WISTARIA FESTIVAL SHUTTLE TICKETS TO GO ON SALE FEBRUARY 15TH

The Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce announced on Friday that shuttle tickets to ride up to view the Wistaria Vine at its annual Wistaria Festival will be available for purchase on February 15th. . The 2013 Wistaria Festival will take place on March 17th, 2013.

The Wistaria Festival features tours of the world's largest blossoming plant, certified as such by the Guinness Book of World Records. Each year, the property owners upon whose land the vine sits open their property to allow thousands to view the vine. Dozens of Sierra Madre residents volunteer to act as docents at the property, telling the story of the vine, which was originally planted from a 1-gallon pot that was purchased for $0.75 in 1894. At its peak, the vine covered more than an acre of ground, and in the early 20th century was so large that it even destroyed a home that was under it.

In addition to the tours of the vine, the two main downtown streets of Sierra Madre are closed to traffic so that as many as 175 juried crafters and artists can set up booths to display and sell their arts/crafts. Downtown village shops are open, and more than a dozen musical acts perform at multiple outdoor venues.

Memorial Park is transformed into a combination Kids/Food zone, as bouncy houses, slides, rock climbing and other kids attractions set up in the park alongside food vendors, both for profit and non-profit alike.

The shuttle to the vine from downtown avoids a long uphill walk from downtown to the neighborhood in which the vine sits. "Day of" tickets for the shuttle are $15 this year, and pre-sale tickets are $12. Also this year seniors (over 65) and children (6 to 16) receive a discounted rate of $7. Children under five ride for free. There is no charge to view the vine.

You will be able to order tickets online or at various retailers throughout the

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Re: Citizen Of The Year Dinner

Dear Editor:

I want to thank the Chamber of Commerce for having the Citizen of the Year dinner in Sierra Madre. It was great. The food was great. The honoring of the new Citizen of the Year was fantastic. Congratulations to the Chamber for a great job and to the honoree, Marlene Enmark.

I am a former COTY and always attended every year's dinner until I could no longer drive after dark. I was always sorry to miss out on being there to honor each new person. It is great to be able to go again. I hope that this event will always be in Sierra Madre every year in the future.

I know that it took a lot of volunteers to pull it off, but isn't that what our town does? Thank you all for your hard work.

Detective Lt. Tracey Ibarra said Goldstein and his brother arranged to meet with one of the suspects Jan. 15 to sell a small amount of marijuana.

"During the contact, the suspects attempted to rob the victims and a shooting ultimately occurred," Ibarra said in a press statement.

Police said they arrested Raymond Frank Conchas Stephanie Urias Jacquez after the two turned themselves into law enforcement Wednesday following a media release of their names and pictures.

Investigators

Goldstein was shot near the intersection of Chester and Villa Streets. He was transported to a local hospital and underwent emergency surgery. His bother Zachary Goldstein, 24, of Pasadena was also hurt, but it unclear if he was also shot. Police said they do not believe the bothers have gang ties.

Legislation Introduced To Create Earthquake Warning System

By Dean Lee

San Fernando Valley Senator introduced Padilla legislation Monday to establish a statewide earthquake warning system giving people critical time before shaking occurs.

He made the announcement at Caltech, joined by a panel of seismologists representing Caltech, UC Berkeley and the U.S. Geological Survey.

The warnings would come in the form of cellphone messages or computer signs, similar to "Amber Alerts." An example played a human voice repeating "earthquake" with a series of We will have an earthquake

"The question is this, with it be before or after the next big one?" I argue it ought to be before."

Padilla said the technology already exists to create a system. The system would effectively

"In the case of a southern San Andreas earthquake, you would get about a minute to 70 seconds in the metropolitan Los Angeles area," said Michael Gurnis, director of the Caltech Seismological Laboratory.

The system would need about 1,000 seismic stations to work and have enough employees to monitor it continuously. Jones said most of them are already in place but need to be overhauled.

Padilla said the benefits were endless, "A fully developed earthquake warning system could buy these critical seconds to take cover, to assist law enforcement, pull to the side of the road, to bring a train to a stop... to be able to power down critical infrastructure... the list of potential benefits goes on and

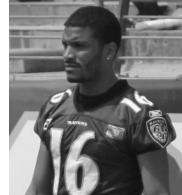

The initial cost estimate for the system would be $80 million. Padilla said that with the magnitude 6.7 Northridge detect the strength and the Earthquake claiming 60 lives and causing at least $13 billion

PCC Alumnus to Appear in Super Bowl XLVII

Pasadena City College football alumnus David Reed is set to play in Super Bowl XLVII (47) as a member of the Baltimore Ravens. They will face the San Francisco 49ers. The NFL championship game takes place at the New Orleans' Superdome this Sunday.

At PCC, Reed was a 2007 All-American wide receiver who set a community college national record for most receptions and yards in a season with 111 catches for 1,661 yards. After a successful career at the University of Utah, Reed was drafted by Baltimore in the fifth round of the 2010 NFL Draft.

Reed set a Ravens' record in his rookie season for the longest kick return in franchise history, a 103-yard touchdown. After recovering from a knee injury that kept him on the injured list most of this season, Reed made his first NFL reception in a Dec. 16 game v. Denver. He caught five passes in two games. Reed is joining a short list of former PCC players to play in a Super Bowl. In Super Bowl XXIII (1989), PCC Sports Hall of Famer and defensive back Eric Thomas, a 1984 alumnus, played for Cincinnati. In Super Bowl XXVII (1993), punter Mike Saxon earned a Super Bowl ring for the Dallas Cowboys as the game was played at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

Schiff Joins Colleagues to Introduce Weapons Ban

Adam Schiff joined with his checks, making sure we colleagues, last week, led by keep better mental health Senator Dianne Feinstein and records, banning high capacity Rep. Carolyn McCarthy as an original cosponsor of a renewed after straw purchasers, and Assault Weapons Ban. This eliminating the gun industry's bill will specifically ban the ability to act negligently with sale, transfer, importation or impunity. No one thinks that manufacturing of over 100 specifically-named and strengthens the 1994 law by nothing in the face of one awful moving from a 2-characteristic test to a 1-characteristic test and eliminating the ten year sunset that allowed the original ban to expire. Further, the legislation will protect responsible hunters and gun owners by exempting hundreds of specificallynamed weapons used for of about 150 named firearms, hunting and sporting purposes and grandfathering weapons legally possessed on the date of enactment.

"Senator Feinstein led the charge almost twenty years ago moving from a two- to a oneto pass the Assault Weapons Ban, but it has since been allowed to expire. It is past time to put that law, which would have outlawed the type of gun used by the shooters at Aurora and Newtown, back in place," said Rep. Schiff. "Beyond the Assault Weapons Ban, we need to use a multifaceted approach, including universal background ammunition this fight is going to be easy, firearms but who can be content to do tragedy after another." Specifically, this legislation would accomplish several important steps in curbing future gun violence and tragedies:

Ban the sale, transfer, importation or manufacturing plus certain rifles, handguns and shotguns fitted for detachable magazines and having at least one military characteristic;

Strengthen the 1994 ban by characteristic test to determine what constitutes an assault

Ban firearms with "thumbhole stocks" and "bullet buttons;" Ban the importation of assault weapons and large-capacity magazines; and in damage, the system is an intelligent investment. "About percent of the world's earthquakes and over 80 percent of the world's strongest quakes occur along the Pacific Ring of Fire. The Ring of Fire includes the very active San Andreas Fault zone here in California.

Ban high-capacity ammunition magazines that hold more than 10 rounds.

SHEN YUN 2013

past Saturday, my husband Bob and I were given that opportunity, and I don't know where to begin! First, Shen Yun Performing Arts was founded with the mission to restore 5000 years of divinely inspired Chinese culture, which has been mostly destroyed under Communist rule. In fact, you couldn't find a show like Shen Yun in China today! I cannot even imagine what this experience would be to anyone of Chinese background-to have your culture so shared and appreciated on such a grand scale. It's also worth noting that Shen Yun Performing Arts Inc. is a nonprofit organization under Section 501(c) (3). (Please visit their website www. shenyunperformingarts.org/support.)

To understand the show's purpose, translate "Shen Yun". The Chinese character "Shen" is a general term for "divine" or "divine being". In China's rich 5000 year history, are thousands of rich stories entwined with hundreds of deities, Buddhas, and Taoist immortals who play different roles. The second character "Yun" is the overall manner of a dancer, a dancer's style and the meaning behind his or her movements. The combination of these two characters exemplifies what the program is all about.

With an idea of "Shen Yun", one now must look at Classical Chinese Dance. It is one way 5000 years of Chinese culture has been passed down and retained. This dance form began with traditional aesthetics among the people, in imperial courts and through ancient plays. Over thousands of years, it has been continually organized and refined until it evolved into the vast, systematic and distinctly Chinese dance form. Chinese Classic Dance has its own training in basic skills, physical expression, postures, leaps, flips, spins and difficult tumbling techniques.

The Shen Yun Program is of two parts, each with eleven acts enhanced by an awesome Orchestra that blends the world's greatest classical music traditions, Chinese and Western, utilizing Ancient Chinese instruments such as the erhu and pipa. There are also a few vocal soloists, and on the screen are the lyrics in both languages. These soloists are searching for the meaning of life and perform at integral parts of the program. Prior to each act, two narrators come on stage to give a short preview (one or two sentences) of what is to come.

Each act is accompanied by a full-width backdrop that provided animation of mountain and village scenes, countryside landscapes, palaces and much more! The costumes are brightly colored, and I can't imagine how so many dancers are in sync as in the use of scarfs. The first selection, Descending to the World's backdrop has clouds and it's mindboggling how these 'figures' come off the backdrop onto the stage and vice versa. Bob said they have to be in perfect sync to be dancing on the stage one minute then dance to the back of it and then be part of the backdrop.

I loved the variety of dances, (Mongolian Bowl Dance, An Early Spring), the solos, and the little skits. It was truly a remarkable experience and I am going on line to find out about Shen Yun in Vegas in March! I know my daughter will love the show, and I would love to experience it again!

Vitamins. Everyone needs them. We should take some every day. And they come in bottles, right?

Well, yes and no. The original sources of many common vitamins and minerals are plants, and several of these are quite easy to cultivate in our own yards. That means we are getting our vitamins and minerals fresh, pure, and in a balanced form. Grow your own vitamins in your yard, and eat them in your food. This is not a particularly unusual idea. For millennia, people obtained their needed nutrition from the food they ate. In fact, the only reason we've all become so dependent on bottled vitamins is that our normal supermarket foods have steadily become and minerals. poorer sources of our needed vitamins and minerals. The reasons for this are complex, but can be summarized by the fact that too many commercial food producers focus more on profit when it comes to our food, and less on the nutritional aspects.

