Voyager Spacecraft Celebrates 35 Years

September 5, marked the 35th anniversary of the launch of Voyager 1, which lifted off in 1977 on a Titan III–Centaur launch system just 16 days after its twin, Voyager 2. Now 11 billion and 9 billion miles from the sun, respectively, the spacecraft are the farthestflung man-made objects, traveling every 100 days a distance equal to that between sun and Earth.

"We thought we could do this, but it is, in a certain sense, amazing," says Ed Stone, the mission's project scientist and the David Morrisroe Professor of Physics at Caltech. "After all, when the Voyagers were launched, the space age itself was only 20 years old."

Originally commissioned to last just four years, the Voyager mission created two identical spacecraft—with the hope that at least one would reach Jupiter and Saturn. As we now know, both Voyager spacecraft survived launch and the harsh radiation environment around Jupiter to relay close-up images and scientific measurements of the outer solar system's planets and their moons.

There was much more out there to be discovered than we could have possibly imagined," says Andrew Ingersoll, an atmospheric scientist on the Voyager team and professor of planetary science at Caltech. There were many heroes on the Voyager mission, but I like to say that the planets themselves were among those. The planets came through with amazing stuff."

The Voyager spacecraft made a long list of discoveries on their tour of the outer planets. Some of Voyager 1's greatest hits include the finding that one of Jupiter's moons, Io, is home to eight active volcanoes spewing sulfur and oxygen, and that Saturn's largest moon, Titan, has a nitrogen atmosphere that lacks oxygen. For its part, Voyager 2 was the first spacecraft to visit and study Uranus and Neptune. At Uranus, it found that the planet's magnetic pole lies closer to the equator than the poles. And at Neptune, Voyager 2 found the fastest winds in the solar system.

"These are things we hadn't really thought about or imagined," Stone says. "With what I call our limited terracentric view, it was hard to realize how diverse nature really is. That's what Voyager revealed."

"What's Going On?" News and Views from Joan Schmidt

The beautiful Los Angeles County Arboretum in Arcadia was the site of the Sheriff's Department's Contract Cities Annual Barbecue. The theme was and entertainment were great. I had the pleasure of sitting with part of Duarte's officials, Public Safety's Brian Villalobos, Lois Gaston, City Manager Daryl George, Council Member Liz Reilly and Captain Nee, our Commander of Temple Station.

Sheriff Lee Baca was the key speaker. He began, "What makes Los Angeles County so great? Ten million residents make it the most populated county in the country. 88% of its residents live in incorporated cities; that is 8.8 million people ...Currently there is an all-time low crime rate. The governing process of these cities with its keen interest in public safety attributes to this... For example-the Contract City model -we're embedded in your city hall...Public safety is one of the greatest reasons for government." (At Duarte City Council Meetings, you'll find the Sheriff's Department, while at Monrovia and Arcadia City Meetings, you'll find their Chiefs of Police, Jim Hunt and Bob Guthrie.)

The Sheriff spoke highly of all his fine captains. At each station, a Captain is in charge and really serves as "Chief of Police" for his area. Captain Bobby Denham has been up at Palmdale Sheriff's Station for over twenty years. (Current Monrovia City Manager Laurie Lile couldn't say enough about how competent he is.) Captain Dave Silversparre oversees the Crescenta Valley Station. (No stranger to area residents, he served several years as Lieutenant at Temple Station.) Our current Temple Commander, Chris Nee actually oversees FIVE cities: Bradbury, Duarte, Rosemead, South El Monte and Temple City.

SHERIFF BACA SPEAKS AT ANNUAL BARBCUE

(These are only a few of the many fine men AND women overseeing various stations.)

Sheriff Baca then spoke about the custody situation and an education program. From the time I met then-Chief Lee Baca, back in 1993, I became aware of his insight and the great scope Hawaiian, and the food of his vision. This man went to East LA College - had a "C" average, but went on and eventually received his Doctorate - he is always encouraging youths to value education and shares his background with them. He encourages young people by his story with the words, "You can achieve anything if you try."

In his address, Sheriff Baca said he made a "game-changing decision, and now there is a comprehensive form of education. We are changing the way we incarcerate. Education-Based Incarceration is a component of the criminal justice system that is focused on deterring crime by investing in its offenders through education and rehabilitation. By providing substantial and intellectual education in jails, and being supportive rather than punitive in efforts to reduce crime related behavior, the likelihood to recidivate is lowered while success and stability in the community occurs."

Holding lawbreakers accountable for their actions is the main priority of Education-Based Incarceration. Incarceration is the chief means of imposing accountability for acts that threaten public safety. The influx of 30,000 inmates from state prisons to county jails across the state has caused a massive amount of change. County inmates are released earlier and the public needs to be protected.

Sheriff Baca's vision, "The uneducated mind will probably live in a threatened and limited way," provides opportunity for six principles to be the foundation for which the Education-Based Incarnation operates from. (In a later column, I will explain the six principles of Education-Based Incarceration, as space permits.)

there were periods of of some significance. There were also periods of no dreams - at dreams.

When I was about 6 or 7, I would have memorable dreams if I had eaten watermelon after dinner.

Years later, when I desired to have dreams and coded answers to my inner questions, I would eat watermelon. But there was no longer the magic of watermelons, and later in life, watermelons no longer gave me dreams with discernable or reliable results. Maybe my body chemistry was different then, and the watermelon gave my brain and body something it needed to give me dream messages. Maybe I would have adventures there, and it was where my modern seedless hybridized watermelon lacks some chemical that the old open-pollinated seeded watermelons used to have. I don't know.

Back to age 6 or 7. During the winter and into the summer, I would go to a specific place over and over in my dreams. I drew a map of the area that I would go to, and was always frustrated that my artistic ability was not good enough to accurately depict where I'd been. I would revise the maps with new dreams. This dreamland corresponded to Los Robles Avenue and Woodbury Road, and included all the stores that were in that old business district before miraculously, get back up to Woodbury Road and the widening of Woodbury Road. And things in the dreamtime were a bit different than that actual area, in some cases a lot different, and in a few spots, you could go through one door or opening and end up somewhere completely else.

I went to watermelon land and did things there. I had some friends there too, and they seemed to correspond to my normal waking friends. But there were others too, others who I did not know in my waking life. I looked forward to going back to this land, though I did not know when I might go there.

Sometimes, I would walk east from the watermelon patch, corresponding to travelling east on Woodbury Road, about to where the old laudromat used to be. The dreamtime path was dirt, not paved. Somewhere in the street there would be this large shower-room, like the showers at the Boys Club over on Fair Oaks. I am not sure why, but I would take a shower there. The shower room would transform into an ancient Greek temple, complete with the decorative columns that seemed as tall as a three-story building. I would stand there, letwas heavenly. And it was heavenly, literally, for the another part of myself

I have always locker room always became this top-of-the-world dreamed. Sometimes scene, as if I was literally in heaven, at some edge where I could look down to earth and I would see many dreams of great the water from my shower raining down through significance, or at least, the clouds back onto earth. The tall white columns surrounded me in this open air temple and I knew I was safe and immortal there in that shower-temple. And I was the only one in the world that knew that least no memorable temple existed in the sewer!

> There was a drain hole in the shower, and sometimes I would slide down into the drain hole with the water, and I would end up in an area that seemed very much like Washington Park, a large grassy expanse with bridges and walkways. However, in the dream, it was very much like Washington Park, but not there at El Molino and Washington, but rather somewhere way down south on Rosemead Avenue, set somewhere amidst warehouses and rough > more dangerous and risky adventures would take place. Once I had to go with guns and several helpers to one of the warehouses down there and rescue a few friends that were held captive. I learned that I could escape back home by finding the drainage ditch, which flowed right through that area. I could jump in there, and run back up to Highland Avenue, jump out, and go home. It was harder to find the drain hole that got me to that area, but that was another method of escape. In one adventure, I was up on the street trying to find my escape, and I had to slide into the little hole in the gutter to somehow,

> In fact, for many years, I was convinced that there was a unique other-dimensional quality to that particular intersection of Altadena, as if a wormhole or wrinkle in time corresponded to that physical location. It was, at least for me, a true Sacred Spot.

> As the years proceeded and my mind seemed a bit sharper, I would often go to the places that I knew, such as Woodbury and Los Robles, Santa Rosa and Highland, Saint Élizabeth church and school, and more. These were the places I went to in my dreams which appeared as they actually are in waking life, more or less. The dreams of my childhood were pleasant, mysterious, and were the stuff of childhood magic.

It was not until around age 30 that I began to record my dreams, and by then my dreams were very different: darker, frightening, significant, prophetic. Some were warnings for me or someone I knew, and some highly symbolic. Though I sometimes long for my childhood dreams, I have finally learned to ting the comfortable water flow over my body. It use the tool of dreaming as practical messages from

Tip of the Week - Distracted Driving

Distracted driving is any non-driving activity a person engages in that has the potential to distract him or her from the primary task of driving and increase the risk of crashing. The National Safety Council reports that drivers who use a cell phone are four times more likely to be in a crash and are responsible for 636,000 crashes and 2,600 deaths each year. To protect yourself and those around you:

Put your cell phone on silent or vibrate before starting the car.

Modify your voicemail greeting to indicate you are unavailable to answer calls or return messages while driving.

Inform clients, associates and business partners why calls may not be returned immediately. If you need to talk or text, pull over to a safe location and park your vehicle.

Hands-free cell phones are not safer; cell phone driving is a visual, mechanical and cognitive

DAWN SPACECRAFT LEAVES ASTEROID VESTA FOR TREK TO DWARF PLANET CERES

NASA's Dawn spacecraft is on track to become the first probe to orbit and study two distant solar system destinations, to help scientists answer questions about the formation of our solar system. The spacecraft left the giant asteroid Vesta on Sept. 4 to start its two-and-a-half-year journey to the dwarf planet Ceres.

