She remembers her dad as a "big, happy man." I also spent time with Zora's daughter, Roxana Perez, and granddaughter, Sheryl Straub. Roxana was "very impressed with the memorial and ceremony...it was

For over sixty years, Zora has lived in the same house in Duarte, not two blocks from my home! I mentioned an old friend, Joan Peck, who was confined to a wheelchair, but took two buses to work in Santa Fe Springs! Zora and her family knew exactly whom I meant, and wondered how she was. I explained that she is well, but at the Country Villa in Arcadia! It is a small world.

I cannot say enough for the Arcadia Police Officers Association and Arcadia Firefighters Association to plan such a special tribute. Sheryl, Officer Matthies' great-granddaughter was so overwhelmed at the beautiful ceremony and headstone, and couldn't wait till all family members could see it.

The best way to learn about wild plants is to see them first-hand, in the field, with an expert. Recent WILD FOOD COOK-Never eat a wild plant that you haven't positively identified, and remember that there are no shortcuts.

So what wild foods are available in our yards and fields?

Recently, during our Wild Food walks, we have been collecting the following for their salads and cooked dishes: Curly dock, watercress, lamb's quarter, mustard, wild radish, nettle, nasturtium, and mallow. Soon we'll be collecting purslane. Most of these can be prepared raw or cooked, and many are now finding their way into local farmers markets.

One of my favorite wild foods is the fruit of the carob tree. There EGG DISH are tens of thousands of carob trees in the Southland, and the ripe brown fruits can be simply wiped clean and eaten. This is the perfect survival food. It is rich in calcium and B vitamins, it tastes good, you don't have to cook it, and it lasts for years.

Remembering a friend:

LILLIE B. JEFFERSON September 13, 1931 - July 2, 2012

By Joan Schmidt

Lillie Bell Jefferson was born in Hollinsville, Oklahoma on September 13, 1931 to Hardie and Leora Lee. Lillie was the second eldest daughter of eleven children; she attended grammar school in Duarte and graduated from MAD (Monrovia-Arcadia-Duarte) High School.

Lillie married L.J. Jefferson in 1958, and they were blessed with one daughter, Jennice and two sons, Rodney and Curtis.

Lillie accepted Christ at an early age and was an active member of the First Baptist Church of Duarte, where she was an usher for over thirty years and participated in Bible Study and Woman's Fellowship. She was an active bowler until 2000. After retirement from Rain Bird, she continued working at Adam's Rite for ten years and then did adult caregiving until her passing.

Lillie's deep faith sustained her. Lillie was preceded in death by her parents, Hardie Sr. and Leora, as well as two brothers, Wafford and Hardie, Jr., and two sister, Cora and Rosie. Also her son Curtis preceded her in death, which is very hard for a parent. But Lillie had a loving supportive attitude and could change the atmosphere with her humor and giving nature towards family and friends.

Her service ("Home going Celebration") was beautiful. Minister Leslie Monroe offered a Prayer of Comfort, reminding us that Lillie had gone home to Heaven, followed by Minister Richard Spicer's Scripture Reading. Yolanda Crocker reminded us that "Sister Lillie made me my birthday cake every year", and gave a moving rendition of Because He Lives. One of Lillie's granddaughters, Monique Jefferson, read a poem that she had written for her grandmother, and it brought tears to many people. There also was a solo by Delores Sanders and Elder Bradford Graves gave the Eulogy/Gospel Message, which was very comforting. His message reminded us that God is waiting for us and has a place for us. Final Closing Prayer was by Pastor Ronnie Herrell.

When someone's life is being celebrated, and there is standing room only, that speaks volumes of the person. So many came out to send this special lady home. I sat with Duarte School Board Member Ken Bell and his wife. School Board President Reyna Diaz and Council Member Margaret Finlay also attended. From Monrovia, I noticed Mayor Mary Ann Lutz and former Mayor Bob Bartlett. Also Terrence Williams from the Monrovia-Arcadia-Duarte Town Council.

When it was time for people to come up and speak of Lillie, two neighbors did. They said when their elderly mother was ill, Lillie was at their home, every day, from 6AM- 6PM. There was mention of Rodney Jefferson, whom EVERYONE in Duarte knows-he is the High School Coach. Rodney also does the special basketball camp for youths during the summer. Rodney is such a great mentor and this is what he learned from his mom.

What a beautiful tribute to a beautiful lady, a life well spent serving Jesus and others. Everyone left the service thankful that they had Lillie had been a part of their lives.

ROVER "CURIOSITY" TO LAND ON MARS AUG. 5

NASA's most advanced planetary rover is on a precise course for an early August landing beside a Martian mountain to begin two years of unprecedented scientific detective work. However, getting the Curiosity rover to the surface of Mars will not be easy.

Curiosity is scheduled to land at 10:31 p.m. Pacific Daylight

Time on Sunday, Aug. 5.

To achieve the precision needed for landing safely inside Gale Crater, the spacecraft will fly like a wing in Mars' upper atmosphere instead of dropping like a rock. To land the 1-ton rover, an airbag method used on previous Mars rovers will not work. Mission engineers at JPL designed a "sky crane" method for the final several seconds of the flight. A backpack with retro-rockets controlling descent speed will lower the rover on three nylon cords just before touchdown.

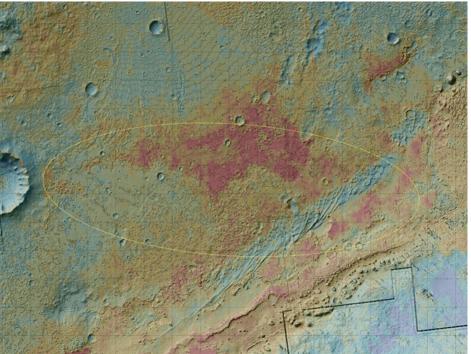

During a critical period lasting only seven minutes, the Mars Science Laboratory spacecraft carrying Curiosity must decelerate from about 13,200 mph to allow the rover to land on the surface at about 1.7 mph.

Curiosity will use tools on a robotic arm to deliver samples from Martian rocks and soils into laboratory instruments inside the rover that can reveal chemical and mineral composition. A laser instrument will use its beam to induce a spark on a target and read the spark's spectrum of light to identify chemical elements in the target.

Other instruments on the car-sized rover will examine the surrounding environment from a distance or by direct touch with the arm. The rover will check for the basic chemical ingredients for life and for evidence about energy available for life. It also will assess factors that could be hazardous for life, such as the radiation environment.

