The City of Sierra Madre MUNICIPAL CODE TEXT AMENDMENT 12-01 (MCTA 12-01)

Applicant: Project Location: State of California

Artwork by Djibril N'Doye

City of Sierra Madre Properties in the City of Sierra Madre, County of Los Angeles,

The City of Sierra Madre gives notice, pursuant to State of California law, that the City Council will conduct a public hearing to consider a text amendment to Municipal Code Chapter 5.56 relating to baths and massage establishments, and Chapter 17.36 relating to permitted uses in the Commercial Zone. The purpose of the amendment is 1) to conform the City's massage regulations to State requirements pursuant to Division 2 of Chapter 10.5 of the Business and Professions Code, and 2) allow massage therapy as a stand-alone permitted use in the City rather than as an accessory to a permitted use. The proposed amendments will establish one regulatory scheme for massage services to create a consistent and clear process for applicants and will enable consumers to identify legitimate massage workers, thus protecting the health, safety, and welfare of the City. At their meeting on February 7, 2013, the Planning Commission recommended approval of MCTA 12-01 to the City Council.

DATE AND TIME OF HEARING

City of Sierra Madre City Council meeting Tuesday, February 26, 2013 (Hearing begins at 6:30 p.m.)

PLACE OF HEARING

City of Sierra Madre City Council Chambers 232 W. Sierra Madre Blvd. Sierra Madre, CA

All interested persons may attend this meeting and the Planning Commission will hear them with

ENVIRONMENTAL DETERMINATION: This ordinance is exempt from CEQA pursuant to CEQA Guidelines § 15061(b)(3), 15301 and 15303 for numerous reasons. First, only a limited number of massage therapist businesses have ever applied to do business in the City, and this is not expected to change. Thus, the impact of this ordinance will affect only a handful of parcels at most. Second, if any massage therapy uses are authorized, they would be for facilities that meet the requirements of 15301 or 15303, as such uses are typically small in size, and would be expected merely to update the interior of existing structures, or to build a very small new structure. Third, massage therapy uses are not significantly different in the impacts that they create from other uses already authorized in the commercial zone, such as nail salons, barber shops, and day/health spas (which already authorized accessory massage therapy uses), and such uses are already authorized via home occupation permits. Fourth, revising the procedures by which certification is issued to massage therapists does not affect traffic, noise, or have any other environmental impact. APPEAL: If in the future anyone wishes to challenge the decision of the City Council in court. one may be limited to raising the issues that were raised or presented in written correspondence delivered to the City Council at, or before, the scheduled public hearing. For further information on this subject, please contact the Development Services Department at (626) 355-7135.

PLANTING HISTORY - NEW GARDEN AT THE MUSEUMS Submitted by Chris Bachwansky

SMHPS member Norma Bachwansky, garden designer Orchid Black, SMHPS President Amy Putnam and SMGC President Glenn Putnam pause for a moment to survey the progress made at Lizzie's and Richardson House.

On Sunday the 10th there was a beehive of activity at Sierra Madre's two museums, Lizzie's Trail Inn and Richardson House, as ground breaking began for the site's new bird and butterfly friendly garden. The garden is a joint project of The Sierra Madre Garden Club and the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society (SMHPS).

A team of 21 volunteers from both groups cleared vegetation and cleaned up existing beds. Garden designer Orchid Black, President of the California Native Plant Society and owner of Native Sanctuary, was on hand to survey the site for a new garden plan that she is donating to SMHPS.

The design will emphasize local plants, many of which can be found along the Mount Wilson Trail and will be have name tags for identification, good water management, and attract many birds and butterflies to the area. According to Orchid Black, native plants are best planted at two different times during the year, so the garden will be planted in stages.

SMGC President Glenn Putnam remarked, "The day was a big success. Both groups accomplished a lot of cleanup and now the new garden can begin to take shape. A big thank you to all of our club members who helped make the event such a success!"

SMHPS President Amy Putnam said, "This is progress toward making the Museums even more interesting and informative for our community. I'd like to thank all the members of the Garden Club and the Historical Society who assisted with the initial landscaping effort. Stay tuned, and watch our garden grow."

The Sierra Madre Garden Club meets the second Monday of the month at 6:30 for dinner or 7:15 for just the general meeting and program at the Hart Park House in Memorial Park. The Historical Preservation Society meets the third Thursday of the month at 7:15 Hart Park House. For more information, visit the SMGC at www.smgardenclub.shutterfly.com and the SMHPS at www.smhps. com or email smhps@outlook.com.

JPL Scientists: No Connection in Asteroids

By Dean Lee

Researchers at JPL have ruled out and any connection between two asteroid related events Friday, one injuring over a 1,000 people as it streaked across the sky exploding over Russia's Ural Mountains, and the other, asteroid 2012 DA14, a 160 foot long, 190,000 metric ton rock, missing earth by just17,150 miles.

Paul Chodas, research scientist in the Near Earth Object Program Office at JPL explained why the two events were not related.

Our estimates are based on things like the direction of approach," he said. "Which we believe was approximately north to south [for the Russia event], as far as we can tell from the many YouTube videos. Another reason is that the velocity was much greater than we would have expected from a remnant, something related to Chodas also said the meteorite that hit Russia had an orbit that originated from the asteroid belt, "The orbit of asteroid 2012 DA14 is more Earth like, it does not go out so far."

Bill Cooke, lead for the Meteoroid Environments Office at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. said the meteoroid that hit over Russia entered the atmosphere at 40,000 miles per hour blowing out windows and knocking down walls. Reports said at least 1,000 people were injured.

'This rock was about 15 meters in diameter, it was a weight of about 7,000 metric tons," he said later adding that the fireball trail was over 300 miles long. He said the force from the explosion was equivalent to a nuclear bomb, measuring between 300 and 500 kilotons.

The meteoroid hit at 9:28 a.m. Russian time he said.

Chodas said this was the largest recorded event since the 1908 Tunguska explosion, which a meteor, scorched over 800 square miles of forest in Russia.

"What's Going On?" News and Views from Joan Schmidt

Every month, I attend the Arcadia Chamber of Commerce's Government Forum. There is always interesting guest speaker/s enlightening us with information on a very pertinent topic. We have had Supervisor Mike Antonovich educate us important county issues, Secret Service agents alert us about counterfeit money, Steve Scauzillo give an update on the water situation, and Metro Line updates us, just to mention a few. At one of the meetings, I met Verena Somer. This remarkable woman is the principle consultant of The Service Advisors and a leading designer and proponent of the "Culture of Service Movement". For over 25 years, she has worked with corporate and small business clients and is skilled at customizing "no cost" strategies and tools for promoting business access.

At a meeting a few months ago, Verena was very excited about a book, U Touch I Tell. This book gives a very important message to children and is presented in a kid-friendly manner. Verena mentioned the author, Chi Hosseinion, would be at the Duarte Festival of Authors with her book. Chi herself was a victim of sexual abuse as a young child. The abuser was a friend of the family, so it was difficult for Chi to tell anyone about the abuse.

In the Forward of "U Touch I Tell", Dr. Polly Dunn, a child psychologist, mother of four, and founder of ChildPsychMom.com elaborates the book's purpose: "to teach children how to respond if they are ever touched inappropriately by an adult or other child". Dr. Dunn notes that "In this book, inappropriate touch is defined clearly as any part of a child's body that would normally be covered by their bathing suit". (This is a good description for children.) Dr. Dunn feels "the simple no-nonsense message of "U Touch I Tell" arms children with both knowledge and courage to tell someone if anyone ever touches them inappropriately. Children of all ages will be able to understand the message of this upbeat and empowering story."

U TOUCH I TELL: A MANDATORY LESSON FOR ALL CHILDREN

For several years, I was on the Duarte Education Foundation and each year, we spent a long meeting going through ALL Duarte Unified teachers' (Grades K-12) grant applications. What a variety of grants were given-from class sets of dictionaries for elementary students to buses for High School field trips to the Museum of Tolerance. I am sure ALL School District Foundations raise monies for various classroom needs, not just Duarte Unified School District. After purchasing U Touch I Tell, I begin to think," Wouldn't it be wonderful if sets of this book could be purchased for elementary classrooms, and a few days set aside each year to cover this topic?"

For twenty-five years, I taught at Annunciation Catholic School. When I began, we had a few weeks set aside for the "Family Life" Program. In my last years, a program was adopted to cover the topic of sexual abuse. There were two large binders to cover grades K-8 and we shared the Program with Holy Angels School. Within these two large binders were lessons and worksheets to Xerox for Grades K-8. This undertaking was time consuming and costly, but it was for the safety of our children, so we were grateful to have the opportunity to provide this service.

When Verena told me about the book, I became enthused also. After purchasing a copy, and reading the book, I thought it would be a great tool for teachers. An investment of a complete set of these books for lower grade classrooms would be great. The books are soft covered, the story is only 28 pages, but the lesson it teaches is immeasurable. I am hoping that teachers from both public and private schools read this column, go on line and learn more about U Touch I Tell, become enthused and find out if this book-a great tool to teach a lesson- can be implemented in their school.

