JOE AND JACQUIE PERGOLA CHOSEN AS 2013 SIERRA MADRE CITIZENS OF THE YEAR

Joe and Jacquie Pergola have been named 2013 Citizens of the Year by the Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce, announced Ed Chen, Chamber President earlier this week.

The couple has exemplified the spirit of volunteerism in our community for many years in-cluding their many years of service and contributions to organizations such as the Creative Arts Group and The Sierra Madre Kiwanis Club. (partial

The announcement was made on Wednesday and came as a total surprise to the Pergolas. A bouquet of flowers was presented by Chamber Board Vice President Noah Green at the Podley Real Estate office where Jacquie works. Joe had been lured there under a very creative pretense.

A BIG THANK YOU FROM THE BIG ONE'S CREW!

The Sierra Madre Rose Float Association wants to thank the community for its support in building this year's award winning float, "Catching the Big One"! It takes many people with different talents to make it happen.

Many kept our tummies full during our decorating week, including Beantown, The Burger Shack, Mountain Views News, Rotary, Kiwanis, Casa del Rey, Albertsons, The Bottle Shop, Hansen's and the many individuals who brought goodies. Thanks also go to those who took a turn at the grill including Rena & Jason Williams, Halcyon Koerber and John Harabedian.

We appreciate the ongoing assistance we receive from the City including police support, timely tree trimming on Sierra Madre Blvd. to allow the float to travel safely and much help from the Public Works Department. We are grateful for the overnight security at Kersting Court provided by 3 of the SMPD Volunteers.

This year it was great to have help from several City Council members: John Harabedian, John Carpoccia and Chris Koerber – your presence at our float barn meant a lot.

Our float operators enjoyed extra rest with the loan of an RV on December 31st, parked in the parade formation area. Thank you Pat & Jim.

A special thank you to Verizon for providing us internet access, so we could utilize our brand new online scheduling program onsite, and Alisa Unell for spending countless hours as our program administrator and troubleshooter. To those who took the time to sign up online, thanks for your patience; we plan to do this again.

Publicity is essential. Thank you to Mountain Views News, The Sierra Madre Weekly and Diane Medina from Channel 7 News for getting the word out when we really needed it.

Our thank you list is not all-inclusive, but please know how much your contributions were valued.

Of course, none of this would be possible without financial contributions from our many loyal supporters.

Thank you so much!!

you, Sierra Madre."

Councilman pledges to complete his term "to the best of his ability" despite personal challenges that compel his resignation. Notes the importance of the water rate increase in order to place Sierra Madre Water Department on "solid financial footing"

In the second surprising announcement by a sitting Sierra Madre City Councilman in the last ten days, Councilman Chris Koerber has announced that he too will not seek re-election. He joins Former Mayor and Councilman Josh Moran who made a similar announcement last week. In a statement released on Wednesday, Koerber said, "I will not be running for re-election for Sierra Madre City Council in April, 2014. When I pulled papers on December 17, 2013 to run for re-election little did I know that, in the next 10 days, two members of my family would be diagnosed with very serious medical conditions. Obviously the possibility of my being called out-of-state, on short notice for an indeterminate length of time, is extremely high.

If I were to be re-elected, I'd be unable to put my full attention to the needs of the City for the next four years. Also, I do not want to be in the situation of leaving my elected position early. That would be unfair to the fine folks of Sierra Madre. I have been blessed and honored to serve the citizens of Sierra Madre for the last two years. I have met so many caring and genuinely nice folks!

I pledge to finish my term to the best of my ability. This will include City issues like the extremely important water rate increase scheduled for February 1, 2014 that will put our Water Department on a solid financial footing. I make this decision not to run with a heavy heart, but family comes first. Thank Koerber, who originally won the seat to fill the unexpired term of Former Mayor Joe Mosca. During his tenure on the council, Koerber was often the lone dissenting vote, adhering to his belief in fiscal conservatism. And, although he has been known to abhor raising taxes, after thoroughly reviewing the city's water department and its finances, he recognized the need for the proposed rate increase. In his withdrawal letter, he noticeably makes that point, possibly in an effort to discourage residents from opposing the increase.

His announcement has stunned many in the community however, as with Josh Moran, many have also expressed their respect for both men yielding to their family responsibilities. His withdrawal from the race leaves the decision of the remaining incumbent, Mayor Nancy Walsh, still open for speculation as the final date for filing is Monday, January 13, 2014.

Sierra Madre Police Blotter

For the period December 30, 2013 to January 5, 2014

Wednesday January 1, 2014

In the early morning hours a physical altercation took place in the 00 block of East Montecito Avenue. Earlier in the day, two neighbors argued about one party stealing electricity from a neighbor. That incident ended peacefully. Shortly after midnight one party returned and confronted the other. After a short verbal argument an altercation ensued with one individual sustaining multiple injuries to the face. The other party fled and has not yet been located. The investigation revealed that both parties have a long history of business disputes with each other.

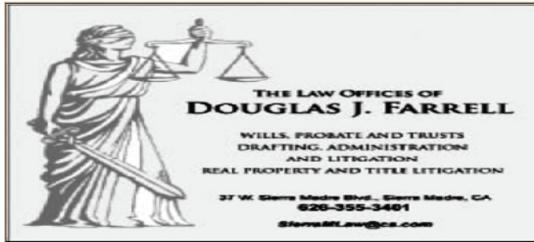

Friday January 3, 2014

Lawn tools were stolen from a gardener's vehicle parked at the curb in the 100 block of East Highland Avenue. The owner had only left the vehicle unattended for a few minutes as he worked in the back yard. When he returned, several items were missing from the bed of the truck.

At approximately 7pm, a traffic collision occurred in the intersection of Baldwin Avenue and Orange Grove Avenue. A northbound vehicle travelling at 30 MPH failed to stop for the stop sign and collided with an eastbound vehicle that was already in the intersection. The driver of the northbound vehicle stated he was new to the area and was looking for street signs. Occupants of both vehicles complained of injury and were transported to Arcadia Methodist Hospital for examination. Both vehicles sustained major damage.

Sunday January 5, 2014

At 3am, an officer observed a vehicle driving in excess of 50 MPH on Sierra Madre Boulevard near Lima Avenue. A traffic stop was initiated and the officer determined that the driver was under the influence of alcohol. The driver (male 29 years) failed to pass any of the field sobriety tests and was subsequently booked for DUI.

so lovely, so exquisite that it's sort of embarrassing. My Texas daughter texted me that it's a robust 15 degrees there in Wylie today and they had to drive Jessie, the Kindergarten Girl, to the bus stop! Now, friends, that's cold!

Saw five deer this morning, leisurely strolling down Canon Drive, which never fails to delight us. Also in the delight department, have you noticed there are a lot of Pasadena Parrots hanging out in town lately? What are they saying in squawk and shriek!

Another delight moment: Walked down to Kersting Court to take one final look at our Mayor's Trophy winning float, "Catching The Big One," and noticed one more delightful thing. On the back of the little rowboat where our Rose Princesses were perched, in small black letters, was its name: "Douglas D." One final tribute to dear friend Doug Sutcliffe, who, along with his wife, Donna, was a big part of so many of our Sierra Madre floats. The flowers still looked so fresh, even two days later, and I was consumed with a strong desire to get down to the nursery and buy some more bare root roses in that lavender color. My husband, the wise and ever-patient, John, pointed out that there is nowhere to put a new rose, unless I dig one up and toss it in the green waste bin. Well, fine, he's right, but I think I'll just go look anyway.

"All our dreams can come true, if we have the I don't know about you, but I'm really ready to think about something to eat that doesn't involve ham or turkey. 2014 has started off with weather that is so perfect, I really like clam chowder. The white (Boston) kind as opposed to the red (Manhattan) kind. Actually, I really like that kind, too. But today we're talking about Boston. Anyway, I really do love it, especially when I can find a few clams in it and it's not made totally of something resembling wallpaper paste! This version is not so thick you can eat it with a fork, and, well, frankly, it's awesome, easy to make and doesn't take all day to

8 slices bacon, chopped

½ cup diced celery (the heart part with the leaves still on the stalk – more flavor)

1 cup thinly sliced green onions

*30 oz., more or less, chopped clams

1 cup regular strength chicken broth 3 medium size red potatoes (about a lb.) peeled and diced 2 cups half & half

Pepper Chopped Parsley

*(I buy Bumble Bee fancy whole baby clams, which shows a net weight of 10 oz. and a drained weight of 5 oz. - these cost $2-something apiece and 4 cans gives me plenty of clams. There's probably a better bargain but I haven't looked for one.)

Cook the bacon in a 5 to 6 quart pan over medium heat until crisp. Stir occasionally. Discard all but about 3 Tb. of the drippings then add the celery and green onions. Cook, stirring often, until onions are limp. Stir in the clams and their liquid, broth and potatoes. Bring to a boil over high heat, then cover, reduce heat, and simmer till potatoes are tender to bite, about 10 minutes. Stir in the half & half and season to taste with pepper. Heat till steaming but not boiling. This smells incredible, by the way! Garnish with parsley and serve with some garlic bread. Enjoy!

Hamburger Hamlet Closes, Opens as Du-par's

As Pasadena celebrates the Cheeseburger next week, one local institution that made them famous, Hamburger Hamlet, closed its doors last week —ending a 40-year burger tradition in the city.

