SIERRA MADRE'S HISTORIC WILSON-BIXBY HOUSE FOR SALE

The Wilson-Bixby House is a monument to Sierra Madre's rich history and reflects the Gilded Age of Victorian-Era architecture. Originally constructed in 1881, the house as one of the City's oldest treasures and is reportedly the oldest inhabited residence. Situated wonderfully on a gentle hill, the home's wrap-around porch with beautiful fretwork sets the tone for the property, revealing its farmhouse roots. Features throughout that define and enhance its character include high ceilings adorned with plaster medallions, original woodwork including beautifully turned stair spindles, fine metalwork found in window and door hardware, tall original windows that allow light to stream in and hardwood floors.

The original property of 20 acres (two 10 acre plots) was purchased from town developer Nathanial Carter by Mr. Wilson an attorney in Los Angeles for an orange grove. ine extended from Central Ave. (changed to Sierra Madre Blvd. in the 1930's) to Highland and from Lima west to a point west of the Bailey Canyon stream that would amount to 20 acres.

The house, barn and tank house were built on the eastern 10 acres of the property in 1881 by Wilson and orange trees were planted. A photo dated 1882 shows the house with many small orange trees, with white stakes in front of the house. This photo also shows open country clear up to the mountains. The house and tank house are all that is left of the original buildings on the ranch. The original house had an open porch on three sides was two stories with two bedrooms upstairs, kitchen, parlor and two bedrooms downstairs. The property was supplied by Sierra Madre co-operative water Co. from the house larger for the Evans family.

Each ranch At this point the house contained property was allowed a certain day and time to draw water from the system supply line by a valve at the northern edge of the property on Highland Avenue. At this time the water tank in the top of the tank house was filled for household and garden use and the orange orchard was irrigated. Records show that the water billing address for the property was on Highland Ave.

The undeveloped western 10 acres were sold sometime in the 1890's. In the 1890's the property was sold to the second owner, A. Bixby who continued the orange grove enterprise and maintained the house as a mountain retreat for his family. This is the same Bixby that developed areas of Long Beach and Santa Monica. There are several photos of the Bixby family in Lima and Sierra Madre Blvd. and around the house.

The eastern 10 acres that contained completed, continuing all the way from the house, barn and tank house plus Lima to Sunnyside. In 1957 Mr. Evans was sold to W.A. Evans in 1903. Mr. to Lewis George Jr. George split the Evans operated the orange grove and egg ranch, the hen house was to the west of the house.

The house was lit by natural gas that was piped to all of the rooms of the house & heated by coal heaters in each room connected to two chimneys. In the early 1900's when electricity came to Sierra Madre, Mr. Evans remodeled the house installing electricity, expanded the upstairs from two to four The house was gutted inside, and bedrooms and a trunk room. four bedrooms plus a trunk room upstairs. The downstairs consisted of a front parlor with a fireplace, a dining room, two bed rooms, and a screened sleeping bed room for Mrs. Evans who had to sleep in an open bed room, a bath room and a kitchen.

The county records show that the house has seven bedrooms, the four upstairs and three downstairs. In the 1920's a floor heater was added to the downstairs and the upstairs trunk room was converted into a bathroom. Grove Lane was the original driveway to the house and barn as the property address was on Central Ave (now Sierra Madre Boulevard.). THANK YOU CVS!

When CVS Pharmacy announced earlier this week that they were going to stop selling cigarettes and other tobacco products at its more than 7,600 CVS/pharmacy stores across the U.S. by October 1, 2014, their actions caught the attention of the entire nation, and especially the children in Mrs. York's third grade class at Sierra Madre Elementary School.

"I appreciate your billion-dollar health risk to try to get people to stop smoking", says Marcus, who then goes on to encourage the chain to sell new products to offset their losses.

"Thank you so much for not selling cigarettes and tobacco. My dad's adoptive parents both died from smoking", says "a very thankful student in Mrs. York's class, Annika".

These young people are to be commended for letting CVS, a corporate giant, know that their actions will have a positive impact on their lives. Thank you, the children of Mrs. York's class for stepping up to the plate!

WALKING SIERRA MADRE.....THE SOCIAL SIDE By Deanne Davis

"And when you really do take a bite on it, chewing, uhmmm, some overwhelming satisfaction are dancing in your tongue: those flaky crusts, and then the buttery cakelike and bread-like at the same time crumb... Another bite swallowed, uhmm, that's when you know that you are eating a perfect croissant." Rose's 'Simply A Food Blog'

Ok, you can't let another day go by without walking into the Poppy Cake Baking Co. which is now where Wildflour Bakery used to be. Poppy Cake Baking Co. is the dream come true of a charming young couple, Brittainy and Matt Turnquist. Brittainy is a Sierra Madrean (her parents live on Montecito) and she is a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, in New York, where she met her husband, Matt. She specialized in pastry and he is a savory chef, i.e., one who works on the 'hot food' side of the kitchen. Matt is originally from a small town outside of Buffalo, New York, Jamestown, which is the birthplace of Lucille Ball! Brittainy and Matt opened Poppy Cake Baking Co. just two months ago and are doing very well, which is good news!

Walking into Poppy Cake, the first thing I saw was a refrigerated case filled with all the things I'd like to have for dinner, and we most certainly will be having just as soon as the Super Bowl chili is gone. Their 'dinners to go,' described on a signboard as 'In The Case Today" included chicken pie, jambalaya, macaroni and cheese, broccoli soup, beet salad and maple roasted Brussels sprouts salad to name just a few. We will be dining with Poppy Cake very soon!

Right next to the dinners to go was the baked goodies case, amazing muffins, cinnamon rolls, and Brittainy's favorite, croissants. But these were not just croissants, friends and neighbors, these were CROISSANTS! You have got to get in for a cup of coffee and a croissant immediately! The coffee is all from a local coffee roaster, Demitasse, with quarters in downtown L.A., and Poppy Cake rotates the blends so there is always something deliciously new brewing.

Poppy Cake opens at 8 a.m. and is open for sandwiches, salads and soups till 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 8 to 4 Saturday and Sunday. Speaking of sandwiches, Poppy Cake has a wonderful rotating variety and they make absolutely everything that is involved: mayonnaise, jam, bread. Oh! And the Poppy Cake chickens are all free range, the beef is American Wagyu, a breed of cattle which is grass fed, free range as calves, graduating to grains as they get a little closer to market. There are no hormones, no antibiotics in anything and all Poppy Cake's ingredients are local, natural products.

Poppy Cake Baking Co. is a wonderful addition to Sierra Madre's ever growing list of delightful places to break bread. Plans for the future include even more pastries, expanding the display area, catering, and increasing the dinners to go menu. Look for espresso drinks and even dinners hot and ready to take home to the family.

The Poppy Cake pastry chef, Ashley, who worked with owner Brittainy at the Farm Shop Bakery in Santa Monica, was kneading bread, the other Brittainy (who was with Wildflour) but is now an integral part of the new baking company was working in the kitchen, which you can see from the front door... I don't know about you, but I love to see people making stuff!

Loaves of beautiful bread are waiting for you to take them home. There is cheesecake! You can order the exact birthday cake you need to have! There is chocolate croissant pudding! Need I say more? Poppy Cake Baking Co. is ready to give you an amazing, mouth-watering...just about anything you can think of! Poppy Cake Baking Co. is next door to Pantorium Cleaners at the corner of Lima and Sierra Madre Blvd.

Valentine's Day is just around the corner and you could order a Valentine's treat for yourself and your sweetie from Poppy Cake Baking Co.... just saying!

MAKING THE LENTEN JOURNEY: The Stories and Scriptures of Lent

Lent is filled with some of the Gospel's most profound and beautiful stories. We enter into these stories in two ways-by seeing ourselves in the characters Jesus encounters, and by seeing ourselves in Jesus himself as he goes about doing the will of God. Backyard Chicken Ordinance Approved

The city council took further steps Monday night that would make it easier to keep backyard chickens, unanimously approving first reading of an ordinance amending the municipal code dealing with fowl and livestock restrictions.

The ordinance would lower the distance perimeter requirements for chickens from 50 feet from property line and 100 feet from any inhabited structure to 35

"Distance requirements 35 feet from a dwelling house or structure, not within a required setback, Councilmember Tornek said as he asked if that applied to side yards and backyards.

Staff said the new ordinance would apply to front yards

The ordinance change only applies to chickens. Other animals such as geese, ducks, turkeys, pheasants, doves, pigeons, squabs or similar fowls or rabbits, must stay within 50 feet of any street line or within 50 feet of any property line, or within 100 feet of certain dwellings.

The ordinance also provides that the poundmaster, rather than the health officer, may grant exemption according to staff. The keeping of live chickens must also be registered with the Pasadena Humane Society.

At a meeting last May, backyard hen advocates said there are public health benefits associated with backyard coops including, , healthy foods, fresh eggs and nitrogen-rich guano for fertilizer use.

A motion to move the issue was made by Councilmember Jacque Robinson. Councilmember Steve Madison and Vice Mayor Margaret McAustin were absent. A second reading by the council will take placei n 30 days.

AN UPDATE ON THE LIVE OAK VILLAGE PROJECT IN ARCADIA

On a recent Wednesday evening, I attended the Monrovia-Arcadia-Duarte Town Council Meeting and got quite an earful. It is no wonder David Hall is still the Chair-twenty years since it began. That man is beyond awesome-he addresses people and stays calm. The nonsense that came out of their mouths was unbelievable and the worst part was a Duarte trouble maker who came to our county meeting and tried to stir things up.