Dawn began its 3-billion-mile odyssey to explore the two most massive objects in the main asteroid belt in 2007. It arrived at Vesta in July 2011 and will reach Ceres in early 2015. Dawn's targets represent two icons of the asteroid belt that have been witness to much of our solar system's history.

To make its escape from Vesta, the spacecraft will spiral away as gently as it arrived, using a special, hyper-efficient system called ion propulsion. Dawn's ion propulsion system uses electricity to ionize xenon to generate thrust. The 12-inchwide ion thrusters provide less power than conventional engines, but can maintain thrust for months at a time.

"Thrust is engaged, and we are now climbing away from Vesta atop a blue-green pillar of xenon ions," said Marc Rayman, Dawn's chief engineer and mission director, at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif. "We are feeling somewhat wistful about concluding a fantastically productive and exciting exploration of Vesta, but now have our sights set on dwarf planet Ceres."

Dawn's orbit provided close-up views of Vesta, revealing unprecedented detail about the giant asteroid. The mission revealed that Vesta completely melted in the past, forming a layered body with an iron core. The spacecraft also revealed the scarring from titanic collisions Vesta suffered in its southern hemisphere, surviving not one but two colossal impacts in Vesta, which are ripples from the two south polar impacts.

the last two billion years. Without Dawn, scientists would This image of NASA's Dawn spacecraft and the giant asteroid Vesta is an artist's concept. Dawn arrived at Vesta on July 15, not have known about the dramatic troughs sculpted around 2011 PDT (July 16, 2011 EDT) and is set to depart on Sept. 4, 2012 PDT (Sept. 5, 2012 EDT). Image credit: NASA/JPL-Caltech

"We went to Vesta to fill in the blanks of our knowledge about the early history of our solar system," said Christopher Russell, Dawn's principal investigator, based at the University of California Los Angeles (UCLA). "Dawn has filled in those pages, and more, revealing to us how special Vesta is as a survivor from the earliest days of the solar system. We can now say with certainty that Vesta resembles a small planet more closely than a typical asteroid."

Vesta, with a mean diameter of 326 miles, does not have enough gravity to make it entirely spherical hence its somewhat irregular appearance. Ceres is three times as large, with a diameter of 950 miles. Designated a "dwarf planet" (as is Pluto), Ceres is composed of both rock and ice and has enough gravity to make it very nearly a perfect sphere.

The mission to Vesta and Ceres is managed by NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., for the agency's Science Mission Directorate in Washington. Dawn is a project of the directorate's Discovery Program, which is managed by NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

UCLA is responsible for the overall Dawn mission science. Orbital Sciences Corp. of Dulles, Va., designed and built the spacecraft. The German Aerospace Center, the Max Planck Institute for Solar System Research, the Italian Space Agency and the Italian National Astrophysical Institute are part of the mission's team.

ARCADIA CITY COUNCIL MEETING -September 4th

Street Closure Planned for November - Public Safety Requests Granted and Explanation of Proposed RV Planning

By Joan Schmidt

Perhaps your evenings are busy that you cannot attend a City Council Meeting in person. Perhaps you don't have Cable TV to watch a meeting. But if you have Internet Access, all you must do is type in "Arcadia City Council Meeting Agenda", and you can go to a web site that not only lists all the agenda items, but also gives history or background information.

The past meeting saw the City Council approve closure of streets in November for Arcadia High School's Festival of Bands.

Two requests by public safety departments were also granted. The Arcadia Fire Department asked for approval of a supplemental appropriation not to exceed $32,000 for the upfront cost of purchasing fire department radio firmware that will be reimbursed through the 2009 State Homeland Security Grant Program.

Why was this requested? Since the terrorist attacks of 9-11, Los Angeles County fire and law enforcement agencies have been proactive in striving for excellent county-wide emergency scene communications among public safety agencies. Part of the plan is to have all radios be "P25compliant" and have the capacity to meet the recommendations of Los Angeles County Fire and law agencies" Radio Tactical Interoperability Communication Plan (TICP) for common communication. The City Council approved this purchase for the Fire Department.

The second request pertained to Police vehicles. The Council was asked to award a purchase order to Wondries Fleet Group for the purchase of eight Ford Crown Victoria Police Pursuit vehicles in the amount of $222,529 and authorize an additional appropriation of $158,229 from the equipment replacement fund.

The Fiscal Year 2012-13 Equipment Acquisition Plan includes a vehicle replacement budget for the replacement of three Dodge Charger police pursuit vehicles (PPV) that have high mileage. Because of re-occurring engine problems, high repair costs and an unreliable track record, the Arcadia Police Department and Public Works Department recommended the City discontinue purchasing Dodge Chargers and instead Ford Crown Victoria PPV while the dependability of the new Chevy Caprice PPV is evaluated. Included in this plan were five additional Ford Crown Victoria PPV scheduled to replace cars that have high mileage in 2013-14. Purchasing a total of eight vehicles at this time would save the city $60,000 over the next two years, so the City Council voted to approve

An explanation of the RV parking and storage proposals is quite lengthy. A brief summary: In March, 2012, the City Council directed staff to develop a proposal to amend parking regulations for recreational vehicles (RVs) in single family residential zones and address the visual impacts these vehicles could impose when parked and/or stored for indefinite periods in view from public rights of way. The Planning Commission considered the proposed regulations at four meetings. Two open discussions were held on March 27 and April 24. A noticed public hearing followed at the Planning Commission's May 22 and June 26 meetings. The Planning Commission voted to recommend approval to the City Council of the proposed regulations. The regulations did include an Exception for properties that do not have vehicular access to a side or rear yard and that there be a 60 day grace period. At the August 7 City Council Meeting, approximately 30 residents who felt RVs should be allowed to be parked in driveways if there no access to the back. The City Council then directed the staff to revise the regulations. (It is to lengthy to be written here, but can be viewed on line under September 4 City Council Agenda.) At the meeting, this subject was tabled to give staff more time to review issues presented by speakers and City Council Members. There will probably be a study session and then a new public hearing with the next 2-3 months.

Duarte's own fitness guru, Stacey Park, owner and circuit coach of Curves is this year's Community Grand Marshal. Park also serves the community as an energetic volunteer, active in the Duarte Chamber of Commerce and other local organizations.

Two longtime and beloved Duarte residents, Bill and Nita Norgard will be celebrated in the parade as Duarte Honored Citizens for their many contributions and years of volunteerism in

The parade, which will lead off a day of festivities celebrating the City's 55th Anniversary, will step off at 10 a.m., followed by the Duarte City Picnic and Classic Car Show at Royal Oaks Park from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

More than 100 parade entries will travel along a one-mile segment of Duarte's historic Route 66, Huntington Dr., from Cotter St. east to Mt. Olive Ave. The colorful cavalcade, cosponsored by the City of Duarte, the Route 66 Parade Committee and the Duarte Community Coordinating Council, will feature antique and classic cars, marching bands, equestrian units, and floats. Some 1,400 participants in all will take part in the event, including local school, church and community groups. The parade also attracts participants from throughout Southern California eager to share a role in the nation's only annual parade to celebrate Route 66, the Mother Road, among them, 10 high school marching bands. Entertaining the parade crowd will be bands from Diamond Bar High School,

Diamond Ranch High School, Ganesha High

School, Mayfair High School, San Dimas High School, Workman High School, Don Lugo High School, Beckman High School, Basset High School, and Duarte High School.

Following the parade, the fun continues at the City Picnic at Royal Oaks Park. The public is invited to enjoy food, craft and game booths sponsored by community nonprofit groups. Two performance stages will offer a variety of live entertainment. The main Celebration stage will feature performances by As One, Colton B & the L.A. Hip Kidz, and Rage Crew, world champion dance group. Youngsters can enjoy a variety of special entertainment performed on the Children's Stage, including children's Pop band, Perfect Opposite. A free arts and crafts area will be located adjacent to the Children's Stage, along with a mini-carnival area with free games and a giant inflatable slide.

Car enthusiasts and the whole family can get their kicks at the Route 66 Classic Car Show across from Royal Oaks Park. The car show offers an opportunity to take a close-up look at some of the many beautiful antique and classic cars featured in the parade.

Opened in 1926, Route 66 was the first highway to connect Chicago to Los Angeles. It was nicknamed the Main Street of America because it passed through the heart of communities, including Duarte, more than 2,000 miles from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Ocean. Route 66 was decommissioned in 1973 when the interstate highway was completed, but the love and lore of Route 66 lives on.

MONROVIA HIGH SCHOOL SCIENCE STUDENTS WIN SPECIAL NASA INFLIGHT EDUCATION DOWNLOAD

By Joan Schmidt

Arcadia High School has its awesome Government students thanks to teacher Kevin Fox. Move over Arcadia. Now it's time for Monrovia High School to shine, thanks to Science Teacher, Pamela Thompson, who refers to herself as a "space geek."

NASA has a special Inflight Education Program which allows select schools throughout the country to link up directly to astronauts for a video conference as they orbit the Earth on the International Space Station. Forty-two schools applied for this great opportunity, but only six were chosen, and Monrovia High was one of the six!

Ms. Thompson related that "They loved our proposal" and "We're really, really super excited about it, because it's really a special thing."

Although the download will be hosted at the high school, elementary and middle school students will also have the opportunity to participate in this great experience. The event will be broadcast to other Monrovia schools, so the entire district will be included.

Ms. Thompson plans to compile twenty student questions for the 20 minute download session which will be on March 8. To participate in this video conference, the class will learn about how the download technology works by going through a whole series of NASA activities. Congratulation Ms. Thompson for providing such an extraordinary learning experience not only for high school students, but all students in the Monrovia Unified School District.

We'd like to hear from you! What's on YOUR Mind?

