LET US NEVER FORGET - 9/11/2001 Sierra Madre First Responders Honor The Nation's Heroes

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2013

On Wednesday, September 11, 2013, members of the Sierra Madre Police and Fire Departments along with members of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), Councilmember Chris Koerber, other city officials and residents, began the day at 6:45 am with a Memorial Service honoring the first responders to the 9/11 tragedy that occurred in 2001. At exactly 7:04am, at the sound of the alarm from the Verdugo Hills command center, a moment of silence was observed. Flags were raised half mast and remained in that position for the rest of the day.

There is a placque in front of the SM Fire Station (right) which should remind us of the extraordinary commitment of our own first responders. Called "The Fireman's Prayer", it is indicative of both police and fire fighters, paramedics and all emergency personnel. It reads, "When I am called to duty God whereever flames will rage, help me embrace a little child before it's too late or save an older person from the horror of that fate. Enable me to be alert and hear the weakest shout and quickly and effectively put the fire out. I want to fill my calling and give the best in me, to guard my every neighbor and protect his property.....And if according to your will I have to lose my life, please bless me with your protecting hand my children and my wife. Amen"

Let us honor our brave men and women always, who are willing to put their lives at risk to save another.

Public Hearing - Low Impact Development Plan

Council members spoke on behalf of an ordinance discussing low impact development plan and the update to green streets policy. The ultimate goal is to find ways to keep water on property rather than being flushed down the storm drain carrying debris with it and contaminating the ocean water. Soon many new businesses, parking lots, and homes will be implementing different techniques, such as pavers and grass, to ensure water goes down into the ground rather than the storm drains. The council has delayed the second Hunt to another term and Matthew reading in order to get input for the 500 sq/ft threshold.

New Police Car

The council discussed the purchase of a new patrol car. Public sentiment appeared to be in favor of this decision and the council voted in favor as well.

Marketing Sierra Madre
The council also discussed marketing techniques to drive more attention to Sierra Madre's local businesses. The council agreed to market the city as a "day trip destination". A logo, website, and possible apps are all being discussed and soon will be implemented. With Sierra Madre being such a diverse much debate.

The last item on the agenda was the first reading of an ordinance revising the municipal code regarding art in public places program. Since 2006, when building a certain size project either a piece of artwork needed to be put on the project or a lieu fee needed to be paid. What this will do is modify the code to allow money collected to be used not only to purchase art, but to implement more art programs in the city. Second reading will take place at the next meeting.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, September 24, 2013 at the Sierra Madre City Hall. The upcoming agenda and supporting documents and information for the items listed above can be found at cityofsierramadre.com.

At 2pm a traffic collision took place at Sierra Madre Boulevard and Mountain Trail Avenue. A large rental truck was attempting to make a wide right turn onto Mountain Trail and the driver signaled his intent. A passenger vehicle behind the truck attempted to make a right turn at the same time and drove into the gap between the truck and the right side of the truck. The truck struck the left side of the vehicle causing moderate damage. No serious injuries were reported.

Saturday September 7, 2013

Just after midnight, a resident in the 100 block of East Highland Avenue looked out a window and observed an individual inside a neighbor's car. After a few moments, she observed a male wearing dark clothing exit the vehicle and walk to another vehicle parked at the curb. The police were notified but the suspect drove away before units arrived. The investigation revealed that the suspect entered an unlocked vehicle and rummaged through the glove box and center console. No property was reported missing. The next morning a resident in the 00 block of East Laurel Avenue reported his unlocked vehicle had also been entered and several items inside were disturbed.

At 1pm, a traffic collision occurred at Sturtevant Drive and Woodland Avenue. The driver of a passenger vehicle was trying to negotiate her way out of the Mary's Market parking lot when she accidentally pressed the accelerator, propelling the car forward. The vehicle went over the curb, scaled the retaining wall and came to a rest front first in the drainage channel. Due to the positioning of the vehicle, Fire Department personnel were called on to extract the driver and her two passengers. The occupants complained of soreness but no serious injuries were immediately evident. Removing the vehicle from the drainage channel required the closure of the intersection and the use of heavy duty tow equipment.

PORN INSTRUCTOR STEPS DOWN FROM TEACHING

Pasadena City College officials released a statement this week announcing that the college would immediately investigate claims made by former Humanities Instructor Hugo Schwyzer that he had sex with multiple students while teaching at the school.

"Such conduct, if confirmed as true, would be a grave violation of college policy warranting termination," said PCC General Counsel Gail Cooper. "The college does not in any way condone or tolerate such conduct by any faculty member. All of us in the college are outraged by Mr. Schwyzer's statements about his conduct."

Cooper also said she would hold Schwyzer accountable for his actions while an employee.

In a blog post Sept. 5 at hugoschwyzer.net, Schwyzer said, "Until recently, I maintained that I had stopped having sex with students enrolled in my classes in 1998. That is not true; I started sleeping with students again in

He also admitted to having sex, with an undisclosed number of student as recent as Schwyzer made national headlines earlier this year after inviting two porn stars, PCC alumnus James Deen and Jessica Drake to speak in a class he called "Navigating Pornography." PCC officials have said no such class was officially taught at the college.

Decorative Crafts Event Comes to Pasadena

The Contemporary Crafts Market comes to the Pasadena Convention Center November 1-3, 2013. Returning as the West Coast's premiere event for one-of-a-kind functional and decorative crafts, the market November feature the distinctive works of approximately 200 of the nation's finest artists -- ranging from intricate jewelry, unique glassware and ceramics to hand-painted textiles, custom furniture, mixed-media creations and much more. All items on display and for sale have been jury-selected for their exceptional quality.

"Each year, the Contemporary Market provides shoppers and collectors with some of the finest craft pieces from across the United States," said Roy Helms, founder of the Contemporary Crafts Market and past president of the American Craft Enterprises, the marketing arm of the American Crafts Council. "This market will be no exception, with a truly extraordinary array of pieces available to visitors that are perfect gifts for family and friends."

the show. All artwork must be quality hand-made designs and be represented by the artist.

Helms has continually sought to raise awareness of fine crafts as a serious art form by highlighting talented artists, including many whose works can be found in national and international museums and galleries. For nearly three decades, the Contemporary Crafts Market has done a great deal to bring greater recognition and appreciation to the crafts profession by challenging America's perception handmade art.

"The level of quality and of crafts being originality produced by participating artists has superseded itself year after year attracting new craft and folk art audiences," added Helms.

Red Light Program Planned

'Run a Red Light and you will be cited'

The Pasadena Police Department will conducting a Red Light Enforcement Program on Friday, September 20, 2013. This enforcement detail will be deployed throughout the City of Pasadena. The hours of operation will be from 06:00 A.M to 1:00 P.M.

The Pasadena Police Department is committed to reducing the number of traffic collisions resulting from drivers running red lights or driving aggressively. The ultimate goal is to enforce and educate the driving public at the same time reducing serious injuries and fatal collisions.

A red light means stop at the stop line, crosswalk or before the intersection. Unless you are making a right turn, you must wait for the green light before you proceed. After making a complete stop, you may turn right on a red light if the intersection/crosswalk is clear of pedestrians and traffic. However, if the intersection is posted with a "No Right Turn on Red" sign, you must wait for a green light before any turning movement.

Funding for this program was provided by a grant from the California Office of Traffic Safety, through the National Highway Traffic Safety Administratio

Playhouse District to hold PARK(ing) Day

On Friday, September 20th from 12 Noon to 4p.m., Pasadena will be celebrating PARK(ing) Day with two installations in the heart of the Playhouse District.

PARK(ing) Day is an annual international event where citizens and artists collaborate to improve the public realm by transforming parking spaces into public places. You'll find our temporary parklets on both the north and south sides of Colorado Blvd. between El Molino and Oak Knoll. One will be outside of Vroman's Bookstore and Zeli's Coffee Bar where the one day parklet will showcase local artists and musicians. The other can be found outside of Yahaira's Café at Arcade Lane where they will be serving sangria (non-alcoholic), iced tea and quesadillas from their parklet dining space.

This is a joint effort involving multiple community members with contributions from La Loma Landscaping, Cal Pomona Landscape Architecture students and District Playhouse Association.

Schiff Remarks on Syrian Chemical Weapons

Rep. Adam Schiff, a senior Committee, released the the recent developments with the Russian proposal on Syrian chemical weapons:

John Kerry suggested that a U.S. strike on Syria's chemical weapons infrastructure could be avoided if Assad gave up his gas under UN supervision and control. The offer may be merely a delaying tactic, or an attempt to sow division in the effort to fend off a military strike. Nevertheless the Russians were U.S. to pursue this option with great vigor.

'We have a compelling moral and humanitarian interest in seeing that Bashar Al-Assad never uses chemical weapons again, not against Syrian civilians, not against anyone. The images of the dead and dying, men, women and children are indelibly fixed in our minds. We also have a core national security interest in making sure that when the Assad regime comes to an end, his chemical weapons stockpiles must be the cessation of the do not fall into the wrong use of chemical weapons and hands. The worst case scenario for the United States would be to see Al Qaeda, Al Nusra, Hezbollah or similar terrorist organizations gain control of these weapons and use them cease fire necessary to secure against us. In the inevitable these weapons holds the chaos that would follow the collapse of the Assad regime, this is not an insubstantial fear.

would have the capacity to deter and degrade the Assad weapons. But as I raised in a meeting yesterday with Secretary Kerry, Ambassador Rice, General Dempsey and others, it would not address the core concern that ultimately these stockpiles may fall into the wrong hands. United Nations' custody and control of the chemical weapons stockpiles may be a more effective way of ensuring that neither Assad nor Al Qaeda ever uses these weapons again.

"The Russians have a poor member of the Intelligence track record when it comes to Syria, the U.N., and the use of following statement Tuesday on chemical weapons. They have repeatedly used their veto in the UN Security Council to thwart international action to hold "Yesterday, Secretary of State the Assad regime accountable for its use of chemical weapons and failed to support even the most anodyne statements in the UN condemning the use chemical weapons stockpile. of chemical weapons in Syria. Within hours, the idea was It must be acknowledged that picked up by the Russian the credible threat of military foreign minister who called on force is the only reason they are Syria to put its arsenal of poison now advancing this proposal which goes far beyond anything they have thus far been willing to support.

"But whatever the motivation, international community in an we should seize the opportunity - as difficult as it may prove in the middle of a civil war - to shrewd to make this offer, and bring about UN control over one it would be equally wise for the U.S. to pursue this option with weapons stockpiles. The effort to place, and ultimately destroy, these stockpiles under UN supervision will once again put the United States and all of our traditional allies including the British on the same page.

"The Assad regime still needs to be held accountable for its war crimes. A hundred thousand people have been killed and the regime has violated a century old prohibition on the use of chemical weapons. But our immediate, overriding concern the imposition of UN control over them as soon as possible. Working with the international community, including the Russians, to bring about the potential of putting the conflict back on the track of a negotiated resolution – the only true hope "A targeted military strike of ending the civil war."

Margot Silvia Youmans

January 7, 1929-August 25, 2013

The name "Youmans" should sound familiar to residents of Temple City and nearby communities. For several years, Ray and wife Margot owned the Chevron Station on Las Tunas, and it was a place to have excellent car service at reasonable prices. Recently Margot passed away in Sierra Vista, Arizona.

Margot's story began in Fuerth, Germany where she was born to Johan and Maria Hertlein. She met her husband, Robert (Ray) Youmans when he was in the army stationed in Germany. Margot was working as a secretary for the 3rd Army Division in Fuerth. They married at the Post Chapel and then moved to Fond du Lac, WI, where their first two children were born. They relocated to Temple City where Ray started his business and two more children were born.

