LEGISLATION TO ENSURE

CITIES CAN QUALIFY FOR

FEDERAL DISASTER RELIEF

Washington, DC – Today, Reps. Adam Schiff (D-Burbank) and Judy Chu (D-El Monte) introduced legislation that would fix the problems that Pasadena and other cities in the would fix the problems that Pasadena and other cities in the Southern California faced in qualifying for federal disaster relief from the devastating windstorms of November and December 2011. Currently, small and medium sized communities located in large states like California have a particularly difficult time reaching the state-wide and countywide thresholds needed to qualify for federal disaster relief. This legislation would direct the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to take into account the ability of small and medium sized communities in large counties and in large states to recover from natural disasters.

"After the devastating windstorms two years ago, medium-sized cities like Pasadena and Temple City were unable to access essential federal disaster relief merely because they are in a large county and state," said Rep. Adam Schiff. "Natural disasters don't choose to fall only in cities that are able to apply for federal assistance – they strike indiscrimi-nately and without warning. We need to reform the process so small and medium-sized cities in more populous states like California are not penalized when it comes to getting much-needed disaster aid. While this legislation won't help the Foothills recoup money they had to spend recovering

the Foothills recoup money they had to spend recovering from the last storm, it will hopefully prevent that from happening to these and other communities in the future.'

"The American people deserve aid in the wake of natural disasters, regardless of where they live," said Rep. Judy Chu.

"The notion that some communities are more deserving of federal dollars than others based on the size of the county they are located in is simply unacceptable. That's why I'm proud to introduce legislation to ensure no community faces the same bureaucratic hurdles that cities in the San Gabriel Valley faced following the windstorms of 2011. Just as natural disasters don't choose their victims, our government

"The windstorms in Pasadena cost the community over $14 million in damages at a time when we could least afford it," said Pasadena Mayor Bill Bogaard. "While we thought that we were deserving of federal disaster assistance, our level of damages did not meet current FEMA thresholds. We are pleased that this measure would make it more equitable for areas like Pasadena - small and medium-sized communities in high population states - when they are seeking vital disaster assistance in the future. We are grateful for Congressman Schiff and Congresswoman Chu's efforts on these

Specifically, the bill would direct FEMA to take into account more than just the county-wide per capita threshold in evaluating a governor's request under the "localized impacts" factor in the federal regulations. FEMA would consider the damage suffered by communities with up to 250,000 people located in counties with at least 1 million people in states with at least 5 million people, if the damage sustained by those communities is in excess of 10 percent of the communities' General Fund or if the damage exceeds $100 per capita in those communities. In Pasadena alone, the damage

This legislation would make it easier for FEMA to award federal disaster relief under the expanded "localized impacts" criteria for a small number of communities that fail to receive federal disaster relief if they do not meet the statewide and county-wide damage threshold levels because the calculation of these thresholds on a per capita basis punishes these communities for being located in large counties in large states. It would help make it much easier for communities, such as Pasadena and Glendale, to receive federal disaster relief if they were to suffer levels of damage similar to what our communities saw in the wake of the windstorm.

More than six dozen women turned out for the 44th Sierra Madre Woman's Club Fashion Show Luncheon, themed "Sailing into Spring". Eight models, from teens to seniors, strutted their stuff at Essick House, the Woman's Club's historic Clubhouse. The clothes, jewelry, handbags and accessories were all provided by Arcadia's Magnolia Boutique, with owner Karen Crisci acting as mistress of ceremonies and describing each of the outfits for the crowd, while Eunis Banis played piano in the background. Standing in the photo above are the models for the fashon show.

Woman's Club president Mary Carney welcomed everyone and Liz Levine offered an invocation before event chair Melissa Stute introduced Ms. Crisci and the show got underway. For more than an hour, nine models showed off the fashions to the oohs and ahs of the ladies of the Club. Once the show was done, everyone enjoyed a delicious lunch of chicken breast with a lemon sauce and capers served over rice, caesar salad, and a roll. Hot peach cobbler with ice cream finished off the meal.

Following lunch, drawings were held to determine the lucky winners of the centerpiece door prizes, each of which were created by Sara Menjivar and featured live fish. In addition, numerous opportunity drawings of prizes from local merchants were given away, but the ladies seemed most excited about the $50 money hat.

JOIN THE CITY TEAM - APPLY TO BE A CITY COMMISSIONER

We want you to be a part of our City Team!

The Sierra Madre City Council encourages citizen participation in its decision-making process through the use of citizen commissions. Currently, there are five citizen commissions established by the Council to advise and assist them in dealing with specific problems.

The advisory bodies study a variety of topics in detail. After gathering all pertinent information, hearing arguments, and weighing values, they recommend to the Council what they consider the best action to take. In certain situations, commissions are empowered to make specific decisions, subject to appeal to the Council. Public notices on all commissions are prepared in compliance of the Maddy Act.

Sierra Madre Search and Rescue Log

As our local weather begins to improve, we are seeing an increase in search and rescue activity. The Sierra Madre Search and Rescue (SMSR) Team responded to eleven individual calls for assistance in April including a multi-day search in Orange County.

Missing Hikers, Trabuco Canyon, Orange County: The Team was requested on April 2nd to support a multi-agency request by the Orange County Sheriff to assist in the search for two missing teenage hikers in the Trabuco Canyon area. SMSR joined other Los Angeles County search and rescue teams on the second day of what would become a high profile 4 day search. SMSR personnel were deployed on a number of search assignments in very difficult terrain. Thick, 6-10 foot high brush and steep terrain made for difficult search conditions. Several assignments involved Team members being inserted via hoist from rescue helicopters. Additional personnel filled key roles in the Incident Command Post (ICP). The first missing hiker was successfully located late on April 3rd and was airlifted to a local hospital. The second hiker was located on a cliff on April 4th and was rescued via hoist by Los Angeles County Sheriff's Air-5 rescue helicopter. She was transported to the UCI Medical Center for treatment. The operation was secured at 4:15 p.m. on the 4th, almost 60 hours after SMSR personnel had joined the search.

Injured Hikers, Multiple Locations, Chantry Flat: At 12:30 p.m. on April 21st, SMSR, the Sierra Madre Fire Department and Los Angeles County Fire Department responded to reports of an injured hiker at Hermit Falls below Chantry Flat. Team members and fire department paramedics made their way to the incident location while LACoFD 'copter 19 set-up for a hoist rescue. While enroute to Hermit Falls, Team personnel made contact with other hikers who indicated that there was another injured hiker located near Cabin 16 approximately 1 mile below Chantry Flat. The incident command staff coordinating the response from the Chantry parking lot reconfigured the response to account for this second incident. Personnel made their way to the second subject while 'copter 19 performed a hoist rescue of the hiker at Hermit Falls. She was transported to the helispot (a natural or improved takeoff and landing area intended for temporary or occasional helicopter use) above the Chantry parking area where she was transferred to an ambulance and transported to Arcadia Methodist Hospital. While the first hiker was being transported, field crews worked to stabilize the second hiker. The thick canopy of trees limited the ability of rescuers to use the helicopter to evacuate the hiker. Ground crews transported him approximately ½ mile to a point where 'copter 19 was able to perform a hoist extraction. Due to the severity of the subject's injuries, he was transported to LA County-USC Hospital. While not requiring transport to a hospital, a family member of the Hermit Falls hiker required assistance back to Chantry Flat due to an ankle injury. As has been noted in previous search and rescue activity reports, it is not unusual for additional information to come to light that forces a change in response to an emergency. The ability to effectively manage a dynamic situation is crucial to a successful outcome. The call was secured at 3 p.m.