A "U Touch I Tell Foundation" has been formed. It is a 501 (c)3 nonprofit with the distinct purpose to empower the community through prevention and awareness. It also is dedicated to providing platforms of support to children and victims of sexual abuse. Please go to www.UTouchITell.org for more information.

THE ROOTS OF VALENTINE'S DAY

sponsored by WTI (see www.wtinc.info for details and schedule of upcoming talks.)

Last Sunday the topic was Valentine's Day, and everyone learned that there was a very real person and possibly two – that this day is named after.

February 14 is the day set aside to commemorate a real historical person named Valentinus. With just a little bit of research, we learn that this Valentinus person was stoned, clubbed, and beheaded in about the year 270 A.D. He was violently killed by an unruly mob. That's the meaning buried there in that word "martyr." But why? And how have we come to associate Valentinus with chocolates and hearts and lovers?

It turns out that there were at least two people called Valentinus – possibly more – who lived in the 2nd and 3rd Centuries. One – who the Catholic Church now called Saint Valentine - was beheaded in 270 A.D.

Another Valentinus lived about a century earlier and founded one of the most important sects of Gnosticism. He was born in Egypt and educated in Alexandria. He settled in Rome during the reign of Pope Hyginus and taught there for more than 20 years. He attracted a large following to his beliefs, due in part to his intelligence, his eloquence of speech, and his impeccable arguments. But the teachings of this Valentinus differed in some ways from the Christian church of that time, and when the office for the Bishop of Rome opened up, he was not selected. Valentinus then chose to break off from the Christian church, left Rome, and continued to develop his doctrines as

There are no original surviving documents from the teachings of Valentinus. So, if you want to discover what he actually believed and taught, you have to study fragmentary quotations found in the writings of his orthodox Christian oppo-

Through research, we learn that Valentinus was influenced by Plato (the main source of the teachings of Socrates), Zoroastrianism, and Christianity. Valentinus also spoke of a spiritual realm which he called Pleroma, which consisted of "emanations" layer being a wholly complete reality. It's all very of what he taught is very relevant today.

Every Sunday out- interesting, though it's all a bit second-hand because whatever Valentinus wrote was apparently "lost" or destroyed by opponents.

The term Gnosticism came from the word "gnosis," defined as spiritual knowledge. Those who followed this line of study were called the Gnostics, and many were referred to as Christian Gnostics. The outdoor talks are But by the third century, the more orthodox Christian church (and the political power of the day), decided to oppose and persecute the Gnostics. By the end of the third century, Gnosticism as a distinct movement had largely disapppeared.

Now, here's the quiz: Where in all this did you hear anything about chocolates, hearts, greeting cards, bunnies, jewelry, roses, or lace underwear? Plus, there doesn't appear to be any historical connection with any of the individuals named Valentinus with the date of February 14.

It turns out that in the pre-Christian days, there was a celebration in honor of Lupercus, a pastoral god, sometimes identified with Faunus or Pan. Faunus is depicted as having the body of a man but the horns, pointed ears, tail, and hind legs of a goat. That is, Faunus is more or less identical with the satyr, who was said to be lecherous, lustful, and always ready to party.

The pre-Christian observance of this day was called Lupercalia, which fell on February 15. Most of what people do today in the name of "celebrating St. Valentine's Day" has its roots in the ancient feast of Lupercalia. On Lupercalia, cards were given (often with subtle or overt sexual overtones), and men reportedly chased women through the streets (sounds somewhat like Mardi Gras).

It is difficult to ascertain why the commemoration of Valentinus was used to supplant, uplift, and supercede the already-existing commemoration of Lupercus, but that's what happened. Yet, very little of the trappings of modern St. Valentine's Day have anything to do with the historical Valentinus.

And that's really a shame, since Valentinus was as important as perhaps Socrates or Pythagoras, and yet most of us only associate him with the silly commercialism of Lupercalia's remnants. Certainly it's possible that the Church engineered this substitution so that people would elevate their practices on this day, though there is no evidence that that has happened.

So rather than waste money and time on chocolates and red cards, why not take the time to study something meaningful about the great teacher Valentinus, or about the real meaning of that much-used word "love." One excellent book in this evolving from an original divine being. These have been described as the layers of an onion, with each get into it, you may discover – as I did -- that much

NASA's Deep Impact Spacecraft Eyes Comet ISON

NASA's Deep Impact spacecraft has acquired its first images of comet C/2012 S1 (ISON). The images were taken by the spacecraft's Medium-Resolution Imager over a 36-hour period on Jan. 17 and 18, 2013, from a distance of 493 million miles. Many scientists anticipate a bright future for comet ISON; the spaceborne conglomeration of dust and ice may put on quite a show as it passes through the inner solar system this fall.

This is the fourth comet on which we have performed science observations and the farthest point from Earth from which we've tried to transmit data on a comet," said Tim Larson, project manager for the Deep Impact spacecraft at JPL

This is the orbital trajectory of comet C/2012 S1 (ISON). The comet is currently located just inside the orbit of Jupiter. In November 2013, ISON will pass less than 1.1 million miles (1.8 million kilometers) from the sun's surface. The fierce heating it experiences during this close approach to the sun could turn the comet into a bright naked-eye object Image Credit: NASA/JPL-Caltech

Deep Impact, launched in 2005, has executed close flybys of two comets, Tempel 1 and Hartley 2, and performed scientific observations on two more—comet Garradd and now ISON. The ISON imaging campaign is expected to yield infrared data, and light curves (which are used in defining the comet's rotation rate) in addition to visible-light images. A movie of comet ISON was generated from initial data acquired during this campaign. Preliminary results indicate that although the comet is still in the outer solar system, more than 474 million miles from the Sun, it is already active. As of Jan. 18, the tail extending from ISON's nucleus was already more than 40,000 miles long.

Long-period comets like ISON are thought to arrive from the solar system's Oort cloud, a giant spherical cloud of icy bodies surrounding our solar system so far away its outer edge is about a third of the way to the nearest star (other than our Sun). Every once in a while, one of these loose conglomerations of ice, rock, dust and organic compounds is disturbed out of its established orbit in the Oort cloud by a passing star or the combined gravitational effects of the stars in the Milky Way galaxy. With these gravitational nudges, so begins a comet's eons-long, arching plunge toward the inner solar system.

ISON was discovered on Sept. 21, 2012, by two Russian astronomers using the International Scientific Optical Network's 16-inch telescope near Kislovodsk. NASA's Near-Earth Object Program Office, based at JPL, has plotted its orbit and determined that the comet is more than likely making it first-ever sweep through the inner solar system. Having not come this way before means the comet's pristine surface has a high probability of being laden with volatile material mostly water ice and dust—that will become a visible "tail" after it is heated by the Sun.

ISON will not be a threat to Earth, getting no closer than about 40 million miles—a little less than half the distance from Earth to the Sun. But stargazers will have an opportunity to view the comet's head and tail before and after its closest approach to the Sun in December—if the comet doesn't fade early or break up before then.

LA SALLE SOPHOMORE LAUNCHES NEW CLUB TO HELP MILITARY FAMILIES AND IS SELECTED AS AN KABC COOL KID

Pasadena, CA -Taylor Brennan, a La Salle High School sophomore, has launched a new school club to help military families through the healing powers of art. More than 15 talented art students have joined La Salle's Portraits in Courage club. "Portraits of Courage is designed to give talented art students an opportunity to get together with other likeminded artists and give back to our courageous men and women in the armed services who protect our freedom and our lives every day, "said Taylor. The club members are currently creating portraits of military service members and they will give these works of art to the military families as the student's way of they king the soldiers. families as the student's way of thanking the soldiers and their families for their service.

In recognition of Taylor's commitment and perseverance, he has been selected as a KABC Cook Kid. He was filmed and interviewed for the segment by KABC reporter, Danny Romero. The interview and Cool Kid segment will air on KABC, channel 7 on Thursday February 21 during the 4:00pm edition of EYEWITNESS NÉWS.

The segment repeats on Sunday, February 24 on the final morning edition of EYEWITNESS NEWS (usually 10:00am, but check local listings for that day).

Art instructor Joanne Lamb serves as the staff moderator of the club, which meets afterschool, when the students will paint or draw the portraits. They intend to complete at least 15 portraits by the end of the school year, which means they can be presented in time for Memorial Day 2013.

The club is currently reaching out to the greater Pasadena community to connect with military families who would like to receive a portrait of their loved one serving in the armed forces, as well as of those who have fallen or returned home injured or disabled.

Brennan, 16, is also the president of the school's Support Our Troops club, which he started last year to provide holiday cards and letters to members of the service, as well as 'Boxes of Love" for members of the armed services and needy military families. The Portraits of Courage club is an extension of the Support Our Troops club, he said. "I'm an artist, and my friends in art want to use our talent to help the families who have gone through loss," he said. "I don't think the needs of these people are being fulfilled. We want to help those families who are coping with the loss of a loved one or those who have been badly injured and whose lives have been changed."