The location at 214 S Lake Ave. opened Jan. 4 as Dupar's Restaurant & Bakery. Hamburger Hamlet first opened in Pasadena in 1967. In a statement, Dupar's owner W.W. "Biff" Naylor said all the existing Hamburger Hamlet employees will keep their jobs at Du-par's.

Patrons of Hamburger
Hamlet took to social media to express their opinions on the change.

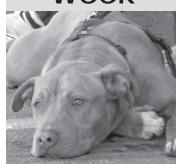

"Hamburger Hamlet was a magical place where burgers were made and eaten and loved...," wrote one reviewer on yelp.com. "And, while I like Du-par's, it is just not the same."

The public can vote for a favorite Pasadena eatery, including Du-par's, as part the Cheeseburger Challenge during the third annual Pasadena Cheeseburger Week.

Cheeseburger Week commemorates teenaged Sternberger's Lionel culinary experiment in the early 1920s at his father's restaurant, The Rite Spot, adding a slice of cheese to a burger. Rumor has it that Sternberger burned a hamburger and used the cheese to cover his error.

Voting opens on at pasadenarestaurantweek. com and ends on Monday, Jan. 21. Categories include Favorite Burger Restaurant, Favorite Lunch Counter Burger, Favorite Sit-Down/ White Table Cloth Burger, Favorite New Burger Restaurant, Favorite Beer and Burger, Favorite Sliders, among others.

Pet of the Week

Eric's adoption fee is $125, which includes his neuter surgery, a microchip, the first set of vaccinations, as well as a free follow-up health check at a participating vet. New adopters will receive complimentary health and wellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information on how to care for your pet. Ask an adoptions counselor for more information during your visit. Call the Pasadena Humane Society & SPCA at 626.792.7151 to ask about A343934, or visit at 361 S. Raymond Ave. in Pasadena. Adoption hours are 11-4 Sunday, 9-5 Tuesday – Friday, 9-4 Saturday. Pets may not be available for adoption and cannot be held for potential adopters from phone calls or email. #### Health Department Looks for Bone Marrow Donor

The public's help is needed to find a matching bone marrow donor for a 2-year-old Pasadena girl suffering with leukemia.

The Pasadena Public Health Department is partnering with the organization A3M-Asians for Miracle Marrow Matches (A3M), www.A3MHope.org, to encourage all members of the public interested in becoming a bone marrow donor to participate in the drive from 9:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 16, 2014, at the Pasadena Public Health Department, 1845 N. Fair Oaks Ave.

Just five minutes and a quick cheek swab may help find much-needed compatible donors for patients across the country, including, locally, 2-year-old Sofia of Pasadena, a little girl of mixed ancestry who suffers from leukemia. For more information on the donor drive, call (213) 625-2802 or visit www.A3Mhope.org.

A3M's mission is to improve the health and welfare of all people by providing education and assistance while facilitating prompt access to potential marrow and blood cell donors.

Donors must be between the ages of 18 to 44; be willing to donate to any patient in need and meet the health guidelines established by the National Marrow Donor Program, www. nmdp.org. The more people on the national donor registry, the better the chances are of finding matches for all patients of all backgrounds in need, including 2-year-old Sofia.

Currently, there are about 9.5 million national registry members in the United States. Of those, only 28 percent are of diverse racial or ethnic heritage.

Water Main Work to Begin on Foothill

Residents and businesses are advised that the work on a water mainline installation at the intersection of Foothill Boulevard and Sierra Madre Villa Avenue will begin on Monday and is scheduled to be completed by February 7. Work will occur from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The City urges motorists, bicyclists and pedestrians to use caution while traveling through the area. Motorists can anticipate traffic delays and it is recommended that they seek temporary alternative routes. The work will involve partial road closures and motorists may be detoured to Orange Grove Boulevard and Halstead Street during construction. Local access to businesses will be maintained.

The project is an effort by the Pasadena Water and Power Department (PWP). Vido Artukovich & Son is the contractor for the project.

Notices were previously distributed to residents and businesses directly affected by the construction work. On-street message signs have been placed on Foothill Boulevard and Sierra Madre Villa Avenue.

Allendale's new series "Critical Mass: The Culture of the Cold War," an examination of the impact of the Cold War on American culture. Also to be screened is First Time Here (1964), a short film by Richard Myers which incorporates dream imagery into an essay on atomic warfare.

"What's Going On?" News and Views from Joan Schmidt

THE END OF AN ERA: Sheriff Baca Retires

This article will have information you won't find anywhere else about Sheriff Baca.

Earlier this week, my friend of over fifteen years, Lee Baca, made the most difficult decision of his life-stepping down as Sheriff of Los Angeles County as he announced his retirement at the end of January. He could have finished out his term, but all the negative publicity about the Department had to stop.

I went on Facebook and I was shocked about a certain retired LASD Sergeant's REALLY ROTTEN comments about the Sheriff. I wondered where this sergeant has been the last fifteen years! (Needless to say, I unfriended

I met both Chief Lee Baca and Community Policing Director Natalie Salazar after I joined the Community Advisory Committee at Temple Station. They both blew me away with their knowledge and visions. During his election, I became better acquainted with Lee and Carol, (his fiancée, now wife) because of my journalism. I saw firsthand many positive programs such as VIDA, attended two Asian Gang Conferences and the Anti-Hate Crime Conference, saw the establishment of a Clergy Council and Gang Advisory Groups at various stations-the list goes on and on. It

The brutality at Central Jail has been abominable. The Sheriff acknowledged that and said he should have been aware of it. He took responsibility and there IS NOW an Education Based Curriculum to help inmates! Yet a LA Times article yesterday said changes have to be made in the

I am NOT saying there were not wrongs during his terms. But I have a real problem with the sergeant who painted the picture ALL BLACK! This past year I attended the first Homicide Victims Conference at Sheriff's Headquarters. I wrote about it and made a few calls to find out where to send the article. Jane Bufford could NOT say enough about the Sheriff's compassion. This is what I find so upsetting. No one realizes what a caring compassionate man he is. Ask the late Deputy Dave March's parents or sister what they think of Sheriff Baca. They speak of him with love and admiration.

A couple years ago, I met Sgt. Garo Kuredjian, brother of the late Deputy Jake Kuredjian who was killed over twelve years ago at Stevenson Ranch. Garo has a daughter, and another brother Raffi has a son and daughter who never met their Uncle Jake. I mentioned this to Sheriff Baca and asked for key chains for them to have as a remembrance. The Sheriff HIMSELF wrapped them up and mailed not only them to me, but something for Annie, Jake's mom with a nice HANDWRITTEN note. Many times Sheriff Baca and Supervisor Antonovich blew me away with their handwritten "thank you" notes. Yet this Sergeant on Facebook would have us believe Sheriff Baca is the worst unfeeling person on the face of Earth.

I have concentrated too much on Lee Baca as a human being. As a member of LASD, while he was Chief of Court Services Division, Baca led to the merger of the Sheriff's Department with the Marshall's Department. The merger saved taxpayers of Los Angeles County 14 million a year! For his efforts he received the Department's Distinguished Service Award. During his tenure, he provided leadership, management and direction to thousands of deputy sheriffs and police officers throughout

All I hope and pray is that Lee Baca will be remembered not only for jail violence but for all of the positive programs he brought about and his compassion and kindness.

SHARP INCREASES IN INFLUENZA ACTIVITY IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY

From LA County Public Health Dept.

Locally, percent positive lab tests of influenza have risen steadily over the past month and have jumped to 18.6%, up from 13.5% the previous week and 8.7% the week before that (Table 1). Relative to last year, the 2013-14 influenza season appears to be starting earlier, however an earlier season does not necessarily mean a more severe season (Figure 1).

Antivirals for Influenza

Antivirals are recommended for those with confirmed or suspected influenza and are most effective if administered as close to onset of symptoms as possible. Antivirals can help relieve influenza symptoms and reduce the duration of illness and further complications if administered as soon as symptoms arise, ideally within 48 hours of onset.

when Bob Dylan was king, and seemed to be the messenger of the "secret messages" to the younger generation. All my older brothers could fairly accurately be called Dylan fans, if not Dylan worshippers. We all seemed to regard listening to Dylan as a more meaningful spiritual experience than sitting the third flott.

We spoke sparingly as we ate in the kitchen, around the corner from the living room.

We heard silence and then the lyrics of Dylan. Sad Eyed Lady of the Low lands. Hey Mr. Tambourine Man. Blowing in the Wind. The Times They Are A Changing. After each short selection, there would be a brief silence, through Mass at Saint Elizabeth's through Mass at Saint Elizabeth's.

No one remembers how it began, but it was a legendary conversation that lasted for hours. My father's argument was that the music and lyrics of Bob Dylan were of no lasting value and the young people were simply too ignorant to realize it. My father said that Dylan would be forgotten in a few years. He compared Dylan to Beethoven and Bach, and other classical musicians, and explained that Dylan was not in any way at the level of the classical composers. Paul wholeheartedly disagreed.

Their conversation began in the living room where Frank would sit in his easy reclining chair and watch TV. Paul sat near him on the couch. Everyone in the household only became aware of their conversation when we realized they were still at it after about an hour. As the conversation's volume level would rise from time to time, we could all hear what they were saying: "Of course you can put Dylan in Beethoven's category," said Paul in his deep and sincere voice. "Have you actually ever listened to what he's saying in his songs?"

He just cackles," said Frank, "and you really can't even make out his words most of the time. And I'm not even talking about the words. It's very monotonous. And I don't need any explanation to know that Bach's music really is turn in this lively exchange.