For over 60 years the all-volunteer Sierra Madre Search and Rescue team has been responding to calls for help in the local mountains and beyond. Funded entirely by private donations, SMSR provides a range of public programs on wilderness safety in addition to its search and rescue activities. The Team never charges for any of its services.

For more information, including how to arrange a wilderness safety demonstration for your school or group, visit www.smsr.org.

For the period of April 29-May 5, 2013

Tuesday April 30, 2013

A traffic collision occurred at 3:30pm on Baldwin Avenue north of Montecito Avenue. A vehicle pulling away from the curb collided with another vehicle travelling north on Baldwin Avenue. No injuries were reported and only minor vehicle damage was sustained.

Thursday May 2, 2013

At 1am, a vehicle travelling south on Hermosa Avenue approaching Sierra Madre Boulevard ran off the roadway and collided with a tree. When police arrived, the driver was conscious but incoherent. The investigation revealed that the driver had taken new prescription medication and may have caused an adverse effect. The driver was transported to Huntington Memorial Hospital for treatment. The vehicle sustained major damage.

Between 1am and noon, unknown suspects entered a residence in the 100 block of East Alegria Avenue through an unlocked sliding glass door on the side of the structure. The suspect (s) took a laptop computer and other small electronic devices then exited via the same door. The investigation revealed the suspect (s) may have made entry attempts at three other window locations as screens had been removed and dirt on the window sills disturbed. A neighbor reported a work crew in the area that morning and the investigation is pursuing that lead.

Sunday May 5, 2013

At 10am, the security operations center that monitors the ATM for Bank of the West contacted the Department. The operator had been monitoring activity at the branch located at 100 west Sierra Madre Boulevard and became suspicious that a "skimmer" had been installed on the ATM at that location. When officers arrived, the described suspects were no longer in the area. A technician arrived, examined the ATM and found a skimming device. That ATM was immediately taken off-line. The skimmer was booked as evidence by the Department and video surveillance will be

Department, numerous faith based organizations, and many non-profit and business sectors have joined together to facilitate the first Pasadena Gun Buy Back Program and Peace Source Fair, being held today. The goal behind our efforts is to remove unwanted firearms from the community, to educate the public on proactive gun safety, and to promote a safer community through the showcasing of area groups involved in violence prevention, intervention and resource assistance. During the Peace- Source Fair, civic, community and religious leaders will share insight into on-going efforts to reduce violence in our community.

The Pasadena Police Department will host the Gun Buy Back Program between 11am- 3 pm in front of the police station, 207 N. Garfield Avenue. Attendees will be asked to remain in their vehicles with all firearms stored unloaded and in the trunk of their vehicles. Vehicle traffic will be directed southbound only on Garfield Avenue from Walnut Street. Law enforcement personnel will contact drivers in their cars, safely remove all firearms from the vehicle and after disposing of the firearms in a receptacle, deliver gift cards back to the driver, who will be directed out of the processing area southbound toward Ramona Avenue.

Gift certificates will be issued as follows: $50.00 for a nonworking firearm, $100.00 for working handguns, rifles or shotguns, and $200.00 for functioning military style assault weapons. Weapons will be evaluation by on-scene firearms experts before gift cards are issued.

The Peace-Source Fair is scheduled between 11 am - 2 pm and situated on Thurgood Marshall between Garfield Avenue and Euclid Avenue, north of Pasadena City Hall. The fair will feature speakers, live music, resource tables, and food trucks. Parking is available at Euclid Avenue and Walnut Street or Euclid Avenue and Union Street.

MONROVIA SAYS "THANK YOU" TO ITS AWESOME FIRE DEPARTMENT

This past Tuesday, there was a lot of business taken care of at the Monrovia City Council Meeting. Becky Shevlin was elected Mayor Pro Tem, May proclaimed "Older American Month", and Monrovia Canyon Park's #1 Volunteer Cajsa Larrson was honored as "2013 Older American of the Year". Rebecca Romero, Community Services, revealed that Cazsa has volunteered 10,000+ hours and her efforts include trail and facility maintenance, park programming and removal of invasive plants.

However the evening belonged To Monrovia Fire Department and a special group of First Responders to the Madison Fire. Chief Chris Donovan reminded attendees of the Madison Fire in the foothills of Monrovia. It began on April 20, 2013 and was the largest wildfire in the last fifty years. Battling the blaze were 250 personnel from 31 Fire Departments; Rio Hondo College-hose removal and Schaefer Ambulance also assisted. The Chief then spoke of his personnel gathered at the meeting.

They were the First Responders, who quickly arrived on the scene and valiantly fought to keep the blaze contained. The adverse wind conditions-I vividly remember that day-prevented that. But it did not prevent them from working tirelessly to save many homes. The fires raged for six days, and afterwards several residents hung huge banners in gratitude for the First Responders from Monrovia and ALL the personnel from various agencies who assisted in the effort. Chief Donovan proudly introduced the First Responder group and told each man's role. He also mentioned that a few of the first responders weren't present at the meeting, because they were on duty that night. For that reason, here is a complete list of these fine men. They included Deputy Chief Scott Haberle, Division Chief Ron Pelham, Captain Michael Cate, Captain Jeremy Sanchez, Engineer Chris Huson, Engineer Ben Bagheri, Engineer Dave Phillips, Firefighter/Paramedic Dustin Leddy, Firefighter/Paramedic Frank Spencer, Firefighter/Paramedic Anthony Gallegos, Firefighter/Paramedic Jeremy Phipps, Firefighter/ Paramedic Jacob Clemens, Firefighter Hal Kaliman, Firefighter Mike Bailey, and Firefighter Ernie Fire Chief Donovan mentioned all the agencies that assisted and shared that information with me. The Fire Agencies assisting Monrovia were Los Angeles County Fire, Los Angeles City Fire, Arcadia, Pasadena, San Gabriel, San Marino, Monterey Park, Alhambra, Montebello, Glendale, Burbank, Compton, Culver City, Torrance, Beverly Hills, USFS, CAL Fire Protection, CAL EMA, Ventura County, Santa Barbará, Montecito, Anaheim, Brea, Fullerton, San Bernardino City, Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga, Corona, Chino Valley Fire Protection District, Orange County Fire Authority, Rio Hondo College and Schaefer Ambulance. The Police Agencies who worked with Monrovia Fire Department included Monrovia Police Department, Los Angeles County Sheriff, California Highway Patrol, CAL POLY, Claremont, Covina, West Covina, El Monte, Glendora, Irwindale, La Verne, Pomona, Sierra Madre and West Covina. A very impressive list too. Chief Donovan also mentioned that there was assistance from several community groups and area residents. On May 21, there will be a special Appreciation Ceremony for all who assisted in the Madison Fire effort and more information will be released by the paper when it is available.