Roses are great to grow in any garden because they provide beauty and fragrance. Also, if you let the fruits mature (referred to as the "hips"), you'll have a rich source of vitamin C. The only known source of vitamin C that is richer is the acerola. Rosehips contain about 7,000 mg. of vitamin C per pound, a remarkable amount. By contrast, a pound of oranges (depending on the type of oranges) contains anywhere between 100 to 250 mg. of vitamin C.

To use rose hips, you snip off the orange-red mature fruit. Once fibrous seeds, you could just eat it raw. However, most people find it more enjoyable to simmer it into tea, or to make it into jams, jellies, or blended nutritional drinks.

In your garden, seriously consider raising carrots. They require loamy soil, but otherwise they are somewhat easy to raise. A pound of carrots (depending how they are analyzed) contains anywhere from 29,000 to 40,000 I.U. of vitamin A. Hey, even on also provide at least 1,000 mg. of potassium per pound, and they contain significant amounts of calcium, phosphorus, and magnesium.

Another good food group for your garden is the tomato and pepper group. A pound of whole tomatoes, for example, contains large amounts of potassium (1,107 mg.) and vitamin A (4,080 I.U.). That's a lot! Tomatoes also are good sources of vitamin C, phosphorus, calcium, and lycopene (which may prevent certain cancers). Fortunately, tomatoes are easy to grow, and we're all accustomed to using them in everything from juice to salad, soups, pasta sauce, and pizza. If you grow more tomatoes than you can use, dry or can them for later.

Garden lettuce, unfortunately, is not a good source of vitamins Loose-leaf varieties test higher in vitamin A, but generally, store-bought, farmgrown lettuce is a poor source of nutrients. Consider, instead, the humble lamb's quarter (pictured above). It will probably grow in your garden even if you don't plant it. Seeds can be purchased from some seed catalogs, but this is usually not necessary. Used raw in salad, 100 grams of lamb's quarter (about a cup) contains about 80 mg. of vitamin C, 11,600 I.U. of vitamin A, 72 mg. of phosphorus, 309 mg. of calcium, small amounts of thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, and iron. These figures are slightly lower when you cook the lamb's quarter as a spinach-replacement, or in soups, egg dishes, or vegetable dishes.

Since we're talking about the garden "volunteers," don't overlook the dandelions, normally scorned and poisoned you cut it in half and remove the out of existence in most gardens, they are probably better for you than most of what you're intentionally growing in the garden. An analysis of 100 grams of dandelion greens by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows 14,000 I.U. of vitamin A, 35 mg. of vitamin C, 397 mg. of potassium, 66 mg. of phosphorus, 187 mg. of calcium, and 36 mg. of magnesium. Dandelion greens are also the richest source of betacarotene, with 8.4 mg. per cup. By the low end, that's a lot! Carrots contrast, carrots -- considered an excellent source of beta-carotene

-- contain 6.6 mg. per cup. Only young dandelion greens are good in salads, and the older, bitter leaves can be cooked like spinach or added to mixed-vegetable

Citrus trees can be called "vitamin trees," since the fruits are not only a source of vitamin C, but a good source of most other vitamins and minerals, as well as the albuminoids and bioflavinoids.

If you have the space to grow a carob tree, or if one grows near you, be sure to take advantage of the long, brown leathery pods. One hundred grams of the edible portion of the carob pod (which is about a cup of the entire pod, minus the seeds) contains 352 mg. of calcium. That makes carob one of the very richest non-meat calcium sources. Even when that same volume is compared to milk -- generally considered a good calcium source -- carob is nearly three times richer in calcium.

Carob is also a good source of B vitamins. Though not a complete protein, it is said that this is the food that sustained John the Baptist in the desert for 40 days (hence the name, Saint John's bread). You can simply eat the pods and spit out the seeds. Also, you can crack the pods, remove the seeds, and grind the pods into a flour which you add to bread and pasty products, or blend into liquids like rice or soy milk.

These are just a few examples of how we can obtain many of our needed vitamins from plants growing all around us. One good source for nutritional information is Composition of Foods, published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

An international team led by Dutch astronomers has made a tantalizing discovery about the way pulsars emit radiation. The emission of X-rays and radio waves by these pulsating neutron stars is able to change dramatically in seconds, simultaneously, in a way that cannot be explained with current theory. The research results appeared in the journal Science on 25 January.

Pulsars are small spinning stars that are only about a dozen miles in diameter—the size of a small city—but which weigh as much as our Sun. These super-dense objects have a strong magnetic field that is approximately one million times stronger than the fields scientists can make in laboratories on Earth. The pulsar emits a beam of radiation. As the star spinstypically several times per second—the radio beam sweeps repeatedly over Earth, and we detect short pulses of radiation, a bit like a lighthouse. Some pulsars emit radiation across the entire electromagnetic spectrum, including both X-ray and radio wavelengths.

It has been known for some time that some radio pulsars flip their behavior between two (or even more) states, changing the pattern and intensity of their radio pulses. The moment of flip is both unpredictable and sudden (often within a single rotation period).

The scientists studied a particular pulsar called PSR B0943+10, one of the first pulsars discovered. The pulses from PSR B0943+10 change in form and brightness every few hours, and these changes happen within about a second. It is as if the pulsar has two distinct personalities. As PSR B0943+10 is one of the few pulsars also known to emit X-ray radiation, knowing how this pulsar behaved in X-rays during the 'radio changes' could provide new insight into the nature of the emission process.

Since the source is a weak X-ray emitter, the team used the most sensitive X-ray telescope in operation, the ESA-funded XMM-Newton. The observations took place over six separate sessions of about six hours in duration. To identify the exact flips in the pulsar's radio behavior the X-ray observations were tracked simultaneously with two of the most powerful radio telescopes in the world, GMRT and LOFAR.

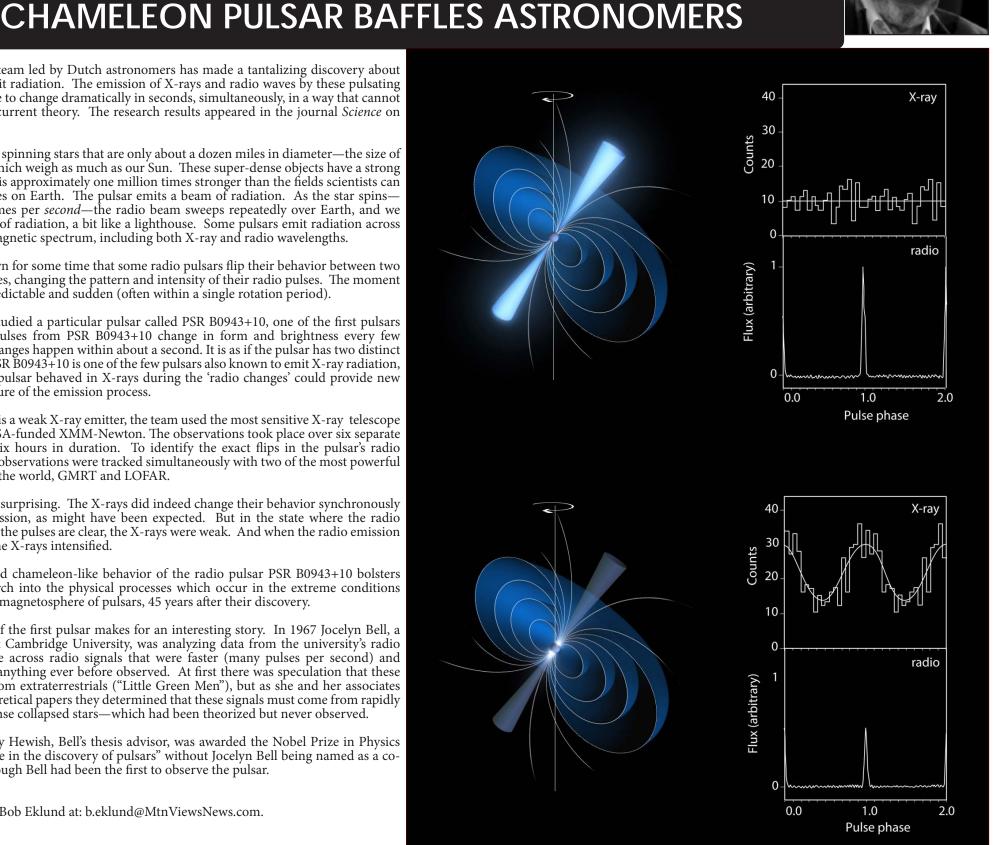

The results were surprising. The X-rays did indeed change their behavior synchronously with the radio emission, as might have been expected. But in the state where the radio signal is strong and the pulses are clear, the X-rays were weak. And when the radio emission switched to weak the X-rays intensified.

This unexpected chameleon-like behavior of the radio pulsar PSR B0943+10 bolsters fundamental research into the physical processes which occur in the extreme conditions which occur in the magnetosphere of pulsars, 45 years after their discovery.

The discovery of the first pulsar makes for an interesting story. In 1967 Jocelyn Bell, a graduate student at Cambridge University, was analyzing data from the university's radio telescope and came across radio signals that were faster (many pulses per second) and more regular than anything ever before observed. At first there was speculation that these might be signals from extraterrestrials ("Little Green Men"), but as she and her associates studied earlier theoretical papers they determined that these signals must come from rapidly spinning, super-dense collapsed stars—which had been theorized but never observed.

In 1974, Antony Hewish, Bell's thesis advisor, was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics "for his decisive role in the discovery of pulsars" without Jocelyn Bell being named as a corecipient—even though Bell had been the first to observe the pulsar.

CHURCH BUILDINGS VANDALIZED

Public Help Sought To Help Identify Vandals

On January 30th, the Arcadia Police Department window to gain entry. Once inside, two religious made a public appeal for assistance in statues and a DVD player were broken and tossed apprehending the criminals responsible for vandalizing two churches in the city.

According to the release, the churches had been broken into and vandalized within the last two weeks. The first incident occurred overnight, Saturday to Sunday, January 19-20, 2013, at the Church of the Good Shepherd, 400 West Duarte Road. The suspect(s) forced open a door to the church office, ransacked the interior, and threw clergy robes on the ground. A fire extinguisher was discharged in the office and the suspect(s) burned part of a portrait hanging on the office wall before making off with a guitar and other sound equipment.

Early this morning, shortly after 2:30 a.m., the police department received a 9-1-1 call from a passerby reporting suspicious activity at Holy Angeles Church, 330 Campus Drive. Arcadia Police and Fire units arrived on scene and discovered an administrative building on the church property had been broken into and there was smoke inside the building. Evidence of a small fire was found against an interior hallway wall, having burnt a small area of carpet and papers. It appears the suspect(s) broke an office lacrimestoppers.org/to the ground inside a small chapel, and an interior officer door was kicked in. It appeared the suspect(s) also rummaged through several rooms inside the building.