Mrs. Lamb explained that these students are highly gifted artists who are serious about their art and about giving back to the community. Families who are interested should be willing to submit two to four photographs of the subject of the portrait. The photographs can be in a military setting, or of the individual in uniform, or they can be of the soldier in a casual setting. The club requests that the photos be at least 5x7 or larger so they can see the details of the face. Portraits will be done as paintings or drawings in pencil, charcoal or colored pencil depending on the artists' preference and skill.

Military families interested in having a portrait done by the students in the Portraits of Courage club can mail their 5x7 or larger photos to Portraits of Courage Club, Attention Mrs. J. Lamb, La Salle High School, 3880 East Sierra Madre Boulevard, Pasadena, CA 91107. Local organizations that work with military families are also encouraged to contact Mrs. Lamb, if they have families who would like to

ST. RITA RAIDERS WIN CYO NORTH REGION CHAMPIONSHIP

Sierra Madre, CA, February 14, 2013 – This week, in a heart-stopping, come-from-behind victory over the talented Royals of St. Thomas the Apostle of LA, the St. Rita Girls Varsity Basketball team captured, for the first time ever, the CYO North Region Championship!

Lead by co-captain and leading point scorer, Chelle Encinas, and a grand team effort, the lady Raiders emerged victorious, narrowly edging out the Royals with a score of 14-13. It was a low-scoring, defensive battle that see-sawed, with neither team leading by no more than four points at any one time in the game. Late in the second half, the Royals took the lead 8-7 and determinedly refused to relinquish their accomplishment.

As the score climbed to 11-13 in favor of the Royals, all the girls knew it was "do or die!" Fouled while shooting with 2 minutes left, Encinas took the line and sunk 2 for 2 to tie the score. A clutch steal by Kathleen Brady provided the opportunity for the Raiders to score, only to be fouled again. Encinas was sent back to the line with 2.7 seconds left in the game. Missing the first of the two, in front of the anxious crowd, she calmly swished the second, effectively ending the game! The Royals did not have time to take a final cross court shot.

Coach Cyndy Amerio and the lady Raiders now look forward to the final four for the Southern California CYO Championship to be played this weekend.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show Movie Reviews Especially for Teens & 'Tweens BEAUTIFUL CREATURES

With the upcoming release of the movie adaptation, I felt that it would be appropriate to change focus this week and do a review of the book 'Beautiful Creatures' by Kami Garcia and Margaret Stohl.

In the small South Carolinian town of Gatlin, there isn't much that changes. The local High School has jocks, clicks, and outsiders, just like any other place, but when the niece of the town shut in, Macon Ravenwood, appears at school, they all agree that she is bad news. Everyone, that is, except a boy named Ethan Wate. He instantly recognizes her as the mysterious girl appearing in his dreams and he knows that their lives will determine the fate of the South forever.

This is nothing like 'Twilight'. It is completely different and, in my opinion, far better. The story is addictive and you won't want to stop until the book is done. I am very interested to see how they will adapt the plot to fit into a movie. It promises to be very good.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

The month of February begins an annual 4-6 week pupping season for northern elephant and pacific harbor seals, which means the volunteers and staff members at The Marine Mammal Center (TMMC) at Fort Bragg in Sausalito are busy at work watching out for newborns currently camping along the northern California coast. It also means the good folks at Marine Mammal Care Center (MMCC) at Fort MacArthur in San Pedro are busier than usual, taking in and tending to injured or ill seal pups being rescued and brought to their facility for emergency medical attention. There are various reasons why vulnerable baby seals have such a tough time surviving on California's coast, not the least of which is the human harassment factor.

The Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972, along with other international marine mammal protection laws are intended to help protect endangered marine mammals including those found on the California coast which include California sea lions, northern elephant seals, harbor seals and northern fur seals. They are all remarkable sea-going creatures that play a major part in the balance of nature. However, in spite of the legislation that has been put into place on behalf of those precious pinnipeds (Classification order: Carnivora & suborder: Pinnipedia), the struggle remains to protect them from inappropriate human interaction that could potentially render them extinct.

I will never understand why people don't recognize the importance of leaving wild creatures alone and letting nature take its course. It has been said that no man is an island unto himself, and I can't think of a more pertinent application for that well-coined phrase than to the human's relationship with sea-dwelling beings. Skillful neglect is the public's most appropriate approach to protecting the valuable vulnerable life forms that live in the ocean, yet for reasons beyond me, many people refuse to stay away and allow them to thrive in a natural way. As a result, it has become necessary for those who do understand the important role pinnipeds play on our planet, to be proactive in protecting them from those who don't. In similar fashion to what some consider to be a radical up-rising of self-appointed advocates for spaying & neutering and adopting versus shopping for domestic that will hopefully help pets, marine mammal lovers have had to prevent the future loss come to the plate to save the lives of injured of pinniped populations.

BELLA: #A4538659

Bella (A4538659) is an angelic five year old black and fawn female purebred German Shepherd who was found in Baldwin Park on January 30th and brought to the Baldwin Park animal Care Center. She has a microchip, and the shelter has tried to contact her registered owner, but so far has been unsuccessful. Weighing fifty pounds, Bella is very good on the leash and is well socialized. Initially cautious when meeting new people, Bella warms up quickly and becomes quite kissy and affectionate. She is good with other dogs and we think the world of this medium energy girl. Bella will make a terrific companion for a family living in a private home. To watch a video of Bella please visit: www.

To meet Bella in person, please see her at the Baldwin Park Animal Care Center, located at 4275 N. Elton St., Baldwin Park, CA 91706 (Phone: 626-430-2378 or 626-962-3577). THE NIGHT CIRCUS By Erin Morgenstern

Our next selection will be the perfect choice to put you in the romantic mood for the Valentine's Day weekend, one that should charm you even by its title and cover alone.

Erin Morgenstern's 'The Night Circus' is a lovely mixture of romance, adventure, mystery and magic which will not only enchant readers but completely immerse them into the world of 'The Night Circus', which should make this particular read one that you will not want to put down. Morgenstern crafts wonders with her words, each character smoothly introduced in the early chapters, but also the events that follow the characters will build upon each other and how each of them are connected in later chapters.

There are two major points that bring 'The Night Circus' together which contribute to the atmosphere to keep the reader engaged: brief interludes that tell the story from the perspective of the reader as if they are visiting the Night Circus themselves, and also that even though the events build throughout the story, the years in which events occur at certain times are inconsistent, and instead are spaced a few years apart (example: one event is in 1902 but the next crosses back to the late 1800s). These little skips in time are what help to keep the story and pacing alive; shorter chapters give way to longer ones, without being rushed and providing ample time to each character that is involved. Another fresh factor is the lovely vivid imagery that Erin Morgenstern uses to describe 'The Night Circus', and all that happen around it: the different cities and locations, the atmosphere of the circus itself, the detail of the clothing worn by the performers, even the description of the delicious circus confections. And even the plot of 'The Night Circus' is of course not just vital, but also provides the layout for the reader to better understand how the Night Circus works, the events that occur within and outside of it, but also the hint of mystery that all may not be well, and will slowly be revealed even with the allure of the circus's charm and magic to hide it.

Receiving praise from various authors and sources such as The Boston Globe, Bookreporter, People, The Washington Post, USA Today, and various critics, as well as a personal recommendation, 'The Night Circus' is the perfect selection for any "must-read" list, and one that you will not only not want to put down, but one that must be thoroughly enjoyed to the very end.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS

REVIEWS: Review By Sean Kayden

NIGHT BEDS

Winston Yellen is a 23 y/o singer-songwriter who performs with a band called Night Beds. The Nashville-based indie folk band is heavily influenced from artists such as Jeff Buckley and Ryan Adams to My Morning Jacket and mid-90s' alt-country bands like The Wallflowers and Counting Crows. Originally from Colorado, Yellen rented a house outside Nashville, formerly owned by Johnny Cash and June Carter Cash. There he spent ten months creating his debut LP, "Country Sleep." The record is beyond Yellen's sensitive years. It's incredibly warm and passionate. "Country Sleep" beautifully creates a portrait of nostalgia that can easily tear your heart apart as well as it may be able to mend it. Whatever the case may be the listener, you'll be swirling with emotions that are too powerful to dismiss. However, with its relatively short duration, Night Beds doesn't grasp for you too long. With a few uninspiring tunes in the mix like the closer, "TENN" and the painfully dreary, isolated vocal opener, "Faithful Heights," the record still has this uncanny knack for captivating you when you least expect it.

"Ramona" is the most "upbeat" song of the bunch. It's an ingratiating alt-country tune sans the twang-y vocals usually found in such songs of the genre. "22" reminds me of a Ryan Adams song from beginning to end. Actually at first listen, I thought it was Adams singing as a guest vocalist. It's heartbreakingly beautiful and echoes with strong passion and propulsion to keep moving forward. While the record has many influences, that doesn't mean it's derivative or middling. If anything, for those who appreciate alt-country jams and delicate folk-rock, you should feel right at home. Yellen's voice is quite exquisite and carries this languorous trait that puts you into a deeply reflective mood. 'Wanted You In August" showcases Yellen's falsetto. His range is not only impressive but shows hints of a vivid future for the young and talented vocalist.