ENVIRONMENTAL SURVIVAL How We Affect Our Environment

[Nyerges is the author of numerous books, including How To Survive Anywhere, and Extreme Simplicity. He has led survival classes since 1974. For information about his books and classes, contact him at www. Christopher Nyerges.com, or Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CA 90041]

the environment ---- have a profound effect upon our survival. You may not notice it right away, maybe not even for decades, but when we make our decisions and choices based upon "giving our shareholders the greatest return," and other strictly financial considerations, we often lose in the long run. Or our children "lose" as a result of poor air, water, and overcrowding.

When great "natural disasters" occur, we tend to call these "acts of God." Indeed, the earth moves and shakes and blows and chills and heats, and goes through all of its changes. Man does not control these changes. Earthquakes, floods, tsunamis, fires, droughts, ice ages, high winds, volcanic eruptions, etc., have been with us since the beginning of memory, and will continue to be with us.

While we cannot stop the forces of nature, we must begin to see how our actions (and inactions) absolutely exacerbate the effects of these natural forces, and definitely affect our ability to survive.

Take drought, for example. Do our actions have any effect on drought conditions? Absolutely! Some have attempted to prove that the great drought of the 1930s, and the resultant Dust Bowl era, was the result of poor farming practices. In order to maximize farming areas, and to farm with the greatest of convenience, trees were cut down, and the soil was not properly fertilized.

Without the trees to do their soil-protecting, and with barren top soil due to the farming methods, the land had no life and the dry winds blew it away. Act of God? Hardly. It was the result of the ignorance of man on a large scale. We create desertification on a small scale, right here in Eagle Rock, when we follow the strict dictates of the fire department when they demand that we denude the soil down to the bare earth. Such patches of soil are hotter than planted soil, and lead to erosion.

Heavy rains are common after the drought and fire cycle is played out. Such rains often do

Our actions upon result in flooding and landslides. Though we can environment -- call heavy rain an "act of God," the effects can be even in our backyards lesser or greater, depending upon what we have done to the land. In some cases, houses should never have been built on steep hillsides, since the building of the houses requires cutting down the trees and reshaping the terrain. With the trees gone, and much of the land paved over, the water must go somewhere when it rains. The trees and the soil can process a fair amount of the water, but with trees gone, and no way for water to percolate into the soil, the water flows downhill, creating disasters for those who live in the mud's path.

And when we have removed all grass and brush cover due to the extreme dictates of the fire department's supposed "brush control" regulations, we set the stage for erosion, and eliminate the natural cover for animals - and these principles apply even here in Sierra Madre! EARTHQUAKES

A major earthquake could occur at any time along any of the major faultlines throughout the world. While we cannot stop the shaking, we can realize that we live in such an area, and plan to minimize the impact upon our family's life in the aftermath, such as storing water, organizing friends, having knowledge of first aid, etc.

And some earthquakes may indeed have been caused by the hand of man. There are some scientists who believe that the Long Beach, California earthquake of 1930 was the direct result of over-pumping oil from the underground reservoirs there.

It would be difficult to plan for some disasters like a large comet hitting your neighborhood. Assuming you survived, so much would be devastated that "waiting for help" would not be a viable option. If you valued life, you would have lived your life in accord with "higher principles," and you would have developed skills that now might actually be useful in the post-apocalyptic world. To read a possible scenario of a large comet hitting the earth, read Lucifer's Hammer (by Larry Niven and Jerry Pournelle, 1977).

I continue this line of thinking in the latter chapters of my "How to Survive Anywhere" book, which is available at bookstores, at Amazon, and at www.ChristopherNyerges.com.

ARCADIA, MONROVIA ROTARIANS BUILD GARDEN FOR LOCAL YOUTH

by Anne Donofrio-Holter

The Arcadia and Monrovia Rotary Clubs have joined forces to build a sustainable garden at the Monrovia Boys and Girls Club. With funds donated by both clubs, along with a Rotary District 5300 Foundation Lefler grant, the project will enable children to grow fresh fruit and vegetables.

"I had heard in the news about hunger in the United States with numbers higher than many would expect, especially for children," said Dr. Brad Miller, Arcadia Rotary past president. "Then after reading about community gardens sponsored by Rotary clubs, the idea came together."

After failing to secure land for the garden in Arcadia, Maryann Lutz, Rotarian and mayor of Monrovia, suggested they try the Monrovia Boys and Girls Club.

"Not so much serving the whole community, but serving a specific community, underprivileged kids," said Miller. "John Wilson, CEO of Monrovia Boys and Girls Club, had initiated a community garden in a prior non-profit he was involved with. We connected and it was a natural fit."

According to Arcadia Rotary President Eric Barter, in just half a day, "with a little sweat and muscle from 25 Rotarians," phase one of the project was completed which consisted of the construction of three planter boxes.

"The Monrovia Rotary Club enjoyed working side by side with the Arcadia Rotary Club on this project. It was a day filled with laughter, hard work and fellowship," said Monrovia Rotary Club President Julie Roybal. "We are all excited to see our work manifest to the betterment of the Boys and Girls Club and it will be wonderful to see the fruits of the kids' harvest."

"I am pleased to see several organizations working together for the good of youth," said Barter. "The City of Monrovia for allowing us to use the land and supporting the project, the Arcadia and Monrovia Rotary clubs working together, the Arcadia arboretum for their guidance on the raised bed design and Rotary District 5300 for helping us with the funding."

Phase two of the project is an irrigation system and phase three, a covering for the planter boxes. "Then the kids can start planting," said Barter. "As Rotarians, these are the best projects - hands on. Together we can make a difference is the mantra for my year as president and this project is another fine example."

Spring is in full swing and for teenagers everywhere, that means preparations for prom are underway. This prom season, the California Office of Traffic Safety (OTS) and the Monrovia Police Department are reminding all students and parents that safety behind the wheel is especially important on prom night. Lifelong memories of prom night should be of good times, not tragedy. Young drivers, especially new teen drivers, are particularly susceptible to crashes; besed on miles drivens the fatality. crashes; based on miles driven, the fatality rate for drivers aged 16 to 19 is four times higher than for older, more experienced drivers. # THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show IRON MAN 3

With nearly all movies that have several sequels, the franchise usually runs out of interesting ideas quickly. That, luckily, is not the case with Marvel and the Iron Man franchise. They have managed to keep their characters intriguing and their plots fresh and original.

Taking place after the Avengers (if you haven't yet seen it, watch Avengers before seeing this movie), Tony Stark (Robert Downey Jr.) finds himself not able to sleep, spending night after night in his lab. But when an old and unexpected enemy raises his head, Stark must gather everything he's got to protect the things and people he loves.

There really isn't too much I can say about this movie without spoiling it. What I will say is that while 'Dark Knight WWW.CLAIRBOURN.ORG/SUMMER/ ed to serve as board vice presi-Rises' moved its plot along with small one-on-one character dent. ## WILDLIFE WEBCAMS-A VOYEUR'S VIRTUAL PARADISE!