These crimes are being investigated by Arcadia Police Detectives. Due to the similarities of the crimes and the proximity of the churches, it is our belief the crimes may be related and it is our desire to inform the community; and specifically, other area religious facilities to be on watch for similar or suspicious activity. Although neither crime involved entry to the church sanctuaries, both events involved religious artifacts or items and we are treating these as religious based hate

Anyone with information on this incident is encouraged to contact the Arcadia Police Department at (626) 574-5150. MONROVIA WILL HOLD CITY ELECTIONS IN APRIL

By Joan Schmidt

There have been a lot of comments, speculation and even a meeting to decide the fate of the April elections in the City of Monrovia. Alice Atkins, City Clerk and Steve Baker, City Treasurer, are unchallenged. There are two empty seats on the City Council and only two candidates have officially filed, so why would there be an election? Why didn't more people file?

It's been an interesting process. Three people pulled papers to run. Clarence Shaw, Major in the US Army Reserves, current Council Member Larry Spicer, who has been filling in for Shaw on an interim basis, and Attorney Alexander Blackburn. However, only Spicer and Blackburn filed their papers by the deadline. Then Clarence Shaw resigned from the Council, and Council Members and residents were not pleased that there were only two candidates and the untimely resignation of Shaw.

An election cannot be canceled without going through the proper procedure. Before any decision was made, there was a special Council Meeting opened to the public. There was mention of an election costing about $58,000. Mayor Lutz, and Council Members Becky Shevlin, Tom Adams and Joe Garcia all spoke of the democratic process, that you can't put a price tag on freedom, and the voters need to vote in their candidates. They felt there should be an election. Residentsquite vocal - came to the meeting; some wanted the election canceled, while others thought it

By a vote of 3-0, (The Mayor abstained), the decision was made to hold the election. There will be a write-in option. Cyrus Kemp, a retired hotel, restaurant and resort manager, and Robert C.J. Perry, a marketing consultant and reservist with the Army National Guard have submitted letters declaring their intent to run as write-in candidates. To qualify, they must get and submit required nomination forms, collect 20 valid voter signatures and allow time for those signatures to be verified. All this must occur between February 11 and March 26. Monrovia residents please don't forget to vote on April 9th!

BURGLARY ALERT IN DUARTE AND TIPS FOR RESIDENTS EVERYWHERE

By Joan Schmidt

Several months ago I was dropping off newspapers at the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Satellite Station in Duarte and met Aida Torres, Crime Prevention Specialist for the City. Since that time, she has sent me many pertinent news alerts about crime activity, safety issues and more.

Yesterday I received "Burglary Alert", a warning from the City of Duarte/ Sheriff's Department that a home burglary occurred in Duarte in the 1600 block of Royal Oaks Drive, and that Sheriff's patrols and other security measures have been increased in response to the rash of burglary activity

This burglary happened between 2:00 and 4:00 pm Monday, January 28th while the residents were not home. An unknown person entered through the open garage door and stole an unloaded black Ruger rifle, which had not been in a secure location (no safe/no trigger lock). There were no witnesses.

When I had attended the Monrovia-Arcadia- Duarte Town Council Meeting, two weeks ago, Captain Nee and area deputies also had reported a spike in burglaries in county areas. It seems outrageous that this occurs in broad daylight and frightening to me. What if any preteens or teens had been home or walked in on this?

- Aida was kind enough to forward these important tips to share with our readers:

 Make your home look occupied; leave the TV, radio or lights on, or your dog in the backyard. Lock all doors, windows, and garage doors before you leave the house or go to bed.
- Use motion detector lights outside.
- Don't allow daily deliveries of mail, newspapers or flyers to build up while you are away.

MONROVIA POLICE DETECTIVES RECOVER LARGE QUANTITY OF STOLEN PROPERTY FROM LOS ANGELES COUNTY BURGLARIES

On January 18, 2013, the request for a welfare check on a suicidal female subject led Monrovia police officers to a residence in the 200 block of South Alta Vista. While searching for the suicidal subject, officers found a large cache of cameras, electronics, and other stolen property at the location. During further investigation, detectives uncovered information that led to a storage facility in West Covina where they found another large quantity of stolen property. Investigation by Los Angeles County Sheriff detectives has indicated that many of the victims of these suspects were individuals who had placed themselves on the Los Angeles Times vacation list. These victims were subsequently

The student said he left it in his backpack from the day before and forgot he had it in the backpack. He showed it to a fellow student. The fellow student later reported the incident to school personnel. The principal called the student in and retrieved the Airsoft pistol. There were no plastic BB's or magazine clips with the pistol. No injuries were reported and the school will be suspending the student. The incident was documented.

BETHANY ADVENTURE CLUB HIKES TO THE FALLS

"Bethany Christian middle school students recently hiked the 3.7 mile round trip from Chantry Flats to Sturtevant Falls. This event was not just another extra-curricular activity at BCS, but was a new club formed by middle school teacher, Ryan Kloostra. Mr. Kloostra is passionate about getting students out into the community beyond the scope of the school campus. BCS Adventure Club's purpose was two-fold: to expose 12-14 year olds to the national park in Sierra Madre's backyard, and to encourage students to serve in their community. Students were encouraged to take in the beauty of the mountains as well as pick up trash along the way. They were able to put this toward their community service hours at BCS. On their hike the students and two teachers ran into a ranger who mentioned how understaffed the Forest Service was. He was very appreciative of The Adventure Club's cleanup efforts and said that there is no way he could do it all himself; he mentioned that it takes volunteers to keep the park look-

Helping out in the community and having fun go hand-in-hand for Bethany's Adventure Club. "Besides multiple fun water mishaps involving creek crossings, waterfall ponds, and a lot of unexpected rain, it was a great afternoon," said Mr. Kloostra. The rain and cold weather didn't distract the students from having fun. They ended their hike by roasting hotdogs and s'mores over a camp-fire after they overcame Cardiac Hill and returned to The Chantry Flats picnic area.

Many of the the thirty-one students had never been on a hike or been in the San Gabriel Mountains before. Mr. Kloostra felt it was a very positive experience, so much so that the next Adventure Club trip is planned to North County San Diego at a state beach. THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show Movie Reviews Especially for Teens & 'Tweens SILVER LININGS PLAYBOOK

This is a very intriguing movie. It portrays the struggles of people with bipolar disorder better than any other film I've seen.

After Pat (Bradley Cooper) is released from a mental institution, he goes back to live with his caring mother (Jacki

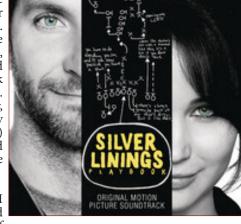

OCD (obsessive compulsive disorder) father (Robert De Niro). He thinks that, if he and

tries hard enough, he can get his old teaching job back and his ex wife. But, along the way, he meets Tiffany (Jennifer Lawrence) and his whole world is turned upside down.

At first, thought this would be a boring, waste of time, but ten minutes in, I was hooked. This truly is a heartfelt movie of a family who is torn apart and brought together by amazing events.

GOOD FOOD & DRINK

SUNDAY BRUNCH AT CHEVAL BLANC

You remember the story of King Midas; he was a kind man who ruled his kingdom fairly. One day, while walking in his garden, he saw an elderly satyr asleep in the flowers. Taking pity on the old fellow, King Midas let him go without punishment. When the god Dionysus heard about it, he rewarded King Midas by granting him one wish. The king thought for only a second and then said I wish for everything I touch to turn to gold." And so it was.

I met Gregg Smith some 25 years ago when he turned Perkins restaurant into the Parkway Grill, a few years later what was a florist shop "Jonkers" he turned it into the Arroyo Chop House. Monahan's is now Smitty's and the story of the Midas Touch has Gregg Smith as a bi line when you read this fabled story because Gregg certainly has the Midas touch, before I tell you about my recent visit to Cheval Blanc for Sunday Brunch, let's get a quick history lesson on how brunch came to be.. The term "Brunch" is a portmanteau of breakfast and lunch, it was said to originated in Britain in the late 1890's, to be fashionable to this day, we, say we must brunch sometime, this writers feeling is Brunch was a great way to party the night before, without committing to an early morning breakfast, the term should be an acronym, for let's meet and eat once we awaken from our hangovers. I digress, since it was too early for tea, it was the perfect time to get the day going with a bloody mary or a mimosa.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

Cheval Blanc has added Sunday Brunch to their prestigious line up with a fantastic array of morning food and a window look at lunch. A warm pastry and bread basket at 11 in the morning you bet!!! Accompanied by a cold glass of Rorderer Estate

Bubbly, this guy felt he just stepped into the French Quarter, after all this is a French Restaurant. Now this is where my job gets tricky, one man can only eat so much, so I'd better pick wisely, Spoiler Alert!!! I did!! After a few bites of the brioche toast with raspberry jam I decided on the Charcuterie, which included Cured Ham, those little tiny pickles that everyone loves and Artisan terrine (cheese for you Americans), my dad always taught me, never fill up on the bread when doing a Sunday Brunch. So, I was smart enough to only get half full, As I mentioned before, we must do Brunch, well you must order the Saumon Fume Eggs Benedict, yes Benedict was a trader but maybe this was my first French Brunch, I was looking for something unique and this is it, when they poured the warm béarnaise sauce on top of the poached egg I was in heaven, no the first bite was Heaven and the second was Nirvana, it was time for another glass of bubbly and at $13 a glass for what I consider top notch California Wine one could afford it, in fact there were several wines on the list that I considered good values including a full bottle of Domaine Chandon for $31, and a Magnum of Robert Mondavi for $150.

Hey it Brunch, live a little you have to go to work on Monday enjoy yourself. Many of you want your eggs a certain way, as my gal at Starbucks says No problem !!! I recommend the Petit Filet and Eggs, eggs anyway way you want them with the black truffle hollandaise sauce.

As of this writing there were five desserts offered and I opted for the Crème Burlee, but of course, it takes a few minutes more to make, but well worth it. Please indulge me to jump back to the bar, many of you like a bloody mary to jump start your morning, I opted for the bubbly, but I witnedd the bartender making a Bloody Mary for the ages, I won't and can't give you the recipe but is one the best Bloody marys I have ever had, free pour of Vodka, very little tomato juice, but it was epic. The restaurant is spacious with white lined and still that same big bar and beautiful stained glass windows from the days of Club 41. Located in central Old Pasadena. All I can say Magnifico !!!