Several months ago, I explained the Live Oak Village Project. This project is the work of WHCHC (West Hollywood Community Corporation). WHCHC is nonprofit and was founded in 1986 to buy, build, rehabilitate, manage and advocate affordable housing for lower income people. They partner with local governments, funders, social service providers, community residents, architects, contractors and property managers to build their projects.

WHCHC came to two Town Council Meetings and made presentations. The residents came out and made their concerns known. Some statements were incorrect-pertaining to building height-as there are a few really tall ones on Live Oak Avenue as Mr. Hall pointed out. And there were several complaints about a business being on the bottom floor and not enough parking.

At the recent Town Council Meeting, Mr. David Moss, Project Manager explained all the changes that had been made in the design. (I don't think any of the complainers had any clue as to the amount of time, effort and money it took to redesign the whole building, and parking facility to meet

Mr. Moss began by stating "The previous project has been abandoned. They began a new project...40 units; 28 one-bedroom, 12-three bedrooms...The height of the building is down from 49 feet to 35 feet. It has been reduced from four stories to three stories...more parking-instead of 49 spots, there will be 61 spots."

After listening to residents' concerns and redoing the design of the project, WHCHC still had to deal with complaints. People stood up and were talking nonsense, "Who would move there? No

The site is ideal. It is right on a bus route. There is the Live Oak Library close by and even a market. Then there was mention of Monrovia Transit. (626) 358-3538. An Arcadia realtor stood up and said, "Monrovia Transit doesn't come here."

I REALLY took exception with that false information. Monrovia Transit recently celebrated its 30th Anniversary. In the beginning, it was established for residents of the city of Monrovia. (I can remember my girls walking a few blocks to Mayflower to catch it as we live in the county area.) But Carolyn Ziegler changed that! Carolyn, one of the original Town Council Members, worked on this transportation problem with Supervisor Antonovich. Discretionary funds were used so Monrovia Transit would provide transportation to ALL COUNTY AREAS when people needed rides to Arcadia Methodist, City of Hope, Santa Teresita and the Duarte Road / Baldwin Avenue Medical Offices. Council Member Gloria Huss told me that she has even seen the Transit go to both Target and Wal

The transit situation was confusing at first (late '93 or '94). I received a frantic call from an elderly couple from my Church who lived in the county area. I drove to their home, and Ted said, "Arcadia Transit won't pick me up." So I had to explain it was MONROVIA TRANSIT that does all THREE county areas, but you must call 24 hours in advance to book a ride.

The gentleman from the City of Duarte stood up and said, "All families have several cars."

Mr. Hall calmly replied that if a person was low income, they would probably not be able to afford six cars! What a meeting! Stay tuned for updates on the Live Oak Project.

VALENTINE'S DAY By Christoper Nyerges

[Nyerges is the author of several books. He can be reached via School of Self-reliance at Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CA 90041, or www.ChristopherNyerges.com, where one can view his various blogs.]

Now that January is behind us, the stores of Sierra Madre are now getting filled with red and pink hearts. Why? February 14 is the day set aside to commemorate a real historical person named Valentinus, the day we now call "Saint Valentine's Day." With just a little bit of research, we learn that this Valentinus person was stoned, clubbed, and beheaded in about the year 270 A.D. He was violently killed by an unruly mob. But why? And how have we come to associate Valentinus with chocolates and hearts and lovers?

It turns out that there were at least two people called Valentinus possibly more – who lived in the 2nd and 3rd Centuries. One – who the Catholic Church now called Saint Valentine – was beheaded in 270 A.D.

Another Valentinus lived about a century earlier and founded one of the most important sects of Gnosticism. He was born in Egypt and educated in Alexandria. He settled in Rome during the reign of Pope Hyginus and taught there for more than 20 years. He attracted a large following to his beliefs, due in part to his intelligence, his eloquence of speech, and his impeccable arguments.

But the teachings of this Valentinus differed in some ways from the Christian church of that time, and when the office for the Bishop of Rome opened up, he was not selected. Valentinus then chose to break off from the Christian church, left Rome, and continued to develop his doctrines as he saw fit.

There are no original surviving documents from the teachings of Valentinus. So, if you want to discover what he actually believed and taught, you have to study fragmentary quotations found in the writings of his orthodox Christian opponents. Through research, we learn that Valentinus was influenced by Plato (the main source of the teachings of Socrates), Zoroastrianism, and Christianity. Valentinus also spoke of a spiritual realm which he called Pleroma, which consisted of "emanations" evolving from an original divine being. These have been described as the layers of an onion, with each layer being a wholly complete reality. It's all very interesting, though it's all a bit second-hand because whatever Valentinus wrote was apparently "lost" or destroyed by opponents.

The term Gnosticism came from the word "gnosis," defined as spiritual knowledge. Those who followed this line of study were called the Gnostics, and many were referred to as Christian Gnostics. But by the third century, the more orthodox Christian church (and the political power of the day), decided to oppose and persecute the Gnostics. By the end of the third century, Gnosticism as a distinct movement had largely disappeared.

Now, here's the quiz: Where in all this did you hear anything about chocolates, hearts, greeting cards, bunnies, jewelry, roses, or lace underwear? Plus, there doesn't appear to be any historical connection with any of the individuals named Valentinus with the date of February 14.

It turns out that in the pre-Christian days, there was a celebration in honor of Lupercus, a pastoral god, sometimes identified with Faunus or Pan. Faunus is depicted as having the body of a man but the horns, pointed ears, tail, and hind legs of a goat. That is, Faunus is more or less identical with the satyr, who was said to be lecherous, lustful, and always ready to party.

The pre-Christian observance of this day was called Lupercalia, which fell on February 15. Most of what people do today in the name of "celebrating St. Valentine's Day" has its roots in the ancient feast of Lupercalia. On Lupercalia, cards were given (often with subtle or overt sexual overtones), and men reportedly chased women through the streets (sounds somewhat like Mardi Gras).

It is difficult to ascertain why the commemoration of Valentinus was used to supplant, uplift, and supercede the already-existing commemoration of Lupercus, but that's what happened. Yet, very little of the trappings of modern St. Valentine's Day have anything to do with the historical Valentinus.

And that's really a shame, since Valentinus was as important as, perhaps Socrates or Pythagoras, and yet most of us only associate him with the silly commercialism of Lupercalia's remnants. Certainly it's possible that the Church engineered this substitution so that people would elevate their practices on this day, though there is no evidence that that has happened. So rather than waste money and time on chocolates and red cards, why not take the time to study something meaningful about the great teacher Valentinus, or about the real meaning of that much-used word "love." One excellent book in this regard is Eric Fromm's "Art of Loving." Once you get into it, you may discover - as I did - that much of what he taught is very relevant today.

NOTE: Every Sunday outdoors under a large banyan tree in Highland Park, there is a spiritual studies presentation on topics of current interest, such as the meanings of the holidays. The presentations are sponsored by WTI (see www.wtinc.info for details and schedule of upcoming talks.

When he returned to his vehicle, he discovered one of the rear windows was shattered and his backpack containing school supplies had been taken. The investigation is continuing.

Driving Under the Influence – Suspect Arrested February 4 at 8:45 p.m., an officer observed a vehicle heading south on Alta Vista that failed to yield for traffic on Foothill. The officer followed the vehicle and saw it swerving into the opposing lane of traffic. He immediately stopped the vehicle, approached the driver and could smell a strong odor of alcohol. The officer conducted field sobriety tests and determined the driver was intoxicated. The driver was arrested and taken into custody.

Hit & Run Traffic Collision / Driving Under the Influence – Suspect Arrested

February 5 at 7:23 p.m., a solo female driver was traveling west on Foothill and made an unsafe left turn onto Violet, striking an oncoming vehicle that was traveling in the opposite direction. That vehicle spun out of control and struck another vehicle. The female driver fled the scene in her vehicle, heading south on violet; however, she was now missing a tire and her vehicle was grinding its metal wheel into the pavement. She made it all the way to Violet and Colorado, where she was stopped by police. Field sobriety tests were conducted and it was determined that the female was too intoxicated to drive a vehicle safely. She was arrested for Hit and Run and Driving Under the Influence. No one was injured in the collision.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show LABOR DAY

I had not heard anything about this movie or even seen a trailer before seeing the film. With all films, poor advertisement can be the movie's death and, sadly, I feel this way about this movie. 'Labor Day' had such little press but was the best film I have seen so far this year.

After his parents divorce, Henry (Gattlin Griffith) lives with and must take care of his emotionally scarred mother Adele (Kate Winslet). During a routine trip to the market, they meet the mysterious and dangerous Frank (Josh Brolin) who forces them to take him back to their house. As Henry and Adele learn more about Frank, they become more and more attached to him, and the experiences they have over Labor Day weekend follows the three of them for the rest of their lives. Everything about this movie was wonderful. The screenplay was smart and well written. The acting was impeccable. The film perfectly blends drama, suspense, and a love story, making the two hour runtime fly by. I went into this movie knowing nothing about it and came out of the theater extremely happy. 'Labor Day' is the best movie that has come out so far this year.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY

First of all, let's agree to agree, Valentine's Day should be a full week. A single day is not long enough to fully express one's love. What do you say about having an evening at home with a bottle of champagne and a candlelight table for dinner? You may wonder why a restaurant critic would dare such treason. In all truth, it's an impossible night for restaurants. Service is less than optimal and even the guarantee of a reservation can lead to a long wait and the the name of St. Valentine, but who is this mysterious saint and why do we celebrate the passion of this holiday? The history of Valentine's Day — and its patron saint — is shrouded in mystery. But we do know that February has long been a month of romance. Valentine's Day, as we know it today, contains vestiges of both Christian and ancient Roman tradition. So, who was Saint Valentine and how did he become associated with this ancient rite? Today, the Catholic Church recognizes at least three different saints named Valentine or Valentines, all of whom were martyred.