Margot was an exceptional wife and mother. At her services, her niece Margot felt honored to be her namesake and recalled a happy excursion to Disneyland. Sue, the youngest child, was appreciative of all the time spent with her mom and mom's involvement in so many activities from Blue Birds, Camp Fire Girls, the school band and much more-supporting and assisting in all fundraisers.

Margot was very active in various Masonics and civic organizations including Eastern Star; she supported the Shrine, Job's Daughters, and Demolay. After her husband's retirement, they relocated to Margot was preceded in death by her parents, her husband of fifty years and a toddler sister. She lives behind four children, 9 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren who will greatly miss her.

UNDOCUMENTED WORKERS EXTENDED DRIVING PRIVILEGES

Prior to ending the 2013 session, the Governor signed a bill which will allow undocumented immigrants to obtain drivers licenses.

Despite years of bickering about the pros and cons of such a move, the Assembly vote was 55-19 and the Senate vote was 28-8 in favor of the bill. Governor Brown will sign the bill, unlike his predecessors who used the power of the veto to knock previous legislation down. Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger vetoed similar legislation at least 3 times.

"This bill will enable millions of people to get to work safely and legally," Brown said in the statement. "Hopefully, it will send a message to Washington that immigration reform is long past due."

The hope is that by licensing undocumented immigrants California would open a legal umbrella for everyone on the road to prevent situations in which immigrants face arrest, heavy fines and car impoundment when they are pulled over.

The Sacramento Bee reported that Sen. Kevin de León, D-Los Angeles, said late amendments to the bill included a recognizable feature on the front and back of the license to satisfy federal requirements - as well as various provisions to guard against discrimination. Some supporters said it was unfortunate that the licenses would need special markings, but said the tradeoff was worth it.

A staff analysis of the bill suggested that undocumented immigrants could apply for a driver's license as long as they could provide some form of identification approved by the Department of Motor

"This measure will ensure that all drivers on California highways are properly trained, properly licensed and properly insured," de León said, adding that 10 other states allow undocumented immigrants to apply for driver's licenses. "We are actually quite behind." He said the measure would make California roads safer, improve national security and allow immigrants to fully contribute to the state economy. Sen. Anthony Cannella, R-Ceres, also said it was important that drivers are trained and insured.

"Not only is it the right thing to do, but our economy will benefit," he said.

Some critics of the bill have argued that issuing licenses to undocumented immigrants would not make them safer drivers and would not guarantee that they get insurance. Others continued to contend that distinguishing marks on driver's licenses unfairly single out people and could help spur deportations.

1970s, "survival of the horsemen of the Apocalypse: fear and

It has been a long time since I have heard advertisements for "survival foods" for those folks who are worried about a world in which we descend into chaos and anarchy.

As I listened to an ad on the radio recently, it reminded me of my state of mind in the late 1960s and 1970s when I first began to study THE ROMAN EMPIRE ethnobotany and survival skills in general.

Back then, I was primarily motivated out of fear, and was concerned about my own personal physical survival. It has been a long road to today, and though I still encourage folks to store "survival foods," I am no longer motivated by fear. Today, I have a completely different mindset about the very meaning of

I know that to some people the word "survival" connotes images of some burly guy in a camo outfit and a gun who is just out for himself. That's survival, by the lowest definition. But what about your children, your family, your pets? What about the survival of your community, your environment, your city, your bank, your educational system? Real survival is vastly more than keeping your own WHAT CAN WE DO?

Through the 1980s, I gave a series of lectures about the many cultures and civilizations that have entirely vanished. Gone. My focus was to look at what causes a culture to slip into decline, and even to vanish. Then, more importantly, I attempted to see if we today in the U.S. are experiencing any of these same causes that lead to decline and extinction. Of course, most members of my audiences listened politely, but felt that "this would never happen to us." In other words, the predictable response was four factors that define a declining civilization.

The first is an accelerating social and economic inequality. "declining marginal returns with regard to the rapidly dropping levels of literacy, critical understanding, and general intellectual awareness. As an example, the author shares with his readers some of the responses to questions that Jay Leno received during his "Jay Walking" routine. Then, there is something called "Spiritual death" - probably a major factor in the decline of all civilization.

know if these four factors are causes, or effects.

Back in the mid- WHY CIVILIZATIONS FAIL

food" and food storage systems were big, and there was the scare of a possible famine in America. Since why civilizations fall. Among her nine then, there have been various hyped-up "ends major factors, she lists resource depletion, of the world" including Y2K and the end of catastrophes, insufficient response to the Mayan calendar cycle. Most are fed by two circumstances, intruders, mismanagement, economic issues, and "cult thinking."

Cult thinking seems to permeate each and every one of us in every facet of our life. It is not just about religious things. Cult thinking occurs whenever we blindly believe anyone. This is why I have always strongly suggested you read Eric Hoffer's "True Believer."

Jane Jacobs suggests that we are following the same cultural decline that occurred with the Roman Empire. She identifies many of the weak spots in our contemporary lifestyle, such as: taxes, family, community, education, science, technology, the lack of self-policing, and moral/ethical insanity. These weak areas are the foundation of all the other often-cited problems, such as the environment, crime, and the discrepancy between rich and poor.

Modern families are "rigged to fail" due to rising housing prices, the suburban sprawl (with a reduced sense of community), and the automobile. Automobile is the chief destroyer of communities, and the idea of community.

The hopeful part of all of this is that dark ages are not inevitable. For one thing, we all need to get involved, and be a part of the solution. The millions of details of a complex, living culture are not transmitted via writing or pictorially, but by 1) living examples and 2) by word of mouth. We need to think! We need to model solutions (that is, given two options, we should choose what is "higher and better" in our daily life). And we need to teach, to lecture, and to write.

According to Boy Scout leader Francisco
According to Morris Berman in the classic
Loaiza, "Don't make entertainment such an "The Twilight of American Culture," there are important thing in your life. Spend time with others and do things with people. Get away from the TV and get off the internet. Get to know other people directly. We may have Then there are more knowledge today, but we've become a colder society." He adds that our emotional intelligence has been lowered a few notches investment in organizational solutions to intelligence has been lowered a few notches socioeconomic problems." Another factor is as well, and he cites as an example that when people sneeze today, they rarely say "excuse me."

These are just a few of the many ways in which we can become a part of the solution and not be part of the decline of civilization. This is why I wrote "Extreme Simplicity: Homesteading in the City," and "How to Survive Anywhere." I include reading lists in those books which Interestingly, Berman adds that he doesn't I feel are good for your physical, mental, and spiritual health.

Let me know if you have questions, or more suggestions.

TIP OF THE WEEK

The Summer Heat is On! – Tips for Seniors to Stay Safe and Cool!

Summer is a time for vacations and outdoor activities, but the heat and health risks of the summer heat should not be taken lightly, especially for the elderly. As a person becomes older, they become less sensitive to higher temperatures, putting the elderly more at risk to heat related illness. The elderly are more likely to not notice the warning signs of heat-related diseases and injury. Health conditions caused by the heat can range from heat stroke, the most serious, cramps cause by lack of water intake, nausea and weakness, to headaches caused by exhaustion due to the summer heat. Following are some tips for seniors to stay safe and cool during the summer heat:

Maintain plenty of water in-take to keep hydrated, about 4-8 glasses a day; eating fresh fruits and vegetables can also help hydrate the body.

Reduce strenuous activities during hot weather. Exercise in the cool morning and evening hours to avoid the heat.

Avoid too much sun and always use sunblock when going outdoors for prolonged periods of time.

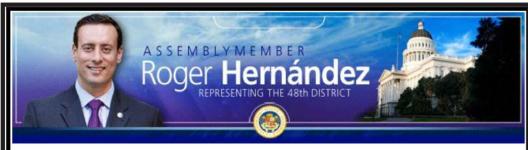

When planning for a family outing in the summer, ensure there are cool places with shade and ventilation for seniors to retreat to.

When the heat rises to extreme temperatures, seniors should stay in cool places out of the sun, such as an air-conditioned room.

Snack on cool treats, such as popsicles, ice cream, and other frozen treats to keep cool.

If you have an elderly family member or friend, check on them or have a neighbor check on them to ensure their safety during hot summer months.

If you see signs of heat exhaustion or dehydration, such as weakness, nausea, heavy sweating or no sweating, rapid pulse, or fainting, move the senior immediately to the nearest cool shaded area and provide with ventilation and hydrants like cool juice or water. You can also help cool them down by applying a cold compress. Call for medical assistance immediately if it is necessary.

This past Thursday marked the day of the Sierra Madre Middle School groundbreaking. The ceremony was led by Principal Garret Newsom, who began with some special introductions. Starting with the individuals who worked at SMMS since the beginning, Garret Newsom presented previous SMMS principals, Ty Gaffney and Gayle Bluemel, as well as Helen Ponerelli, a popular former teacher. Also introduced were Adam Carter, the representative for Carol Liu, Alex Zuko, the representative for Assemblymember Chris Holden, Sierra Madre City Councilman Chris Koerber, PUSD Board Members Tom Selinske, Dr. Elizabeth Pomeroy, Gretchen Vance, and lastly the first speaker of the ceremony PUSD Board Member Mikala Rahn. Superintendent Jon Gundry was also present.

It has been three years since the City of Sierra Madre made the decision to entirely rebuild the Sierra Madre Middle School. This project brought the community together to support the upgrading of the school while continuing the focus on academic achievement. They proved triumphant, successfully completing the facilities project while also being the highest performing middle school in the Pasadena

This fresh start for the community would not have been possible without the help of many hard working individuals. LaRon went on with her portion of the ceremony thanking the parents and staff for their resilience and hard work keeping the school up and running. Supporting this project since the beginning was the Sierra Madre City Council. Councilmember Koerber. Speaking on behalf of the Council, he enthusiastically stated, "I am proud to be the liaison for Sierra Madre Elementary School and Sierra Madre Middle School. I am excited to be here for this important event, the groundbreaking for what I'm sure will be a great school." He continued by extending a greeting to the Chinese-speaking parents and friends of SMMS sharing his excitement for the addition of the new Mandarin Immersion program. Koerber ended his portion thanking Ramon Miramontez and Frasier Thompson for all of their contributions throughout these

Next to speak was Superintendent Gundry, who let the community know how happy he was with all the progress. "I'm very pleased for every opportunity we can give to our kids to be in a world class learning environment. The building at Sierra Madre Middle simply closes the loop. The great programs we have here, the fantastic staff, I am really pleased to be here at the beginning of this and looking forward to the end." He ended by thanking the voters of the school district who approved Measure TT. The plan is nearly one third of the way done and is running smoothly. Their votes helped to make this upgrade possible.

Bringing her children up to stand by her side, Gretchen Bants brought the presentations to a close. "Tonight we celebrate, but this celebration is not just about constructing a new middle school. It is much more than that. This celebration is about parents, students, teachers, voters, neighbors, and community leaders coming together with determination and persistence to press on for our children and children to come."

The ceremony ended with special recognitions to Sierra Madre Middle School by both Congresswoman Judy Chu and Supervisor Michael Antonovich representing the County of Los Angeles. Principal Newsom proclaimed, "Your new project will enhance the students' learning experience and make a lasting positive impact on the community.

Earn. A degree of success.

THE GRANDMASTER

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show

ÉCOUVREZ LA LÉGENDE D'IP MA)

When going into this movie, I knew barely anything about it. The only thing I was sure about was that this movie told the story of the life of Bruce Lee's master. I was a little reluctant to see it, but I'm glad I did because what I discovered was an amazing

In the 1930s, there were two main houses of kung fu: the Northern house and the Southern house. Each house trained in different styles of kung fu, creating different masters. However, as war threatened to tear the world of martial arts apart, the two houses had to put their faith in the mysterious Ip Man (Tony Leung Chiu Wai) to unite their styles and keep the spirit of kung fu alive.