INGREDIENTS:

To braise the beef: 4 pounds flank steak

EVOO – Extra Virgin Olive Oil, for drizzling

Salt and pepper

About 2 quarts water A handful of cilantro (for a bright flavor) or flat leaf parsley (for a grassy flavor)

2 to 3 sprigs fresh oregano

1 large onion, root attached, peeled and quartered

A few ribs of celery, coarsely chopped

2 carrots, peeled and coarsely chopped

4 large cloves of garlic, crushed 2 large fresh bay leaves

For the Sauce:

2 tablespoons EVOO – Extra Virgin Olive Oil

3 medium bell peppers, green, red and yellow, seeded and chopped 1 large red onion, chopped

4 cloves garlic, chopped

1 Fresno (red, fruity hot chili) or jalapeño pepper, seeded and finely chopped 1 1/2 teaspoons cumin, half a palmful

1 sprig fresh oregano, finely chopped

Salt and pepper
A small handful of cilantro or parsley, finely chopped
1/2 cup pimiento-stuffed Spanish olives, chopped

About 3 tablespoons tomato paste 1 can 15 ounces crushed or diced tomatoes

Very thinly sliced red onions dressed in lime juice and seasoned with salt and pepper Drained pickled sliced jalapenos

DIRECTIONS:

Dress meat with oil, salt and pepper. Brown the meat over medium-high heat in a Dutch oven. Add water, cilantro or parsley, oregano, onion, celery, carrots, garlic and bay. Bring to a boil then reduce heat to simmer and cook uncovered for 1 1/2 hours. Turn off heat and let rest for half an hour.

Remove meat to shallow platter and shred with forks, cover and reserve. Strain the braising liquids and return to pot, reduce over medium high heat about 30 minutes more.

Meanwhile, prepare the sauce: Heat EVOO, 2 turns of the pan, in a deep sauté pan over medium-high heat. Add peppers, onions, garlic and chili pepper to oil, and season with cumin, oregano, salt and pepper, and cook to soften 8-10 minutes. Add in cilantro or parsley, olives, tomato paste, stir a minute then deglaze with reduced braising liquid and stir in tomatoes to combine.

Slide in shredded beef and simmer a few minutes more to allow beef to soak in sauce.

Serve with rolls or tortillas for a party snack or serve with rice and beans as a meal. Top beef with red onions dressed with lime and pickled jalapeños for garnish.

Many Chinese restaurants offer Reunion Dinner Packages so families can enjoy the tradition with less fuss. The SGV is home to the best Chinese restaurants in the United States.

Instead of champaign, the "Jiaozi" dumpling plays the center role because its shape resembles a gold nugget and represents prosperity. We have so many choices for good dumplings - Flavor Garden in Alhambra, Fortune Dumpling in Monterey Park, Little Taipei in Arcadia and Shang Ming in San Gabriel - to name just a few.

Gifts are also an important part of the New Year celebration. Children receive red packets containing new currency. Red is the color of new years and you'll see paper-cutouts and lanterns adorning stores and restaurants.

The City of Alhambra's celebration is February 16 on Valley Blvd. between Garfield and Almansor. More than 250 booths will be open from 10 am to 5 pm. There is fun, games and food for everyone. I am sure you can count on hearing at least a few firecrackers signifying good luck.

For those of you who just can't imagine any New Year celebration without champaign, I have it on good authority that dumplings and Champaign go very well together.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

OK, true confession ~ I just celebrated my 50th birthday last week, and as most people do, I guess I consider this to be a landmark year! One thing I can say about getting older is that age seems to have instilled in me a stronger desire to pursue those things that I have always been compassionate about, and one of those things is to be proactive on behalf of the animals we share this remarkable planet with. Ever since I was a kid, I have had an intense sense of compassion for animals, wild and domestic, and as an adult I have shared what resources I could to make a change for the better by donating to select animal rights and animal rescue organizations. Well, with all that said I must say that with a half-century under my belt I can't help thinking it's time to do more. I know there are a lot of well-meaning groups out there that do good things to help animals, but I am on a constant quest to find the best in my area to invest in. During a recent search for a favorite rescue group, I was very pleased to have discovered an organization with the very same compassion and intention as my own.

Animal Advocates Alliance (AAA) is a 501(c)(3) corporation dedicated to promoting the humane treatment of animals through legal advocacy, humane education initiatives and animal rescue. AAA has made it their mission to reduce the animal euthanasia rate through humane process, so we did end up adopting that pathetic little pup and rescue/adoption programs. With the help of numerous animal-loving volunteers, they carry out their mission by implementing various practical projects. They rescue atrisk animals from high-kill shelters, then provide veterinary care for and promote adoption of those animals by posting photos and descriptions on their website and linking that information to social network websites; they provide educational presentations in LA area schools with an emphasis on spaying & neutering as well as proper care and humane treatment of animals; they hold on-site pet adoption events and they advocate legislature for more humane animal treatment. Honestly, I can't think of a more balanced and practical approach to making a change for the better on behalf of the animals.

ANIMAL ADVOCATES ALLIANCE MAKING A

DIFFERENCE BECAUSE THEIR LIFE MATTERS

So, getting back to my inherent childhood compassion, one of my best memories is the time when I was about 5 years old and my dad took me and a few of my siblings to the local animal shelter so we could pick out a dog to be our pet. I remember choosing what most people might have considered to be a "mongrel". He was a multi-mixed up mutt that I thought was the most beautiful beast I'd ever seen. He was a long-hair black and tan shepherd sort of mix with chocolate brown eyes and a perpetual puppy-faced smile. Being the "baby of seven", I guess I must have related to that poor little fella in some special way, and also being "the baby" I had some influence in the selection > we called him Rex. About a year later, Rex snuck out of the back yard and ran into the road where he was hit by a car. I thought my world had ended, but miraculously my dad was able to rescue him education, spay/neuter initiatives and nursed him back to health and he gave us many years of the kind of happiness only a precious loving pet knows how to give.

> Regardless of why I became such an animal lover and advocate for their rights and humane treatment, I would not know what to do without the others who care as much as I do about giving potentially euthanized pets a second chance at life. Animal Advocates Alliance has wiggled their way into my heart by being the kind of people who remind me of my daddy when was a little girl. They are the ones who will go out of their way and forego their own personal selfish desires in life to ensure that an animal is treated humanely. They're the ones who will make all the difference in a world where many humans do not respect or even acknowledge the fact that God put animals on this earth for a very express purpose, and that we humans were given the responsibility to watch out for them. Indeed they are the ones who will also recognize the fact that if we fail to respect and care for the animals who share our space on this planet, we humans may not survive at all! For that I want to say thank you, Animal Advocates Alliance, for being the kind of people you are. People who love and respect God's other creatures, and are willing to go out of your way to make sure all animals are given an equal chance at having a happy & healthy life.

> If you are interested in adopting a dog from Animal Advocates Alliance, visit their website adoption page at: http:// animaladvocatesalliance.org/category/ adopt-now-menu/ where you can view recently posted photos and descriptions of the furry four legged friends they have currently available. Or, you can attend one of their up-coming adoption events to be held on Sunday, February 10th and Sunday, February 24th at Pan Pacific Park, 7600 Beverly Blvd. in Los Angeles.

PIKA: #A4533348

(StatePoint) Just as you can become tense and stressed out by your daily life, so too can your dog or cat. And pet anxiety is not only unpleasant for your pet and potentially damaging to your home and belongings; it can also lead to a host of other health and wellness problems.

With some simple lifestyle tweaks however, you can make scratching, digging, clawing, whining and crying a thing of the past. Here are some tips to reduce your dog or cat's anxiety and make their life, and yours, a bit more comfortable:

Keep Pets Active

"Often, the source of a pet's anxiety is lack of activity," says Brian Atkinson, Director of Pet Training at Invisible Fence Brand. "Whether you have a dog or cat, regular exercise is crucial for a

Be sure to give pets plenty of opportunities for outdoor exercise. Play games with your cat or dog that are both mentally and physically stimulating.

Grant More Freedom

If you're like many pet owners, your schedule means leaving your dog or cat alone for long stretches of time. Granting safe access to your yard while you're busy can alleviate this burden. Consider installing a pet door combined with a pet containment system.

"With proper training, dogs and cats can safely learn to understand and respect the boundaries of the yard," says Atkinson.

Highly recommended by veterinarians, professional dog trainers, behaviorists and other pet experts, a pet door can reduce accidents inside the home, increase exercise, stimulate a pet's senses and provide a change of scenery.

Opt for a programmable electronic pet door that's customizable. For instance, the Invisible Fence Brand Doorman, which is completely secure against unwanted visitors with an automatic locking device, allows you to set different schedules, boundaries and rules for each pet. More information about such devices is available at www.invisiblefence.com.

Make Separation Easier

If your pet cries or misbehaves when you leave the house, you may need to take steps to reduce his or her separation anxiety. Desenitize your pet to anxiety-inducing pre-departure cues like putting your shoes on or packing your bag, by regularly doing these actions

When you do leave, keep the radio on to keep your pet company throughout the day. Keep your absences short initially, gradually building up the length of time you're away. And try to avoid making grand entrances and exits. The act of leaving and returning home should be as much of a non-event as possible.

Maintain their Space

Be sure to regularly clean litter boxes and keep your pet well-hydrated. Automatic litter systems, pet feeders and drinking fountains can help you maintain your pet's living conditions, even when you aren't there to do it yourself.

Don't ignore your pet's anxiety. A few household changes can take the stress out of being a pet, giving you peace of mind that your furry friend is happy and healthy.

77 SHADOW STREET A Novel by Dean Koontz

The next selection that continues here for fictional work takes a turn into darkness, the strange, and the supernatural. '77 Shadow Street' qualifies for all three areas mentioned, but do keep in mind that a story that deals with supernatural (and possibly demonic) forces will immediately be handed over to readers of a mature audience and kept clear of younger readers. Dean Koontz is wonderfully raw yet detailed is this novel: the Pendleton before was a grand 1800s mansion, standing atop the summit of Shadow Hill and known for being built from the ground up from its owner.

Even when it's rechristened as a luxury apartment in 1970, and still continues to stand through the modern day, the Pendleton's reputation is darkened and stained by mystery, madness and suicide, dark shadows and whispers from an unseen force. To add even more depth to this grim yet gripping tale, the newer residents who call the Pendleton their home are slow to come to the realization that all is not right. All 34 chapters highlight each of the different characters in turn, with each character's experience building up from the last, and the steps taken to try counter the evil spirits within the Pendleton, or to be consumed by it. It is not just based on the perspectives of the characters however; there are points in between certain chapters where the narrative of a certain character simply called "The One" gives its two cents on the events that happen, the reasons why they are happening, and what is to become of each of the individual characters. Koontz has excellently crafted this piece, as it is one that the reader will not want to put down, and in order to comprehend its mystery, must be completed from start to finish.

Copyrighted in 2011, and receiving praise from sources such as the Chicago Sun-Times, USA Today, Los Angeles Times, and The Times (London), '77 Shadow Street' is the perfect pick to satisfy your supernatural tastes. And to add to Koontz's allure, '77 Shadow Street' also has an online interactive experience, which will give readers the opportunity to not just read the story, but to have a chilling experience of their own as well.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

Review By Sean Kayden

THE JOY FORMIDABLE

day, The Joy Formidable released their rock anthem driven record, "The Big Roar." The UK band garnered much critical acclaim for their power-rock tunes, piercing sound, and dynamic range both vocally and musically. On paper, the sophomore slump was in the equation, but these past 24 months have proven the band is through with playing second fiddle to bigger, more well known acts and geared up fiddle to bigger, more well known acts and geared up for center stage. On this new album titled "Wolf's Law," the scope of it all is quite larger than their debut. They keep the songs rolling fast and push the tempo to the highest of degrees. Fortunately, the band knows how to slow things down at just right the moment making their second album not a one-trick pony. However, the amalgamation of both fast and slow tunes may cause for some to question what kind of band. The cause for some to question what kind of band The Joy Formidable wants to be. I prefer the slower, more consistent in tone songs the band cranks out than the overblown, overproduced material. One thing is for certain, while Wolf's Law isn't a masterpiece by any comprehension, it is a mostly enthralling and often captivating record that unquestionably will please previous fans and attract new followers.

