VECTOR CONTROL WARNS OF INCREASED MOSQUITO DANGER DUE TO HEAT AND HUMIDITY

San Gabriel Valley Vector Control officials warn that ongoing high temperatures and excessive humidity are ideal conditions for both rapid mosquito reproduction and the diseases they can transmit. Los Angeles County is home to nearly 15 different mosquito species capable of transmitting many pathogens including West Nile (WNV), St. Louis encephalitis (SLE), western equine encephalomyelitis (WEE) viruses, and malaria. The recent introduction of the invasive Asian tiger mosquito expands that list to include more than 20 other possible pathogens such as dengue and chikungunya viruses. Hotter, humid conditions allow both mosquitoes and the pathogens they transmit to reproduce and spread

West Nile virus (WNV) is being actively transmitted by mosquitoes (primarily Culex spp.) in both the San Gabriel and San Fernando Valleys. With hotter temperatures, the virus is able to replicate faster in mosquitoes and can be transmitted to humans by infected mosquitoes when they bite. Mosquitoes typically develop from egg to adult in 7 to 10 days. Higher temperatures and increased humidity allow mosquitoes to complete this cycle in as few as 5 days. Since each female mosquito can lay 200-300 eggs at a time in standing water, mosquito populations will explode if breeding continues unabated.

The introduced Asian tiger mosquito (Aedes albopictus) prefers humid climates typically found in the southern and eastern United States. Public Health officials worry that the monsoon-like conditions which are becoming more common each summer in the Los Angeles Basin will provide adequate humidity for this mosquito to thrive here as well.

A study released by UCLA's Department of Atmospheric and Oceanic Sciences, Mid-Century Warming in the Los Angeles Region, predicts the San Fernando and San Gabriel Valleys will see warmer temperatures overall, and the number of extreme hot days are projected to nearly quadruple by midcentury. Around the world, numerous studies have shown that climate change has extended both the range of vector populations and the scope of vector-borne disease risks.

District's Manager Kenn Fujioka states, "We are extremely concerned about the changing tide in vector control today. Serious outbreaks of WNV occur annually in Los Angeles County, and the prevalence of Asian tiger mosquitoes opens the door for emerging vector-borne diseases to arrive on our doorstep." Home to one of the busiest airports in the world, new vectorborne diseases can be introduced simply with the arrival of an infected

While the risks are truly global, the solutions are local. Mosquitoes thrive in urban areas because of the plethora of standing water humans provide. Additionally, many of the viruses they transmit are amplified in urban birds (crows, sparrows, and finches) that are present in large numbers because of plentiful food, nesting areas, and water available to them. This magnified vector-host combination increases the risk that vector-borne diseases will be transmitted in densely populated urban areas – exactly contrary to common public perception. When mosquito populations are low, pathogens are unable to spread rapidly and cause epidemics. Mosquito and vector control districts are integral in reducing these risks but are limited by relatively small staffs, fiscal and regulatory burdens, and difficulties accessing backyard breeding sites.

Urban dwellers must understand these risks and how their daily decisions may contribute to disease transmission. Vector control officials urge all residents to pay close attention to these recommendations:

- · Keep outdoor areas free of accumulated belongings. Rain and sprinklers fill depressions, crevices, and containers and allow mosquitoes to
- Remove saucers and trays from under potted plants. Mosquitoes thrive even in small amounts of water.
- Buckets used to water plants and root plant cuttings must be emptied completely and refilled at least twiceweekly, treated with larval pesticides, or stocked with mosquito-eating fish. Rain barrels/cisterns must be kept properly sealed and screened at all
- Keep all pools, ponds, and fountains clean and in working order. Immature mosquitoes feed on algae and bacteria in standing water.
- · Prevent water from running off property and into gutters. Gutters and underground drainages provide ideal conditions for mosquito survival. Water collecting in swales must infiltrate within 96 hours.
- Regularly clean and check yard drains and rain gutters to ensure water flows as designed. Leaves and grass clippings routinely clog drains allowing water to puddle and breed mosquitoes.
- · Avoid the use of birdfeeders and keep trash cans sealed tightly to prevent augmenting unnaturally high populations of virus-prone bird species (crows, sparrows, finches) which are key players in the WNV cycle.
- · Plant natives/drought tolerant vegetation to reduce water use and unintended runoff. Native plants will provide natural food sources for native birds and pollinating insect.
- Avoid mosquito bites by applying repellents when outdoors and keeping doors and windows properly screened to keep mosquitoes out. Strong outdoor fans and citronella candles may reduce mosquito activity during outdoor gatherings. Electron-
- ic/ultrasonic devices are not effective. • Travelers to tropical/subtropical areas where mosquito-transmitted disease is active should check with medical professionals about pre-travel vaccinations/medications and actively use repellents to prevent bites. Seek prompt medical attention if illness develops within two weeks of

We live in a global society and face new public health challenges related to a warming environment and rapid international travel and commerce. Protecting public health is everyone's responsibility.

The San Gabriel Valley Mosquito & Vector Control District is a public health agency dedicated to the control of mosquito and other vector-borne diseases. The District can be reached at 626-814-9466 or on the web at www.sgvmosquito.org.

TRANSFORMATIONS

The Art of Hendricks & Katz

Opening Reception

Friday, September 7, 2012, 7-9pm Show Continues through October 24

"Transformations" a new show featuring the work of Lynn Hendricks and Penny Katz, will open Friday, September 7 at Creative Arts Group in Sierra Madre. All are welcome at the opening reception which will be held from 7-9 p.m. Refreshments will be available.

Hendricks, a ceramicist and sculptor, adds function to her realistic creatures as they rest, protect or discover the vessel with which they interact. Her passion for textures is enhanced by the use of stains, oxides and transparent glazes which enhance not only her nature-inspired totems but the large ceramic shards that depict scenes salvaged from contemporary or ancient frescoes. Hendricks has received local and international awards for her altered thrown vessels and sculptures, and created a commissioned series for the Western Heritage Museum. Collectors of her work include those in the United States as well as China, Japan, France and Italy.

Katz' line of eco-chic, earth-friendly jewelry is made from at least 90% re-purposed vintage and antique jewelry parts. Katz has travelled the world extensively and uses vintage materials from a wide variety of locations, from a flea market on High Street in London to the Özark Mountains of Arkansas. Her kiln-fired enamel jewelry is entirely hand-worked and fired more than 8-12 times. No two pieces will ever be the same. Many of the kiln-fired pieces are on vintage recycled copper or sterling with recycled chains and trim. Katz also creates jewelry using semi-precious gems and unusual cuts of natural stones that are worked on sterling silver, copper or anodized metal wire.

Creative Arts Group is proud to feature these two talented and well-known artists. The show will run through October 26. Creative Arts Group is located at 108 N. Baldwin Ave. in Sierra Madre. For more information, you can contact the gallery at (626) 355-8350.

At approximately 11:25 pm, officers observed a vehicle fail to stop for the stop sign at Sierra Madre Boulevard and Lima Street. The vehicle then accelerated to a speed of 45 MPH as it travelled west. After stopping the vehicle the officers determined that the driver had been drinking and tests conducted confirmed that the driver was impaired. The driver, a 63 year old female was arrested for DUI.

Saturday August 11, 2012

The manager of an apartment complex in the 300 block Sierra Madre Boulevard discovered that an unknown suspect had forced entry into the coin boxes of the laundry machines located in the rear carport area of the complex. The investigation revealed that the coin box locks had been punched inward, damaging the box and affording access to the coins. An estimated $400.00 in quarters was missing. As the manager only checks the machines periodically, the crime could have occurred over a five week period.

At approximately 3 am, officers observed a vehicle fail to stop for the stop sign at Baldwin Avenue and Orange Grove Avenue. After stopping the vehicle the officers determined that the driver had been drinking and was unable to successfully complete the field sobriety tests. The driver, a 33 year old male, was arrested for DUI.

Mars Rover Team Hears From President Obama

President Barack Obama told the flight control team for NASA's Curiosity Mars rover, "You made us all proud."

Obama telephoned the mission control room at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, to congratulate JPL Director Charles Elachi and the Mars Science Laboratory team operating the rover, which landed on Mars a week ago.

"What you've accomplished embodies the American spirit," the president said. "Our expectation is that Curiosity is going to be telling us things we did not know before and laying the groundwork for an even more audacious undertaking in the future, and that's a human mission to Mars."

Obama said Curiosity's landing advances his goals improving education in science, technology, engineering and mathematics. technology, "This is the kind of thing that inspires kids across the country," he said. "They're telling their moms and dads they want to be part of a Mars mission, maybe even the first person to walk on Mars."

Elachi thanked Obama for the call and added, "Hopefully we inspire some of the millions of young people who were watching the landing."

Obama noted, "You guys should be remarkably proud. Really what makes us best as a species is this curiosity we have -- this yearning to discover and know more and push the boundaries of knowledge."

The rover team has completed three of the four days of activities needed for transitioning Curiosity's two main computers to a version of software suited for the rover's work on the surface of Mars. The surface work will include driving and using tools on a robotic arm. During landing, and the first few days after landing, the spacecraft's computers used a version of flight software loaded with landing-day capabilities that no longer are needed.

"After the software transition, we go back to preparing the rover to be fully functional for surface operations," Curiosity mission manager Art Thompson said. "We are looking forward to a first drive in about a week." The first short drive will be part of a few weeks of initial checkouts and observations to assess equipment on the rover and characteristics of the landing

City council takes stand officially votes against proposed routes for the 710 Freeway

Extension.

By Dean Lee Just days after the Pasadena city council voted unanimously opposing any tunnel, surface, or highway routes for the proposed 710 Freeway Extension, the State Auditor blasted Caltrans, in a report released Thursday, for Its Poor management of State owned properties associated with the extension.

The report claims The California Department of Transportation passed up approximately $22 million in rental income between July 1, 2007, and December 31 by failing to charge rents at the market rate for 404 properties. It also states that the department spent $22.5 million to repair the properties although only collected net rental income of $12.8 million.

"It spent an average of $6.4 million per year on repairs to these properties, but could not demonstrate that repairs for 18 of the 30 projects we reviewed were reasonable or necessary."

Caltrans has also not been verifying income eligibility annually for certain low-income tenants as required costing the State more than $940,000 per year the report states.

Metro and Foothill Transit to Offer Students Transit Passes

Pasadena City College, the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro), and Foothill Transit have partnered to offer lowcost public transportation passes to PCC students. The Institution Pass Card (I-TAP) allows full-time students enrolled in at least 12 units to ride the Metro buses and rail lines and Foothill Transit for $30 this semester. A one-time $5 card fee will be assessed to first-time buyers of the I-TAP. Students can visit Student Business Services (Room B203) to purchase the passes.

To ensure the studentsupported program's success, PCC will also be providing shuttle service to the Metro Gold Line in Pasadena to encourage students to use transit.

The I-TAP is valid on Metro buses and Metro Rail lines and Foothill Transit seven days a week starting at the beginning of the fall semester. Students can use the transit access passes for all other transportation needs, including work, shopping, or recreation. Because they are saving transportation costs, students may be encouraged to take additional college units and can invest the free travel time transit affords them to study or rest. Students will need a current PCC identification card as well as a copy of their class schedule to purchase the I-TAP.

For additional information on the I-TAP, call (213) 922-2811. For transit trip planning assistance over the phone, call 1-800-COMMUTE or metro.net.