I have never considered myself to be much of a voyeur, mainly because I have never felt the urge to spy on people in the privacy of their own homes, or anywhere else for that matter. However, I must admit that I will the interesting intimate activities of wild enimals when else for that matter. However, I must admit that I will allow myself the privilege of nosing in on the interesting intimate activities of wild animals, when given the opportunity. Being a virtual wildlife voyeur is a relatively recent development for me. It all started a couple of years ago, when I found out I could tune in to a variety of live webcam internet broadcasts that show real time footage of birds and other wild animals carrying on with their day-to-day activities, and I have been an avid voyeur ever since.

My first experience with spying on wildlife species via the internet was when I visited a website (sportsmansparadiseonline.com) that someone had posted on my Facebook timeline. The live video was streaming from a hidden camera affixed to the outside of an owl box that a guy in Oceanside had erected in his back yard. The stars of this particular "feature film" were a couple of adult barn owls named Sydney and Mel. It showed the two huge love birds nesting and mating at first, then Sydney laying her eggs, the eggs eventually hatching, the hatchlings growing strong enough to fly and ultimately fledging out of the nest, and it all happened right before my very eyes! It was truly an amazing thing to witness those baby owls hatch and grow, then fly away as if I were right there in the nest with them. To me, this is technology at its very best! I learned so much about barn owls from watching that webcam video, and I decided to bookmark the website for easy access in the future. Now I find myself checking in on various wildlife webcams at least once a day to see what's happening with my new feathered and furry four-legged friends.

Another remarkable webcam broadcast that I frequently enjoy viewing is that of an eagle nest located on Santa Catalina Island. There are actually two eagles' nests on the island that a virtual voyeur can tune in to, and both of them show the enormous, gorgeous adult birds come and go as they do throughout the day, while the baby eagles sit waiting for the treats mom and dad bring home after a hard day of hunting. Because it is so rare that I ever get to see eagles in the wild, I find this particular webcam to be one of the most fascinating. I try to tune in when I think it might be feeding time, which is typically in the early morning hours before sunrise, or just after the sun goes down. The "treats" those eaglets wait so patiently for are nothing like the kind we humans care to eat, as you might imagine, so viewing at feeding time might not be everyone's cup of tea . I had hoped to see the little eaglets fledge last year, but unfortunately I missed out because I was simply too busy to log on, but hopefully I will have that privilege this year. There are several other eagle nest webcams located in various places throughout the world linked to the website as well.

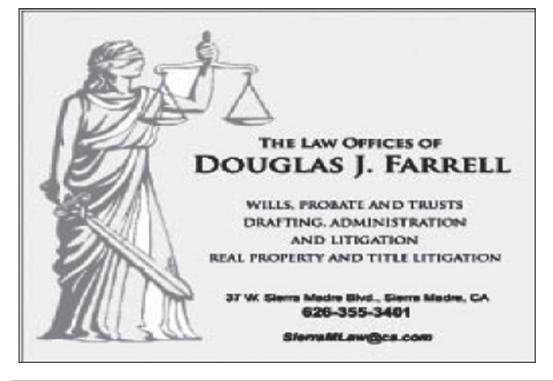

Other live webcams that are posted on Sportsman's Paradise Online include a pristine wild Kestrel nest in Washington state, showing an adult Kestrel laying on an egg soon to become a baby bird, a natural den in Minnesota where you'll see "Lily" the bear coming and going at various times throughout the day, and "Woody" the wood duck nesting in a man-made box waiting patiently for her hatchlings to arrive. The list goes on and on, and I can't seem to get enough of watching those beautiful animals do their thing in the wild.

If you haven't already had the experience of linking to a wildlife webcam on-line, I highly recommend it, although do be warned that you will probably get hooked like I did. It sure beats watching the news and getting depressed or wasting time gaming or chatting it up with a stranger on a social network website, and by all means it is far more educational. I don't feel guilty about being the virtual voyeur I have recently become, I just feel more connected to the wild world that I may otherwise never be privy to, and I thank today's amazing modern technology for bringing the beautiful beasts from the great outdoors into my living room.

HOW MARRIED COUPLES CAN BOOST THEIR SOCIAL SECURITY CHECKS

Dear Savvy Senior:

I've heard that there are strategies available that can help married couples increase their Social Security benefits when they retire. My wife and I are approaching retirement age and would like to understand these options. What can you tell us? Getting Prepared

Dear Getting:

If you're willing to wait to full retirement age and beyond, married couples have several unique claiming options that could actually add tens of thousands of dollars to your Social Security checks over your retirement. Here's what you should know.

Before we go over the different benefit boosting options for married couples, it's important to know that the most commonly used strategy for increasing retirement benefits is to delay taking them.

While workers can start collecting their Social Security retirement benefits as early as age 62, postponing them to full retirement age (which is 66 if you were born between 1943 and 1954), or better yet to age 70, can make a big difference.

Let's say, for example, that you're eligible for a $1,200 monthly benefit at age 62. By waiting to 66 your monthly benefit would increase to $1,600. And by delaying to age 70, you would boost your benefit a whopping 76 percent to $2,112. Delaying will also increase your wife's survivor benefit if you die first. Waiting, however, beyond age 70 will not increase your benefits.

Claim and Suspend

In addition to waiting, Social Security also offers two other little known strategies for married couples, but you must be at least full retirement age (currently 66) to use them.

The first one is called "claim and suspend" (see ssa.gov/retire2/suspend.htm) that allows a worker at full retirement age to file for Social Security so their spouse can begin collecting a spousal benefit, but asks to receive their own benefit later.

This is best suited for one-earner couples where one spouse worked full-time and the other spouse did not work outside the home or did not work long enough to qualify for Social Security retirement

Here's an example of how it works: Let's say that you are age 66, but want to keep working until 70 to collect a higher benefit. Let's also say your wife is a nonworking spouse who just turned 62 and would like to start receiving spousal benefits on your work record. The problem is she can't get them until you sign up. So you file for your Social Security benefits but request an immediate suspension which allows your wife to claim spousal benefits, without locking you into a lower payment for life. Then when you do decide to start collecting, at age 70, you end the suspension and receive a higher benefit for delaying.

This strategy can also be used if you have children under 18, or 19 if they are still attending high school, or are disabled. Each dependent child is eligible for up to 50 percent of the retiree's full benefit. And, if any child is younger than 16, your spouse can also qualify for additional benefits as a caregiver, even if she's under age 62.

For two-career couples, the second strategy known as "claim twice," lets you collect Social Security (at full retirement age) first as a spouse and later using your own work record.

Here's how it works: Let's say that you are 66 and would like to continue working until age 70. But, your wife started collecting her benefits on her own work record at age 64. You could file a "restricted" application with Social Security and collect a spousal benefit which is half of what your wife gets. Then, once you reach 70, you stop receiving the spousal benefit and switch to your own benefit, which will be 32 percent higher than the benefit you would have collected at your full retirement age.

SENIOR HAPPENINGS

By Pat Birdsall

FYI - Part I- In the April 27th issue I used this space to thank the wonderful people who came to my aid during the various health issues I was experiencing...except for two very good friends, inexcusable! Kim Wilhelm and MaeBelle Wunderlin, thanks so much for your calls of concern and your standing offer to shop for me. I love you both!