La Salle High School began its school year on August 23 as 171 new freshmen joined the Lancer student body. The Welcome Orientation on August 22 featured small groups of freshmen with their "Senior Class Buddies" on a tour of the campus, video presentations and a run-through of classes. A pizza lunch was followed by a rally.

At La Salle High School, there are 710 students from ninth through twelfth grades; with a majority that live in the San Gabriel Valley. They join new Principal, Brother Christopher Brady, FSC who began his tenure as principal on July 1, 2012. "I am very please to, once again, be a member of the La Salle family," said Brother Christopher. Former principal, Patrick Bonacci, AFSC is now the Vice President for Mission.

With over 65% of the teaching staff holding Master's and PhD credentials that allows them to teach at the college level, La Salle draws educators who choose to teach in La Salle High School's nurturing environment, developed from a 350-year Christian Brothers' Lasallian educational tradition. To maintain our Catholic identity, two-thirds of our entering freshmen class are of the Catholic faith. In addition, Nearly 25% of our school population receives partial or full tuition need-based assistance due to the generosity of our extended La Salle family, donors and supporters.

PUSD TO BEGIN TEXT MESSAGING FOR messages, text 'PUSDESPANOL' to 888777. Standard text messaging PARENT AND PUBLIC COMMUNICATION

Text 'PUSD' to 888777 to Receive Alerts from the District

Pasadena, CA --- The Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) today announced that parents, students, staff and community members now have another way to receive information from the district. PUSD has partnered with Nixle to provide emergency alerts, district updates and school news via text message and email in both English and Spanish. Nixle is a leading mass notification provider used by thousands of schools, police departments, fire departments and other government agencies around the country.

The aim of the program is to reach PUSD students, parents, faculty and staff quickly by text message and email in the event of an emergency and to improve the quality of communications between the district and the surrounding community and stakeholders. Examples include inclement weather advisories, campus emergencies, closures and early dismissals, event reminders and school newsletters.

Residents can immediately begin opting-in to receive notifications by simply texting the word 'PUSD' to 888777; or, for Spanish-language rates associated with mobile phone service plans may apply. It is also possible to sign up for the notification service at the PUSD website, www.pusd.us.

"We want to make sure our students and their parents receive the information that matters most to them, whether it is an urgent safety alert or an update on an afterschool activity," said PUSD Superintendent Jon R. Gundry. "With Nixle, we have the ability to send timely, relevant notifications quickly and efficiently to the Pasadena, Altadena and Sierra Madre communities. The windsforms of 2011 taught us that we need every communication tool available in English and Spanish the next time we need to alert the public due to an emergency.

One can also receive news and information from the district by texting 'PUSDNEWS' to 888777; or, for news and information in Spanish, text 'PUSDNOTICIAS' to 888777. Individual schools will soon have the ability to establish opt-in keywords and begin texting to their parents, students, alumni and surrounding community.

In addition to notifying the school community, Nixle's award-winning approach to mass notification further integrates PUSD into the surrounding neighborhoods and cities. Nixle's partnerships with area law enforcement agencies, including the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department and the Pasadena and Sierra dre Police Departments: district to also share critical, highpriority alerts with area residents in situations where such notifications would also be of interest to the community at-large.

Text messaging will complement the phone and email communication and Twitter and Facebook presence that is already being used by the district. The use of mobile communication by PUSD follows the nationwide trend of how people prefer to receive news and information. According to a 2012 Pew Research Center Study, 47 percent of adults receive local news or information on their mobile device.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show Movie Reviews Especially for Teens & 'Tweens

PREMIUM RUSH

The last big movie of the summer is definitely an adrenaline packed surprise. Once the movie starts, it keeps you going until the very end. I honestly had very low expectations for this film, but it proved me completely wrong. This was a great end to the summer.

The calamity starts with Wilee (Joseph Gordon-Levitt), a New York bicycle deliveryman, picking up an unusual package. From there he's pursued by police, one particularly persistent cop (Michael Shannon), and even his fellow workers. Using a clever timeline plot point which keeps you tied to the movie, and even a little heart, Premium Rush did not disappoint.

With a story like this, and how it was told, this movie could have easily been a flop. That, however, is not the case. Both director (David Koepp) and writers (David Koepp, John Kamps) used all of their film making skills to make this movie the best it could be. I will say that it was good that they had one well known actor, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, to catch people's attention.

While this probably won't go down as one of the greatest movie's of all time, it was a well told and well acted action film that brought the summer movie season to a close. Ben Show is local Monrovian going into the eighth grade. He loves to read, write, and watch movies. He can be reached at benshow@earthlink.net

THIS FOOTBALL SEASON, TAILGATE WITHOUT WORRIES Tips on How to Avoid Food Poisoning

The official starts of professional, college and high school football seasons are just beginning and many Americans are looking forward to the time-honored tradition of tailgating. During these pre-game festivities, usually in the stadium parking lot, there is always an abundance of food from burgers and potato salad to sandwiches and desserts.

"Tailgating is as American a tradition as football itself, but foodborne illness can be a game changer if proper food handling practices aren't followed," said Cheryl Luptowski, Public Information Officer for NSF International. "Taking simple precautions can keep you, your friends and family safe and let you concentrate on enjoying the game."

Here are some tips to keep in mind when tailgating: 1. Avoid false starts.

Bringing a meat thermometer to the game will help you avoid taking food off the grill too soon and serving it undercooked to your fellow fans. You can't rely on your eyes alone, so use an NSF-certified food thermometer to make sure foods are cooked to the proper minimum internal temperature: Whole or ground poultry — 165° F

Ground meats (other than poultry) — 160° F

Fresh fin fish — 145° F

Fresh whole (not ground) pork, beef, veal — 145° F with a three-minute rest time Put your marinade on the sidelines.

When preparing for the big day, keep your marinade in bounds. If you need some for basting, do not use marinade that has come into contact with raw meat. Instead, set aside a small amount of prepared marinade in a separate dish and bring it to the game.

3. Play defense. Take defensive measures to protect you and your family against germs by:

Bringing wet wipes and hand sanitizer to the game. Make sure you sanitize your hands frequently, especially after putting raw meat on the grill and before eating.

Bringing two sets of utensils and dishes if grilling raw meat — one for use with raw foods, the other for cooked foods.

Having a plastic bag handy to store dirty utensils or dishes that have touched raw meats to prevent spreading germs in a cooler or in your car after the pre-game meal.

Cooking outside makes it challenging to avoid cross-contamination. Prepare for the big day by packing three coolers: one for your raw meats, another with your pre-made foods (e.g. potato salad, vegetables) and a third for your beverages. Pack the food at the bottom of the cooler and the ice on top to better insulate the food and keep it at a safe temperature of 40° F. As partygoers often open coolers to get drinks, pack beverages in a separate cooler to avoid frequent opening of the coolers containing perishable foods. 5. Don't let your food go into overtime.

While it's tempting to display your game day food spread, it should not be left out for more than two hours (or one hour on days over 90° F) to avoid bacterial growth. Keep perishable foods in coolers to help keep them at safe temperatures as long as you can, and don't take them out until right before it's time to eat.

Come prepared with trash bags and create a neutral area to dispose of garbage, empty cans or bottles, and unwanted leftovers. Keep your tailgating area neat and avoid placing glass bottles on the ground where they could be tripped on or broken. When game time is over, throw out your garbage on your way out of the stadium if possible rather than leaving it in your car where bacteria can grow and spread to other

"Tailgating is a fun way to celebrate before watching your favorite team play, but can be ruined if you don't follow the rules of food safety," said Luptowski. "These tips will keep food poisoning at bay, and help make the pre-game experience a safe and happy one."

- 2 egg yolks, beaten
- 1 1/2 cups beer or water
- 1 quart vegetable oil for frying 1 (3 pound) whole chicken, cut into pieces

DIRECTIONS:

In one medium bowl, mix together 3 cups of flour, garlic salt, 1 tablespoon black pepper, paprika and poultry seasoning. In a separate bowl, stir together 1 1/3 cups flour, salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, egg yolks and beer. You may need to thin with additional beer if the batter is too thick.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

THE CULTURALLY CORRECT CORDIAL CANINE

I have always been amazed at the many ways that a dog can change a human being's life for the better. There are various and sundry reasons why the family dog has earned the age-old title of "man's best friend", and rightfully so. Among the many character virtues that the canine shares with his two-legged human companions, most amazing to me is that fact that the dog is capable and more than willing to bridge the gap between humans of differing ages, cultures, lifestyles and languages. The idea that a dog is actually capable of bringing people together, who would otherwise most likely not even bother to share the time of day with one another, really hit close to home for me one day while I was out walking the local hills with a couple of my canine companions.

I am a person who appreciates diversity in my life. I have an eclectic collection of friends, including people of various colors, shapes, sizes, ages and walks of life, but I must admit that I am only human, therefore I do still notice the differences between myself and others. No matter how hard I try to ignore or even erase thoughts and preconceptions that may come to mind when I cross paths with people who look or act different from myself, there are times when I make certain presumptions based on appearance or behavior and I try very hard to suppress it, but the thoughts still come none-the-less. I realize that my mind works this way because, in spite of having parents who taught me to be color blind when it comes to being kind to others, I was raised in a deep southern-steeped culture that inherently encourages identification of others according to the color of their skin, racial origin, behavioral patterns, or even financial status, and I think that is very unfortunate. If I could change that about my past, I most definitely would. But, it is what it is and all one can do is live one's own life the way they know they should. I said all that to say this...Thank God for dogs!

During a nice long walk with "Bo" and "Loucie", two of my favorite four-legged furry friends, we were trekking up Grand View towards the Arcadia highlands, when we happened to cross paths with an older couple walking two darling little silky terriers. Because Bo and Loucie are always very cordial in dealing with other dogs that we meet along the way, I was not concerned about a potential canine confrontation, so we stayed steady on our trail rather than crossing to the other side of the street.