The chosen landing site is beside a mountain informally called Mount Sharp. The mission's prime destination lies on the slope of the mountain. Driving there from the landing site may take many months.

Paul Miller, a Technology writer for "The Verge" (http://www.theverge.com) will attempt to live without the Internet for a year. He began his project on May 1st of this year and is now going into the 4th month of his endeavor. In the pursuit of this goal he has ruled out using the Internet in any manner whatsoever. He may not use it at work or at home. He may not ask anyone to use it for him or look over their shoulder as they use it for themselves. He may not use email or any web-enabled software, including games and video-streaming applications. Although Text Messaging uses the SMS (Short Message Service) protocol to send messages over a telephone network to text-enabled end devices, Mr. Miller feels as if texting is too close to web browsing and is has been ruled out as well. In order to keep up current events and keep in touch with friends and family Mr. Miller will make use of basic telephones (Internet-free), the Post Office, television, newspapers and magazines. A lot like the state of communications in pre-Internet 1993.

He has continued to write for The Verge during his time off the Internet but he's unable to see his work after it has been posted or respond to comments on his articles.

Mr. Miller also writes about some of the effects that his Internet-free lifestyle is beginning to have on his life in general. So far he's noticed that his handwriting has gotten better and that he talks to people more often in his daily life. He's become more aware of the frequency in which he gets lonely. While his friends contact each other frequently in cyberspace, Mr. Miller's contacts are confined to face-to-face contacts in meatspace and as such he sometimes doesn't get to seem them as often as he would like.

And since the Internet is a place of non-stop action and stimulation he's found that he cares less for things that can be easily "Googled" and can be definitely categorized as minutia.

While the author may have many reasons for undertaking this journey, his entries at his column (http://www.theverge.com/paulmiller/offline) gives us direct insight into how much the technology we use on a daily basis changes how we relate to each other and the world around us.

KATIE TseThis and That

FIBER LAND!

I had a great time in Long Beach last week. You might've been there, too, but I'm pretty sure we wouldn't have seen each other. That's because my parents and I were at the Handweaver's Guild of America's International Fiber Convergence! Every two years all the fiber nuts from around the country unite to buy, sell, and learn about the latest innovations in prehistoric technology.

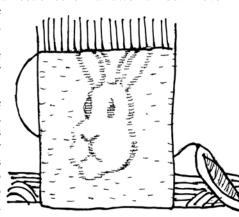

Have you ever stared at the fabric of your sleeve and marveled at the complexity of woven cloth? Perhaps not. But there are people who are passionate about fiber in all its forms and applications! (I figured "passion" sounds more positive than "obsession.")

Most hobbyists do one or two things in their field of interest. Bikers bike, and sometimes branch off into mountain biking and riding marathons. Painters paint in oil or acrylic, and might do a mural or go into watercolors. But weaving is just one of the passageways into the world of fiber nuts. (I say "nuts" with the most respect; similar to people who are "health

Fiber is like a drug in the way in which it affects people who are susceptible to addiction. Some people can just crochet something and walk away. But for others, a knitted sweater is merely the brink of a plunge into weaving and a host of other handwork. You'll never know whether or not you're one of theses people until you try it! These people say things like, "It all started when I joined a knitting group. Then before I knew it, I had bought a couple of sheep for the back yard and now I spin their wool each year."

Just like how it takes a village to raise a child, it takes a host of experts to raise a weaver. Teachers at my mom's weaving class have become household names for us. My mom has spent many an hour watching DVDs of Madelyn van der Hoogt explaining how to warp a loom from front to back, and back to front. And everyone knows John Novak from Solvang. His shop, Village Spin & Weave, is the staple supplier of all things fiber this side of the Mississippi.

In Fiber Land, you acquire a whole new vocabulary for spinning (not what you do at the gym), carding (not what you do during the holidays), and dyeing (with colors, not embalming fluid). Weaving practically has its own language! You shoot shuttles through the shed. I never can remember which is the castle and which is the temple. And I still get the treadles and headles mixed up. You can imagine being in a convention hall filled with people speaking "fiberese."

Another interesting observation at the Convergence was the number of men there. And I'm not talking about husbands and boyfriends wearily trailing behind women, pausing now and then to hold a purse while the lady feels every different type of alpaca wool. No! These guys are sitting at carpet looms --weaving carpets. A couple of burly guys were camped out at spinning wheels. Their speed and accuracy indicated this wasn't their first try at it. Weaving also appeals to men because looms are mechanical in nature.

And like a drug, fiber arts offer an immensely soothing escape from the stress of everyday life. The repetitive motion echoes the rhythmic beating of your heart. Making thread and fabric is such a basic, earthy craft. You feel somehow connected to the ancients who were doing the same thing all around the world. It's fascinating to imagine that before the spinning wheel was invented in the 15th century, people were using hand held drop spindles to make thread. Ships with sails would have been nonexistent without a bunch of folks spinning single threads at a time!

Although the Convergence went on for a week, we felt fulfilled after just one day. On our way out my mom spotted Madelyn van der Hoogt talking with some shoppers at a booth. "That's Madelyn van der Hoogt!" she whispered to my dad. (My parents couldn't pick Lady Gaga out of a lineup, but Madelyn van der Hoogt is iconic.) "Want me to take your picture with her?" I asked. "No, no." my mom laughed. We started toward the exit, but then my mom turned around toward Madelyn's booth. "We can go back," I said. "It's now or never!" My mom chuckled, "No, that's okay." So we left without a picture of my mom next to her fiber heroine. Since the Convergence only happens every other year and travels all around the country, my mom probably won't get another opportunity like that. But at least she can say that she was in the same room as Madelyn van der Hoogt. And that makes the drive down there all worth it!

TO BEE OR NOT TO BEE?

OK, Sierra Madre, it's that time of year again! You know, the time of year to enjoy the great outdoors, working in the garden and finding comfort in hearing the buzz of busy bees flying about from one flower to another, doing what comes natural; helping nature take its course! With so many fragrant flowers, a wide variety of blooming plants and blossoming trees covering our yards and hillsides, it seems everything alive is answering to the sun's beckon with a plethora of plumage, making the local bees as happy as can be!

I learned to appreciate the important, integral part that bees play in the basic balance of nature at a very early age. I remember my dad bringing home golden jars of fresh honey from a local beekeeper in Huntsville, AL where I grew up, and I still have a vivid memory of how good it tasted on my breakfast toast! When he brought home the honey, my dad made a point of reminding me how much effort it took for the bee to produce, and encouraged me to appreciate it for that reason. Now, as an adult living in Southern California, I enjoy watching bees buzzing about in my community, knowing they are helping sustain a healthy balance in nature and facilitate the growth of delicious edibles such as honey, fruit and nuts that would not be available to me without the hard work of the bee.