Wolf's Law is a series of peaks and valleys. On one hand, The Joy Formidable is making some of the best mainstream music out there. Music with as much power and buoyancy as it demonstrates both compassion and emotion. For starters, opening track, "This Ladder is Ours" begins with an orchestral intro before it's cut wide open with an aggressive guitar riff and Ritzy Bryan's powerful vocals that take over. This is a terrific opener that sets the record off to an amazing start, as Bryan's unmistakable vocals guide the melody from supercharged arrangements to a relatively softer pace. The five minute plus rock anthem hits the nail right on the coffin and instantly becomes one of the best songs by the band. One of my personal favorite tracks is "Tendons." It's very melodic

Nearly two years ago to the incredibly loud like most of the other tunes, but loud in the sense that it packs an emotional bite like no other track off "Wolf's Law." "Silent Treatment," the entirely slow tempo track is a real winner too. It shows yet another side to the multifaceted rock group as well as showcasing Bryan's heart wrenching vocals. You can sense the sadness, feel the pain, and see the troubles that she ever so demonstrates in both vocals and words. Lastly, another tremendous song comes in the shape of "The Leopard & The Lung." While Bryan's vocals are a bit under the arrangements making it sometimes discernable to the ear, the beauty and tonal shifts alone are simply incredible. It's a six-minute song that is never dull or wickedly ordinary, but rather rapturous and astonishing. Clearly the most ambitious song the band has ever produced and it easily hits it out of the park, into another hemisphere.

With the good comes the bad or, in this case, the painfully mediocre. The lacking any rhythm, "Little Blimp," the god-awful experimental track "Bats," and the rather tepid, overlong "Maw Maw Song" formulate for some considerable misfires. Despite the calamity of what those tunes offer, you're still left with eight significantly good songs. At any rate, this record, which is a few minutes shy of one hour in length, delivers most of the goods, albeit, a few rotten eggs in the bag. The high energy is present, the soaring melodies and huge choruses aren't missing, and the band's scope is still as wide as ever. "Wolf's Law" is a grand materialization that strikes upon the emotional and spiritual effectiveness of relationships in the period of both restoration and those slipping into reinvigoration mode. Nonetheless, The Joy Formidable create some pretty good music, which should have them becoming even more superior in 2013, but still a ways away from total stardom.

Grade: 7.3 out of 10 Key Tracks: "The Ladder Is Ours", "Tendons", "Silent Treatment", "The Leopard and The Lung"

HEALTHY LIFESTYLES

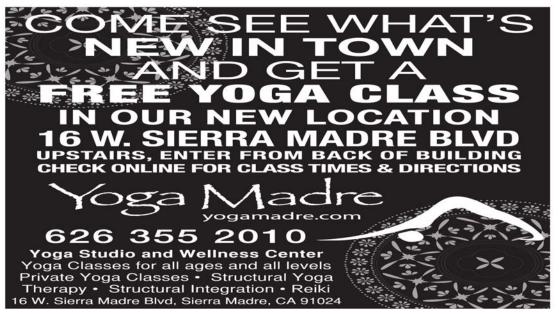

"What's The Story With YOGA?"

A friend of mine wanted to know what the story is with yoga. Why do we have a statue of an elephant god in the studio. Why is there a picture of the Buddah? Do we worship these things? If so, she would not be able to come, she is Christian.

Yoga is many things to many people. It is spiritual. It is NOT religious. You can be any faith to come to yoga. You can be any age and any color and any weight. Yoga is about who you are and who you want to be. If you want to come to yoga for a better booty, cool. If you want to be calmer, cool. If you want to loose weight, cool. Yoga is all about where you are. We have the statues to honor the tradition that has been around for thousands of years. They are much the same as in Greek and Roman mythology -God has many faces. But yoga is very respectful of all faiths. Yoga is very spiritual, your own spirit. It is that we want to nurture. It does not matter if you are Jewish or Catholic or atheist. The spirit inside of you can benefit from the mind/body connection. The spirit inside of you needs nourishing. The mind needs to focus internally. In yoga we withdraw the senses (pratyahara) in order to not be distracted by them. This allows us to get to know our deepest selves better.

Om is the universal vibration, very simple and non-denominational. Sometimes we chant that at the end of class. So, if religion is keeping you from coming to class, don't worry, it will only help make your faith stronger.

See you in class. Namasté, René

THE GOOD LIFE

HOW TO DIVVY UP YOUR STUFF

Dear Savvy Senior: What's the best, conflict-free way to divvy up my personal possessions to my kids after I'm gone? I have a lot of jewelry, art, family heirlooms and antique furniture, and five grown kids that don't always see eye-to-eye on things. Any suggestions would be appreciated. Seeking Peace

Dear Seeking:

Divvying up personal possessions among adult children or other loved ones is a task that many parents dread. Deciding who should get what without showing favoritism, hurting someone's feeling or causing a feud can be difficult, even for close-knit families who enter the process with the best of intentions. Here are some tips to consider that can help you divide your stuff with minimal conflict.

For starters, you need to be aware that it's usually the small, simple items of little monetary value that cause the most conflicts. This is because the value we attach to the small personal possessions is usually sentimental or emotional, and because the simple items are the things that most families fail to Family battles can also escalate over whether things are being divided fairly by monetary value. So for items of higher value like your jewelry, antiques and art, consider getting an appraisal to assure fair distribution. To locate an appraiser, visit appraisers.org.

Ways to Divvy

The best solution for passing along your personal possessions is for you to go through your house with your kids (or other heirs) either separately or all at once. Open up cabinets, drawers and closets, and go through boxes in the attic to find out which items they would like to inherit and why. They may have some emotional attachment to something you're not aware of. If more than one child wants the same thing, you will have the ultimate say.

Then you need to sit down and make a list of who gets what on paper, signed, dated and referenced in your will. You can revise it anytime you want. You may also want to consider writing an additional letter or create an audio tape, CD or DVD that further explains your intentions.

You can also specify a strategy for divvying up the rest of your property. Some fair and reasonable options include:

- Take turns choosing: Use a round-robin process where family members take turns picking out items they would like to have. If who goes first becomes an issue, they can always flip a coin or draw straws. Also, to help simplify things, break down the dividing process room-by-room, versus tackling
- Have a family auction: Give each person involved the same amount of "play money," or use "virtual points" to bid on the items they want. This can also be done online at eDivyyup.com, a website for families and estate executors that provides a fair and easy way to distribute of personal property.

For more ideas, see "Who Gets Grandma's Yellow Pie Plate?" A resource created by the University of Minnesota Extension Service that offers a detailed workbook or interactive CD for $12.50, and DVD for $30, that gives pointers to help families discuss property distribution and lists important factors to keep in mind that can help avoid conflict. You can order a copy online at yellowpieplate.umn.edu or by calling 800-876-8636.

It's also very important that you discuss your plans in advance with your kids so they can know ahead what to expect. Or, you may even want to start distributing some of your items now, while you can

KATIE TseThis and That HOSE DRINKERS

How are your New Year's resolutions going? I set my sights small, and resolved to drink less creamy and sugary coffee at work. Instead, I mix an aspartame-laden 'Crystal Light" knock off with water in a two-liter bottle and sip it throughout the day. Sure, it's artificial and possibly carcinogenic, but at least it's gotta be better than sugar with coffee --I mean coffee with sugar.

So, I was filling my water bottle from the sink in the break room the other day when the boss burst through the door. "What are you doing?" she asked. Aghast, I sheepishly looked up from the faucet. "Uh, getting water?"

No, no, no!" she said, shaking her head. "Come on," she motioned toward her office, "Use the 'Arrowhead' in there." I could feel water overflowing from my bottle into the sink, and nodded, "Okay, maybe next time." I figured, why waste a perfectly good batch of flavored water? Luckily, some small crisis distracted my boss and I was able to retreat to my office with my substandard "faucet water" drink.

For a while I wondered if I was the only tap water-drinking employee until last week, when the topic of tap vs. bottled water came up during lunch. "I was a hose drinker as a kid!" one of the senior workers joked with the boss. This prompted a number of us closet hose drinkers to "come out" and admit our tacky-"tap"

"Yeah," one of my coworkers chimed in, "Nothing tastes better than cold water from the hose after playing outside all day!" A number of us reminisced about our own tap water childhood

I don't know about you, but I never understood the purpose of bottled water. Talk about the antithesis of "green" living! Think about all the plastic used to store bottled water. Then consider the fuel needed to transport it from place to place. THEN consider the fact the most bottled water is drawn from municipal sources, not the babbling brooks of the Sierras, Andes, or any other pristine

The waste that goes into producing regular bottled water is bad enough, but then they've got to go and make even smaller bottles of water! What? You or your kid can't commit to a 12 oz. bottle, so you go for the tiny 6 oz.? Yes, midget water bottles are cute, but really, can cute be justified at the cost of jeopardizing the environment?

I understand that there are situations that demand bottled water. Anytime you're traveling in the third world or a developing nation, by all means, stock up on Dasani or whatever brand you like. During a vacation to Michigan, we stayed at a relative's house that was situated in the middle of a corn field. The water had an orange tint, and smelled like burning sulfur. I don't recall whether or not I actually showered in it, but that was one time I was very grateful for a bottle of Arrowhead!

So, if you're traveling, take advantage of our wonderful advances in bottled water. But if you're torn between filling up at the kitchen sink or paying $1 for a bottle of Dasani, I hope you choose the sink. It's a heck of a lot cheaper. And remember --what doesn't kill you makes you stronger!

Local Plant Pathologist Begins News Series on Local Landscape

Rarely do I come across someone as overwatered (a biiig problem with oaks) ... passionate about his work and his subject and here I am today! as Dr. Jerrold Turney. Beginning today, Saturday February 2, Dr. Turney, a Plant Pathologist and Certified Arborist, will begin a delightful monthly series at the LA Arboretum in Arcadia on the "care and feeding" of our urban forest, known as the one of the most diverse in the

Our Southern California climate is seductively conducive to growing a wide variety of trees. Some make sense to grow here and others are just a headache from the first day they're

Dr. Turney will discuss several different popular SoCal landscape trees at each month's session, including, this month, varieties of Magnolia, Liquidambar, Bottle, Trumpet, Dogwood, Jacaranda, plus five San Gabriel Valley staples, the California Coastal, Engelmann and English Oaks, plus Western Sycamore and the White Alder. After the classroom presentation of these trees' growth habit, native origin, common diseases and pests, the beauty of this series lies in the ability to see these trees in situ, right at the arboretum during the class's hands on walk, to understand and further discuss features and care and identification of variety as well as plant care issues. In addition to having served as curator of the camellia gardens at the Huntington Library and Botanic Garden, a research horticulturist at the Los Angeles County Arboretum, Turney is one of a small group of Plant pathologists for LA County's Department of Agricultural Commissioner/ Weights and Measures.

