And that is true when considering the quality of life in many places. There are an abundance of activities for the young and old, and especially families that provide wholesome, free activities for both the young and old. One such event was the 2013 Huck Finn Fishing Derby that took place last week. Young fisherman (and girls) camped out at the city's settling

The City recognizes there are a number of second units in the community built without permits; these can be counted towards meeting the Statemandated regional housing needs allocation (the state requires the City have a certain number of affordable housing unit available to residents). Second Unit Amnesty Program offers incentives to property owners registering existing, non-permitted second units demonstrating safe and habitable conditions. Incentives for the property owner include a full waiver of the building application fee, a 50% break on building permit and planning fees if necessary, and relaxation of zoning standards.

More than 90 artists will be displaying and selling their fine arts throughout the weekend. Mediums include oil painting, jewelry, water colors, glass, wood, metal, photography, pottery, ceramics, mixed media, and weaving. The Art Fair will be the place to be to find that perfect Mother's Day, graduation, or wedding gift and to find pieces that you will be proud to wear or to display in your home.

Live music will be featured throughout the weekend in the band shell and on the south lawn. Guests will enjoy an eclectic selection of music ranging from country jazz to Latin to classical flute and guitar. A food court will offer a variety of food and drinks provided by local non-profit groups as well as food vendors. And, of course, the Friends of the Library will have a booth selling their famous sweet breads and quick breads. For the children, the Creative Arts Group has planned a Chinese kite making activity on Saturday and Sunday from 10am-4pm.

This year we will again have a silent auction. So far, forty of the artists who are displaying and selling their creations at this year's fair have donated lovely, one-of-a-kind pieces for the auction which means that you'll have a chance to bid on some really beautiful artwork.

So come early and stay all day. Browse through the wonderful displays of artwork, sit on the lawn and listen to music, have a little lunch, check on your silent auction bids, and then go back and purchase those lovely pieces of art that have been calling your name ever since you spotted them. Most importantly, all overcame tremendous obstacles in their careers, proving themselves to be wonderful role models for others who aspire to their success. I thank each of this year's 16 Women of Distinction for their contributions, and urge them to continue being a shining beacon of inspiration for women and girls in our district and around the world."

Enid Joffe was recognized for her efforts as a Community Leader in Clean Energy.

According to Congresswoman Chu, "Enid Joffe would tell you that her claim to fame is that she hired former Labor Secretary Hilda Solis for her first job out of college. At the time, Ms. Joffe was working at United Way and she hired Hilda Solis to help with outreach to the Hispanic community. But of course, Ms. Joffe's accomplishments extend far beyond hiring the former Labor

Secretary.

Ms. Joffe found her passion when she started working on charging technology for electric cars almost two decades ago. In 1999, Ms. Joffe co-founded her company Clean Fuel Connection to provide infrastructure sales, installation, service and consulting support for electric and consulting support for electric and natural gas vehicles. In 2002, the industry experienced a severe downturn. But Ms. Joffe is not the type to call it quits when things get rough. The determined Ms. Joffe and her company persevered. And in just 14 short years after the company's founding, Ms. Joffe's company has an annual revenue of over

$4 million. Before Ms. Joffe started her company, she expanded her knowledge of the clean energy industry by working as the manager of charg-ing infrastructure for Edison EV where she worked with local, state, and federal governments on policy issues related to electric vehicles. In this role, she also managed activities to obtain incentives for electric vehicle infrastructure and coordinated sales of public charging stations to government and public sector organizations.

Besides her pioneering work in the clean energy industry, Ms. Joffe was also active in her community. She was first elected to the Sierra Madre City Council in April of 2004, and served as mayor from 2007 to 2008. In the non-profit sector, Ms. Joffe served on the board of West San Gabriel Valley YMCA from 1990 to 1993 and served as the president of the Rosemead Kiwanis Club from 1992 to 1993."

Ms. Joffe received her bachelor's degree in sociology from Barnard College. In addition, Ms. Joffe also received a master's in sociology and an MBA from UCLA.

Monrovia Mayor Mary Ann Lutz

Mayor Mary Ann Lutz is a giver when it comes to donating to community programs. She first became a member of the Monrovia City Council in 2003 and was elected mayor in 2009. During her tenure, she has helped to move key projects forward, including helping Monrovia to navigate through the uncharted terrain of having no redevelopment agency and pushing forward the Gold Line Extension. Today, construction of the Gold Line is underway and is slated to be completed in 2015. Under her watch, community programs such as Monrovia Area Partnership – a program that empowers residents to proactively improve their neighborhoods – have flourished.

More recently, Mayor's Luntz's biggest accomplishments have been in the area of environmental sustainability. Under her leadership, the Resource Management Plan was approved, paving the way for the preservation and responsible pubic access to hundreds of acres in the Angeles National Forest. Mayor Luntz has also been instrumental in the creation of the Monrovia Accords – a list of 21 action items that make water conservation, recycling, and sensitivity to the en vironment leading priorities of her administration.

Mayor Luntz's most notable accomplishment is the successful effort to create the Los Angeles Storm Water Partnership. This partnership consists of a coalition of eight cities in Los Angeles County that continues to seek collaborative opportunities with other municipalities. In fact, this partnership has expanded in 2011 to form the LA Permit Group - a body that consists of 62 voting agencies, all working hard to promote water quality and conservation.

Despite all of her accomplishments, Mayor Lutz is too humble to take credit alone. In her recent State of the City address, she told the crowd of nearly 200 people that, "Nothing great happens in our City by the efforts of one person alone. It is a collaboration; a partnership."

Garden lovers be prepared for a day of enchantment as the Creative arts Group presents ART OF THE GARDEN a garden tour on April 21, 2013 that will be a day to remember for all who participate and experience four truly magnificent gardens.

Nature retreat

Although this home is situated in the heart of Pasadena, it has the feel of a secluded getaway complete with a natural spring and a multitude of migratory birds. Designed by Doug Ewing, of Ewing Architects, this home with its light and airy Progressive Arts and Crafts style, fully embraces its natural surroundings.

English Arts and Crafts Styled Estate

Craft estate built by Henry Huntington's grandson, Edwards Huntington Metcalf, his young bride in 1934 was purchased by the current owners who began a much needed restoration in 1992. Roses were a natural selection for a garden with such English roots, and this landscape boasts an astonishing selection with 170 hybrid Teas, climbers, miniature and tree roses in the front garden alone.

An English Arts and Strolling past the "Birdhouse Garden" on the way to the rear yard, guests are treated to a beautiful fountain beneath Bay Laurel and Cassia trees. Continuing on, an exquisite view of expansive lawn, rare varieties of plants, pool, spa, pavilion, and outdoor Barbeque areas await. Near the back porch are a variety of herbs and vegetables with easy access to the kitchen and the custom-designed mini green house, tool shed and potting bench.

Spanish Revival Estate

This 1920s Spanish Revival boasts lovely covered terraces, patios, fountains and a charming casita designed by Architect Ron Ettinger. When the present owners purchased the property, the rear yard was a steep hillside with little useable space. Landscape designer, Rick Button, solved the problem by calling for a retaining wall with deep pylons to add much needed square footage to the property. Several large Fan Palm trees were craned onto the estate. Dimmick stone, fabricated on site, is used throughout. Citrus trees and herbs abound in the outdoor kitchen garden along with Mutabilis and Joseph's Coat climbing roses. Beautiful varieties of geraniums can be found throughout the estate in pots and in the ground.

Italianate Estate

Purchased by the current owners in 2007, the grounds of this unique home believed to be designed by Silvanus Marston have gone through a major transformation to meet the needs of the active family who lives here. The driveway and garage access was moved from the side street to the south side of the house opening up room for the park-like rear garden. The hedged front yard features a concrete and pebble circular drive. New walls and gates take cues from the formal architectural lines. In the rear garden a new covered terrace creates livable space for the upstairs bedrooms as well as a beautiful tilefloored dining and lounge space off the dining room and kitchen. The garden design made room for a grand pool and spa featuring handmade decorative Lescaux tiles. The cabana structure, anchored by Umbrella plants and Agave attenuata features a fireplace, outdoor kitchen and lounge area making poolside living a dream.

Designed by Nord Eriksson of EPT Design, the gardens were conceived to appear as though they were laid out in the 1920's while, at the same time, reflecting the Owner's eclectic taste and joyous spirit. A large central lawn, often the scene of impromptu soccer or football matches is surrounded by beds featuring succulents, Italian cypress, Yucca and Dracaenas, Olives, mature Coast Live Oaks, and profuse Bougainvillea.

The "Art of the Garden" Tour is held Sunday, April 21^{st} , from 10:30am to 4:30pm. To purchase tickets or for more information, call Creative Arts Group at 626-355-8350 or visit the office & gallery at 108 N. Baldwin Ave., Sierra Madre. Burglar, Identity Theft Suspect Arrested Altadena Detectives investigating a burglary and identity theft case served search warrants at three separate locations in Pasadena over the last month leading to the arrest of a woman last week wanted in connection with the crimes.

Police say the suspect Aqualina Jaime had gained access to a victim's credit accounts and fraudulently obtained thousands of dollars in cash advances on their credit cards. Jaime also made several purchases at stores in Pasadena, Duarte, and Los Angeles.