Being the bee lover that I am, I was naturally drawn-in by the headline of an article I saw in the California section of the Sunday, July 15 issue of the LA Times, about a young couple totally sold-out on urban beekeeping in Los Angeles. HoneyLove, a 501(c)3 non-profit organization founded by 2 big-time bee lovers, is on a major mission to promote the freedom of urban beekeeping in Los Angeles. A few incorporated cities in the LA urban area have opened up to the idea of residential beekeeping, but most have maintained a sense of rigid resistance, enforcing a 200 ft. perimeter between human dwellings. Well, if you leave it up to Rob and Chelsea McFarland, the founders of HoneyLove, that fact will soon change!

Honey bees are important pollinators for commercial crops in California and most of America in general. Although they are not indigenous to our continent, they succeeded in establishing themselves as a part of our ecosystem and we have grown quite dependent on their presence for crop propagation. "Pre-honey bee" pollination in America was carried out by other hard-working vectors such as the bumble bee, the beetle, the butterfly and the moth. The honey bee with which we are familiar was first brought to America's east coast in 1622, and made its way to the west coast around 1853. The immigrants who brought the European honey bee to America also introduced a number of European plant species for the intentional purpose of continuing the harmonious relationship between the two, and facilitating the growth of green pastures and a variety of foods for livestock and human alike.

In the 1980's, the European honey bee in America found itself somewhat challenged by a 'new bee on the block', that was brought over that fresh honey tasted on my toast as a kid!

from Africa. The African honey bee is more socially aggressive, making it a challenge for the docile European bee, which tends to focus more on producing honey than fighting off the enemy. Regardless of their differences, both types of honey bees have succeeded in surviving and thriving here in the US for many decades, and we humans have most certainly benefited from their presence.

I caught up with Chelsea at HoneyLove this past week, hoping to learn more about what drives their mission to legalize beekeeping in LA. Their organization spends a lot of time educating the public about bees and sharing their views on urban beekeeping as well as other down-to-earth techniques for healthy living that I found quite refreshing. Look them up on line at honeylove. org. Even if you are not a huge bee enthusiast, I think you will be impressed with what you find on their website.

After talking to Chelsea, I felt inspired to learn even more about the bees in LA, and began wondering about my own feelings as to whether it makes sense to encourage backyard beekeeping in our local community. I was curious as to whether Sierra Madre had any ordinances in place for or against bee keeping, and I found out that our town does allow backyard beekeeping, limited to the same 200 ft. perimeter range that many other towns in LA set forth.

Next, I came across a website for Orange County Beekeepers Association, and I called the phone number they show for contact. I was able to talk to Amy, the president of the organization. Amy has been involved with the bee community and studied bee culture in Southern California for many years and has volunteered enormous amounts of time and energy to the cause. She owns a bee removal and rescue business in Costa Mesa called Bee Detectives (949) 922-6986. Amy explained how the bee population became what it is today in California, and offered several other resources for information on the subject, including the name of a bee expert, Dr. Eric Mussen, Professor of Entomology at UC Davis. Dr. Mussen was kind enough to take the time to share his thoughts on urban beekeeping, and gave me insight on lots of other facts about bees that truly fascinated me. He has dedicated his life to the scientific study of insects, with a special interest in bees, so he has more knowledge than most on the subject. By the time I finished talking to Chelsea, Amy and Dr. Mussen, I thought my head would split wide open with information overload on bees in California!

Ultimately, after reviewing the facts and hearing various thoughts on urban beekeeping, I was able to decide that it seems to me to be a perfectly natural activity to take part in, if you go about it in the right way. Dr. Mussen made it clear that in his opinion, it is best to work with European honey bees versus African bees for the urban backyard. Mainly because the European bees are better honey-producers and are much more docile and less likely to attack if aggravated, than the Africanized bee. He also emphasized the importance of maintaining at least two or more healthy colonies at any given time, because a single colony stands a higher risk of dying out. Now that I feel like I have graduated from my self-immersed course on urban beekeeping, I am thinking maybe someday I might take up the hobby myself, even if just to remember how good that fresh honey tasted on my toast as a kid!

HABITAT'S A BRUSH WITH KINDNESS PROGRAM Needy Homeowners Receive Critical Safety and Exterior Improvements

Habitat for Humanity International, with affiliated chapters around the world, has built more than 500,000 homes, sheltering ow income families worldwide, according to the organization's website, www.Habitat.org

In their mission to provide decent, safe and affordable housing to qualified applicants, with a "hand up, not a hand out", the organization coordinates the efforts of volunteers from churches community groups, corporations and individuals.

In recent years, Habitat's efforts have expanded into smaller scale projects geared toward homeowners in need. After spawning in the Twin Cities area of Minnesota then spreading nationwide, "A Brush with Kindness (ABWK) is an exterior home preservation service that offers painting, landscaping, weather stripping and minor repair services for homeowners in need. ABWK helps low-income homeowners impacted by age, disability and family circumstances, who struggle to maintain the exterior of their homes, reclaim their homes with pride and dignity," according to Habitat's website, serving "as a companion to local affiliates' core building services, enabling them to serve more families and increase opportunities for volunteers and sponsors."

Since 2010, the San Gabriel Valley Habitat for Humanity has completed "urgent to critical home repairs for twenty local homes within their service area, from Atwater Village to Duarte, El Monte to Altadena" according to Sonja Yates, Executive Director. "We're finding this often appeals to seniors and veterans who are on limited or fixed incomes, often covering just food, utilities and doctor bills."

"Keeping up a property you own is a real challenge for people in that circumstance," continued Yates. Some of the areas the San Gabriel Habitat has addressed in their local projects have been safety accommodations like wheelchair ramps and correcting dangerous, uneven driveways, removing dry rot from wood components of homes, replacing windows for increased energy efficiency and security, and we've even done some roofing projects."

"In our first ABWK, we partnered with Temple City in 2010, the community's 50th anniversary. The city could have allocated dollars to have a big celebratory party, but instead used the available funds for a project with lasting community value. Wasn't that cool?"" reflected Yates.

"Mayor Pro Tem, Cynthia Sternquist, was a driving force in this first effort, helping to raise funds, taking applications from needy homeowners, and much more. I have great admiration for this responsible leader," said Yates.