A REMARKABLE RETIREMENT FOR A REMARKABLE MAN: CHIEF NEAL TYLER

Recently, Chief Neal Tyler retired from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department after a remarkable thirty-seven years. He began as a Reservist in 1974-1975. A graduate of Academy Class 173 in 1975, Neal's custody assignment was the Inmate Reception Center from 1975-1979, then Lennox Station from 1979-1981. After promotion to Sergeant, assignments include Men's Central Jail (1981-2), Lennox Station (1982-4), and the Sheriff's Information Bureau (1984-6). In 1986, Neal promoted to Lieutenant, back to Lennox Station (1986-7), Temple Station (1987-90), the Advanced Training Bureau (1990-2), and the PSTD (1992-5). After a promotion to Captain in 1995, Neal's went to Advanced Training Bureau (1995-6), Special Projects (1997-8) and Temple Station from 1998-2000. (As Temple Station Commander, Neal was "Police Chief" to its five cities: Bradbury, Duarte, Rosemead, South El Monte, and Temple City, and overseer of the unincorporated Monrovia-Arcadia Duarte, East Pasadena and South San Gabriel areas! Neal never slackened in his command, and was very involved in ALL areas. He supported the Town Council and attended our special functions. In the City of Duarte, he learned the "special dance" as they competed for All-American City. In 2001, Neal promoted to Commander of Region I, a position he held until 2002, when he promoted to Chief of Region I, which he has held until his retirement.

Neal Tyler, Bob Osbourne and Mike Grossman

I have traced the remarkable career of a unique man loved by many. 250+ coworkers and friends came to honor retiring Chief Neal Tyler!

At the main table were our Sheriff Lee Baca and Los Angeles County Fire Chief Daryl Osby, who spoke highly of Neal and how the two agencies work so well together in many situations. Undersheriff Paul Tanaka, and Assistant Sheriffs Marv Cavanaugh and Cecil Rhambo also joined them.

Sheriff Lee Baca said, "Neal Tyler is an interesting guy with a neat way of looking at life...

he is gracious, decent and a true professional."
Undersheriff Paul Tanaka said, "Thank you from all the people of L.A. County. You have been a great Chief and I will miss you."

Assistant Sheriff Marv Cavanaugh met Neal, "The most decent human being I have ever met who taught me a lot," as a sergeant at Central Jail in 1981. Mark Estrella, Director, Department of Public Works, spoke of the 2004 Station Fire and working with Chief Tyler, from whom he learned a lot. The big surprise was Orange County's Sheriff Sandy Hutchens and Undersheriff Jack Scott. (Both are retirees of L.A. County Sheriff's Department!) Sandy related that when she was a sergeant assigned to Temple Station, Neal was the Watch Commander and her mentor from whom she learned so much, and she was so grateful to him. Council Members Margaret Clark of Rosemead and Laura Olhasso of La Canada Flintridge also had accolades for Neal.

Retired Chiefs/Commanders were Rich and Lynda Castro, Tom Sams, Jerry Schmiedeke, and Jon Engebretsen, who drove up from San Diego! Current ones included Tim Laing, James Lopez, Michael Grossman, Roberta Abner and husband Phil, Rich Barrantes, (Master of Ceremony) with wife Nora and daughter Deanna, Alex Yim, Bill McSweeney, David Betkey, Jacques La Berge, Gary Jones, Dan Finkelstein, and Ray Leyva. Captain Dave Silversparre & wife Kristen from Crescenta Valley, Captain Bobby Denham and Lt. Paul Ĉlay came from Palmdale; Captain Bob Jonson from Lancaster, and Captain John Benedict from Altadena. Old Temple Station friends were Lt. Bob Wiard, Lt. Brain Moriguchi, Mike Rafter, Arlene Gray, Chris Reed and Joshua Thai. Director/Educational Services Richard Weintraub and COPS Director Natalie Salazar with hubby Danny Di Pace also attended. And there were many more! Family members included his two brothers, sisters-in-law and their families, his cousin and stepmom, Pauline . For me, the highlight of the evening was meeting Teri and Gabe Astorga.

What if you had to evacuate?

By Christoper Nyerges

During one of my Pasadena City College survival classes, a student asked me to list the items that should be carried in an evacuation bag, also known as the "bugout bag." In other words, if she had to immediately leave her home for some reason, what should her survival bag contain. Of course, this led to a big portion of that evening's discussion. "First," I responded, "what scenario are we talking about?" The student was thinking of a serious emergency where even a car wouldn't be useful, where you'd have to evacuate on foot. So my first order was to convey the fact that one would rarely choose to leave one's home where everything is familiar and where you know everyone in the neighborhood – unless you absolutely had no other choice.

'You would rarely want to choose to leave your home and randomly wander the streets after an emergency," I replied, "because you are now entering into the chaos and randomness of street mobs and possible violence." I tried to impress upon the class how dangerous it often is to wander on foot in the aftermath of a major disaster whether it be an earthquake, or the results of war, or flooding. And though the effects of nature can be devastating, the fear and chaos that will possess other people could be your greatest

OK, we established that wandering around may not be your best choice but if you have no course you must still do your choice, then what should you

Before I tried to answer that question, I asked all the students, "If there was an emergency tonight after you get home and you had to evacuate, where would you go? And why would you go there?" Most had no idea where to do, and in all probability, would follow crowds to some likely safe place, or would simply follow the orders of whomever happened to be giving orders.

I urged each student to obtain topographical maps of their local area and to begin to learn about their local environment. Find out where there are sources of water, reservoirs, pools, train lines, etc. In a disasimportant than your stuff. Next, I urged each student to get involved in their local Neighborhood Watch, and to do the CERT trainings, and Red Cross words, we need to realize the fact that other people in our community, and our relationships with them, is a far greater "survival tool" than merely having a pack with some knickknacks in it.

Most people would be sur-prised to learn the level of preparedness that already occurs in most cities, and within various agencies such as the Red Cross, Police and Sheriff departments, and City Hall. It is to each of our advantage to get to know what has already been planned in our own towns.

Everyone was getting the picture. Get to know your town, your geography, and get to know who's who in your town, and learn about systems that have already been established in the event of emergencies. Of

own home preparedness, but just don't do it in a vacuum. But the student persisted. She still wanted to know what to carry. So I polled the students who'd already been in my class for several weeks. What should one carry in a survival pack? Someone said a knife. Ŷes, I wrote that on the board. You should carry some sort of useful knife that you're comfortable with, like a Swiss Army knife, a Leatherman, and so on. Someone suggested that a bow and drill be carried for fire making. No, I said. We learn how to make fire with those primitive methods so we can do it when there is nothing else.

You must have fire, but keep it simple. Carry a Bic or a magter, your knowledge is far more nesium fire starter. Water. Yes, you need it, and should carry at least a quart container and a water purifier. And you need to know where to find water. And we continued this way - first aid emergency first aid. In other kit, small flash light, etc. It was more important to get people to consider their individual needs than it was for me to list things that someone else thinks are important.

Survival can be deadly serious, but it can be a very enjoyable pursuit along the way. Learn what you can little by little, but apply your knowledge as you go. That way, your skills are useful and your confidence level is increased. It is never sufficient to say "I saw that on YouTube" and think that you know what it's all

For some idea of what you might carry, look at Francisco Loaiza's blog spot, where he describes 30 essential items that he recommends to his Boy Scouts. http:// loaizas.blogspot.com/2010/03/franks-30-essential-items-for-hiking-or.html. For more ideas of what to consider in a kit, you should check out John McCann's "Build the Perfect Survival Kit," as well as

THE WORLD AROUND US

SIGNS CHANGING FAST FOR VOYAGER AT SOLAR SYSTEM EDGE

Two of three key signs of changes expected to occur at the boundary of interstellar space have changed faster than at any other time in the last seven years, according to new data from NASA's Voyager 1 spacecraft.

For the last seven years, Voyager 1 has been exploring the outer layer of the bubble of charged particles the Sun blows around itself. In one day, on July 28, data from Voyager 1's cosmic ray instrument showed the level of high-energy cosmic rays originating from outside our solar system jumped by five percent. During the last half of that same day, the level of lower-energy particles originating from inside our solar system dropped by half. However, in three days, the levels had recovered to near their previous levels.

A third key sign is the direction of the magnetic field, and scientists are eagerly analyzing the data to see whether that has, indeed, changed direction. Scientists expect that all three of these signs will have changed when Voyager 1 has crossed into interstellar space. A preliminary analysis of the latest magnetic field data is expected to be available in the next month.

"These are thrilling times for the Voyager team as we try to understand the quickening pace of changes as Voyager 1 approaches the edge of interstellar space," said Edward Stone, the Voyager project scientist based at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif. "We are certainly in a new region at the edge of the solar system where things are changing rapidly. But we are not yet able to say that Voyager 1 has entered interstellar space."

The levels of high-energy cosmic ray particles have been increasing for years, but more slowly than they are now. The last jump—of five percent—took one week in May. The levels of lower-energy particles from inside our solar system have been slowly decreasing for the last two years. Scientists expect that the lower-energy particles will drop close to zero when Voyager 1 finally crosses into interstellar space.

The increase and the decrease are sharper than we've seen before, but that's also what we said about the May data," Stone said. "The data are changing in ways that we didn't expect, but Voyager has always surprised us with new discoveries."

Voyager 1, which launched on Sept. 5, 1977, is 11 billion miles from the Sun. Voyager 2, which launched on Aug. 20, 1977, is close behind, at 9.3 billion miles from the Sun.

MEANWHILE, A LOT CLOSER TO HOME but still very far out, NASA's New Horizons spacecraft is alive and well and has gone about 2/3 of the way on its long journey to Pluto and beyond.

New Horizons was launched in January, 2006, directly into an Earth-and-solar-escape trajectory with an Earth-relative velocity of about 36,000 mph. Thus, the spacecraft left Earth at the greatest-ever launch speed for a man-made object. It flew by the orbit of Mars in April, 2006, the orbit of Jupiter in February, 2007, the orbit of Saturn in June, 2008, and the orbit of Uranus in March, 2011. Currently, it is roughly two billion miles from Earth and a billion miles from Pluto. Its estimated arrival date at the Pluto-Charon system is July 14, 2015.

DANA ANCHOR MONUMENT SUNK

A Facebook group started in late June that quickly attracted 448 members registering protests and seeking information about this summer's destruction and removal of the iconic concrete monument topped by an iron anchor in the court-yard of Dana Middle School finally got an official answer today, Tuesday, Aug. 14, from School Board President Joann Steinmeier.

In a letter from Steinmeier to Rory Bennett, the primary leader of the campaign who posted the letter on the Facebook Group she started — Friends of the Dana Middle School Anchor (Arcadia, CA) — Steinmeier said the anchor (impedes) the flow of student traffic on the newly reconfigured campus (artist rendering at right). Dana is the second of all three middle schools to undergo a major face-life as part of the quarter-billion dollar Measure I bond issue.

Steinmeier the anchor itself, which sat atop the monument, been preserved and will be showcased in a fenced area in a slightly upright position in a new, smaller courtyard outside of the new library facing First Avenue closer to the completion of overall construction. That is, pending board approval to do so.

Commenters to Steinmeier's letter on Facebook seemed only partially mollified, suggesting that the $25,000 expenditure is excessive and would not have been necessary if the monument had not been destroyed in the first place. Many feel it could have easily and respectfully been incorporated into the new courtyard design.

"Like you, we believe this to be an important symbol for the students of Dana now as in the past," Steinmeier wrote. When word and photos of the demolition of the monument emerged in mid-June, Bennett — a Dana Junior High cheerleader in 1972-73 and 1976 recipient of an Arcadia Alumni Association Scholarship – and dozens of others expressed a sense of loss as well as anger and frustration that alumni and others with an emotional stake in memories of the monument had not been alerted or consulted and that no information about the fate of the fixture was made available upon requests in July. Dozens of personal and yearbook photos dating back for decades were posted of students and groups posing in, on, and around the monument.