Part II- Home Improvement Fraud- We all get a slew of telemarketing calls every day, both legitimate and fraudulent. For a while the majority of calls focused on home improvement; handymen who could make you a deal on various services because they just happened to be working in your neighborhood. Unfortunately, seniors often fall prey to this scam. Whether it be gutter repair or wooden railings that are rotting...the senior is trusting and vulnerable and usually writes a check for either shoddy work or no work at all. By the time someone physically able to check on the work and determine the homeowner had been "had," the scam artists are off to another neighborhood and other unsuspecting and trusting folks. Telemarketing fraud costs victims $40 billion a year. My source: the FBI.

HELPFUL HINT: * Heat a nail for 5 seconds before driving it into the wall. It will make the plaster flexible-no cracks.

* Use a bread tab to hold your spot on a roll of tape.

FOR YOUR FUNNY BONE

We went to breakfast at a restaurant where "Seniors' Special" was two eggs, bacon, hash browns and toast for $1.99. "Sounds good," my wife said. "But, I don't want the eggs." "Then I'll have to charge you $2.49 because you're ordering a la carte," the waitress warned her. "You mean I'd have to pay for not taking the eggs?" my wife asked incredulously. "Yes!" the waitress replied tersely. My wife said, "I'll take the special." "How do you want your eggs?" "Raw and in the shell," my wife replied...She took the eggs home!

Don't mess with seniors; we've been around a long time!

HEALTHY LIFESTYLES

HOW CAN YOGA HELD

SAMSKARAS

skaras or the groves in our mind. Samskaras are the patterns that we develop from an experience or repeated experiences that had either positive or negative effects on us. These patterns can become beliefs and these beliefs can make decisions for us. That can be good or bad. Some beliefs serve us well, others can be knee jerk reactions and not so good. What gets us into trouble is when the unconscious belief makes a decision that is really counter productive to our best self. We begin making these samskaras when we are very little, some of them can come from the influence from our parents and then later friends. Most of the time we are completely unaware of these patterns. Some are small, like ordering macaroni and cheese a lot because it made you feel good when you had it as a kid. It might be your 'go to' dish, even when there are other options that might be better for your health.

In yoga, we learn to identify what we call sam- Some are big, like racism. But whatever they are, we should know about them if they are going to make decisions for us. We need to know how they affect our lives, how they hold us back or help us

> And yes, yoga helps us identify them. We begin with just the ones that happen on our mats and progress on to the biggies that can change our lives. "Wow, I didn't even know I did that!" or "Wow, that's so cool how you do that!" We always start exactly where we are and move along the path. And we do this ourselves. That's' what makes the process so powerful, so special and so empowering.

> So start asking yourself: why do I believe that? Why do I do that? The science of yoga has some very cool ways to help you change the samskaras that need changing and use the ones that are helpful to you. We want to make it the best it can be.

LIVING TRU by Lori Koop, Right Brain Business Coach

CONNECTING TO WHAT'S TRU

The tasks and worries of this world can pull us from a place of peace: our to-do lists are rarely completed, our fear of failure encourages us to take on more and more, and our unknown future keeps us on edge. To cope, we work harder, faster, in hopes of getting "on top of things." In hopes of succeeding. Without meaning or a clear sense of purpose, life can lose its appeal and leave us feeling empty.

The problem is not life, but how we're choosing to live it... we are disconnected from our true self. Separated from our life's TRU adventure. We are running our lives based on the instructions of the left brain, rather than the intended leader in the right brain, our spirit. Left brain dialogue focuses on fear and staying safe. While the right brain longs for adventure, your adventure, to materialize.

To tap into that magical resource, we must learn to connect and stay connected. We must listen to our spirit so it can tell us where to go and what to do. You see, the spirit holds our own personal map; it will guide us if we seek its help. We were never intended to live on autopilot. We were meant to live the life of our dreams. Specifically, doing the things you see in your dreams.

So, how to connect? We start by cleaning house. Removing the clutter of thoughts in the mind so we can hear the still, soft voice within. The process of connecting begins here, and there are many ways to do it. I've made a list of more than 50 ways. I want to share them with you: either sign up for my mailing list (www.LORiKOOP.com) or download directly... www.LORiKOOP.com/downloads/50ways.pdf.

My personal favorite (and the one I encourage all my clients to do) is journaling. The simple process of writing brings the mind to focus all its attention to the here and now, on only one thing. Then, the mind calms itself. To practice, get a piece of paper and begin free writing, or "brain dumping" as Julia Cameron of The Artist's Way calls it. Simply listen to the thoughts in your head and write them down. Without judgment. Without censorship. Write exactly what you hear. Through this process, earthly concerns are removed and spiritual wisdom can come in. Keep writing! Start with 5 minutes a day, and make it a part of your routine. Increase your time when inspired.

Or, if you prefer, pick another connection method from the list. Something that appeals to you. Experiment. Find your favorites! The more time you spend with your spirit, the stronger the relationship will become. And the more you will know The Real You. And how to Live TRU.

JASMINE'S CORNER Book Reviews by Jasmine Kelsey Williams

RAGE By Jackie Morse Kessler

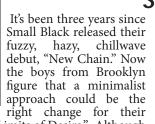

Having progressed into the second week of May, we now move on with the second of Jackie Morse Kessler's Riders of the Apocalypse series (and yes, the listing is continues backwards). Taking place before "Loss" and after "Hunger", "Rage" focuses on our protagonist 16-year-old Melissa Miller (aka Missy). "Rage" will take on a much more serious tone with teen readers as Missy uses cutting (a form of self-harm) to cope with her emotions and the humiliation she suffers through at school.

The early chapters will have readers curious, as they focus on Missy and how she struggles with her self-mutilation, while later characters such as the other Riders and Death keep a minimal profile. When Missy finally encounters Death and he provides her the opportunity to be a Rider, Missy not only opens up to it, but is finally provided with a tool that helps her overcome her pain: control. As the later chapters move forward, readers will be able to share Missy's sense of freedom with being a Rider, but also will gain insight as to how and why Missy battles with self-harm, along with battling her most personal inner demon: the spirit of War itself, who tries to urge

Missy into satisfying her own personal vendettas against those who hurt or wronged her. Kessler brings forth raw and blunt details with Missy's struggles (both inner and outer), as well as the vivid imagery of War as a Rider of the Apocalypse, and how Missy craves not just the control that comes with her newfound power, but also on making peace with herself and those around

Readers will not just sympathize, but also may be able to put themselves into each character's shoes, and learn their motives for what they do and how they act. Those who also struggle with self-harm and have struggled with it may also be able to find comfort and solace when reading "Rage". home recorded and produced, the quartet ditch the exclusivity of snyths and samples found on "New Chain." This time around there are more acoustic guitars, alongside live drum. This resonates a deeper importance on a more natural development with their newly developed sound. With a clutter of bands in the same sonic dome, Small Black may have figured a way to navigate from the back of the pack to the frontlines.

The heart of every song is found within the soft, twee vocals that manifest into the listener's ears. The gang of four has made grand strides in transforming themselves from past to present. However, it's not as if an alteration was necessary, but a strong yearning for it was intensely expressed by the band in interviews. "Limits of Desire" brings a lot of washed out elements to the forefront. Despite the emphasis on changing their sound, Small Black still carries a torch for pleasant sounds and beach-y induced melodies. While 'New Chain's" overall sonic sound drowned out the vocals, leader singer Josh Kolenik's vocals are fully put in front of the music on this new album. There's so much more now to connect with, like found on "Limits of Desire," but that's okay when they sound utterly this pleasurable.