"Lost Springs" is another sensitive song that exhibits the heartbreak in Yellen. This soulful tune repeatedly and authoritatively claims, "I don't want feel this," but the listener is destined to feel the pain, either the one of Yellen's or their very own calamity. In the end, this is by far no perfect album, but it's earnestly honest, satisfying, and tender. "Country Sleep" goes through several tonal shifts and with many influences brought into one full album, the results is a record that's both versatile and recognizable. Nevertheless, you'll have to be in the right mood for an album of this disposition. When you're ready, it will take you away. The place of destination is solely up to you.

Wherever that is, you'll find what you're looking for or maybe leave behind what you have no need for any longer.

A Word From Health Advantage..... HOW ARE YOU LIVING YOUR DASH?

If you saw this on a tombstone, John Doe, 1/25/1913 - 1/25/2013, what would you think? Well you would know that John Doe was born January 25th, 1913 and died January 25th, 2013. So he lived 100 years.

What you don't know is located in the dash between 1/25/1912 and 1/25/2012. What was the quality of his life? We can see by all measures he had quantity, 100 years.

How will your dash be in your life? When you are gone, what will they say about your dash or the time between when you were born and when you passed on?

There is a strong correlation between quality and quantity; the higher the quality of your dash, the greater the quantity of your dash in most cases.

Even if your dash was cut short by some tragic event, the quality of the dash can never be taken away.

What makes a quality dash? We can look toward the whole person paradigm which includes the physical, the mental, the emotional and the spiritual or to live, to learn, to love and to leave a legacy.

We live and we can improve the physical aspect through living the 100 Year Lifestyle which includes four main components:

- 1. Exercise, we have to move, stretch, strain and maintain a stable and balanced structure. 2. Nutrition, we have to fuel this body with food that fuels, empowers and heals.
- 3. Sleep, we must receive proper rest so that our body can repair and rejuvenate itself. 4. Fully functioning nervous system that operates without interference.

We learn by being a student the rest of our lives and filling our lives with books and thoughts and challenging ourselves to learn.

We love through our connections with others and nurturing those relationships

We leave a legacy by being involved in meaningful work that helps others and society so that when we are gone our work continues.

By addressing these four areas our dash can be of high quality. We are blessed with free will and we can make choices when stimulated. In that space between stimulus and response is a gap and in that gap is where your power to choose resides. Your choice determines the quality of your life and therefore your dash.

Your physical being is the easiest to affect so start by living the 100 Year Lifestyle in regards to your physical health. Start here and your dash will have the best chance of being long and of quality.

HEALTHY LIFESTYLES HOW CAN YOGA HELD LIVING YOGA

Yoga was not designed for only practice at the studio for an hour and then no yoga until your next class. It is about what we do everyday. When we look back at our lives, we see what we are conditioned to see. When we look forward, we are looking at what we anticipate seeing. We see everything through the narrow viewpoint of our experience. The yoga philosophy asks us to expand that view. But in order to do that, we need a clear and calm mind. The great sage Patanjali said that our minds are like mirrors.

When we look in the mirror and see a bunch of spots on the mirror, we think those spots are us. But if we wipe the mirror (of the mind) clear every day, then when we look, maybe we can see our true nature and not just through the culmination of past experience. If our house is dirty and we don't clean it, it gets dirtier and dirtier. Pretty soon, there is caked on dirt everywhere and we have to move out! So it makes sense to clean the mind everyday. Clear thinking helps us make good decisions.

Our physical yoga practice helps us clean the mirror and calm down. It helps us to see our own egos and how past experiences cloud our judgment. When we practice a pose in yoga, we must focus. First, we learn to focus on alignment and breath. Then we learn to shift the awareness inward. If we are trying too hard then we focus too much on what the body is doing. If we do not try enough, then the mind wanders off to what we are going to eat next or how someone else in the room is doing. So we use the body to help us clean, by focusing and going deeper in to the inner layers of prana, or energy.

This is the key to taming the mind. It's not easy. But we get there a little bit at a time. If we practice a little bit everyday, in-between trips to the studio, we can see a little more of our true selves all the time.

Happy Cleaning! Namasté, René

HOW MEDICARE COVERS DIABETES

Dear Savvy Senior: What does Medicare cover when it comes to diabetes? I'm 65 and have pre-diabetes, and would like to find out what all is covered. Fat Albert

Dear Albert:

Medicare actually offers a wide range of coverage to help beneficiaries who have diabetes, as well as those who are at risk of getting it – but they don't cover everything. Here's a breakdown of what Medicare covers when it comes to diabetes services and supplies along with some other tips that can help you save.

Doctor's services: If you're a Medicare beneficiary, Medicare Part B will pay 80 percent of the cost of all doctor's office visits that are related to diabetes. You are responsible for paying the remaining 20 percent after you've met your annual 2013 $147 Part B deductible.

Screenings: If you don't currently have diabetes, but you do have pre-diabetes or some other health conditions that put you at risk of getting it – such as high blood pressure, high cholesterol and triglycerides, are overweight, or have a family history of diabetes - Medicare will pay 100 percent of the cost of up to two diabetes screenings every year.

Education: If you have diabetes, Medicare covers 80 percent of the cost of self-management training (after you meet your Part B deductible) to teach you how to successfully manage your diabetes.

Supplies and medications: Eighty percent of the cost of glucose monitors, test strips and lancets (100 per month if you use insulin, or 33 per month if you don't), glucose control solutions and insulin (if you use an insulin pump) are covered by Medicare Part B, after you've met your deductible.

If, however, you inject insulin with a syringe, Medicare's Part D prescription drug benefit may help pay your insulin costs and the supplies needed to inject it – if you have a plan. Part D plans also cover most other diabetic medications too. You'll need to check your plan for details.

to adjust your diet so you can better manage your condition. You'll need a doctor's referral to get this service.

Blood sugar tests: Also known as a hemoglobin A1c test, this checks your average blood sugar level over the past three months to determine how well your diabetes is being controlled. Medicare covers this test when your doctor orders it.

Foot exams: Since foot problems are common among people with diabetes, Medicare also covers 80 percent of foot care every six months for diabetics with diabetes-related nerve damage, and therapeutic shoes for people with severe diabetic foot disease. Orthopedic shoes are not covered.

Eye exams: Because eye diseases like diabetic retinopathy, glaucoma and cataracts are more common in diabetics, 80 percent of dilated eye exams are covered each year, but eye exams for glasses are

For more information, call Medicare at 800-633-4227 and ask them to mail you a free copy of the "Medicare's Coverage of Diabetes Supplies & Services" booklet (publication 11022), or see medicare.gov/pubs/pdf/11022.pdf.

If you have a Medigap (Medicare supplemental insurance) policy, it may pay some of the costs that Medicare doesn't cover. Call your plan's benefits administrator for more information.

Or, if you're in a Medicare Advantage plan (like an HMO or PPO), your plan must give you at least the same diabetes coverage as original Medicare does, but it may have different rules. You'll need to check your policy for details.

Financial Assistance

If you're income is low, and you can't afford your Medicare out-of-pocket costs, you may be able to get help through Medicare Savings Programs. Call your local Medicaid office for eligibility information.

Nutrition: Medicare will pick up the entire tab for medical nutrition therapy, which teaches you how which helps Medicare Part D beneficiaries with which helps Medicare Part D beneficiaries with their medication expenses. SENIOR HAPPENINGS

The last column I wrote was: "I've Fallen and I can't Get Up"...

I think that was dated January 12th. What a difference a day makes, as they say! This is going to be brief (I hear a collective sigh of relief)...So much has happened since my hip replacement surgery, which, by the way was a piece of cake compared to what was in store for me. I had the surgery on the 16th of January and was home by the 21st! I was recovering very well and performing my rehab exercises with ease...how deceiving. The day after I got home I think I was feeling too smug and sure of myself when I had to get up to go to the bathroom and in doing so, I tried to get out of bed properly and instead, rushed the process and heard a loud POP! The sound I heard was my femur, next to the hip-replacement sight, breaking. Not good...

I felt compelled to write this today to clarify the reports of my falling and breaking my hip...that

KATIE TseThis and That KNOW YOUR VICTIM You've heard it before: some unsuspecting victim receives an authentic-looking

email from a "friend" or "relative" who's gotten themselves into a bad situation and needs to be bailed out by means of an electronic check or money order. Eventually, the victim realizes that their loved one (who was said to be holed up in Mexico or Uzbekistan) was never in real danger, and some con artist has made off with their money. It's an old story. It's conceivable that grandparents or other distant relatives who don't interact with "the victim" very often would fail to recognize uncharacteristic nuances that would otherwise set off red flags in their minds. Simply put; if you know the person who's supposedly sending you an email begging for money, you'll be able to tell between the real deal and a fake.