Steinmeier's letter was in response to Bennett's letter summarizing the concerns expressed in the Facebook group over the loss of the half-century-old monument that represented what is described as a symbol of school pride not unlike USC's Tommy Trojan or the UCLA Bruin. In addition to a favorite spot for photo ops, it also provided a physical incarnation of the rite of passage for upper class Dana Mariner students who, according to tradition, earned the right to sit on the monument during lunch break. The monument and the tradition provided a source of pride and confidence. "Friendships were forged on it, school dances were staged around it and first kisses were shared on it," Bennett wrote.

LOCAL GIRLS "CAMPED IN" AT WHITTIER COLLEGE

Home from AAUW-California's Tech Trek Science/Math Camp this summer at Whittier College are thirteen girls from local middle schools. Seated (l. to r.) are Marina Orozco and Alexis Kimes, Monrovia; Ann (Yin Yi) Chen and Wendi Segura, El Monte City Schools. Standing (l. to r.) are Brianna Chandra, Irene Wang, Frances Aguilar, and Sai Katapalli, Arcadia; Christine Choy and Candice Lau, Temple City; and Alexandria Constanzo and Frida Franco, El Monte City Schools. The Arcadia Branch of AAUW is sponsor for the local students. (Not pictured: Kimberly Rubio)

No, they don't have their college degrees yet, but thirteen local middle-school girls completed a successful week this summer on the Whittier College campus, exploring futures in science, math, and technology. Under the sponsorship of the Arcadia Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW), the thirteen girls attended Tech Trek Science/Math Camp for Girls, a summer program for eighth-grade girls. The goal of Tech Trek Camp is to help young women entering eighth grade in the fall to develop interest, excitement, and self-confidence in the fields of math and science.

Representing Arcadia were Brianna Chandra and Irene Wang from Dana Middle School, as well as Frances Aguilar and Sai Kottapalli from First Avenue Middle School. El Monte City School District was represented by Ann (Yin Yi) Chen, Gidley School; Kimberly Rubio and Wendi Segura, Potrero School; Alexandria Constanzo, Rio Hondo School; and Frida Franco, Frank M. Wright School. Santa Fe Middle School, Monrovia, sent Alexis Kimes and Marina Orozco. Christine Choy and Candice Lau were selected from Oak Avenue Intermediate School, Temple City.

These young women received a preview of college life while learning that math and science can be fun. They lived in dorms on the Whittier College campus for the week. They attended classes taught by credentialed middle-school teachers in classes emphasizing hands-on experiments. Professional women in the fields of math, science, and technology were guest presenters. Highlighting the activities were field trips to Jet Propulsion Lab, forensics labs, water reclamation plants, and other related science and technology centers. AAUW volunteers served as camp directors, nurses, and chaperones.

Students are nominated by teachers to attend the science, math, and technology camp. The local branch of AAUW that provides the funding for the students to attend makes the final selection of "campers." AAUW-Arcadia Branch is supporting this endeavor, along with contributions from community donors. Major donors this year are the Arcadia Chinese Association, the Hakka Foundation, Soroptimist of Altadena/Pasadena, the Wayne C. Clayton Foundation, and El Monte City Schools.

Tech Trek had its beginnings at Stanford University in 1998, with initial funding from the AAUW Educational Foundation. This year there were ten camps: CSU-Fresno, Sonoma State University, Stanford University (two weeks), UC-Davis, UC-Irvine, UC-San Diego, UC-Santa Barbara (two weeks), and Whittier College. Tech Trek is continuing proof that AAUW puts its mission—to support equity and education for all women and girls—into action.

MONROVIA - DUARTE

Sierra Madre-Pasadena–

PRESERVING THE HISTORIC AZTEC HOTEL

The Aztec Hotel, a Monrovia landmark on Foothill Blvd, has a long history in our City. The above drawings, captured in 1910, show the hotel as it was first presented to the community. Since then, the Aztec has had a rocky history, but always remained a beloved, sometimes controversial, building. Last week, the Historic Preservation reviewed the first phase for the restoration of the Aztec Hotel. Agenda.

The Aztec Hotel was designated Historic Landmark HL-10 on December 16, 2003. The property was also listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1978.

In April of this year, the property was purchased and the new owner has assembled a team of professionals in various disciplines to assist in the rehabilitation of the Aztec Hotel. Over the past few months, City Staff has been working with members of their team discussing process, procedures and options for the property.

By all accounts, the future of the Aztec Hotel will be challenging. There are both preservation and land use issues that the Historic Preservation Commission and Planning Commission will review and discuss and will ultimately make recommendations to the City Council on changes requiring approval. The City has identified three guiding principles that will help to focus the development of the plan for the property.

- Emphasis on the preservation and restoration of the Aztec Hotel.
- 2. Promote long-term economic viability of the property.
- Identify and permit uses that will be compatible and respectful of the neighborhood.

In May, the Historic Preservation Commission reviewed all of the components of Phase I of the plan and at that time determined which projects were classified as general repair and that would not negatively impact the historic character of the property such as the repair of the roof and which specific items require additional detailed information be submitted to them for further review and approval. The meeting on July 25 focused on those tasks which are detailed in the staff report.

The Commission discussed each item presented and also took testimony from the public. In the end, the Commission approved the majority of the request with conditions of approval which is outlined in the decision letter. In the next few weeks, there will begin to be some construction activity at the Aztec as it begins its next chapter. Stay tuned.

STATE'S ABOLISHMENT OF REDEVELOPMENT STALLS SALE AND DEVELOPMENT OF DUARTE'S NORTHWEST CORNER OF HUNTINGTON DR. AND BUENA VISTA ST.

Since January 2011 when Governor Jerry Brown first announced his plan to dissolve redevelopment agencies and the June 2011 enactment of Assembly Bill x1 26, made it official, the ability to sell Redevelopment Agency-owned property has been stymied by uncertainty by developers, lenders, even major title insurance companies.

The City of Duarte, along with more than 400 other redevelopment successor agencies in the state have been ordered to liquidate Redevelopment Agency-owned property and hand the proceeds over to the State. But a host of newly imposed legislative requirements and procedures under Assembly Bill 1484 which went into effect June 27, 2012 have further complicated the

A proposed development in the works since late 2011 to build a Five Guys Burgers and Fries on former Duarte Redevelopment Agency-owned property on the northwest corner of Huntington Dr. and Buena Vista St. is one such example. The deal has been stalled and could be delayed a year or longer because AB 1484 effectively prevents the City, as the successor agency from selling the property until it has complied with a lengthy and complex battery of requirements and procedures.

AB 1484 requires the City to first engage a CPA firm approved by the County auditorcontroller to conduct a due diligence audit. Once the audit is completed, it must then go to the Oversight Board for approval. The Oversight Board-approved audit must be filed with the State of California Department of Finance by mid-January 2013. Based on audit approval by the Department of Finance, the County auditor-controller will determine further amounts to be paid by the successor agency to the auditor-controller for distribution to the various taxing agencies. Once that process is completed the successor agency then must apply for and obtain a "finding of completion" from the Department of Finance. When the finding of completion is reviewed and approved, the successor agency can then submit a "property management plan" to the Oversight Board for approval that identifies all the properties of the former redevelopment agency and outlines the plan for disposing of each property. If approved, the property management plan is then submitted to the Department of Finance for its approval. If approved by the Department of Finance, the successor agency can sell the property in accordance with the plan but only after a further hearing and approval by the Oversight Board. The Department of Finance also has the authority to reject the property management plan if it believes the proposed disposition does not maximize the value that can be obtained from the sale of the property. So the City may go through all the required steps and still not obtain approval to sell the site for the intended use.

While all this presents great risk to a developer because they have no guarantee the property can be sold, as of now, the developer remains committed to the project and has recently provided the City with an updated site plan for the northwest corner of Huntington Dr. and Buena Vista St., as well as an updated letter of intent by Five Guys Burgers and Fries, and has conveyed the interest of three possible equity partners to fund the project.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show Movie Reviews Especially for Teens & 'Tweens

DIARY OF A WIMPY KID: Dog Days

The latest installment of the 'Diary of a Wimpy Kid' series is almost exactly like the others except for one key aspect: it actually made me laugh.

The movie begins with the Heffley family (Zachary Gordon, Devon Bostick, Steve Zahn, Rachael Harris, and Connor/Owen Fielding) going to a "fun" family swim to kick off the summer, which sounds nice, until you find out the pool is jam packed with people. The scene is filled with awkward, yet uncomfortably funny moments, like when the little Manny gets lost in the men's shower room or when Greg has to go play with him in the little kids pool and he starts peeing.

While this movie made me laugh the most, it still has flaws and a lot of them. The acting was completely atrocious and nearly unbearable which, I guess, is part of the humor. Plus, out of all the relationships in the movie, only two really worked well: Greg and Rodrick, and Greg and Holly. The rest were decent at best.

At the same time, amidst all the bad acting, this movie is downright funny. Now, that could just be because I am roughly the same age as Greg, but I heard parents laughing in the theater. Not all of the humor works, though, and in those cases, you're stuck with the characters in an awkward situation for over fifteen minutes.

Overall, I did find 'Dog Days' to be a decent movie. Most humor worked, some relationships made it, and the directing (David Bowers) was good enough. The screenplay needed a little more time put into it and the editor (Troy Takaki) could have cut some scenes shorter, but it was a good movie by kid's standards.

FISH:

1/4 cup/60ml cornstarch
1 tablespoon/15ml baking powder
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

2 eggs, beaten
Canola or peanut oil, for frying

HOMEMADE TORTILLAS:

2 cups/500ml very fine corn flour (masa harina)

1 teaspoon/5ml salt

1 onion, finely chopped 2 tablespoons/30ml distilled white vinegar

DIRECTIONS

For the avocado cream: Puree the yogurt, avocados, jalapeno, lime zest and juice, cilantro and hot sauce to taste in a food processor until smooth. Season with salt and pepper. Refrigerate until ready to use.

For the pico de gallo: Combine the oil, tomatoes, garlic, onions, bell peppers, jalapeno, lime juice and cilantro in a bowl. Season with salt and pepper. Refrigerate until ready to use.

For the fish: Combine 2 cups flour, the cornstarch, baking powder and some salt in a bowl. Quickly stir in the beer and eggs (don't worry if there are a few lumps).

Heat the oil in a deep fryer to 350 degrees F (180 degrees C).

Put the remaining 1 cup flour in a shallow dish. Dredge the fish lightly in the flour. Dip the fish in the beer batter to coat, and then fry until crisp and golden brown, about $1\ 1/2$ minutes. Drain on paper towels and season with salt and pepper.

For serving:

Spread some avocado cream on a Homemade Tortilla. Top with 3 pieces of fish and some shredded lettuce. Finish with pico de gallo and Spicy Green Chili Sauce.

Combine the flour, 1 1/2 cups water and the salt, and then knead to form the dough. Pinch off a golf-ball-size piece of dough and use your hands to flatten it into a round shape. Set the round on a piece of plastic wrap and cover with another piece of plastic. Use the back of a heavy cast-iron skillet to flatten the dough. (You can use a tortilla press if you have one.)

Transfer the tortilla to a hot, dry skillet. Cook for about 30 seconds on each side. Remove and keep warm. Repeat with the remaining dough. Preheat the oven to 450 degrees F (225 degrees C).

Put the peppers on a baking sheet. Drizzle with 2 tablespoons oil and season with salt. Roast until the skins are charred, about 30 minutes. Transfer the peppers to an airtight container and let cool (this will make them easier to peel). Peel off the skins, remove the seeds and cut the peppers into chunks.