According to police, the first location was searched on March 11 and the other two locations were searched on April 4. The investigation started Jan. 31 when a resident of Altadena noticed several unauthorized, high-dollar, transactions on her credit card. The ensuing complex investigation led detectives to the suspect's identity police said.

Detectives located Jaime on April 4, and arrested her for burglary, identity theft, and grand theft.

The Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office filed 14 felony counts against the suspect Tuesday. She is being held in lieu of $345,000 bail.

Llama Lady Turned Pirate Chosen Doo Dah Queen from a friend.

Avast, me hearties, the queen has been chosen!

Hours of Doo Dah madness ended Sunday with a royal nod to this year's parade queen, Susann Edmonds, an enthusiastic signing woman o' pirate that wowed judges with her wit, dress and well thought routine —including homemade cocktail elixirs given to the 50 judges.

"She [Edmonds] just does a million stuff and so full of energy," Doo Dah organizer Tom Coston said. "She's a really cool local person and will make a great Doo Dah representative."

Edmonds plans to walk Llama down the parade route during this year's 36th Occasional Pasadena Doo Dah Parade April 27. She said she is best known in Altadena as the Llama Lady.

"I was the one who changed the laws in LA County so that Llamas were no longer exotic animals and now livestock," Edmonds said explaining that the law was changed in 2001 after a 22 month fight to keep Llamas on her property.

"Shortly after that, Llamas went down the Rose Parade route," she said with a sneer.

The Doo Dah Parade is often referred to as the twisted sister of the conventional Rose Parade.

Edmonds said that although she no longer owns Llamas herself; she plans to borrow one

Edmonds said the cocktail elixirs are part of a small business she owns, Jabberwocky Foods. They are a 15th century maritime recipe. The elixirs will be for sale, she said, with all the proceeds going to the Light Bringer Project, the nonprofit, Pasadena-based arts organization that also oversees Doo Dah.

The judges, most of whom themselves are former queens, said Edmonds had stiff competition from Mia Bonadonna, third runner up, who incorporated four large pizzas into her performance and Tanya Piana, second runner up, who danced in burlesque style with pasties set to a punk rock tune; and the belly dancer extraordinaire, Narayana, who was first runner up.

SURVIVAL SKILLS

By Christopher Nyerges

[Nyerges is the author of "How to Survive Anywhere," and "Enter the Forest." Information about his books and classes is available from Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CA 90041, or from www.ChristopherNyerges.com.]

In the "First Aid" chapter of How to Survive Anywhere, we address specific simple ways of dealing with the common medical emergencies that one can expect in the aftermath of a major disaster, or if lost and hurt in the woods. What would you do if a major earthquake struck Sierra Madre tomorrow?

Here is something else to consider.

It is not only the physical accidents that we need to be concerned about, whether in a wilderness accident, or the result of an urban disaster (major earthquake, etc.). In studies that have been done of the survivors of major disasters, the following conclusions have been made about the mental state of the survivors. Approximately 15% made quick, appropriate, and efficient choices and actions which were well-suited to their safety and security. Another 15% "went crazy," making wild irrational choices and even getting hurt as a result of their "losing it."

The rest, about 70% of the survivors – a full majority – neither went crazy nor did they make wise and efficient choices and actions, but rather wandered about somewhat zombie-like, spaced-out, in a state of stupor and shock, simply not knowing what to do, where to go, what to think. This shocked majority tends to be passive, but will take orders from someone who seems to be in control and who seems to know what they are doing and why.

The point: None of us wants to be a part of that majority, and definitely we don't want to be a part of that "crazy 15." No one would want to be wandering around Sierra Madre Blvd. in a dazed state of

What can we do to ensure that in a time of disaster, we find ourselves in that 15% category of wise, appropriate, efficient actions? None of us really knows what we will do until we are actually tested in difficult, stressful real life conditions. It is impossible to predict what you might do when you are seated comfortably in your home drinking a warm beverage. The only way to expand our mental and physical limits is to actually put ourselves into situations where we can discover more about ourselves during situations of less sleep, less food, more work. People in the military often get that experience. Some survival schools offer these experiences. And anyone (with a group of friends and supporters) can regularly plan such trips with the express purpose of expanding limits, learning how you will react in times of stress, and attempting to make the right choices when it is not easy to do so.

I encourage everyone to take the Red Cross Emergency First Aid course, and learn how to deal with everyday first aid problems.

A METEORITE MYSTERY: First Meteorite From Mercury Found?

in Erfoud, Morocco, one of them was then resold to Stefan Ralew, a meteorite collector from Berlin.

The dealer was demanding a high price, and Ralew may have hesitated. But the wrinkled glassy coating on one face of the rock was clearly a fusion crust, a kind of glaze that forms when a meteorite is heated as it passes through the atmosphere.

Looking at other faces, he would have recognized it as a type of meteorite called an achondrite, says Randy Korotev, a meteorite expert at Washington University in Saint Louis (WUSTL). That meant it was an exceptional

Most meteorites are stony, he explains, and of the stony meteorites, almost all (90 percent) are what are called ordinary chondrites. These are pieces of small, unmelted asteroids that are uniform in composition throughout.

The achondrites, on the other hand are pieces of large asteroids or planets, ones at least 200 kilometers in diameter. These produced enough internal heat early in their history to partially melt and segregate into a metal core surrounded by a rocky exterior. Achondrites, which come from the crust or mantle of these differentiated bodies, make up only 5 percent of the stony meteorites that have been found.

So already this find was looking very interesting. Where might it be from? About half of the achondrites come from the large asteroid 4 Vesta. Others come from Mars, the Moon, or other asteroids.

To answer the question of origin, the stone's chemistry had

Early in 2012, someone in Southern Morocco picked up 35 greenish stones. Purchased by a dealer to be analyzed. Ralew shipped it to Tony Irving at the University of Washington. "Tony is where all the serious collectors go when they find strange meteorites," says Korotev, to whom Irving sends the "lunars" (possible lunar meteorites), which is what Korotev mainly studies.

> Both the iron/manganese ratio of an asteroid and the ratios of its oxygen isotopes (variants of the oxygen atom) are thought to serve as "fingerprints" of its body of origin.

At the 44th Lunar and Planetary Science Conference in March, Irving said that the stone, now officially designated Northwest Africa 7325 (NWA 7325), had highly unusual chemistry. What's more, he said, the chemistry was suspiciously similar to that measured by NASA's Messenger probe, which is currently surveying the surface of Mercury from orbit. "It is high in magnesium and very low in iron, which is what they're seeing on the surface of Mercury," Korotev, who

Some chemical ratios didn't match, but Irving said that might be because the stone had been "excavated from depth," that is, blasted into space by a collision that left a deep scar in Mercury.

Although Korotev can't say for certain where the meteorite comes from, he can say why it is such a peculiar green. The green comes from a silicate mineral aced with chromium.

"I once analyzed bottles to see what made them blue or green," Korotev says. The greenest bottle had 660 parts per million chromium, but some of the mineral components of NWA 7325 have 7,000 parts per million chromium. That's why it's green."

But the bigger mystery—where did it come from—is as yet unsolved.

SANTA ANITA LANES CLOSED FOR MONTHS

The most brutal part of the construction of the Gold Line through Arcadia begins soon, with the right lanes of Santa Anita Avenue to be closed for months to northbound and southbound lanes beginning later this month or early May. Closures will continue through the spring and summer and until late October.

The lanes will be closing as the first steps towards construction of a bridge carrying train tracks over the four-lane road, which will also include the lowering of the road where it now rises in a hump to meet the tracks.

Santa Anita lanes will be closed once work on the bridge over Colorado Boulevard is complete and that road is open west of Santa Anita. A construction notice is forthcoming.

Preliminary investigation revealed the driver of the Volkswagen was under the influence of alcohol and marijuana. Further investigation is being conducted by the Major Accident Investigation Team.

BALDWIN STATUE DEDICATION APRIL 16

"By Gads! This must be paradise," is the expression famously attributed to Lucky Baldwin in 1875 upon first seeing the land that would, years later, become the City of Arcadia.

Arcadia's founding father, Elias J. "Lucky" Baldwin, will be honored for his pioneering and visionary contributions to Arcadia and the San Gabriel Valley with a bronze statue entitled "A Dawn in the West" that will be unveiled and dedicated on Tuesday, April 16 at 4 p.m. in the Reverend Monsignor Gerald M. O'Keeffe Rose Garden, near the Arcadia Community Center at 365 Campus Drive, Arcadia.

"We are so pleased that we are able to pay tribute to the great visionary Elias Baldwin," said City of Arcadia's Mayor, Robert C. Harbicht. "He was a forward thinker and a pioneer in the days when California was just beginning to blossom. He saw the beauty and potential in the San Gabriel Valley and he put into motion the dream he saw for this community. The tradition of horse racing is an excellent example of something that Lucky introduced to Arcadia and that flourishes to this day." Harbicht said, "The City Council and community at-large are thankful to Lucky's family for donating to the City this wonderful representation of our cherished past."

It gives me great joy and peace to know that this monument will stand for generations to come. I hope that E.J. "Lucky" Baldwin's legacy is never forgotten and this representation of him will help to achieve that," said Mar-gaux Gibson-Viera. "This gift is not only to Arcadia, but to all of California and our United pioneers!' "I am happy to donate the statue of Lucky Baldwin to the City of Arcadia along with my sister Margaux to honor the life of our great, great, great grand-father," added Heather Gibson. "I wish for this statue to inspire the youth of Arcadia to read and study history -- to look ahead and never give up. It is a reminder to all who come and visit of just how much one man or woman can do in a lifetime."