As we drew closer to the couple who were walking towards us on the same side of the road, I looked up at them, gave them a great big, "hey there, so happy to meet ya" kind of smile, and said "good morning!". Initially, they both looked away in what almost appeared to be embarrassment. My thought is that they were not completely comfortable with my greeting, simply because they are not completely comfortable with their skills in speaking the English language. Apparently, however the two dogs I was walking spoke the same language as the two that they were walking, so all four of the 4-leggers greeted each other with nothing but confidence and appreciation and within a moment's time, we humans followed suit and stood and watched the dogs interact and socialize with intent vigor.

By the time we parted ways, having observed such kind and reciprocal social behavior between our pets, I felt I had made a couple of new friends that I hope to bump into again in the near future, and I would like to think that they felt the same way. See what I mean? How cool is it that our pets can play such a major part in bridging a gap t that our pets can play such a major part in bridging a gap between ourselves and others we may otherwise not relate to? That is what prompted me to share this short and simple (yet, hopefully effective) story about the value of a dog's social virtues. Perhaps we humans should be more willing to learn and benefit from the canine's example of behaving in a 'culturally correct' manner.

Meanwhile, our beloved pets are always there for us, whether it be within our own four walls, or when we are out and about in town. Let's be thankful that God made creatures such as the canine to help us humans work through the quirky imbalances of our social skills, and take a lesson from their willingness to get along regardless of color, size or shape. Who knew the dog could be such a valuable teacher? Probably them! Ha!

School's back in session and the Football season has begun. The La Salle Lancer's started their season out with a super sized victory over the Glendale High School Nitro's - 45 to 16.

According to the LA Times reporter Charles Rich, much of the victory is to be attributed to the team's "all-purpose standout Israel Lacy, who enjoyed arguably the biggest game of his career", scoring two kickoff returns and rushing for a touch down last Friday.

"I have to give the guys in front of me all the credit because they opened up quite a few huge holes," said Lacy, who helped the Lancers improve to 2-0. "I saw those holes and busted right through.

"I liked the way we were able to come out strong and we were fighting from the beginning. We went out there and made things work."

THE PERKS OF BEING A WALLFLOWER

By Stephen Chbosky

When it comes to this next selection, 'The Perks of Being a Wallflower' is a definite must-read. Although copyrighted in 1999 and reprinted in paperback in August 2012 by MTV Books/Gallery Books, "Perks" really brings in a new perspective in the delicate world of adolescence and growing up. Written by Stephen Chbosky and a New York Times bestseller, "Perks" really provides its unique perk from the perspective of our main protagonist named Charlie who provides his personal narrative by having three separate parts outlining the most defining and pivotal moments of his life. Each part lacks chapters and instead is written not just from Charlie's point of view, but done so as letters to someone simply called "Friend". This little fine quality is what gives "Perks of Being a Wallflower" its quirky charm and leaves something to the imagination of the reader; it is never revealed if the "friend" is an actual character or if Charlie is addressing the reader themselves. All that matters for the reader is that the focus is on Charlie, the socialization with his friends Sam (Charlie's love interest) and Patrick (who can be just as reserved as Charlie is), and how he interacts with family. But there are also Charlie's own personal experiences, how he is more of an observer than a participant of life, how he interacts at school, and the relationships maintained with those around him. His casual tone and mellow personality provide a very fitting combination for teenagers of the past, present, and even future which provides a very calming and introspective atmosphere of navigating the world of growing up. To also add to its flair, 'The Perks of Being a Wallflower' has also been made into a movie adaptation and will be released later this month.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

Review By Sean Kayden

NOW IS THE TIME TO BREAKTHROUGH finest television series of all time. WITH BREAKING BAD

If you're not watching "Breaking Bad," we have a big problem. There's nothing quite like the astonishing odyssey of this beloved series.

Last Sunday night was the mid season finale to the greatest show on television. Many loose ends were tied up, but as anticipated, we were left with a cliffhanger that will surely put the final eight episodes in overdrive next summer. This fifth season had to follow-up probably the best season of "Breaking Bad," which is not an easy task. Somehow B.B. managed to still be stellar as usual, but drastically different too. After a continuous being on the edge-ofyour-seat during the duration of season four, this current season was a lot more methodical in the terms of its brilliant storytelling, while additionally being tighter paced, and focusing heavily more so on the rise and (soon to be?) fall of Walter White. This first half of season five feels more like a direct response to the outcome of season four. It was all about covering their tracks and essentially boiling down to every man for himself, no matter the relationships, either personal or professional.

At the same token, never does the show feel falsely depicted, contrived, or convenient in character motivations and actions as well as plots and subplots. Everything was seemingly perfect, but exhaustively contemplated with each beat by beat. It's absolutely remarkable how the writers make references from previous episodes from even prior seasons. Seriously, with some of the best writing, directing, and acting on both television and the big screen, "Breaking Bad" continues to unravel with all its complexities, intricacies, and well-thought out plots into perhaps the

I'm not here to give away any spoilers, but to commend the show for being so damn good all these years and never once feeling as if it was running out of steam. With the final eight episodes premiering next year, I'd like to take a moment to advise anyone reading this to queue up your Netflix (or any other service you fancy) and start watching this unbelievable, one of a kind television series. I've recommended the show to a number of friends, many of whom have never invested any reasonable time to a given television series in their lives. However, these several individuals became hooked within the first few episodes and now watch it religiously.

Regardless, "Breaking Bad" is worth every bit of praise and then some. It's not one of the shows where so many people like it and you think you'll be the one person who hates it. The show rattles your bones, hits you over the head repeatedly and tears you limb from limb at times. Like I've said, when watching this undeniably mesmerizing work of art, you'll be utterly enthralled with the main characters, secondary characters, nuances, metaphors, foreshadowing, twists and turns, and the universe as a whole as you continue to go along. It's a wild ride unlike anything you've seen and it's coming down to the finish line, but it's not too late to jump on board. You have ten months from now till the start of the final eight episodes.

Do yourself a big favor and start watching it today. You'll be delighted you did, as you'll be experiencing one of the greatest television series of all time. And when Summer 2013 is bestowed upon us, you'll be prepared for what may very well be the best eight hours of

HEALTH & FITNESS

THE JOY OF YOGA COMFORTABLE AND STEADY

Sukha and stira are the words for comfortable and steady in Sanskrit. If there was a goal in yoga, it would be just this. The yoga postures gradually get more and more challenging and yet we strive to have the same comfort and steadiness in each of them, whether or not they are beginning or advanced. In a step by step process (krama) we work toward calm and steady breath, calm and steady postures and ultimately a clam and steady mind. These are the teachings of the Hatha tradition, or classical yoga.

Sure we want flexibility. Sure we want toned muscles. And we want to have fun. But comfortable and steady leads to happiness. Sensationalism is just that. Over-stimulation or over-indulgence do not foster calm and steady. These things just add to our addiction to adrenalin. Over-stimulation eventually burns us out. Some styles of yoga and fitness can contribute to the addiction, leaving us temporarily 'high'. But what we want is a lasting steadiness. A peaceful calm that allows us to access our wisdom, a clear mind and comfort in our own skin.

One of the ways that we can do this is by practicing longer holds in the postures. Concentrating on the steadiness of the muscles and breath. You see, we need to train the mind to be comfortable and steady. In our fast-paced world, it is no longer a natural state. It is a choice. A choice that we must work on everyday. From that calm, we make good choices for ourselves, wise choices. We can create a life of harmony.

See you in class ready for some calm and steady.

TAKE IT OFF SLOW, KEEP IT OFF LONGER

The most common question that I get as a personal trainer is "what should my diet look like". If your goal is weight loss then you know that increasing cardiovascular exercise will help you lose weight and strength training allow you to keep it off. The real hard work comes with changing the way you eat. The truth is that every

No matter which discipline...Atkins, Mediterranean, Paleo and/ or weight watchers, any and all of them will help you lose weight. Our problem as a society is failing to stick to a diet, when that happens the pounds creep back on and then some.

My philosophy to recommending dietary changes is constructed around the long-term outlook. "Take it off slower and keep it off longer" is my mantra. No matter which discipline you choose, make

My clients who have had the most success with weight loss

have slowly reengineered how they eat over a matter of a few years. They set a longterm overall goal but also short term and easily attainable milestones that keep their eyes on that prize. Say your overall goal is to lose 30 pounds, the first 5-10 pounds will quickly come off just as a product of the change in your dietary and exercise habits. It is the next 20-25 pounds but are challenging so then your next milestone needs to be smaller as well as given a greater length of time. Your next milestone should look something like 5 pounds every two to three months. I know that calculates to a year but for some of us the weight loss battle has lasted a lifetime. Advertisers would have us believe that what we put on over several years should only take months to take off. They say nothing about keeping it off, wonder why?

Once you have met your goal, the harder challenge begins...trying to keep it off. There will be holidays, celebrations and situations where we will want to treat ourselves and indulge. I for one I'm all about the indulgence, hard work deserves reward. If your reward revolves around food, make sure you have earned it and remains a reward that you only get once in a while. If you have gotten carried away, gained weight back and think all is lost, remember YOU ARE ONLY ONE MEAL AWAY FROM GET-TING BACK ON TRACK. Once you pick a diet, ask yourself if you can eat using its principles for the longterm, thats what it will take for you keep weight off over your lifetime.

JUST LISTED: HISTORIC 1880 HOME IN GLENDORA

In 1877 the families of Philip Shorey, John P. Englehart, Cal Johnson, J. Charles West and James J. West settled in the Glendora area.