"Well, I'm not saying that Dylan and Bach and the other classicals can be compared directly. Obviously, they can't," said Paul, giving some ground to Frank. "But there is obviously something that millions of people are responding to that you aren't seeing - or hearing."

This went on, back and forth, quiet and loud, for another hour. They opened up the record player and began playing select songs for the Robert Haddon dropped by and joined us as we were preparing dinner. No one dared to interfere with the primary debate, but Robert, and my mother, and my brothers, each piped in from time to time.

"Dylan is the boss," said Robert, "everyone knows that. Your dad is not cool, just like my dad," he smiled.

Robert asked my mother what she thought. Marie obviously didn't want to get involved, or to take sides, but she softly whispered, "Dylan is no Beethoven," and we all laughed. But she said it with a look on her face of "knowingness," and so that tempered our laughter. We figured that we could safely disagree with Frank, because he was regarded as a sort of Pasadena Archie Bunker.

One Saturday, with But we knew better than to doubt or to cross

We prepared the usual Saturday night dinner engaged my father - something like hotdogs and baked beans and in the relative value salad and some other vegetables. We took a plate of pop vs. classical into Frank and Paul, and we didn't expect them music. This was to come into the kitchen as their debate entered the third hour.

presumably as Paul removed the needle, and then they would talk about it. We couldn't hear all the details. Then there would be a round of some of the classical musicians' work, a silence, and commentary by Frank.

We cleared the table and washed the dishes, and I set up the chess board and began a game with Robert. Our game lasted nearly an hour, and Robert won.

And then, all of a sudden, Frank and Paul were standing in the kitchen doorway, shaking hands as Paul had to depart. David hadn't said much the whole night, but he never did. Gilbert had said a lot, mostly short derisive comments about

It was late and Paul had to go home and so it was over. A stalemate, we presumed. No clear winner, each side having done their best to promote their own arguments to win over the other. But both Paul and Frank were unbudgeable and they each stuck to their guns.

For the rest of us, the conversation about the conversation had just begun.

"Why doesn't he ever have meaningful conversations with us," David asked to no one in particular. "He engaged with Paul when Paul challenged, but shouldn't he take it upon himself to engage us?" asked David. No one really cared, but it was clear in the conversation good," said Frank as Paul patiently waited his about the conversation that David didn't really care about whose music was best. To David, the conversation was an example of a father who didn't take adequate interest in his own children, but would take extra time and supreme effort in a very engaging discussion – but not with David.

I was sure that David had a good point that Frank should do these sorts of things, but I was not bitter about the fact that he did not do so.

The rest of us had probably long ago accepted Frank for what and who he was. But to David, Frank's conversation was like a slap in the face, saying that he can take the time with a friend of the family, but would not take the time with his own children. At least that's how I took David's reaction.

Though I generally disagreed with Frank's premise, his performance definitely boosted my image of him. And likewise my image of Paul was greatly enlarged. Here was a peer of my brother who could debate with intensity and authority, and try to convince my father of a point of view which I held, but felt totally unable communicate in any meaningful way.

How each person eventually chose to discuss the discussion said far more about that individual person than it did about the debate itself.

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed by Luther Tsinoglou IT PAYS TO STAY

If you want to take advantage of the affordability of homes today, but anticipate major life changes in the next couple of years, you have to consider the implications of selling so soon. Keep the following factors in mind when making your decision.

As long as you sell for more than you owe on the mortgage, you'll be fine. Otherwise, you'll lose those costs associated with your initial investment, including the money you spent on loan and closing fees.

Also consider the cost of selling your home soon after purchasing. You paid closing costs when you bought it, but you face more closing costs when you sell it. In just a couple of years, most people won't build up enough equity in the home to justify selling so soon and paying transaction fees again.

Finally, if you sell your home in less than two years - for a profit - you may have to pay capital gains taxes on that profit. Currently, homeowners are exempt from those taxes up to $250,000 (or up to $500,000 for married filers) - but the home must be your primary residence and lived in for at least two years.

Hardships like health issues or job relocation may allow you a partial exclusion on those taxes, though. Speak with your tax advisor and real estate agent for some solid advice.

He was scheduled for an arraignment Thursday at Pasadena Superior Court. Zhu apparently killed himself. He was pronounced dead at before 10 p.m. Jan. 8. An autopsy is pending.

"Sheriff's Homicide Bureau detectives have learned that Li Zhu, died due to an apparent suicide," Deputy Irys Alvarez said in a statement. Sheriff homicide detectives were called in due to the inmate death; they are not involved with the Arcadia homicide investigation.

Typically the Arcadia Police do not hold prisoners in the local jail for long periods, especially if there is a pending arraignment and investigation. Prisoners can also be transferred to County Jail if the inmate requires special medical needs.

Police said the motive appeared to be related to an on-going dispute within the family. A commenter on ArcadiasBest.com said the two were arguing over money and that Li's son was in the room with the mother when she was being killed.

MONROVIA - DUARTE

Sierra Madre-_Pasadena___

From Monrovia Now:

Opinion: Monrovia City Government Has Dawdled with the Hillside Wilderness Preserve

They say that when you criticize someone, you should say nice things about them first, so, since I am about to slam the Monrovia city government, let me say some nice things first.

We have an amazing Old Town; that the city was able to fit an awesome theater into Old Town while actually enhancing Old Town's character is a triumph. Having lived through a serious earthquake and an insane windstorm, I've been very impressed with the city's handling of disaster response. The events the city helps coordinate, such as the Christmas parade and tree lighting, the amazing Fourth of July fireworks display, the Friday-night Farmers Market, and now a New Year's Eve party, all seem to to be very well done. The city's attitude toward business seems far more positive than other cities I know, some of which seem to regard businesses as pariahs. And, as best I can tell, the city has responded to the fiscal challenges facing California cities by pretty much getting its expenditures under control, even when it has hurt. Good things.

Now for the criticism.

Somewhere around 14 years ago residents on the upper edge of Monrovia were concerned about a plan to build homes in the foothills above their homes, so the city responded by passing a bond and getting money from the state to purchase the land as a preserve that people could hike about in.

But then, for well over a decade, the trails didn't open. So, the day after Christmas last year, thinking that more than enough time had elapsed, I sent a letter to all the city council members and the city manager saying I was about to write this article. Here, verbatim, are the points I made:

It is somewhere around 14 years now since Monrovia passed a bond measure to purchase the hillside property and nothing has been done to provide the access that was promised to the voters who passed the bond measure, or to the State of California, from which the city obtained money on the condition that the city would provide access - The people of Monrovia have been taxed to pay for this bond for well over a decade, but the service they were promised when they voted on the measure has not been provided. - I am aware that there were, and are, lawsuits hindering the opening of the trails, but my impression is that solving these suits is a low priority. I do not get the impression that the city is exerting much effort in this regard, despite "opening of the hillside area" scoring rather high in the recent community

- The main reason for that impression is that whenever I ask about progress, my council-member contact needs to check for me. If it was a matter of discussion and regular updates among the leadership of the city, it seems unlikely such checking would be necessary.

Further, communications with the public regarding the lawsuits and progress on opening the trails is extremely poor. What little communication has occurred seems to be mostly in response to my questioning. Also, the previous city web site had a page that gave some ru-dimentary information about progress, but after being first posted it did not seem to be further maintained, and I can no longer even find that limited information on the new city website. - Whenever I have asked - and I have asked five or six times over the last few years - I have always been given vague estimates in the range of a three to six months regarding when the trails will open - but those estimates never seem to come about. - The one trail I was told was "sort of" open is on Norumbega. I explored it and it's not a trail at all. It looks like an overgrown driveway leading about 100 yards up to a graded lot that was never built on. If a private company in Monrovia were to sign people up and bill them regularly for a service that the company did not provide within a reasonable time, I suspect the Monrovia City Council would rightly be furious. And if the company said that lawsuits were preventing it from providing the service, I doubt you would be appeased. I suspect you would at minimum demand regular updates, progress reports, and that you would say that their being sued did not give them the right to continue charging people for a service the company was not providing. I really don't see any substantial difference between such a company and what is happening with the city.

PASADENA UNIFIED INVITES COMMUNITY TO FIRST CHOICE FESTIVAL

Families encouraged to explore options, find best educational fit

Pasadena, CA --- Making the choice on where to send a child to school can be a daunting and stressful task for families. To make this decision a little easier, the Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) will be hosting the inaugural First Choice Festival January 14, 2014 from 4:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the PUSD Education Center, 351 South Hudson Avenue (Corner of Hudson Avenue and Del Mar Boulevard), in Pasadena. The First Choice Festival will be a one stop shop for parents and the community to meet and speak to representatives from every PUSD school. Whether families are considering a PUSD signature program school or simply want to learn more about the campus down the block, this festival is an opportunity to find the best educational fit for each individual

"I would like to invite residents of Altadena, Pasadena and Sierra Madre to the festival to learn more about their public schools and the exciting programs that are being of-fered," said PUSD Superintendent Jon R. Gundry. "The First Choice Festival will showcase the multitude of educational options in PUSD, including programs that prepare students with global and enduring skills for the 21st century."