One legend contends that Valentine was a priest who served during the third century in Rome. When Emperor Claudius II decided that single men made better soldiers than those with wives and families, he outlawed marriage for young men — his crop of potential soldiers. Valentine, realizing the injustice of the decree, defied Claudius and continued to perform marriages for young lovers in secret. When Valentine's actions were discovered, Claudius ordered that he be put to death. His love for love lives on each February.

SAVOR BRINGS THE GOODIES!

Foodie Tips and Tidbits for SavorThe Flavor -Sierra Madre*

WHAT'S ROUND LIKE A MEATBALL AND GREEN LIKE A FROG?

Karen and Denis Keegan and Madeline Romo, founders and owners of Savor the Flavor, have a wonderful sense of style, as evidenced by the atmosphere of their Sierra Madre-based shop. They also have an uncanny knack for finding the unique, interesting and most flavorful specialty foods and gifts to be had anywhere in Southern California. For more than 16 years, they have travelled around the country to food and gift shows, taste-testing a broad array of local and regional products. Most recently, Karen and Denis spent 3 days in San Francisco scouring the aisles at the Annual West Coast Fancy Food Show held at the Moscone Convention Center.

A FANCY FOOD SHOW?!

Twice a year, the specialty food industry gathers its members/purveyors/food entrepreneurs in a huge space like the Moscone Center in San Francisco or the monster Javitz Center in New York. 1500 exhibitors from Italy and France to Iowa and the California's Central Valley compete for buyers' attention.

Miles of aisles give a buyer endless opportunities to sample exquisite chocolates from Switzerland and Central America; taste creamy and nutty Brie cheese from the Loire Valley; sip teas, wine or fruit vinegars from around the world.

Roughly 80,000 different specialty foods are yours to taste--we have learned that attendees like us can only sample a very small fraction of what is available. (The first show we attended was an education; 45 minutes into it, our taste buds surrendered.)

New companies introducing their product to us. Every 10 minutes is a new company for 3 hours. Like speed dating!

For the past several shows, we have participated in "Business Builders," 3 hours of back-to-back, 30 minute interviews with food purveyors wanting us to carry their products. For comparison, it's like speed dating for foodies.

Many food purveyors submit their products to the competition for the SOFI awards, the specialty food industry's version of the Oscars. Winners in more than a dozen categories (cracker, condiment, cookie etc.) are selected by panels of judges. Winning products are virtually assured success and it is from this group that we pick many of what land on Savor's shelves.

Okay. So what did we find at this show? Lots of wonderful things. Here are a few that really stood out as exceptional:

Sonoma Harvest White Balsamic Vinegars blended with fruit purée-blood orange, mango, lime, pomegranate and passion fruit. These go way beyond salad dressing. Incredibly bright flavors can top chilled fresh fruit, berries, melon or even ice cream. They can be reduced for a fresh and tangy finishing sauce for roasts. We tasted them mixed with cold seltzer water and immediately thought "What an amazing mixer for a refreshing vodka or tequila cocktail!"

We also tasted two mustards we really were wowed by from Elki Foods. First is a Bacon Blue Cheese Whipped Mustard--simply wonderful on a cracker, but imagine topping a baked potato or mixed into your traditional mashed potatoes. The other was their Maple Bacon Whipped Mustard, awesome on a grilled ham and Swiss sandwich or on breakfast sausages.

We'll share more of our discoveries in Part II. Until then, come by the shop and ask to taste these and the other goodies we found at the Fancy Food Show. We are open 7 days a week; 11 Kersting Ct. 626 355 5153

So, what's round like a meat ball and green like a frog?

Quite simply, Frog Balls, spicy dill pickled baby Brussels sprouts from the good folks at Black Sheep Gourmet of Anaheim. For sprout lovers, these will make a great snack and are perfect for your martini when olives and onions won't do. Come try them.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

STING OF THE BOTHERED BEE

Happy by Chris Leclerc

As a young child, I was terrified of every bug or insect I came into contact with, particularly those that I knew could bite or sting me. I will never forget the first time I was stung by a bee. Or, to put it in more specific terms, the first time I was stung by an entire swarm of angry bees. I was five years old, and had not yet learned about how nature works. I did not understand any of those creeping, crawling, flying creatures who inhabited the space beyond the four walls within which I lived.

The angry bee attack was my own fault. I had been teasing them as they came and went to and from the hive they had built outside the window of my parents' bedroom. My sister and I had both spent the morning obnoxiously tapping on the glass and had apparently aggravated them to a point of frenzy. A bit later that day, when I stepped out the front door, I was surprised (although I should not have been) to find myself suddenly covered with angry bees. The moment I closed the door behind me, they came and covered me from the waist up, and somehow burrowed their way into the backside of my t-shirt.

They then proceeded to plant their tiny, needlelike stingers deeply into the delicate skin of my neck and shoulders. I immediately panicked and began screaming, hoping someone would come and rescue me. Within moments my mother came out, yanked my t-shirt off and dragged me back into the house where she prepared a home remedy made of baking soda and milk, and spread it heavily over the bee stings on my back. I don't know which was more swollen by the end of that fiasco, my face (from crying so hard), or my back from the numerous bee stings I had sustained. In a short time my temperature rose to 102, and I became quite queasy.

the bees had stung, shrank down and my fever subsided. I was amazed that my mother knew enough to use a homemade baking soda remedy to draw out the poison that those bothered bees had injected into my skin. The fact is, my loving mother had all kinds of alternative health care tricks up her sleeve, but then again I guess she had to, being the mom of seven children, at least one of which knew how to get herself in a heap

I felt the need to pester those poor busy bees. I guess we were acting out of fear, knowing that they couldn't terrorize us while we were inside, the way we knew they could when we played outdoors. We must have found some sense of satisfaction in annoying them from within the safety of our home.

to apply it, you are way less likely to get stung by a bothered bee! safety of our home.

What my sister and I didn't realize at the time, was that bees have no desire to terrorize other beings, they are simply going about the business that God created them for, which is to work hard transporting pollen, to breed freely and to make honey. Later in life, I learned about the Godgiven purpose of bees and the important part hey play in nature, and I was finally able to quit being afraid of them.

Bees only attack as a response to aggravation; it is not in their nature to do so at random. So many aspects of life depend on the bee's persistent activity, which is why it is so important that we humans stay out of their way and allow them to go about their business. A bee can actually feel the vibration of fear being emitted from the human, much in the same way that a dog can smell fear or danger. With this in mind, the best thing to do, if you happen to come in contact with a swarm of bees, is to remain calm, keep quiet, and walk away slowly. If you handle the situation in this manner, bees are more likely to ignore you and continue their work than to become aggravated

If you are fearful and make loud noises or sudden movements, bees are likely to respond with aggression and give chase. For them, it's all about completing the task at hand, protecting their hives, and surviving.

Since I have figured this out for myself, I have been able to relax and enjoy watching bees fly about and do their work with no anxiety or fear. It is a fabulous feeling to sit calmly, listen to them buzz and observe them as they do what they were created to do. And so it is that this lesson from nature came with an additional bonus, above and beyond the fact that bees no longer sting me.

Somehow, understanding what makes bees "tick", and learning to trust them not to attack, has helped me understand the bigger picture in other parts of my life as well. Getting to know what bees are all about has taught me to relax and Eventually the raised, rosy-red marks where let nature, in general, do its thing. This approach most definitely beats living in fear and causing a disruptive ripple in the process of nature.

There are so many lessons to be learned from creatures that are different from ourselves. They have the potential to teach us how to be better human beings. Perhaps the proverbial "birds and the bees" story that we attempt to tell our children during their adolescence carries more substance than we might have expected. It's not just about the facts of life (sex and reproduction), it also To this day, I am unsure why my sister and provides a way of explaining what life is really all about...you know, the "bigger picture".

I strongly suggest that we all learn to relax and enjoy our surroundings, fear-free. Even if this thought for the day doesn't mean as much to you as it does to me, I guarantee that if you are willing

DENTAL DISEASE IN PETS - PART II

By Dr. Gueniat, Monrovia Animal Medical Center

Prevention of dental disease is crucial to the health of your pet. This starts with your pet's annual wellness visit to your veterinarian. Every year, and twice a year if your dog or cat is 7 years or older, your pet should be examined by a veterinarian and have a complete blood count, blood chemistry, heartworm test, intestinal parasite detection test, a urinalysis and a thorough oral exam; this is often where dental disease is first diagnosed. Part of the dental exam should include a new test called OraStrip that can be used right during your visit to determine the severity of periodontal disease. This test is more accurate than a visual exam alone, but should be used in conjunction with the oral exam. Owners can see the result of the test right then and there.

If your veterinarian finds broken teeth, red, swollen or bleeding gums, loose teeth, a foul odor, gingival masses, oral masses, and calculus on the teeth, a dental diagnostic and therapeutic procedure should be performed. This requires anesthesia. Owners should be careful not to be conned into the myth that anesthetic dental procedures are dangerous and to fall for teeth cleaning at grooming places and pet store personnel. These procedures are done illegally by unlicensed and untrained people, who can do more harm than good to your pet. Just ask yourself, would you let your hairdresser do your dental work? Anesthesia allows the veterinarian to do a thorough exam, explore around the teeth for periodontal pockets, and perform dental x-rays to find disease not visible above the gum line. Pets can benefit from every dental procedure available to humans, including implants, orthodontia, root canals, crowns, and cavity restorations. A careful chosen anesthetic protocol and vigilant monitoring of the patient during anesthesia and recovery make this a very safe procedure.