The Grandmaster' is not only a movie about kung fu, but it also shows some historical events through the eyes of Ip Man and his family. While this movie is not for everyone (it is in Chinese with English subtitles), I would recommend it to anyone who enjoys a kung fu or historical drama movie.

FOOD & DRINK

Wine comes in at the mouth And love comes in at the eye; That's all we shall know for truth Before we grow old and die. William Butler Yeats

Some write letters upon our soul, some laugh at a thousands troubles, some hearts pin so dear they live only as long as they are allowed to love.

My longtime colleague and friend, Dan O'Heron has left us. Dan was a food professor, maestro of language and restaurant counselor to the Pasadena Weekly for the last 25 years. His articles illuminated the San Gabriel Restaurant scene in the revelations of food and the investigations of people. His career began in the great era before the use of microwaves and his experience grew out of an age of butter filled recipes, heavy shortening and deep fried foods. Dan first established himself as a copy editor and by the late 1970's he was working his magic for The Downtown News. He developed a habit that was shared by another great writer, C.S. Forester, the author of African Queen and Horatio Hornblower, as both fancied a good walk to coalesce the budding ideas of their writing. For Dan, the journey was about the story. Sometimes the story was a family run business and a chef that cared and troubled over guacamole with such passion, he insisted the avocados be shipped from Mexico, as Dan conveyed in one of his Cinco De Mayo stories. At other moments the story seated us with a newly minted Chinese immigrant family that could barely speak our native tongue, which Dan effortlessly moved us past, pushing his readers toward the truth of experience and the palpable ornaments of a language which the immigrants had mastered in the pronunciation of flavors and the powerful composition of dishes. For the last thirty years Dan could be spotted walking his beat along the streets where each step he extended moved him over the cultural empire of Pasadena.

Dan once said to me, that if it wasn't for a life of restaurants, he could have easily been content as a sports writer. Equal to his personality and the magnetism of the man, Dan's Diner was a popular hub for food junkies throughout the 1990's. In the many articles of Dan's I sifted as an archeologist digs for treasures, I came to love Dan's insights and the Ernest Hemmingway eloquence of his dispatch. I am certain if I had never met Dan I would have known him all the same by his writings, for I could penetrate the spirit of Dan by his desire to communicate. The bright tones he conjured, the glimpses of hidden pearls he gleaned and handed along to us from waiters, chefs, and owners, and the fascinating compilation of inquisitive exploration he shared for food. Dan rarely wrote a negative thought in his article, in truth he probably didn't have to censure himself like most, he didn't think in such terms, instead he hoped to inspire people with a bounty of culinary examples. Over the collected years I knew Dan and the times he helped me to judge a multitude of events; including the occasional Pizza contest and the yearly Chili Cook-Offs that would arise from the world as sunflowers when the summer calendared surfaced each year, I came to know his notoriety with the public. He was a celebrity in the most personal sense, never allowing the experience of a conversation with a stranger to pass.

I must admit I was jealous the year I saw him holding court at the Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade. He looked so genuine, so matchlessly fitting for the spirit of St. Patty's Day. Of course the bars, restaurants and diners he visited came to love Dan as I, and I was not at all surprised when Crown City Brewery effectionalily named a beer after our beloved Irishman. He never once mentioned or bragged of the endowment to his name, but I am certain the thought of a beer being named after that great breed of Irishman calling to O'Heron circled as laurel of gold around his mind.

Somewhere in a lonely back table that only Dan could know, a chair sits empty by the traces of a candles light.

But up beyond the sea of blue and further than the foamy clouds of white, sits a man beside his God

THE GOOD LIFE

HOW TO TRACK DOWN LONG-LOST FRIENDS

I'm interested in tracking down some old friends I've lost touch with over the years but could use some help. What tips or resources can you recommend to help me find them? Searching Senior

Dear Searching,

It you have access to the Internet, tracking down long-lost friends from many years ago is relatively easy to do, and in most cases it won't cost you a cent. Here are some tips and tools to help you get

8Gather Details

Before you begin your search, a good first step is to jot down any information you can remember or find out about the people you're trying to locate. Things like their full name (maiden and married), age or birth date, last known address or phone number, old e-mail address, names of family members, etc. Knowing details can help you turn up clues while you search.

Searching Tools

After you compile some information, a good place to start your search is at google.com. Just type in the person's first and last name in quotation marks to indicate you're searching for a specific phrase for example, "John Smith."

Unless your friend has a unique name, you're likely to get dozens of results. You can narrow your search by adding other criteria like their middle initial or middle name, the city or state they may live in, or even their occupation. You can also do an advanced Google search at google.com/advanced_search, which helps you specify your search for better results.

Some other free people search websites to try are pipl.com, wink.com and zabasearch.com. Or for a few dollars, you can search a little deeper at sites like intelius.com and peoplefinders.com.

In addition to these search engines, try social networking and affinity sites where your friend may have registered, like facebook.com, twitter.com, linkedIn.com and classmates.com,

Another option is to check out high school alumni Web sites. Not every school has its own site, but some do, and you can look for it by going to any search engine and typing in the name of the school with the city and state it's located in. You can also search at alumniclass.com, a huge hosting site for thousands of high schools across the U.S.

If you're looking for old college friends, your university alumni association may be able to help. While they probably won't give you the contact information of the person you're looking for, they may be able to forward a message for you.

If you're looking for someone you served with in the military, military.com offers a free "Buddy Finder" service that has a database of more than 20 million records.

And if the person you're looking for is politically active, the Federal Election Commission's Web site (fec.gov) lists the addresses, ZIP codes and occasionally even the occupations of those who have given $250 or more to a national campaign.

Deceased Friends

If you can't find any current information about the person you're searching for, it could be that he or she is dead. To find out if that's the case, several sites including familysearch.org and tributes. com offer free access to the Social Security Death Index, a listing of around 90 million deaths in the United States. Legacy.com also adds a database of published obituaries from hundreds of American newspapers.

KATIE Tse.....This and That

SOUNDIES

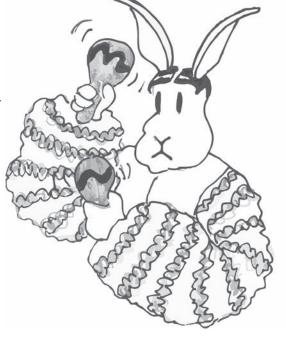

Are you feeling down, or just in need of a good laugh? Well, I can guarantee you'll go from zero to hysterical in three short minutes! "How?" you ask.

"Soundies" were three-minute films from the early 1940's that included short comedy skits or musicals. I haven't seen any of the comedic ones, but I can tell you the musical numbers are HILARIOUS!

We can all name great films from the 1940's. "Casablanca," "Citizen Kane," and "Rebecca" are familiar classics. There were also a lot of mediocre (if not plain bad) films produced during that time. "The Brasher "Isle of Forgotten Sins," and "Plan 9 from Outer Space" (1958, but close enough) are just a few examples. And then there were the "soundies"...

When trying to capture the essence of the soundies, one word comes to mind -- "off." The singers, dancers, and "actors" in these shorts were never big names, and in most cases, it's easy to see why. In one rendition of "Stardust," the male singer is so stiff, he gives the impression that he's suffering from severe arthritis. He periodically changes his facial expression to break the monotony by arching his eyebrows, or rapidly blinking his eyelids. Sometimes the camera pulls back and we see him full frame. He keeps one hand in his pocket, occasionally withdrawing it to adjust his shirt cuffs, as if he were modeling clothes for Sears. He's not particularly bad looking, but his meaty face would be more believable as that of a construction worker or plumber, rather than a tuxedo-clad crooner!

Half way through the number, our eye-blinker is joined by two lines of chorus girls in flowing gowns. (The random introduction of chorus lines is a "soundies" staple.) They dance around him, spinning and waving their arms, not quite in unison. Near the end, one girl leans so far back her head is out of the frame as she kicks her foot high in the air; a fittingly weird end.

Latin themes must have been all the rage during the brief age of soundies. In "Chicky Chicky Boom Boom" (no, I'm not joking), a very White-looking woman appears in a Carmen Miranda get-up. Between close ups of her singing, "Cuban" style male and female dancers shake and shimmy in ruffled sleeves so big that they look like piñatas. As if the lead singer and the dancers weren't enough, the camera periodically cuts back to an expressionless maraca player. Why? Who knows!

But probably the most bizarre soundie I've seen featured a man and woman singing an unfamiliar (and somewhat disturbing) song about him being a Casanova and taking her to "a park in the dark." Hmm, not exactly safe dating advice. But then again, I doubt that anyone viewed soundies as public service announcements. Between Casanova and his girlfriend singing, a chorus line files onto the stage. Something's amiss with this chorus line, but you don't realize it until they turn the opposite direction. Then, you see that these dancers are wearing half a dress and half a black tie and tails outfit! Creepy!

But that's not all... The dancers then "hug" themselves, making it look as if a man and woman are embracing each other --sort of, (that takes a lot of imagination). As if you weren't thoroughly grossed out by now, the last scene of the singing couple ends with a shot of the tux/ evening gown chorus lined up side by side as a woman dances in front of them. Just when you thought it was mercifully over, she turns around to reveal that the back of her outfit resembles a tuxedo, but the arms, torso, and legs look skinnier since she's wearing a dress on the front. Her squiggly "dance" movements remind the viewer of a puppet or Halloween ghost. And just to make sure the younger viewers in the audience don't make it out emotionally unscathed, this gown/tux ghost dancer has a male mask on the back of her head! And this isn't just any mask; this thing is GROSTESQUE!

But other than the disturbing numbers, "soundies" are quite entertaining. But don't take my word for it; see for yourself at archive.org!

FYI -LIBRARIES: SO MUCH MORE THAN READING

I honestly thought when I started write about libraries that I was going to find that they were having difficulties because of the "computer in every home" way of life these days. I'm gladly mistaken and also way out of the loop. Libraries have embraced the digital age and are more than keeping up with it. The Sierra Madre Public Library is a case in point...They have something for everybody. From Children's Services to Adult Services and all the wonderful things in between. Interestingly, I used my computer to find out more. I went to the City of Sierra Madre's website to garner the following information www.cityofsierramadre.com then on to the Library category. I'm going to focus on what

*Large print collection * Circulating collection of books, audio, music cds, movies and magazines. *Local history collection * Titles to go" homebound delivery service * Spanish collection * Computers with internet access and Microsoft Office *Printing, photocopying, scanning *Wi-Fi Internet Access. Whew! I've barely scratched the surface... go in and experience the pleasant environment and the outside patio. More importantly, the pleasant, knowledgeable and helpful staff! The Sierra Madre Public Library is located at 440 W. Sierra Madre Blvd. and their telephone number is (626) 355-7186 for questions and to get the hours of operation.

HELPFUL HINT: Before you toss one of those sticky notes, run the sticky side between the keys on your computer's keyboard to collect crumbs and other grime.

FOR YOUR FUNNY BONE - A new teacher was trying to make use of her psychology courses. She started her class by saying, "Everyone who thinks they're stupid stand up!" After a few seconds, Little Davie stood up. The teacher said, "Do you think you're stupid, Little Davie?" "No, ma'am, but I hate to see you standing there all by yourself."

THE JOY OF YOGA NEVER BEEN TO A YOGA CLASS?

Anyone can go to yoga. You do not need to be flexible. All ages are in the same room. But you want to pick the level that is right for you. Some of us need gentle yoga. We want to calm the mind, stretch out and get strong, yet with out the strain on the wrists and knees. Maybe our low backs are tricky and we just want to build strength with out aggravation there. Maybe we have had a health issue that keeps us from more vigorous exercise or even that we haven't done any physical movement for a while and need to work in slowly. Gentle class is great for this. We learn to go inside and choose what is right for us.