Happy homeowner in Temple City, after project completed. Courtesy of SGV Habitat for Humanity

Courtesy of SGV Habitat for Humanity

One of the most poignant and heartwarming success stories was the very first project in Temple City. "The lady had recently lost her husband" remembered Yates. "When attempting to do some things in the house on her own, she broke both ankles trying to do it herself. She was just thrilled to have us come in with a qualified crew to add safety railings. The front porch had none at all."

As with any project, it is sometimes a challenge to fit all of the deferred maintenance or safety projects into the budget, which most times is capped at $10,000, but "$10,000 is better than nothing," according to Yates, "and we work out a mutually acceptable project and get to work."

Habitat provides qualified construction supervision for its volunteers, and then trains the volunteers in the specific task to which they are assigned.

"In this economy, this program has been a great opportunity for corporations to give a smaller donation, even $2-5,000 and be able to attach their logo on partnership signs, coordinate corporate teams or individual volunteers to help with a short term project," said Yates." It is a wonderful corporate team building process for coworkers?

Individual volunteers are always welcome, too. "Once the sign goes up for a project," we get signup calls from neighbors or people just show up," smiled Yates. In Atwater Village, a nearby homeowner was enthusiastic about the experience, saying she had always wanted to be involved with Habitat, and was especially please to help his own neighbor in need as well as improve his own community. This year the group has a goal to do ten "Kindness" projects in their service area. Though the usual budget is $10,000 per project, a $60,000 grant from Home Depot, targeted specifically for Veterans in need, will allow the group to increase the project budget to $15,000 for qualifying Veterans who are in

In all Habitat projects, according to the Habitat website, "a no-interest loan is made to the homeowner to cover the cost of the project. Payments made by the homeowners are placed in a revolving fund to help A Brush with Kindness serve others in need." A lien is placed on the property, which is due only if the property is refinanced or sold, according to Yates.

Perhaps the most recognized Habitat for Humanity volunteer, former President Jimmy Carter became involved with Habitat for Humanity nearly three decades ago. In addition to fundraising, Carter involves himself with the actual building process in the annual Jimmy Carter Work Project "blitz build." Yates called for volunteers from all walks of life to partner with them on Habitat's projects such as ABWK. "At the end of the day, our volunteers are VERY tired, but the reward is priceless. Volunteering may be a life changing experience."

To learn about applying for a Brush with Kindness Project, purchasing a Habitat home, volunteer or donation opportunities, contact San Gabriel Valley Habitat for Humanity at 626-387-6899 or visit their website at http://www.SGVHabitat.org

The organization also operates two ReStores, offering 8,000 square feet of donated new and used building materials including hardware, doors, windows, lighting, appliances, sinks, furniture, etc., priced at least 30% below retail. The stores are located at 400 S. Irwindale Avenue in Azusa, and at 770 N. Fair Oaks Avenue in Pasadena. They welcome donations in kind from both private and corporate

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE

Many homeowners are still facing mortgage default, and while the best bet is to contact your lender directly, there are tempting advertisements out there for companies that claim they can solve your financial crisis. Fraud is rampant, so look out for the following warning signs.

First, don't believe the hype when you hear, "We'll stop the auction!" or, "Debt eliminated, guaranteed!" If it sounds too good to be true, it is!

You should be suspicious of any company that tries to gain your trust by imitating a government agency. They may (illegally) publish government logos and names, or even copy the look of an official website, so pay attention to the details.

Back out of any deal that requires you to pay any fees upfront. There is no need to pay anyone to modify your mortgage terms, because your lender, and only your lender, can do that.

Most importantly, do not make mortgage payments to anyone but your lender. If a person or company presents you with an official looking statement that indicates payments should now be made to them, don't walk - run for the door, and call the Better Business Bureau.

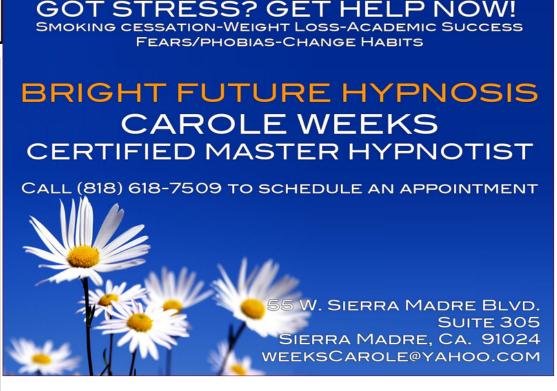

By working directly with your lender, you may be able to modify your loan terms, or agree to a pay-off through a "short sale" listing. Please heed this advice from an experienced professional.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

Review By Sean Kayden

MILO GREENE

For fans of Mumford & Sons and Of Monsters and Men comes Milo Greene, a five-piece outfit that doesn't have a single member named Milo Greene in the band. These Southern California natives trekked to a cabin located in the Sierra Nevada Mountains to record their luminous debut self-titled record. Influenced by 70s soft rock and contemporary indie pop, Milo Greene exhibits a deep catharsis while never mimicking those that have inspired them. The thirteen tracks, albeit reasonably short in duration, is an incredibly easy listening undertaking. Despite their inexperience, Milo Greene exemplifies a pastoral and rustic style that has them sounding like hardened veterans rather than unproven rookies.

Four out of the five members of the band share vocal duties, which leads to a completely uncommon scenario for the listener. The most notably voice is from the single female in the band, Marlana Sheetz. However, no matter who's providing the primary singing, they all satisfy without hesitation. Milo Greene skillfully developed a record that's filled with beautiful harmonies, hints of folk and bluegrass. It never appears overblown while everything feels simple, but divinely elaborate. Lyrically, it's a rudimentary presentation, but the songs still feel poignant juxtaposed with the flourishing background music. While many tunes offer a similar tone, there really aren't any surprises if you listen to the record in sequence order. Therefore, every song feels like a substantial piece to something much greater. With titles such as "What's The Matter," "Don't Give Up On Me," and "Cutty Love" and lyrics to boot, it's difficult to ignore the comprehensive theme of vanished love and irrevocable heartbreak. However, the record goes even further as it is incessantly alarmed by the disappearance of youth.

There are four tracks that play out like intermission tracks. It's as if they break the album into separate parts demonstrating different themes between each interlude-resembling track. Technically, you're left with nine tradition songs that are more or less superb. The closing track is definitely the weakest link here. It's more barebones, heavy on vocals, light on instrumental arrangement. As the album ends, you wish you were sent off with something a little more prevailing. In spite of that, Milo Greene has easily produced a sparkling and bittersweet album that is connected to not only their generation, but also previous ones. They may be young and time will only tell what they may ultimately become as a unit. For now, it's difficult to deny their strong presence in the increasingly growing arena of indie rock.