Similar situations happened twice to my mom (and everyone else on these two "victims" contact lists). The first was allegedly from one of our pastors. The subject line was something to the effect of "Stranded in London, Need Cash NOW!!" First of all, anyone acquainted with this man knows that soliciting money over the Internet is the last thing he'd do, short of posting a rap on You Tube. "Send me yo' dough, cuz I'm in Edin-burgh!" I don't think those scammers got a red cent from that scheme.

The second fraudulent email was also supposedly from another member of our church. The subject line itself was enough to confirm that the request wasn't real. It read, 'Mary, Hey!" Now, if this email was from my cousin in South Carolina, we wouldn't have batted an eye. She can turn "ya'll" into a five-syllable word. In stark contrast, this fellow is very formal. Added to that the fact that he is Dutch (see my earlier article referencing Dutch tendencies). These factors made the plea totally implausible.

I don't know many Dutch people, but I know this church member, another cousin (this one an American living in the Netherlands), and my scant online research. Compared to our relatives in the South, the Dutch are blunt. So blunt, some say that their "honesty" borders on rudeness. What we Americans consider politely indirect, the Dutch view as hypocritical.

Needless to say, the fraudsters posing as our Dutch church member were probably dismissed sooner than those who pretended to be our pastor stranded in London. The take away lessons are: 1) if you're going to victimize --know your victim, and 2) if you're pretending to be Dutch, research Dutch peculiarities. "Stuff Dutch People Like.com" is a fine blog that's sure to entertain, if not fill you in on how to pose as a Dutch person, at least online. With that, I wish you immunity from scammers and clarity for the next time you receive an urgent request for CASH!

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed

by Luther Tsinoglou Realtor®

DON'T FORGET THE VARIABLES

You're ready to make an offer! You've done your homework by reviewing a CMA (Comparative Market Analysis), local DOM (Days On Market), and even the LP:SP (List Price to Sales Price) ratio to formulate your offer based on the numbers, and you have confidence in the mathematics.

However, there may be "non-tangible" factors that don't fit neatly into the equation. Your representative will endeavor to discover variables like the seller's motivation and your possible

If the home you want has been listed much longer than the average DOM, the sellers may have become more realistic and more motivated to accept lower offers. Sometimes the sellers are motivated by the pressure of having purchased, or offered to purchase, another home. Then time becomes more important than money. No one wants to pay two mortgages or risk their ability to close on another purchase because they can't sell their first home.

Also try to find out if other buyers are making offers on your chosen property. If so, make your first offer your best offer, because sellers are unlikely to counter in this situation. But... never offer more than your representative believes the home will appraise for, or your financing will fail and you'll be back at Square One. Talk to your agent about the facts and the variables, and then make your offer with confidence.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"Why not? What's the big deal?"

- Martha MacCallum of Fox News on 102-year-old Desiline Victor's waiting in line three hours to vote

I love my DVR, but some events I have to watch live – lest someone give something away before I've had a chance to see it. I try shielding myself before watching a recorded game, but a friend will inevitably blurt out to me beforehand, "how 'bout those fourteen unanswered points in overtime?"

I approach candidate debates the same way – wanting to form my own opinion before hearing the consensus media declaration of winner / loser. It's the same with the State of the Union Address. I want to offer my own observations – rather than repeating the consensus re-cap, whether from Fox News or MSNBC. Accordingly, although I wasn't repeating the consensus re-cap, whether from Fox News or MSNBC. Accordingly, although I wasn't able to catch the speech live and instead had to watch it off my DVR, I jotted down the following notes prior to exposing myself to post-address commentary:

My first impression was there was little surprising in content, but a renewed resolve in emphasis and delivery. President Obama's speech could've begun, "We hold these truths to be self-evident." It consisted of consensus views of Americans, which made the discomfort of Republicans in the chamber- especially Speaker John Boehner (R-OH), all the more apparent.

In early remarks, the president identified "The true engine of America's economic growth – a rising, thriving middle class", and reminded that constituents "expect us to put the nation's interest before party", Republicans eventually rose to join the ovation, but slowly – as if unsure whether they were supposed to agree or not.

Politicians avoid arguing for defense cuts, aware it translates as undermining our military. Republicans never worried about the "sequester" calling for deep cuts in both social programs and military spending, confident the military cuts would never happen. President Obama agreed it was a bad idea, but for the notion of preserving defense spending by cutting only Social Security, Medicare, education, etc., "That idea is even worse." Republicans seemed nervous, realizing Americans agree with the president. Speaker Boehner seemed especially glum when the president declared, "By the end of next year our war in Afghanistan will be over."

Republicans remained dour as the president himself advocated cuts, as in: "Our medical bills shouldn't be based on the number of tests ordered or days spent in the hospital. They should be based on the quality of care our seniors receive". These weren't the right kind of cuts, as they'd be absorbed by the hospital, insurance and pharmaceutical industries – not by beneficiaries.

"Our government shouldn't make promises we cannot keep. But we must keep the promises we've already made . . . The greatest nation on earth cannot keep conducting its business by drifting from one manufactured crisis to the next . . . The American people have worked too hard, for too long, rebuilding from one crisis to see their elected officials cause another . . . Deficit reduction alone is not an economic plan".

This was another bummer. Republicans had planned on a repeat of the hold-my-breath-until-I-turn-blue refusal to adjust the debt ceiling allowing our nation to pay its bills. President Obama exposed this "strategy" as a childish tantrum – albeit one with potentially disastrous consequences.

Of the "self-evident" truths the president listed, the ones Republicans seemed most troubled by were those concerning science. "For the sake of our children and our future, we must do more to combat climate change . . . we can choose to believe in the overwhelming judgment of science, and act before it is too late . . . If congress won't act soon to protect future generations, I will".

Disconcerting as well was the president's taking up the cause of business: "What businesses need most – modern ports to move our goods, modern pipelines to withstand a storm, modern schools worthy of our children . . . ". President Obama explained businesses' need of an educated, capable workforce – and how today a student graduates from high school in Germany with the equivalence of a two-year technical degree from an American community college.

Republicans become apprehensive whenever discussion of "family values" moves beyond evocations of Ward and June Cleaver, and into real-world measures to save and protect real-world families. The president brought up the Violence Against Women Act and the Paycheck Protection Act. For the military he advocated "Equal benefits for their families – gay and straight."

This was bad enough for Speaker Boehner. It only made things worse, for him and fellow party-members, when the president added, "Let's declare that in the wealthiest nation on earth, no one who works full time should have to live in poverty".

President Obama chose not to emphasize his, or the American people's, support of background checks for firearms purchases, making it harder to sell guns to criminals, and backing "police chiefs who want to get weapons of war off our streets". Instead, he repeatedly stressed an even less-controversial notion: "Each of these proposals deserves a vote in Congress."

Although the president didn't mention it, I'm sure he considered the irony of Republicans blustering in defense of the "right" of a charged domestic abuser to pick up an AR-15 no-questions-asked at a local gun show, while being dismissive of any "right" to vote – a right Americans treasure much more, as exemplified by the experience of 102-year-old Desiline Victor, there in attendance being acknowledged by her president.

The nervousness and discomfort among Republicans is understandable, as they realize that, beyond the halls of Congress, the president's speech was not one of controversy, but of consensus. They're already looking ahead to what the State of the Union might be a year from now, and the effect on next year's mid-term elections. Those elections are still twenty months away, but I already know I won't be setting my DVR. When those returns come in, I'll be watching live – and watching to make sure Desiline Victor doesn't have to wait as long to vote.

THE STATE OF THE UNION WAS CLARIFYING

GREG Welborn

State of the Unions are meant to be grand in their scope, used by the best of leaders to speak about the state of the nation and the direction in which a president wants to lead. But to truly achieve the level of significance, relevance and value that they are meant to attain, Presidents have to base their assessments and aspirations in reality, not pie crust, political promises. President Obama's State of The Union address this week missed its target. It was not grand, it was not relevant, and it offered little of value, save for helping to clarify the important decision which still lies ahead of Last November, the American electorate essentially punted on the issue of where our country needs to head. They split governance in almost exactly the same manner as had existed before the election. The President won his re-election, but so did the House Republican majority. The President and the Congress stand on opposite sides of the same great issue – the size and scope of the federal government – and neither side obtained the mandate to change the status quo or really deal with the issue.

Into this comes the President on Tuesday night. He could easily have taken the opportunity to level with Americans as to the severity of our fiscal problem and to forge a true bipartisan approach to fix this problem. He didn't do that. He used the occasion to ramp up the campaign for the next elections, counting on our naiveté and fuzzy recollections of the past.