Beginning class is for the student that wants to get moving. You get all the benefits of the gentle practice, but with even more strength. You learn alignment and how to do the poses. You learn breathing exercises to help you build stamina and tame the thoughts. Any class creates greater focus, but beginning is the place to start if you are in ok shape and want to get all the benefits of a yoga class. You can learn meditation and mantra.

All levels is for the student that knows a little bit of yoga and is ready for a bit more challenge – but the great thing is you get to work at your own level. Advanced and easier modifications are given. More challenging breath options and more of the ancient teachings work their way in.

You don't generally have to make a reservation for class in our neighborhood. You can just show up a few minutes early to meet the teacher and tell them your specific needs. You don't need to bring anything but yourself. Wear comfortable clothing. You'll go barefoot. Most studios have mats to borrow or rent.

You just need to get there. The teacher takes care of the rest. If you have ever heard someone say " I went to a yoga class, and it was too hot" or "I went to yoga and everyone was doing all these crazy poses and I was lost" - then you need to come to Yoga Madre. It's not too hot and it's really friendly and accessible. You will be so glad you did! See you in class, René

4 TIPS TO A TOXIC FREE LIFE By Dr. Tina

Dr. Tina is a traditional naturopath and nutritionist at Vibrant Living Wellness Center

Many of us are trying to do the right things to lead healthy lives. We always wear our seatbelts. We exercise regularly. We don't smoke and we try to eat healthy. In our modern world these things may not

Many chemicals that we are exposed to everyday may increase our risk of cancer. Unfortunately, when chemicals are tested for safety they are tested by themselves. In today's world rarely is one chemical used by itself, rather they combine with many other chemicals. It is that chemical interaction that has many of us concerned. One toxin maybe harmless but regular does of many toxins may be another issue all together.

- Eat organic when possible. The pesticides on or in the food you consume are stored in your fatty tissue and organs. Tender flesh fruit like strawberries require lots of pesticides because they are close to the ground.
- Give up plastic water bottles and canned foods. Bisphenol A is found in many plastic water bottles, in some cling wraps and in the lining of many can goods. This chemical can increase the risk of breast and prostate cancers. Try fresh or frozen vegetables in place of canned ones (they taste better too).
- Leave your shoes at the door. Just think about the places you that you have walked through in a given day. Do you want to bring that in your home? Maybe you went to the grocery store. Not only did you walk through the store but you have to cross the parking lot too. Maybe while at the store you visited the restroom. Possible you walked across someone's lawn laden with chemical fertilizers and pesticides. The majority of dirt, pesticides and chemicals that come in our home, come in on our shoes.
- Forego cologne or perfume. I like wearing perfume BUT most of the chemicals used in fragrances are chemicals compounds that come from petroleum and are carcinogens like benzene. Many perfumes and beauty product fragrances have been found to contain phthalates which have been shown to cause birth defects. Keep in mind that what is in a fragrance is a trademark secret and is not listed on the label. You don't have to give up all perfumes there are wonderful perfumes made from natural oils that are not harmful.

Just a few simple changes in lifestyle can go a long way to living a more toxic free life!

My daughter regularly puts these rescue videos under my nose. Hurting dogs living on the streets, and one man's commitment to save them. They are beautiful stories. Have a look: HopeforPaws.org.

When I viewed the newest one yesterday, I was filled with gratitude. The sacrifice. The offering. The impact. THANK YOU, Eldad. For the humanity you call us to. For the compassion you uncover. For the giving heart that expects nothing in return.

And thank YOU for your service. Whether you are volunteering at school or the local animal shelter, making a meal for a neighbor, or giving clothes to Goodwill, giving matters. It changes others, and it heals you.

If you are feeling lost, unneeded, or hopeless, reach out. It's often the opposite of what you're inclined to do; depression often leads to isolation, but it doesn't help. If you can, reach into your heart pull out a part. Give it to someone else, someone less fortunate, and feel it heal back up. Stronger. Bigger. Better. That's how it works.

Let us all be reminded to make time. To do what we can. To care.

THE MYTH OF LIVING ALONE PART 2

Americans are living longer than ever before in human history. Average life expectancy has increased by over 25 years since the late 19th century. Women's average life expectancy is 81 and men's is 79, ... and changing. We are getting what we want, longer life, but does that mean a better life? How does one age well?? Research is showing us what we have known and taken for granted all along. There are three elements to aging well: good health, strong social connections and purpose. These are strained as people live longer in privacy and face increasing challenges on their own.

This chapter of life is our longest, and it can be well lived by planning, or lived poorly without. The two most common plans made by retired adults are for health care and finance. That only covers one of the three areas that contribute to aging well, what of the others? Planning for community and for purpose requires a good look at one's living arrangements. When living alone is more of a liability than an asset, there are other ways to live that improve health, provide community and encourage purposeful living. Here is a brief review of the most available choices:

- 55+ Housing caters specifically to the needs of retired adults who are age 55 and older, providing services and amenities that attract this particular segment of the population and make these popular places to live.
- Affordable Housing are government subsidized (HUD 202 Program) apartments for people who meet the requirements.
- Assisted Living is a combination of housing, personalized support services, and health care, designed to meet the needs of those needing help with the activities of daily living.
- Board & Care is usually a single family home licensed to provide limited services on a monthly basis.
- Continuing Care Retirement Communities combine residential living with other levels of care in a single setting so that health, dietary, transportation and social services are readily available.

Many people would prefer to live in the familiarity of their home, but for a growing majority, home life is lonely. It is a place where few people visit, where comfort replaces stimulation and activity, and where there is very little purpose to bring out the best in a person, which increases the risk of depression, poor health and accidents. So the question remains, "What does aging well look like?".

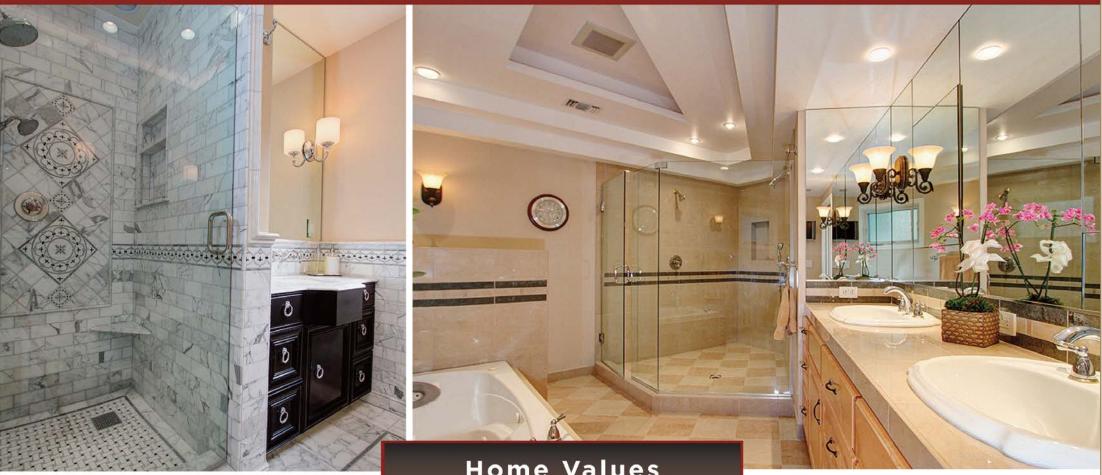

The popular notion that a person's home is one's castle is true for much of life, but as people live longer, a home can be an obstacle to aging well. Living with good health, purpose and community requires more planning than our predecessors, it's the price of getting what we have long wanted, more life. What will make more years better years is to plan for aging well. Living without community and

SIERRA MADRE VOLUNTEERS....PRICELESS

On an absolutely perfect summer evening, the City of Sierra Madre honored the many dedicated volunteers who keep this pristine foothills village running. The event was held on the grounds of Alverno High school.

Mayor Nancy Walsh opened the ceremonies and intoduced the emcee. The emcee for the evening was none other than Sierra Madre's own internationally acclaimed Opera Singer. She is one of the original Associate Artists for L.A. Opera, a 2006 Grammy nominee with Southwest Chamber Music and has sung on stages all over the world including Carnegie Hall, The Kennedy Center, the Metropolitan Opera just to name a few. She hosted and produced the popular radio program Sunday Evening Opera on Kmozart for NINE seasons and recently was seen as the host of KCET's weekly program, OPEN CALL.

Ms. Guzman continues to perform across the country and locally with her one woman show DON'T BE AFRAID ITS JUST OPERA which she has performed for over 200,000 innercity students nationwide.

To start the event, Guzman along with UCLA Freshman and Sierra Madre resident Chris Hunter and guest Madison Parks performed.

The first award was in recognition of Public Service, otherwise known as the Employee of the Year Award. This prestigious award is presented upon the recommendation of the City Manager to an extraordinary city employee who has represented remarkable customer and public service as well as dedication to the citizens of Sierra Madre over the course of the year. This year we are fortunate to award two outstanding employees, Susan Clifton, Account Clerk, and Jose Reynoso, Water Superintendent.

Susan Clifton was born and reared in Sierra Madre and has dedicated her life to public service, following the great example of her parents Beverly & Paul Clifton. Before becoming a full-time City employee in 2007, Susan had previously spent her youth as a part-time Recreation Leader, Film Coordinator and Library page. Then directly after college from UC San Diego she spent time in the non-profit sector working for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation, American Red Cross and American Cancer Society. In fact, it was there at ACS, that Susan worked with members of the Sierra Madre community to bring ACS's "24 Hour Relay for Life" to town which raised over $100,000 in the early years.

In the 1990s you could always see Susan volunteering in the community at all our favorite events like Huck Finn Day, Halloween Happenings and the Trail Race as she was serving two terms on the then Parks and Recreation Commission. She was part of the team that completed the City's first ever Youth and Parks Master Plans. She has also been an active member of the Sierra Madre Civic Club for over twenty years and served as president twice, as well as being a founding member of the Spero Foundation. Susan is also very active at her church here in Sierra Madre - Church of the Ascension.

Susan was originally hired to assist the Sierra Madre seniors at the Hart Park House. During her tenure with the Seniors she assisted with trips, starting a wellness program, a Transportation Plan and the renovation of the Hart Park House. Susan always dives into her work with a cheery disposition ready to take on the next challenge while holding her roots to the community at the forefront.

And that did not change in 2012 when as the result of budget necessities, the City was reorganized, and Susan left the Community Services Division to join Administrative Services. With that infectious smile and willingness to work and remarkable customer service skills Susan began her journey to the front counter at City Hall. And today she still greets everyone at the counter as if they were a neighbor, ready to find that you the answer or the person that can help you.

Jose started with the City in 2010. He has been the consummate professional throughout his tenure; unflappable in the face of adversity. Only 4 months after Jose started here, with Deputy Director Cimino away on vacation, Jose was confronted with not one but two major water system leaks, including the one which closed East Sierra Madre Boulevard for several days. Jose was able to calmly think on his feet and get the needed repairs done in such a manner that nobody went without water for more than a few hours.

Jose leads the water division as the Water Superintendent. Water customers are getting to know him through his City Council meeting appearances and through his role as the staff member to review appeals under the water conservation ordinance. In a time when the Water Department is experiencing water supply problems due to the local drought, Jose Reynoso is making the system work through long hours and diligent supervision of staff and the water system itself.

Many of the City's water customers understand that the water production and distribution system is highly automated. It might therefore be assumed that operating and monitoring the system is easy, and in times when groundwater is plentiful and all equipment is operational that is somewhat the case. However, when water levels in the City's primary supply become as low as they are now, the system requires constant monitoring and adjustment. It requires a thorough knowledge of what happens system-wide when each and every adjustment is made.