Heat the remaining 2 tablespoons oil in a saucepan over medium-high heat. Saute the onions until fragrant, about 2 minutes. Add the roasted peppers, vinegar, coriander, garlic and sugar and cook for 1 minute. Add 2 cups (500 ml) water and lower the heat to medium-low. Cook until almost all the liquid has evaporated, about 30 minutes. Stir in the cilantro and season with salt and pepper.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

Mountain Views-News Saturday August 18, 2012

If you are a dog owner in Sierra Madre or in one of the other foothill communities, you are most likely among the many locals who've become quite concerned about how to protect their pets from harm in the heat, and keep a good healthy exercise regimen for them at the same time. We all want to do what it takes to keep our four legged furry friends cool during the summer months, but at the same time we don't want them becoming calorie-collecting canine couch potatoes due to lack of exercise. A client of mine told me about a creative and fantastically fun way she chose to beat the heat with one of her pups last weekend, and I immediately thought her story was worth

When I first moved to California in the early eighties, I lived in the Redondo & Hermosa Beach communities. I have happy memories of playing fetch in the sand, and swimming and wading through the breakers with "Lady", my dog at the time, followed by leisurely walks on the strand in the late afternoon cool ocean breezes. Back then, in the South Bay, there were a couple of areas where you could get away with having a dog on the beach, so I took full advantage of that privilege, particularly on a hot summer day. Living in the foothills now, I truly treasure those memories, because the distance and drive make going to the beach less convenient, and finding a beach that it is definitely worth the drive, if it means helping keep you and your canine cool.

Sierra Madre residents, Mike Bieber and Jennifer Cichocki, are pleased to be the proud owners of three delightful and absolutely gorgeous dogs named "Sid", "Gunner" and "Elijah". Their 3 beloved 'boys' sure got lucky when they found a home where they are treated with the utmost respect and unconditional love that they indeed deserve, and for that they are very grateful dogs. I enjoy spending time with Mike and Jennifer's dogs when they need me for walks or visits, and I consider it an honor to call them my canine companions. Some readers might remember a story I wrote in this column several months ago, about 'Sid doing the twist'. Well, while I am still very impressed with Sid's dancing talents and techniques, I recently learned this precious pointer/pit mix is an agile athlete both on and off the dance floor! In fact, as it turns out, Sid is a rather impressive paddle-boarder! That's right, Sid is one cool canine whose balancing act on a board is potentially more impressive than that of some humans you might see on the surf. And, what better way for a canine to keep it cool than by hanging out with his favorite humans, taking a dip in the refreshing ocean water and strutting his stuff in front of the other doggy dudes & dudettes at the beach?

When I heard about Jennifer & Sid's weekend water excursion in San Diego, it prompted me to look into dog-friendly water sports in hopes of sharing a few fresh will allow dogs is not as easy as it used to be. ideas on ways to help pet owners avoid However, there are still a few canine-kind the heat with their dogs while ensuring beaches out there, and when you find them that they are still getting the exercise they need. Apparently one of the most popular water sports for canines is dock diving which I find quite fascinating, but to me the most impressive canine water sport is dog surfing! I had heard about it before, and had seen a few dogs known to be skilled surfers on Animal Planet, one of which appeared on a float in this year's Tournament of Roses Parade! However, I had no idea how popular dog surfing had become until I saw a video on Youtube of an annual dog surfing event designed to benefit animal adoption and education programs, and I must say even if didn't help place animals in loving homes, I would still be in absolute awe of those darling dogs riding it in on the waves with their surfboards! Anyone who likes dogs and enjoys a good laugh should see the surfing video entitled 'Best of 2010 Helen Woodward Surf Dog Surfing Contest' posted by user: SoCalBeachesMagazine. After seeing that video, I guarantee you will want to attend the next event with your own cool canine. This year's contest will be held on September 9th from 8:00 am - 2:00 pm at Del Mar Dog Beach. For more information, visit animalcenter.org.

> There are lots of other ways to keep it cool with your canine right here at home, too. Backyard doggie pool and sprinkler parties are a great alternative for beating the heat if you are not up to taking a drive to the beach. Whichever method you choose to keep your canine cool, remember to enjoy the time you have together. Take good care of your pets, give them lots of love and respect, and I guarantee they will reciprocate in more ways than you expect!

SUMMER OF '68: THE SEASON THAT CHANGED BASEBALL— AND AMERICA—FOREVER Discussion and book signing with Tim Wendel

In conjunction with the exhibition, "Bad Moon Rising: Baseball and the Summer of '68" (currently on view through September 27, 2012 at the Burbank Central Library), the Baseball Reliquary and Burbank Public Library present a discussion and book signing with Tim Wendel, author of Summer of '68: The Season That Changed Baseball—and America—Forever, on Thursday, August 23, at 7:00 p.m., at the Burbank Central Library Auditorium, 110 N. Glenoaks Blvd., Burbank, California. Wendel will also narrate a PowerPoint presentation of images from the

Published in 2012 by Da Capo Press, Summer of '68: The Season That Changed Baseball—and America—Forever chronicles the extraordinary baseball season of 1968, played out against the backdrop of one of the most divisive years in American history, marked by national tragedy and sweeping change. In the book's preface, Wendel writes, "In 1968, the gods were angry. It's been called 'the year that rocked the world, and it rarely showed any mercy. How else to describe a single year in which Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was killed by an assassin's bullet and weeks later Robert Kennedy met the same fate? In which riots broke out in the streets in cities across the country, and millions gathered to protest the issues surrounding the Vietnam War and civil rights, often to be met with resistance and in some cases brutality. In which everything boiled over late that summer in the streets of Chicago. Thanks to television, our world in 1968 was shrink-wrapped forever. We were able to view all this on a nightly basis, with much of it cued up for instant replay. Seemingly overnight we had become Marshall McLuhan's 'global village,' and what we saw was that things everywhere were unraveling, being pulled apart at the seams, often with unbearable force." While much has been written about the impact of this traumatic year on politics, music, and culture, what has often been overlooked is the pivotal role that sports, and particularly baseball, played as both an important diversion and as a catalyst for change and healing. Wendel's book examines how ballplayers responded to the upheaval in 1968, often in surprising ways. In Detroit, for instance, the Tigers put together a World Championship season in the aftermath of one of the deadliest riots in American history. "We quickly learned that if we could pull together as a team - that meant everybody, blacks and whites - perhaps we could set an example for the rest of the city," Tigers' outfielder Willie Horton said. "There was a lot more riding on that '68 season for us, for the city, than just wins and

Tim Wendel is the author of nine books, including High Heat: The Secret History of the Fastball and the Improbable Search for the Fastest Pitcher of All Time, which was an Editor's Selection by the New York Times Book Review. His writing has appeared in the New York Times, Washington Post, USA Weekend, Washingtonian, National Geographic Traveler, Huffington Post, GQ, and Esquire.

Wendel teaches fiction and nonfiction writing at Johns Hopkins University, where he received the 2009 Award for Teaching Excellence and the Professional Achievement Award in 2004 and 2010. He is a Walter E. Dakin Fellow and Tennessee Williams Scholar to the Sewanee Writing Conference, and a Pen/Faulkner visiting writer to the Washington, D.C. Public Schools. He received his Master's in writing from Johns Hopkins and a Bachelor's in magazine journalism from Syracuse University. Born in Philadelphia, Wendel was raised in Lockport, New York. One of his first jobs was writing music reviews for the Buffalo Courier-Express. Since then he's worked on both coasts and in between, covering everything from the Olympics to politics to the America's Cup. Wendel lives in Vienna, Virginia with his wife and their two children.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

Review By Sean Kayden

KILLER JOE

Rated: NC-17 for graphic disturbing content involving violence and sexuality, and a scene of brutality

Director William Friedkin brings, Killer Joe, Tracy Letts' 1993 play (who also adapted the screenplay) to the big screen. This "totally twisted deep-fried Texas redneck trailer park murder story" depicted on the film poster definitely fits that outlandish description. However, the often lurid and perverse film isn't what it's all cracked up to be. Emile Hirsch plays Chris Smith, a twenty something year old lowlife that owes money to a drug dealer. His mother sold his cocaine and he's in a crucial bind. Desperate for cash, Chris seeks aid from his father Ansel, portrayed by Thomas Haden Church. Ansel, as broke as they come by these days, can't help his son. Nonetheless, Chris proposes a plan to hire a man named Joe Cooper aka Killer Joe, a Dallas detective, who's also a contract killer to murder his mother. His apparently goodfor-nothing mother, Ansel's ex-wife, has an insurance policy of $50,000. If they get rid of her, they can split the profit. However, the beneficiary of the will is Dottie, Chris' younger, impressionable sister played by the lovely Juno Temple. After trying to convince Directed by: William Friedkin his father at a seedy strip club, the two return back to their trailer park home to further discuss the matter. Dottie, overhears them contemplating the notion and is surprisingly all for it. Problem solved? Not exactly.

Screenplay: Tracy Letts Release

July 27th, 2012 (Limited)

Enters, Joe Cooper, portrayed by Matthew McConaughey gives an oily slick and almost stoic, sociopath like performance. One of the character's rules is simple, payment upfront. When Chris tries to explain to him that they'll get the money after he takes care of his mother, Cooper is about to walk out on them. Until he lays his eyes on Dottie for a second time and suggests a retainer. Faced with the dilemma of giving us his sister, Chris and Ansel without any real trepidation put up Dottie as the retainer, figuring it won't be that long until they get the money, anyway. After this takes place, the movie begins to unravel into a silly, nearly comical

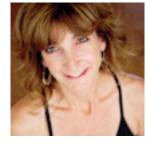

The chemistry between characters is so uneven and lacks any true spark, especially with the scenes between Hirsch and Church. Church's character is nothing but a buffoon. I'm not sure what it was exactly, but Church's acting prowess is off kilter and utterly misguided here. McConaughey, on the other hand, is twisted and sick, but it's difficult to take your eyes off of him. His character is unequivocally the best aspect the movie has to offer, which isn't saying that much seeing how the rest of it is derivative, best aspect the movie has to offer, which isn't saying that much seeing how the rest of it is derivative, unfeasible, and merely bland. You never really care about any of these characters with, perhaps, the exception of Dottie. She becomes involved with a weird love affair with Joe. You're never entirely sure if she loves him or what the deal is. In the third act, Chris has held off paying off his debt to the drug dealer long enough and he's ready to collect. So then we have the obligatory "I-need-cash-fast-so-I'll-bet-everything-I-have-on-a-pony-at-the-racetrack" scene and of course that becomes futile at securing the cash needed to pay off some guy who's about to beat the crap out of you. The climax at the end is a bit obvious, but what occurs within the scene is downright explicit. The dialogue gets pretty hokie at times too. The final moments of Killer Joe couldn't be more preposterous and inane. At the end of the day, every character is idiotic, but I guess that's kind of the point to entire story. For a movie that's received much praise by critics. I am honestly left stunned. Killer Joe ultimately proves to be a movie set on being much praise by critics, I am honestly left stunned. Killer Joe ultimately proves to be a movie set on being nasty, shocking, and raw. Yeah, it accomplishes that all right, but simply in the worst possible way.

THE JOY OF YOGA BALANCING

MARANATHA HIGH SCHOOL PASADENA POLICE DEPARTMENT

How many plates can you keep spinning at one time? Do you know when you are at capacity? Does it change from day to day? If you are like me, it's always a challenge to balance. A funny thing about yoga, it helps you balance. Not just balancing poses, like Tree (vriksasana) but balance your life as well. When you sit down on your mat the first thing you should do is check in. Check on your breath and how you feel. Your breath can tell you if you need to let go or to gather energy. This is huge.