This department is responsible for collecting samples of nursery stock arriving from other states, to determine if disease or insect infestation is present. This process, according to Turney, is critical not only to the plant health of our urban forest here in LA, but the huge agricultural economy in the state. Think, citrus, vegetables, stone fruits, nuts and so much more!

This "homegrown" pathologist grew up right here in the San Gabriel Valley, in South Pasadena. Chuckling, he remembers his first real exposure to the plant world was mowing lawns when he attended Pasadena City College. "I had the opportunity to look at the different plants around me during that job. From there, I majored in Botany at Cal Poly, then did my Ph.D. at UC Riverside on Phyophthora, a parasitic algae that infects roots when they are problems."

"I spend a lot of time with gardeners on how to water their gardens," he reflected. "When I ask how often they water, most say that their plants get plenty of water. Every day, in fact. Through automatic irrigation. It's drowning their plants! Most need to be watered deeply, and then allowed to dry out for a time. Proper watering is one of the most critical factors in health plants."

Oak root rot fungus is very common in both the San Gabriel Valley and the Beverly Hills area, he commented. If mushrooms come up right on the tree wood in December or January, this fungus is a big concern.

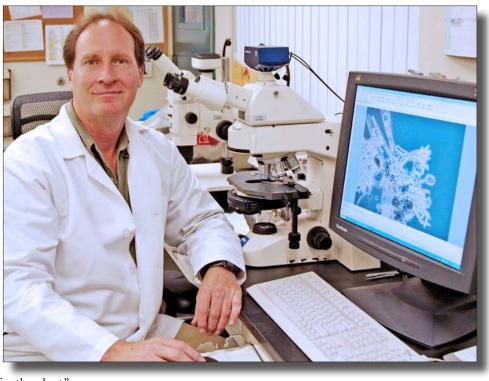

"In fact," he said, "the first thing I look for when a tree or a shrub dies in the San Gabriel Valley is oak root rot. When I cut into the bark, I'll often see a white mycelia fan, a definite indicator, though we will culture it

Often, the problems Angelinos bring to him are not necessarily a virus or fungus infection. "Half the time, the problem arises from unexpected frost, sunburn or a windborne herbicide drift. But it's important to know, so you can understand how to care for the plant."

Turney continued, "A lot of people don't know the trees in the neighborhood. It's important to know what you have in order to take care of them... especially when it comes to pruning!

"An important area for gardeners to understand is what time of year to prune, and why," he said. "Trees are complicated. The Oriental tulip tree blooms in late winter on last year's growth. If it's pruned in winter, it will have fewer flowers. Instead it should be pruned right after flowering."

Conversely, other types of trees require the opposite treatment. "Mimosas bloom here in June on the new growth that occurs in spring. So this tree should be pruned in winter. Stone fruit pruning is another critical area. Pruning is really critical to having healthy vigorous growth. Apricots respond very well to a hard pruning every winter. But remember the Prunus trees like apricot and plums only last 15-20 years before succumbing to age, disease and insect

"Citrus, on the other hand, can grow for a hundred years," according to Turney, "and production doesn't drop off with age."

Turney says that many Angelinos don't know about the availability of the county's plant pathologists and entomologists to assist residents with their individual plant woes. He invites those with plant and tree issues to contact him at his lab in Southgate at 562-622-0433 or by email to ITurney@acwm.LAcounty.gov

"What Tree Is That?" instructed by Dr. Jerrold Turney, will be held once a month on Saturdays at the Los Angeles Arboretum in the Bamboo Room. The first class is today, February 2, and will continue March 2, April 13 and May 11. Pre-registration preferred, but you may register at the door. Please call the Class Registration line at 626-821-4623. Cost is $25 Members/$30 Non-Members (includes Arboretum admission). The Los Angeles County Arboretum & Botanic Garden is located at 301 North Baldwin Avenue in Arcadia. For more information, visit their website at www.Arboretum.org.

DON'T GIVE IT AWAY

While indicators show that housing is making a comeback, the glut of negative reporting is still making people skittish about buying a home. This has created a hot rental market, with few places available to lease and rising rent rates. Consider some reasons why it's always better to own than to

First, as owner, you are your own landlord. You won't be kicked out for any reason other than not making your mortgage payments. You control every other aspect of how you choose to live in your

Even more important, those monthly payments are a kind of forced savings, helping you to build equity. Although it's possible that home values could fall further, the same could happen to your 401(k). But over the long term, both types of investment are more likely to see gains. Right now, interest rates are still very low, which means that if you choose a fixed-rate mortgage, that rate will never change, and you will build equity at an even quicker pace. Another reason to opt for the ownership route is that you'll find - particularly now with so few leases available - that the nicest homes in the safest neighborhoods with the best schools will be offered for sale and not for rent. Consult with an agent and turn that rent payment into savings and security

The New York Times is reporting that its internal network has been under attack from statesponsored Chinese hackers for the past four months. The email accounts of several reporters working on a story considered critical of high-ranking government officials were targeted and infiltrated and the passwords of every single NYT employee was compromised in the process.

While the Times is being very open about this incident the paper is insistent that no customer data was breached during the assault. Security experts brought in to deal with break-in have commented that the attack was consistent with other breaches committed cyber spies associated with the Chinese military against targets they've considered to be critical of official Chinese policies and practices. And, while the Times also had been on guard for security breaches for some time now, the company was informed by its ISP of suspicious activity in the fall of 2012. By that time the attack was well underway and had been so for almost 2 months. The apparent targets of the attack were the accounts of reporters assigned to the Times' China and South Asia desk. The security experts in charge of the cleanup estimate that as many as 45 pieces of custom malware code, some consisting of remote access tools, which had the net effect of giving the attackers the run of the network. Although they group had apparently unfettered access to the Times' network resources and could have caused the potential destruction of network resources, havoc for havoc's sake is not what they were after. Based on evidence and log-tracking the attackers used a botnet of compromised computers around the US to obscure the source of the attack. They then infected computers at the Times with malware and used the malicious code to install remote access tools on other target systems that allowed them to then gather more information from the network. The hackers then used cracked passwords to access other systems and created a custom program built to infiltrate the Times' email servers in order to search

Since the time of the breach the backdoors used by the hackers have been shut down and the servers used to control the botnet have been blocked. State-sponsored hacking has targeted major media companies for years and has had a large degree of success repeatedly breaching the networks of newsgathering agencies. The US government has been investigating these incidents for the last few years and considers hacking a national-security issue of top-priority.

DOLLARS AND CENTS

IS IT TIME TO PUT YOUR BUDGET ON A DIET?

As we settle into the New Year, it's the perfect time to think about self improvement. Losing a few pounds, reaching a personal goal and getting the financial house in order are all great ideas. If you're looking to reach a financial goal in the next few years, there are many "financial diets" you can adopt to better manage your household budget and allocate more of your income for savings. Consider doing a few – or all – of the following things to help you.

Keep a money journal. Just like dieters often begin by tracking what they consume each day, try to make a habit of tracking and recording where your money really goes each day. Write down what you spend each day on gas, coffee, food, clothing and other essential and discretionary expenses. Once you have weekly averages for all of your expenses, you can identify areas where you can start saving here and there by making small, easy adjustments - or bigger changes where you may be largely overspending.

Slim down your utility costs. When was the last time you negotiated better rates with your satellite or cable company or cell phone provider? Pick up the phone and start dialing for possible savings. Even your local gas and electric companies offer discounts designed to help you save money each month. For example, installing a programmable thermostat to control your air conditioner and furnace will quickly pay for itself and help you save on utility costs well into the future.

Count dollars like calories. You know how easy it is to spend $10. So put $3,650 back in your pocket each year by eliminating $10 per day from your daily expenses. You may buy specialty lattes or bottled water or soda, and eat out more frequently than you even imagine. Keep track of your success and congratulate yourself every so often by indulging in something you've cut back on.

Dine out less frequently. Many of us grab lunch and dinner out far more than we realize. Take stock of you and your family's eating habits and consider having friends over for a potluck or appetizers instead. Eliminating one or two dining out events per week can easily save you $80 per month. That's nearly $1,000 per year that you can put to good use.

Downsize your shopping trips. As the U.S. economy yearns for more consumer spending, the availability of discounts and coupons is prevalent. Register to receive emails from discount aggregators to track and save on the products and services you normally buy. Before making a purchase, search online for discount codes and special offers. If you're a teacher, veteran or active military, you may qualify for special discounts at some of the stores where you shop regularly. Just ask the store clerk when making your purchase.

Take care of yourself. The average trip to urgent care costs about $100, while the average cost for an emergency room visit can exceed $500. There are, of course, appropriate times to use both kinds of care, but it's important to understand where to go for health services. Also, remember to take full advantage of the best employer-sponsored health care plan for you, and consider if a flexible spending account or health savings account is a better option.

There are many ways to put your budget on a diet and create opportunities to save more for your future. If you're unsure about how to start, consider working with a professional financial advisor. He or she can help you establish a sustainable financial plan and achieve your New Year's financial goals.

BUSINESS TODAY

The latest on Business News, Trends and Techniques

YES, IT'S HERE TO STAY!

Digital social media is here to stay and it is growing exponentially. Yes, it has leveled the playing field for the David CEO's and owners of small business, against the Goliaths of multibillion corporations in key areas of operations like communicating with customers and processing sales. But it has also created a style of communicating that appears frantic with the unrelenting feed of postings, texts, pins and tweets. Because of the nature of this online culture, it is imperative to develop a marketing plan for your business activities that focuses on a limited number of social media platforms.

It seems there is a new "must use" social media tool introduced every six months - Facebook, LinkedIn, Twitter, Pinterest, Instagrams, and the list keeps growing which is why it is so important to select and master a primary set of tools for your business. This way you will be able to determine if the return on your time and resources invested in social media is worthwhile. The traditional measurements to assign a value to money spent on advertising focus on the total number of (potential) customers reached, the sets of "eyeballs" that will see your ad(s) and the pairs of ears that will hear your radio ad(s). These are becoming less important as the options for digital media have become broader and easier

Anyone who uses social media using a computer or smart phone is connected to receive an onslaught of advertising messages. It also allows anyone to become an instant broadcaster. The ease-of-use has set the stage for millions of users who proudly tout their huge numbers of "friends" and "followers" as validation of their online fame and success. These individuals are filling their coffers with digital affirmations of their latest posting of a personal photo or opinion about the media's most pressing stories for the week.