In his 2.5 years at Sierra Madre Jose has completed several regulatory items the California Department of Public Health has mandated the City to complete. These include an annual valve exercising program, monthly and annual main flushing program, and a fire hydrant maintenance program. He has overseen several project and major construction jobs like the water main installation on East Sierra Madre Blvd., the rehabilitation of Wells 3 and 6, and the installation of the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Water District connection and pipeline. He prepared the request for proposal and received bids for the Advanced Metering Infrastructure project. If the project is approved he will be the man to oversee that whole project. To list everything Jose does would take too much of our time this evening. He is a very valued employee of the City of Sierra Madre and we are lucky to have him be our Water Superintendent and to lead us through the current water issues.

Jesse Cazares. (below with Chief Giannone and Mayor Walsh)

Iesse Cazares was awarded the Police Chief's Special Award for his outstanding devotion to duty.

Jesse Cazares was born in Texas and at the age of 3 his parents and siblings moved to California where he attended school. He attended Los Angeles City College and received an Associate Degree in Administration of Justice with a minor in Phycology. He then transferred to Cal State LA and volunteered for the Air Force Reserve stationed at March Air Force Base in Riverside.

While attending Cal-State he completed the California Highway Patrol Academy. His assignments for the patrol included Altadena, East Los Angeles and Rancho Cucamonga. As an officer for the patrol, he worked in the field for most of his career.

Jesses also work for 4 1/2 years as a Public Relations officer. He was a training officer, a motorcycle officer, an EMT-1 and assigned to the President's Protective Detail. In 2009 he received a service retirement. In the following 2 ½ years he travelled to 15 countries before assisting the City as a temporary, part time investigator, property / evidence officer.

While in Sierra Madre, Jesse has been working diligently to remove old property, organize and catalog years of old and new evidence, and identifying property to be returned to its rightful owner. He has coordinated the destruction of firearms and narcotics to keep on top of the Department of Justice requirements. Today, the City's Property & Evidence Room is organized, functional and meeting all legal requirements.

In addition to his property room responsibilities, Jess will occasionally be out in the community, showing off his skills as a motorcycle officer, as well as participating in community presentations and special events.

The Wistaria Award recognizes a City/community partnership and is presented to a local business or organization whose major contributions to the City and community of Sierra Madre have demonstrated a partnership that assists in and provides services and programs, or enhances the general welfare of the Community as a whole. This year's recipient is the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society.

The mission of the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society is to purposefully raise awareness of the rich history of Sierra Madre. This year the Society has diligently worked to begin the upgrade process to make the City's museums accessible & interesting to the Community as quality educational and community-based entities. They have also actively engaged in partnerships with the Sierra Madre Garden Club, the Sierra Madre Public Library, and the City

In partnership with the Sierra Madre Library, the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society will be unveiling the Sierra Madre Biographies provided by the City of Sierra Madre. Photos, unless Stories & Treasures, a new digital storyboard, at Richardson House otherwise noted also provided by the City of Sierra Madre. on Saturday, September 28, 2013 at 11am (The public is invited).

The Public Safety Award is presented annually to an individual or organization who took action to protect and maintain the safety of the community. This year's award goes to The Sierra Madre Emergency Communications Team.
They have often been called "The Unsung Heroes of Sierra Madre".

The Sierra Madre Emergency Communication Team's mission is to provide additional emergency communications for the City of Sierra Madre "when all else fails". Their unique ability to establish an ad hoc communications system quickly and without infrastructure

The members own and maintain personal Ham Radios that are capable of city-wide communications from the EOC and point-topoint in the city. The EOC has a cable to a Ham Radio antenna on the roof of City Hall. The team work together with hand held radios, mobile radios and equipment capable of long distance communications. Some are mounted to cars or motorhomes, some with emergency power. During the windstorm in December 2011 they provided road conditions to the Police between Sierra Madre and surrounding communities including access to the freeway. During the Santa Anita Fire they were fire spotters at the end of the streets and later established a communications link between the YAC and the evacuation centers finding displaced person while at the same time had Hams on the street providing traffic information to the EOC. When the Fire Command Post moved to Santa Fe Dam, they provided communication between the Dam, our EOC and the evacuation centers.

The George Maurer Lifetime Service Award is an acknowledgement of significant contributions over an entire career. Its namesake, George Maurer, was first presented this award in 2006 for his selfless acts of dedication, honor and service to the community and City of Sierra Madre. Mr. Mauer spent 26 years as a volunteer firefighter and was one of the initiators of the emergency medical service in the 1970's. He spent 12 years on the City Council, three terms as mayor, and six years on the Planning Commission. He chaired the Senior Housing Committee. He also shared in a business in downtown. Mr. Maurer was a founder, and member, of the Sierra Madre Mountain Conservancy, and has also been a dedicated member of the Kiwanis Club of Sierra Madre and the Sierra Madre

This year we honor Richard Mays, (below) Sierra Madre resident and distinguished volunteer, with the George Maurer Lifetime Service Award.

Richard Mays started out in Virginia, and moved to Maryland before landing in Sierra Madre in the summer of 1961, just in time for an extremely rainy December and a brush fire the next summer.

His long history of volunteering started with the Sierra Madre Rose Float. Then 32 years with the Sierra Madre Volunteer Fire Department. Served as an officer and member of the Sierra Madre Volunteer Firefighters Association, 14 years with the Sierra Madre Girls Softball as treasurer, Sierra Madre Little League, served on the City of Sierra Madre ad hoc committee on finance, UUT Oversight committee, Volunteers at the Police Department, Member of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), Treasurer of the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society, Chamber of Commerce 2011 Citizen of the Year, AND he is currently the City Congratulations to all of this year's honoree's and to the dozens of other people in Sierra Madre who volunteer their time and talent for the betterment of the community.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

6 KIND CANINE CRUSADERS REUNITE WITH 8 FURRY FOUR-LEGGED BATTLEFRONT FRIENDS

With so many of our military troops returning home from Afghanistan over the past several months, there have been numerous heart-warming stories in the news about joyful reunions between soldiers and their loved ones, including tail-waging tales of troops receiving happy hugs and sloppy kisses aptly administered by their four-legged family members so overwhelmed with excitement to see

Among my favorite of the most recent soldier homecoming headlines is a uniquely sweet saga involving a unit of National Guard soldiers from New York who befriended a hungry and lonely, yet very friendly female dog that showed up at their camp barracks on the Western Afghanistan front this past January. The kind-hearted soldiers took her in, built her a comfortable shelter and fed her morsels of their daily food rations as she prepared to give birth to a litter of would-be unfortunate homeless puppies. They decided to call their new cuddly canine companion "Sheba".

Over time, Sheba became very protective of her new-found troop of uniformed friends and the territory they shared with her. As self-appointed official guardian of the fort, Sheba showed her instinctual need to protect the pack, taking it upon herself to patrol the perimeters of the soldiers' dwellings by keeping the wild dogs at bay and warning them of any threat she deemed worthy of staving off. Intrepid and impregnated, Sheba still reciprocated the soldiers' kindness with daily canine kisses and fun-loving fur therapy, giving them something to look forward to upon their return to camp each evening after a difficult day in the field.

In March, Sheba gave birth to 7 beautiful babes and, understandably, considering her life-long history of neglect and malnourishment, she had a tough time of it. When the men saw how weak Sheba had become after her pups were born, they all agreed to chip in even more of their individual food rations to help strengthen her so she could, in turn, provide proper nourishment for her new brood. Little by little Sheba gained strength, allowing her babies to nurse well enough to grow strong and healthy as well, and soon they were playing vigorously around the camp, keeping the troops entertained between their daily shifts. OK, so as if this true story isn't heart-warming enough so far, let me just say that it gets even better. Fair warning to my readers; Get out the tissue box!

During the weeks following their birth, Sheba's fast-growing group of playful pups brought such a bright light into the lives of the soldiers, they couldn't help forming strong bonds with them. Each soldier rather inadvertently chose a favorite of their own from the litter, as they got to know each other. Then, in July, when the unit received their orders to leave Afghanistan and report back to their base quarters in New York, they were obviously very pleased to know they were going home, but they were also heart-broken at the thought of leaving Sheba and her puppies behind. What would become of them with no one to feed them or care for them and give them the love they so desperately needed? The soldiers had become attached to those darling dogs, and they simply could not imagine going home without them, wondering the whole time whether they would make it on their own in the war-torn land where they were born.

As the day of departure drew near, Sgt. Caba came to the conclusion that he could not live with himself unless he did what he could to find a way to get those dogs safely to the US where they'd have forever homes with the men who cared about them and had bonded with them during a difficult time in a place where meaningful bonds are so hard to find. Caba contacted an old high school teacher from Long Beach who put him in touch with Guardians of Rescue, a non-profit volunteer group whose mission is to bring dogs back from combat zones through solicited donations and networking with other groups with similar missions, such as Paws of War, whose motto is: Help a Vet, Save a Pet! As it turned out, through the help of his teacher and other determined veteran supporters and animal lovers, Sgt. Caba succeeded in making sure Sheba and her 7 babies would make it safely to US soil.

On September 4th of this year, Sheba and her 7 precious pups were delivered to those kind tender-hearted soldiers who had known and cared for them since their birth. Each one of Sheba's 7 pups are now in the loving care of the respective soldier companion they met in that National Guard Unit in their homeland, and they will all live happy lives and thrive because of the love and appreciation they will receive from those grateful men who now equally understand what it means to fight for the basic freedom to love and let live.

Meanwhile, the pups' mom Sheba is in training and on her way to becoming a personal service dog for a wounded warrior in need of a helpful companion!

There are a few videos of this remarkable reunion that were broadcast on syndicated news networks over the past couple of weeks, and are now viewable on their websites as well as on YouTube. If you are a dog lover and a supporter of our American troops, I highly recommend that you look it up and watch...let the warmth of this true story penetrate your heart. Although it might incite awkwardly deep emotions and draw a couple of tears, it is a truly Happy Tail and, let's face it, tears come in a variety of flavors, some more bitter-sweet than others.

Finally, I want to express my sincere gratitude to all of the young men and women who put their life on the line to serve our country as soldiers in our military forces. I honestly don't understand why wars must go on, and I don't understand why due respect and appreciation is, at times, not given to those who truly deserve it. However, I do understand the basic human need for compassion and love, and for that reason I want to thank Sheba and her beautiful brood of babes for the compassion and love they shared with a small group of our young troops who needed it while they were in a foreign field serving our country. Welcome to the USA, Sheba and company. You are loved!!!

GROOMING

Things are not always what they seem—especially in space. For 30 years, a large near-Earth object called "Don Quixote" was believed to be an asteroid. Now, an international team of astronomers and planetary scientists has discovered it is actually a comet.

Called 3552 Don Quixote, the body is the third-largest near-Earth object (an asteroid or similar body orbiting the Sun in the vicinity of Earth). About 5 percent of near-Earth objects are thought to be "dead" comets that have shed all the water and carbon dioxide in the form of ice that give them their coma—a cloud surrounding the comet nucleus—and tail.

The team found that Don Quixote is neither. It is, in fact, an active comet, thus likely containing water ice and not just rocks. The finding, presented at the European Planetary Science Congress 2013 [http://www.epsc2013. eu] in London Sept. 10, could hold implications for the origin of water on Earth.