The first single, "Free at Dawn" is an example of what Small Black set out to do. By cleaning up the haziness engulfed on "New Chain" and It's been three years since expressing a more spacious sound, new light has Small Black released their emerged for a band that has mind/heart set in a direction unexplored. That path may not be all to foreign, especially to those who've surveyed the the boys from Brooklyn landscape for quite sometime, but the addition figure that a minimalist of Small Black is more than welcomed to bring approach could be the right change for their sophomore release, "Limits of Desire." Although for a reason. It's another example of how Small Black trade their penchant for chillwave for simplicity and gleam. It has a terrific, laid-back melody that screams dreamy pop to the fullest.

The flow of it reminds me a little of "Gypsy" from Fleetwood Mac. It's a beautiful addition to the ten solid tracks Small Black has materialized. "Shook Loves" is quite captivating and has a touch of 90s slow R&B lightly glazed over it. Perhaps the most disappointing track is the final one, "Outskirts."

This is the longest one lasting over six dreary minutes. But make no mistake, Small Black has crafted a dazzling sophomore album that builds upon its debut and exceedingly surpasses it.

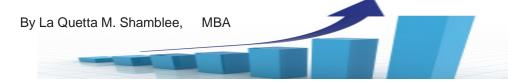

There may be those who believe Small Black isn't reinventing a genre. That's fine. However, they're adapting to their new surroundings in such marvelous fashion. The kids from New York Kolenik's crisper, cleaner, melodic singing. His are progressing, maturing, and learning that their range may stay in place within the ten tracks own "limits of desire" are only restricted by lack of growth. From the looks of it, they're growing in a rapidly fast pace.

GETTING AN "A" FOR HANDLING CUSTOMER COMPLAINTS

Years ago, I went to lunch at a local restaurant with a group of seven co-worker's to celebrate our supervisor's birthday. It seems that we were forgotten after we were seated at our table as orders were taken and delivered to most of the tables around us. Somehow, our table had not been assigned to any of the servers on the floor and none of the staff had notices. Finally, the manager made the rounds to our table and realized the oversight. We informed her that we had already been waiting for almost 20 minutes and had a limited amount of time to get back to the office.

She apologized, called a server over to take our order immediately, then instructed the server to inform the kitchen staff to expedite it. When our orders were ready, the manager helped the server deliver the food to our table. She was making it clear to us that we mattered as customers as she demonstrated her intention to "right the wrong." About half way through the meal, she returned to check on us, asking if everything was okay and if we needed anything else. We were impressed with how she'd handled the situation, but she went even further when she handed us dessert menus and informed us, "A dessert for each of you is on the house, and since you may not have time to eat it here,

This scenario holds some important lessons about turning a negative customer experience into something really positive. If the manager were to receive a grade for how this was handled, it would definitely be an A+. All businesses can take a page from this manager's playbook, which is outlined in three steps:

Acknowledge the problem that the customer is having. Initially, it is important to listen to what the customer has to say and it doesn't matter whether you agree or not. By listening, it may minimize or alleviate the customer's frustration and set the stage for an amicable resolution. Sometimes, a customer simply wants to be heard, with not further expectation other than "reporting" the problem to someone in charge.

Address the problem by letting the customer know what you can do, and plan to do. It isn't always possible to resolve the problem immediately, so it may entail informing the customer that it will require an addition process and additional time on our part.

Action by you "in the moment" gives the customer confidence that something concrete will be done to address their concerns. Your first action must be a sincere face-to-face apology for their

4) Atone with an offer of something appropriate for your customer's unfortunate experience. Sometimes, the initial policy is sufficient, but you should use discretion to select a response to encourage the customer to have a positive impression of your business.

In the earlier example, the manager understood both the challenge and opportunity of resolving the matter with our group. We were a table of customers who worked at a nearby company, which meant that some of us might be regular customers, and we were there for a special birthday celebration. Considering that our final lunch tab was over $150 (without the tip), her offer of a free dessert was the "icing on the cake" for how each us viewed her impressive approach to customer service approach. When we returned to the office and shared our experience, the restaurant became of the most popular "go-to's" for special office celebrations, as well as the weekly after-work "happy hour" spot. You can bet the restaurant recouped the cost of our six free desserts many times over.

A CHORE NEXT DOOR

While not a very common problem, if you've got it, it can have a terrible impact on your listing: The Messy Neighbor. If you live next door to a "neglected" property, you might lose up to 20% of your home's market value, particularly with buyers looking for any excuse to reduce their offer.

It's technically not your problem, but ask not for whom the bell tolls. It's well worth your time and effort to resolve this situation amicably. Always be respectful, and don't let your emotions get the best of you.

Unless you believe your neighbor is "unhinged," you should begin with a visit to their home and a positive attitude - no name-calling or finger-pointing. Don't grab everyone on the block and gang up on your neighbor - you'll get better results if you go alone or with one other person.

If you find your messy neighbor is unwilling to take care of their maintenance, it may still be in your best interest to do the work yourself or with the help of other neighbors. No, it's not fair, but if you want a fair sales price, this may be your only option.

As a last resort, you could file a complaint with your property owners association or city government. You could be referred to a mediator who will help settle your disagreement cordially.

Managing your understanding perception. What first impressions are you giving people when they glance at your social media?

business?

What do you think when you stop by a Facebook business page and only two people have "Liked" the page? Quality connections on Social media are very important but higher numbers can validate a business. It's sort of like driving by a restaurant. If you see a line outside the door and a long wait list, something tells you that they have good food. If you see a business page on Facebook with 5,000 "Likes" something tells you it has value. If you're the business that has only two "Likes," don't be discouraged. Start making it a priority to promote your Facebook page and deliver interesting content. Track your numbers on a monthly calendar to keep motivated and focused.

When was your last update?

If someone searches for your business or product, they might land on one of your social media sites. If you haven't posted an update for six months, guess what they might assume? They might think you have gone out of business. Keep your social on- media sites active and current. Give yourself a line reputation is about strategy and set up a system for consistency.

Is your content in-line with your business?

If you are using social media to create awareness about your business, stick to safe content that What do your numbers say about your doesn't offend. Don't mix your politics and religion into your business posts. Think about the types of things you'd share at a live business event and practice that on-line. It is easy to offend people on social media. People don't always remember exact words, but they do remember how an interaction made them feel. How do you want people to feel when they see your brand?

It takes time and effort for a business to create awareness, establish trust and build a loyal following. Establishing an on-line presence is one of the most important things you can do for your business, just make sure it is working for you and not against you.

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

OH FOR A MEMORY LIKE DEAR OLD MOM'S

mother had to do with her memory. She could remember everything.

knew the answer. She knew everything. No it, which truly amazed me as a young person.

Before I went to school, my mother was my entire world. From the time I got up in the morning until she tucked me in bed at night, she was the master of my world. Whatever I could do, she was the one who allowed me to do it.

Looking back, I can remember when my father got home from work in the evening he gave my mother a little break from looking after me and my brother and sister. If memory serves me correctly, my father watched us by lying on the couch snoring. I never could figure out how he could do that but it was his way of watching us and helping mom.