Your veterinarian will counsel you on preventive dental home care. Just like for humans, tooth brushing at home is the mainstay of home care for dogs and cats. Ask to receive information about toothpaste, tooth brushes, oral rinses, and dietary products that can help you maintain oral health in your pet. Home care can't replace dental care by your veterinarian when needed, but it can lengthen the intervals between procedures. Good oral heath will greatly extend the life span as well as the quality of life of your pet.

LOOKING FOR A BEST FRIEND,,,

... Well, Felix would love to be your Valentine!

He is a very sweet, calm, quiet, and gentle 2 year old, golden blonde Chihuahua mix with unique eyes - one blue and one brown. This seven-pound ball of love and joy is looking for the right person or family to share his life with.

When Felix first arrived at the shelter back in September, 2013, he was on the timid side, and sometimes a little hand and feet shy. But since that time, he has relaxed more, gained a lot more confidence, and has made many friendships with people and other dogs. He may be shy when he first meets you, but once he gets to know you, he will happily run to you, look up at you in a flirtatious way, curl his head down in a bowing position and lean on you so you will pet him. He has a magical way of stealing your heart and he is irresistible!

Felix is very easy on walks and thoroughly enjoys them, loving to explore new territory and enjoy your company. When you tell him what a good boy he is, he will wag his little tail, look up at you, smile and walk proudly next to you. Felix loves the company of other doggies, is very loyal and caring of his friends and will avoid all confrontations. He loves running around a yard, chasing and fetching toys and playing tug-a-war with another little dog. His Valentine wish is to share his life with someone who will fill his life with

Think about which three independently owned businesses you'd miss most if they were gone. Stop in and say hello. Pick up a little something that will make someone smile. Your contribution is what keeps those businesses around.

If just half the employed U.S. population spent $50 each month in independently owned businesses, their purchases would generate more than $42.6 billion in revenue.* Imagine the positive impact if 3/4 of the employed population did that.

For every $100 spent in independently owned stores, $68 returns to the community through taxes, payroll, and other expenditures. If you spend that in a national chain,

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

Review By Sean Kayden

THAT AWKWARD MOMENT

Am I surprised I didn't really care for a 'romcom' starring Zac Efron? Not really. Efron, Miles Telle,r and Michael B. Jordon are best buddies who make a pact to stay single, but secretly fall in love with the girls they're talking to in "That Awkward Moment." It's one cliché after another in this mildly humorous tale of young men not wanting to fall in love, but really they do all along. This is supposed to be the opposite of a chick flick because it's coming from the male perspective. However, the film offers little to no insight on the male mind. This formulaic relationship themed film doesn't hold a candle to the earlier films it desperately tries to emulate. The film has a few laughs, mostly from up and coming actor Miles Teller, but that alone doesn't save this witless male driven romantic comedy.

Written and Directed By: Tom Gormican Rated: R for sexual content and language throughout

Release Date: January 31st, 2014

Basically, the movie is about these three best friends who want to hang out more once

Michael B. Jordan's character's wife files for divorce. Efron and Teller are already trying to play the field or add to the "roster" as Efron comfortably states in the movie. There's nothing special or unique going on here. All the characters are one-dimensional and there is literally no character development on any of them. Efron falls for a girl but doesn't want to admit to it. Teller has his best girl friend helping him with random girls at the bar, but what do you know? They actually like each other. Jordan is going through a divorce, but his ex-wife starts to hook up with him again. It really doesn't make much sense if she wants a divorce. All three guys keep it secret from one another because they said they wouldn't get involved with any girls on a sérious level. Of course all is revealed, the guys have a mini tantrum and seemingly everything is forgotten a few scenes later.

The only thing outside their pursuit of getting laid is what they do for a living. Efron and Teller work at company that design book covers and Jordan is a doctor. Even that seems forced and not at all relevant. Efron produced this script as a starring vehicle for himself. I guess he had the power to have someone want to invest in this, but it offers nothing special for him as an actor. Light on laughs, insight, heart and real romance, the film barely touches mediocrity. "That Awkward Moment" feels like it's in a dead zone during its second half. There's little significance to be found and much of the film just becomes tedious. A lot of the scenes were filmed in the same locations over and over. No variety, no surprises, all filler, no killer. It's everything you've seen before in other movies, but done extremely better in them. In the end, there's little to recommend. If this film is geared for women to finally see the male's point of view, no discoveries will be made. As for guys seeing this, there's nothing this film will tell you that you didn't know already. Therefore, it's a stalemate for both sides.

Adrianne Marie Hall is an avid reader, a writer of poetry and fiction, a published author, a photographer, and a multi-media graphic designer. She is also the President and CEO of Anthurium Publishing LLC, an independent publishing house "Where Writers Become Published Authors". She believes that everyone has a story to tell, which is the driving force behind her passion for helping writers who wish to realize their publishing goals.

She is very candid about her personal experiences going through the publishing process with her first published novel 'Thresholds'. She says that "Thresholds was born from an eighteen year old manuscript that I wrote when my three children were very young. For over a decade and a half I thought of going the independent publishing route with the manuscript but I kept putting that endeavor off because the time just never seemed to be right. Then after years of re-writing and re-editing the manuscript, I finally sent it to a publisher. Within a few months a box arrived with the first printed copies of my published novel. With nearly two decades of work that had been invested from start to finish, my adult daughter dubbed the novel her youngest sibling. It was exciting and incredibly surreal to see the results of pages and pages of my writing finally packaged and finished so beautifully into a bound book.

Although finally realizing her own dream of being a published author was an exciting experience, she goes on to explain that the publishing process was not without its ups and downs. "The road that I traveled with the publisher from manuscript to novel was not free of potholes. Because there are so many moving parts to the publishing process, not being made aware of them at the start of the journey could prove to be discouraging and or overwhelming while on the path to getting published. When I decided that my plans were to continue writing with the expectation of publishing my work, I knew it was time to move full speed ahead and invest as much time and energy as necessary into learning the ins and outs of the world of independent publishing. I was determined to streamline the process and make it more enjoyable not just for my future self, but for other writers who dream of being published authors as well." Anthurium Publishing LLC is the result of her decision to go to the next level in the world of independent publishing.

In addition to running her publishing company, another outlet for Adrianne was hosting workshops called "The Keys To Getting Published" where she could speak directly to and mentor writers who have aspirations of becoming published authors. At those workshops attendees would receive a workbook full of vital information on the intricacies of publishing because she wanted them to have something tangible to refer back to long after the workshop was over.

This year she has taken the format of her workshop and all of that vital information and repackaged it into a fifty page book titled "The Keys To Getting Published", an easy-to-read and understand handbook which is now available at Amazon.com, the CreateSpace E-store, and through the Anthurium Publishing website. Her hope for The Keys To Getting Published is that it provides aspiring authors with the information needed to help them proceed smoothly toward their ultimate goal of becoming published regardless of where they are on their writing and publishing journey

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S SECRET SIX: THE SPY RING THAT SAVED THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION,

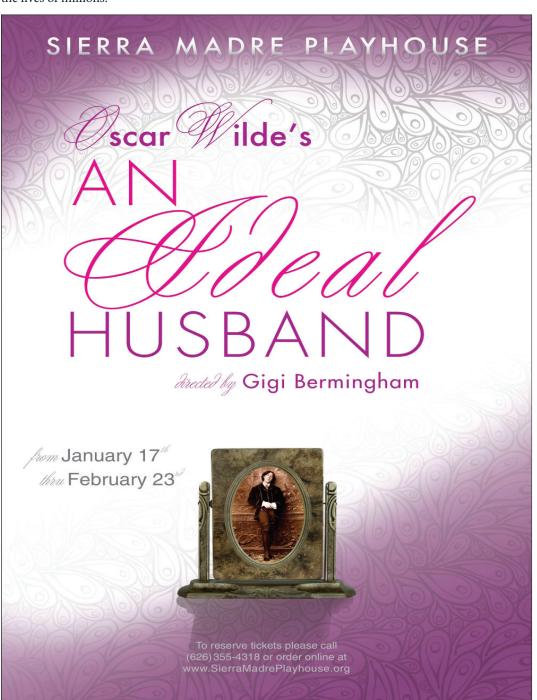

by Brian Kilmeade and Don Yaeger

When General George Washington beat a quick retreat from New York City in August 1776, many thought the American Revolution might soon be over. Instead, Washington rallied, thanks in large part to a little known, secret group called the Culper Spy Ring. Washington realized that he couldn't beat the British with military might, so he recruited a sophisticated and highly secretive intelligence network to infiltrate

New York. So carefully guarded were their identities that one spy's name was not uncovered until the twentieth century, and one still remains unknown today. Historians have discovered enough information about their activities to put together evidence that these six individuals turned the tide of the war. An interesting book about a little known, but very important, part of our history.

THE RACE UNDERGROUND: BOSTON, NEW YORK, AND THE INCREDIBLE RIVALRY THAT BUILT AMERICA'S FIRST SUBWAY, by Doug Most

In the late 19th century, as cities like Boston and New York grew more congested, the streets became clogged with horse-drawn carts. When the great blizzard of 1888 crippled the entire northeast, a solution had to be found. Two brothers, Henry Melville Whitney of Boston and William Collins Whitney of New York, pursued the dream of his city digging America's first subway, and the great race was on. The competition between Boston and New York played out in an era like our own, with economic upheaval, life changing innovations, class warfare, bitter political tensions, and the question of America's place in the world. The Race Underground is full of the famous, like Boss Tweed, Thomas Edison and Grover Cleveland and the not-so-famous, from brilliant engineers to the countless "sandhogs". The author chronicles the science of the subway, looks at the fears people overcame about traveling underground and tells a story as exciting as any ever taken from the pages of U.S. history. It is a great American drama of two rival American cities, and an invention that changed the lives of millions.