At the festival there will be information and presentations about PUSD signature programs such as Mandarin and Spanish Dual Language Immersion, International Baccalaureate, College & Career Pathways, and the district's new magnet schools. There will also be activities for kids, information about preschool and afterschool programs, and free immunizations required for students to attend school (for uninsured or Medi-Cal eligible children). Festival attendees can enter a raffle to win a family membership to Kidspace Museum or a full scholarship to the Pasadena Educational Foundation Summer Enrichment Program.

The timing of the festival coincides with the district's Open Enrollment process which runs from January 9-February 6. Open Enrollment is an opportunity for district students to apply to a school other than the one they attended in 2013-2014 or for those enrolling in PUSD for the first time and interested in applying to a school other than their neighborhood school. Staff will be available at the festival to help parents complete the online Open Enrollment application. Open Enrollment applications can also be submitted online at openenrollment.info.

More information about the festival will be posted at gopusd.com/first-choice or call 626-396-3606.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show THE SECRET LIFE OF WALTER MITTY

When I saw the first preview for this movie, I really wanted to see the whole movie. The plot seemed very interesting and the visuals were amazing. What intrigued me most of all were the two leads, Ben Stiller and Kristen Wiig, who usually do comedic films. This change of tone in their careers was one of the main reasons I wanted to see the film: could Stiller and Wiig pull of more serious roles?

Walter Mitty (Ben Stiller) was just an average guy who had not really accomplished anything and worked in the photo develop-ing department at LIFE magazine. The famous photographer Sean

O'Connell (Sean Penn) sends in 25 pictures, including image that was meant to be used for the cover of the last issue of LIFE magazine, and Walter is in put in charge of them. However, when he discovers that the cover picture is missing, he must leave the of-fice and go on a journey that will transform him into the man he

This is one of the best movies of the year. The story makes you laugh, cry, and leaves you satisfied. Stiller and Wiig were absolutely amazing in what I believe are the roles of their careers. And, to top it all off, the cinematography adds an atmosphere of grandeur that makes the world feel immensely vast. This is the movie to see this holiday season.

Beckham Grill

I am fully aware that times are tough and when you are going to spend your hard earned dough, you want to feel that you got your monies worth. I thought about changing the name of the article to my money says, what do you think? I digress.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

Beckham Grill has been around since 1977, originally named after owner Bob Beckham, it was known as Bechkam Place. There are new owners but the management remains the same. The restaurant by today's standards is "Old School," its not a dark restaurant but shows in a cozy and faintly lit. The Bar, or "The Crown Room," as it is familiarly known, is illuminated by the burst of a fireplace. There's an old Car decorating the outside, and a 1960s English style Telephone Booth starts you on a journey. Often I come to Beckham to sit in the bar by the fireplace, a soothing respite. Beckham Grill has an item which seems simple enough in the description, but I don't know of any other restaurant in Pasadena that serves it... Smoked Norwegian Salmon with Capers ($11.95). Seriously, I could order a double and have that alone for dinner, it's that good. That may not be your cup of tea, so, maybe you are here for meat? Roasted Prime Ribs of Beef is the specialty, always has been and I suspect always will be. Prices are ($24.50 to $33.95) for the Crown Cut, on my visit I ordered the End Cut at ($26.95). All the aforementioned items come with Yorkshire pudding, creamed Corn and creamed spinach.

The menu is skillfully represented with fish, meat, duck, steak and salad. My dinner companion Mike Bingley from Charter Cable had the Grilled Salmon for ($21.95), he gave it two thumbs up. No room for desser up. No room for dessert on this visit, but next time for sure.

If it's a drink by the fireplace or a game of darts with some special friends, you may want to consider Five for Five happy hour drinks and cocktails for $5, a real value, though I ordered the Shrimp Cocktail at $14.95, one of the better one's this side of Pasadena. #### MONROVIA (continued from page 6)

So, I believe the City Council should ...

I received responses to this letter from Mayor Mary Ann Lutz - who invited me to meet with herself and Interim City Manager Fran Delach - and from every council member except Alexander Blackburn.

(For a synopsis of the comments and meeting results, please go to: www.monrovianow.com)

In conclusion, all Monrovians - from the richest to the poorest - have been paying regularly for roughly 14 years for a service they are not getting. They've been paying either directly, as property owners, or indirectly as renters. Yes, there are the legal issues, but Monrovia was one of the leaders in redevelopment, which included lots of property issues, including lawsuits, and these issues were handled much more expeditiously than this Hillsides debacle.

- Insist that its staff provide a progress report at every city council meeting on progress getting the Cloverleaf trail open.
- Work to establish an opening date for the Highland Place trail. I understand it is closed because of the forest fire damage, but at some point the trail should be open-able. This ought to be on the City Council agenda every few months or so to review.
- Post information about the Hillside trails on the city website, just as it does for Canyon Park: http://goo.gl/kiO5Li
- Brad Haugaard

INGREDIENTS

Coarse salt

- Ground pepper
- 6 tablespoon(s) butter
- 1 pound(s) white mushrooms, trimmed and sliced 1 inch thick
- 1/2 cup(s) all-purpose flour
- 3 cup(s) milk
- 1 can(s) (14 1/2-ounce) reduced-sodium chicken broth
- 3/4 cup(s) dry white wine
- 3 cup(s) grated Parmesan cheese 1/2 teaspoon(s) dried thyme leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon(s) dried thyme leaves 1 pound(s) linguine, broken in half
- 1 rotisserie chicken, skin removed, meat shredded (about 4 cups)
- 1 package(s) (10-ounce) frozen peas, thawed and drained

DIRECTIONS

1.Preheat oven to 400. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil (for pasta). In a large saucepan, melt 2 tablespoons butter over high heat. Add mushrooms, and season with salt and pepper. Cook, tossing frequently, until tender and browned, 8 to 10 minutes. Transfer to a bowl, and set aside.

2.Make sauce: In same saucepan, melt remaining 4 tablespoons butter over medium heat. Add flour; cook, whisking, about 1 minute. Whisking constantly, gradually add milk, broth, and wine. Bring to a boil; reduce to a simmer, and add 2 cups Parmesan and thyme. Season with salt and pepper.

3.Cook pasta 2 minutes less than package instructions for al dente; drain and return to pot. Add sauce, chicken, peas, and mushrooms. Toss well to combine. Divide between two shallow 2-quart baking dishes; sprinkle with remaining Parmesan. Freeze (see below) or bake until browned, about 30 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

4.To freeze: After placing pasta mixture in baking dishes and sprinkling with Parmesan (step 3), cool to room temperature. Cover tightly with aluminum foil, and freeze up to 3 months.

To bake from frozen: Bake, covered with foil, at 400 degrees, until center is warm, about 2 hours. Uncover, and bake until top is browned, about 20 minutes more. Serve.

To bake from thawed: Thaw overnight in refrigerator. Bake, covered with foil, at 400 degrees, until center is warm, about 30 minutes. Uncover, and bake until top is browned, about 20 minutes.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

Review By Sean Kayden

SONGS TO KICK OFF THE NEW YEAR

Young The Giant – Crystallized – After three years, Southern California natives Young The Giant are returning with their sophomore effort, "Mind Over Matter." The album will be released on January 21st via Fueled By Ramen. One of the first singles is "Crystallized." It packs delicate vocals, fervent melodies and huge hooks. The love song is the ideal summer night jam that just happens to be coming out in the winter. No matter what season it is, "Crystallized," is sure to comfort anyone feeling lovesick.

Bad Suns – Cardiac Arrest – Another SoCal band making the list are Bad Suns. The group is preparing to release their first EP, "Transpose" later this month. "Cardiac Arrest" is pure fun from this new poprock bursting onto the scene. Frontman Christo Bowman sings with conviction and fervor. While "Cardiac Arrest" isn't reinventing any genre, the song is incredibly catchy and infectiously addicting to keep on repeat. With bands like Capital Cities and Youngblood Hawke increasingly becoming popular, Bad Suns and their similar sound should be able to find much success with their 4-song EP. "Cardiac Arrest" is simply fun pop rock and sometimes simple and straightforward isn't half bad. "Transpose EP" will be released on January 21st through Vagrant Records.

New Desert Blues – Zachary – New Desert Blues is another newcomer hailing from the county of Whiteley located in Hampshire. The indie band evokes an American folk resonance. New Desert Blues actually dubbed themselves "noir Americana." Whatever you want to call it, it's great stuff. "Zachary" is a subtle, alternative-rock-country track that is invigorating from a band from England. While most bands hailing from there these days sound exactly the same, New Desert Blues seemed to be more influenced with the western civilization. Their guitars soar, the harmonies are ethereal and the vocals shine throughout. Despite only releasing a 4-track EP entitled "Devil's Rope" on January 21st through Whiteley Records, the band's potential will have everyone anticipating their full-length record.

The War on Drugs – Red Eyes – The most seasoned group on the list, The War On Drugs should have a huge year. Their fourth record, "Lost In the Dream" features "Red Eyes" a rolling rock gem that ignites the likes of Springsteen and company. This is good old fashion rock without the gimmicky electronics and tweaked vocals that's all the rage these days. It's raw and serious. "Red Eyes" is just shy of five minutes, but it could have been longer and I wouldn't have mind. It's dreamy rock with the signature sound from The War On Drugs that I can stand behind. The band is one of the more original bands out there playing today. If "Red Eyes" is any indication of how the entire record may sound, we just might have an early contender for album of the year. "Lost In The Dream" hits shelves March 18th via Secretly Canadian.