UNDERSTANDING REVERSE MORTGAGES

Dear Savvy Senior:

Where can I get reliable, unbiased information on reverse mortgages? My wife and I are thinking about getting one but want to do some research first.

Need Money

Dear Need:

For seniors that are house rich but cash poor, a reverse mortgage is a viable option, but there's a lot to know and consider to be sure it's a good choice for you. Here are some tips and tools to help you research this complex financial product.

Let's start with a quick review. A reverse mortgage is a loan that lets older homeowners convert part of the equity in their home into cash that doesn't have to be paid back as long as they live there.

To be eligible you must be age 62 or older, own your home (or owe only a small balance) and currently be living there.

You can receive the cash either as a lump sum, a line of credit, regular monthly checks or a combination of these. And with a reverse mortgage, you, not the bank, own the house, so you're still responsible for property taxes, insurance and repairs.

Currently, 99 percent of all reverse mortgages offered today are Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (HECM), which are backed by the Federal Housing Administration.

Repayment is due when you or the last borrower dies, sells the place or lives elsewhere for 12 months. Then you or your heirs will have to pay off the loan (which includes the money you borrowed plus accrued interest and fees) either with the proceeds from selling the place, or if you want to keep the house, with money from another source.

Educational Resources

To get a better handle on reverse mortgages and how they work, there are several excellent resources you can turn to for reliable information, but you're going to need access to the Internet utilize them.

To get started, the National Council on Aging recently created a free new website called the Home Equity Advisor that's designed to help you think through the best way to leverage your home – a reverse mortgage isn't your only option.

Just go to homeequityadvisor.org and click on their "Quick Check" tool which will ask you a series of questions about your personal and household situation to define exactly what you might need or want. Then, based on your answers, you'll receive an individualized report offering information, tools, and consumer advice on a range of possible solutions that includes reverse mortgages and other alternatives.

If you find that you are a good candidate for a reverse mortgage, your next stop is at reversemortgage.org, a new consumer website created by the National Reverse Mortgage Lenders

This site offers lots of educational information including "Your Road Map" which will help guide you through all the features of reverse mortgages and the process of obtaining one.

It also has a calculator to estimate how much you'd be eligible to receive from a reverse mortgage, and offers has a comprehensive directory of licensed HUD-approved mortgage lenders, banks, and credit unions that offer reverse mortgage loans in your state.

Another important resource to help you understand the pros and cons of a reverse mortgage and how it would work in your particular situation is through counseling.

In fact, because reverse mortgages are such complicated products, the federal government requires that all reverse mortgage borrowers receive counseling through a HUD approved independent counseling agency before they take out a HECM loan.

Counseling can be done in person or over the phone and some agencies today provide it for free or at a minimal fee. Some locations charge around $125. To locate counseling agencies in your area, visit hud.gov/offices/hsg/sfh/hecm/hecmhome.cfm or call 800-569-4287.

HEALTH & FITNESS THE JOY OF YOGA

HOW WE GROW SPIRITUALLY:

The yoga code of ethics

How do we engage in the world and not get caught up in the drama? How do we not become entangled? Everyday, all day, there are dramas trying to lure us in. There are friends that are a living drama, clients that are a living drama, media news that is a big ol drama. We can buy into drama and before you know it – our whole day is gone, worse yet, years of our lives. As yogis on the spiritual path, we must constantly remember to NOT buy into the drama. Oooo it's so hard! Not to hear the gossip? Not to gossip ourselves? To purposefully choose what comes out of our mouths is a discipline. To choose not to be a slave to drama is one of the most challenging yet rewarding choices you can ever make.

For the yogi, spirit and nature are not separate. When we practice yoga we are discovering our true nature. We are discovering our soul. We start with the physical body, because that's what we can first identify with. It's our doorway in. Then we discover our own evolution. When we want to progress from there we must take a look at our moral and ethical awareness. The yoga tradition has a code of ethics. As we evolve this becomes more and more important.

We cannot evolve spiritually without an ethical framework. To become self -realized in classical yoga, as in the Yoga Sutras of Patanjali, there are 5 yamas or principles of self -restraint. Nonviolence (ahimsa), truthfulness (satya), non-stealing (asteya), self -control/fidelity (brahmacharya) and non-

In future articles we will explore these concepts in greater detail. In the meantime keep on the mat, cultivating deeper awareness within. Namasté, René

DOES YOUR ACTIVITY TRANSLATE INTO PRODUCTIVITY?

Measurable outcomes are the only true measurements of whether all of your activity is resulting in anything meaningful. Far too many business owners and managers awake throughout the workweek to tackle a Matterhorn of tasks, and at the end of each workday they find themselves asking, "What did I really accomplish?" They scurry about from meeting to meeting in between reviewing and responding to numerous phone calls, e-mails, texts and Twitters. Our misuse of the current communications technology is contributing to a mound of unfinished projects that contribute to a pattern of dysfunction that we incorrectly regard

Reflect on the following questions to determine if you're truly productive, or simply very

What are the three major goals that you indicated (in writing) at the beginning of the 1) prior three month period?

Did you achieve at least one key milestone toward each of the goals?

- If you had to pay someone else for what you accomplished during this time period, how would you rate their performance? (Note: This is not a score for your level of "activity" in your efforts to achieve the goal, rather a score of the final outcome from your personal efforts)
- 4) Do you have more than three important goals or key tasks that remain as unfinished items after more than 30 days?

If you function in the same manner for the next 30 days, as you have done in the past 30 days, do you anticipate that you will be satisfied with your progress?

Of course, these five items are not the end-all-be-all for the questions helpful to help you focus on what is important. However, an honest response to each of the questions will help you determine if productivity might be increased by finding a different approach to how you work, and most importantly, the tasks to which you apply your time and energy on a routine

Productivity is not measured by the number of hours worked, e-mails answered or meetings attended. Tangible or measurable results, based on pre-established goals and objectives are the true indicators of whether you're truly making strides or creating a dust cloud of activity, which serves to cloud the reality that you're simply engaging in a web of self-created, overlapping activities. Improving your productivity is a matter of identifying and planning for specific goals. You cannot adequately measure your progress or attainment of a goal that you have not identified in advance.