Once you can learn to balance your energy level you will know when it's time to rest. Time to rest restores your energy so that you feel good and can enjoy the things you do. Maybe even do a little more. Pushing through and depleting your energy leaves you irritable, unable to smile and heavy, suddenly everything seems huge and overwhelming. Doesn't this seem like common sense? Why on earth would we deplete ourselves so that we become irritable and overwhelmed? Why on earth would we not eat right and deprive ourselves of vital energy? But yet we do this. There is so much to do! We even say to ourselves 'next time I am going to go to bed early, instead of getting sucked into the computer for another hour....'

But alas, the next day we are back on Facebook or stopping for fast food.

So, how can yoga help us learn how to manage our energy? First of all, by becoming aware of how precious our energy is. We need to learn what gives us energy back. Yoga and meditation do. Éven though we are working hard in class and feel our muscles fatigue, we get more energy back. We feel lighter in our step. Yoga helps us to balance prana, our vital life energy, through our breath. We then feel more balance in all areas of our lives. All yogis will tell you the problem they came to class with looks much better after class. That's balancing prana. What do you need to balance in your life?

I hope you'll find the way in class. Namasté, René

and strength train on Friday.

Many of us were thoroughly engrossed in the amazing athletic skills displayed at the Olympics. What is not often mentioned is that a great number of these athlete work regular jobs and have family responsibilities in addition to the countless hours they put into training. What we can learn from them is the discipline it takes to plan workouts around their various obligations. They make no excuses about missing training because of being too tired or too busy, why should we? Especially when all is really required is that we put away 30 minutes a day, 3 to 5 days a week to give our bodies what it needs to keep us healthy and strong. The key to an effective program and long lasting success is to change it up and dosomething different everyday, for example...hike/run on Monday, strength train on Tuesday, Yoga on Wednesday, ride the bike on Thursday

You get the idea, there are a lot of options to choose from and there aren't any strict rules on what to do on a given day. Your body benefits more from a constant change in how it is challenged. Although the exercise type you choose may stay the same, you can also change the order of when you do them from week to week. I only have one rule, work as hard as you possibly can in the 30 minutes.

Want it all in 30 minutes? Get to your gym! My most popular training programs are half hour sessions that incorporate strength, core work and cardiovascular challenges. My clients love how much work they get done in such a little time. Many gyms and personal trainers offer 1/2 hour training sessions that are efficient and affordable. It is a valuable investment to have a trainer design a program that will fit in your time constraints, they can also design an effective home based workout with very little equipment.

So now the problem of "when" becomes the challenge, the answer is....whenever you can. There are 1440 minutes in a day, your body is only asking for 30 of them. Schedule it as part of your day as you do any other appointment. There is no magical formula, just the discipline to make a commitment and stay consistent. Varying your routine and exercise patterns will go a long way to guaranteeing success.

HOMES & PROPERTY

One Of A Kind: Featuring unique homes and gardens and the people who create them Story by Chris Bertrand. Photos courtesy of Pauli Morin

HISTORIC 1910 CRAFTSMAN IN OLD MONROVIA

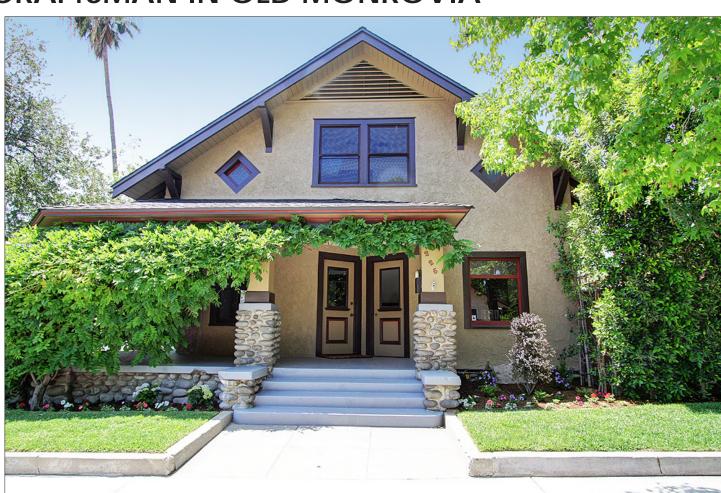

Many buyers searching for a historic or "character" home love the idea of living amidst history. On the "must have" list is often leaded glass cabinetry, original millwork and built-ins, French doors, vintage lighting... and that all American front porch.

One can almost see the eyes mist over when buyers envision themselves sitting on the porch with a cool beverage in the shade of the front porch, waving to neighbors passing by.

Sometimes, though, the mechanics of living a century-old lifestyle with vintage kitchen, baths and systems, become a bit more of a chore than a delight.

The sellers of this charming Monrovia home have carefully preserved the best of the historic nature of the home, and then completely updated the kitchen, baths, laundry, electrical, roof, landscaping and much more to accommodate today's 21st century needs.

Listing agent, Pauli Morin, commented, "In the largest bath, for instance, the sellers brought in a claw foot tub, to tie in with the home's vintage, then used a historic pattern of black and white ceramic tiles for the flooring, plus dramatic black slab counters." The result is both historically sensitive, as well as chic by today's standards. The oversized, walk-in shower, though modern and delightful with its rainfall shower head, uses the minimalist plate glass surround to allow the historic style to shine and visually expand the room.

The kitchen was gutted, then totally remodeled with slab granite, stainless steel appliances and recessed lighting.

On the vintage side, the leaded glass cabinetry, original millwork and built-ins, the vintage lighting and the all American porch are all there, waiting to be loved by new owners. French doors open to the back patio and yard, so one can enjoy sun or shade in the front or back depending on preference or time of day.

The front porch offers wide stairs to the dual front doors, flanked by arroyo stone pillars and foundation. A heritage wisteria vine shades the porch and provides a multitude of blossoms in the spring months.

This Monrovia home offers a healthy dose of the "story" in history as well as the vintage charm. The dual front doors begin the story of this home. Eugene P. Rawson, established the Fernleaf Grocery at 215 S. California, according to Tim Gregory, The Building Biographer.

The undeveloped space adjacent to the home is the site of the Rawsons' grocery store that once served this neighborhood. Mr. Rawson used what is now the dining room, to run his grocery business. His business associates would enter through one door, and family or friends would enter the rest of the home through the mirror image, adjacent door.

The undeveloped space where the grocery once stood could be the site of a wonderful home vegetable garden or children's play yard. Morin recommends that those interested in a higher use of the land contact the city of Monrovia for further information.

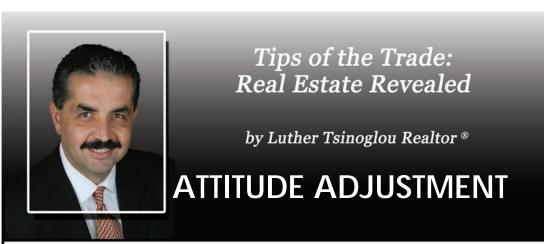

After you've had your lemonade on the vintage front porch, and reveled in the vintage character of the home, be sure to enjoy the goldfish pond and new landscaping in the back yard. And... there's a two car garage to boot!

Old Town Monrovia is just a few short blocks' walk, when one is ready for the outside world again. The district is full of life, with the Krikorian Movie Theater, many highly rated bistros, and unique boutiques and services.

225 S California Avenue in Monrovia offers three bedrooms, three baths and 1740 square feet of living space. The property is offered at $574,000 by Pauli Morin of Coldwell Banker. For more information or to view this home, contact the agent at 626-233-2047 or PMorin@ColdwellBanker.com.

In spite of the real estate roller coaster of the last few years, homeownership remains the bedrock of financial and familial security. Having a long-term investment that provides the satisfaction and pride of ownership beats just about anything else you can do with your savings.

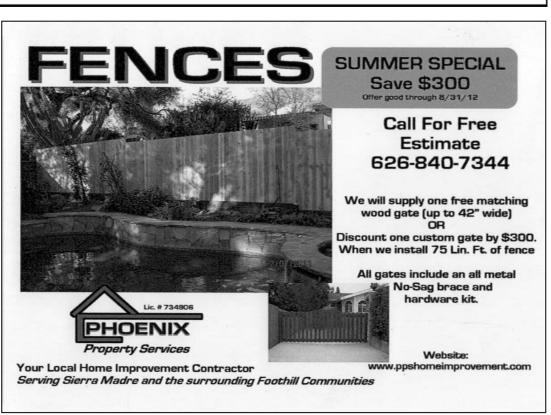

When the market exploded several years ago, the expectations of many consumers grew too high, too fast. Homes became more commodities than investments, and now markets and attitudes have been forced to realign.

Conditions today make it an opportune time to secure your future. Home prices and interest rates are still low, and tax advantages are abundant. You just have to get past all the negativity in the media. All the bad news has drained consumer confidence, and frankly, you cannot underestimate the effect of intangibles like confidence and expectation on the real estate industry.

Real estate transactions are unlike any other financial transaction. The demand and desire for homeownership doesn't expire like other flashy investment instruments. The inherent value of a stock can be calculated by a formula of company profits, earnings ratios, performance history, fund managers, and so on.

However, a home's value is ultimately determined by what a buyer is willing to pay for it, and the security and well-being that owning your own home provides. Honestly, there's hardly been a better time to make your move.

RESOURCES TO HELP SENIORS WITH LOW VISION

Dear Savvy Senior:

What resources can you recommend to help seniors with incurable vision impairment? My wife has macular degeneration and has become very discouraged. Looking for Help

Dear Looking:

Unfortunately, there are nearly 2 million Americans, like your wife, living with macular degeneration today, making everyday tasks like cooking dinner, reading the newspaper or watching television extremely challenging. Here are some resources that can help.

Vision Rehabilitation

The best place to get help living and coping with macular degeneration is at a vision rehabilitation agency. Typically run by state or nonprofit organizations, there are around 1,500 of these agencies scattered across the country that provide free or low-cost services to help seniors and their families who are living with all types of incurable vision impairments.

While vision rehabilitation does not restore lost sight, it does help people maximize their existing sight, or, if they have no vision, it can equip them with techniques and tools to help them maintain an independent lifestyle.

Services include counseling, along with training on how to perform daily living tasks with low vision, and how to use visual and adaptive devices and assistive technologies that can help improve quality

They also offer guidance for adapting your home that will make it safer and easier for your wife to maneuver, and can help her locate low-vision support groups in your area which is very helpful. Some agencies will even send their specialist out to work with her in the comfort of your own home.

To find a vision rehabilitation agency in your area, call the American Foundation for the Blind referral line at 800-232-5463.

If, however, you don't live near a vision rehabilitation agency, you can also get help from an occupational therapist, or OT, who can provide low vision training in your home. Ask your ophthalmologist or doctor for a referral to an OT in your area. Your Area Agency on Aging (call 800-677-1116 for contact information) can also help you find nearby therapists. Many health insurance providers, including Medicare, will pay for low vision training by an OT if prescribed by your eye doctor or healthcare provider.

Online Help

Another convenient place to find help for your wife is online at a terrific new website called VisionAware (visionaware.org). Created by the American Foundation for the Blind and the Reader's Digest Partners for Sight Foundation, this site provides free information on eye conditions, along with dozens of practical tips and instructional videos on living with vision loss, including concepts for adapting your home to make it easier to navigate, techniques for traveling safely outside the home, and various tips on how to manage things like finances, medications, and other tasks like cooking, cleaning, grooming, reading, writing and more.

It also offers a comprehensive list of low vision products and technologies that can help your wife stay active and independent, including product reviews that are published in their online magazine called "AccessWorld."

Other Resources

Two other good resources that can help you and your wife are the Ears for Eyes program and the MD Support website.