HEALTHY LIFESTYLES

THE JOY OF YOGA

RESISTING

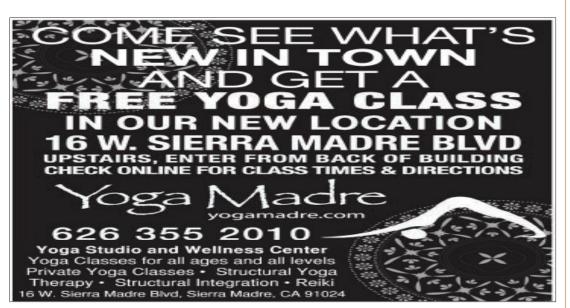

It never ceases to amaze me how resistance can effect our lives and accepting change can bring about peace. The simplest examples can help us learn big lessons. How many times in our lives have we resisted change only to finally, reluctantly, change and then wish we had done it years before? This is not to say that there are not things worth holding on to, but the ability to flow can make it all so much more peaceful. Resistance or "holding" does not flow with the law of nature. In fact energy or prana is always moving. We are always changing on a cellular level, we are always breathing, moving and thinking. So when we get stuck or hold on to ideas and things and thing that are no longer serving us it creates a block in the

So how do we learn to be more accepting of change? How do we discern what we want to keep around? Well, first accepting that nothing is truly ours. Then we can learn to study our own behaviors. Observing our tendencies and our habits is the key. We start this process with the lessons our own movement can teach us. How long have we been stuck with those tight hamstrings? The older we get the more stuck we become. It is imperative that we keep moving and stay flexible. Every day on the yoga mat we breathe into the change and move the body to stay open and flexible.

This then translates to our minds. What thoughts are we hanging on to? Are these thoughts serving us? What about our feelings? Are they really productive for us or are they habitual? Once we notice, we can see the possibilities of change or seeing things in a new way. Once that happens the laws of nature can help us to become unstuck. And then it all comes back to the breath. We breathe in the fresh new thoughts and abilities and exhale the old. A sense of peace sets in that we are in the flow. So, if you have been stuck, in a rut, or resistant to change, take some time to breathe. Move the body in new ways everyday. Be gentle and learn to go with the flow. And of course, get into a yoga class. I will see you there!

Vibrant Living Wellness Center Heathcare the Way Nature Intended

WHAT IS A TRADITIONAL NATUROPATH?

I am often asked what a naturopath is or what is naturopathy? Naturopathy means close to nature and or benefiting from nature. As a naturopath, I believe nature has given us everything we need to get well and stay well. The basic teaching of traditional naturopathy should sound familiar, "above all, do no harm". Naturopaths in general specialize in wellness. That is to say, teaching clients how applying natural lifestyle approaches can help the body's own natural healing and health building potential. As a traditional naturopath I do not "diagnose" or "treat diseases", but rather recognize that the majority of sub-health conditions stem from lifestyle effects, and that the underlying cause of what we call "disease" (or, "dis-ease") is improper diet, unhealthy habits, and environmental factors which cause biological imbalances leading to a weakening of the bodies' natural defenses and subsequent breakdown in health.

Dr. Tina is a traditional naturopath and nutritionist at Vibrant Living Wellness Center

Naturopathy focuses on prevention; it advocates a wellness-oriented diet and lifestyle. Whole food or herbal supplements that support the body may be used until the body is back to operating correctly on its own. Naturopathy is often effective in dealing with chronic illnesses, such as arthritis or eczema, because these conditions improve when diet, lifestyle, and nutrient deficiencies are addressed. Many clients are able to reverse diseases such as hypertension and type II diabetes through diet and lifestyle changes. Additionally, naturopathy is a great choice for non-emergency acute illnesses, such as colds and flus, because it employs nutritional and lifestyle changes that support the body's immune system.

Traditionally, naturopathy was just a system of helping people return to health or learn to maintain health by teaching them to eat healthy foods, exercise regularly and use herbs and water therapy for restoring health. Today's traditional naturopaths do just that. The traditional naturopath does not diagnose or treat illness but rather is a person's guide to information about safe, healthy ways to change a lifestyle to bring about better health. A naturopath empowers you to take charge of your life and health and to gain back the confidence to make decisions about your health and your life.

HOW TO TELL IF YOU HAVE PREDIABETES

Dear Savvy Senior:

My 62-year-old sister was recently diagnosed with type 2 diabetes and was surprised when the doctor told her that she's probably had it or prediabetes for many years. My question is what determines prediabetes and how can you know if you have it? Surprised Senior

Dear Surprised:

Underlying today's growing epidemic of type 2 diabetes is a much larger epidemic called prediabetes, which is when the blood sugar levels are higher than normal but not high enough to be called

The National Institutes of Health estimates that as many as 79 million Americans today have prediabetes. Left untreated, it almost always turns into type 2 diabetes within 10 years. And, if you have prediabetes, the long-term damage it can cause - especially to your heart and circulatory system - may already be starting.

But the good news is that prediabetes doesn't mean that you're destined for full-blown diabetes. Prediabetes can actually be reversed, and diabetes prevented, by making some simple lifestyle changes like losing weight, exercising, eating a healthy diet and cutting back on carbohydrates. Or, if you need more help, oral medications may also be an option.

Get Checked?

Because prediabetes typically causes no outward symptoms, most people that have it don't realize it. The only way to know for sure is to get a blood test.

Everyone age 45 years or older should consider getting tested for prediabetes, especially if you are overweight with a body mass index (BMI) above 25. See cdc.gov/bmi to calculate your BMI.

If you are younger than 45 but are overweight, or have high blood pressure, a family history of diabetes, or belong to an ethnic group (Latino, Asian, African or Native American) at high risk for diabetes, you too should get checked.

To help you determine your risk of diabetes, the American Diabetes Association has a quick, online quiz you can take for free at diabetes.org/are-you-at-risk.

Diabetes Tests

There are several tests your doctor can give you to determine whether you have prediabetes like the "fasting blood glucose test "or the "oral glucose tolerance test," that each require an eight-hour fast before you take it. And the "hemoglobin A1C test," that can be taken any time regardless of when you

If you're reluctant to visit your doctor to get tested, an alternative is to test yourself. To do that, you'll need to purchase an A1C home test kit that measures your average blood glucose over the past two

The ReliOn A1c Test sold at Walmart (or walmart.com) for $9 is a popular option. With this test kit, you provide a small blood sample (about a drop), and send it to the lab in a postage-paid return mailer for analysis. The results are usually sent back within a week.

A1C tests measure the percentage of glucose in the bloodstream. A reading of 5.7 to 6.4 percent is considered prediabetes, while 6.5 percent or greater is diabetes.

If you find that you are prediabetic or diabetic, you need to see your doctor to develop a plan to get

KATIE Tse.....This and That THE COLONOSCOPY PILL --YOU READ

A year ago I wrote about an epiphany I had after listening to yet another horror story of someone's colonoscopy gone amuck. I brought you... the colonoscopy pill! Instead of snaking a probe down the body, contrary to its natural design, why not swallow a probe to scope out the digestive tract as part of normal digestion? I envisioned a pill with a camera that could be ingested, "collected," and analyzed resulting in the full picture of one's colon in glorious Technicolor! I thought for sure that I was the first person to come up with this idea.

I was both glad and surprised when I read that "Given Imagining" has already designed these small wonders, and they've been used in the U.S. since 2001. More recently, The Daily Mail published an article stating "Colonoscopies to be replaced by a camera that comes in a PILL as FDA green lights revolutionary treatment!" My happiness over this non-invasive option outweighed my disappointment upon realizing that I wasn't the first to think of it.

IT HERE FIRST!

However, there are still a host of painful medical procedures that need revision. The mammogram comes to mind. The screenings are routinely ordered when women turn 40. However, mammograms aren't all that they're cracked up to be. The imaging isn't very clear, and every time you get squeezed you're being exposed to radiation (which increases your risk of developing cancer, ironically). And if you've survived breast cancer, you can expect to be prescribed a few extra mammograms every year just for good measure.

It was during a conversation my Mom and I were having regarding iPads and smart phones that she came up with the idea of the mammogram app. (She and I know as much about technology as we do about brain surgery --diddly squat!) I mentioned that one of my husband's friend's phone could check his pulse, temperature, and blood pressure (okay, maybe not all that, but definitely his pulse!). "Why don't they have phones that do

Although I've never undergone a mammogram, this alternative sounded great to me! Just gel up your mobile device and slowly massage it over the area of concern. Heck, maybe the phone could even heat up to make the process less uncomfortable. If the app detected anything amiss, a buzzer could sound off like a smoke alarm warning you of a possible foreign body.

Not to stop short at the detection level, my Mom further imagined that a radar beam could project from the phone and zap any tumor using nano-technology. At this point we really didn't know what we were talking about, but it still sounded better than being subjected to a scope, vise grip, or scalpel.

While I doubt that our medical brainchild will soon be coming to an app store near you, you must agree it has potential! I applaud the creators of the colonoscopy pill and encourage all you techie geniuses to hurry up and invent the mobile mammogram and the nano lumpectomy. If a phone can read your heart rate at the press of a finger, there's no reason it can't find a lump in your soft tissue.