MOZART CLARINET CONCERTO (WITH SOLOIST DAVID NICHOLSON) AND SCHUMANN SYMPHONY FEATURED IN PASADENA COMMUNITY ORCHESTRA'S JANUARY CONCERT

Mozart's Overture to the Marriage of Figaro Overture Rounds Out Program

The Pasadena Community Orchestra presents a free concert that features soloist David Nicholson performing Mozart's Clarinet Concerto in A Major, Schumann's expansive Symphony #2, and Mozart's Overture to the Marriage of Figaro.

Enjoy one of the most beloved clarinet concertos in the repertoire and the overture to a delightful opera, together with Schumann's expansive symphony, in a free concert presented by Pasadena Community Orchestra. Clarinetist David Nicholson has performed with the Los Angeles Philharmonic on its last two international tours, as well as with many Southern California orchestras. Mozart wrote the clarinet concerto as a kind of love poem to the instrument, and it displays the clarinet at its finest. Nicholson is a perfect match for the virtuoso versatility and lovely melodic lines of this concerto. Schumann's Symphony #2, written at the height of Romanticism, is a richly expressive work, pervaded by a sense of epic striving that gives way to a spirit of triumph and jubilation. Mozart's effervescent Overture to the Marriage of Figaro superbly establishes the mood and captures the essence of one of the most delightful and listenable operas in the repertoire. A reception follows the concert, at which audience members will have the opportunity to meet the soloist and the other musicians.

WHERE: In the sanctuary of First Church of the Nazarene, 3700 E. Sierra Madre Blvd., Pasadena (just west of Michillinda Avenue). Ample free parking, wheelchair accessible.

WHEN: Friday, January 31, 2014, 8 p.m.

FURTHER INFORMATION: Please contact PCO at 626.445.6708, via e-mail at publicity@pcomusic. org, or at www.pcomusic.org.

Concert made possible in part by the Pasadena Arts & Culture Commission and the City of Pasadena Cultural Affairs Division, L.A. County Arts Commission, Pasadena Community Foundation, and Pasadena Showcase House for the Arts.

THE JOY OF YOGA

CHOOSING THE RIGHT CLASS

Ok, you're ready to start. Or ready to get back to class. Which one is right for you? At Yoga Madre, we have many classes to choose from: Gentle, Beginning, Mixed Level, Vinyasa Flow and Restorative.

Gentle: This class is designed to help those who may have limited mobility and need movement without undue pressure on the joints. The pace is careful and slower. It's perfect for someone recovering from an injury (but doctor released for activity). Also appropriate for expectant mothers or for those brand new to yoga. Many of the yogis attending Gentle are not new to yoga, so you may receive the benefits of their experience and the teacher may introduce varying practices for the class including pranayama techniques and energetic practices.

Beginning: This class is right for a brand new yoga student who has no significant trouble spots in the body. The pace of the class is slower, with much of the alignment of the poses explained in greater detail. Poses in this class may be challenging. Expectant mothers can also take this class. Many attendees of the Beginning level classes have been doing yoga for a while and appreciate the pace, challenge of poses, and relaxation techniques implored.

Mixed Level or Vinyasa Flow: More advanced yoga poses and pranayama are introduced to build on our foundation laid at the Beginning level. This class is right for the practitioner who has been practicing a while and is ready to expand their practice. At a minimum, one should have attended a few Beginning classes before attending Mixed Level or Vinyasa Flow. Seasoned practitioners who attend while expecting or recovering from injury have a knowledge of their body and know how to Restorative: This class is for everyone, beginner to advanced. Many props are used and poses are held in a deeper, supportive way. This class is a compliment to a more active or fast-paced practice during week. The challenge in this class, is the challenge to slow down. Many yogis love this class as it restores the body and gets them ready for the week ahead. A wonderful bookend to any weekend.

Now you know, so choose the best class for the unique YOU.

3. Organic food grown on small organic farms help promote small business. Most small organic farms are independent family farmers making livelihood for their family. Small organic farming is a domestic version of fair trade.

4. Have you ever noticed that organic vegetables and fruits seem to spoil much faster than conventional produce from the supermarkets? The reason is that many foods are irradiated. Radiation kills bacteria thus extending the life of food. What it also does is alters the life force or nutrition of the food.

Organic foods are better for the environment. Conventional farming methods erode soil and use dangerous pesticides. Of course we are told that the pesticides used today are harmless but isn't that what was said about DDT? DDT is still being found in all of the worldwide waterways. By buying organic foods, you are creating a positive impact on the environment, the animals, and all of us.

6. The taste of organic fruits and vegetables in my opinion is superior to any conventional produce, which makes it the most important reason to eat organic. Many fine restaurants feel the same way and that is why they use organic produce in their menus. Many conventional fruits and veggies look beautiful but have virtually no taste. Many organic farmers give credit for their outstanding produce to the soil. Strong mineral rich soil leads to well-nourished plants, which in turns gives us food with a high nutrient content and great flavor. I find the taste of fresh organic produce irresistible!

Try adding some organic produce to your diet and find out just how beneficial and enjoyable healthy eating can be.

I do think that some of today's technological advances have the potential to, slowly but surely, steal our ability to think for ourselves the way we used to have to do. What ever happened to simply using one's head to work out a problem rather than asking an exponential number of strangers who happen to be on-line, for the answer? And, how much has our relatively new-found, newly-formed dependence on the super-highway of data exchange that we call the internet taken from our natural ability to think and solve problems made more surmountable in recent decades, now that we have access to instant answers to questions that used to take a lot more time and energy to answer. But, is it really necessary to reinvent every cog in the wheel of human thought? I think there is a fine line between what most now consider tobe a remarkable resource for information, and what could soon become an addictive means for getting from point A to point B with limited or no effort on our own part. And, who's to say that the answers we gain from our good friends at

Google or on Wikipedia are worth their weight in gigabytes? Let's face it, a wise web-user will still employ his or her own common sense when asking the net to resolve a problem or answer a or, to be more accurate I should say, a newly developing device called "No More Woof". The device is designed to read the mind of a dog and interpret the dog's thoughts into human language, so the human can know and respond to what the dog is thinking. Really? I mean, come on ... really?

First of all, from what I understand, No More fitted headset with EEG censored appendages

My recent thoughts and concerns about the question that really matters in life.

I agree that some of life's challenges have been independently?

NO MORE WOOF

Too weird for words, or too precious to pass up?

Technology is terrific! No really, I think it is just great, and typically I am willing to go along with just about any new idea coming down the pilea that might make life easier.

the product is still in the developmental stage; "a work in progress", as they like to call it, they do clearly claim that the EEG micro-sensors are able to pick up on what the animal is thinking and that the messages given in human language are accurate interpretations of those thoughts.

I don't know about you, but when I first heard word of this new canine mind-reading device, my thought was, "Even if this thing does work the way they say it does, I already know my dogs are going to be curious about where I am going and when I'll return each time they see me pick up my keys and head for the front door." This is made clear by the look on their faces or by a sudden change in their body language. But, then again it might be kind of neat to know if my dogs are stressing out about something I am not yet aware of, such as an impending storm or an earthquake soon to occur.

Some thoughts my dogs have are made all-too obvious by their behavior and facial expressions, but some are not so clear. In fact, it would sure be great to know if my pets are experiencing pain, because most animals have a pretty high threshold for it and they do a great job of hiding it from their humans. If I could have known earlier that my previous dog Lady was hurting months before I let her "go to sleep", I might have made that very difficult decision much earlier, for her

Anyway, the idea of inventing and marketing a device that can read a dog's mind and interpret it into human language is intriguing, but at the same time kind of creepy, if you ask me. Say, just say this thing takes off and every dog owner goes out and purchases one for their pet. Will it change the way they interact with the animals that they already know and love so much?

And, what about the dog's perspective on wearing a device that tells all its inner thoughts and secrets? Will the constant human voice response to every thought they have drive them crazy? It might even drive the human crazy to hear some strange voice calling out the dog's thoughts every time they turn around. Maybe, just maybe the dog would like to keep some of its houghts private. Ever think of that?

Only time will tell if the No More Woof device becomes a hit and yet another "must-have" household pet appliance to add to the growing list of high-tech gadgetry littering our every day verbal response might be, "Where are you going, lives. Meanwhile, I suppose we'll just have to how long will you be gone?" and if the dog is guess what our dogs are thinking when they look up at us with those precious, pouting pup's eyes, tilt their head sideways and place a paw on top of our foot. After all, who doesn't already know that means they love us?

THE GOOD LIFE

HOW TO CHOOSE A CONTINUING-CARE RETIREMENT COMMUNITY

Dear Savvy Senior:

Can you give me some tips on picking a good full-service retirement community that offers all levels of housing, from independent apartment-style to nursing home care? My wife and I are both approaching 80 and are looking to downsize from our current home, but we want our next move to be our last. One More Move

Dear One:

If you want your next move to be your final one, a full-service retirement community – better known as a continuing-care retirement community (or CCRC) – is a good option to consider, but they aren't cheap, so you need to be prudent when choosing.

CCRCs are different from other types of senior housing because they provide all levels of housing, services and care in one convenient location.

While they vary greatly in appearance and services, most CCRCs offer apartments or sometimes single family homes for active seniors who need little if any help with their daily needs. In addition, they also offer on-site assisted living for people who require aid to bathe, dress or perform other basic tasks, and nursing home care for residents who need full-time skilled-nursing care.