When the President claims he really understands that "the American people don't expect government to solve every problem", he hopes that we don't remember what has been said and done in his past and don't understand what he proceeded to promise in his State of the Union address. This is the same president who witheringly criticized Mitt Romney for tax evasive investments in the Cayman Islands, but then nominated Jack Lew as Secretary of the Treasury, ignoring the fact that Mr. Lew oversaw several Cayman Island funds investments while he worked for Citigroup. This is the same president who claims that his Cabinet nominations deserve an up-or-down vote in the Senate, but who also worked against giving President Bush's nominees up-or-down votes. This is the same president who offered House Republicans a compromise on tax rates during the fiscal cliff negotiations, withdrew the compromise when Republicans accepted it, and then proceeded to blame Republicans for their intransigence.

Un-phased by any of this, President Obama told us that the government isn't going to try to solve every problem, while then proceeding to tell us that he wants the federal government to: Finance pre-school for "every child in America" even though a recent government study shows the benefit of such programs wears off by third grade.

Create a new Energy Security Trust fund even though we haven't yet digested the astounding losses from the government's last efforts to subsidize wind and solar (remember solyndra??)

Raise the minimum wage during a recession when every study (from either the right or the left) has shown that increases in the minimum wage increase unemployment, especially among minorities.

Increase spending on a "Fix-It-First" plan to employ the millions of unemployed in this country who were supposed to be employed by the last government infrastructure spending program.

who were supposed to be employed by the last government infrastructure spending program. Pass a Cap-And-Trade tax plan to emulate China which is "going all in on clean energy" when the truth is that China has now become the world's largest polluter and doesn't have a plan to cap any energy source.

Push forward on Obamacare because it has already slowed the growth in healthcare costs when in fact premiums spiked after its passage and a government study shows it will increase medical costs by another 7% when fully implemented.

Nothing new or substantive here. But clarity and distinction was provided by Senator Marco Rubio's Republican response to the President. As he pointed out, President Obama believes that "the economic downturn happened because the government didn't tax enough, spend enough and control enough", and that the President's solution is therefore to "tax more, borrow more and spend more". On the impact that a greater government presence would have in our lives, Rubio told us "more government isn't going to help [us] out. It's going to hold [us] back." It isn't going to "create more opportunities. It's going to limit them." "More government isn't going to inspire new ideas and new businesses... it's going to create uncertainty" and result in complicated rules and

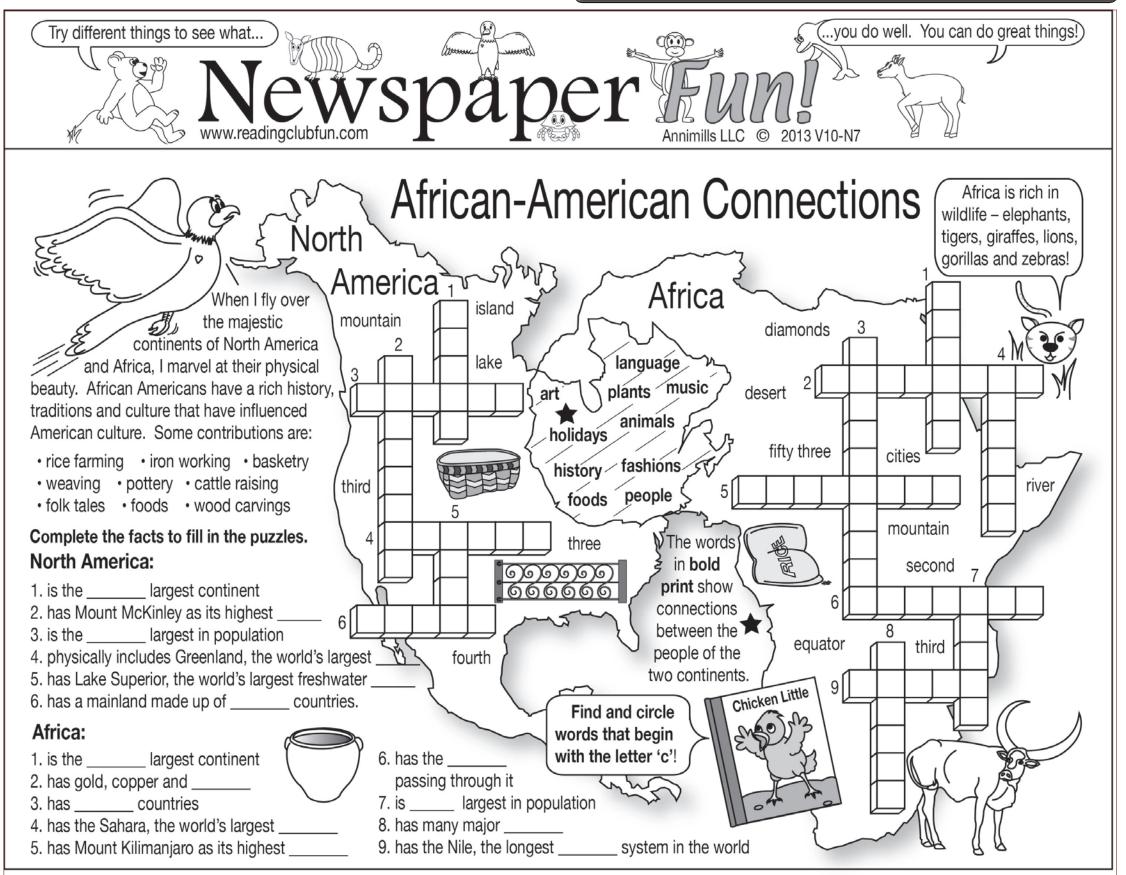

Senator Rubio's conclusion put succinctly into focus the choice Americans need to make – the very unfinished business of the 2012 elections. He said, "the tax increase and the deficit spending [President Obama] proposes will hurt middle class families. It will cost them their raises. It will cost them their benefits. It may even cost some their jobs. And it will hurt seniors because it does nothing to save Medicare and Social Security."

regulations which small businesses will be unable to follow.

All in all, the speeches of February 12th were of great value to the nation in defining, clarifying and contrasting the two visions for this country. America is a great and powerful nation, and we have an economy that can withstand much. But there is a limit to what even the strongest of men, or nations, can bear before wilting under the weight. President Obama did not offer us a grand plan for our country; he re-served the same tired policies that have us moribund, and he missed an opportunity to seek bipartisan solutions. It was left to Senator Rubio to elevate the nation with a vision and strategy to reclaim what has been lost. All in all, not bad for a night's work; not bad for the junior Senator from Florida.

IS AMERICA UNSTOPPABLY CAREENING TOWARDS HATE AND MINUTIA-FILLED POLI-TICS AS IT MOVES FURTHER INTO THE 21ST CENTURY?

It certainly seems that way. You'd think that, with all the huge issues facing the country, our politics and media coverage would be overwhelmed in a scramble to present substantive stories, serious argument-crammed think pieces, and intelligent TV coverage and policy discussions that could significantly advance a crucial national debate.

But in today's political culture, the way to advance your new or even mainstream media career, or soil the image of another party, partisan or writer, is to be outrageous, over the top, searing, sarcastic or indignant. Or you create an issue by seizing on something small, then blow it up like a political blimp until it becomes a narrative with "legs" that others will jump on, even if it's a non or fabricated issue. The name of the game is getting attention. Who cares how?

All of this has now become so ingrained in our political culture that it brings to mind the title of a Rodgers and Hart song from the 1937 musical "Babes in Arms," called "Johnny One Note." Its opening words: "Johnny could only sing one note and the note he sings was this: Ah!'

Our politics increasingly seems to be mired in two sour notes: the predominance of hate and anger as a political motivational and discussion tool, and the seizing of small events or issues which are then dissected, and peppered with generous dashes of paranoia and hatred. Speculation is packaged as fact or probability when they are often neither. The synthetic event or issue then takes on a life of its own as others want to cover what others have covered -- because others are covering it. Our politics is therefore increasingly easy to manipulate, and our media oftentimes not gatekeepers but partisan rant and negative image-dissemination

A telling moment in our politics came when Bay Buchanan, conservative columnist Pat Buchanan's assertive, articulate and often-vitriolic sister, and a key media spokesperson for Mitt Romney during the GOP's failed presidential campaign, proclaimed that she's fed up with politics -- and is going into real estate. Buchanan was the quintessential TV partisan talking head when she was on the tube; always in a race against time to load answers with as many talking points as humanly possible, and present them with angry, quotable zingers aimed at Democrats and

The Washington Post notes that after Romney's loss she went for her real estate license. She then said something to the Washington Examiner explaining why she quit being a TV partisan talking head that speaks volumes about our political culture: "I can't just live my life going on TV and being angry all the time.

Who said politics has to always be in an angry tone? But TV in particular needs conflict and emotion. How many times have you seen two partisans angrily going at it on a show, interrupting each other and screaming, then the host says with a smug look: "We'll have to have you back!!"

Meanwhile, a prime example of seizing on minutia and inflating it into a fake controversy until the attention deficit media jumps on it was best seen when Barack Obama mentioned he does skeet shooting. He must be lying, the partisan chorus howled. Then the mainstream media covered it. So Obama released a photo showing him skeet shooting. Partisan bloggers then dissected and questioned the photo. Is the smoke real? Is that really Obama? When was it taken? No way he could wear several changes of clothes in one day. Some conservatives call it -- I'm not kidding, now -- "Skeetgate."