"Don Quixote has always been recognized as an oddball," said team member Joshua Emery, assistant professor of Earth and planetary sciences at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. "Its orbit brings it close to Earth, but also takes it way out past Jupiter. Such a vast orbit is similar to a comet's, not an asteroid's, which tend to be more circular—so people thought it was one that had shed

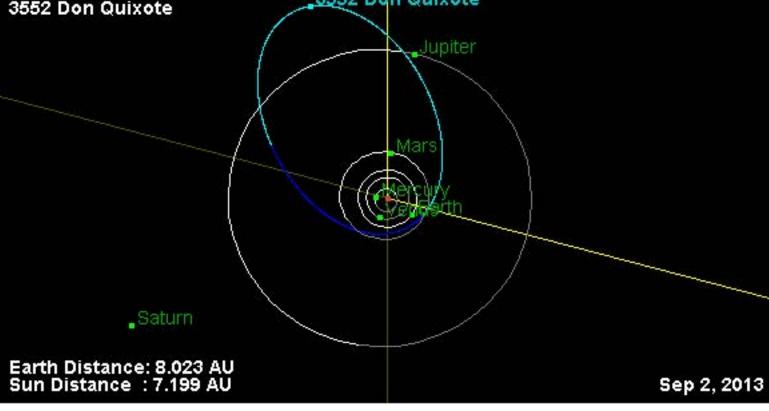

Using the Spitzer Space Telescope, the team reexamined images of Don Quixote from 2009 when it was in the part of its orbit closest to the Sun, and found it actually did have a coma and a faint tail.

'The power of the Spitzer telescope allowed us to spot the coma and tail, which was not possible using optical telescopes on the ground," said Emery. "We now think this body contains a lot of ice—including carbon dioxide and/or carbon monoxide ice—rather than just being rocky." This discovery implies that carbon dioxide and water ice might be present within other near-Earth asteroids, as well. It also may have implications for the origins of water on Earth as comets may be the source of at least some of it, and the amount on Don Quixote represents about 100 billion tons of water—roughly the same amount that's in Lake Tahoe.

FIRE AND ICE are the two opposites that meet when an icy comet approaches the Sun. The result can be a spectacular tail, as when Comet Halley approached us in 1910, or just an unheard sizzle, when all of a comet's ice melts away on a too-close approach to the Sun. Comets are always unpredictable objects—comet discoverer David Levy likened them to cats, "because they have tails and they do what they want."

'Fire and Ice" is also the title of my all-time favorite book on comets. Published in 1985 and still available from Amazon (authored by Roberta J.M. Olson and subtitled "A History of Comets in Art"), it holds a treasury of paintings, drawings, and descriptions of all the great comets that have stirred the imagination of mankind. Looking ahead to the holidays, the book would make a great gift to accompany the approach of Christmas comet ISON, which we hope will still brighten and become spectacular at that time.

NINE SIMPLE TIPS FOR RECYCLING AT HOME to reduce your weekly contribution to the local doors until pick-up day.

Unfortunately, many people either aren't recycling as much as they could be, or are recycling the wrong way. A main reason for this is lack of access to accurate information.

Even if you know the basics, you may have lingering questions. Covanta, a world leader and expert in sustainable waste management and renewable energy, offers helpful insights into common recycling questions:

E. ASTER BUNNYMUND AND THE WARRIOR EGGS AT THE EARTH'S CORE By William Joyce

The second week of September comes upon us, and that means we continue with the fantastical worlds and words of William Joyce and his Guardians of Childhood series; this time with Book Two: "E. Aster Bunnymund and the Warrior Eggs at the Earth's Core!" Never lacking in tone, pacing, or the fun adventures, this story picks up where Book One left off, from the previously told story of Nicholas St. North and his battle with Pitch, the Nightmare King. The thrills continue in Book Two when the characters of North, Ombric, and Katherine discover that Pitch is up to his devious ways, and are instructed from the Man in the Moon, to not just stop him, but also to gain help from an unlikely source. Along with the appearance of the village children and the return of Nightlight; these heroes will take the reader on new journey, complete with details, new information, more backstories, and finally the appearance of the new ally, E. Aster Bunnymund, the last of the legendary race called Pookas.

Readers (especially young readers) will be delighted at this new addition, and how the story starts to take on a stronger and possibly darker turn as Pitch the Nightmare King is not just growing stronger, but also at the challenge of E. Aster Bunnymund being reluctant to aid our heroes while also being rather elusive. Again, William Joyce has worked his magic, adding in new illustrations and noticeable changes in perspectives from the various characters; shorter chapters connect seamlessly to longer chapters, while the chapters themselves switch between characters to show the actions taken at the time, while building up to the exciting climatic battle. Intended for younger readers aged 7 to 11, Book Two of the "Guardians of Childhood" series will continue to kindle that youthful spark in your young readers, or to ignite it even in some older readers. Copyrighted in 2012, and receiving praise from various critics as well as Booklist, "E. Aster Bunnmymund and the Warrior Eggs at the Earth's Core!" is sure to indulge your inner child to continue believe in magic, adventure, and dreams. Also, keep an eye out for next week's review, as well as checking out the film "Rise of the Guardians", which features a stellar cast which includes Hugh Jackman as the voice of E. Aster Bunnymund.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS: SHORT TERM 12

"Short Term 12" is a moving drama about Grace (Brie Larson), a fierce yet fragile twenty-something year-old supervisor at a foster-care facility for at-risk teenagers. In addition to navigating through the trouble waters at the group home, she is dealing with her own personal issues and difficult past. However, by her side is her long-term boyfriend and co-worker, Mason (John Gallagher

When a problematic teenage girl enters the facility, Grace is reminded of her past that she's tried to put behind her. This leads to an electric connection between the two girls. With a subject matter that is often ominous and multifarious, "Short Term 12" easily finds the balance of drama and humor in the most unexpected scenarios. Destin Daniel Cretton's second feature film (adapted from his own short film) supplies superb performances, razor-sharp writing, and stunning direction. "Short Term 12" is sincerely poignant and an exceptional movie going experience that should not be missed by film lovers of all ages.

Brie Larson is going to be the next big star. Her portrayal of Grace, the leader at the group home, is simply marvelous. I hate to even call it a "performance" because she basically sinks so deep into this character that it feels overwhelmingly real. The entire film doesn't seem like a work of fiction, but as if we're watching the lives of real people as the cameras shoot their daily lives. Larson is a revelation and this breakthrough accomplishment will undoubtedly put her on everyone's radar in Hollywood. As for the film itself, "Short Term 12" is nothing short of extraordinary. Deeply emotional, severely emphatic, and dashes of authentic humor mixed in for good measure, "Short Term 12" quite possibly may just be a masterpiece. All the supporting players are terrific as they are uniformly convincing in their given roles. "Short Term 12" packs every kind of punch possible and each one is a knockout.

If there's anything wrong with "Short Term 12," I couldn't find it. The whole film works like magic. It's a prime example of not only what independent filmmaking is truly all about, but also all cinema alike. It will move you, send chills down through your body, and may even have you shedding a tear or two. At the same token, it'll toss a few laughs your way, inspire you, and have you leaving the theater with a smile. If that's not a rare experience these days, I don't know what it is. "Short Term 12" is the best American film of 2013 so far.

PREVENTATIVE MEDICINE

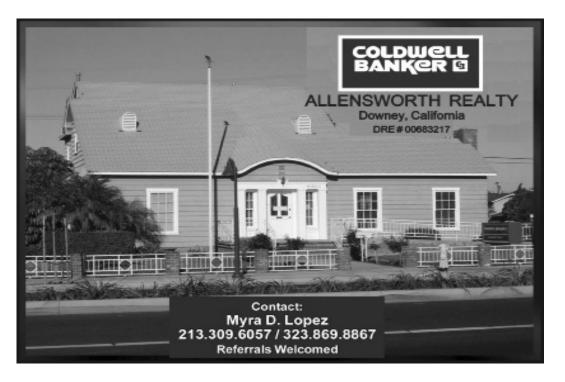

It's an understandable conundrum: sellers believe their home is worth more than it is, and buyers think that it's worth less. So where is the proverbial "sweet spot" when it comes to the single most important aspect of marketing your home - setting its price?

Consider how many homes are for sale in your neighborhood. Is that number high? Then your listing price should be lower than the competition if you want to generate the most interest. Obvious,

But how many of those rival listings are foreclosed properties or short sale listings? The most critical factor in evaluating this type of competition is the condition in which they are offered. Neglected homes aren't likely to affect you, but if they are in good shape and presented at prices 20% below market, you've got some hard thinking to do.

If buyers aren't making appointments or showing up at an open house event, you probably priced too high at the start. Don't hesitate to make an adjustment, however, because properties generate the most interest in the earliest stage of the listing.

Finally, give any offer strong consideration. You may counter, but these days, buyers won't engage in extended negotiations - they'll just move on to the next property. You can avoid these bitter pills by practicing a little preventative medicine through competitive pricing right from the beginning.

CHANGING YOUR ATTITUDE ABOUT MONEY CAN HELP YOU MAKE MORE

(StatePoint) For many Americans, reaching their financial goals seems like a near impossible task.

If you are looking to retire younger or are seeking a fresh approach to achieving financial freedom, you may need to change your attitude towards money and make changes in how you spend, save and

"So many of us are on a hamster wheel of earn and spend that doesn't allow for growth," says entrepreneur Jack Bosch, author of "Forever Cash: Break the Earn-Spend Cycle, Take Charge of Your Life; Build Everlasting Wealth." "Regardless of how much you earn, if you spend all of it, you are no better off than you were if you never had made that money at all."

Bosch offers some tips to help make and save money:

Spend on Investments

After necessary expenses, spend your money on things that will make money.

A typical pile of savings can disappear in a market crash. Look for investments that produce a stream of revenue, such as a business, rental property or intellectual properties, so that the income from these investments helps pay for your regular expenses.

Break the Spend Cycle

Break the cycle of earning to spend. The truly wealthy use their investments to pay for their lifestyle, not their active income.

Think about how much money you would need to pull in each to live the way you want. Then consider how you can use the money that you currently make, whether from a job or other income sources, to connect it into additional cash-flow streams.

Avoid Destructive Patterns

Many people don't think about what spending money now means for the future. Just because you are bringing in a certain amount of money doesn't mean you need to spend it.

"A new luxury car today could mean the difference between having a quarter-million dollars or even half-million dollars in the bank 30 years from now," says Bosch. "Most people would think twice about buying that item if they knew the future ramifications."

Don't Restrict Too Much

There is still room in a budget for things you enjoy. If you really like to buy a cup of coffee every morning, don't stop. Cutting out everything you enjoy from your budget is usually not sustainable.

The best way to save is to sensibly cut back on the things that don't make a huge difference in your life and then use that excess money to invest in something that brings in more cash and ideally cash flow. Do that again and again, and the cash flow from your investments can quickly make a substantial difference in your life, even potentially allowing you to retire earlier than you thought possible.

For more tips on breaking the spend cycle and building wealth, visit www.ForeverCash.com.

The first step to saving more money is to change your attitude. Making smart choices today will pay off tomorrow.

BUSINESS TODAY

The latest on Business News, Trends and Techniques

By La Quetta M. Shamblee, MBA

IS YOUR BUSINESS HOLIDAY READY?

As the month of September reaches its midpoint, business owners still have time to plan and put things in place to capitalize on the increased spending that comes with every holiday season. Every business can benefit from some type of promotion focused on the holiday season. Two important questions are, what type of promotion and what will it cost? A simple four-step process can be used to help answer these and other questions to set the stage for increased sales during the busiest and most profitable time of the year for many businesses, and particularly for retail establishments.

Pick Your Product: Identify the specific product (or service) as the central focal point for your campaign. This may be a single item, or it may be represent a line or family of products. Think of the green milkshakes at McDonald's around St. Patrick's Day or the special hot cider beverages sold by coffee houses during the Christmas season.

Primp Your Place of Business: Whether you conduct business in a physical location or through an online store, be sure to make it as appealing and as comfortable as possible for customers to check out your selection of goods and/or services. It is important to spruce up your space by incorporating color palettes and items associated with the holiday season. Holly berries, ornaments, reds and greens, and holiday music are among the things that may be used to help your customers tap into their holiday mood and increase the likelihood of them spending money at your place of business.