As a young person, anything I wanted I had to requisition it from dear old mom. The always had what I needed. I have often wondered how she could do that. But then, she

My weekly allowance came from my mother. It took me a long time to realize the money for my allowance came from my father. I always believe mom had all the money there

I remember coming home from the second grade with homework to do that just baffled me. All I had to do was ask mom and she could explain it to me like nobody else could. Mothers are like that.

They know everything and remember everything. What my mother knew only my mother could know. It was as if she could read my mind. It was as if she had eyes in the back of

It was so bad that I could not get away with anything. Believe me; I tried very hard to get away with something. For some reason my mother knew what I was going to do days before I actually thought about doing it.

I am not sure who is credited with designing the first memory board for computers, but I know who designed the memory board for people. I firmly believe that mothers were the first computer designed and wired by God. Why in the world do you think they call it the "motherboard?" It is no accident that they come up with this term.

My mother had a tremendous memory. This (Proverbs 31:28-29 KJV). is the difference between mothers and fa-

In growing up one thers. Mothers cannot forget anything and of the outstanding fathers cannot remember anything. Togeththings in my rela- er they make an invincible team for raising

It was not until I became a teenager that a little click developed between my mother All I had to do was ask dear old mom and she and me. I began to realize that my memory did not always harmonize with hers on some matter the topic, she had an opinion about issues. As I got older, the harmony was less and less.

> For example. My mother would tell me, "You must be home by 10 o'clock."

> At least, that is what she said she told me after the fact. When I came in at 11 o'clock, she reminded me of what she told me. For the life of me, I could not remember her telling me to be home by 10 o'clock.

"I told you to clean up your room."

Searching my memory board, I could not find any indication that she told me this. I am not saying that she did not; I am just saying that our memories did not coincide on a variety of issues when I became a teenager.

What struck me about my mother was she could remember conversation she had with me three years ago word for word. As I get thing that always amazed me was that she older, I began to doubt the accuracy of her memory. The problem with that was, I had no memory of anything and so I had to rely upon her memory.

> Now that I am a parent, it is apparent to me that memory is a rather funny thing. I am not sure that my mother was in this category, but my memory is of such a nature that I can remember things that never took place. Not only that, I can describe it in detail.

> As a teenager I remember coming into the room and my mother sitting there looking out the window with a little smile on her face. 'What are you thinking about?"

She just looked at me, smiled and said, "Oh, I was just remembering some things." Then she turned and looked out the window again and I left her to her memories.

In celebrating Mother's Day, I cannot help but think of the many wonderful memories each mother cherishes. Their children will always be children. No matter how old their children get, they will always be their little Memory is a delightful thing and sometimes can be very selective. I am sure, when a mother engages in the fine art of memory, they are all good memories.

Solomon was probably thinking about his mother when he wrote, "Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all"

You cannot put a price on a good memory.

I saw this ad probably fifty years ago. Now when I think of the ad it makes me sick. Of course smoking is poisonous and so was presenting luxurious ski like me who at that time had absolutely no familiarity with either girls or skiing. been the only people in the ski lodge I me anyway. So why do I still remember her? I hate to admit it but I think that ad, combined with many others, had some influence over me. I can remember trying every kind of cigarette until I managed to acquire the smoking habit and regularly smoked almost three packs a day for probably twenty five years.

As a smoker I really did have the feeling that the cigarettes were my one true friend. I remember smoking to celebrate wonderful events and I remember smoking to stabilize myself after traumas birth of my first child. Perhaps you're old enough to remember those movies that showed husbands anxiously smoking news of the birth in the waiting room. I remember something like that and as I smoked I had the feeling of now being part of some huge club of anxious, expectant fathers on their way to adulthood.

As to the fantasies about talking to strange girls, over the years I have become quite expert at talking to strangers. Oddly, I feel quite free and comfortable talking to people I don't know and probably will never see again. This is a very different feeling than actually talking to relatives or even close friends. In these situations I often feel guarded, competitive, and uncomfortable and would rather be doing

I remember this something else. I often looked across the room. And what did he notice in restaurants two or three people see but an appropriately good-looking sitting together while actually talking to other people on their cell phones. Maybe everyone is a little embarrassed or uncomfortable actually talking to people in person. Maybe the distance makes it easier to talk, even in places where it's hard to hear very well. Maybe lodges and beautiful girls to someone talking on the cell phone allows one to fantasize about the person in a way that is prevented by actual personal contact. Probably at that time if the girl and I had Maybe that's the secret of the girl in the ski-lodge in the memorable Winston would have been afraid to talk to her commercial. She never says anything; and she probably wouldn't have liked she's just possibility untainted by reality. After all it's been fifty years and I still haven't forgotten about her.

I wonder if any of you unidentified and perhaps non-existent readers have similar feelings? Do you too feel abandoned? The Lakers and Clippers season have come to disappointing conclusions. The Dodgers and Angels are spending millions and are embarrassments. Their failures remind me of the overall state of the country. I am experiencing crisis fatigue from the constant attention paid to the bombings, the murders, the fiscal like car accidents or as I waited for the cliff, the sequestration, the threats of new wars in the Middle East and North Korea and the seeming continual grid-lock in Congress. I want more attention paid cigarette after cigarette as the waited for to the world's overpopulation and the environmental catastrophe that lurks just around the corner.

Do any of you have similar feelings? Maybe we can recognize that we belong to the same club and are not alone. I can feel a kinship right now without any desire to risk my life on ski slopes or light up a cigarette. Maybe we can stay strangers and have a nice conversation some time. Cinco de Mayo has already passed. Maybe St. Patrick's day is a good day to forget restrictions and lift a glass to good cheer and conviviality.

Alas, I have diabetes and don't drink.

prevent it."

Woodrow Wilson, 1919 Greg Welborn last week singled out "Obama and other liberals" as those who'd find the presumption of "the United States (having) the right to determine the composition or general philosophy of another nation's government" to be "unthinkable and morally repugnant". I can't imagine anybody, across the political spectrum, who'd consider such a notion to be not only "unthinkable and morally repugnant", but decidedly un-American and decidedly stupid – at least anybody over the past hundred years, going back to President McKinley and gunboat diplomacy. President Wilson used the phrase "manifest when it was coined decades before. In the mid-nineteenth century, the term was used to justify our nation's westward expansion, and to dismissively rationalize whatever Wilson, however, saw it as an expression of our duty to help other nations secure what we'd fought for ourselves; the opportunity to determine their own destiny, to make their own history. Wilson spent his academic career immersed in, and shaped by, the lofty pageant and ideals of American history. He was also aware of those who loudly proclaimed of making a buck.

"Since trade ignores national boundaries and the manufacturer insists on having the world as a market, the flag of his nation must follow him, and the doors of the nations which are closed must be battered down .. Concessions obtained by financiers must be safeguarded by ministers of state, even if the sovereignty of unwilling nations be outraged in the process. Colonies must be obtained or planted, in order that no useful corner of the world may be overlooked or left unused."

During WWII, war-profiteering was considered tantamount to treason. Ten years ago, we went to war for control of Iraqi oilfields, and saw an unprecedented outsourcing of tasks previously performed by those serving their country to those serving the interests of corporate profit.