...Intuit, the maker of QuickBooks, offers several options for payroll. As an employer, you have specific payroll responsibilities that are required by government agencies. These agencies can be federal, state, or local. Some of these responsibilities include, but are not limited to, withholding amounts from your employees' compensation to cover income tax, social security, Medicare, and other payments. Reporting and depositing payroll taxes to the appropriate agency in an accurate and timely manner is vital to your business. Late or inaccurate deposits may result in penalties and interest charges. These complex payroll tax requirements may seem intimidating but by learning a few simple concepts, you will be able to understand your payroll responsibilities and choose the best method for meeting them.

Intuit Online Payroll is a perfect companion for QuickBooks online because it does not require the actual purchase of QuickBooks because it allows "Anytime, Anywhere Access". The Desktop payroll versions include Intuit QuickBooks Payroll Enhanced for Accountants and Intuit QuickBooks Payroll Enhanced. These two payroll options require the purchase of QuickBooks software and allow integration between the programs. This includes employee Direct Deposit and updated financial statements. Intuit Assisted Payroll and Intuit Full Service Payroll include several important functions of payroll (reporting and electronic filing) provided directly by Intuit. You can bet that Intuit will be ready come January 1st to implement all Federal and State tax changes.

THE PEOPLE FACTOR

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, 40 percent of all American workers will be self-employed by 2019. Working for yourself and starting your own business seems to be the trend.

I've been self-employed for 15 years and I love helping others who want to have their own business too. We meet a lot of people at our social media education seminars that are starting a business and leaving a corporate job (by choice or by pink slip). They often ask how we've managed to stay in business. The answer boils down to one thing...people and the relationships we've built along the

Today's on-line tools make it possible to stay connected with all kinds of people. If you look at social media tools as a way to stay in touch with people who are important to your business, it makes Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn and Pinterest easier to digest.

Think about connecting with people you've worked with in the past who know your skills and your work ethic. I'm not saying you have to invite them all to Thanksgiving, just add them as a "friend" or "connection" and let them know you are still there!

I've often received messages on Facebook from people I worked with in the past who want to refer business. I once received a message from someone I went to school with 30 years ago who needed some business

RICH Johnson KIDS & WHAT THEY SAY

When it comes to funny anecdotes regarding ones' own children, I am a rich man. Particularly when it comes to my daughter. She will remain nameless in this article because if she gets a whiff I am writing about her, my life will truly be in jeopardy. That being said, there were a couple occasions in her early years where her comments were priceless and memorable.

When she was four (and her brother six) the two of them decided to experiment with a pair of scissors. Unfortunately for my daughter, the experiment involved the scissors and her hair. She sacrificed her beautiful bangs to the pursuit of knowledge, not realizing they wouldn't suddenly reappear at the end of the experiment. Apprised of the tragedy on the way home from work, I prepared to somehow "fix" the situation. And there she was, waiting for me at the garage with a look of true grief. I shouted out to her how much I liked her new hair do (you know, now with a good chunk of it gone). She instantly perked up, smiled and said, "Yes, I wanted my hair to look just like Daddy's". Grrrrrr.

When my daughter (who shall continue to remain nameless) was 3, her favorite stuffed animal was an orangutan. She referred to this fuzzy, cuddly orange primate as her husband, possibly because he slept right next to her every night. One early morning my daughter was storming around the house with a particularly sour expression on her face. I asked her,"What was the matter.": She replied, "I can't find my stupid husband."

As cultural icon Art Linkletter once said on television, and in a book or two, "Kids Say the Darndest Things." Here are some more you might enjoy:

REACHING OUT

Recently I had the privilege of visiting my deceased friend's grandchild. My forty year old son and I happened to be in the neighborhood and called and went for a quick visit. The baby's father had been among my closest friends for over sixty years and had lived with my son, daughter and I for a couple of months. Right before his brain tumor was diagnosed he was staying with my wife and me. In fact it was my wife who first suggested that he see a doctor to try and understand his loss of balance and forgetfulness. Anyway, now he,s gone and I'm not really close with the baby's mother and it's sort of strange to go over and visit a ten month old. I wouldn't have gone alone but my son wanted

The mother is a business woman, filled with responsibilities and worries. The child we knew had been ill a few times. She asked us to take off our shoes, wash our hands, nd not breathe into the baby's face. She even added that the baby was not really comfortable with men and that it was probably best that we not expect to hold him. That was fine with me as I probably had gone over thirty years without holding a baby and felt no real need to end that streak. Maybe it would be better if we hadn't

We sat down and the three of us beganto chat as she held the baby. She tells ua that she still thinks of her dad every day and shows us a picture of him at the baby's age and they look identical. I began to feel a bit more comfortable and I noticed how much the mother looks like she did when she did when she was ten years ago and all at once I noticed that my son was holding the baby The baby and my son looked very happy together and the baby sees me looking and begins to stare right into my eyes. He has eyes just like his father's and he reaches out to me and now I'm holding him. He's jumping up and down in my lap. What powerful legs he has. He's laughing and I'm laughing. There's a wonderful connection and before we leave the mom asks my son and I to act sort of like surrogate grandparents. We say we will and are intending to be at the baby's birthday next month.

I'm telling you this story as I think of another baby. Another perfect baby named James Holmes. This baby grew to be a privileged, gifted, successful honor student working toward a PhD in a very difficult scientific field. We all now know the unimaginable horror story of this young man senselessly killing or wounding almost seventy people. Among the most frightening parts of the story is when his mother, a mental-health nurse herself, was contacted and told that her son had committed this horrific act she was told

"We're not sure we got theright man."

"You've got the right man," she said.

To me that response by the mother meant that she had feared some sort of catastrophe for a long time. I believe she suffered and tried to close her eyes to what was happening. She probably felt isolated and powerless. After all, her brilliant son was a thousand miles away living in some honor doem. What could she do?

For that matter what could her son do as he felt his life coming apart. We are told that he was dropping out of the program without getting the degree that he had worked toward all his life. I imagine him, like many highly gifted people, to be fairly isolated and without confidants. Alone he fantasized about doing some extreme act that would leave his mark upon the world.

In writing about this monstrous act it seems appropriate to speak about gun control legislation and increased mental health outreach. Perhaps periodic psychological evaluations should become an integral part of graduate programs. I am not opposed to such potentially helpful changes but I think they will be of only limited assistance. The real problem is that modern societies have failed in their major responsibility to raise and nuture the perfect babies born to them. Instead of reaching out supportively raising children in tribes we have allowed, and even encouraged these vulnerable young people to go out on their own. As the kids face inevitable, but still unexpected, disappointments, they have no one to lean on. Adults, fearing being inappropriate, are removed and distant. In this increasingly over-populated world we all seem to be more and more alone.