According to the Glendora city website, www.ci.Glendora.ca.us, "Before the turn of the century, vast groves of orange and lemon Glendora Heights Extra Fancy citrus crate label trees began to establish Glendora as a center of the new Southern California citrus industry. In 1896, Glendora built its first packing house, and for a while the largest citrus packing house in the world was located here. Glendora had the great honor of loading a weekly supply of oranges and lemons aboard the Santa Fe train bound for the White House dining table of President William Howard Taft during his term of office from 1909 to 1913."

The West's land purchases included the property where today's featured home is located. Local lore suggests the property was purchased for a shotgun and a mule, according to the current owner. They are told the site of the home was originally a sod house in the middle of a citrus grove, used as a storage facility for the fruit grown there.

The delightful three bedroom, 1392 square foot main home was constructed in 1880 in the Queen Anne Victorian style. The floorplan is flexible and offers twelve foot ceilings, transom windows over substantial wood doors, even a claw foot tub!

"When I saw the house, I knew I just had to have it," chuckled the owner. "I didn't even know why at first. I walked through it one time and was charmed, and fell in love with it. It's so peaceful and quiet!"

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed

by Luther Tsinoglou Realtor®

WHEN LESS COSTS MORE

'Timing the market" in real estate doesn't work the way it does with stocks. Homes are bought and sold more out of necessity than to make an easy buck. However, some indicators give a clue when it's a good time to buy. Like now!

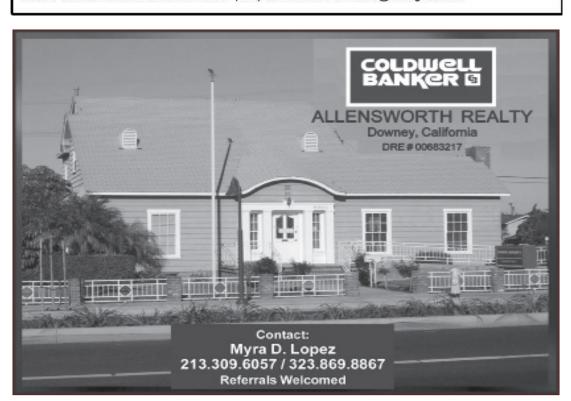

Despite the fact that rates are low and prices may still drop, now is the time to move if you have good credit and funds for down payment. It would be a mistake to "wait and see" if rates or prices fall any more. Why?

Rates are low now because of federal bailouts, but continued low rates can fuel inflation. Fear of inflation causes "the Fed" to raise those rates. Waiting for a lower price on a home while interest rates rise could make the home more expensive.

Example: purchasing a home now for $177,000 at 5% could make the total cost around $370,000 by the end of the loan term. But what if you wait for prices to fall more, and next year you get that home for $160,000. You saved $17,000 - right? Wrong!

If rates rise 2% during that time, you could pay over $400,000 over the life of the loan - $30,000 more than if you bought now! If the math is still fuzzy to you, call me and I'll be glad to crunch the numbers with you. You'll be glad you did.

HOW TO RECOGNIZE AND GET HELP FOR DEPRESSION

Dear Savvy Senior:

Where can I find help for depression? My husband, who's 68, has become lethargic and very irritable over the past year, and I'm concerned that he's depressed. Worried Wife

Depression is unfortunately a widespread problem among U.S. seniors, affecting approximately 15 percent of the 65-and-older population. Here's what you should know, along with some tips and resources for screening and treatments.

Recognizing Depression

Everyone feels sad or gets the blues now and then, but when these feelings linger more than a few weeks, it may be depression. Depression is a real illness that affects mood, feelings, behavior and physical health, and contrary to what many people believe, it's not a normal part of aging or a personal weakness, but it is very treatable.

It's also important to know that depression is not just sadness. In many seniors it can manifest as apathy, irritability, or problems with memory or concentration without the depressed mood.

To help you get some insight on the seriousness of your husband's problem, here's a rundown of the warning signs to be vigilant of.

A persistent feeling of sadness.

- A lost interest in hobbies or activities that were previously enjoyed.
- Feelings of guilt, worthlessness or hopelessness.
- Trouble concentrating, remembering or making decisions.
- Feeling anxious, restless, or irritable.
- Loss of energy or motivation.
- Inability to sleep or sleeping too much. Not eating or eating too much.
- Thoughts about dying or suicide.

A good resource for identifying depression is Mental Health America, a national nonprofit organization that offers a free online depression screening test at depression-screening.org. This test takes just a few minutes to take and can help determine the severity of your husband's problem.

There's also National Depression Screening Day which is coming up on Oct. 11. Sponsored by Screening for Mental Health, this is a completely free service that provides depression screenings by mental health professionals at hundreds of locations across the country. The test takes less than 15 minutes to complete, and is available to people of all ages. To find a site near you visit helpyourselfhelpothers.org.

Also be aware that Medicare now covers annual depression screenings as part of their free Welcome to Medicare visit for new beneficiaries, and free annual wellness visits thereafter.

If your husband is suffering from depressive symptoms, he needs to see his doctor for a medical evaluation to rule out possible medical causes. Some medications, for example, can produce side effects that mimic depressive symptoms - pain and sleeping meds are common culprits. It's also important to distinguish between depression and dementia which can share some of the same

If he's diagnosed with depression, there are a variety of treatment options including talk therapy, antidepressant medications or a combination of both.

Cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT) is a particularly effective type of talk therapy which helps patients recognize and change destructive thinking patterns that leads to negative feelings. For help finding a therapist who's trained in CBT, ask your doctor for a referral, check your local yellow pages under "counseling" or "psychologists," or check with the Association for Behavioral and Cognitive Therapies (abct.org), or the Academy of Cognitive Therapy (academyofct.org).

Another treatment worth mentioning is a relatively new procedure called transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS). This FDA-approved treatment uses a small electromagnet placed on the scalp right behind the left forehead, and delivers a tiny electric current to the part of the brain linked to depression. TMS is currently available in about 420 psychiatrist offices around the country (see neurostartms.com) and is very effective for older patients.

Case in point: The intersection of Baldwin, Foothill, and the 210 freeway. (I hope an Arcadia traffic engineer is reading this!) For years, Arcadia had a "dumb" light there. Then, for a while, its intelligence shot up and the light became capable of knowing when to change signals to keep traffic flow smooth. All of us motorists were thrilled!

BUSINESS NEWS & TRENDS

After my Dell laptop died 2 years ago I decided against replacing it as I already had two work-assigned computers at my disposal and, since much of my at-home computing activities revolved around work issues, it seemed totally reasonable that I should just use one of those computers. The work machine that I used most often was a Dell Latitude E5530 running Windows 7 Professional. This machine was fairly built-out (Win 7 64-bit Professional, 2nd Gen i5 Intel Core processors, 8GB RAM, 650GB HDD) and had all the administration tools installed that I needed to tweak my network remotely. The other machine was a Macbook (Mac OS X 10.6, 2.0 Core Duo Intel processor, 8GB RAM, 500GB HDD) and was also outfitted with all the remote administration tools and office productivity software I needed to accomplish my daily tasks.

Over the course of time the MacBook became my primary tool-of-choice for a variety of reasons for routine tasks but when it came time to whip out the big guns to work on a problem or project, the main platform was the Dell. I think I liked the MacBook because it seemed less work-like to me and, when I brought it home with me, it didn't sit there reminding by association of whatever business project needed doing at the time. Fast-forward to 2 months ago and the great new business opportunity that fell into my lap that involved a change of workplace and job title. That's when it dawned on me that I now needed a computer. I took a chance and asked my former employer if I could keep the MacBook and to my great relief, they agreed. That only partially solved my problem as I had a ton of software that only runs on Windows and I was now going to need to get all of this stuff on a single platform, one way or another. My first inkling was just to buy another Dell \ Windows laptop but before I even had a chance to begin looking up the latest prices I remembered that there was a way I could fix this dilemma without incurring the cost of a new computer in the process: VMware Fusion 5.

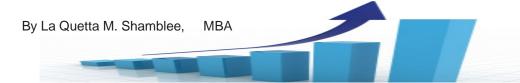

VMware Fusion 3.

VMware Fusion is a normal application that you install on your Mac and you can use it after you've booted into Mac OS X. It resides in your Applications folder and it sits on your Dock, just like Safari and iTunes. After VMware Fusion has been installed and started for the first time you can create what's called a virtual machine. This is actually a file that lives on your Mac, but to the user it appears to be an actual computer running within Mac OS X. You can see the Windows boot up process on the virtual machine when it starts. VMware Fusion will help you install whichever operating system you'd like to use on your virtual machine. Microsoft Windows XP and Windows 7 are just two of many operating systems you can install. You could also install a Linux-based operating system if that is your preference.

Once you've installed your operating system, you can boot into your virtual machine after you've started your Mac. In fact, you can even switch out of your virtual machine and back into Mac OS X at any time. The two operating systems are running in parallel, so you'll never have to restart your Mac to get from Mac OS X to Windows, or vice versa. VMware is available for download at http://www.vmware.com. A 30-day trial is available for free and a single-user retail license costs $50. So far most, as in 95% or better, of my Windows software is compatible with VMware and the virtual session runs smoothly.

PORTABLE PAYMENT OPTIONS

Mobile credit card readers are making it easier than ever for you to accept and process credit card payments while on-the-go. Remote credit card processing machines are not new, but a new category of products is creating a revolution with an application of the technology to Smart Phones that can allow you to accept payments most anywhere. Mobile payments are transactions processed via wireless technology. It is considered safer than processing payment via the phone or internet since a physical credit card is presented in person to be scanned on the mobile credit card reader.

Until recently, PayPal has reigned as the most popular online payment service outside of vendor-specific websites like Amazon.com and other retailers. But this new mobile payment processing technology can turn any Smart Phone into a portable payment register. It is no longer necessary to return to the office to prepare an invoice to send to a potential buyer who is ready to pay with a credit card. Entrepreneurs and businesses that accept credit cards generate more sales than those that only accept cash and checks. In addition to providing your customers with a full range of options to make purchases, it also allows you to take your business beyond the confines of four walls of an office or retail location. This opens up opportunities for entrepreneurs to turn participation in trade shows and other offsite presentations and meetings into activities that can generate revenue.