Actually, it's "Hackgate" for those seriously investigating it, or for those wasting a Presidential press briefing demanding more answers on this "issue." Many blame Obama for mentioning skeet shooting: hey, he said something, didn't he, so didn't he expect to be CHALLENGED?

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE

IF THE POPE CAN RETIRE, WHY CAN'T I? Were you shocked this morning when you turned on the TV and heard the news? The Pope is retiring—he doesn't want to do it anymore. Whoever heard of such a thing? The last time a pope retired was 719 years ago. I just googled Pope Celestine V and learned that he retired at the age of 80, choosing a life of quiet seclusion over the continual responsibilities of the Papacy. It's hard to know if this Pope later regretted his choice, as it seems he was imprisoned by his successor who feared him as a rival for power. This Pope died about eighteen months after he relinquished his position and was later canonized. I do not think that either imprisonment or canonization will describe the future of Pope Benedict; but time will tell.

What about Hilary Clinton, our recently retired Secretary of State? What does she have on her mind? Many pundits predict that Hilary will be the Democratic Candidate for President in 2016. These soothsayers foretell that Hilary and her forces will use the time wisely and be ready for the big fight in four years. After all, that great model of political success, Richard Nixon, used the time away from office to secure election in 1968 after eight years of Democratic domination. Of course, the fact that much of the population was frightened by huge demonstrations in the street and the most popular Democratic Candidate, Bobby Kennedy, had been assassinated undoubtedly contributed to the Nixon victory - even then it was very close. Whatever happened to Hubert Humphrey—has anyone heard a thing?

Of course that isn't my point. What I want to talk about is my own situation. Why don't I retire? Why am I writing this particular article? As I hope some of you out there noticed that my usual article was not in the paper last week. Did you care - did you miss me? Actually a couple of people mentioned to me that they noticed that my column was not in its usual place on the Opinion Page, where it has appeared every week for over five years. In fact - there was no Opinion Page at all. As son as I noticed the omission I e-mailed Big Chief Susan and received a reply saying printer difficulties required the omission of four pages. I saw her later on Saturday evening at an event connected to the new Sierra Madre Radio Station. Without apology she said that I should consider the one week omission as my chance for a vacation and that I should not bother to submit a new article for this week as last week's submission would be sufficient.

Alas; I was very satisfied with last week's submission but it was very topical. The article was entitled POWER FAILURE, and in my usual clever way it connected the power failure at the Super Bowl with power failures that are occurring throughout the rest of the world. I wrote about the Arab Spring as an exercise of power that somehow has not resulted in the change that celebrating populations have expected. Clearly, this article had some relevance right after the Super Bowl; but now two weeks later, who can remember anything about it?

No, that's not the point. The real truth is that I absolutely love the opportunity to write about events right after they happen and to feel assured that magically these articles will appear in the paper just a few days later. I admit that for reasons that are not clear to me I would not write the articles if I did not think they would be published. I do not think this is simply vanity. I believe that the publication of the articles allow me to reach out into the world and have some effect. What the effect is I cannot fully describe but I feel, (feel rather than believe) that my submitting articles which are as truthful and as real as I can make them contributes to making the world a better place. Consequently, I believe that my writing the articles and your reading them is a gift for both of us. If the articles do not appear then I believe that we will both be deprived of a gift this Valentine's Day and for who knows how long.

We now return to the subject of retirement. I don't want to stop writing and I don't want to stop lawyering. I would love to put together a radio program that presented the lives of our hard-working but low-income populations. Many waitresses are single mothers working three jobs and totally focused on bringing better futures to their children. I would like to interview recent immigrants, regardless of their legality or illegality, and present their dreams and hopes and regrets, too, to a public audience. I don't know if I will get that opportunity and I really don't know if this article will even be published. Still, I know there is stuff I want to do and the last thing I want to do is to stop trying.

Happy Belated Valentine's Day to the retiring Pope and Secretary of State and to the anything-but-retiring Susan; I hope you have made the decisions that are right for you!

FOR PRESIDENTS DAY — GEORGE WASHINGTON MAKEOVER

By Tom Purcell

"What do you mean America's youth don't know who George . Washington was?' "Dude?

"He was our first president, our best president and one of the primary reasons the experiment called América was able to work. But of course they don't teach you that in school anymore."

"Scholars and historians deemed Washington to be our greatest president in a Wall Street Journal survey. But another survey shows that Washington's coverage in history textbooks has declined to less than 10 percent of what it was in the early 1960's.' "Dude?"

"Sure, to your generation Washington was just a boring old guy. He isn't as captivating as the pop singers, movie stars and professional athletes you worship. That's why the people at Mt. Vernon, Washington's estate, had to raise $110 million dollars to reshape Washington's image.

"The Mount Vernon people constructed a new orientation center, education center and museum right on the grounds of Mt. Vernon. These new facilities, which opened in October, 2006, feature the story of a younger, studlier George Washington."

"The presentations are designed to appeal to short-attention-span kids like you who get most of their information from MTV. A 15-minute film uses action-packed techniques to feature Washington's significant accomplishments.

'Duuuuude?' 'No, the film and multimedia presentations do not feature Washington blowing up terrorists, nor does Arnold Schwarzenegger costar. But they do tell the story of a remarkable man."

"Did you know that Washington was born into a modestly well-to-do family? What little education he got was given to him by his father and stepbrother. He was a farmer and surveyor and through some inheritance, shrewd business dealings and hard work, he grew his fortune.'

'From early on he was a natural leader. He had an imposing presence, standing nearly 6'3" at a time when the average man was about 5'8". And he was invincible. During one battle in the French and Indian war, four bullets ripped his coat and two horses were shot from under him, yet he was unscathed."

"He represented the rebellious American spirit, you see, and he led the charge to break away from the restrictions and regulations of the British. In 1775, he took command of our motley crew of an army and led it in a war that lasted six grueling years.'

"And, dude, he didn't have much chance of winning against the British. Nonetheless, he used American ingenuity to completely outwit them. He retreated when they expected him to fight, he fought when they expected him to retreat. Many historians believe that no other man could have won this war. Without Washington, America's history would have been completely different."

Dude?" "After he beat the British, he was so popular he could have become a king. Instead, he used his immense power to help establish our Constitution, which grants power to us little folks. Then he reluctantly became our first president. He wanted nothing to do with the job, but knew our fledgling government needed his leadership to survive."

"Dude?" 'After eight long years as president, Washington finally returned to his beloved Mt. Vernon to farm and enjoy life. But he lived only three years in retirement before dying at the young age of 67."

The point is, dude, that one man can make a remarkable difference in the world. Washington was truly a hero -- a man who lived his life by simple virtues and a sense of duty. Without Washington, the experiment we call America might not have worked.' 'Dude?"

"That is why the people at Mt. Vernon have gone to so much trouble to make sure we don't forget Washington's incredible story. I urge you to visit Mt. Vernon soon and learn all you can about this remarkable man. Now do you have any questions?" "Dude?"

"Oh, for goodness sakes. Yes, it's true that Washington grew hemp, also known as marijuana. But he used it to make rope and clothing. He didn't smoke it![†] "Duuuuude!"

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

TRUE LOVE TRUMPS A ROMANTIC FLING EVERYTIME

February is the month we celebrate romance. Actually, the only romantic things about me are my "love handles," which is why I have spent so much energy developing them over the years. You think somebody would appreciate

For some people, romance is an easy, if not natural thing. Others, like me, find it complicated and elusive. It is not that men are less romantic than women are; they just have different ideas of romance.

For most women, romance is flowers and candy in heart shaped boxes.

For men it is a Big Mac with fries and a soda ... and SUPER SIZE it, please.

Why are women so complicated and men so simple? I do not think that came out the way I meant it.

If it were not for women, romance would have died a long time ago. There is nothing quite like springtime with a hint of romance in the air with a delicate dash of chivalry.

People from Hollywood try to define romance for us, but their idea of romance is raw sex and lurid lust. Hollywooders would not know romance if it nibbled on their ears. Romance is not a fling in the spring, but a lifelong relationship, experiencing all the ups and downs of life -- together -- and no growing apart!

There is no picture quite as refreshing as a couple still together after all those years of turmoil and temerity. The easiest thing in all the world is to fall in love for a few years and then, when it gets difficult, bale out. What kind of thing is that?

Ah, but to see a couple married for 50 years or more; now that is the epitome of real romance.

I'll have you know that romance has not been a stranger at the parsonage. I met my wife (actually, she wasn't my wife then) when I went away to Bible college in

At the time, I was functionally romance challenged. Before I left home for college, I prayed for a wife. I had the good sense to know that a minister needs a good wife to support him in the ministry.

I prayed something like this, "Father, I need a good wife and I don't know how to go about it. Let the first single girl I meet at Bible college be the wife of Your choosing.'