CCRCs also provide a bevy of resort-style amenities and services that include community dinning halls, exercise facilities, housekeeping, and transportation as well as many social and recreational

But be aware that all these services come at a hefty price. Most communities have entry fees that range from $20,000 to $500,000 or more, plus ongoing monthly service fees that can vary from around $1,000 to over $5,000 depending on the facility, services and the long-term care contract option you

With nearly 1,900 CCRCs in operation throughout the U.S, finding a facility that fits your lifestyle, needs and budget can take some legwork. Here are some steps you can take to help you proceed.

Make a list: Start by calling the Area Agency on Aging (call 800-677-1116 for contact information) in the area you want to live for a list of CCRCs. You can also search online at leadingage.org/findmember.aspx or carf.org/aging that has a national listing of accredited CCRCs.

Call the facilities: Once you've located a few, call them to find out if they have any vacancies, what they charge and if they provide the types of services you want or need.

Take a tour: Many CCRCs encourage potential residents to stay overnight and have a few meals in their dining hall. During your tour, notice the upkeep and cleanness of the facility, and talk to the current residents to see how they like living there. Also, check out the assisted living and nursing facilities, and find out how decisions are made to move residents from one level of care to another.

To check-up on a facility, call the state long-term care ombudsman (see ltcombudsman.org) who can tell you if the assisted living and nursing facilities within the CCRC have had any complaints or other problems. Also, use the Medicare nursing home compare tool (medicare.gov/nursinghomecompare), which provides a ranking system.

Investigate fees: During your visit, get a rundown on the different kinds of contracts that are available and their costs. Also, find out what types of services are included and what costs extra. What yearly price increases can you expect? How much of your entry fee is refundable to you if you move or die? And what happens if you outlive your financial resources?

Research the community's financial health: Find out who owns or sponsors the facility, and get a copy of their most recently audited financial statement and review it, along with the copy of the contract with your lawyer or financial advisor. Also get their occupancy rate. Unless it's a newer community filling up, occupancy below 85 percent can be a red flag that the facility is having financial or management problems.

Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior.org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today show and author of "The Savvy Senior" book.

KATIE Tse.....This and That "GREEN MANSIONS!"

Adults tend to idealize childhood things, only later to realize that they are not as impressive as they originally seemed. Your cavernous kindergarten classroom feels smaller, now that your own youngster has started school. Similarly, old pictures of people from your childhood can prompt exclamations like, "Wow, I thought Miss Humphrey was ancient at 37, but she looks pretty hot, now that I'm Growing up, my family never had TV in the usual sense. We had a TV set, but we were too cheap to get cable. So, I grew up watching a lot of videos of old movies. At school, I had no clue about the shows my classmates liked. However, I didn't lust after the toys they saw advertized either. (My parents must've saved a lot of money this way!) While some films became as familiar as bedtime stories ("The Road" movies and "The Honeymooners"), others recorded from TV by my grandparents were only watched once or twice. This was either due to the bad quality of the recording or the bad quality of the movie in general. "Green Mansions" was one of those movies.

Produced in 1959, "Green Mansions" starred Anthony Perkins and Audrey Hepburn. The story is set in Venezuela around the turn of the last century. Perkins is a disgruntled army defector in search of gold in the uncharted jungle. He eventually happens upon a tribe of South American natives (played by actors of different races, many sporting what looked like a bad

The chief, Sessue Hayakawa, looks just as Japanese as he did in "Bridge on the River Kwai." But with a loin cloth, feathered arm bands, and a lot of imagination, he fits right in. After Perkins impresses Hayakawa with magical fire (a cigarette lighter) Hayakawa takes a liking to him, much to the dismay of his younger son, Henry Silva. This Silva tells Perkins that his older brother (the man who would be king) was killed by a mysterious woman in the jungle bordering their camp, and that is why Perkins is forbidden from searching for gold there. Ignoring these warnings, Perkins takes off into the brush at first light.

"Jungle" is a loose term for the "Alice In Wonderland"-meets-"Wizard of Oz" type of set created for this film. Perkins walks along an unusually smooth path through massive, waxy leaves and flowers. He hears the sound of a woman laughing as a fawn darts by. (You've heard of jungle fawns, haven't you?) And suddenly -there's Audrey Hepburn!

She's wearing a gossamer dress, clearly constructed of forest fibers. She introduces herself and they talk about a special flower that only blooms for one day, and then dies. But she assures him there's no reason to be sad about its dying. When the flower dies, another one is getting ready to bloom somewhere else in the Hepburn brings Perkins back to meet her "grandfather," Lee J. Cobb, with white hair and a mustache-and-beard stolen from a mall Santa. Cobb has raised Hepburn since infancy. He sounds like a regular American, but somewhere in the jungle she picked up a British accent. Perkins leaves for the village, but promises to return.

Dack at the ranch, Silva is angry at Perkins because, by Perkins coming out of the jungle in one piece, Hayakawa believes him to be an even greater warrior than his late son. Silva warns Perkins not to get too comfortable as Hayakawa's new favorite. Back at the ranch, Silva is angry at Perkins because, village will be hosting the right of passage ceremony for all the young men that night.

As I recalled this scene, it took place on a dark beach, thick with palm trees and roaring surf lapping at the villagers' feet. The men wore exotic costumes as they danced around a raging bonfire. To prove their manhood, they had to endure a large wooden board covered with bees being pressed against their chest. The last one standing won.

In reality, the set had barely any sand, dirt, or stones to suggest the outdoors. Harsh lighting didn't help either. The boards had bees, but only half a dozen at most. Three very old-looking women hobbled over to Silva and two other youths. They pressed the boards against the men's chests with all the mighty force you'd expect from a frail old lady. The two other guys quickly screamed and crumpled to the ground, but

Silva maintained an icy stare 'till the end. (You get the impression that he bribed or threatened the other two to give up quickly so that he would win.)

Perkins watches all this from a stake to which he was bound. (At some earlier point Silva persuaded Hayakawa that Perkins was no good.) Silva swaggers over to Perkins and informs him that his trial by bees has proven his supremacy as the ultimate warrior; and now he's Hayakawa's favorite again. Perkins better enjoy himself, Silva warns, because he's going to kill him and the evil jungle woman the next morning. (It's so helpful for the victim to have a schedule beforehand.)

Several hours later the party has dissipated, and only one of the old bee ladies is left snoozing near Perkins. He wakes her up and gets her to give him something sharp, with which he frees himself. I forget how he persuaded her to do this, but what do minor details matter? Perkins rushes into the jungle to warn Hepburn and Cobb of Silva's plot.

I imagine the overwhelming suspense of our Hero's fate has you falling off the edge of your seat right now. (Or not!) Stay tuned for Part II.

FYI: SCAMS ARE ALWAYS IN SEASON

After tragedy strikes-- Be it tornadoes in Oklahoma, bombings in Boston or a typhoon in the Philippines—expect two immediate reactions: well-intentioned people will want to give donations, and scammers will want to take them. Within hours of any disaster, charity scams go into full swing. Even before super-storm Sandy made landfall, 1000 websites with "Sandy," "Relief," or related keywords in them had been registered, many by scammers. They seek your credit card number to collect supposed donations and perhaps, to use later for identity theft.

Unfortunately, disasters happen; be prepared to check out the charity before sending any information or monies. The Better Business Bureau has a website called Wise Giving Alliance others are... Charity Navigator; Charity Watch and Guide Star. Don't let your emotions get in the way of common sense. Be careful! (More next week)

HELPFUL HINT: Thanks to Pat Miranda for reminding me that Hydrogen Peroxide removes blood from clothing. In rereading that sentence it could go in many directions couldn't it? From a murder mystery ala Hitchcock to reality...okay, okay, I cut my shin and bled like a stuck pig on my white pants. I like the murder mystery scenario better. It's amazing how well and effortlessly the hydrogen peroxide works. Just pour it on the blood spots (it doesn't have to be immediately), and let sit for a bit (it will fizz) and then wash as usual in cold water and detergent. (Sorry Neil, for the swine reference.)

FOR YOUR FUNNY BONE - I had just finished dinner at Frank, a Manhattan restaurant so hip it doesn't even have the name on the door. I was standing outside when a man stopped and asked if I knew where the restaurant "Frank's" was. I pointed to the door. "By the way, it's "Frank" not "Frank's." He started to walk in and then backed up a few steps, turned to me and said, "Thank."

that the 63 year old actor William Hurt was back in School. He has devoted this past fall to classes in Computer Science and Buddhism will make individuals "smarter'. at Columbia University's School of Continuing Education. When I think of William Hurt I think of someone who always seemed to want to be the smartest person in the room. Perhaps you remember the movie Broadcast News in which Hurt plays an annoyingly successful TV news-reader who isn't quite as intelligent as the people around him but is promoted because of other traits like looking good in a spots coat and having a certain knack for emphasizing the right words.

As I think of that Broadcast News Movie I recall poor Holly Hunter who in the movie is criticized by a disapproving network executive as always needing to be the "smartest person in the room". "I know it's horrible" she says and as she says it viewers get a sense of the loneliness and the desperate need of some who needs to be "the smartest person in the room" This theme always resonates with me as I have always wanted to be the smartest person in the room. Unfortunately, I never quite had the native ability to quite of what we have always thought of as be that person. Whatever it meant to an individual. Individual deficits will actually be the "smartest", it wasn't me.