I hope by reaching out to my old friend's grandson, my son and I might just be doing a little something to hold this world together; meanwhile other kinds of needed reorganization can take place. Anyway it will be really nice to go to the party.

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

ALL I EVER WANTED TO DO WAS GO FISHING

another birthday, which got me to thinking about the "good old days." You can usually tell how old a person is by how many times they refer to the "good old days," or the phrase, "when I was a youngster."

I have come to the conclusion that getting old is not something to be ashamed of in the least. A person reaches a certain age simply because they have not died yet, which is nothing to make a person feel

Although I do not think too much of birthdays, I intend to have as many as possible. Don't get me wrong. I am ready to go when my time is up, but, in the meantime, I am going to enjoy life.

My recent birthday got me thinking about the "good old days" of my youth. Memory is a funny thing. For the most part, we remember the good of our youth and rarely the bad. I often hear some old geezer say, "I wish I were 16 again." If their memory was serving them correctly, 16 was not a very good year for any of us. I am glad I have gotten beyond my 16th birthday. As I remember it, it was a terrible year.

I can honestly say that the best years of my life are the ones I am living now.

Sure, I have some regrets. I have done things I probably should not have done, and I did not do some things I probably should have. If I had to live my life over again not only will I make the same mistakes but also I probably would add to the list quite significantly. I do not want to live my life over again. Once is enough for me, thank you.

But as I was thinking of those "good old days," I could not help but think what I was thinking about back then. It went something like this.

When I was in school sitting in Ms. Ammon's class, I was daydreaming about going fishing. All I could think about was what kind of fish were biting out by the lake this afternoon. Ms. Ammon would call upon me and I would have no idea what she was talking about. In my mind, I was fishing. In my body, I was suffering under classititis. It is what students, especially boys, get when they are bored with the class they are in at the time. It involves a lot of jittering.

would ask. "I hope you weren't fishing, now, were you?"

One thing about good ole Ms. Ammon, she could read a boy's mind like a book. Maybe because there are so many blank

I just celebrated pages in a young boy's mind.

I would suffer through counting down the hours and minutes and seconds until the school day would end.

You did not hear it from me, and this is not a confession, but on those rare occasions when I would skip school and go fishing, I had another problem. I was where I wanted to be, doing what I wanted to do, but then as I threw out the line waiting for a bite all I could think of was what was happening back in school I was missing. I often wondered if Ms. Ammon was missing me.

I would smile and then the fish would bite and my attention would be on the task at hand.

It was not long before my mind would wander back to the classroom. What were they doing? What was I missing? For the life of me, I cannot understand why, but I could never enjoy fishing and when I was playing hooky from school for thinking about what I was missing back in school.

One of the advantages of getting older is developing a sense of maturity. Don't ask me to define maturity, because I am not quite sure what it really means. As a person matures, he begins to learn how to enjoy the moment. This, I say, comes with age. A lot of age in some instances. By the time you learn to enjoy the moment, it is

I have come a long way from good ole Ms. Ammon's classroom. I will not tell you how many years it has been, let's just say a lot. I still find myself doing the same

I am in the middle of doing one thing and I begin thinking of what I could be doing. I could be home reading a book. Then when I go home and begin reading, I think about what I could be doing in the

I have tried to take a day off for many years. I just cannot seem to manage it. I take a day off and think of what I really could be doing if I was working. When I am working, I think of how much fun I could have if I was taking the day off.

I hope to live long enough to be able to bring these two opposites together in some magnificent activity. I have not got there yet. I am aspiring, to be sure.

"Where was your mind?" Ms. Ammon David was right. "This is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it" (Psalms 118:24 KJV).

> The only thing I need to do today is to rejoice in the goodness of the Lord.

Mountain Views News Saturday July 28, 2012

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"We offer our sympathies, we mourn, we shrug our shoulders – and that's it. We don't do anything. We don't hold our elected leaders accountable for the decisions they make that allow someone to walk in and buy a military weapon and put a hundred rounds in it . . . and blast it off in a movie theater . . . Something is going to change . . . when the American people get outraged, because it's not going to come from elected leaders who are in the pockets of the NRA – it's going to come from a lot of pissed-off Americans." - Colin Goddard, survivor (shot four times) of the Virginia Tech massacre

"This is really not a time to be talking about the politics associated with what happened in Aurora." - Mitt Romney

Maybe Mitt's right. After all, here in my normal spot in the pages of the MVN last week, Susan already addressed the subject, with a moving account of the death of her father at the hands of a deranged individual who managed to have a gun. She listed other mass shootings of the past few months which, for whatever reason, failed to garner the headlines of the "Dark Knight Rises" incident.

(She left out the more mundane statistics of an average 230 people being wounded, with 87 dying, from gun violence in our country – the equivalent of seven Aurora Cinema massacres – every day.)

I could respond to Greg Welborn's mentioning Romney's management of the 2002 Olympics in Salt Lake City in his column last week, by reminding that Romney approached that task like his buddies on Wall Street approach theirs – by relying on government bailouts ($410 million from the federal government for those Olympics).

I can't let the opportunity go by, though, without commenting on a fact I was most struck by: that the entire arsenal acquired by James Holmes – two Glock 40 cal. pistols, shotgun, body armor, 6,000 rounds of ammo, AR-15 assault rifle modified with 100-round clip – was acquired legally. This was thanks to the lobbying organization working to block any attempt to inconvenience psychos, gang-bangers, would-be terrorists and street thugs seeking lethal firepower - the National Rifle Association.

The NRA is not an organization for gun owners, but for the arms industry – those who see the Aurora massacre not as a tragedy, but as an opportunity to stoke fears that can spike gun sales. MidwayUSA, Barrett Firearms Manufacturing and Brownells, Inc. are among major manufacturers of military-style assault weapons and/or high-capacity magazines that have executives on the NRA board – raising a quarter-billion dollars a year to buy Congress and state legislatures.

One such high-capacity magazine used by Holmes at the Aurora Cinema jammed, preventing the carnage from becoming even greater. That magazine, along with the AR-15, was outlawed under the 1994 Assault Weapons Ban, which was allowed to expire in 2004 under an NRA-controlled Republican Congress. Those who'd defend an employer's control over a woman's reproductive choices, and restrict whom an individual can marry, will characterize availability of 100-round magazines as a "basic freedom", as did Sen. Ron Johnson (R-WI) on Fox News.