Detective Bureau Case Follow-Up

March 26, an officer responded to and conducted a burglary investigation at a business in the 100 block of West Walnut, Antiques of Fairoaks. Sellers rent cases from the business owner to display and sell their products. Suspect(s) broke into the location overnight and stole merchandise from the cases. Four victims were identified.

One of the victims found and identified some of her property being sold on eBay and contacted police. She recognized not only the items, but also the description of the items she had written on the tags. Through investigation, detectives found information on the seller, and the investigation led to an address in Tujunga.

A search warrant for the location in Tujunga was written and served on April 10 at 5:30 a.m. The property/residence in Tujunga was extremely large, so Monrovia detectives requested assistance from the West San Gabriel Valley Burglary Task Force, Pasadena Police Department and Glendale Police Department SWAT Teams. The search warrant was executed without incident. The objective of the search warrant was met and the victim's property was recovered from the residence.

This case is a great example of multi-agency cooperation and teamwork.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show Movie Reviews Especially for Teens & 'Tweens JURASSIC PARK 3D

This is one of my favorite scifi/action movie of all time. I find the plot intriguing, the amazing, acting and the ideas that it proposes chillingly realistic. In the past, I've found that 3D does not always help a movie, but here, the 3D blends

The plot remains the same: a genius scientist (Richard Attenborough) has created a new kind of 'biological preserve' on an island near Costa Rica. After experiencing legal issues, he requires the help of Doctors Alan Grant (Sam Neill) and Ellie Sattler (Laura Dern) to sign of on his park's safety. Even the mathematician Dr. Ian Malcolm (Jeff Goldblum) is brought in. However, they soon discover that the park has much more to offer than any of them had thought.

The movie is the exact same as before; nothing has changed, but I found that the 3D, which is some of the best I've ever seen, completely changes the experience. You really feel like that velociraptor is going to bite your face off! I would recommend this to people who have already seen the movie and certainly to those who have not.

Rumors?

Where there is smoke there is fire. Well, okay, I hope there is no fire. Panda Inn in Ontario just completed a renovation, I hear it looks great. My sources tell me that a similar plan is slated for this summer in Pasadena. Oh no, where will I go for my Summer Mai Tais? One good place is the Canoe House in South Pasadena. Owner Dave Yost after much prodding from yours truly has beefed up the pour to a 15 oz Mai Tai. I still love the ones at Islands Restaurant and Trader Vic's Mai Tais are legendary, but the Canoe House is coming on strong. I'm headed to Santa Barbara for a few days, anyone interested in joining me. Here are the details.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

CAT CAFÉS PROVIDE FUR THERAPY FOR FELINE FANCIERS

The concept of cafés specifically focused on catering to cat lovers has recently caught on like crazy in a couple of countries. The idea of charging patrons by the hour to cuddle a furry feline over a cup of tea was reportedly hatched in Taipei, Taiwan in 1998 and by 2005 the idea had become so popular among Japanese tourists, it spread to Tokyo and blossomed overnight. Today there are at least 100 cat cafés in the city of Tokyo, according to the last count this past January. In 2012, the kitty café concept migrated west to become the talk of the town in east London where entrepreneur Lauren Pears hopes to open "Lady Dinah's Pet Emporium". Assuming she is able to raise sufficient funds, Pears' new pet project will become London's first kitty-catered coffee, tea and crumpet haunt. (Visit ladydinahs.com for details and updates)

I must admit, I just heard for the first time last week that cat cafés even exist, and I was absolutely delighted with the idea of having a place for pet-less cat lovers to go and satisfy their desire for feline fur therapy. Apparently there are lots of serious cat fans in Taiwan, Japan and England who work long hours and live in small dwellings where pets are prohibited, leading to the demand for places where cat coveters can pet furry felines and enjoy a cup of tea and a bite to eat at the same time.

Logic follows that sharing the company of a cat at a local "beastro" would be a worthwhile way to un-wind after a long day. I mean, it has got to be a better source of relaxation than sitting alone and surfing the net in a public place. OK, so today's technology offers access to a global network, but what it can't offer is the heart-warming unconditional love and undivided attention that a kitty-cat can. While some may prefer spending their leisure time hanging out with a cold, wireless, soul-less machine, it seems there are plenty of people in Taiwan, Japan and England who would rather pay by the hour to coddle and play with a very much alive furry friend at a cat café. Enough people, in fact, to cause the cat café concept to catapult into an up-and-coming booming business.

To me, the alternative of petting a cuddly cat versus plucking a keyboard in a café makes total sense. The benefits of spending time with a friendly feline that readily reciprocates affection are manifold. Research studies have proven that humans who spend time with domestic pets tend to lead a longer, happier and healthier life. It has even been observed by numerous physicians, that patients can experience more expedient recovery from a number of diseases by spending quality time with a domestic pet on a regular basis. Some may argue the urban legend that cats carry diseases, and therefore couldn't possibly be healthy to have in a café setting. However, medical sociologist and award-winning medical writer Joan Leibmann, PhD begs to differ in her 12/17/10 Huffington Post blog where she wrote that according to Healthy Pets, Healthy People, a division of the Center for Disease Control, the health benefits of having a relationship with a cat far outweigh the risks for most people.

Another way kitties can be helpful to humans has to do with their inherent cuteness (dubbed "Kawaii" in Japanese). According to recent studies by the journal, PLoS, looking at adorable kitty photos for moments at a time between projects at work gives our minds a little break and allows us to become more productive when it's time to return to the real work. Hiroshi Nittono and his colleagues at Hiroshima University performed studies involving motor tasks and global-local letter tasks (identifying a series of random numbers and associating letters with shapes). Each test proved that viewing images of kittens (and puppies) prior to performing a given task led to an improved performance. (Source: KAWAII, The Power of Cute by Allison Espiritu Jan. 9, 2013)

For me, it goes without saying that a warm-blooded, cute kitty cat is much better company than a computer could ever be. I mean, how many laptops do you know of (with or without the net) that could come sit on your lap and comfort you when you are feeling low and need a little lift? In this age of rapid technological advances, we as a society have become more and more isolated from physical interaction with other beings, both human and otherwise, and I think that's sad. As an avid animal lover, I would be lost without the love and affection of my pets and I know without a doubt that I benefit greatly from those relationships. I am fortunate enough to have my own pets, but I still look forward to the cat café concept making it's way to the USA for those who aren't so lucky.

BEAR: ANIMAL ID #A4559556

Meeta gregarious and affable lifeloving dog, Bear (A4559556). Bear's name fits him - this living teddy bear is a ten year old brown neutered male Shih Tzu who was unceremoniously dumped at the Baldwin Park Shelter on April 1st because his former owners claimed he was "too old". Weighing fourteen pounds, Bear is a patient, calm lapdog who is well mannered and housebroken. He gets along well with other dogs and his former owners said he likes children. He is in good shape physically - he doesn't look or act ten and his coat is soft and well cared for. Bear is the perfect indoor pet for anyone in any living situation at all, and will fit seamlessly into any household. To watch a video of

THE GOOD LIFE

HOW TO SHOP FOR A HEARING AID

Dear Savvy Senior: What tips can you offer people who are shopping for hearing aids?

Overwhelmed Senior

Dear Overwhelmed:

With so many choices and options available today, shopping for a hearing aid that meets your needs, lifestyle and budget can be challenging. Here are lifestyle and budget can be challenging. Here are some tips that can help you locate a good hearing aid provider and choose an appropriate aid.

Choose a Provider

The first step in buying a hearing aid is to choose a good provider. The best option – as recommended by Consumer Reports – is an otolaryngologist (an ear, nose and throat doctor) who employs an audiologist that fits and dispenses hearing aids.

An otolaryngologist will first examine your ears and rule out any medical conditions such as a tumor, bacterial infection or ear wax that can affect your hearing. Medicare will cover the medical exam and an audiologist's test if ordered by a physician.

If you can't find a conveniently located doctor's office that dispenses aids, an independent audiologist or hearing instrument specialist is a good alternative. To search for these professionals in your area, see howsyourhearing.org and ihsinfo.org. Big box retailers like Wal-Mart and Costco also sell hearing aids.

Or, if you're a veteran, be sure to check with your nearest VA health facility. Eligible veterans may be able to get hearing aids for free.

During Your Visit

After you locate a provider, when you go in for your first visit you need to be prepared to discuss your lifestyle and hearing needs. For example: Do you just want to hear the TV, or other people speaking? Do you talk on the phone a lot? Do you need to hear in a lot of noisy places, like restaurants? Knowing your priorities will help your provider determine what style and hearing aid technology is best for you.

You'll also be given a hearing test in a soundproof booth to determine what type of hearing loss you have. After the test, your provider should give you a choice of hearing aid brands, features and styles to consider

To help you decide, ask for a demonstration. Many providers are able to put a disposable plug on the tip of a behind-the-ear hearing aid and program the device to your hearing loss so you can experience how it works.

Also ask about popular add-on features like "telecoils" that helps with phone conversations, "directional microphones" that can help you hear in noisy places, and "feedback cancellation" that prevents the aid from squealing when you get too close to other audio equipment. But, keep in mind that the extra features will drive up the price.