Woodrow Wilson, 1907

From 2006 on, private contractors in Iraq outnumbered our troops. Commissioned officers complained how their pay (including combat bonuses) was a fraction of that of the contract employee ladling out their oatmeal in the chow line. Of the $800 billion (conservative estimate) spent on the Iraq War, $160 billion went to private contractors - including the $7 billion quickly and quietly awarded Dick Cheney's former company, Halliburton, for restoration of Iraqi oil fields.

Halliburton's subsidiary KBR (since relocated to Dubai) made news by charging

"I can predict with us $75 to wash a bag of dirty laundry, then absolute certainty that paying an Iraqi subcontractor $12 to do within another generation the washing. KBR battled accusations of there will be another shoddy electrical work in latrines causing world war if the nations of the electrocution of our soldiers, and is the world do not concert appealing a decision holding it negligent in the method by which to the poisoning of eight soldiers by exposing them to "extreme carcinogen" chemicals now arguing for U.S. taxpayers to foot the bill for its $15 million in legal fees.

The private mercenary force Blackwater had a $1 billion contract by 2005, and in 2010 agreed to a $42 million settlement for illegal arms trafficking. (The company's founder, Erik Prince, has since moved to Abu Dhabi – not far from the Halliburton CEO's residence in Dubai.)

Any hopes of winning "hearts and minds" of Iraqis were erased by the photos from Abu Ghraib. The abuse which turned so many Iraqis against us and shamed us around the world came from private contractors primarily L-3 Services and CACI. 11 U.S. soldiers were convicted of abuse at destiny", but gave it a different meaning than Abu Ghraib. Earlier this year, L-3 Services settled with 71 victims tortured (on behalf of the people of the United States) between 2003 and 2007 for $5.28 million.

"Do you never stop to reflect just what might befall those who were there before us. it is that America stands for? If she stands for one thing more than another, it is for the sovereignty of self-governing peoples." Woodrow Wilson, 1916

We went to Iraq upon warnings of Weapons of Mass Destruction. confidently asserts that "Syria's has now used chemical weapons in his fight against the rebels . . ." while the U.N. human rights commission found evidence American ideals and exceptionalism as of "proof of the use of sarin gas" by the slogans to promote costly and unpopular rebels themselves. Greg accuses the Obama ventures, such as wars, for the sole purpose administration of doing "nothing", while as I write this the administration, which acknowledges evidence of Assad's use of chemical weapons, is making plans for arming Syrian rebels, and Secretary of State Kerry is in Moscow eliciting Putin's withdrawal of support for his client Assad.

Greg contrasts the differences between "liberal" and "conservative" approach to foreign policy. He bemoans the fact we 'lost" Libya and Egypt. Here's the difference: "Conservatives" may consider nations as ours to "win" or "lose", but "liberals" recognize the "sovereignty of self-governing peoples", entitled to determine their own destiny, to make their own history.

Presidents Wilson and Obama both had academic backgrounds; Wilson with American History at Princeton, Obama with law and the U.S. Constitution at Harvard. The question is whether we'll be guided by the "liberal" principals embodied in that history and Constitution, or by "conservatives" who'd turn our government over to those who regard those principles as marketing slogans, and the sacrifice of our blood and treasure in war as a business investment.

As President Woodrow Wilson put it exactly one hundred years ago, "If there are men in this country big enough to own the government of the United States, they are going to own it; what we have to determine now is whether we are big enough, whether we are men enough, whether we are free enough, to take possession again of the government which is our own."

INTERNET SALES TAX GREG Welborn AND THE LITTLE GUY

If the Democrats are supposed to be the champions of the little guy against the example of the vast arrayed forces of big oil, big two retailers in banking, big pharma, and big everything Oregon. Oregon else, then why did the Democratic doesn't have controlled Senate just pass a sales tax bill sales tax, and which will kill small entrepreneurs in every state of the union?

many residents of Washington

This last week, the Democrats in the state line to buy Senate passed their little tax masterpiece stuff at stores this legislation pass the House and be signed by Obama, it will fundamentally transform interstate commerce and bankrupt several thousand businesses along the way. Under the false rubric of "fairness", the legislation discriminates against Internet-based businesses by imposing on them a burden which does On-line sellers would be forced to collect sales taxes for every single taxing authority in the United States. Every state, every county, every region and every city which has a sales tax will be included in the calculation that every on-line seller is a mom-and-pop home based business selling a measly $1,000 in merchandise, it will have to calculate the taxes of approximately 9,600 state and local taxing agencies.

This is an impossible task that would quickly drain away whatever meager profits a small on-line business could generate. But even if the small business owner somehow made those calculations, he or she would still be subject to audit and penalty by any of the tax agencies involved. The mere threat that business under.

The burden is so great that the U.S. Supreme Court recognized it as the predominant reason for ruling in the last century that catalog sellers did not have to collect sales taxes for areas in which the catalog house didn't have a physical presence. In other words, the simple rule was: if you have a distribution facility or a store front in an area, then you have to collect local taxes, but if you don't have a physical presence there, you don't.

The logic behind the rule was equally as simple. If the seller isn't located in the area, then the seller doesn't have any representation (no taxation without representation), and the seller isn't consuming any local services such as sewers, schools, etc. Therefore, the seller shouldn't have to collect sales taxes. The Marketplace Fairness Act turns that logic on its head (fundamentally transforms it in the words of our President) and in so doing discriminates against sellers who happen to use the internet.

Consider drive across the

under the cynically deceptive title of in Portland, Oregon. Still other people the Marketplace Fairness Act. Should call the Portland store on the phone to place an order which is then shipped to their house. The Oregon store does not collect sales tax for the order which is picked up or shipped to the out-of-state

But!!! If the buyer from Washington happens to buy the merchandise from not apply to brick and mortar companies. an Oregon retailer who sells across the internet, then this on-line Oregon retailer would have to collect sales taxes for Washington State and the county and city in which the buyer resides.

Small on-line retailers won't be able on-line seller has to make. Even if the to compete, but even if they make the sale, they won't be able to afford to comply with the law. The burden will be immense – easily a doubling or tripling of the bookkeeping staff to keep track of every sale and to remit the taxes on the timing demanded by each tax agency.

It's no surprise then that the legislation is supported by brick and mortar stores like Wal-Mart, nor should it be surprising that giant Amazon supports the law. At first blush it seems a bit counter-intuitive, but it really does make perfect sense for Amazon. They're huge; of an audit and a law suit would drive they have a tremendous bookkeeping staff any way. They compete against the small businesses which uses E-bay to sell their wares. What better way to eliminate that competition than by demanding that the little guy foot the same compliance burden of the big million dollar on-line seller.

> So, under the fearless and shameless leadership of the "bash-the-rich", "taxthe 1%ers" Democrats, big business and big government have teamed up to stick it to the little guy. On a certain level, you have to admire the chutzpah of the Democrats that can look the voters right in the eye, promising to help them, while stabbing them in the back, but there's nothing to admire in the effect this legislation will have on the economy.

Match these "Motherly" sayings to their meanings:

- D. title given to mother of king
- E. home to a group of people who share ways of life; ex. China for the Chinese people
- F. main supply; when miners found gold or silver they would use these two words to talk about the place where gold or silver first came from