It isn't that I didn't try. Being smarter seems to be my most important goal as I keep talking (and writing) probably displaying my ignorance to those who know better; but this continuing attempt is what gives meaning to the rest of my life. The past few days this theme of wanting to the remainder of our own lifetime? be smarter has taken on new meaning. Last night as I watched the Vizio BCS College Football Championship the very first commercial on screen asked. "What makes something smart?" I assume the answer had something to do with buying a television made by Vizio but I never heard the answer. As I heard the question I looked down at this week's recent arriving New Yorker Magazine which I had been reading at just that moment. Frighteningly the article discussed a Chinese Company which was attempting to explore, "in more complex ways than ever before, the genetic basis for human intelligence." The Company's President, Jian Wang,is quoted as saying "Some words are too sensitive to say, but there has to be at least some genetic component behind the differences people show." Certainly, it is now taken for granted that the influence of heredity

Thumbing through the on intelligence is complex, involving thousands of genes interacting in such intricate ways that researchers have not yet managed to draw genetic patterns. It's possible that they never will but it's also possible, and probably more likely, that sometime in the near future there will become available medical procedures that

It's even scarier than that! The article quotes a Stanford Law Professor as saying "In twenty to forty years, at least in the developed world, most babies could be conceived through in vitro-fertilization, so that their parents could choose among embryos. That way, the parents or someone else can select the combination of genes that they want to see in their offspring." The Professor reminds us that, "In the United States, parents will make these choices, but in China there is more acceptance of government intervention in personal and family decisions."

Do you understand implications of this little bit of news? Today we are concerned about the influence of performance enhancing drugs in professional sports.g drugs. Today the Public is concerned about governmental spying upon private communications such that it becomes privy to what was formerly thought to be confidential. This is nothing. Soon there may be a complete disappearance not be our personal problem but will be seen only as design defects perhaps correctable through pharmaceutical or medical intervention It may become possible to buy intelligence or good looks, or strength, or creativity, or whatever else is out there. Maybe whatever is out once purchased will remain inside of us during

Speaking of "us", what will it mean to be an individual? Will we all soon see ourselves as some sort of genetic soufflé designed by scientists for the benefit of the State? Will we all become machines or weapons to be used by warring nations as they compete for dominance? Will anyone care; or will that kind of concern be scientifically eliminated as disadvantageous for the State's rest?

I know that these kinds of concerns have been repeatedly discussed in Science-Fiction Books and Movies; but I never read such books or go to such movies. Maybe it's better, or certainly less scary, to just focus on who's going to win next week's NFL play-off games. I like the 49ers. (Maybe it was the search for gold that brought us here in the first place?)

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

COLD IS AS COLD FEELS AND I DON'T LIKE FEELING COLD!

I was sitting on the in the winter. back porch sipping an ice-cold tea with a splash of lemon when I received a text from a relative up north. I was enjoying a pleasant afternoon basking in the winter sun of Florida.

I am not sure what God was thinking of when He created the north with all that bad weather and snow and such, but I know what He was thinking of when He created the South - especially Florida. He was thinking in particular of me and my insatiable love of the sun. Basking in the Florida sun is the great reward of being smart and moving to Florida.

I have some friends who were born in Florida and think they are a little bit better than me. I remind them that they had no choice of being born in Florida but I, on the other hand, moved to Florida on my own volition. I think I have the upper hand on

I may be old but I certainly do delight in the modern technology. It used to be that when you got a call from a relative you had to answer the telephone and talk to the person on the other end for as long as they hung on. Today, thanks to modern gadgetry; when a relative wants to contact me, they usually do it by text. I love it.

Getting a text is a strange thing, or it can be. If I do not respond right away, I can always claim that there is "something wrong with my cell phone and my texting isn't working right today." Then I can get back to that relative whenever it suits me. Or, as the case with some relatives, and you know who I mean, I can ignore it.

If you are a relative of mine and have not heard from me or had any of your texts answered, the simple answer is, I am not really ignoring you (ha ha ha) my cell phone is not working correctly.

This relative that texted me was complaining about how cold it was up north and even had the courtesy to send me a picture of their backyard just chock-full of some white substance known as snow.

The text read, "I bet you wish you were here to enjoy this?"

I think that relative would have lost that bet for sure. I love those snow scenes on postcards or in text messages like this one, but as to be personally involved with all of the frigid snow, do not bet on me!

Years ago, Cold and I experienced a deep disagreement and we have been separated ever since. As far as I am concerned, the separation is final! I really do not want anything more to do with Cold. We are not even on speaking terms.

Cold, after all, is a relative thing especially when the relatives are up north

Up north, they complain when the temperature falls below 30.

Here in Florida, I complain when the temperature falls below 70.

Whenever the temperature dips below that magical 70, I have to break out one of my sweaters. What an inconvenience for me to have to put on a sweater because it is just a little bit cool on the outside.

Then my relative sent me a picture of her standing in the snow looking like the abominable snowman. She had more clothes on than I actually own or have in my closet. I wonder how she walks around wearing all those clothes? How in the world does she ever sit down wearing all those clothes?

And what about that thing wrapped around her head? We have hats here in Florida but not quite like the one she was wearing. It looked like she was wearing

At this point in my life, I could not afford, for a variety of reasons, to move back north.

I do not think my relatives up north could put up with me at this point. They offer me a friendly invitation to come and spend some time with them during the winter season. I really could not handle it. As soon as the temperature dropped below 70, I would be complaining, grouching and working on everybody's nerves.

I would be such a nuisance that they would have to get together and buy me a plane ticket back to sunny Florida. My relatives should thank me for not moving up north to "enjoy the snow" with them. See how much I am saving my relatives? Do they appreciate it?

No relationship is quite like that relationship that spans several hundred miles. You know the old saying, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." So, if you add distance to that absence you have the epitome of a wonderfully fond heart.

Many things separate us from one another. Sometimes that separation is voluntary and sometimes it isn't.

The apostle Paul understood that nothing could separate him from God. "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Romans 8:38-39).

It does not matter how cold it is outside as long as inside there is a warm relationship with God bordering on fiery expectation.

LEFT TURN/RIGHT TURN

HOWARD Hays As I See It "There's nothing surer; the half the nation's income, according to the ie poor study's get poorer." lyricists Gus Kahn and

his column last week with bad news / good news. The bad news is that President Obama is all gloom and doom, warning of "diminished levels of upward mobility". The good news is a "Stanford study" extolling the "American dream" – with an advisory that this "dream" must be "properly understood": It's a dream not of the acquisition of material wealth, but of the "freedom to follow one's conscience". I looked into it.

Turns out the "study" is from the Hoover Institute (at Stanford University), funded by those who've managed to acquire significant material wealth for themselves, but have dubious conscience regarding the well-being of their fellow Americans. The findings aren't due for another six months, but its author, Prof. William Damon, offers a sneakpeek, and (guess what?) those interviewed for the study confirm the professor's own view: students here from abroad think our "freedom" is pretty cool. So - shouldn't that fervor for the "America dream" put to shame all those whining about being unable to find a job?

While looking into it, I came across another study out of Stanford, this one by Prof. Sean Reardon from 2012, which found the gap in test scores between the highest- and lowestincome students growing by 40% since the 1960s. It's now twice as large as the black/ white achievement gap. This comes as the college completion rate for rich kids has grown in recent years, while that for kids from low-income families has stayed about the same. Fifty years ago, poor kids lagged 2 1/2 years in academic level behind those from affluent families. Today, it's four years.

The problem, according to the study, isn't the schools; it's that parents struggling to make ends meet, to find access to healthcare, don't have the time and resources to spend on their kids in the crucial early years.

This may not have been as big a deal decades ago, when opportunities in trades and manufacturing could provide a middle-class income without a degree. Today, however, it means a cycle of low wages and limited opportunities for advancement passing from one generation to the next - and a nation where the potential for upward mobility is one of the lowest in the developed world.

Another study by Prof. Reardon of Stanford, partnered with Prof. Kendra Bischoff of Cornell, came out last fall on "income segregation". Forty years ago, 65% of American families lived in middle-class neighborhoods; only about 40% do now. More than a third of families live in either affluent or poor neighborhoods - double the percentage in 1970.

As income inequality has increased, especially over the past ten years, Americans have become more "spatially divided" – with those in the top 10% having become more segregated than families in the bottom 10%.

With this income segregation, there's less of a "shared stake" in schools, parks and other public resources. As that top 10% takes in authors "the increasing isolation of the affluent from low- and moderate-income families means that a significant proportion of society's resources are concentrated in a smaller and smaller proportion of neighborhoods."

Greg also mentioned the median family income having dropped since the Recession. It dropped the first couple years, and then stayed pretty steady. It was $51,000 in 2012, an 8.3% drop from 2007.

For the top 5%, though, they recovered right away and kept going – with incomes now 5.2% higher than in 2007. Incomes for 99% of us grew an average 0.4% between 2009 and 2012. For the top 1%, it grew by 31.4%. That 1% is said to have captured 95% of the income gains from the first three years of the

According to the National Employment Law Project, nearly 4 million middle-income jobs were lost during the Recession, with 700,000 of those jobs coming back with the recovery. The number of low-wage jobs, however, increased by about 600,000. Thousands of formerly middle-income workers ended up taking the positions of displaced low-wage workers – while those with the highest incomes just kept doing better than ever.