At the Fitting

After you buy your hearing aid, don't leave the office without making sure it physically fits your ear and that it does what you want it to do. To help with this, ask to have a "real-ear" test which measures the match between your hearing loss and the response of your hearing aid.

Also get a signed copy of a contract that outlines the hearing aid you're buying, along with the price, trial period, any nonrefundable fees and the warranty. Most manufacturers allow a 30 to 60-day trial period to be sure you're satisfied, and provide follow-up visits to help you with needed adjustments or questions.

Docource

You also need to know that digital hearing aids are expensive, typically costing between $1,000 and $3,500 per ear, and they're not covered by traditional Medicare or most private insurance companies. To look for help, call the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders at 800-241-1044 and ask them to mail you their list of financial resources for hearing aids.

For more hearing aid information, get a copy of the "Consumer's Guide to Hearing Aids" for 5.50 plus shipping at hearingloss.org, or call 301-657-2248.

KATIE TseThis and That CRUEL IRONY

Things are rough all over, but you already knew that. It used to be lucky to have a lawyer or a doctor in your family. Now graduating law students are lucky if they find a job! One of my co-workers was telling me about her son's recent experiences in his quest to secure his place in the world of law.

After a long, diligent search and numerous interviews, Ryan finally found a job at a law firm in Merced. Nothing against Merced, but compared to Chino Hills, where Ryan grew up, it's no exciting metropolis. However, Merced does have some benefits, from a legal point of view, in that it maintains a steady rate of blue-collar crime. While far from the glamorous courtroom dramas, such as "Damages," Ryan was ecstatic to have a job! At last his first "real" case landed on his desk. He was to be the prosecutor for the DA's office against some individual who had been caught with an ounce or two of an illegal substance. The usual punishment for such crimes is a hefty fine and several months in prison.

Being the supportive parents they are, Ryan's mom and dad made a special trip to witness their son's first case. For them, traveling is no small feat. His father battles chronic lung infections, often resulting in hospitalizations. At the time of the trial, he was wheeling an oxygen tank with tubes running into his nostrils. Ryan's mother also suffers from health

At the time of the trial, he was wheeling an oxygen tank with tubes running into his nostrils. Ryan's mother also suffers from health problems. A cancer survivor, she wears a medical sleeve to keep the circulation in her arm moving.

On the day of the trial, the defendant was clean-shaven and dressed in a crisp suit that hid his tattoos. He had also removed about a brick's weight of metal from his many piercings. Ryan presented a sound, rational argument for the suspect's incarceration. The defending attorney rebutted with some unimaginative statements about his client's sad background that sought to rationalize his descent into a life of crime.

The judge adjourned to his chamber for consideration and then, to Ryan's dismay, pronounced the defendant innocent! The ruling was a blow to Ryan's confidence, and his parents did their best to assure him that the judge must've had some partiality toward the defendant. The next week back at the office, Ryan asked one of his bosses what had been wrong with his performance in the courtroom.

"Don't worry about it," his boss said nonchalantly. "The cards were stacked against you from the moment the kid's folks walked in the room."

"What are you talking about?" Ryan asked.

His boss patted him on the shoulder. "Didn't you see the guy's mom and dad sitting behind him? That man with his oxygen tank almost had me in tears!"

Moral of the story: If you bring visitors to court, make sure they know which side belongs to the prosecutor and which to the defendant.

SENIOR HAPPENINGS

By Pat Birdsa

FYI - Volunteering:

Seniors who volunteer not only help society, but themselves as well. Seniors have a great deal of knowledge and experience, and sharing that with younger people is traditional role for seniors in society. By volunteering, seniors become more engaged in their world and reap health benefits to boot. Until recently, those health benefits have been hard to define or list. Researchers with AARP's Experience Corps, an organization that trains people over 55 to tutor children, learned that seniors who volunteered were found to have better mental and physical functioning, along with better self-esteem and connectivity with other people. Add to those; a lower risk of depression, less decline in health due to aging, improvement in memory, and a feeling that overall, life is improving. To find out more about the Experience Corps go to: www.experience.com Experience Corps is an excellent program, but is by no means the only way to get those benefits. The key ingredients are engaging with other people, meeting new people, doing meaningful work and challenging yourself!

FOR YOUR FUNNY BONE

An elderly woman was arrested for shoplifting at a grocery store. When she appeared before the judge, the judge asked what she had taken. The lady replied, "A can of peaches." The judge then asked why she had done it. She replied, "I was hungry and forgot to bring any cash to the store." The judge asked how many peaches were in the can. She replied, "Nine." The judge said, "Well then, I'm going to give you nine days in jail--one day for each peach." As the judge was about to drop his gavel, the lady's husband raised his hand and asked if he might speak. The judge said, "Yes, what do you have to add?" The husband said, "Your honor, she also stole a can of peas."

You're getting old when there's no question in your mind that there's no question in your mind.

HOW CAN YOGA HELD

SAMA VRITTI

Sama Vritti refers to pure breathing. It means equal wave or equalizing breath. It is 1:1 breath - the equal inhale and exhale. It should be smooth. It is a stabilizing breath.

This breath is great at the beginning of class, or for anyone having trouble with breathing, because we need to get a handle on breath. The practice of yoga is about self-reliance. Our breath is a good indicator of how we are doing. The breath may be grasping, irregular or emotional. But we want it to be smooth. We want to remain calm and centered in the midst of change, in the midst of challenges. So we train ourselves to keep on the path and stay balanced. The first and best way to do this is by learning to control prana (energy)and prana rides on the breath. So we use smooth breathing (the equal inhale and exhale). This also gives the mind something to do or concentrate on.

Later, we move on to 1:2 breath. We can learn to let go by lengthening the exhale. This calms us down. It is not the volume of the breath, but the amount of prana we absorb from the breath that energizes us. Most of us need to learn to absorb more. The less we can hear the breath, the more internalizing it is and the more we can be aware of the prana carried on it. It is important to learn breath practices form a knowledgeable teacher. Have fun getting to know your breath! Namasté.

JASMINE'S CORNER Book Reviews by Jasmine Kelsey Williams

LOVE AND PEACHES By Jodi Lynn Anderson

Jodi Lynn Anderson brings forth the third and final book of her "Peaches" trilogy, and the spring season will serve to be perfect for this choice. "Love and Peaches" is the last one here, bringing back the three protagonists that consist of Murphy, Leeda, and Birdie for a sweetly wonderful reunion and a final farewell.

Like its predecessors, "Love and Peaches" picks up the tone and story from where "The Secrets of Peaches" left off, but instead of starting directly at the Darlington Peach Orchard, the story works its way backwards, choosing to start from different points from the three main characters individual lives instead. The characters' main stories have progressed to them still maintaining their bonds with each other, but their own lives have brought about change not just between them, but also one that challenges their friendship. Murphy's return to the orchard brings not just shocking news from her mother regarding her father, but also plucking up the courage to face her first love that she left. Leeda's return brings her responsibility in the form of a surprising inheritance, and Birdie returns to the orchard from Mexico, only to learn about holding on to what she has and letting go of what she has ever known, including the orchard itself.

"Love and Peaches" contains so much more beneath the surface; the themes of friendship, love, and forgiveness compliment the issues of secrets, holding and letting go, and sometimes choosing what you want out of your own life versus choosing what may be the right thing to do (and both are challenging). Anderson still maintains the calm tone throughout all three of her books, but readers will notice how the story and the characters grow and change throughout the trilogy, from their high school days, back to the orchard, and through the beginnings of their college years and eventually what choices are made for their own lives. Copyrighted in 2008 and still receiving praise from Publishers Weekly and various critics, "Love and Peaches" will not only complete your book collection and this trilogy, but one that shows readers of many ages how the bonds of friendship and faith can possibly last for a lifetime.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

CAVEMAN

NYC dream-rockers Caveman return with their eponymously titled sophomore album. Their 2011 debut record, "CoCo Beware," earned them much acclaim. The real test obviously comes with the follow-up record and Caveman doesn't falter. A deeper, richer, more melodic sounding album is what "Caveman" is. It's a shimmering, wistful collection of songs that reflect those of the 80s British pop era as well as hints of The Shins, Grizzly Bear and Fleet Foxes. Comparisons aside, Caveman's intensely satisfying second record captures a plaintive life, yet those impacted by it will have their own subjective opinions. The wailing guitars, the sensitivity in the vocals, and hazy snyths are all driving forces behind "Caveman." Their sound is unmatched in today's ever so increasingly expansion of indie rock bands (especially those from NYC). While the album may not be something to fully blow you away, it's still a sumptuous communal set of songs. It's definitely a slow burn of an album that tests the patience of the listener. If you're willing to stick around for the entire show, you're in for an experience that's rare

Caveman Artist: Album: Caveman Label: Fat Possum Release Date: April 2nd, 2013

The album starts off with "Strange to Suffer." It's a dreamy, paradise encompassing song that is light on lyrics, but is as soothing as anything you could ever ask for. The subsequent track and first single, "In The City," is the most upbeat song off the record. It's airy, snyth-soaked, and melodically intoxicating. While rest of the album meanders through, it's a trip worth taking. For everyone will take away a different experience, but all come to the conclusion that "Caveman" is significantly powerful on many unexplained levels. At times quite intimate such as with the song "I See You," the folk rock, barebones track to sweeping efforts like "Where's The Time?" and "Chances," In fact, "I See You," reminds me a lot of something found on both Local Natives' latest masterpiece, "Hummingbird" and reminiscent of the band, "City and Colour." No matter the similarities, "I See You" is one of Caveman's most warm and sorrowful songs. It's filled with sheer beauty and desolation. Admittedly so, the album runs its course a bit with the later tracks like "Never Want To Know" and "The Big Push." They're the lengthiest of songs found on "Caveman," but offer no real surprises. Nonetheless, the listener will already be completely enthralled with the record that the end may not pose much of disappointment.