Making the distinction between personal use and business use is an important point for entrepreneurs. Using social media is one thing, but making sure it's useful for business requires a well-thought plan. There is one key question to help make that distinction clear: "How do I use social media to increase my bottomline?"

It is also useful to ask other questions that relate to how social media may contribute to your profits. This will help you develop an approach to ensure that you are using social media in a way that really works to your advantage. You will need to ascertain if you use of social media has been a factor in bringing in new customers or increasing sales to existing customers. If yes, identify the specific tools (i.e. Twitter, Facebook), marketing activities, ads, or campaigns that have generated the increased sales and determine how to strengthen and repeat the activity within a appropriate time cycle. If not, determine if your clientele is primarily "walk-in" if so, you may need to figure out if they respond to special offers or seasonal promotions.

Then take a look at everything that will contribute to answering that question with positive and profitable results. If your current social media activities are not translating into more customers within a reasonable time frame, it's important to try something different. It's all about integrating the tools that make sense for your business. If the ones you are currently using are not working, then find the ones that will work.

Serious entrepreneurs understand the uselessness of increased visibility and brand exposure. But we also understand that we must use social media to do more than generate a constant stream of lookie loos and window shoppers who have little to no chance of becoming paying customers.

- Reach out to your existing customers with an email campaign and let them know you are ready for more business.
- Start creating great content that is gobbled up socially. Become a content provider. If you can't come up with your own original content, order some curated content and share that. There are several ways you can curate the web to find great content. You can use Google Alerts or install a news feed channel on your Facebook page that searches for trending news about a specific topic or industry.
- Update your web site and tell people about it on social media and in your email campaigns.
- Create visual info-graphics to make some of your complicated information easier to digest. Use visuals to make it easy for people to understand what you offer and how it can make their lives easier.
- Get visual. Come up with interesting photos to share, post to Instagram, Pinterest or Facebook and ask your audience to come up with the caption. Try to get more interaction with your posts by asking for participation.

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

AS THINGS STAND NOW, I THINK I'LL SIT DOWN

on anything not important. this world to waste time on unimportant things. This, however, sometimes gets me in trouble with the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage. Do not let this get back to her, but I sometimes refer to it as the GMP syndrome. She is standing up about something and I am sitting in my easy chair not knowing what she's talking about. My wife's idea of what is important sometimes does not jive with my sense of importance. The real problem is that I do not understand what she thinks is important and she, on the other hand, does not understand that I do not think it is important. On those rare occasions when our sense of what is important collides, we celebrate. That is what is

She thinks she won, and I know I won. Does it really matter? Very few times in life do we both get what we want. When that happens she stands up and gloats, while I sit down and grin.

I am not sure what the difference is between a gloat and a grin, but then, does it really matter?

I must confess we are on a different wavelength at times. The only time our waves are synchronized is when I am driving out of the driveway and waving goodbye and her returning the jester.

Do not get me wrong, we have been a marvelous working team for more years than I can remember. Of course, that does not mean anything because I cannot remember yesterday. However, we have worked together most marvelously for many years and I look forward to many more years of such marital shenanigans.

In spite of that, we have our differences. One of the great differences we have is in the definition of importance. It is a rare day in June when our definitions are united in holy macaroni and cheese. It does happen though and we both revel in those

It is wonderful when we can stand together on some project or some issue. Now that I think of it, I believe we stand together more often than I have given credit.

The thing that makes our relationship so marvelous and wonderful is that we allow the other person to have their differences. She is a broccoli [yuck] kind of a person and I on the other hand am an Apple

It just goes to show there are certain things that a person should stand for and then there are things that really do not matter.

One thing about me that has not changed all these years is Looking out at the world, I notice a few things I just cannot stand for. Some do not make any differthat I refuse to waste my time ence one way or the other, while others really makes a difference. The problem is by the time we under-There is too much to do in stand the significance of something we are too old to do anything about it.

The Pennsylvania Dutch have a wonderful saying, "We grow too soon old and too late smart." By the time we have grown enough to become smart about something that something is no longer in vogue. At my age, of course, I am learning that I cannot stand too long for anything.
Out in the world of politics and religion, people are always coming up with solutions to nonexistent problems. It takes a good politician and religious person to spend a lot of time working on a solution of which there is no problem.

Our world is full of problems, to be sure. It would be a rare day when people would get their heads together and work on problems. All we have today are olutions. The trouble is finding the right solution for the right problem. Only in politics and in religion can we spend all our time working on a solution that does not address any particular problem. As this stands today, I think I am just going to sit down and let it go by, because it will.

My father taught me the most important thing in life was never to try to fix something that ain't broken... or ain't broken too bad. It is amazing what a little duck tape can do to put off fixing something that is not broken too bad. Not every crack needs

Silence is golden and noise can be expensive especially when somebody else is talking. I like surrounding myself with the wonderful sounds of silence. I do not even like talking to myself. I do not listen anyway so what is the use.

Often in my life, I have regretted saying something, but never, to my knowledge, have I regretted keeping my mouth shut. Yes, I will stand up for some things, but many things I will just sit down and take it. No reason to get all riled up when what people are talking about is like a breeze on a summer afternoon. It comes for a moment and then it has gone, and where it goes, nobody knows.

The apostle Paul knew what to stand for. "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Galatians 5:1)

If you do not stand for something good, you will fall for anything, usually bad.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"To Libyans who witnessed the assault and know the attackers, there is little doubt what occurred: a well-known group of local Islamist militants struck the United States Mission without any warning or protest, and they did it in retaliation for the video."

- New York Times, October 15 2012 Regular readers of my column (okay - for the sake of argument, let's assume there are regular readers of my column) know the first thing I turn to in the MVN is Greg Welborn's column. That was true last week, as I turned to the Left / Right page and read what he had And then read it again - and again, a third

Greg was upset over Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's lack of concern during her Congressional testimony over "who lied about what really happened" at the attack on our compound in Benghazi, Libya last year. If somebody lied, I'd like to know about it. But first, I'd like to know what this

"lie" is that Greg wants to get to the bottom of.

I didn't see what the "lie" is upon first reading. So I read the column again – and again. I was hoping, but unable, to find something along the lines of,
"Hord's what was acided and hard's what was a side and hard's what was acided and hard's what the same was acided and hard was acided and hard's what the same was acided and hard was acide

"Here's what was said – and here's why it's untrue."
For example, from Greg's own column one could take his statement that Secretary Clinton "blamed the failure to protect the diplomatic compounds on 'the assistant secretary level or below", and explain that it's untrue because it's something Secretary Clinton didn't do. What she did do in her testimony was cite the findings of the commission led by retired diplomat Thomas Pickering (who served under Presidents Carter, Reagan, H.W. Bush and Clinton) and Mike Mullen, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Stating it was Ambassador Pickering and Admiral Mullen who "blamed" those lower-level employees wouldn't have the same 'spin" as stating it was Clinton herself who did, but the latter statement remains untrue.

There's also Greg's statement that Bill Clinton was "Disbarred from practicing law because he committed perjury." At the end of his presidency, Clinton made a deal with Whitewater prosecutors, accepting a $250,000 fine and a five-year suspension of his Arkansas law license in return for their not pursuing charges once he left office. Perjury is a crime; one which Bill Clinton was never indicted for, stood trial on nor pled guilty to. This isn't "spin"; it's a false accusation of criminality.

I continued wondering about the "lie" Greg referred to. Then I recalled coverage by John and Ken on KFI, who, rather than replaying Clinton's testimony, instead offered a background narrative so we'd understand what the hearings were about: Although our compound at Benghazi was attacked by terrorists, the White House pushed the line it instead was related to protests over an anti-Islam film – and sent out reps, notably U.N. Ambassador Susan Rice, to spread that story in the media. This was done to help President Obama's re-election prospects. Anyone who denies this must be gullible elsewhere, it's time somebody popped their bubble. or involved in a cover-up.

On Bill Maher's HBO show, he screened a clip from the Benghazi hearing of Sen. Rand Paul (R-KY) asking (in all sincerity) a question about arms from Libya being funneled to Turkey. Secretary Clinton responded with a where-the-heck-did-thatcome-from look and a perplexed, "Turkey?!"

As Maher explained, this had nothing to do with information from a State Dept. or intelligence briefing, but more likely was something Sen. Paul picked up from a Glenn Beck show. It's what Maher calls the "bubble"; stories echoing through Fox News and wing-nut radio becoming "reality"

Mitt Romney experienced first-hand the danger of living within this bubble, as he apparently accepted the narrative as repeated by John and Ken. Part of the narrative is that President Obama refused to refer to the attack as "terrorist" until days later.

Whatever momentum Romney gained from the first presidential debate was lost at the second, when President Obama mentioned having referred to 'terrorists" the day after the attack. This contradicted the bubble narrative, so Romney challenged the verifiable reality of Obama's statement - and looked stupid in front of a world audience.

The NY Times article quoted above reported how Congressional inquiries were focused not on defending our missions overseas, but in defending the bubble narrative used against President Obama. One focus was on undercutting Obama's successes against terrorism by directly connecting Benghazi attackers to Al Qaeda - with Republicans expressing great irritation as witnesses testified such connections were tenuous, at best.

There was the derailing of the nomination of U.N. Ambassador Rice for Secretary of State, charging she gave false accounts to media outlets following the attack. What she actually said is readily available. On NBC's "Meet The Press" on September 16, Ambassador Rice said, "the best information we have at present" is that "opportunistic extremist elements came to the consulate . . . with heavy weapons that are unfortunately readily available in post-revolutionary Libya." She said it appeared to be "initially a spontaneous reaction to what had just transpired hours before in Cairo", but added, "that's our best judgment now. We'll await the results of the investigation."

What Ambassador Rice said was pretty much in line with what we knew then, and what we're finding out today. The conflict is not between what she said and reality, but between reality and the bubble narrative that can be so easily dismantled by a couple quick Google searches on primary sources.

Republicans seem incapable of realizing the campaign is over, and Americans expect real efforts to tackle serious issues, not desperate attempts to defend made-up bubble narratives created for no purpose other than to ding the president and his administration.

As Secretary Clinton put it, the focus should be on bringing those responsible for the deaths of four Americans to justice, and to take steps to prevent such a tragedy from happening again. For Republicans who insist on keeping the focus

IMMIGRATION REFORM GREG Welborn CAN WORK IF DONE RIGHT

President Obama has now turned his sights on immigration as the next big issue to be "solved", but, like so much of what he does, political gamesmanship and positioning is more important than concrete results for the very people he wants to help. If the president really wanted to help immigrants in this country and position them and their children to succeed and prosper in this country, he would forget the politics and follow the conservative lead on how to really fix this problem and best serve the country he professes to love.

The political elites in our country – primarily those on the left in politics and the media – have narrowly defined the immigration problem and are covering it from a president vs. Republican perspective. It's the melodrama of the conflict between approximately 11 million, largely brown-skinned, people and the painted-white and privileged Republicans that animates the media and most of those on the left. They never think that Republicans might just care about people as people and might even have a soft spot in their hearts for hard working immigrants. So, let me spell out the essential conservative position on immigration reform.