Remember, you read it here first!

FYI: The Truth About Cataracts and Cataract Surgery-Final Installment

Myth: Cataracts always require surgery. Fact: The decision to have a cataract taken out is based on whether it's limiting your vision and your quality of life. For people in certain occupations, such an architect or a truck driver, even a little loss of vision interferes with what they do on a daily basis, while other people may be happy to wait because they're seeing all they need to.

Myth: It takes weeks to recover from cataract surgery. Fact: Cataract surgery is much easier than it used to be. A lot of people have 20/20 vision the very next day, though some people take up to a week to see well out of the affected eye. It depends on how much power is used to break up the lens. Since most doctors don't use sutures anymore, there aren't any physical limitations. You will be cautioned not to rub or press your eyes immediately after surgery, however.

Myth: Cataracts are inevitable. Fact: Not necessarily. By age 80, more than half of all Americans either have a cataract or have had cataract surgery, according to the National Eye Institute. There is clearly a genetic component. There are patients ages 80 or 90 who will never need cataract surgery. Myth: There's nothing you can do to slow the development of cataracts. Fact: Cataracts are a natural part of aging; however, you can protect your eyes by always donning sunglasses when you're out in the sun — summer or winter. Chronic ultraviolet radiation exposure can help cataracts grow faster.

MIND YOUR BUSINESS

Establishing and maintaining a successful business begins and ends with an entrepreneur's state of mind. "The Little Engine That Could" is one of the most famous children's stories, extolling the benefits of what is possible when someone simply dares to believe they can accomplish something that may seem out of reach.

Everyone who has any inkling of entrepreneurial aspiration must seize the moment at some point and take action in order to create the product or business they envision. The mind is defined as the part of a person that can think, reason, feel and remember. It is commonly thought of as the activity of the brain, which is an appropriate springboard to emphasize that activity or action aligned with aspiration is what distinguishes doers from mere dreamers.

Mind your business is used here as an expression to emphasize the importance of how entrepreneurs can use their own thought process to forge ahead toward achieving goals. The following mnemonic can be used as a guide to move forward and keep going in the direction of your business interests.

Make Up Your Mind

The first step is to get clarity about your vision, your dream to start a business. Do you want to earn extra income or build your idea into your primary livelihood? Do you want a small, easy-to-manage business or are you thinking of building a thriving enterprise? Either one will need to generate revenue and be profitable. It is important to determine the income goal as a certain amount per month, year or other timeframe. Finally, it is imperative to commit to a date by which you expect certain goals to be attained.

Invest Your Time & Resources

Everyone on the planet is granted with 24 hours in a day, and those who have relished in the success of building a profitable understand that time is a commodity more valuable than money. Both should be used wisely, but unlike money, time wasted can never be recaptured. Take time to layout the gameplan, the roadmap as you understand it, to reach your goal.

Never Give Up

Follow the example of The Little Engine That Could and press forward, even when going uphill makes it a little more difficult.

Distinguish Yourself With Discipline

Executing your plan will build the bridge between your goal and your vision. Consistency fosters discipline, which results in a mastery of knowledge and skills that fuels the type of confidence that can help an entrepreneur to keep going when times get challenging.

Move beyond thinking about starting a business, or if you're already in business, move beyond simply thinking about what you can do to expand and move to the next phase you envision. Make up our mind to have the level of success you desire as a business owner and go for it.

"The mind is everything. What you think you become." - Buddha

FIVE BEST PRACTICES FOR EMAIL MARKETING

It can be difficult to decide which marketing strategies and channels give you the most return. Email marketing can give you great results if you implement best practices. Here are five tips:

1. Create great subject lines. Keep them short and to the point. Don't try to trick them to open the email, tell them what's in the email. A subject line of five to eight words is plenty. Make your words count. The first two words of your subject line will determine if they will read the next few words of the subject, which can help persuade them to open the email to get to the good stuff. Good words to use are "How to," "5 Tips," "Update on," "You're invited." Every day, take a look at the emails you receive and write down the subject lines that were successful in getting you to open the emails. Make a list.

2. Schedule your emails when your audience is most likely to be active. To determine when that may be, you may want to try an "A" "B" test to help find your sweet spot. With Constant Contact you can segment your list. This means you can send the same email to a portion of your list one day and then to the remaining portion on another day. Review your results and you will begin to see which days and times have better open rates and click through rates.

which days and times have better open rates and click through rates.

3. Use email marketing with social media to measure results. Results in social media can be hard to measure. Email marketing and Constant Contact's Social Campaign tool can help. For example, create a marketing campaign in Facebook to build "Likes" while at the same time enticing them to sign up for your email marketing list. If they give your Page a "Like" and provide their email address they will be entered in the contest, or get access to an exclusive coupon or document. A simple way to track the action is to write down how many followers you have on social media before your campaign and compare to how many you have gained once the promo ends.

4. Build on what you've done and learn what works and what doesn't. Constant Contact's reporting is exciting. You can see who opened your email, what links they clicked on, if they shared the email and if any emails bounced. Over time this information will help you determine when to send, what to send and who to send it too. You'll learn what information is important to your audience and what tends to get the most action.

5. Make sure there is something in it for your audience. Talk their language and ask yourself is this valuable for my audience? That single question will help you create content that matters. Also, it is important to use your custom welcome email message strategically. Your welcome could offer an immediate offer or reward something they will only get if they join your list. Once you give them a good reason to sign up, you need to deliver.

RICH Johnson VICE PRESIDENT RICHARD JOHNSON

What's your name? How many Vice Presidents of these here United States have there been with your last name? Ask me. Go ahead, ask me. How many Johnson's have been Vice President?

Well, I'll tell you. There have been three of them. And two of them became Presidents because of assassinations. Lyndon Baines Johnson who succeeded John Kennedy and Andrew Johnson who succeeded Abraham Lincoln. The only Vice President named Johnson to not have become President was...you guessed it, Richard Johnson. Richard Mentor Johnson to be exact.

Richard Mentor Johnson, a Kentuckian, wasn't even elected by the American people to the job. He was the only vice president elected by the United States Senate under the 12th Amendment. A little side note on my namesake. He had an interracial relationship with a slave named Julia Chinn. This was not uncommon amongst upper class leaders. Vice President Johnson was different in that he openly treated Ms. Chinn as his common-law wife. And he gave their two daughters his surname. This did not bode well for his political career. But it makes me like him more.

In 1836 Mr. Johnson was the Democratic nominee for VP with Martin Van Buren. Van Buren won and Johnson didn't, by the popular vote anyway. The fine electoral college delegation from Virginia refused to endorse Mr. Johnson, even though his state voted for him. So, hence the Senate stepped in.

Vice President Johnson proved such a liability to the Democrats during that election that they refused to renominate him in the election of 1840. Van Buren campaigned without a running mate. And lost to William Henry Harrison. Richard Johnson finally got back into the Kentucky State Legislature in 1850 but died two weeks after taking office. By the way, President John Tyler had no Vice President. Neither did Millard Fillmore (both Tyler and Fillmore were Vice Presidents so maybe they knew the positions were unnecessary).

Other Vice Presidents you probably never heard of: George Clinton (served with both Jefferson and Madison). George Dallas, William King, John Breckinridge. Hannibel Hamlin was Honest Abe's first VP. Schuyler Colfax and Henry Wilson worked under Ulysses S. Grant. William Wheeler, Thomas Hendricks, Levi Morton, Adlai Stevenson. Garret A. Hobart was the last Vice President of the 19th Century.

Here is an interesting bit of trivia. The 22nd Amendment limited the President to not being elected to more than two terms. There is no similar limitation on Vice Presidents. The question is: "Could a two-term president run as a Vice Presidential candidate?" If so, what would happen if the sitting President was killed or incapacitated? Could the termed out President, now Vice President, become the President again?

Wanna know where the Vice President lives? The Naval Observatory, aka the Admiral's House. They play "Hail to the Chief" when the President makes an appearance. What about the Vice President? A tune called "Hail Columbia".

Which two vice presidents were accused of accepting bribes while in office? Schuyler Colfax (U.S. Grant) and Spiro Agnew. Have any Vice Presidents resigned from office? Yes, John C. Calhoun (John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson). He was later elected to the Senate from South Carolina. And good, old, Spiro Agnew resigned in 1973.

So, now you know more about Vice Presidents than you may have ever wanted to know.

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed

by Luther Tsinoglou

A CHORE NEXT DOOR

While not a very common problem, if you've got it, it can have a terrible impact on your listing: The Messy Neighbor. If you live next door to a "neglected" property, you might lose up to 20% of your home's market value, particularly with buyers looking for any excuse to reduce their offer.

It's technically not your problem, but ask not for whom the bell tolls. It's well worth your time and effort to resolve this situation amicably. Always be respectful, and don't let your emotions get the best of you

Unless you believe your neighbor is "unhinged," you should begin with a visit to their home and a positive attitude - no name-calling or finger-pointing. Don't grab everyone on the block and gang up on your neighbor - you'll get better results if you go alone or with one other person.

If you find your messy neighbor is unwilling to take care of their maintenance, it may still be in your best interest to do the work yourself or with the help of other neighbors. No, it's not fair, but if you want a fair sales price, this may be your only option.

As a last resort, you could file a complaint with your property owners association or city government. You could be referred to a mediator who will help settle your disagreement cordially.

THE WORLD AROUND US LOOKING With Bob Eklund

NASA'S NEXT GENERATION SPACE TELESCOPE IS COMING TOGETHER

An infrared camera, which will form the heart of NASA's James Webb Space Telescope (JWST), has joined three other instruments at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center to be mounted in the nascent telescope structure.