Ears for Eyes (earsforeyes.info, 800-843-6816) is a nonprofit public charity that provides free audio lessons on cassette tapes, CDs and Internet downloads that teach adaptive daily living skills to the vision impaired and their caregivers.

And mdsupport.org, which is a public service website for seniors living with macular degeneration that provides information and links to support groups across the country, and links to low-vision products, services and other resources that can help with many different needs.

KATIE TseThis and That

DELICIOUS, BUT UGLY

The other day at lunch, the restaurant was busy and the service was slow. That was fine, because I love to people-watch. A couple sat down a few tables away from us. The lady's outfit was on the dressier side of casual. The guy's clothes were too nondescript to recall. Their posture and gestures suggested that this was their first or second date. It was all very charming until she began eating --buffalo wings.

You can't really blame her. Who doesn't like buffalo wings? They're a staple bar food along with pretzel mix and peanuts. Buffalo wings represent the perfect marriage of food vices. Most other bar favorites are simply bastardizations of otherwise healthy foods. Take onion rings and French fries. Onions and potatoes are innocuous enough until you coat one in batter and fry both. But with buffalo wings, it's delicious fat from start to finish. You begin with the fatty dark meat of mini chicken legs, then subject them to the fattiness of frying. Finally, they are ready to be dunked in calorie-dense blue cheese dipping sauce! What's not to love? The only health threat lacking is high fructose corn syrup.

Although we all agree that buffalo wings are to die for (and perhaps to die by), they are not the sexiest food to be seen eating. I'm sure someone could delicately nibble at a chicken leg, dabbing their mouth periodically. But to enjoy buffalo wings to their fullest, you must suck the bones clean of every muscle, sinew, and tendon. As you can imagine, this isn't a pretty picture.

Once you're in a stable relationship, it's acceptable to suck a chicken bone in front of your beloved. (If not, then you should dump that judgmental jerk right now!) But what's a firsttime date to do? I'm so glad I'm not dating any more. Life is stressful enough without having to worry about ordering etiquette-friendly food.

Of course, any food can be challenging depending on how much of a klutz (or how nervous) you are. Hamburgers are always a challenge. The Carl's Jr. ads make the models look great eating them. But I've never been able to pull it off without stuffing my face into the thing to take a bite, or having burger juice run down my arm. I think the Carl's Jr. ads must require many takes.

Some people think spaghetti and other stringy pastas are uncomely to eat in public, unless you're trained in dining etiquette. The fear is that you might slurp up a noodle. Or you might misjudge the amount of pasta on your fork, forcing you to bite off the remainder onto your plate. Of course, these strategies should be perfectly acceptable once you've known each other for a month or so. At that point, you may even get away with further pasta violations, such as cutting all the spaghetti on your plate into two-inch pieces before eating it.

Come to think of it, I've really been lucky when it comes to avoiding making a total fool of myself while eating. I haven't had crunchy tacos in years, but I'm sure I'm still just as clumsy with the shells and crumbly beef as when last I ate one. If you limit your choices to salads, the worst that can happen is puncturing a cherry tomato and squirting its juice into your date's eye. Luckily I've only experienced this among family, and the juice recipient was my shirt, rather than a guest.

So, if this week finds you having a first or second date, I wish for you gracefulness and, for your date, tolerance. And if you should be so blessed as to not have to worry about what you look like while eating, enjoy a juicy burger or some buffalo wings!

BUSINESS NEWS & TRENDS

Legal Insights by Noah Green¹ TERMINATION PITFALLS

Terminating employees is one of the most unpleasant aspects of a business owner or manager's job duties, but sometimes it is absolutely necessary in order to continue the business of the employer. But if terminating an employee is necessary, then it should be performed in the most ethical, and professional manner possible. Following the proper protocol in conducting the termination softens the blow to the terminated employee (who is very often surprised that they are being terminated); protects the business from potential litigation arising from the termination; and reassures the owner or manager that they did the right thing. Whether the terminated employee was a good worker or a bad worker is irrelevant. The decision to terminate an employee, once made, sets in motion a number of duties to the employer to handle the termination in a professional manner preserving the dignity of the terminated employee and protecting the employer's interests as the employer does not want to see an angry former employee

Employers faced with the unpleasant task of having to lay off an employee must use great care when doing so to avoid breaking the law. Similarly, when workers learn the unpleasant truth that they have been or are about to be terminated, they should be aware of their rights.

Below is a short primer on the usual issues, both legal and professional, that arise under California law surrounding the termination of an employee. This article collects some of the information and observations we have gathered over the years and which we use to assist our clients as they navigate their way through this difficult area.

There are a wide variety of reasons why employers would terminate an employee. As long as those reasons are not impermissible in accordance with California and Federal law, then the question of whether or not to terminate an employee is dependent on the facts and circumstances of each case and the business judgment of the employer.

Once it has been decided that it is in the company's best interest to terminate an employee, certain practical business issues must be confronted along with the legal issues discussed later in this article. In the short term, the employer must decide how to distribute the terminated employee(s) existing projects and re-assign their job duties to other workers.

In the long term, the company will need to continue producing goods or services once the employee is gone, but, at least in the short term, will have fewer human resources available to produce those goods and/or services. A heavier burden will fall on the remaining workforce and they will be expected to increase their productivity. The company must anticipate how these additional stresses on the workforce, the company's finances, and public image will be addressed prior to implementing the termination. Like all business decisions, terminations must be thought through and properly planned out before being set in motion.

A "Termination Risk Analysis" can help you make the "go/no go" decision to terminate an employee. Termination Risk Analysis

The decision to terminate an employee can raise many legal issues. The following checklist is designed to help you determine whether the termination is likely to lead to litigation. While there is no way to guarantee an employee won't sue, using this risk analysis can alert you to potential legal problems. These problems could then be discussed with legal counsel before terminating the employee if you

Step 1: Consider Your Company Policies and Documents

Review your Employee Handbook for policies which may limit your right to terminate, such as:

- Employment at-will policies
- Progressive discipline policies
- Internal dispute resolution or arbitration policies

Termination policies requiring "just cause"

Is there a written employment contract? If so, what limits does it place on your the right to terminate the employee?

If you have an established system/policy of progressive discipline (i.e., written warnings prior to termination), was the system followed in this case?

If so, was the process of progressive discipline well documented? Documentation of the progressive discipline is important evidence should a legal claim arise.

If not, can you show a valid reason for your failure to follow your own policy? For example, an employer might terminate a violent employee without warnings in order to protect other employees from harm.

If you have an internal dispute resolution system, was the employee given a fair chance to resolve problems under that internal system?

Do you have an established policy of giving a certain period of notice before terminating an employee? This policy may be in writing (i.e., Employee Handbook) or may simply be an unwritten policy that you have established by having given employees notice in the past.

Step 2: Consider Oral or Implied Contracts of Employment Will this termination breach an oral contract of employment?

An oral contract may have been created if the employee was told her job was secure, or that she would always have a job if she did a good job, or some other similar guarantee of employment.

An oral contract can be created by anyone in the company with authority over the employee. This means that the company may be held to a supervisor's promise to an employee of secure employment, even if the supervisor did not have the company's authorization to make such a promise.

Will this termination breach an implied contract of employment? An implied contract of employment may have been created by a combination of these factors:

Long-term employment (although there is no specific number of years considered "long term," many attorneys use five years as a guideline)

Promotions

Commendations

Lack of criticism of the employee's performance

Other indicators of job security

Step 3: Consider State/Federal Laws Protecting Employees

Is the employee physically or mentally disabled? If so, were attempts made to reasonably accommodate the employee's disability? Were reasonable accommodation measures well documented?

Title VII / California's Fair Employment and Housing Act

Is the employee being treated in the same manner as other employees in similar situations? Is the employee being terminated for an improper reason such as race, gender, religion, sexual

Have other employees been given more chances before being terminated for the same or similar reasons as this employee? If so, are there legitimate, non-discriminatory reasons for treating this employee differently than other employees?

Is the employee pregnant? Pregnancy

If so, Eemployees are entitled to four months off for pregnancy-related disabilities.

Has the employee filed a workers' compensation claim? Terminating an employee who has filed a claim, or intends to file a claim, or has testified in a worker's compensation hearing could be considered workers' compensation discrimination.

Has the employee reported any illegal activity of the company to a state or federal government agency? Even if the company is not in fact acting illegally, the termination could be seen as retaliation for "whistle-blowing."

Once the employer determines that they can proceed with the termination, the question becomes how to do so properly. Below are a few suggestions for how to make sure the terminated employee is receiving everything they are entitled to under the law while still protecting the company's legitimate Has the employee participated in any official investigation of the employer (i.e., wage or safety violation) or testified against the employer in an unemployment insurance or other hearing? Is the termination in retaliation for the employee's exercise of protected personal rights, such as freedom of speech or political activity? Step 4: Review the employee's personnel file

Is there sufficient documentation in the file to substantiate your reasons for termination? Examples include written warnings, performance reviews and attendance records.

Is there anything in the file that might be evidence of an illegal termination? For example, a supervisor may have written a warning notice to the employee that her pregnancy was causing her to be absent too often. Legal counsel should be consulted if there are concerns.

Review personnel files for other employees who have similar problems. This comparison can point out potential discrimination issues. For example, could a female employee being terminated for attendance problems show that a male employee had the same number of absences but was not terminated?

Step 5: Consider the Employee's Eligibility for Unemployment Insurance

A terminated employee may be eligible for unemployment insurance unless the termination is for refusal to perform suitable work or for misconduct. Mere inability to perform the duties of the job is not considered misconduct.

The cost to your unemployment insurance reserve account may be far greater than the cost of providing the employee with necessary training or performance counseling.

Step 6: Consider Legal Ramifications of Not Terminating the Employee

Failing to terminate an employee who has been violent or threatened violence could result in harm to other employees and lead to employer liability.

Termination of an employee who has sexually harassed other employees may be necessary to fulfill an employer's legal obligations under sexual harassment laws.

SOCIAL MEDIA

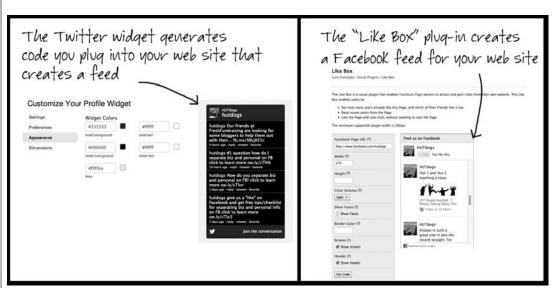

Facebook and Twitter both have plug-ins that allow you to display your most recent posts on your web site. It's an easy and affordable way to update your web site with announcements and current information. Every time you make a post, say on Facebook, it will also show up on your web site.

Here's how you can add a feed to your web site:

- Create space on your web site for the feed (usually in a right or left column). You can put it on several pages of your site depending on where you drive the traffic.
- To plug-in a Twitter feed, go to http://twitter.com/about/resources/widgets. Select "Profile Widget." Type in your Twitter handle, customize the size and look. Select "finish and grab code," and it will generate html code you plug into your web site (or give to your web master).
- To plug in a Facebook feed, use the "Like Box located at http://developers.facebook.com/ docs/plugins. Make sure to type in the name of your Facebook page for the Page URL. Customize the settings, then select "get code" and plug it into your web site (or give to your web master).

OMG! OH MY GOSH DID YOU KNOW..... By Patricia Richardson, M.B.A

I bring to my business a long history working with computerized accounting software. Many of my clients do too. We have spent years closing year-ends; that is why I often get asked the question, "Do we need to close the books"? Well, yes we need to close the books but what they are really asking is, "Do we have to do something special to our database?" - think Peachtree software.