Promote Products & Packages as Holiday Gifts: In addition to preparing creative displays in your store or on your website, be sure to have signage that informs customers of special items available for purchase as gifts. "You've shopped for everyone else, not take a moment to stop and pamper yourself" might serve as a useful promotional message for a spa or massage therapist. It is to every business owner's benefit to have gift certificates readily available year round, but particularly during the holidays to make it easy for people to purchase as gifts. By all means, be sure to post signage that indicates "Gift Certificates Available" along with informing customers of this option.

A seemingly mundane gift can have a "wow" factor if it is beautifully wrapped. By the same token, a business owner can create a more festive atmosphere that encourages more customers to stop, browse and spend some of their holiday budget.

Email marketing helps you stay in touch with current customers and prospects. As a business owner, it's important to be where your customers are and connect with them on the tools they use. Email is definitely one of those tools. Many people check their emails around the clock; some people even check it before they get out of bed! How often you send an email campaign will depend on your business. Some restaurants can get away with a daily email that announces the lunch specials. I know a realtor who sends out a weekly email with her favorite new listings. In my business (B2B) we send out a monthly email with social media tips and our current schedule of workshops. It's important to deliver what you promise. If you ask people to sign up for your emails and you promise to send them a monthly email, make sure you do it. If someone signs up to get your emails and you promise to send the monthly schedule but you never get around to it, you are missing out on business. When people join your email list, they are asking you to remind them about what you offer. It's your opportunity to stay top of mind with people who are important to your business.

1. Send a simple thank you email to your current customers. Tell them what their business means to you. Maybe you include a customer loyalty coupon for their next visit.

Here are 5 ideas for your next email campaign:

2. Promote your social media. If you want to get more people to "Like" your Facebook page, send out a simple email announcing your page, let them know how it will benefit them.

3. Promote a product or service. Keep it simple with one call to action. Don't give them too many choices. Include a discount to make them feel like your email subscribers receive exclusive benefits.

4. Leverage a holiday coming up. Remind people "it's time to fall back" and change their clocks. Wish people a happy Halloween and include a spooky coupon with monster savings.

5. Simple announcements. Do you need to announce an important change in your business? Maybe you have new holiday hours or there is a new person who joined the team. Think of these as press release types of emails.

Because more and more people are checking their emails on smart phones, keep your emails simple, bigger fonts, one column with a simple message and one clear call to action. What do you want them to do? Print a coupon, click on a link that goes to your web site, "Like" your Facebook page. After you send the email, measure the results. Did they do what you wanted them to do?

Ask jai is a weekly column that will strive to honestly answer your job search questions relating to job searching techniques, networking skills, resume writing and interviewing. The employment situation is getting better, however, it is still a challenge finding were the jobs are located and how to get pass the "gate-keepers". As an Executive Recruiter I was privy to working directly with Corporate Recruiters and understanding their process in selecting which candidates to interview and hire. I will candidly answer your questions, possibly bluntly answering your questions, but I will be totally honest. My objective is to help you achieve your employment goal.

Dear Jai:

About a month ago I had my resumé critiqued and revised by a professional Resumé Writer. The resumé writer charged me an arm and a leg to write it. I felt the final resumé was a waste of my money. The resume was awful! She removed all my work history and reduced my resumé to 1 page! The end result was a useless piece of paper. I originally had a great 3-page resumé that included all my work history and described everything I had ever done for an employer. I have over 20 years' experience as an Administrative Assistant in the Healthcare industry. I was with my last employer for 10 years and worked in several different departments. Previous to that I was employed by 5 different employers. The Resumé Writer explained to would better represent me to employers and that the employers did not want to receive nor read a 3-page resumé, especially for an Administrative Assistant position. She re-formatted my resume as a Functional Resumé. I really feel like my previous work history was meaningless and as she put it..."totally irrelevant to my future employment". Don't employers want to know that I am committed to long-term employment, that I am loyal, and not a job hopper? I don't want to post this resumé on any job board or send to any employer. Should I go back to using my old resumé? Really Upset see you if start getting results. I bet you will.

Dear Really Upset:

A Resumé Writer's objective is to write you an effective resumé that will get you results. Employers and recruiters really do not want to read a three-page resumé. Any information on your resumé that is older than ten years is considered obsolete. A resumé is basically an introduction regarding your work history, skills, and accomplishments. The key objective of a Resumé Writer and the resumé is to get you an interview. The goal is to make the resumé interesting and content oriented enough for the employer to invite you to interview for their position. I expect the Resumé Writer composed you a functional resumé instead of a chronological resumé. This sometimes is a shock to their clients. A functional resumé summarizes your past ten years of experience me that she felt that the resumé she had written and accomplishments in a summary format and then list the job title, company and years of employment separately. This really is the best format for someone like yourself who has worked for one company over ten years and in similar positions. It is a shock sometimes when you have your resumé revised, updated and re-written, especially by a professional resumé writer. However, they have your best interest at heart and their goal is for your resumé to "grab" the attention of the employer and to contact you for an interview. Submit the revised resumé and

STUART Tolchin.....On LIFE

TENNIS, ANYONE?

Somewhere in this house is a picture of my son and me with our tennis racquets, clinging to the huge statue of Arthur Ashe holding his racquet. I wish I could find the picture and will probably pester my wife to look for it when she wakes up. Tennis is on my mind right now for a bunch of reasons. The United States open just concluded yesterday and, as usual, I spent many, too many, hours glued to the television totally absorbed by the matches. Additionally, I just finished reading this memoir by an Indian physician, Abraham Verghese, entitled the Tennis Partner which seems to be intended only for me.

Of course I can't find the picture I'm looking for but at least I can sort of picture it in my mind. The picture was taken by my wife in Richmond Virginia, capitol of the old Confederacy. Before that, it was the place where the Virginia House of Burgesses met and where Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and that other Virginian future-President, George Washington, along with old "Give me liberty or give me death" Patrick Henry first started getting their political act together.

Richmond is steeped in history and along its main street are statues of iconic Virginians including Confederate Generals holding weapons. These are all dead White Men, of course. But who do you think is at the very end of the line behind Confederate General Stonewall Jackson? Yep, you guessed it; Arthur Ashe, an African-American in tennis shorts holding his racquet. In my unfindable picture, my son and I stand on the pedestal with Arthur holding our racquets in just the same position. What does it mean that the statue of a Black Man, a modern Black Man stands in this honored position right in the heart of the old Confederacy? For that matter, what significance does it have even to me that Stuart and Aaron Tolchin are right up there on the pedestal with Arthur?

First of all, Arthur Ashe was an American tennis player. He was the first and only Black Man to become a Wimbledon and United States Open Champion. He was a UCLA student about the same time I was and used to play ping-pong at one of the residence halls where I lived one summer. Arthur, as most everyone who is interested already knows, died of AIDS which developed in connection with blood transfusions he received. As a scholar he completed a three-volume study of Black Athletes. He is a seminal figure in the American march for Civil Rights and the recently concluded United States Open played in New York is played in Arthur Ashe's Stadium which is, I think, the largest tennis stadium in the world.

What about Stuart and Aaron Tolchin? What are we doing up there? Tennis has always been my sport. I think it all goes back to my lonely childhood wherein the only "toy" (I think of myself as never having had toys) was a ten cent paddle with an elastic string and little red ball stapled to it. Hour after hour I solitarily hit that ball setting personal records into the thousands. I think the skill I developed spilled over into skills in other racquet sports and almost all of my male friends are guys I used to defeat at tennis and ping pong. I can picture myself with now deceased friends, good athletes probably better than me, out on the Courts with headbands and the old wooden racquets that are miniscule by today's standards. I could beat them all and still can in my dreams.

When it came time for my single parenting days, I got the idea that tennis was a sport that my two kids could enjoy with me. Many hours I spent playing with them and watching them compete against each other. Probably many parents experience that tension of watching their kids play and living and dying with each point. My daughter, the future prominent Immigration Attorney, hit every ball hard with little concern or interest in the position of the other player. My son, a mentally challenged person, surprisingly played a strategic game, aware of the opponent's position and crafty and generally more successful. Who knows why life works that way?

I thought the three of us would be able to play tennis forever. But now my daughter has injured her foot while running in South America somewhere and my son has lost most of his eyesight and tennis is just too frustrating. My resulting sadness at the loss of tennis is akin to my sadness at the loss of my experience of today's America. In my head, Arthur Ashe directly leads to Barack Obama who, I thought, would lead into the realization of a kind of America of which I could be proud.. Well, without question, I am proud of my children, both of them, and I would like to be just as proud of America. I would like us all to be up on some future pedestal with our President. Right now things are tough, but they do some a little better than yesterday and certainly better than in the days of Stonewall Jackson. Let's see what tomorrow brings.

50 SHADES OF GREY SUITS

old-fashioned guys still things that are not there. wearing a suit. I have been wearing a suit and tie for as long as I can remember, which really isn't saying a great deal. Not much I can remember these days, which is one of the advantages of growing older.

When the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage grills me about some incident that did or did not happen, I can always rely on the good old faithful, "I just can't remember!"

"Well," she stammers as she stares at me, "but don't let it happen again."

My problem is I cannot remember what I am supposed to remember so how can I remember not to let it happen again? (Sigh.)

So, my memory is not quite up to par in many areas. One area has to do with my suits.

There is only one thing I do not like about my suits. I feel most comfortable in the suit and so I have several suits that I wear on a rotating basis. Naturally, they all look alike so nobody knows I am rotating my suits.

The secret to rotating suits is to have an assortment of ties, but make sure those ties do not look alike. I have enough ties that I do not have to wear one for up to three months.

I have a bright pink tie I wear twice a year and every time I wear it, several people ask me if I got a new necktie. I always smile and nod in the affirmative. Why spoil a good moment?

The negative side of wearing suits is occasionally you have to replace them.

There are all sorts of reasons why a suit needs to be replaced. One is that you grow out of it or it grows out of you. Either way the suit has to be replaced.

Another reason is that something happened to the suit and there is some tear necessitating the whole suit being replaced. The key here is not to let my wife know that there is a small tear in my suit. The moment she discovers the slightest tear in one of my suits she begins her plan of having that suit replaced.

For me, a tear is simply a tear. If it is in the rear of my suit jacket, I do not see it so it is no concern to me. If other people are inconvenienced by a small tear in the back of my suit coat, let them replace the suit. I can deal with all kinds of tear oddities about my suit.

Not so in the case of my wife. Even a slightly worn spot on my suit coat, begins her thinking of replacing it. Believe me; I try to hide it as much as possible to keep it from the ever-piercing eyes

I guess I am one of those of my wife who sees through everything, even

Just recently, despite my attempts to conceal the issue, my wife spotted a small tear on my suit coat. It happened to be my favorite suit coat. I can recall exactly when and how the split occurred. I kept that information away from my wife as long as I possibly could; now I had to pay

Early Monday morning we were off to the men's store to purchase another suit. The whole way there, I was thinking of all the other things I could be doing at this time. Being the gracious and humble husband I am, I yielded to the prompting of my wife and we were off to the

As soon as we walked in, we were greeted by a young man to which my wife said, "We're here to buy a suit."

I figured I better step in before the conversation got out of control. "We're looking for a grey suit."

"I understand," said the young man as he thoughtfully pulled at his chin looking down the long row of suits. "And what color grey are you looking for?"

"Say what," I said.

"What color grey are you looking for?" He

As far as I was concerned, grey was grey and that was the color I was looking for. Nonetheless, I was in for a surprise.

"We have a variety of grey suits. There is a charcoal grey. Light grey. Dark grey." He went on and on about the variety of grey colors in his shop. If I heard correctly, according to him, there were at least 50 shades of grey.

Believe me, there was not anything romantic about that!

All I wanted was a grey suit. To me, grey is grey is grey. I do not want my suit to be a fashion statement. In fact, I want my suit to be silent and say nothing at all.

We walked out of the men's store with a new suit and my wife had a wonderful smile on her face. I on the other hand, had a sick feeling in the pit of my stomach realizing just how much this grey suit cost me.