The Near Infrared Camera (NIRCam) will function as the central imaging component of JWST, which will replace the Hubble Space Telescope toward the end of this decade. Designated one of the space agency's three highest mission priorities, the Webb telescope is a joint project of NASA, the European Space Agency and the Canadian Space Agency.

As the space telescope's prime camera, NIRCam will make JWST the most powerful space telescope ever built, enabling it to peer deeper into space and further back in time than any other instrument before. With its 6.5-meter (21-foot) mirror, JWST will allow observation of the most distant objects in the universe.

NIRCam was designed, built, and tested by a UA/Lockheed Martin team at the company's Advanced Technology Center in Palo Alto, Calif., under the leadership of Principal Investigator Marcia Rieke. She is a Regents' Professor at the UA Department of Astronomy/Steward Observatory. Lockheed Martin is responsible for the optical, mechanical, structural, thermal and electronic precision mechanisms and the control software of NIRCam, while its advanced infrared detector arrays come from Teledyne Imaging Systems.

"The instrument operates out to wavelengths about ten times that of visible light, letting it search for the first galaxies. It is the cosmic redshift that has moved the outputs of these 'first light' sources into the infrared where NIRCam operates. We will survey selected regions on the sky to find candidates; the other instruments on JWST can then probe these objects in detail to test if they really are that these objects in detail to test if they really are that young," Marcia Rieke explained. "The instrument can also peer through the clouds of gas and dust that hide the first stages when stars and planets are born and will provide insights to how planetary systems around distant stars form and evolve."

NIRCam's delivery to Goddard Space Flight Center marks the first time all of James Webb's instruments have come together. "We are excited that NIRCam is about to be integrated with the Webb Telescope hardware," said Jeff Vanden Beukel, Lockheed Martin NIRCam program director. "Next, it and the other instruments will be tested to prove their ability to function as a unit."

NASA's James Webb Space Telescope will be the most powerful space telescope ever built, capable of observing the most distant objects in the universe, providing images of the first galaxies formed, and observing unexplored planets around distant stars. A joint project of NASA, the European Space Agency (ESA) and the Canadian Space Agency (CSA), Webb is the successor to the agency's Hubble Space Telescope.

All 18 of Webb's primary mirror segments are now housed in the Goddard clean room. Its 1.3 million cubic feet of dust-free space make the clean room one of the world's largest. All four of Webb's science instruments are within feet of the mirrors.

The Webb telescope will be fully assembled by 2016 and then moved to NASA's Johnson Space Center for additional testing prior to its launch, planned for 2018. Upon launch, it will be operated as an observatory open by competitive proposal to astronomers worldwide.

STUART Tolchin......On LIFE SAFETY, ADAPTATION AND COMMUNICATION

Well this Sunday started out as a day in which I was feeling pretty safe and secure. As we all know it was the great American Holiday celebrated by almost everyone. It was Super-Bowl Sunday, the day we all gather together to view the championship game between the winner of he National Football League Champion, the Seattle Seahawks versus the American Football League Champion, the Denver Broncos. Perhaps it should be called Super-Bowl Half-time Sunday because, as I understand it, more people watched the half-time activities than actually watch the game. This may be a true sign of our

On this particular Sunday my extended family, more or less, gathered together at my daughter's home. The family consisted that day of my wife, my son, my daughter, my friend John, my daughter's boyfriend and me. The boyfriend had done a wonderful job of cooking up some chili and of creating a roaring fire in the fireplace. The game began with a thrilling rendition of the Star Spangled Banner sung by Opera Singer, Renee Fleming. Everyone seemed to enjoy the song, which allowed me to relax a bit because sometimes I wonder if there is any kind of entertainment that can properly interest all of the people in this diverse group. My wife and I have been together for about twenty years and this was almost the first time that I can recall her sitting together with a group for the purpose of watching a football game. My daughter, sick of being forced to watch sports by me as a child, has forbidden my son and I to ever watch sports on her television. Needless to say, my daughter's and wife's attitudes towards football is very different from the attitude of my friend John, my son and I. I really liked the feeling of watching the game together because, for a change, I felt competent to answer any questions my wife and daughter might have about something. is contrary to my usual feeling these days of being the one who must ask the questions about the proper usage of the new technological devices that keep arriving and continue to baffle me. It's not only technology that baffles me. It's entertainment that is viewed in mysterious places other than the good old TV that one just turned on and watched. My wife and daughter and my daughter's boyfriend are forever talking about series that they view on their lap tops in mysterious ways. My communicate.

daughter's boyfriend is a screenwriter who specializes in science fiction and graphic novels and goes all over the country to speak at conventions and is a part of a whole world that I completely do not understand.

For those few of you who are as unaware as I am, graphic novels are kinds of comic books that deal with all kinds of subjects and are something like video games in book form, I think. I have never played video games either. After all, I am now in my seventieth year - which may not be sufficient excuse for my continued ignorance.

Anyhow, the game started and on the very first play the Bronco center and quarterback failed to communicate and the ball was snapped over the quarterback's shoulder when the quarterback was not paying attention. This resulted in a "Safety". My wife reasonably asked what a safety is and I confidently explained, happy to be an expert. Together my wife and daughter then asked, "Why is it called a "safety"? "It doesn't look very safe". Alas, my feeling of expertise vanished. I had no idea of why a safety is called a safety and I still don't know. My wife wondered why the players couldn't communicate even though it was noisy. Didn't they know it was going to be noisy? I couldn't answer. Already on the first play I was revealed to be something less than an

Perhaps you don't understand my feeling. Up until very recently I always had the feeling that I was the caretaker making the world "safe" for my family. Abruptly this all seems to have changed as my family now seems to be more concerned with taking care of me. I don't like it. I want to remain young, vital, healthy, and "safe". I want to have confidence in myself and my country. I want to believe that whatever catastrophe next appears on the horizon, be it drought, water shortage, or global conflict, my country and I will be informed and aware enough to meet the challenges even if they are unexpected.

Let's hope a lesson can be learned from the defeated Broncos and from me. No matter how much we think we know, we don't know enough to be completely prepared for the unexpected. We must continue to learn and to adapt. No matter what we think we have already achieved, it will not help the world to cope with the emergencies of tomorrow unless we learn to view ourselves realistically, and to effectively at least it's not snowing!

OUT TO PASTOR

out an award for grouchiness and downright cantankerousness, I am sure I would take top honors. Of course, according to the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage, there is no honor in being grouchy or cantankerous nor is there room for it in our humble abode.

For the past week I have been grouchy and cantankerous and any other adjective you might want to throw into that pot of naughtiness. By the time the week ended that pot was boiling hot and about

It is always beneficial to look back over an incident and figure out where you made your mistake. I often don't do it, but in this case, the mistake I made was so obvious it could not be overlooked.

Most faults can be remedied if you know what to do about it. Then, there are those mistakes that no matter what you do, it still ends up being a mistake. My mistake was I exhibited my downright grouchiness and cantankerous spirit in front of

I know the marriage manual says there should be no secrets between husband and wife. Down through the years I have tried to maintain that part of the marital relationship, and I have done a good job thus far. What the manual does not say is, there are special times when a husband should not speak his mind in front of his wife. My wife constantly reminds me that God gave men, two ears and one mouth for a particular purpose, open our ears and shut our mouth.

I do not think I got that far in the instructions, but I will take my wife's word on that one, you can be sure.

In my defense, however, this past week I was colder than I have ever been in all my life, at least that I can remember. Now, it is one thing to be cold, but quite a different thing to tell somebody, especially your wife, that you are cold.

I made that mistake once and told my wife I was cold. She felt my forehead, got out my bathrobe, fussed over me all evening and made me hot tea with honey to drink. I wanted to tell her that I was cold; I did not have a cold.

It was so cold the little gray cells were shivering so much they were not functioning 100%. According to some people's opinion, it is a rare occasion when they do function 100%.

As I remember it, I was looking out our back patio window, watching it drizzle and shivering in the cold. If I need any defense on my side, I did not realize that in the same room was the Gracious Mistress

If somebody gave of the Parsonage.

Enveloped in this aroma of sheer ignorance, I said out loud something to the effect, "I hate this cold weather!" Following that pointed observation, as I now reflect, I also growled most viciously.

It was then I heard a noise explode behind me.

"Well, at least it is not snowing! You should be grateful for that."

I swung around as quickly as possible, and there standing in all her glory with both hands firmly planted on her hips was my wife staring in my direction. The tone of her voice and her demeanor revealed I was in for one of her infamous

All week long, we had been noticing some of our family up north experiencing some very severe snow conditions. Some even missed school for several days because of the snow drifting. One family member way up north was without electricity for nearly a week. In some of these areas, the temperature has been in the minus degree for at least a week.

"Don't you know how lucky you are to live in a place where it doesn't snow and the temperature doesn't get below zero? Instead of complaining, you should be grateful for what you really have. Think of members of our family up north suffering in that freezing weather! Would you like to change places with them right now?"

I have often said this and I am sure I will continue saying it until the day I die, when my wife is right she is right. No argument from me here.

Then she made a statement I am still mulling over. "Be thankful for what you don't have.'

I must say she had a great point there. Sometimes it is quite hard to be thankful for what you do not have when you are so caught up in the problems right in front of you.

Thinking about that, my grouchiness and cantankerousness began evaporating. I suppose they have their place, and I am ashamed to admit they are in my place more often than I should allow them.