I heard the real assessment for a band is how they perform their songs live. Caveman has been known to put on great live shows. Therefore, it's a great reassurance that the band is definitely something to rave about. While "Caveman" isn't the music you're blasting in your car or working out to, it's rich textures, thick guitar layers, affectionate sensibilities will draw you in and hold you tight. Despite the slight tail off toward the end, that grasp it has on you may let up slightly so. Nonetheless, the first nine tracks will prove to be something wholly innovative, vastly pleasurable, and quite gentle as the listener navigates the shores of "Caveman," never wanting to return to land.

SIERRA MADRE AUTHOR PUBLISHES 28TH NOVEL

Merrill Joan Gerber, a 45 year resident of Sierra Madre, is, as Readers Digest used to say, a most "Unforgettable Character".

I had the chance to meet her via email and a telephone conversation when she contacted the paper regarding an auto accident on her street. She had taken a few pictures of the incident and wanted to share them with the community.

During my telephone conversation with her, I learned that this woman, a teacher of fiction writing at Cal Tech, is quite the accomplished author and a real delight to converse with. She is witty and provided a much needed uplift for my day!

Born in Brooklyn she has won many literary awards and honors for her novels and short stories. She has published stories in The New Yorker, The Atlantic, Mademoiselle, Redbook, and many other journals. In 1986 Gerber won an O. Henry Prize. In 1993, she won the Ribalow Award from Hadassah Magazine for her novel, The Kingdom of Brooklyn. She currently teaches fiction writing at the California Institute of Technology.

Her latest novel, her 28th, "The Hysterectomy Waltz" has just been released on Amazon and will soon be in bookstores on May 14th however it can be early-ordered on Amazon now. There will be a reading at Pasadena Vroman's (Hastings Ranch) on May 13th, Monday, 7 pm.

Learn more about Merrill by going to her website: www.cco.caltech. edu/~mjgerber

What happens when a woman has a hysterectomy? What happens emotionally, spiritually, hormonally, sexually to a woman after hysterectomy? What happens to her intimate relationships? What happens to a woman's sense of identity? Merrill Joan Gerber's brilliant black comedy, The Hysterectomy Waltz, will resonate with hundreds of thousands of women who have been through this surgery.

"It's truly powerful, and acrid, and barbed, and filled with wonderful, and unexpected, turns of phrase, and above all it's shocking in its directness and understated anger and sadness and fear. In short, it's an amazing piece of writing." —Cynthia Ozick

"This American Jewish woman's work of magic realism tells an intimate, anguished, outraged, and ultimately triumphant tale about hysterectomy—female genital mutilation, American style. SUCCESS BEGINS WITH A MINDSET

Something magical begins to unfold after an prize. Maintaining a mindset of success in the individual truly commits to a goal. "As a man midst of the challenges is what continues to fuel thinketh, so is he" is a Biblical reference from movement in the direction of progress. the Book of Proverbs (23:7) that parallels many ancient and contemporary perspectives about the importance of one's thought process. manuscript, "As A Man Thinketh." The idea that a simple a working light bulb. After almost 10,000 thought might serve as the impetus to propel someone toward achieving a goal may initially appear quite outrageous. However, with more than a century of documented surveys and studies captured in books like, "Think and Grow Rich," by Napoleon Hill, it is clear that a person's mindset is the necessary starting point.

The act of being decisive unleashes an energy that begins to create the environment and circumstances to support progress toward the end goal. As the collection of writings about this phenomenon over the last century became known as the "positive mental attitude" (PMA) and self-help genres, some people regarded the philosophy as silly and unsophisticated. However, there is a wide body of evidence to support the correlation between a person's mindset and the level of success.

The structure and function of our brains create this success dynamic, including the conscious, sub-conscious and unconscious aspects of our thinking processes. At the point that we use our is hardwired to find a way, connect the dots and create the path that places us at the right place and right time as we move towards the goal. This isn't to say that it's always easy. Not everyone who succeeds is able to tell the story of a fairy tale journey. Many people have to Robbins make it through turbulent situations to claim the experiments that failed, he refused to adjust his mindset. On October 22, 1879, it finally paid off. Almost three years later on September 4, 1882, he was forever etched in history when the world's first power station illuminated a section of New York City near Wall Street. That historic event was the culmination of a long series of steps, including successes and failures that started with Edison's mindset to invent a light bulb powered by electricity.

If you will simply use it, the power to decide equips you with the means for life to provide you with access to everything needed to succeed. The focus and extent of success will be shaped by the quality of your decision. Is your decision clear? It is firm? Or do you waver after supposedly having made the decision? Take charge of your conscious decision-making ability and your subconscious and unconscious will swing into action to move you in the direction of the success that you desire and deserve. Studies by neuroscientists dating back to the 1970's show that a human brain begins to prepare for action conscious mind to make a decision, our brain in a little over one third of a second before we consciously decide to act.

DO YOU THINK PLACING FACEBOOK ADS ARE WORTH IT?

One of the best things to advertise on Facebook is your Facebook Page. Instead of a typical "buy this product" type of ad, a "Like this page" ad is more valuable because it builds a list of people who are subscribing to what you publish on Facebook.

I like to think of our Facebook page as a dynamic, interactive magazine. Like a magazine, we use the 90/10 rule, we post 90% helpful, useful, fun information and 10% is promotional. Just like a magazine, you need people to subscribe to it. In order to get subscribers, you need to promote it and let people know it's there. Facebook Ads are a quick and affordable way to do this ($20 a day for 7 days is a good place to start).

Facebook, as well as Twitter and LinkedIn, are able to target an audience based on their interest and on-line behaviors.

Say you own a cupcake business and you want to target all the people in the United States, Canada and UK who have "cupcake behavior." They like big brand cupcake names. They talk and post about cupcakes. They interact with other cupcake lovers. Facebook allows you to see how many people on Facebook fall into this category.

You can target by age, gender, location and interest. I suggest using the "Precise Interest" field as it will give you suggestions for other key words.

Go to www.facebook.com/advertising and select "Create and Ad." You can decide later if you want to purchase your ad. Just use the tool to see how many people are in your target market on Facebook. It will give you great demographic information and ideas of where your audience is hanging out.

IT PAYS TO STAY

If you want to take advantage of the affordability of homes today, but anticipate major life changes in the next couple of years, you have to consider the implications of selling so soon. Keep the following factors in mind when making your decision.

As long as you sell for more than you owe on the mortgage, you'll be fine. Otherwise, you'll lose those costs associated with your initial investment, including the money you spent on loan and closing fees.

Also consider the cost of selling your home soon after purchasing. You paid closing costs when you bought it, but you face more closing costs when you sell it. In just a couple of years, most people won't build up enough equity in the home to justify selling so soon and paying transaction fees again. Finally, if you sell your home in less than two years - for a profit - you may have to pay capital gains taxes on that profit. Currently, homeowners are exempt from those taxes up to $250,000 (or up to $500,000 for married filers) - but the home must be your primary residence and lived in for at least

Hardships like health issues or job relocation may allow you a partial exclusion on those taxes, though. Speak with your tax advisor and real estate agent for some solid advice.

Some high-tech companies won the lottery this week. The lottery in question was not one of the many lotteries that can transform some lucky schlub from a working stiff into a fabulously wealthy 1 percenter overnight. The lottery we'll be discussing here is what is widely known as the H1-B Visa

This particular Visa program was designed to assist US employers in hiring foreign workers in specialty occupations, specifically high-tech jobs. While this concept is being sold to the public as a needed measure in order to fill high-tech job vacancies (that may or may not exist), opponents of the program argue that these set-asides could lead to a hemorrhaging of American high-tech jobs.

The program is currently limited to a cap of 65,000 slots reserved for foreign workers per year. High-Tech giants such as Yahoo, Google. Microsoft and Intel are lobbying hard for higher caps and companies such as Microsoft are attempting to frame the H1-B issue as a patriotic call-to-arms that would be good for the country. While supporters of higher caps for the program like to insist that a shortage of trained workers is hurting the competitiveness of US companies, a recent high-tech survey shows that in fact our country is producing far more people with STEM degrees (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) than industry actually needs at this point.

The current unemployment rate for Electrical Engineers in the US hovered just under 5% for 2012 while during the period between 2000 and 2011 salaries for workers in the computer- and mathrelated fields rose only 4.5%. Interested parties of the high-tech fields are beginning to wonder aloud why is it that if these skills are in such demand then why haven't high-tech salaries kept pace with high-tech profits, which have literally exploded since the mid-90's. If there is no shortage of high-tech workers then why the aggressive push for higher caps for the H1-B Visa programs?

Part of the answer lies in the fact the biggest employers of foreign tech workers are offshoring- and outsourcing consulting firms, and if the existing caps are raised, the existing trend of high-tech salaries not keeping pace with high-tech profits is likely to continue and worsen as American high-tech workers are replaced with lower-paid, off-shore (or H1-B- sponsored) technical resources.