QuickBooks is set up in such a fashion that users can password protect prior years. There is nothing worse than returning to a client's office after income taxes have been filed to find that someone has deleted or changed data from a prior year. In order to ensure that that does not happen, I usually password-protect the prior year's data.

This brings us to the question of Condensing Data, which is different than password-protecting data because it actual changes the structure of the data. This feature, formerly known as Clean Up Data, now features improved inventory condense, more options to remove non-posting transactions, and accountant-only (in QuickBooks Accountant and QuickBooks Enterprise Accountant versions) condense options such as single summary entry, clean break (remove all transactions before a specific date so that you can start over as of a specific date - a huge time saver), and period copy (These accountant-only functions will be covered in another article). You can now condense your company file to get rid of unnecessary detail. You can:

Remove transaction detail before a certain date. This option decreases the file size and improves performance if you have a large company file.

Remove all transactions. You can select this option to start over without losing your lists, preferences, and service subscriptions.

Remove all transactions to create a period copy that only includes transactions within a specified date range (QuickBooks Accountant only). This option creates a file you can send to third parties who don't need to see transactions before or after the selected period.

 $ar{I}$ had never realized the time saving and space saving benefits of being able to condense a file. Prior to this new feature, I have always thought that being able to go back and look at individual transactions if necessary was a great idea. Today however, I have a database that goes back to the 1980's and while it is nice to see what happened in the past, this new feature will create an archive copy of the original file before condensing the database. This way, you will be able to access the details of transactions in the file(s) in the future. To do this, select File > Utilities > Condense Data and follow the prompts.

The user will receive a prompt to run a Clean up Attachment Links utility for any attachments that were linked to the condensed transactions. The user will receive confirmation of any links that were cleaned up.

How does this improve your efficiency? This feature is great because it allows the user to have control over just how much of the data file to extract upon condensing. Users, preferences, reports, templates, lists, etc. are retained from the original data file. Unreconciled bank and credit card transactions can be kept while having one summary entry for all prior transactions (two of the options of the Condense feature) so that these accounts remain ready to reconcile. I cannot wait to give this a try today. I am going to condense everything in my current database for the 1980's and 1990's. Moving forward, I'll complete work using the condensed file, with the assurance that I can access all details from prior periods quickly and easily.

HAIL Hamilton My Turn DEATH BY MEDICINE America's Dirty Little Secret

Have you ever wondered about all those TV prescription ads telling you this pill or this tablet can relieve what ever ails you? You know the ads I'm talking about; the ones that claim they can cure male erectile disfunction (whoever heard of female erectile disfunction?); or all those time-release capsules, elixirs, syrups, and whatever other way they can package and sell these medicines?

Oh yeah, they always include a disclaimer or warning barely understandable because it is spoken at lightning speed at the end of the ad. I can't imagine taking one of these wonder-drugs like Viagra and then having to have my wife drive me to urgent care (I'm certain I couldn't drive myself) with a painful six-hour consequences is just is too humiliating to contemplate. Nevertheless, that's one of the Viagra warnings.

The sad fact is that doctors kill far more people every year than drug pushers do -- a surprising fact that should make sensible Americans start to question the wisdom of TV prescription ads "pushing" dangerous pharmaceuticals on unsuspecting consumers.

How did we get here? We got here by TV prescription ads that minimize the risks in taking these drugs. Prescription drug ads on television first hit the airwaves just over a decade ago, but a new University of Georgia study finds that most of them still do not present a fair balance of information, especially when it comes to the risk of side effects.

A seminal study done in 1998 and published by the New England Journal of Medicine found that correctly prescribe medications claim 106,000 lives a year because of toxic reactions or known side effects that are minimized to the patients taking these drugs. By comparison, only 5,200 Americans die annually from illegal drugs like heroin and cocaine, according to the U.S. Substance Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

Prescription drugs taken as directed kill more than a 100,000 Americans a year. That's one person every five minutes; that's 270 per day, or more than twice as many who are killed in car accidents each day. Are these people abusing their prescription drugs or is this a sign of prescription medications gone bad? No, these people died using these pharmaceuticals as direct by their doctors

Did you know that Americans consume 80 percent of the world's supply of painkillers -- more than 110 tons of pure, addictive opiates every year -- as the country's prescription drug abuse epidemic explodes.

That's enough drugs to give every single American 64 Percocets or 128 Vicodins. And pain pill prescriptions continue to surge, up 600 percent in the last ten years, thanks to doctors, who are so influenced by pharmaceutical companies' free vacations and drug samples, they are more and more willing to hand out drugs to patients who are suffering regardless of the efficacy or possible deadly side effects. Heck, we expect a prescription every time we see a doctor or we think they aren't doing their job.

As more people get their hands on these potentially-dangerous drugs, more are taking them to get high. Their drug abuse leads to 15,200 deaths a year -- more than from heroin and cocaine combined. Ironically, Methadone (the drug used to help heroin addicts break their addiction) accounts for more than one third of all the deaths from opiate painkillers.

Unfortunately, the same studies estimating that more than 100,000 Americans die each year from their prescriptions looked only at deaths from known side effects. That is, those deaths didn't happen because the doctor made a mistake and prescribed the wrong drug, or the pharmacist made a mistake in filling the prescription, or the patient accidentally took too much.

Thousands of patients also die from such mistakes too, but the cited studies looked only at deaths where our present medical system wouldn't fault anyone. Tens of thousands of additional people are dying every year from taking these medications just as they are prescribed. This shows just how dangerous these drugs really are.

I'm not a doctor but here's a bit of advice anyway: If you don't know why you're taking a certain prescription and don't understand the real possibility of serious side effects (maybe even death!), get a second opinion from another doctor before you start taking the medication. Better to be safe than sorry.

YIDDISH AND ENGLISH RICH Johnson

Did your teachers ever tell you language arts could be fun? Yeah, I didn't buy it either. Particularly when revolved around dangling participles and sentence structure (which could be a synonym for prison).

However, once I was out from under someone grading me on whether the apostrophe was in the right place or not, I started to enjoy language. As you know (if you read my column regularly) I like the humorous use of the language.

One of the more interesting uses of the language is the incorporation of foreign words into English. My cribbage-playing friend Mark (hi Mark), mentioned the use of Yiddish in our culture. Yiddish is actually a Germanic language originally spoken by the Jews of Central and Eastern Europe. And you may be surprised at some of the words we regularly use that are Yiddish. For example "glitch" is a Yiddish word for a minor malfunction. Here are some

Bagel – bread roll boiled then baked Blintz - a sweet cheese-filled crepe Boychik - a boy or young man Bupkis - nothing (he isn't worth bupkis) Chutzpah – nerve, daring Dreck or Drek – worthless (typically merchandise) Ganef or Gonif - a thief or scoundrel Gelt - money (chocolate coins eaten on Hanukkah) Golem – synonym for Frankenstein Goy – someone not of the Jewish faith or people Haimish – homelike or friendly Handel – bargaining for a good price Kibitz – to converse idly Klutz – clumsy person (me) Kosher - correct according to Jewish law Kvell – express great pleasure or pride Kvetch – to complain habitually or gripe Latke – a potato pancake Lox - cured salmon (it was sick?) Maven – an expert Mazel – luck

Mazel tov – good luck Megillah – a lengthy tedious document (the whole megillah) Mensch – a decent human being Meshuga – crazy Mishpocha - extended family Nebbish – insignificant pitiful person

Noodge – to pester, nag or whine Nosh – to snack Nudnik - a pest or pain in the neck Oy (Oy vey) – interjection of grief or pain

Pisher – an inexperienced person Putz - I won't tell you what it is but it is an insult Schlemiel – an inept, clumsy person Schlimazel - a chronically unlucky person

Schmaltz – excessive sentimentality (chicken fat) Schmo – a stupid person Schmooze – to make small talk Schnook – a particularly gullible person

Schlub – a clumsy or stupid person

Schnoz – a nose (Jimmy Durante) Schvitz – to sweat Shalom – peace Shamus - a detective (and you thought it was Irish) Shemozzle – a quarrel Shtick – a comic theme Tchotchke – a knickknack or trinket

Tukhus – umm, your backside Tush – umm, also your backside Yenta – a talkative woman or gossip Yutz – a fool

Zaftig - pleasingly plump

Schlep – to drag or haul

How many of the above words have you been using in conversation without knowing the root of the words?

By the way, thank you to all the people who came out to our Sunday Concert in the Park. We enjoyed performing for you and hope you enjoyed the music and banter. And thank you again to the Kiwanis and Friends of the Library for helping make a dream come true for the entire band and friends.

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE WHO'S KIDDING WHO?

It is said that the best deception is one we ourselves believe in. Years ago I took a series of classes that emphasized that the only way an individual can tell what he wants is to observe what he does. I hoped then, and I hope now that this statement is not a description of truth. I would much rather be the person

I imagine myself to be rather than the person I observe myself

This weekend my wife and I had guests. While their parents were off on a two day cruise we had the privilege of taking care of her nephews ages twelve and ten. I imagined it would be great fun to have them for a weekend, even though it would be pretty crowded because my son and his girl friend were staying over as well. I really wanted every one to enjoy themselves, but things just didn't work out as I planned.

On Sunday morning I was all excited about watching the Olympic Men's Basketball game but the nephews wanted to watch something else and I got angry. There are other televisions in the house but I had pictured everyone caring about the Olympics and it seemed no one really cared and I couldn't handle it. I went upstairs and pouted and one of the nephews came up to my bedroom to talk to me and got comfortable by lying on my bed with his shoes on. Right then I didn't want to talk to him; I wanted to watch the game, and I told him to get off the bed. Really, it all should have been no big deal but everything began to get on my nerves.

My son's girl friend had brought her dog and that dog was running around the house, and that got on my nerves. Next everybody was holding the dogs and kissing them, and that kind of stuff just sort of turns my stomach. Why do people do that and why does it bother me so much? I guess my space had been invaded and I had not gotten much sleep and my feet were swollen and my lungs were congested and I just felt nasty and that's the way it was. Even that would have been fine if I had left it alone, but I kept wanting it to be different.

It felt kind of like New Year's Eve when you find yourself somewhere and think you should be having a good time but aren't. The more you try and push yourself to have a good time the less fun it is. Somehow I have now reached the stage of my life where I keep saying I want to do things and then don't do them. For example, I keep saying I want to take a cooking class. I went down to the cooking school and even got a schedule, but now I realize I don't want to do it. Another example is after I got in touch with an old friend, he mentioned that he had written two novels and I said great--let me read them. He went to all the trouble to send them to me and I have not even started them. I keep asking myself why, but that's not really important. What is important is that I just kind of feel unhappy about the whole thing and hang on to that unhappiness.

Another source of internal conflict is this business about the articles. I keep saying that I want to put all of my almost 250 articles into a book. I have contacted a self-publisher several times and yet I can't even take the first step to putting the articles together so that publishing takes place. I keep saying I want to, but I don't do it. A couple more examples. I keep sending in for diet pills which are pretty expensive. I take the pills for a week or so and then quit and feel guilty. Several times I have paid for gym memberships and then I never go. I know I am not alone in this but I'm sick of it; just like you're probably sick of my whining. Thanks for sticking with me this long.

All I really want to do now is do what I say I'm going to do. I want to act cordially towards my relatives and friends. Instead I keep getting into fights with everybody. If I believe that business about observing what I actually do in order to realize what I want to do, then I guess what I want to do is feel guilty and I just thought of a solution. I'll tell myself I want to be guilty and unhappy and I bet that will cause me to actually do and experience the opposite. Why I feel better already--- Oops I shouldn't have said that.

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

A MIDSUMMER'S DAY NIGHTMARE

I am not sure who invented summer vacation but I think they deserve a Nobel Peace Prize. Every year is worth the intense strain when there is a summer vacation to look forward to.