Now, I know this is a crazy and dangerous prayer to make. Some would take the high road of romance, but I took the low road of prayer. I may have been a bit desperate, but nobody could doubt my earnestness. I also figured that prayer was a lot cheaper than dating. After all, I am a Pennsylvania Dutchman.

Nevertheless, I prayed for a wife.

The day of my arrival on campus came and found me a bit anxious. I remembered my prayer and wondered just how God would answer it.

My parents took me to the college, which was some 500 miles from home; good planning on my part the men's dorm, I figured I was safe. I planned to avoid all contact with the opposite sex as long as possible.

But just as we pulled into the men's dorm parking lot, a young woman exited from the men's dorm. Remembering my prayer, I immediately amended it. "God,

Have you ever noticed that God has a marvelous sense of humor?

this doesn't count. I've not stepped out of the car yet.'

The young woman emerging from the men's dorm defied description. Do you remember when women rolled their hair up in big rollers? Well, this young woman had rolled her hair up in tomato cans! Nothing prepared me for such a sight. She actually looked like some space alien.

do not know what she was wearing or even what she looked like. All I could see were those tomato cans on her head. At the time, I did not know much about romance, but I knew this was not it.

The next few days I did everything to avoid the women's dorm for fear I would run into her. Whenever I did see her, I crossed to the other side of the street. But the more I tried to avoid her, the more I ran into her. Prayer makes strange partners.

Thinking I was making progress in my plan of avoidance, the inevitable happened.

One week after arrival, my roommate invited me to come along with him and his girlfriend to a restaurant. Being the neurotic naive that I am, I said, "Sure, I'd love to come along." After all, I had nothing else to do and it seemed like some fun.

When my roommate went to the women's dorm to pick up his girlfriend, who do you suppose was standing with his girlfriend waiting?

That's right. The young woman with the tin cans on

Would you believe it? The young woman with the tin cans turned out to be the sister of my roommate.

It was a whirlwind romance. I met her in September and in February she asked me to marry her. In August of that year, I found myself at a church altar mumbling, "do."

The Bible makes this promise: "Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favour of the LORD" (Proverbs 18:22 KJV).

A good wife is the find of a lifetime, as long as God is in charge of the search.

WHAT HAPPENED TO COMMERCIAL-FREE CABLE TV?

when looking at the monthly cost, you are not alone. I seem to recall that "commercial-free" programming was one of the main reasons it made sense to pay for cable. After all, it seemed to make perfect sense for subscribers to pay some type of fee, especially since the cable networks wouldn't be earning any money for airing commercials from corporate America. That didn't last long.

We should have known that something was amiss when "pay-per-view" reared its head to latch on to popular sports events that had previously been available on the free airwaves to be enjoyed by anyone who had a working television. It was one of the first indications of our collective cultural addiction to watching others act out our hopes, dreams, fantasies and fears. Not only had the cable companies convinced us to accept "pay-perview" as the status quo for certain programming, but they also eventually groomed subscribers to without demanding any corresponding decrease in our cable bills.

Cable subscribers are paying hefty monthly fees to watch stations that have up to 40% of the airtime dominated by some form of paid advertising. Of course we don't have to be bothered with the disruptive stream of commercials if we choose to pay to watch a movie of some other special broadcast. Still, we'll be subjected to the select group of advertisers who pay for advertising and product placement to reach our target audience for those particular broadcasts.

These deep-pocket-diving-for-profit maneuvers the internet and DVD's.

If you've looked at your cable bill lately and by cable providers are very frustrating. Unless experienced a slight rise in blood pressure we choose to eliminate television from our lives, we are currently left with few alternatives. The multinational corporate telecommunications providers have done an outstanding job of growing their profits and shareholder value on the backs of staggering fees paid by subscribers who just want to watch TV.

Providers have increasing their efficiencies with investments in new technology and equipment that requires fewer staff to maintain. Some have also reduced expenses by outsourcing online and call-in customer service functions to low-cost, offshore operations. So let's look at this picture – they lower costs, but the price to subscribers has continued to climb? It clear there is no thought of passing any cost reductions along to subscribers. What about those great specials they advertise? Read the fine print and calculate the total amount we'll need to fork over after the time period for the special price has run its course. Also pay attention to the early cancellation fee, which sit through an increasing barrage of commercials, is nothing more than a penalty for refusing to continue the insanity of paying an outrageous monthly fee.

> We accept the fact that the good ole days of free television are history, but we don't have to accept the blatant pocket gouging by the cable industry. It's time to take a lesson from the providers and do a better job of reducing our cable expenses by finding the most affordable option. A growing number of friends who have unplugged from cable completely seem to be doing just fine. They can still enjoy broadcasts of major sporting events at a sports bar or viewing parties of friends and family, and for everything else – well there's

If you have a Facebook page for your business, you can now target distinct groups of people who like your page... by gender, relationship status, educational status, age, location and

For example, if you have an English and Spanish speaking audience, you could post in Spanish and set the target for just those who speak Spanish.

You could target by location. We recently helped The Shabby Dog (a local Sierra Madre business) build more likes on their Facebook page. They are very "likeable" and people from all over the United States gave them the thumbs up. They have two audiences they need to talk to, a national audience and a local audience. They have a variety of dog products they can market across the United States. They also have services like grooming, doggy day care and their new Shabby Cab that serve locals.

Page post targeting will allow them to promote their local services and events to a local audience. Page post targeting can be a powerful marketing tool especially if you have a large, diverse audience.

You can start to speak the language of your different types of fans. Maybe you target by age and talk to your younger fans in OMGs and LMAOs.

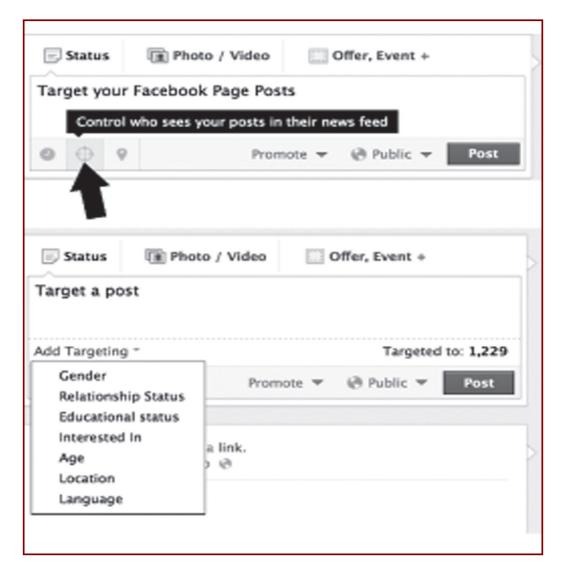

To get started, you have to go through a few hoops in order to add the audience selector to your page's publisher. Here is what you need to do once you are on your Facebook business page: Select "Edit Page" in your Admin Panel

- Choose "Update Info"
- Select "Manage Permissions" in left column
- Look for "Post privacy gating" and check the box next to "Allow me to control the privacy of new posts I make on my Page.

Save Changes

language.

After you have added the audience selector, it will add a little target image into your publisher. As you post you have the option to select your audience.

Can one remove all traces of one's self from the Internet? It seems that once something has found its way online, it's pretty much there forever. This seems to be the hard lesson that many are finding out through social media gaffes that enable personal messages and photos finding their way to places where the original owners never intended them to be.

This is the side effect of our living in an increasingly connected world where our digital identities are replicated and spread over thousands of online services and tens of thousands of servers located all over the world. For the most part this isn't too bad of a thing, as our favorite sites keep track of our preferences but, in truth, the high price we pay is none other than our surrendered privacy and

Once our personal data is the hands of these online companies, they may then use our data as they see fit. Some of the more reputable companies often use our preferences to target us with directed advertising, but some of the less scrupulous companies often sell our details to the highest bidders. When this consumer behavior is viewed in the short term, it might not seem like that big of a deal since most people are at least somewhat careful with the information that they let out about themselves. But when viewed over a longer period of time, such as 10 years or so, who can really remember all the online sites and services one may have joined? Do you remember what you posted on a music forum in 2004? Or which services you tried for free email before Gmail?

We're only human, so it's only natural that we sometimes forget these services as we move on to newer and better ones. The problem is that these services don't forget us. Tracking down these no longer wanted services can sometimes be tricky and tedious. Online Reputation Management services offer an array of products that claim to be able to give one a proverbial "digital clean slate" for a pretty penny. Sometimes one finds oneself in a case of "the-horse-having-already-left-the-barn" and what's done can't possible be changed.

What one can do going forward is take certain steps to protect one's digital footprint going forward. Users are warned to be aware of the elements that make up your digital identity (PIN's, IP Addresses, email addresses, names, avatars, photos, blog entries, etc) and to note that the concept of "managing one's digital identity" means monitoring the use of these elements.

When creating a user profile for a new site, always use an alias and do not post any personal information about yourself on the internet. Keep in mind that once an element of your digital identity has been posted on the internet you effectively lose control of that data.