There are already 500,000 workers in the United States on H-1B visas. Bringing over more workers on H-1B visas, would obviously darken job prospects for America's struggling young scientists and engineers. This state of affairs also has the effect of discouraging young students by communicating to them the message that it may not be worth the effort to study hard and earn the high-tech degree because the economy may import someone to do the same job for less. The stop-gap measure of raising the H1-B Visa cap may actually be a trumped-up excuse for lowering labor costs but it may also end up contributing to an actual shortage in the future.

This investment philosophy, known as socially responsible investing (SRI), has a special appeal to many individuals concerned with the future of our planet.

constitutes socially responsible investing?

Investors who adopt an SRI strategy believe their decisions should be governed not only by economics, but also by social issues. This often means refraining from investing in companies or industries that produce products or offer services the investor disapproves of, regardless of the company's or industry's potential for profit or value. It can also mean investing in companies that promote workplace diversity, actively participate in community volunteer programs or work to improve the environment.

Benefits, drawbacks and strategies of SRI

As with all types of investing, there are tradeoffs that come with socially responsible investing. Those who practice SRI can feel good that their investment choices reflect their values. However, socially responsible investors must balance this benefit with more limited choices with regard to portfolio diversification.

Some strategies that those interested in SRI may employ include divesting from companies that don't align with their personal morals or beliefs, and participating in shareholder activism or engagement. They may also include:

- Investing in SRI mutual funds. These funds include companies that many socially responsible investors support. They use SRI strategies as part of their fund objectives and portfolio choices.

WHY MIKE RICE HAD TO GO

Independent's Eye by Joe Gandelman

Retired professional basket-ball coach and former basketball player Phil Jackson once

'Not only is there more to life than basketball, there's a lot more to basketball than basketball." Someone should have told that to Mike Rice, Rutgers's retired-by-beingfired former basketball coach.

Rice was fired after ESPN aired video showing him yelling at players on his team, shoving them, throwing balls at their heads, and using a gay slur that begins with "f." University administrators knew about the video as early as November. A Rutgers board member now insists he called for Rice's immediate firing after seeing the video, but it only resulted in Rice being investigated.

The Star Ledger in New Jersey, in an editorial, declared: "The evidence against Mike Rice was too damning, too vile, too extreme for him to spend one more day on the Rutgers University payroll. That he remained employed this long — long after a line of Rutgers officials that winds all the way to the president's office had watched the now infamous video — is an embarrassment...'

Gov. Chris Christie told reporters "You have lots of successful coaches...who don't act this way...they don't conduct themselves like animals. [What] parent would let this animal back into their living room to recruit their son, after this video? I'd hang up the

A journalist friend points out that Rutgers is New Jersey's only major state university that doesn't carry the state's name as opposed to, say, UCLA, USC, or CalTech. He contends, "Rutgers has tried to compensate by pouring ungodly sums of money into its athletic program to the detriment of minor sports that were dropped. The basketball coach scandal is, in part, a result of skewed priorities." And, indeed, The New York Times reports that when also-fired Rutgers Athletic Director Tim Pernetti learned of Rice's behavior he was negotiating to try to get Rutgers into the Big Tent with its prestige and perceived riches.

Some conservatives and Fox Newsers took the other side. Eric Bolling said firing Rice because he got rough with players showed " it's time to toughen up" and that it represented "the wussification of American men." Fox News Rush Limbaugh wannabe Sean Hannity said: "Maybe we need a little more discipline in society. Maybe we don't have to be a bunch of wimps for the rest of our lives. My father hit me with a belt. I turned out okay.'

Actually, if Hannity was hit with a belt as a kid, then there are some who will feel he is the living, breathing reason why no kid should E-V-E-R be hit with a belt. But Hannity's final sentence begs serious examination.

Here are two non-secrets, Sean. First, a good chunk of people abused as youths grow up to have abusive relationships. And, second, suicide is the number two cause of death among college students. Despite their big bodies, college students are youths who may be sensitive, psychologically vulnerable and impressionable.

The real issue is how we choose to imprint young people. Will they turn behaviors and attitudes we show them into their into own? For that reason alone -- not the mere act of angrily pushing a kid young enough to be his son, or throwing a ball real hard at a kid's head, or yelling out a sexual bigot word -- Rice had go to.

Is he now apologetic, almost in grief over his actions in how they let down the university, his team and his family? Reportedly, yes. Is someone who uses Rice's tactics a shaper of young minds and behaviors? Let's hope not.

SHARE YOUR PASSION FOR BASEBALL WITH YOUR KIDS

(StatePoint) As kids, many had the same dream of hitting a walkoff home run to win the World Series. Now baseball season is finally underway, and there is no shortage of opportunities to share your passion of the game with your children.

Getting children involved in baseball at a young age is a great way to commit them to an active lifestyle and form lifelong memories. Many kids fall in love with the game from the moment they first step on the field As the familiar sounds of the crack of the bat and the roar of the crowd once again fill the air, here are a few ways to introduce your children to America's favorite pastime.

Have a Catch

Having a catch with your child is the quintessential bonding experience. It's also a great way to ease younger kids into the game. All you need is a glove and a ball to get started. After your son or daughter has the basics down, take the next step by going to the batting cages.

Use literature to get kids interested in baseball, such as the new picturebook, 'Who's on First?' by Abbott and Costello and illustrated by John Martz.

Read a Book Sometimes it's best to familiarize your child with the game before getting on the field. "Who's on First?," the famous 1930s Abbot and Costello comedy routine, is inspiring a love of the sport for a new generation of kids -- this time in the form of a picture book that carries the same name.

The humorous book, adapted and edited by David Borgenicht, President and Publisher of Quirk Books, and illustrated by John Martz, features the same witty banter of the original skit.

This picture book edition of the classic comedy routine is a great introduction to comedy, Abbott and Costello, and the game of baseball," says Borgenicht. For more information, visit www. QuirkBooks.com.

Play in an Organized League

For many kids, the best part about playing baseball is the rush they get from playing in a competitive game. Aside from the health benefits of being active, organized sports are fun, and a great way to learn teamwork and discipline.

Go to a Game

As a child, the magic of attending a ball game is unmatched. Whether it is a major league, minor league, or even a college game, the sights and sounds of the ballpark will capture your child's imagination. Grab some peanuts and Cracker Jacks for the real authentic experience. A day at the ballpark will be a memory that you both have forever.

Finally baseball season is here, and it is time to play ball!

NEW LIFE FOR LANCER TENNIS COURTS

Pasadena, CA - In early March, La Salle's Athletic Director, Anthony Harris, presided over the ribbon cutting ceremony for the newly resurfaced tennis courts in Arcadia. In his opening comments he said, "Today is a special day in the La Salle tennis program as it serves as the celebration of our new courts here at Orange Grove Park."

The history of the La Salle tennis program began in the 1960s when Brother Wilfred, FSC served as coach. Because La Salle does not have on-campus courts, the program developed a variety of relationships over the years with neighboring tennis facilities, with the last two being Live Oak Park and Whittier Narrows. "When I began as AD at La Salle in January of 2011," Harris continued, "I had discussions with our current tennis coach, Tim Pawley (our boys and girls tennis coach of 10 years), about securing a more permanent location for Lancer Tennis. The fruit of that meeting places us here today. It's a win-win situation for all, as Arcadia has new tennis courts and we have "home" courts during the season." Harris went on to thank Arcadia Mayor, Bob Harbicht, who, along with the city council was instrumental in getting the project approved. Harris said he greatly appreciated the help of Ryan Wright and Sara Somagyi from the City of Arcadia, who "pointed me in the right direction" while helping us through the permit and construction process.

Harris thanked Mark Mitchell, the father of Christine Mitchell '12, a former girls tennis player who made a significant donation toward the completion of the project. He also thanked the La Salle Athletic Boosters, "the backbone of the La Salle Athletic Department. They donated $5,000 toward the completion of the project. They are just some of the special people that we need to thank as this project would not have been possible without them."

it could prevent anything more like this, then of course that will be considered."

He was armed with a handgun and two legally-purchased semiautomatic rifles. Sixteen people were shot and killed, including the gunman's mother, and fifteen injured before the killer turned the gun on himself.

About a year later, the country stiffened its gun laws; semi-automatic weapons were outlawed, new restrictions placed on shotguns and ammunition, registration requirements were tightened and cops had more leeway to deny permits to those deemed unfit.

The massacre took place in the Hungerford area of Berkshire, England in 1987. The new gun law got through Parliament under the leadership of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, quoted

I've wondered how Ronald Reagan would fare with today's corporate-controlled Republicans. Here's a president who argued it was unfair for a bus driver to pay taxes on his earned income at a higher rate than what a Wall-Streeter pays on his capital gains. I can't imagine many Democrats, let alone Republicans, openly taking that position

I wondered the same about Margaret Thatcher, who, in addition to overseeing one of the U.K.'s most significant gun control measures in a generation, also accepted scientific fact as being scientific fact. She was one of the earliest leaders to sound the warning on climate change; "The danger of global warming is as yet unseen but real enough for us to make changes and sacrifices so that we do not live at the expense of future

Thatcher remained an ardent supporter of her country's National Health Service, which, unlike President Obama's Affordable Care Act, actually is "socialized medicine"; "I believed that the NHS was a service of which we could genuinely be proud. It delivered a high quality of care . . . and at a reasonably modest unit cost, at least compared with some insurance-based systems."