In many ways, it is easy to be thankful for what you have in your hand at the time. The apostle Paul pointed this out in one of his letters. "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful" (Colossians 3:15).

For most of us, being thankful does not come natural. It is something we have to work at on a daily basis. It has to go a step

Be thankful for what you do not have and you will be all that more thankful for what you do have.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"You know the from your script." - Jon Stewart on "The Daily Show"

There seemed to be reliance by one side on the old tried-and-true playbook on Super Bowl Sunday, but the broadcast on Fox showed those plays had run out of

Prior to the Seahawks facing off against the Broncos, Bill O'Reilly came with the old Fox News playbook to face off against President

O'Reilly kicked off with the ACA. Was the president aware there was going to be such a problem with the October 1 roll-out?

The president responded, "I don't think anybody anticipated the degree of problems you had with healthcare.gov; the good news is that right away we decided how we were going to fix it, it got fixed, within a monthand-a-half it was up and running, now it's working the way it's supposed to and we've signed up 3 million people."

That play went nowhere, so then the question of why the president hadn't fired ĤHS Sec. Kathleen Sebelius.

The president stuck to his own game plan. "We've got 3 million people signed up ... we've got over 6 million people signed up for Medicaid, we've got 3 million young people under the age of 26 who've signed up on their parents' plans, so what we're constantly figuring out is how do we continue to improve it, how do we make sure that folks who don't have health insurance can get health insurance and those who are underinsured can get better health insurance."

As for Sebelius, "I promise you that we hold everybody up and down the line accountable, but when we're mid-stream, Bill, we want to make sure that our main focus is, how do we make this thing work so that people are able to sign up? And that's what we've done."

O'Reilly attempted to catch the defense offguard with an abrupt switch to Libya. The question was, on the day our Ambassador and three other Americans were killed in Benghazi, was the president told "it was a terrorist attack"? Did they "use the word 'terror'?

The president explained, "Understand, by definition, Bill, when somebody's attacking our compound, that's an act of terror which is how I characterized it the day after it happened . . . People understood at the time something very dangerous was happening, that we were focused on doing everything we can to protect them . . . I've gone through this and we've had multiple hearings on it . . . we've got to make sure that we've implemented not only all the reforms that were recommended by the independent agency, but we also have to make sure that we understand, our folks are out there in a hazardous, dangerous situation, and . . .

O'Reilly interrupted, "I think everybody understands that, Mr. President."

And then President Obama went on offense: "Well, actually, not everybody does, president doesn't work for because what ends up happening is we end Fox, right? He can deviate up creating a political agenda on something Democrats and Republicans should be unified in trying to figure out how we're going to protect people . . ."

> O'Reilly tried to force a fumble: "Your detractors believe you did not tell the world it was a terror attack because your campaign didn't want that out. That's what they believe."

> But the president maintained control: "And they believe it because folks like you are telling them that - and what I'm saying is, that's inaccurate. We revealed to the American people exactly what we understood at the time. The notion that we would hide the ball for political purposes when a week later we all said in fact there was a terrorist attack taking place; the day after I said it was an act of terror, that wouldn't be a very good cover-up"

> O'Reilly went deeper into the Fox playbook: "I've got to the IRS thing ... Douglas Shulman, former IRS chief, he was cleared into the White House 157 times . . .

> The president explained, "Mr. Shulman, as head of the IRS, is constantly coming in because at the time we were trying to set up Healthcare.gov ... and the IRS is involved in making sure that that works as part of the overall healthcare team ... Number two, we've also got the IRS involved when it comes to some of the financial reforms to make sure we don't have taxpayer-funded bailouts in > O'Reilly tried the same play that went nowhere before: "... what some people are saying is that the IRS was used at a local level in Cincinnati, maybe other places ...

"Absolutely wrong." said the president. O'Reilly persisted: "How do you know that, because we still don't know what happened?' "Bill, we do. That's not what happened. Folks have, again, had multiple hearings on this. I mean, these kinds of things keep on surfacing, in part because you and your TV station will promote them ... There were other batted-down attempts by O'Reilly:

"72% of the babies in the African-American community are born out of wedlock now. Why isn't there a campaign by you and the first lady to address that problem very explicitly?"

"Actually, Bill, we address it explicitly all the time ... whether it's getting publicity or not is a whole different question."

"Alright - Keystone pipeline ... 42,000 jobs

"Well, first of all, it's not 42,000. That's not correct. It's a couple thousand to build the pipeline ..."

Jon Stewart marveled that whenever President Obama addresses the economy, the environment, world conflict, etc., Fox News accuses him of distracting attention from the "real" issues of the botched "Obamacare" roll-out, Benghazi or the IRS "scandal".

If Republicans are to have any relevance in the months leading to November, they'd better come up with a different playbook.

FEAR AND LOATHING IN GREG Welborn THE HEARTLAND

I didn't comment on the State of The politically favored, set Union Speech last week because there really wasn't much to it. I am joined in that opinion by the vast majority of Americans In the above referenced who collectively awarded it the lowest viewership of any such speech over the last 10+ years. It's easy to attribute that to simple boredom, but there seems to be more here. Americans aren't looking away because their bored; they're looking away because they're scared.

The fear in the heartland is almost palpable. Politicians inside the beltway or the state capitals don't get it. They seem shocked to hear that Americans of all political persuasions have lost trust and fear that the country is heading in the wrong direction. This isn't just a conservative thing either. When the Edward Snowden, the current poster child for fearful lefties, strikes out at the abuses he fears from the N.S.A. but can't see the abject contradiction in seeking safety in a Russia ruled by a former member of the K.G.B., then you know fear of government has a home on both the left and the right. That just makes those in the middle even more nervous.

I'm writing to my liberal and conservative friends, asking them to take a look at what America is becoming and to band together in the commonalities of their legitimate fears. The great beauty of America has always been that our form of government prevents either side from truly imposing their will upon the other. Whoever was in the majority has always faced restrictions on what they could do. Government power was held at bay by a system of checks and balances. Things are changing, though. Despite the media's claims that partisanship prevents things from getting done, let's look at what actually has been done in recent years.

The E.P.A. justifiably claims they have the power to imprison a man for cleaning up his yard because it was situated in what is considered a wetland. These aren't the woods we're talking about; this is a man's backvard.

The federal government can now force private citizens to enter into a private contract with a business of the government's choosing.

At the state level, government can legally take your property in order to give it to a business which promises to use the property for something better. Of course, deciding what's "better" is something reserved to government bureaucrats.

The federal government can interfere in credit negotiations to force one set of creditors to take losses so another, more credit negotiations, the government threatened one attorney with personal ruin for defending his client's rights too aggressively.

The government claims the right to force mainstream religious groups (Catholic nuns) to abandon one of their most basic beliefs or face ruinous fines.

The I.R.S. and F.B.I. are corrupted to the point of becoming arms of political censorship and coercion.

A school board forced students to attend Cinco De Mayo celebrations while preventing them from holding an Honor America celebration.

And lastly, from that State of The Union Address nobody watched, the President of The United States told us he'll simply use executive action to do what he wants if Congress tries to interfere.

Whether on the left or right, each of us must understand the dangers of concentrating power in the hands of politicians. Our founders knew it firsthand. Perhaps we've grown too complacent over the centuries. The power that is given to presidents, governors and legislatures can be used to impose liberal edicts, but I would warn my friends on the left that those same powers can later be used to impose conservative edicts. When one group's rights are trampled, the other groups' rights soon will be.

Americans across the board say they don't like or trust politicians, but they continue to give those same politicians more power. Lots of Americans feel – no, fear – we're at the tipping point. Too many freedoms are being lost, and respect for government is diminishing. Here, a dangerous cycle can build. As respect for government diminishes, lawlessness will increase. In turn more laws and restrictions will be written, further undermining respect, thus accelerating the cycle.

Both Liberals and Conservatives should be able to agree on the mutual benefit of limited government. Beyond the specific merits of any given political issue, lies a deeper, greater truth. No government should have so much power that the will of a temporary majority can be imposed on a minority. Affective government requires compromise. The only time politicians are unanimous is when they're taking power from the people.

Something to Sing About is playing Saturday night at 7 p.m. When a popular New York band leader heads to Hollywood to find more fame, he discovers that Hollywood can be a very tough place to succeed in. This is a great movie to spend an hour and a half on. James Cagney is at his best, displaying his talent as a comedic actor. He plays Terry Rooney, a successful New York band leader that gets invited to Hollywood to make a movie. He doesn't fit in with the 'Hollywood' types, but they make the movie with him anyway. During production they all make fun of him behind his back, and they ridicule his lack of acting talent. During the final scene, two characters are supposed to approach him, and one of them is supposed to fake a punch to the chin. They practice the fake punch, but the actors decide that they will really punch him when the cameras roll. When they hit him, and knock him on his ass, he gets up and really fights both men in a long scene and manages to beat them both up. After filming is over, he calls his fiance in New York and has her meet him in San Francisco, and they get married and jump on a tramp steamer to spend time in South America and

But while they are having fun in South America, his movie is a smash hit, and he is an overnight star. When he returns and discovers that he is famous, he signs a contract for seven years and a bundle of money, except that he must be unmarried, since he has become the heart-throb of every young girl. So his wife pretends to be his secretary, and his publicity guy spreads rumors that he is in love with the blonde actress that stars opposite him in his movies. The Hollywood types cause his marriage to fall apart, and his wife goes back to New York to sing with the band. Will movie star Terry Rooney stay in Hollywood as a star, or go back to New York to be with his wife? Guess I don't need to tell you, but even though you can predict the ending, you will enjoy the trip.