I have a new appreciation for what the apostle Paul said. "That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man" (Ephesians not change the past . . . We owe to those who died and to those who survived who loved them, our every effort to increase our vigilance and strengthen our stand against those who would commit such atrocities in the future here or elsewhere."

President Bill Clinton in Kigali, Rwanda - February, 2009

For ten years into the post-Nixon era our nation suffered (or benefited) from the "Vietnam syndrome"; we were coming to grips with 60,000 American (and hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese) casualties over the previous decade, as the Communists took control in Vietnam and Pol Pot inflicted his killing fields on Cambodia.

We needed a "victory". It came with our invasion and conquest of the Caribbean island of Grenada (about nine-times the population of Sierra Madre) in 1983. The morale-boosting invasion came only a couple days after the loss of 241 servicemen in the bombing of our Marine barracks in Beirut.

The invasion was condemned by our allies; the U.N. General Assembly called it "a flagrant violation of international law". One memorable postwar story was the revelation that over 8,600 medals were awarded related to a conflict in which no more than 7,000 soldiers were on the ground.

Six years later saw our overthrow of Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega, who'd been working with the CIA for thirty years. He'd also been scoring additional juice from the Medellin Cartel, among others.

Correspondents were frustrated by the near-total blackout of the operation; no visuals, no on-theground reporting. We still don't know the cost - estimates of civilian casualties range from a few hundred Panamanians to several thousand.

By this time "Vietnam syndrome" had been alleviated, and the following year cameras turned on again for Operation Desert Storm. Our air-toground missiles appeared like images on an Atari arcade screen. If civilians got in the way, we were told they were there as "human shields".

We lost 114 troops in that conflict killed by the "enemy". We lost 180 from "accidents" and "friendly fire".

Twenty years later, we're dealing with the "Iraq syndrome". (Not much mention of Afghanistan - as of last month 2,155 Americans killed, over 19,000 wounded – and counting.) There's also "Deranged tea-bagger syndrome" - where the position on any initiative from the Obama Administration, foreign or domestic, echoes the song Groucho sang in DUCK SOUP; "Whatever It Is, I'm Against It".

Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) and Rep. Joe Wilson (R-SC) dismiss the president's actions on Syria as a ploy to divert attention from Benghazi. While most fear a wider conflict, Sens. John McCain (R-AZ), Lindsey Graham (R-SC) and Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) oppose the president's plan because he's not committed to "regime change" and becoming an active participant in Syria's civil war. Rep. Michelle Bachman (R-MN) travels to Egypt to congratulate the the only one making any sense.

"We did not act quickly enough after the killing began . . . We canof Mohamed Morsi - because it was his Muslim Brotherhood that attacked us on 9/11.

> In dealing with these syndromes, President Obama has a couple things going for him. The first is that those who practice Theodore Roosevelt's dictum of "Speak softly and carry a big stick" have a record of credibility and success on the world stage.

> President Kennedy insisted that scientific advances, whether in atomic energy or space exploration, be used for peaceful purposes. A crowning achievement was the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty of 1963. He made known to Soviet Premier Khrushchev, however, what the consequences would be if his missiles were not removed from Cuba. They were.

> President Carter is proud that we engaged in no hostile military action during his presidency, and of bringing peace between Israel and Egypt. When our personnel in Tehran were captured in 1979, the mullahs decreed they'd be tried as spies and punished accordingly. Carter made clear through channels that if any of the hostages were put on trial, an economic blockade would be placed around Iran. If any were harmed or killed, we'd launch a military attack. No hostages were put on trial; all returned safe and unharmed.

> When those 241 servicemen were killed in Beirut, President Reagan's response was to pull our troops out of Lebanon – and invade Grenada.

> When Osama bin Laden justified the attacks of 9/11 by complaining of the presence of American troops at Muslim holy sites in Saudi Arabia, President Bush's response was to assure safe passage of the bin Laden family out of the country, close our Prince Sultan air base in Saudi Arabia - and invade Iraq.

> In his speech last Tuesday, President Obama made clear that while diplomatic means would be pursued to remove Assad's chemical weapons capabilities, our forces would remain in place, prepared to exercise a military option at our

> The other thing President Obama has going for him is his ability to play the game in Washington and in diplomatic circles as a chess grandmaster. A few days ago, Assad and his benefactors were denying he even had chemical weapons. Now, Assad, along with Russia and Iran, are expressing commitment to allow U.N. personnel to secure and destroy those weapons. The world community has come on board in support, and members of congress would be hard-pressed to explain to constituents why they'd find this unacceptable.

> While opponents have been flailing in search of a coherent argument, the president has been getting the pieces in place for an outcome where the credible threat, not actual use, of force would remove chemical weapons from one tyrant, and send a clear message to others who might consider their use.

> A lot of noise has come out of Washington about acting in accordance with views expressed by constituents. That's not leadership; it's a cop-out from those who clearly have access to more information than we do. The only one who's shown leadership so far is President Obama - and he's

Syria And "Peace In Our Time" GREG Welborn

The speech was more than align so tightly that direct comparisons can be made, but President Obama's speech this last Tuesday night was so eerily anything else a collection of and effect to Prime Minister Chamberlain's famous speech that we all should hope and pray that the similarities end here and

For those too young to remember the reference to Britain's Chamberlain, the prime minister went to Germany to "negotiate" with Hitler. The "negotiate" with Hitler. Fuhrer had been testing western Numerous resolve for years. times Hitler had violated the treaty ending the first world war, and equally numerous times the west warned him to stop or they would make him stop. Many red lines were drawn, none were enforced. When Prime Minister Chamberlain returned to Britain, he declared his negotiations with Hitler a huge success and that he had achieved "peace in our time". Hitler had a different take. He saw Chamberlain, and the west, as indecisive and weak and started WWII by invading Poland.

We can change the dates, the geography and the names of the players, but, like Chamberlain before him, President Obama's speech cements months of indecisiveness and weakness that undoubtedly will embolden our enemies and may well start the war he has long sought to avoid.

The President's speech on Tuesday was supposed to be the grand eloquent, impassioned and articulate explanation to the American people, and the world beyond, why the U.S. needed to strike Syria militarily. Were it such, the speech might have reversed the long slide in the President's, and the U.S.'s, credibility. Instead, the speech removed whatever doubt we, our allies and our enemies had about our resolve and willingness similar in its situational context contradictions that amounted to nothing but a political fig leaf to spare a president from a political defeat he engineered. President Obama told us that the American military doesn't deliver "pinpricks" less than 48 hours after the Secretary of State told the world that our contemplated military action was "unbelievably small". He told us that weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) in the hands of terrorists would force us to act, but then he rejected taking that action based on vague promises. He called the Russian offer to remove Assad's WMD as a significant breakthrough without addressing the obvious problem that Russia has all along been supporting Assad's lie that he never had WMDs in the first place or that he used them against his people. He called for vigorous verification of the removal of WMDs despite almost universal acknowledgement that inspectors will never be able to verify such removal in the middle of an ongoing war.

More importantly, even if we somehow believe that international inspectors be able to identify and reclaim 100% of the WMDs, Assad will still emerge from this episode without having paid any real price for using them. One news commentator rather wittily compared it to telling a murderer that his only punishment was to have his gun taken from him and stored next door at his best friend's house. This isn't punishment; this won't deter this dictator or any of the others who are watching this president's actions. This is appearement, just as it was when Prime Minister Chamberlain failed to confront stick for awhile. All reports out of Washington D.C. indicated that President Obama was going to lose his vote to authorize military action. The political fallout from that would have critically wounded this president. But here again, he didn't lose that vote because the Republican opposition failed to rally around the flag. He was losing it because he so bungled the job that even significant numbers of his own party were set to vote against it. The President may have avoided a political defeat on his home turf, but he's suffered a terrible defeat on the world stage. Allies and enemies, alike, will take note and act accordingly – the former thinking twice before sticking their necks out to support us, and the latter thinking nigh at all before challenging us. One British commentator referenced Tuesday as "the worst day for U.S. and wider western diplomacy since records began". there is some gallows humor in that statement, the fact remains an inconsistent and weak American president has been out maneuvered by thugs and rogues. The Iranians will take it as a sign they can proceed with their bomb, and the Israelis will take it as a sign they need to stop Iran on their own. The world just became a much more dangerous place, with the prospects of a major war increasing substantially, even as we celebrate peace in our time.

The City is bounded by the cities of Arcadia to the east and south, Pasadena to the west, and the Angeles National Forest to the north. The City encompasses approximately 3.2 square miles.

Project Description: The proposed project is the update of the Sierra Madre General Plan. The General Plan Update is an opportunity to take a comprehensive look at the City as a system and in a regional context, to address contemporary conditions and laws, and to reflect the latest aspirations for the future of the community. As with the existing Sierra Madre General Plan, the General Plan Update will continue to serve as a long-range policy document that defines the framework by which the City's physical, natural, cultural, social and economic resources are to be managed over time. Consistent with the adopted Vision and Guiding Principles, the updated General Plan will focus on preserving and sustaining the City's distinctive character as a historic small-town; ensuring that adequate City services that match the needs of the community are provided; ensuring the City's natural resources (e.g., San Gabriel Mountain foothills, wildlife, forest, open space, watershed, etc.) are adequately protected; promoting and developing a strong, diversified local economy; and ensuring that new development is harmonious with existing neighborhoods, maintains the small-town character of the City, and does not unduly burden existing City services and infrastructure or impact the environment.

The General Plan Update will guide the growth and development (e.g., infill development, redevelopment, and revitalization/restoration) of the City 20 years or more into the future. The General Plan Update involves a revision to the current land use map and all elements except Housing. It will guide growth and development within the City by designating land uses in the proposed land use map and through implementation of the goals and policies of the General Plan Update. Assuming a theoretical buildout (post-2035 scenario) of the land use plan, the City is projected to accommodate approximately 5,017 residential dwelling units (4,911 existing plus 106 new) and 8,808,401 square feet of non-residential square footage (8,757,035 existing plus 51,366 new), which includes commercial, manufacturing and institutional land uses. Additionally, approximately 544 acres will be dedicated to open space and hillside management.

as distribution and intensity of land use development, urban form, historic preservation, economic development, and circulation. The Resource Management chapter covers topics such as hillsides and open space, biological resources, dark sky, trees, water resources, waste management and recycling, greenhouse gas reduction and air quality. The Hazard Protection chapter addresses fire safety, flooding and landslides, seismic safety, and noise. Finally, the Community Services chapter covers topics such as law enforcement, recreation services, library services, community cultural and special events, transit, and public services. Environmental Analysis: In accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEOA) guidelines Section 15063(a), the City determined that an EIR would be required for this project. Pursuant to CEOA Guidelines Section 15060(d), "If the lead agency can determine that an EIR will be clearly required for a project, the agency may skip further initial review of the project and begin work directly on the EIR process. In the absence of an initial study, the lead agency shall still focus the significant effects of the project and indicate briefly its reasons for determining that other effects would not be significant or potentially significant." Additionally, as stated in CEQA Guidelines Section 15063, if a lead agency can determine that an EIR will clearly be required for the project, an Initial Study is not required. In accordance with the aforementioned CEQA Guidelines sections, we have prepared an NOP for the proposed project without an accompanying Initial Study, since this is a full-scope EIR. Only Mineral Resources has been eliminated from further analysis since there are no mineral resources located within the City. The following topics will be analyzed in detail in their respective sections of the EIR:

Greenhouse Gas Emissions Public Services

Agricultural and Forest Resources Hazards and Hazardous Materials Recreation

Hydrology and Water Quality Transportation and Traffic Air Quality Biological Resources Land Use and Planning Utilities and Service Systems

Cultural Resources Noise

Geology and Soils Population and Housing