When discussing means to address climate change, or getting firearms off the street, P.M. Thatcher would often use the word, "sensible". The question is why it's so hard here at home to enact measures 90% of us agree are, at the very least, "sensible".

The main reason is we're dealing with an industry which, according to National Shooting Sports Foundation, has an annual $32 billion footprint on our economy (a figure approximate to what's spent yearly on the arts), and is determined to maintain it.

Start with $30 million spent since 1990 buying Congress through corporate front groups like the NRA; $4.2 million for the 2012 election cycle alone, with 96% going to Republicans. Then create and disseminate talking points about how Obama wants to take away everyone's guns, or at least establish a nation-wide registry of owners so things will be in place when he decides the time's as conservatism, but only as cowardice. right to impose Sharia law.

tightened up, or if we think that Yeah, it's crazy - but the pros orchestrating the propaganda do their homework and follow the polls, like one last month from Public Policy Polling, showing that when targeting those who last year voted for Mitt Romney, you're dealing with a crowd in which 61% believe global warming is a hoax, 36% believe Saddam Hussein was involved with 9/11, and 22% believe Barack Obama is the "Anti-Christ". Clearly, these are folks who'll buy into most anything.

> The threat to wavering Republicans is that if they don't fall into line, if they show signs of putting the interests of constituents over those of arms manufacturers, they risk being "primaried". The lobbyists would invest millions putting up challengers in "safe" Republican districts, mobilize the base and guarantee a formidable turnout of those determined to deny reelection to anyone seen as siding with the Anti-Christ in the White House intent on taking their guns.

> Keeping guns out of the hands of unstable people could have a serious impact on that $32 billion industry. Keeping them out of the hands of unstable countries could cut into the estimated (by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute) $8.8 billion in annual arms exports from the U.S.

> Earlier this month the United Nations voted overwhelmingly to approve a treaty calling for a "background check" for nations seeking arms abroad. As reported in the N.Y. Times, it calls for "sales to be evaluated on whether the weapons will be used to break humanitarian law, foment genocide or war crimes, abet terrorism or organized crime or slaughter women and children." Particularly threatening to arms exporters, it calls for public disclosure of the countries and regimes they deal with.

> Ours was one of the 154 countries in support. The only three votes against were cast by Iran, Syria and North Korea. Ratification in the Senate appears unlikely, though, as the NRA and their servants in Congress have sided with Iran, Syria and North Korea. In a recent fundraising appeal, Sen. Rand Paul (R-KY) confides, "I don't know about you, but watching anti-American globalists plot against our Constitution makes me sick ... Ultimately, UN bureaucrats will stop at nothing to register, ban and CONFISCATE firearms owned by private citizens like YOU."

> Of course, the treaty only deals with international sales - but if you're going to side with Iran, Syria and North Korea, you have to make stuff up and target your appeal to the gullible and fearful.

> Both Reagan and Thatcher were divisive figures, and their policies arguably caused great harm. They governed, though, in service to their countries, not to corporate benefactors. When they spoke of the advance of freedom and fall of Communism, they appealed to our best nature and highest aspirations. When protecting accessibility to militarized firepower for the deranged here and abroad, however, the only option is to appeal to the basest fears and lowest common denominator.

> And regardless of politics, current efforts to prevent measures from even coming to the floor for debate and a vote cannot be described

MARGARET THATCHER, A GREG Welborn HERO FOR OUR TIME

With the death this week of Margaret Thatcher, from home. former Prime Minister of England, the West has lost one of its greatest leaders. She not only saved her nation, but provided support for our own with Britain when President Reagan as he toiled to save America from the depths of collapse and despair which came along. England had already beset England. For this, we, as did not respect its Americans, owe her a debt of gratitude which we own traditions, can never repay, and it is for this that I dedicate or principles. this week's column.

Margaret Thatcher came to power as Prime Minister in 1979 after Britain's "winter of discontent". More than a political slogan, the freedoms, well-being and place in the world. The term aptly described a time when everything in England was falling apart. There was nothing left to cherish or celebrate. Inflation hit double-digit levels, unemployment skyrocketed, the economy was shrinking, 98% income tax rates had driven entrepreneurs to the brink of collective bankruptcy, the public unions had paralyzed a nation with an almost year-long strike, and the already stationed in Eastern Europe. Everyone military had retrenched from guarantor of pax Britannica to beggar of spare parts to keep its jeeps rolling. Britain was written off by most leaders in the West and East, alike, as ungovernable and a

Into this stepped a woman of indomitable spirit and unflinching faith in the average citizen. Externally, she also faced an ascending Soviet Union which threatened to overrun and subsume Western Europe politically and morally, if not actually militarily. Many in Western Europe had simply given up on themselves, but not Margaret Thatcher.

Margaret Thatcher knew instinctively that freedom was not only good for the soul but good for the success of a nation as well. In her own memoir she commented on "the great complex romance of international trade which recruited people from all over the world to ensure that a family in Grantham could have on its table rice from India, coffee form Kenya, and sugar from the West Indies". She loosened the regulations and taxes that were strangling her nation, and she killed inflation. She privatized scores of industries, thus turning losers, which required support from the treasury, into winners, which contributed to the treasury with new tax revenues born of economic success and growth. Her actions turned massive government deficits into a surplus by the time she left office. Along the way, she allowed the average citizen to become stockholders, and thus stakeholders, in British industry, thereby allowing them to enjoy the fruits of economic recovery many times larger than what ever could have been received from government handouts had the government retained control and ownership of more than a third of the economy.

Thatcher was tested keenly when the military junta running Argentina decided to take advantage of what they perceived to be the weakened state of Britain's military capabilities. Perhaps they were right and, under a leader of less courage than Margaret Thatcher, they might have succeeded in their invasion of the Falkland not abandon the rights and freedoms of British citizens living on British soil. To many politicians, the plight of this small band of citizens wouldn't have been worth much of a political fight, let alone a full scale military fight thousands of miles exactly what was wrong own traditions, history many politicians had shown in the past their willingness to compromise with the public's world's bad guys and bullies noticed, but they also noticed that Margaret Thatcher was different.

Margaret Thatcher stood up against unions at home, the junta in Argentina, and the international left which sought to derail the placement of U.S. cruise missiles in England and Europe to counter the Russian SS-20 missiles underestimated Thatcher and came away from the experience more deeply respecting her strength and Britain's reinvigorated place on the world stage.

To her countrymen, Thatcher rescued a dying economy. She turned economic contraction into U.S.-style growth rates which lifted incomes at all levels. At every economic strata, personal income rose. Internationally, though, Thatcher's contribution dwarfed her domestic Margaret Thatcher dissented strongly from the conventional wisdom of the day, which held that accommodation with the Soviet Union was the only viable strategy. 40+ plus years of such a cynical view had consigned a generation, and millions, of Eastern Europeans to a life of misery and neglect. The Soviets, like the Argentines, thought she would also blink and concede critical points. They, like the Argentines, were wrong. While she was willing to deal with the Soviets, she was nonetheless strident in defending the principles of freedom and insisting that the Soviet Union could be defeated. No longer, she offered, would the millions living behind the iron curtain be consigned to poverty and serfdom. She pushed the case for constructive engagement and while vigorously pushing the moral and political case for freedom. The fall of the Berlin Wall and the peaceful dismantling of the Soviet Union are as attributable to Margaret Thatcher's courage and conviction as they are to Ronald Reagan's.

Margaret Thatcher came on to the political stage at one of its most trying moments – a time when the principles of the West were threatened and mocked. She left that stage with the cause of freedom and democracy once again a goal to which millions can realistically aspire.

PART III: "AMNESTY BY ANY OTHER NAME IS STILL AMNESTY..."

Obama's proposed Comprehensive Immigration immigrant visas by 111,800." Reform and why Ameri- Another key element to Rep.

cans should oppose it. It is based on information from a variety of sources including the Cato Institute, Center for Immigration Studies, Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR), NumbersUSA, and Pew Hispanic Center.

Former Attorney General Ed Meese III concluded his March 24, 2006 New York Times Op-Ed, "Amnesty by Any Other Name is still Amnesty..." with some very wise advice to President Bush and future administrations:

"The fair and sound policy is to give those who are here illegally the opportunity to correct their status by returning to their country of origin and getting in line with everyone else. This, along with serious enforcement and control of the illegal inflow at the border — a combination of incentives and disincentives — will significantly reduce over time our population of illegal immigrants."

As I said last week, If President Obama really wants to reform our immigration system he should end "Chain Migration" and the "Visa Lottery" before any kind of immigration reform, comprehensive or otherwise, is even considered. End Chain Migration

NumbersUSA defines Chain Migration as "the endless and often-snowballing chains of foreign nationals who are allowed to immigrate because the law allows citizens and lawful permanent residents to bring in their extended, non-nuclear family members. It is the primary mechanism that has caused legal immigration in this country to quadruple from about 250,000 per year in the 1950s and 1960s to more than one million a year since 1990."