Greg blames taxes. He's right. Economist Thomas Hungerford of the Congressional Research Service cites lowering of the capital gains tax rate as "by far the largest contributor" to growing income inequality in the U.S. President Reagan found it unfair that income derived from playing with other people's money would be taxed at a lower rate than income earned by actually working for it, and in 1986 capital gains were taxed at the same rate as ordinary income. This changed when the rate was lowered in 1996 under Clinton, and twice more under Bush. Inequality took off as the richest were able to keep a much larger portion of their income than the rest of us could.

As for the lowered corporate and upper marginal tax rates, there used to be incentives for putting profits back into a business, investing in expansion and the workforce, rather than in stock buy-backs, dividends and CEO compensation packages. incentives aren't as powerful anymore.

Greg also blames regulations. It was the loosening of regulations governing financial markets and the banking industry that brought about the Recession in the first place. Loosening of campaign finance regulations has helped ensure this stifling of the American dream, for all but the oligarchy, becomes permanent - unless those regulations can be restored, stiffened and enforced.

Perhaps, because of the Affordable Care Act, it will be easier for more to pursue their American dreams - since they won't be tied to dead-end jobs merely through fear of losing health benefits. Now, the question is whether to provide 1.3 million desperate Americans the lifeline of extended unemployment benefits. Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) suggests he might go along if, in return, there's agreement to deny millions of Americans access to affordable healthcare.

"There's nothing surer . . ."

POWER TESTS GREG Welborn

It's not much of a secret that New Jersey dereliction of duty, Governor Chris Christie has his eye on the the Governor has at 2016 Republican presidential nomination, and it's equally public knowledge that blame and hold that he prides himself on his direct, takeno-prisoners, do-it-right-for-the voters approach to governing. Whether you're a about either President Democrat or Republican, there's a lot to like about Christie's almost charismatic New Jersey attitude. The unfolding story of the George Washington Bridge closure will test all of that – the image, the person behind the image, and Christie's suitability for the highest office in the land. This week, Governor Christie took blame and apologized for the bridge closure and for the actions of at least one of his top aides which apparently led to the closure in the first place. The Governor's Deputy Chief of Staff, Bridget Kelly, has been fired, and there are others in the Governor's cross hairs. But these actions are not enough. At this point, we simply cannot determine whether they are the beginning positive steps of a political leader who truly is in it for the voters, or the actions of a political schlock who's simply trying to cover his backside and distance himself from blame.

The emails mentioned above relate to last September's 4-day closure of several lanes of the George Washington Bridge which connects Ft. Lee, N.J. with New York. It's a major commuter channel, and the lane closures during rush hour backed up traffic for hours. Not only were commuters massively inconvenienced, but school buses were delayed, and in at least one instance that has now come to light a paramedic ambulance was delayed enough that a person in need of aid died for lack of emergency treatment.

The mayor of Ft. Lee had previously refused to endorse Governor Christie in his re-election bid. Emails from Christie's Deputy Chief of Staff to a friend at the Port Authority suggested that it was "time for some traffic problems in Fort Lee". Within a couple of weeks, the Port Authority official apparently ordered that a "traffic study" which required the lane closures. Those are the facts that we know. The rest of the story will determine the governor is suited to hold the power conveyed by public office.

Governor Christie has acted properly in firing his Deputy Chief of Staff. There remain however questions about his culpability and his judgment. For Conservatives and Liberals, alike, the answers to these questions will be a fairly reliable guide as to whether he's ready for prime time - perhaps even whether he's able to continue in office.

On the plus side, the Governor's actions in firing his Deputy Chief of Staff stand in stark contrast to the actions of both President Obama and putative 2016 Democratic presidential candidate, Hilary Clinton. When faced with a clear least moved to assign person accountable. That cannot be said Obama or Secretary State As of this writing,

If firing people is the beginning of an earnest effort to remedy the issue and insure that future abuses of power don't occur, Christie will burnish his reputation and likely reclaim the trust of both blues and reds who have voted for him. If, on the other hand, Christie is shown to have been intimately involved in this act of retribution, then he deserves neither the presidency or the governorship.

To some extent, the Governor is portraying himself as a victim. In fairness to him, he didn't use that word to specifically describe himself and he has only used it in reference to those in N.J and N.Y. who had to drive through or live through the 4-day mess, but victimhood has been alluded to, and that is troubling. Christie stated that he was "betrayed" by senior members of his staff and that he only learned the truth after the newspapers had published the content of the emails. There is no doubt he was betrayed. But how believable is it that he wouldn't have discovered the truth on his

Even if we grant that his staff lied to him about their involvement, this was a major news story when it happened. 4-days of coverage in the N.J./N.Y. metro area put it on every newspaper and radio station for hours on end. Are we to believe the Governor didn't know about it? Of course not. The crux here is whether we're to believe that after being told his staff wasn't involved the Governor didn't pursue the matter further.

I personally find that very hard to believe, which puts the burden of proof right back where it belongs. Someone who seeks the presidency should be engaged enough to push for straight answers on major issues. If told his staff wasn't involved, wouldn't a true leader have then demanded that his staff find out who was at fault? Apparently, no such request and no such investigation were launched. If he Governor wishes to retain his current job and/or seek a bigger one, his handling of the situation, if not his involvement, need to be further reviewed.

January 13 - January 19, 2014

That Uncertain Feeling was released on April 20, 1941: A lady visits a psychoanalyst to get rid of her attacks of the hiccups, but may lose her husband instead.

Ernst Lubitsch was a famed director of the golden age of movies. He made this one right after the Jimmy Stewart classic 'The Shop Around the Corner.' You know that you are in for a treat from a great director, so pop a large bowl of popcorn, drizzle on lots of warm melted butter, and settle down for a romantic dramatic comedy with Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas, Burgess Meredith and Eve Arden.

The Bakers have an ideal marriage. He is a high-powered insurance salesman, they live on Park Avenue in New York City, and she has everything a wife could want . . . and more. As the movie opens, we learn that Jill Baker gets sudden attacks of the hiccups. One of Jill's girlfriends suggests that she visit a psychoanalyst that could surely cure her hiccups. Jill is skeptical, but goes to the doctor, who informs her that she has problems with her husband. Jill thought she was very happy in her marriage, but after the doctor told her otherwise, she started seeing all of the flaws in her hubby, and believes that he is the cause of her hiccups. One day on a visit to her analyst, he is delayed, and Jill meets another patient, a totally whacked out pianist (Burgess Meredith), and somehow they become attracted to each other. Jill's husband gets suspicious of the two, and it looks like their marriage is heading for the rocks. One afternoon when Jill's husband returns home early in the afternoon to talk to his young wife, and discovers that the pianist is already there having a fun afternoon with Jill. Jill faints dead away, and her husband and her pianist friend are together, mano-a-mano, and Jill's husband starts a classic 'Lubitsch' style sales job to win his wife back. The biggest sales pitch he's ever made. He starts divorce proceedings, and 'gives' his wife to the pianist. Of course, Jill gets regrets, and soon they are both playing the ends against the middle. Things go back and forth, each trying to speed up the divorce, and then slow down the proceedings, right up to the happy ending.

This movie was released in April of 1941, eight months before Pearl Harbor, and the U.S. was divided over whether to help Europe fight the German Nazi's or not. When Jill's husband confronts Burgess Meredith about his affair with Jill, Burgess Meredith repeats over and over again, "I will not fight," thinking that Jill's husband will fight him over her. Jill's husband replies, "So you are an isolationist," referring to the segment of the U.S. that believes that the country should isolate itself from the war in Europe and not get involved. And later her husband does a sarcastic 'heil' salute, making reference to the Nazi's as dictatorial. Movie goers of 1941 would have understood this immediately and either agreed or disagreed with one side or the other. Of course, once the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor in December of the same year, U.S. sentiment was united in favor of war, and the mightiest war machine in the history of the world was born.

BASIC BUSINESS MARKETING TOOL KIT

one of the things that every entrepreneur needs to complete. It will be used to support the successful launch and promotion of a business and should include the following items:

Logos & Taglines

McDonald's golden arches and the Nike swish are two of the most familiar corporate logos around the world. Each one is simple, with very little detail, which makes it easy to recognize no matter its size. A logo should be designed so that it is still easily recognizable when it is reduced to a size small enough to fit onto a business card. A tagline, also referred to as a slogan, should be succinct and memorable like the Nike "Just Do It" tagline that launched a marketing campaign that is remembered to this day. Many companies have several designs of their logo, including some layouts that include the company name or tagline.

Internet Presence

Every entrepreneur needs to determine which combination of digital media will best meet the needs of the company. Websites are no longer the only centerpiece of an online presence now that an increasing number of social media services can be customized with features to display and sell products, support customer dialogue and include links that allow visitors to choose the social media tool of their liking.

Success happens when preparation meets Traditional business cards are still in demand opportunity. Developing a marketing kit is as they remain one of the most inexpensive, tangible business tools that can be distributed to potential customers. Like the logo, the design should be simple and the style and size of the font should be easy to read. Too much information will make it look crowded and difficult to read. The main purpose of a business card is to provide contact information and where to find your company online or on social media.

Brochures, Flyers or Postcards

Businesses that cater to those in the Baby Boomers generation and older will still find it necessary to include printed marketing materials in the tool kit. These collateral materials should convey professionalism and be designed to convey the image and message that will encourage people to visit your website, join you on Facebook*, Twitter*, Pinterest* or other digital media. Younger people are inclined to use smart phones, tablets and computers to view information from businesses aftempting to bring them in as customers.

Once completed, each tool in the marketing kit can be used to build the company's brand.