Immigration reform and education reform must go hand in hand. They are two side of the same coin and can't be separated if we truly want to help immigrants work their way up in our system. If Obama and fellow Liberal's really cared about immigrants, they'd realize that letting them stay in the U.S., but consigning them to the worst performing schools in the country, doesn't do them,

There are 1 million children in this country illegally and another 4.5 million who are legal, but whose parents are not legal residents. In both cases, the tough economic situation faced by the parents largely relegates these kids to the poor urban areas with the lowest performing schools. Overwhelmingly, they suffer great hardship because of their parent's situation, but then again because of the education they receive.

What possible justification can there be for selfprofessing "progressives" to not let these kids – and every other poor kid in America, irrespective of skin color, to have a choice of where to go to school. Immigration reform AND education reform must go together. We have to let parents decide where they want their kids to go to school. Education choice is the kindest, fairest, and most "progressive" policy prescription for these kids and their families, and it is a Conservative position, not a Liberal

Liberals see the education component as a political issue, not a human issue. They see an entrenched, financially powerful, Democratic Party supporter in the pubic school unions, and they are not about to jeopardize that relationship. Any mention of choice, charter, or competition in the public school sphere sends the union lobbyists out threatening to withhold campaign contributions from any Democrat that supports these concepts.

So let's not pretend that liberals care and conservatives don't. That lie should have died a long time ago, but it has the best life support system money can buy in D.C. It was Ronald Reagan, the arch-conservative, of all people who first articulated black, legal or illegal.

the conservative party belief that hard working immigrants are what built this country, will continue to be a part of its success in the future, and have a solid home in the Republican who ignore our laws and simply walk across the border. Illegal immigration is a problem that we believe must be stopped. Legal immigration is a resource we want to encourage. The core issue for conservatives is not whether to deport 11 million people. The key issue is how to treat them so as to not encourage others to break the law, thus insulting those foreigners who want to come to the U.S., but who have thus far obeyed the law and waited their turn. It's a principal that most Americans – right, center and left – should appreciate. We come together in a Democracy, vote, pass our laws and then expect people to obey them. If they don't, they shouldn't expect to be rewarded.

Conservatives propose "regularizing" those people who are illegally in this country in a way that falls way short of deporting them but doesn't simply reward them for what they did. When Ronald Reagan signed his immigration reform act it was with the express desire, and promise, that by dealing with illegal immigrants then, we would not have to deal with the same issue in the future. Sadly, he was hoodwinked by the Congress, and nothing was done to prevent future illegal immigration. So we face the same situation today.

Accordingly, the last major plank of the conservative position is that we have to secure the border even as we accept the fact that 11 million people are largely going to stay in this country. We can find a way to deal with them that is fair, but we have to make sure it doesn't happen again. Promises that the border will be secured after immigration reform is passed don't fly. Americans have been lied to on this issue time and time again. We're not going to kick the football held by Lucy anymore.

For those who suggest that a fence doesn't work, they should check with Israel. When Israel built its fence, the number of suicide and terrorist attacks fell dramatically. The technology is not that difficult. A double fence construction (two fences running parallel) will halt the vast majority of illegal immigration. Nothing is 100%. The perfect cannot be the enemy of the good.

In conclusion, spare us the sanctimonious pronouncements, Mr. President, about how you and your kind are the only ones who care. Save us the ugly accusations about the black hearts of conservative Americans. And for once, just once, please put the country ahead of politics. Join the conservatives in helping immigrants join the American fabric, giving their kids - and all poor kids - a choice of where they go to school, and secure the border to secure this nation for everyone who lives here, whether they are rich, poor, white,

STUART Tolchin......On LIFE HOW DID SHE DO IT?

Soon after I saw Justice Sonia of Office to Vice-President would be doing a book-signing at Vroman's last Friday. I mentioned this to my wife, who promptly went out and bought that important to me, I should buy another book and go stand in line by myself. I was disappointed but just to show her, I decided to go by myself.

Well, it really wasn't just to show her. I am really interested in Justice Sotomayor. How could this woman, born in great poverty with an alcoholic father, dead by the time she was nine, achieve such improbable success? Her elevation to the Supreme Court is almost as surprising and unlikely as the election of a President who really never knew his father or his goat-farmer grandfather. Old limitations have disappeared and it is time for me to learn the new rules.

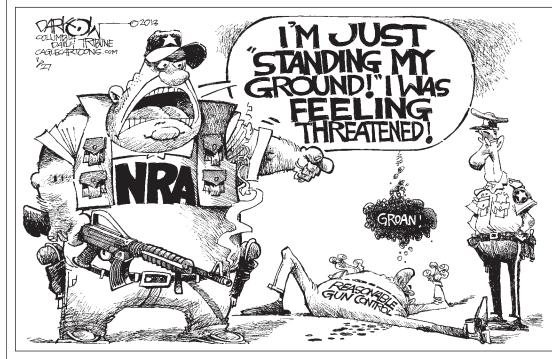

Well, the first thing I learned was that it would cost me thirty dollars to buy the same book at Vroman's, for which my wife had paid fifteen bucks at Costco. I paid it and received a ticket allowing me to get in line about a half an hour before the signing was to begin. A little before the appointed time, I appeared at the back door of the book store and was directed to wait at a corner about 2 full blocks away from the door. This was a surprise, but I was more surprised when I was forced to wait at that corner as a part of a huge line that remained stationary for over two hours. AND IT WAS RAINING!

Why was I doing this? Somehow I imagined by eventually getting close to this woman I might possibly learn the new secret path to success. I waited; got wet and eventually I was allowed to enter the store and walk up the stairs and there she was. I reached the front of the room where she sat signing. The person in front of me said, "You have been my role-model." The Justice smiled, and as she smiled, I said, "Keep rolling". She laughed and made a scrawl across the title page of my book. Maybe I had made some small contact.

I went home and told my wife that she hadn't Sotomayor administer the Oath missed much and that I couldn't believe I had waited for so long in the rain. Really, though, I thought Biden I became aware that she would be doing a book-signing to read the book. It is 308 pages plus an added Spanish-English glossary and a Spanish poem. I read the glossary first and leaned that café con leche is translated as coffee with milk. Not exactly a her book, My Beloved World, surprise and for me kind of illustrative of the whole at Costco. I called my wife and learned that she book. Much of it was very familiar, such as the really didn't want to stand in the rain for three revelation that when studying it is best to underline hours just to get a book signed and that, if it was and make notes in the margins; then, right before the examination, reread the chapters with emphasis on your underlining and marginal notes. I knew that. Similarly, don't just read to learn the results. It is more important to understand process than products. I know that also. Here is a surprise though. Her father was a hopeless alcoholic and her mother was cold and seemingly disinterested in her. The Justice revealed that this inspired within her, "a kind of precocious reliance that is not uncommon in children who feel the adults around them to be unreliable."

Curses! No wonder I am such a failure. My mother was always interested in me and was completely reliable. Still I read the whole book. Chapter 26 reveals that the Justice's genius cousin, her soul-mate and almost-twin, died of a heroin overdose before he was thirty. She wonders why did she survive and prosper, while he did not. She hunts for the answer and concludes, "Call it what you like: discipline, determination, perseverance, the force of will. If only I could bottle it, I'd share it with every kid in America. But where does it come from?'

Where indeed? Of course the question is never answered; but after reading the book I had this feeling that all things are possible. I need not feel eternally restricted by my own past and recognized limitations. Sometimes it is a good idea to stand in the rain and devote oneself to some vision, however improbable. The book of our own lives continues and our main task is to stay interested in that life even if we think we have already learned its lessons. Enjoy another café con leche and realize that though we all end up in the same place; it our individual journey that matters even if we are hampered by reliable parents. Who knew?

CAN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY REBRAND ITSELF?

national election defeat, loss of growing demographic groups, and polls indicating many perextreme? The answer is yes. Will it? That answer is more

There are signs of movement.

Senate Republicans in the "Gang of 8" reached a deal with Democrats on immigration reform. But will the Republican House dilute or stop it? Several top Republicans suggest the party must be more inclusive in tone. Notable non-Sarah Palin fan and Fox News bigwig Roger Ailes made the former Alaska Governor a lowball-contract-renewal offer she could and did refuse, in what many consider an Ailes effort to move Fox away from the Twilight Zone-ish far right. So Palin joins Glen Beck in Fox

To rebrand, the GOP must extricate itself from the talk radio political culture that celebrates political brinksmanship, snarkiness, over-the-top verbal de-monization and division, and considers compromise "caving" and consensus as dated. The talk radio political culture, coupled with the Just Say No bitter political brew of Tea Partiers, have greatly damaged the GOP image -- and brand.

If Republicans want to lose six out of seven Presidential elections come 2016, they should stay the course. There is a market in America thirsting for a thoughtful, substantive, Republican Party that offers a serious alternative to Democrats, rather than zinger-hurling politicians and activists seemingly auditioning to be Rush Limbaugh Show substitute Current Republican Party rebranding efforts have been damaged by reports that in several states, and even at the national level, some GOPers may want to do what some Virginia Republicans are trying to do. Virginia Republicans tried to shove through a measure changing the way our political system operates by allocating electoral votes according to Congressional districts. Several pundits note that if this system had been in place nationally in 2012, Mitt Romney would have defeated Barack Obama -- even though Romney lost by 4.4 million votes.

Can the Republican Party re- When Republican National Committee Chair Rebrand itself after its big 2012 ince Priebus expressed interest in this idea, the story spread further and hurt the GOP brand -- since to many Americans it (rightfully) made Republicans look like sore losers, willing to garbage-bag our acceive it as out of touch and too cepted rules of the game to rig elections to win and maintain power. As the imagery damage became evident, more Republicans started voicing opposition to the idea, which even the Wall Street Journal headlined "divisive."

> Florida's Republican House Speaker Will Weatherford told a reporter: "To me, that's like saying in a football game, 'We should have only three quarters, because we were winning after three quarters and they beat us in the fourth.' I don't think we need to change the rules of the game, I think we need to get

> You could say "no duh" -- except there still are an awful lot of powerful "duhs" still out there.

Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal famously declared it's time for the GOP to stop becoming known as the stupid party." The National Journal's Charlie Cook suggested the party could use sensitivity training because Asians and Latinos were turned off by 'shoot-from-the-lip remarks from various Republican candidates, conservative radio and cable television talk-show hosts, and guests who were seen by many as being, correctly or not, spokesmen for the Republican Party."

So are the attempts to rig the Electoral College dead? Not totally.

If Republican dominated legislatures shove this through in even a couple of states, it will be a godsend to Democrats who have their own ideas on how to brand the GOP. And if Republicans ever did, in essence, gerrymander the electoral college so that they can maintain power without winning the popular vote, then the U.S. would be on its way to becoming a banana Republic -- engineered by "stupid" banana Republicans.