By signing up for a mobile credit card processing service, you will be able to provide real-time transactions at low and competitive rates. You also have the ability to transmit receipts to customers via e-mail or text for each transaction. One of the most impressive upfront benefits is that the most popular of these new services is free to get started. The companies that offer mobile credit card processing services charge a percent for each transaction. Most offer the small credit card scanning device at no cost.

Larger, hand held devices that print are also available, but the newer, smaller devices are less than one inch thick and most are less than half the size of a standard business card. The compact size has created a whole new realm of possibilities for sales offsite. Some of the most popular include Intuit's Go Payment, PayPal's Here and the Square, co-created by Jack Dorsey, the creator of Twitter.

If you have a Facebook page, take a look at your "insights." This will give you important information about the demographics of your audience and feedback about your posts. You can find out all kinds of information, "likers" by location (country, city) and even by language spoken. You can even find out if there were any "unlikes" and when those events occurred.

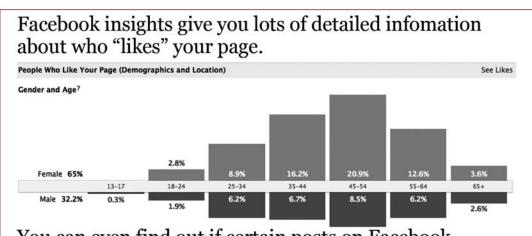

Once you have 30 "Likes" for your Facebook page, you will have access to your insights. They are located in your admin panel at the top of your page. Select "see all" and you will open up detailed reports about the demographics of your audience on Facebook

Don't be afraid to click on the little blue numbers as more detailed information and charts will come up. For example, under the area of "Page Posts," you can click on a number under "engaged users" and a pie chart flies with more details. The pie chart will show you what the "engaged users" did, how many clicked on a photo, shared etc. It will also let you know if any negative activity happened (people who hid your post or gave it negative feedback in the news feed.)

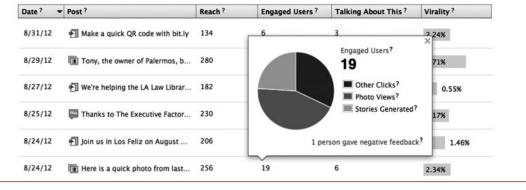

Use the insight information to help you with your messaging strategies. For example, you can see if you have more men than women who like your page and what age group favors your page. Depending on what you find out, tailor your content to fit your demographics.

ANOTHER LOOK AT 9-11: The Myth of the Outside Enemy

questioning the official government explanation that an outside enemy -namely, Al Qaeda -- was responsible for the attacks. Apparently, I am not the only person who remains skeptical of polls in Germany and the UK about 9/11 seem to support my contention about the worst tragedy in U.S. history.

In its January 2011 issue, the popular German magazine "Welt der Wunder" published the results of a poll conducted by the Emnid institute on 1,005 respondents. The poll indicated that nearly 90% of Germans are convinced that the government of the United States is not telling the whole truth about the September 11 attacks_

• A new poll conducted in England by ICM shows that more UK residents agree than disagree that the 9/11 might turn out to be wrong in important respects. Only 8% strongly agree that they have been told the full of the 9/11 attacks.

I thought reprinting my 2010 article, "9/11 and the Myth of the Outside Enemy," might help garner support for a new, truly independent investigation.

"At eleven o'clock, on the morning of September 11, the Bush administration had already announced that AL Qaeda was responsible for the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. This assertion was made prior to conducting any in-depth police investigation.

'That same evening at 9:30 pm, a "War Cabinet" was formed integrated by a select number of top intelligence and military advisors. And at 11:00 pm, at the end of that historic meeting at the White House, the "War on Terrorism" was officially launched.

"The decision was announced to wage war against the Taliban and Al Qaeda on retribution for the 9/11 attacks. The following morning on September 12th, the news headlines indelibly pointed to 'state sponsorship' of the 9/11 attacks. In chorus, the US media was calling for a military intervention against "Barely four weeks later, on the 7th of October, Afghanistan was bombed and invaded by US troops. Americans were led to believe that the decision to go to war had been taken on the spur of the moment, on the evening of September 11, in response to the attacks and their tragic

"Little did the public realize that the

This Tuesday will decision to launch a war and send troops be the eleventh to Afghanistan had been made well in advance of 9/11. The 'terrorist, massive, 9/11. I wrote a casualty-producing event' as it was later column last year described by CentCom Commander 'Tommy' Franks, served to galvanize public opinion in support of a war agenda which was already in its final planning stage.

"The tragic events of 9/11 provided the official account. Results from recent the required justification to wage a war on 'humanitarian grounds,' with the full support of world public opinion and that we have not been told the truth the endorsement of the 'international community.'

"Several prominent 'progressive' intellectuals made a case for 'retaliation against terrorism,' on moral and ethical grounds. The 'just cause' military doctrine was accepted and upheld at face value as a legitimate response to 9/11, without examining the fact that Washington had not only supported the 'Islamic terror network,' it was also instrumental in the installation of the Taliban government in 1996.

"In the wake of 9/11, any opposition official account of what happened on to the war was completely isolated. The trade unions and civil society organizations had swallowed the media lies and government propaganda. They had accepted a war of retribution against Afghanistan, an impoverished country of 30 million people.

'The official story described nineteen Al Qaeda sponsored hijackers involved in a highly sophisticated and organized operation. This myth of the outside enemy' and the threat of 'Islamic terrorists' was the cornerstone of the Bush administrations' military doctrine, used as a pretext to invade Afghanistan and Iraq, not to mention the repeal of civil liberties and constitutional government in America.

'Without an 'outside enemy,' there could be no 'war on terrorism;' The entire national security agenda would collapse 'like a deck of cards; and 'the war criminals in high office would have no leg to stand on.

"Amply documented but rarely mentioned by the mainstream media, Al Qaeda was a creation of the CIA going back to the Soviet-Afghan war. This was a known fact, corroborated by numerous sources including official documents of the US Congress. The intelligence community had time and again acknowledged that they had indeed supported Osama bin Laden, but that in the wake of the Cold War: 'he turned against us.'

"After 9/11, the campaign of media disinformation served not only to drown the truth but also to kill much of the historical evidence on how this illusive 'outside enemy' had been fabricated and transformed into 'Enemy Number One."

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE

DOES YOUR CAR HAVE A NAME?

The program I was half-listening to is an NPR staple, Click and Clack, the Tappet Brothers. There is something unusual about the telephone interchanges that take place on this program. Often, while chit-chatting about motor noises or the problems of overheating radiators, the seemingly aimless talk will touch upon something very vital and personal. On this particular Sunday morning the caller's question involved his desire to change the name of his recently purchased previouslyowned car. The former owner had called the car by a masculine name and the caller preferred his cars to have a feminine name. Did the Radio Hosts think that changing the car's name would have any drastic consequences?

Both hosts pondered the question for a moment and finally rhetorically asked why would anyone want to name their car? These hosts are life-long car mechanics and both said they had never and would never have a pet-name for their car. A car is not a person; it is a machine composed of parts which need to be properly maintained. The caller butted in at this point and suggested that maybe by giving the car a name the car-owner indicated his affection for the car which would lead to proper maintenance and care.

'Not true", said the Radio Hosts. In their years as repair shop owners they had seen multitudes of vehicles brought in that had been obscenely neglected by their owners, many of whom had called their car by pet-names. A light went on in my head. I always call my car by a pet name and think of it as a friend and companion. Many years ago I had a name for my bike and even then was derelict in bicycle understanding and .maintenance. Today I remain neglectful of the need for proper automobile maintenance. Forgetting the radio program, I thought about other inanimate objects to which I feel a kind of affection and attachment. There is my Magic Briefcase that I more or less carry every day. It is magic because, when I purchased it from a street stall at the edge of the Bufadora in Baja, I had asked in my clumsy, inadequate Spanish what was the briefcase made of. The response came in English, "What do you want it to be made of, Señor?"

"Alpaca", I said. "Si, es alpaca."

We both laughed and I bought a new friend who has outlasted most of my other friends although it has never been properly

On Sunday morning cared for. I begin to vaguely understand I was driving over something about myself. I treat many to Pasadena to play things with affection and great attachment badminton while as they become a part of my ongoing listening to the radio. fantasy world. Take my thousands of books for example. I scribble all over them, underlining and writing in the margins. People, sometimes even strangers, tell me that one shouldn't be writing all over the books. These people don't understand. The books, my brief case, my car, and even the old clothes I wear to the displeasure of my wife, are not separate from me. They are a part of me and I treat them as I treat myself. I do not cut open my body and replace my vital organs and I do not go poking around my car and open its hood and obscenely stare at its inner workings. A car is not something to fix, it is something to ride in and enjoy.

> Now things begin to come clear. I may not cut into my own body or take much interest in its inner workings but when necessity requires, as it does more and more these days, I go experts who have made adjustments to my eyes, teeth, colon--we need not go on. The same thing is true of my cars. When even I become aware of a problem, I take it to an expert to fix and pay whatever it costs. When the cost is too high, I go out and buy another car and say good-bye to my old friend. Will I say good-bye to myself in the same way?