Ah, summer vacation. The freedom of not having anything to do. No schedule in my face. No appointments frustrating me. Just an agenda of fun and more fun and don't forget the eating.

Both the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and me got up early to begin the drive to the airport to take us to our vacation location. I was so full of energy I could not sit still. It was then that I broke into singing, comfortably off key, a Carpenter's song much to the agitation of my wife.

"We've only just begun, White lace and promises, A kiss for luck and we're on our way." All my wife could do was stare at me. Finally, she said, "You sure are excited. I've never seen you so excited. Are you sure you're all right?" I could not have been more all righter. All I could think of was a week before me surrounded by grandchildren I have not seen for over a year.

"How old is...?" I went through all the grandchildren. It is easy to forget how old kids are because every year their age changes. When you get to be my age, it is hard to keep up with all of these changes.

A week of stuffing them with all the candy I could carry. Taking them out to a restaurant and showing them the proper use of the drinking straw and the fine art of a spitball battle. After all, it is a grandfather's solemn duty to teach his grandchildren the fine art of shenaniganism. Where else are they going to learn it? Their grandmother?

We finally arrived at the airport, parked our car, and proceeded to the check-in counter. I am not sure my feet touched the ground, so excited was I to get on our way. "Slow down," my wife pleaded. "I can't keep up with you."

We finally arrived at the check-in counter with our baggage and one of the attendants asked me a simple question. I hate it when people ask me a question when I am in one of my silly moods. Believe me; I was in one of my silliest silly moods at this time.

"Sir," the attendant asked me very seriously, "do you have anything perishable or flammable in your luggage?" With silliness smeared all over my mug I said, "I sure do. I got a Bible in there and it is Dyn-O-Mite." And, I had the audacity to smile very broadly.

Then it happened. Someone said, "Did he say dynamite? Where's the dynamite?" The attendant said, "He said the dynamite was in his briefcase."

Suddenly, lights went on, buzzers began ringing, men in uniforms surrounded me, and two grabbed and subdued me. In a few moments, the hazmat men arrived asking where the dynamite was. The man in charge pointed to my briefcase and said, "It's in the briefcase.'

They begin moving people away while the hazmat men came in to remove the briefcase with the alleged dynamite. At this time, I was absolutely stunned. Every ounce of silliness had drained from my person and I knew I was about to go to jail.

Finally, the senior security guard came and looked at me. "Where did you say the dynamite was, sir?" I stammered and stuttered but finally I said, "I said my Bible was

He stared at me. Look me up and down, glared at me with eyes that burned into my very soul. Then he spoke. "Would you by any chance be a minister?" He said rather

"Yes sir," I stammered as if my life depended upon what I was going to say, "I am a minister, a preacher of the gospel." I thought the last part might do something for me. At least it was a shot, excuse me, a try. He glared at me and shouted, "False alarm. Just another crazy preacher." As he walked away, I could hear him muttering under his breath, "Where do all these crazy preachers come from?"

The terminal finally quieted down, I went through the inspection, and I must say, I am not complaining mind you, but the pat down was a little longer and rougher than I remembered it being in the past. They stripped me down almost to my birthday suit. Thank God for wrinkles.

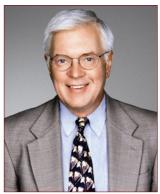

As I walked down the aisle on the plane, I could hear people whispering, "That's him. That's the crazy preacher with the dynamite."

I finally sat down next to my wife who was staring out the window. In a few minutes the plane took off and as we reached our altitude she, while still staring out the window, said to me, "Next time we'll take separate planes." She paused for a moment and then said, "In fact, we will take separate airports.'

I think I am going to stick to what the Bible says.

"For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Hebrews 4:12 KJV).

THE PAUL RYAN-MITT ROMNEY TICKET: TROUBLE FOR GOP

By Bill Press

ty packages. Take Paul Ryan.

Most members of the media have a man-crush on him.

eyes." He's the guy with "jet black hair and a touch of Eagle Scout to him," gushed Time magazine. Columnist Joe Klein called Ryan's plan "without question, an act of political courage." The Times' David Brooks praised it as "the most courageous budget reform proposal any of us have seen in our lifetime." And many outlets praised Mitt Romney's "bold" move in naming Ryan as his vice-presidential running mate.

Oh, give me a break. Get a room. Or do your job! Did anybody bother to read what Ryan actually proposes? It's not bold, it's dangerous. To most Americans, generally. But, especially, to Mitt adoption.

First, the budget. For starters, it adds to the deficit by giving the wealthiest of Americans yet another tax break, cutting the top rate from 35 percent to 25 percent. Ryan would also cut corporate taxes and eliminate capital gains taxes. As a result, according to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, Ryan's budget would not see a surplus until 2040. So much for his reputation as a deficit

Meanwhile, that loss of revenue must be made And small wonder that Romney's already trying up somehow. Ryan does it by sparing the Pentagon, while slashing $6 trillion over the next 10 years out of Medicare, Medicaid, Head Start, food stamps, Pell grants, and every other program helping the poor or middle class, which is why his budget has been criticized by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Don't buy the big GOP lie that Ryan's plan actually preserves Medicare, while Obama's destroys it. True, Obama would cut $716 billion from Medicare -- not by cutting benefits, but by cracking down on double billing by insurance companies and health care providers (the kind of waste and fraud Republicans used to champion). But here's what Romney won't tell you: the Ryan budget contains the very same $716 billion in cuts. On top of which, Ryan would indeed "end Medicare as we know it" by replacing it with a voucher program -- which the CBO finds would leave older Americans on average with $6,400 in extra costs 10 years from now. If Ryan had his way, there Scary things some- would be no more Medicare, no more Medicaid, times come in pret- and no more Social Security.

And that's what so many in the media label as "bold." Nonsense! There's nothing "bold" about pandering to Wall Street. There's nothing "courageous" about tossing seniors out of Medicare so the wealthiest Americans can enjoy another When he released his 2012 budget, the New York Times raved about his "piercing blue"

"ITAL Times raved about his "piercing blue"

13.9 percent to .082 percent: the effective rate he would have paid under the Ryan plan, according to an analysis done by The Atlantic.

> Clearly, there's nobody more extreme right on fiscal issues than Paul Ryan. But here's another big secret: There's nobody more far right on social issues, either. Ryan is the poster boy of the extreme religious right. He's not only anti-abortion, he co-sponsored fetal personhood legislation, which would ban most forms of contraception. He also sponsored a bill to force a woman to have an ultrasound before an abortion. And he's not only anti-marriage equality, he's also against gay

> Given all the baggage he brings to the ticket, it's small wonder that, in interviews with more than three dozen Republican operatives, Politico found the most common reaction to Paul Ryan's selection ranging from "gnawing apprehension to hair-on-fire anger that Romney has practically ceded the election." They realize that Ryan's plan to dismantle Medicare and Medicaid will also make it more difficult for Republicans to maintain control of the House.

> to distance himself from Ryan's budget. Except he can't. You can't embrace Paul Ryan without embracing everything he stands for, including his "mahvelous" budget (Romney's adjective, not mine). Whether Mitt realizes it yet or not, on both fiscal and social issues, this is now the Ryan/ Romney ticket -- and no longer the Romney/ Ryan ticket.

> In the end, Barack Obama himself could not have picked a better vice-presidential partner for Mitt Romney. History repeats itself. This campaign could be over before it begins. In 2008, John McCain destroyed his chances by picking Sarah Palin. In 2012, Mitt Romney just destroyed his chances by picking Paul Ryan.

MITT ROMNEY AND PAUL RYAN GREG Welborn

The Obama team would have us believe that they are in a state of euphoria over Romney's VP pick, that somehow Ryan's selection puts into crystal clear focus the contrast between the competing visions for America, and that spotlighting this contrast actually helps Obama. I think they are in for a rude awakening. It doesn't take much to comprehend that the VP pick does, in fact, highlight the differences between the two competing visions, but to argue that this contrast is flattering to Obama, or helps his re-election chances – is wishful thinking at best.

The pick itself shows Romney's hand. With Wisconsin congressman, Paul Ryan, as his running mate, Romney has clearly communicated to American voters that his central election and, if elected, administration theme will be reducing the national deficit and debt while restoring economic growth. If

Paul Ryan is known for anything - and in truth, he has a remarkable, multifaceted reputation in Washington – it is for his commitment to understanding and fixing the budget morass and debt disaster that face this nation. A few concrete facts and figures will illustrate this point clearly enough.

With a $15 trillion economy, the United States has $15.9 trillion in "official" debt. That doesn't even count the unfunded liabilities of $38.6 trillion for Medicare liabilities and $8.6 trillion for Social Security. Moreover, if, as suspected, the projected savings from Obamacare don't materialize, then the Medicare debt may actually double in size. That potentiality really doesn't matter because even the official U.S. debt is $63 trillion, which represents a commitment four times the size of the economy. How we got here is as undisputed a fact as the sun rising in the east and setting in the west. When Obama assumed the Presidency, the previous year's (2008) deficit was $455 billion. His 3 years in office have given us the following: 2009, a $1.4 trillion deficit; 2010, a $1.2 trillion deficit; and 2011, a $1.3 trillion deficit.

Those on the left argue that revenues are down. But as the always-prescient economist, Walter Williams, recently pointed out, if you go back to 1960 you would find that even considering the effects of inflation, tax revenues are 23 times greater today, but government spending is 42 times greater. Our problems are not due to the recession; they're not due to rich people skipping out. They're due to the profligate spending which occurred on one man's watch.

That man and his administration have only one response. They say we have to tax the rich more. Some Americans may be tempted to believe this simply because it offers a simple solution to a scary problem they'd rather not contemplate. But it's not a realistic solution. It's fantasy of the worst sort. More than one serious study has shown that even a 100% tax on rich people wouldn't solve the problem as shown below:

100% tax on all people earning $1 million or more would only generate $600 billion, 100% tax on all people earning $500 thousand or more would only generate $800 billion, 100% tax on all people earning $250 thousand or more would only generate $1 trillion.

Even 100% taxation on all the people earning $250,000 (the Obama administration's oft-used definition of "rich) would generate less than the current deficit. There's no money in any of these preposterous schemes to cover expenditures, let alone to reduce the existing debt. This is not a revenue problem, this is not a tax problem, this is not a "some people aren't paying their fair share" problem. This is a spending problem, and that's what makes Paul Ryan such a great choice.

When Governor Romney picked Paul Ryan, he made it perfectly clear that this issue is going to be tackled, that he intends to turn this government around. This is a message that will resonate with most Americans. For most of the last decade, if not longer, conservatives and independents, alike, have focused on the deficit and the debt. Many Democrats point to the 2006 and 2008 election victories as evidence that Americans have rejected the conservative answer to the spending problem, but that is a grave error.

The 2006 and 2008 elections showed an American public willing to throw the bums out - in this case Republican bums - when they couldn't control their spending. Republicans came into power earlier in this decade with the promise of reforming out-of-control government and reducing profligate spending. When they kept to that promise, the electorate rewarded them. When they became spenders and tolerated the corrupt in their own party, the voters threw the Republicans out. In their place were put Democrats who promised to be different, to control spending and to run a tighter ship. Democrats shouldn't be surprised this November when the voters throw them out for breaking the same promise.

Republicans were returned to power in 2010 and given a probationary run. If they prove themselves to be trustworthy by tackling the fiscal problems that face this nation, they will undoubtedly be rewarded with more victories. In picking Paul Ryan, Governor Romney has communicated his, and the party's, commitment to save this nation from the fiscal cliff that waits if we continue to spend more than we earn. So, on his first major test of leadership, Romney gets a strong A.