One bill currently being considered by Congress is "The Nuclear Priority Act" (H.R.692) Introduced by Rep. Phil Gingrey in February 2011. H.R.692 would end chain migration (as recommended by the bi-partisan Barbara Jordan Commission in 1995). Rep. Gingrey's bill would::

(e.g., siblings, married sons and daughters of citizens, etc.);

"Eliminate the parents category and instead create a renewable 5-year visa class for parents of U.S. citizens;

"Require U.S. sons and daughters to provide satisfactory proof that they can financially support their immigrant parents and include proof of

This is the third in a series health care coverage for the parents while they of articles about President are residing in the United States;

"Reduce the annual number of family-sponsored

Another key element to Rep. Gingrey's bill is that "immigrant parents residing in the United States through the renewable 5-year visa would not be eligible to work in the United States." End Visa Lottery
The Visa Lottery Program is managed by the Department of State and awards up to 55,000 permanent resident visas a year to applicants from countries with relatively low rates of immigration to the United States compared to other countries, based on data from the previous five years.

According to FAIR, the Visa Lottery grants visas "based on pure luck to people regardless of family ties, skills, or education, exposing the country to national security threats such as espionage, terrorism, and criminal refuge."

In 1995, the bipartisan Barbara Jordan Commission recommended:

'The elimination of the lottery, since it serves no national interest. Yet it remains on the books

There are bills offered in both the House and the Senate that would eliminate the Visa Lottery.

Rep. Bob Goodlatte (R-Va.) has introduced the "SAFE for America Act" (H.R.704) that would:

"Reduce overall legal immigration numbers by approximately 50,000 per year."

Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) has introduced the "Strengthening Our Commitment to Legal Immigration and America's Security Act" (S.B.332) that would:

"Require the Department of State to submit recommendations to the House and Senate Judiciary Committees detailing changes to the Visa Lottery program that would reduce fraud and abuse;

"Eliminate the extended family visa categories" "Eliminate the Visa Lottery unless the changes are made to the program per the recommendations of the State Department's report.

'Potentially reduce overall legal immigration levels by up to 50,000."

Do not be fooled. Amnesty by any other name is still amnesty. Comprehensive Immigration Reform is amnesty -- pure and simple.

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

WE NEVER NEEDED ARMED GUARDS, WE HAD MRS. AMMON

The Gracious Mistress of such a thing? the Parsonage and I were watching television listening to a news report and I simply broke out into laughter. "What are you laughing at?" my wife asked.

to school we didn't need any armed guards, we had Mrs. Ammon and nobody crossed her."

The news report went on to say how they were trying to put armed guards at every school in our country. I suppose that is a good idea, I do not know all the ins and outs of the politicalness of that report. Everything these days seems to have some kind of a political angle to it. Now that political angle to it. ical angle is intruding itself into the public school

This is all an attempt to protect our school children. I am all for that.

I was thinking, however, that when I was a youngster we did not need that sort of thing. We had Mrs. Ammon and her infamous hickory stick. Very few people remember a time when a teacher had, as one of her tools for education, a hickory stick and knew how to wield it, and wield it they

Somebody may ask how I know about that. Very simply. I am the product of a teacher wielding the hickory stick. It is hard now to remember the occasion that called for the application of that hickory stick. Actually, there was more than one occasion calling for such teacher and student

The old saying was that our teacher would apply the "Board of Education" to the "Seat of Learning." Believe me when I say, I earned a degree in

Somebody will say, "Things have changed."

I will agree that things have changed, but most things have not changed for the better. Back in 'the day" when I was a member of the public education system, the teachers were in charge. A basic rule in our house prevailed, "If you get a paddling in school, you get a paddling at home." It was assumed the teacher was right.

I distinctly remember my first interaction with my teacher in this regard. How can you forget

SOON WE WON'T BE ABLE TO DISTINGUISH OUR SCHOOLS FROM

OUR PRISONS.

At that time, teachers were too busy to put up with any kind of fooling around in a classroom. Do not get me wrong, my teacher made it fun most of the time. For the ones who, like me, took it too far, she knew how to stop it dead in its tracks.

"I'm just thinking of Mrs. Ammon. When I went "Mr. Snyder," the teacher would say in a very stern knew what was to follow.

> "Mr. Snyder, please go to the principal's office and I will join you shortly.

> Oh boy. Those familiar words bring back haunting memories of my visit to the principal's office. You can be sure; Mrs. Ammon would not come into the principal's office, spank you and then go back to her class. On some occasions, I would have preferred her to spank me and get it over with.

> The first thing she had to do was explain to me why what I did was wrong and disruptive to the class. Then, she had to explain to me how this paddling I was about the cat was going to hurt her more than it did me.

> For the life of me, I could never figure out where it hurt her more than it did me. I knew exactly where it hurt me and for the rest of the day it would be quite difficult for me to sit down in my chair. Not only did my posterior glow in pain, but the snickers of my fellow students were even worse.

> At the time of the application of the hickory stick, I really did not like Mrs. Ammon. Looking back, I have a different perspective. I now know that she really had an interest in me as a person. She was trying to discipline me in ways in which I needed discipline from someone like her.

> Years later, I went back and visited my old teacher, Mrs. Ammon. I took to her some books I had written and published. She said she remembered me, I really do not know if she did or not. I had to do one thing and that was to thank her.

"I want to thank you, Mrs. Ammon, for teaching me to read and to write." Then I handed her my books. She seemed to be so very happy, but not as happy as I was. This teacher made a difference in my life that I did not realize until I was older.

One thing Mrs. Ammon taught me was that I should not get away with anything. There is a moment of accountability everybody must face. Mrs. Ammon was making sure that I was facing up to the realities of life before I did too much damage to my

It is sad that the politics have taken over our education system today. It is sad that we do not have any Mrs. Ammons with their hickory sticks.

When I think of Mrs. Ammon I think of what Solomon writes, "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes" (Proverbs 13:24 KJV).

It is my opinion that we need more Mrs. Ammons in our school classrooms and less, a lot less, politics.

STUART Tolchin......On LIFE

I'm relieved that I don't have to watch College Basketball for awhile.

Speaking of College Basketball, this year I went to a UCLA game at Pauley Pavilion mainly to see how they had refurbished the place. I had gone to the very first game held there which was I think in 1965.

At the game I attended this year the half-time ceremonies involved the honoring of a famous UCLA player of the past, Keith Wilkes - now known as Jamal Wilkes. Seated in the front rows were other UCLA greats of course, including Lew Alcindor, now known to all as Kareem Abdul- Jabbar. There, too, were other UCLA legends like Bill Walton and over on the other side was the coach of the opposition Oregon State Beavers, Craig Robinson, the brother-in-law of President Obama. Sure, all these men have pretty interesting stories but the guy I'd like to know more about is Craig Robinson and the rest of his family.

Craig and Michelle Robinson (Mrs. Obama) were both raised in South Side Chicago, just like me. Believe me, that was not an easy place to grow up. As I've written before, my mom and Dad were in the grocery business operating a market aptly named Stuart (that's me in case you forgot) Food Mart. Maybe being the child of a grocer or a retail merchant has some importance. Margaret Thatcher was the child of a grocer while Ronald Reagan's father owned a shoe store. Perhaps being the child of hard-working retailers who often work 12 hours a day asserts a certain kind of influence on a child? I was one of the few white kids in my class and, by the time I was in the fifth grade, I had already been double-promoted twice. I've always thought that there was some strange motivation behind the School skipping me because I was potentially so disruptive in the class. I was pretty friendless, I think, and tried to connect in the classroom by frequently raising my hand to question the teacher. I have three questions I would say, and the second question has 4 parts. Today I still have questions that have many parts and I have defended the oppressed for most for most of my Legal career.

I am certain that all of the experiences we have while growing up have a great deal to do with who we become as adults. From my own experience I can say that South Side Chicago Schools were not very good and most kids just didn't take school very seriously. It was probably the same at Michele and Craig's school also. Nevertheless, Craig and Michelle both were superb students and were later star performers at Ivy League Colleges. What experiences lead to their success? I have always assumed that their mother, Mrs. Robinson and the example of their crippled father, who kept working despite his disability, were strong positive influences.? Mrs. Robinson now lives in the White House and receives little publicity, but she is there to help raise the kids. How will Sasha and Malia turn out, and how important is the influence of mothers and grandmothers? I have always thought that parental influence is incredibly crucial and that the best way of judging an individual's character is to see the way their children

Today I am in the midst of reading this book, The Soul Code, In Search Of Character And Calling authored by James Hillman, which completely refutes this idea. Hilton notes that contemporary psychologists and educators all seem to agree that parental influence is extremely important—they are all wrong he says. The book presents his "acorn theory" which states as a metaphor, I think, that there exists at birth; or even prior to birth, an acorn within each individual that contains the true destiny and talents of an individual. Life is about resisting all the outside influences like education and parents and media and friends which distract one from their true calling.

As I present the theory it may sound silly, but Hillman keeps talking about the tiny acorn that controls the destiny of the mighty oak and it's very convincing. Experiences along the way are also important in the same way that the amount of sunlight, the type of ground and the amount of rain influence the growth of the tree. The book asks the reader to drop all preconceptions and judgments and through an examination of many biographies makes the point that most everyone is blocked and misdirected by the misguided efforts of parents and Education, which obscure one's consciousness of true destiny. This is the reason we take drugs, get divorced, waste time watching frivolous sports, keep fighting senseless wars while ignoring pressing environmental problems and are on the path to a kind of total destruction.

I find the book so disturbing that I have trouble finishing it, but I haven't given up. There is still time to find some answers and perhaps Mankind can survive for a few more millennia. I wonder if that's our destiny.