> Well, we've reached the part of the article in which I try and make sense of the whole thing and locate any possible lessons. The article isn't about cars, or briefcases, or radios, or even badminton. It's about me and my attitudes. There are plusses and minuses to my way of approaching the world. Viewing non-humans as friends allows me to be continually surrounded by a kind of affection. These are loyal friends, whose imperfections I see, but generally ignore. Imperfections or not, these friends will not reject me and I will not reject them (until absolutely necessary). Predictably, I guess, I am much more successful with my anthropomorphosized pals than I am with the real flesh and blood types. That's the

> The minus is that I don't take very good care of my things. So, what? When the time comes most things can be replaced. Only some can't. Things like our health and our overall social welfare. Maybe it would be a good idea to pay closer attention to the maintenance of these few precious gifts. Also it's a good idea when driving to pay more attention to road conditions and less attention to the radio and aimless

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

MY HUMBLE EFFORT AT STIMULATING THE FCONOMA

days are complaining about the economy and nobody seems to be doing anything about it. Politicians talk about it all the time and yet do nothing creative in the area of improving our economy.

If you could put all the political speeches end to end, there would positively be no end to it. What we need to stimulate our economy is some kind of stimulation that does not come from the government. They stimulate me, all right, but not in the right way.

This is where I step in.

I assure you I am not running for any office. If the truth were known, I am running away from every office I can think of, especially my church office. I have no political agenda or aspirations; I am just a plain ordinary American citizen. I understand such creatures are an endangered species in today's economy. I am proud to be just a plain ordinary American. I am not middle-class, lower-class and certainly not high class. In fact, I have no class at all, and I am glad to leave it like that. I couldn't pass the test anyway.

But I am doing my part in stimulating the economy. The secret plan I have can be boiled down to one word: vacation.

This past week I have bravely gone where I have not been for a long time and that is on vacation. There is nothing like a vacation to stimulate many things, including the economy. It takes me a whole year to scrimp and save so the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and I can go on a vacation. But in the end, it is well worth it.

After a weeklong vacation, I am highly stimulated to return home where I can recuperate from all that stimulation. My wallet is still vibrating.

I must confess that the primary stimulation in a vacation has to do with my credit card. It was stimulated in more ways than I care to remember, and at the end of the month the credit card company will remind me of all that stimulation.

If the government does not have enough money in its coffers to balance the budget, it is not because I have not done my part. Every time I turned around there was a tax on something. Do not let this get out, but if the government knows I turned around so many times, they will find a way to tax that.

I am not a conspiracy enthusiast, but I believe I stumbled onto a most blatant conspiracy with the United States government. I am here merely to give my humble

The conspiracy, as I found it, focuses in on the airlines. I know this may sound like a

All we hear these far-fetched idea but I can only give my observation. The airlines are in a conspiracy with the United States government to take as much money from me as they possibly can. Not that I have a lot of money, I just would like to keep as much of it as possible for those occasions when I would like to take my wife out to a restaurant and just have a relaxing evening. That takes money.

> It began with checking in our luggage. Two bags for me and two bags for my wife equals too much luggage. We put our luggage on the conveyor belt and then were informed by the check-in clerk that each bag cost an extra $50. She swiped my credit card and even though I am not a mathematical wizard, I believe it was in the neighborhood of $200. I do not like that neighborhood.

> Later on, I sat down to figure it out and discovered it would be far cheaper not to take any luggage and then when arriving at my destination buy a new set of clothes. My entire wardrobe does not equal $100. Of course, on my wife's side of the closet it is a different story.

> We got our boarding pass and then the young woman behind the counter looked at me and asked a strange question. "Sir, how tall are you?"

> It has been a long time since anybody asked me that kind of a question. Why she wanted to know how tall I was could not be found in the corridors of my empty mind. I then informed her that I was 6'3".

> "I see," she said as she stared at her computer screen. Then she explained. "The average height of a male passenger on our plane is 5'11". You exceed that limit by 4

I looked at my wife and we both shared a wonderful laugh. Then I look back at her behind the counter, but she was not

"There will be an extra charge for your exceeding our height limit."

"Let's see," she said as she studied the computer screen, "that's 4 inches times $15 per inch which equals $60." She then swiped my credit card, again, and charged it with the $60 extra fee.

That was just the beginning of the "swiping" by the airlines. By the time our vacation was over, I was totally swiped out.

When I got home I meditated a little bit on what Jesus said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's" (Luke 20:25 KJV). I really do not mind rendering to "Caesar" but I just wish he wasn't so greedy.

RICH Johnson TONGUE TWISTERS

Well, they're off and running. The 2012 Republican and Democratic Conventions are history and the candidates are at the starting gate. As I consider the potential animosity that will exist between the two major parties I am reminded of a portion of the lyrics to a song from the 1970's. The song, by the group 10cc is a song about relationships called, "The Things We do For Love." The portion of the lyric we all need to aspire to with our friends on the other side of the political track is this: "...agree to disagree but disagree to part." In other words, agree on disagreeing but don't let the divide and end the friendship. I'm going to let my friends be wrong if they want to. You should too.)

Tongues will be wagging incessantly. The severe verbal thrashings shall be fast and furious. To avoid permanent voice damage I recommend vocal exercises to keep the muscles of the mouth in peek condition. These exercises involve the use of tongue twisters.

For those of you who don't remember, a tongue-twister is a sequence of words difficult to pronounce quickly and correctly. The trick is to try to say a tongue twister as fast as possible, and correctly! We'll start with what might be the most famous tongue twister.

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers. Did Peter Piper pick a peck of pickled peppers? If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, Where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?

But wait...there's more:

A proper cup of coffee from a proper copper coffee pot.

Around the rugged rocks the ragged rascals ran. Brad's big black bath brush broke.

She sells sea-shells on the sea-shore.

The sixth sick Sheik's sixth sheep is sick.

Fred fed Ted bread, and Ted fed Fred bread.

Give Mr. Snipe's wife's knife a swipe.

If Stu chews shoes, should Stu choose the shoes he chews?

Old Oily Ollie oils old oily autos. Sam's shop stocks short spotted socks

She sells seashells on the seashore. The shells she sells are seashells, I'm

Toyboat, toyboat, toyboat

Three grey geese in green fields grazing.

We surely shall see the sun shine soon.

And one sometimes described as the hardest tongue-twister in the English language. (You decide).

Swan swam over the pond, Swim swan swim! Swan swam back again -Well swum, swan!

Is this the first column you've ever read on tongue twisters? Practice these at home so you'll be ready to jump into the debate.

See you around!!

HOWARD Hays As I See It "There ain't nothin' more powerful than the odor of mendacity." - "Big Daddy" in Tennessee Williams' "CAT ON A HOT TIN ROOF'

Webster's defines "mendacious" as "given to or characterized by deception or falsehood or divergence from absolute truth", but it's more than that. "Mendacity" is not tossing out an occasional fib and feeling somewhat queasy about it; but rather deceit as calculated and routine, with no guilt attached.

This Romney-Ryan campaign seems different not because of twisted truth and outright falsehood; it's because after definitive debunking by PolitiFact, the Washington Post's Fact Checker and most every mainstream outlet, there are no excuses of mis-speaking or misinterpretation, but instead unapologetic repetition.

"Paul Ryan Bets on the Ignorance of America", wrote Dan Amira for New York Magazine following the Wisconsin congressman's speech in Tampa; "Most of the millions of people who watched the speech on television tonight do not read fact-checks . . . and will never know how much Ryan's case against Obama relied on lies and deception."

Ryan blamed President Obama for "a downgraded America", though Standard and Poor's cited Republicans' determination to let the country default rather than consider a tax increase as the reason for the credit downgrade.

Ryan accused Obama of having amassed "more debt than any other president before him". The debt was $10.6 trillion when Obama took office. It's now up to $16 trillion, largely due to Republicans' refusal to touch the Bush tax cuts and inclusion of expenses, such as wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, deliberately kept off-budget under President Bush.

Ryan characterizes Obama's stimulus money as "wasted". As Michael Grunwald writes in Time, the last quarter of 2008 saw a 9% crash in the U.S. economy. 800,000 jobs were lost in January as Obama took office. Passage of the stimulus brought the biggest jobs turnaround in thirty years for the following quarter, and the biggest middle-class tax cut since Reagan. 2.5 million jobs were created or saved, with 2-4% added to the GDP.

(Ryan sought stimulus funds for his own district, denied he did, then conceded he had – maintaining he wasn't paying attention.)

Ryan (again) blamed President Obama for the closure of the GM plant in Janesville, WI, though the factory closed in 2008 - under President Bush.

Ryan charged Obama with "raiding" Medicare, though the cost savings were the same under Ryan's own plan. With the Affordable Care Act, savings go towards insuring more Americans. Under Ryan, they'd go towards funding tax cuts for millionaires. Benefits enjoyed by seniors under the Affordable Care Act, such as free preventive care and better prescription drug coverage, would be eliminated under Ryan's "Path to Prosperity".

Ryan attacked Obama for doing "exactly nothing" in response to the Simpson-Bowles debt commission. That effort was killed by Republicans who refused to accept the recommendation that revenue increases be combined with spending cuts. Opposition was led by commission member Rep. Paul Citing falsehoods on the GM plant closure and Simpson-Bowles, Matthew Dowd said on ABC This Week, "At some point, the truth should matter." Dowd was chief strategist on the 2004 presidential campaign – for President Bush.

In Mitt Romney's acceptance speech, it's harder to cite specific falsehoods, since there were few specifics. Romney claimed to "have a plan to create 12 million new jobs." Moody's Analytics also predicts 12 million new jobs by 2016 – regardless of who's elected.

There's the matter of perception, as when Romney promises, "Unlike President Obama, I will not raise taxes on the middle class." Obama has proposed raising taxes on annual incomes above $250,000, an income Romney might perceive as barely squeaking by.

The Washington Post noted Romney's claim that in traveling overseas after taking office, "President Obama began with an apology tour". The Post explained, ". . . in a lengthy column last year, we tracked down every statement Obama uttered that partisans claim was an apology, and concluded that each one had been misquoted or taken out of context . . . Despite earning Four Pinocchios for this claim for months, Romney keeps saying it."

In the midst of mendacity, there is truth to be gleaned, as from their question, "Are you better off than you were four years ago?'

(According to Labor Dept. figures, in the year leading up to July 2008 the country suffered a net loss of 609,000 jobs; the year leading up to July 2012 saw a net gain of 1.8 million jobs. According to the Federal Reserve, the year leading up to March 2008 saw household wealth fall by $5.8 trillion; leading up to March 2012 it grew by $610 million. The year prior to March 2008 saw nonfinancial corporate profits fall by $177 billion; prior to March 2012 they grew by $186 billion.)

A truth is revealed by their framing the question in terms of "you", rather than asking us whether our country is better off. They insist seniors shouldn't object to their plan to voucher-ize Medicare, since it won't affect anyone 55 or over. Again, it's revealing how it doesn't occur to them seniors might be concerned for the future of their children and grandchildren.

In his keynote address to the Democratic Convention, San Antonio Mayor Julian Castro offered a metaphor to illustrate this revealing, distinguishing interpretation of the American experience by describing not a marathon to see who comes in first, but a relay race - where we give it our all, then hand the baton over to the next generation.

Speaking of marathons – Rep. Paul Ryan claimed in a recent interview he'd run one in less than three hours. When called on it by Runner's World, he later admitted the actual time was a little over four

As I see it, this mis-recollection in itself may not rise to the level of "mendacity". But in the context of a campaign marked by utter disrespect for the truth, it still carries an odor.

A REVIEW OF DUELING CONVENTIONS

National Convention (RNC) Eastwood. in Tampa was post-Apocalyptic dystoworld could be Republicans were completein charge: Scared (mostly) people white in a militarized labyrinth blockades in strategic dead ends ... all for your protection. Attendees endured security checks inside secured perimeters within partitioned areas. "Small government" police brigades were in roving gangs toting small arms. There was no way to just walk around downtown Tampa that week, it could've been re-named "Tamped Down." All in the name of freedom.

It was a chilling reality in 98-degree heat.

The RNC should have been the funnest place on Earth to be a Republican this past August 27-30. Well, maybe it was the funnest place on Earth if you're a Republican. Maybe they're no longer fun. They didn't appear to be having a good time. By most accounts they were cranky.

The fracturing of their party started the moment John McCain picked Ŝaraĥ Palin. In case that doesn't seem fair, let me explain: When Palin "went rogue," suddenly the disciplined Grand Old Party became awash in tea; a pack of rogue elephants indulging in any nuts available. The party of Lincoln quickly became the party of and his party believes (which is basically thinking you can sell any myth, no matter how ridiculous, by saying a doctor told you it was true).

For the second straight time, the RNC's week started off with a hurricane cancelling the first day of the convention. Republicans have not only become climate deniers—they're weather deniers now too. August? Florida? Sure!

The end of the week was marked by a primetime speech by an octogenarian offended by a pottymouthed imaginary President Obama sitting on stage. "I'm not going to shut up. It's my turn," said

The Republican the Hollywood legend turned metaphor for the GOP during the Obama administration, Clint Eastwood is fed up with a President Obama who only exists when two or more Republicans are gathered together. pia of what the On the other hand, the Democratic National Convention (DNC) was packed full of the folks Republicans are trying to take their country back from: gay couples, inter-racial couples, non-Cu-ban Latinos, workers, non-billionaires, "sluts," immigrants, African-Americans, liberals, civil servants, Reagan Democrats and women who aren't just a Republican's mom. Basically what America (love it or leave it) now looks like.

The DNC looked like America in 2012. The RNC looked like America in 1912.

The DNC was also impacted by weather. Bank of America stadium was sold out, according to the campaign, with a waiting list of reportedly 19,000 wanting to see the President of the United States speak. The final night event was cancelled because the open-air stadium wasn't able to accommodate electronic equipment in the rain. Typical Obama: yes, he disappoints people, but often for something far "above his pay grade." The chairman of the RNC, Reince Priebus, after voting in his party's vindictive platform calling for more Americans to have fewer rights-was on autotweet the whole week of the DNC, "Is this going to be the last of the vitriol from the Dem party during their convention? Why aren't they talking about the issues?" he wrote.

The idea both parties are just opposite equals, that they're really the lesser of two evils—six of one, half a dozen of the other—is a narrative the Republicans like to sell. They'll tell you Democrats do the same thing Republicans are accused Akin, a politician whose sin was saying what he of doing. Republicans will tell you that Democrats want to kill Medicare, increase the debt and increase government spending. As President Clinton said in his speech at this year's DNC put it, "It takes a lot of brass to go after a guy for doing what you did."

The Republicans are angry victims of diversity and want their country back. And the Democrats? This year it seems they're optimistic ... which, for them, is real change.

DECEIT AT THE DEMOCRATIC GREG Welborn NATIONAL CONVENTION

Bill Clinton summarized the entire convention did Clinton take in, or and campaign strategy in his short exhortation Obama for that matter? to the Democratic faithful: If you want to have a "shared opportunity society, a shared responsibility society", then vote for Barak Obama, but if you want to have a "winner take all, you're on your own, society", then vote for Mitt Romney. There's no denying that this is an appealing proposition. It certainly plays to the faithful who accept it as scripture, and it may persuade some of those critical independents to vote for Obama again, but win or lose it will go down as one of the most craven and deceitful political speeches in our history.

We've heard this argument before, although rarely is it stated with the stirring rhetorical flare that Clinton uses. In the course of this campaign, conservatives have been called, bigoted, racist, homophobic, xenophobic, sexist and intolerant, and Mitt Romney specifically has been called a felon, tax evader and murderer. Who wants to vote for a party or a man like that? The answer is, nobody, but those portrayals are lies. Barak Obama put it best in his 2008 acceptance speech. He said, "If you don't have a record to run on, then you paint your opponent as someone people should run from".

I would ask each reader to consider from the depths of their heart whether they really know a single serious conservative thinker or politician who is as hate-filled and ugly as the lies above claim. Putting aside the insignificant crackpots – both parties have them – can you name a single conservative leader or speaker who fits this

Are conservatives racist or bigoted because they believe that racial preferences shouldn't be used in hiring, that we should truly be a colorblind society? Are they homophobic because they believe, as have all major religions for the last 2,000 years, that marriage is ordained by God between one man and one woman? Are they xenophobic because they believe we should control our borders, enforce our immigration laws and require proof of citizenship before someone votes? Are they sexist because they believe that we shouldn't be forced to pay for someone else's birth control pills? Are they intolerant because they believe that a fetus might actually be a human being entitled to at least the same rights to life as the woman carrying the child? You may disagree with how we should address the problems which beset this nation, but can you really in good conscience simply call us evil and hateful? If you can, then perhaps you should revisit your definition of intolerance.

One of the great ironies of Clinton's speech was his statement that, while disagreeing with Republicans on policy issues, he had never hated them. Recall if you will that this was the man who told his staff, "you have to understand, Bob Dole is evil, what he wants is evil". Bob Dole was a decorated war hero with a reputation for consensus building as the Senate majority leader. Or recall that Democratic Congressman, John Lewis, called Republicans "Nazis", as did the current head of the South Carolina Democratic Party.

But let's not just marvel at the stupidity of the Democratic slurs, let's consider which party's philosophy is more charitable, provides more opportunity and is more inclusive. Study after study has confirmed that conservatives are more charitable than liberals. From hard cash donated to time willingly invested in needy causes, conservatives always out rank liberals. Michelle Bachman is a case in point. Does anyone know how many foster kids she and her husband have taken in? The answer is 23. How many saying you believe in opportunity may make you feel good, but it doesn't necessarily provide real opportunity to those who are struggling. Democrats seem to believe that taxing rich people more will create more jobs for those who want to get ahead. That stands in contrast to the studies which clearly show that tax decreases motivate business owners (typically those who would be considered rich) to hire more people, and tax increases reduce employment. Another one of the great ironies at the Democratic convention is the fact that Clinton didn't see employment grow during his two terms until he reduced taxes in the second term. If Obama wins a second term and imposes the tax hikes he has proposed, employment will decrease, opportunity will be lost, and higher prices will be paid by every buyer of every product made or distributed by a business incurring those higher taxes. That's not an opportunity, it's a penalty!

The answer is 0.

The same contrast exists when considering which provides philosophy opportunity. Opportunity is a great ideal, but it is not so easily achieved.

Conservatives, and Romney specifically, want to reduce taxes so that employers can grow their companies and offer more jobs to a broader base of Americans. That's inclusive - recognizing, as both President Kennedy and President Clinton did, that a rising tide lifts all boats. The Obama approach has seen the economy stagnate and the deficit balloon. Clinton commented on the growth in debt under previous presidents, but neglected to remind us how much worse it has been under Obama. Simply put, there are not enough millionaires in America who could be taxed at 100% to eliminate the deficit, let alone to reduce our $16 trillion in debt. Make no mistake, as Clinton pointed out, this debt will bury us if we do not take steps now to stop the hemorrhaging and to reverse the damage. But what Clinton got wrong was that continuing on the same path Obama has charted will not work. We cannot spend our way to prosperity with money we don't have.

Clinton took one for the team last night defending the indefensible - Obama's track record. Clinton tried to give an undeserved credibility to Obama by claiming that they were on the same team without acknowledging that they were following radically different playbooks. There were many lies last night, and there will undoubtedly be many more tonight. We will hear again how awful things will be under Romney, but it's hard to imagine how it could be worse than what we've experienced under Obama. We will hear how hateful conservatives are even as The President throws insults and invectives at Republicans. We will hear promises about opportunity and prosperity despite the fact that this president's policies have choked off both. As my son, Courtland, observed, "He has poisoned the water, and now he wants us to drink it". We wait to see on which side of Lincoln's insightful observation we stand: some of the people can be fooled all of the time, and, sadly, all of the people can be fooled some of the time. Let's hope Americans are tired of being fooled.