In a Salon article, Alan Berlow, who describes the NRA as "the nation's de facto lobby for street criminals, criminal gun dealers and an industry that reaps a sizable percentage of its income from criminal gun use", quotes a Pittsburgh police detective as saying the group "takes every chance it gets to stymie even reasonable efforts to combat gun violence."

In 2003, the NRA pushed through legislation banning the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms from requiring dealers to conduct periodic inventories to detect lost or stolen firearms. It also required that records of Brady background checks be destroyed within 24 hours – despite the FBI warning Congress that such a requirement would allow 97% of criminal gun buyers to get away with it.

In the wake of the Rep. Gabrielle Giffords (D-AZ) shooting, NYC Mayor Michael Bloomberg sent undercover agents out to gun stores, and found 25% of the dealers had no problem selling weapons to someone saying flat-out they were an illegal straw purchaser who couldn't pass a background check on their own. At gun shows, they were able to buy from 94% of licensed dealers. Thanks to the NRA.

Being on the FBI's Terrorist Watch List can prevent you from boarding a plane, but not from purchasing an assault rifle. Legislation to grant the U.S. Attorney General "authority to stop the sale of guns or explosives to terrorists" was killed by the NRA. The NRA fought against closing the "gun show loophole", allowing buyers to arm themselves without a background check. The NRA fought to overturn local ordinances requiring the reporting of lost or stolen firearms. The NRA fought efforts to encourage the sharing of criminal and mental health records among government agencies to make it harder for crooks and crazies to get guns.

All the above measures, according to Republican pollster Frank Luntz, enjoy clear majority support among NRA members. But the NRA has other concerns – like working to make it easier for felons to have their gun rights restored.

The L.A. Times ran an article about the reluctance to name the Aurora, Colorado shooter – so as not to give him publicity. As I see it, it's time we name names and give publicity to those in Washington and Sacramento whoring out their offices to the NRA.

Despite the outrage from "a lot of pissed-off Americans", Colorado State Sen. John Morse (D) warns we're up against those who'd defend the availability of AR-15s and high-capacity magazines by rationalizing periodic massacres as some kind of trade-off; "The NRA has managed to convince the country that this has to happen to protect our Second Amendment rights . . . As long as we let people buy these guns, we will bury our children."

THE AURORA SHOOTING TRAGEDY GREG Welborn

It is truly saddening to see how the mainstream media turns every tragedy into a talking point for the left's political world view and in support of their desire to exert more and more control over our lives. So it's not surprising that the alleged shooter, whose name will not be mentioned lest he derive some satisfaction from the publicity, hadn't even made his first court appearance before a media talking head told us that A) he was a member of the Tea Party, and B) stricter gun control laws would have prevented this. We all know now that the press was wrong on the first part, but the press is still spinning the second part, so let's consider some real world facts about gun ownership.

Gun control advocates point to the fact that Colorado is a concealed-carry state so therefore, in their view, had guns been banned, this tragedy would have been prevented. I wish there were more sophistication to their argument, but there's not. But the facts in this case, as in so many others, clearly support the opposite conclusion. More guns in a society usually means there will be less crime.

Yes, Colorado is a concealed-carry state, meaning that citizens can carry a gun and may actually conceal it. This doesn't mean, however, that all locations in the state allow guns. Private homeowners and private business owners are allowed to dictate what happens on their property. In the case of the Aurora theatre, where the killings occurred, the theatre company has a strict "gun-free zone" policy. No weapons are allowed in the theatre. As a result, law abiding citizens checked their guns before entering the theatre, but clearly the shooter did not. Thus, the gun-free zone became a target rich environment for the gunmen, and a little slice of hell for those who gave up their weapons.

It is not a coincidence that the shooter chose such a location to perpetrate this evil. Most killers are pretty practical and realistic about their choice of location. We may want to argue that there's something "wrong" with a person that wants to commit mass murder, but that's different than saying the person is not rationale. Being evil, immoral or angry is not the same as being irrational. This gunmen, like so many others, was in fact very rational. He wore bullet proof armor and chose a location where his victims were unarmed. Even if he desired to martyr himself, he clearly wanted to live as long as possible in order to kill as many as possible. The fact that the shooter didn't go unprotected into a gun club to do his killing is proof of the deterrent affect of gun ownership.

The Aurora shooter chose the place where victims couldn't fight back, where their right to protect themselves had been compromised. Had anyone else in that theatre been allowed to take their gun into the theatre, this tragedy would have been largely avoided. If there is blood on anyone's hands, it's not the Tea Party, but it is on those people who insist that victims be unarmed.

Consider some other examples of how gun possession has actually helped protect innocent lives. In April of this year, another shooter went into a church, in Aurora Colorado of all things, and shot the mother of one of the pastors. But that's all the killing he was able to do. A congregant, who was carrying his gun, killed this shooter before more innocent lives were taken. In late 1997, a lone shooter went to a Pearl Mississippi high school and started indiscriminantly shooting. Two people died, but more would have died had the assistant principal not retrieved his gun from his car and shot the shooter. A similar situation occurred at a law school in Virginia where two law students used their weapons to stop a shooter on their campus.

Unfortunately, we also have plenty of examples on the other side. Virginia Tech was a "gunfree" zone. Ironically, a Virginia Tech student, who had a permit to carry a weapon, was disciplined in 2006 for having his gun on campus and violating this rule. Less than a year later, thanks to the diligent enforcement of this gun-free zone policy, nobody was able to shoot back when a crazed gunman shot 32 people to death on that campus.

These are only a few of the examples evidencing what a mountain of studies have proven conclusively: gun control laws not only fail to control guns, but they also increase the rate of violent crimes. For those who really want to dig into the data, I highly recommend John Lott's book, "More Guns, Less Crime". Professor Lott painstakingly lays out the wealth of data which clearly shows that when potential victims are allowed to arm themselves (the criminals already have arms), violent crime rates go down. The greater the number of potential victims who are potential gun owners, the lower will be the number of victims. All things considered, most criminals want to live long lives, or at least long enough to kill more people. They choose their sites carefully where the odds of them being challenged and stopped are low.

If we really want to stop tragedies like Aurora or Columbine from happening again, we need to disabuse ourselves of the folly of believing that it's possible to create a gun free zone. In fact, it would be more honest to simply call them victim zones. As study, after study, after study has shown, the safest place to be is actually the place where more good guys have guns than bad guys have guns.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF FREDERICK S. ALFARO

Case No. BP134773

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FREDERICK S. ALFARO A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Pamella

Thomas in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Pamella Thomas be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on August 16, 2012 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 11 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk
