PRESIDENT OBAMA DESIGNATES SAN GABRIEL MOUNTAINS NATIONAL MONUMENT

"We are blessed to have the most beautiful landscapes in the world. We have a responsibility to be good stewards of them for future generations.

O n Friday in Frank Bonelli Park in San Dimas, Cobgresswoman Judy Chu (CA-27) was praised by President Barack Obama as he declared more than 346,000 acres of national forest land there the nation's newest national monument. The President said in his remarks, "It's not just the natural beauty of the San Gabriels that makes it invaluable. Within these hills lies millennia of history, including the ancient rock art of Native peoples -- the first Americans. And just as this region teaches us about our past, it has always offered us a window into the future. It was here at the Mount Wilson Observatory that Edwin P. Hubble showed the universe to be ever-expanding, and it's where astronomers still explore the mysteries of space. I can think of no better way to honor our past and protect our future than by preserving the San Gabriel

The effort to protect the San Gabriel Mountains started eleven and a half years ago with the introduction of a bill by then-Representative Hilda Solis. The result was a 10-year study by the National Park Service, which included 66 stakeholder meetings, and 16,800 public comments, most overwhelmingly in support of more resources for the San Gabriel Mountains and Rivers.

After the release of the study, Chu drafted a bill on the San Gabriel Mountains and Rivers, conducted over 40 stakeholder meetings, earned the support of the San Gabriel Council of Governments and the San Gabriel Valley Water Association.

Opponents Not Happy

Not all elected officials are in favor of the designation. Two days prior to the President's visit, LA County Supervisor Michael Antonovich released the results of a report he requested from the LA County Department of Public Works and Fire that detailed the negative impact of the designation.

"This list of issues is alarming. We have been told repeatedly that this designation will have no impacts on County operations, yet our County departments immediately identified multiple areas of concern," said Supervisor Antonovich. "We now have more questions than answers, and unfortunately, we will be unable to definitely determine the potential impacts of a designation prior to the President's ill-advised Executive Order."

> The report identified areas of concern, including:

- Fire suppression
- Water resources Flood control facilities

Roads

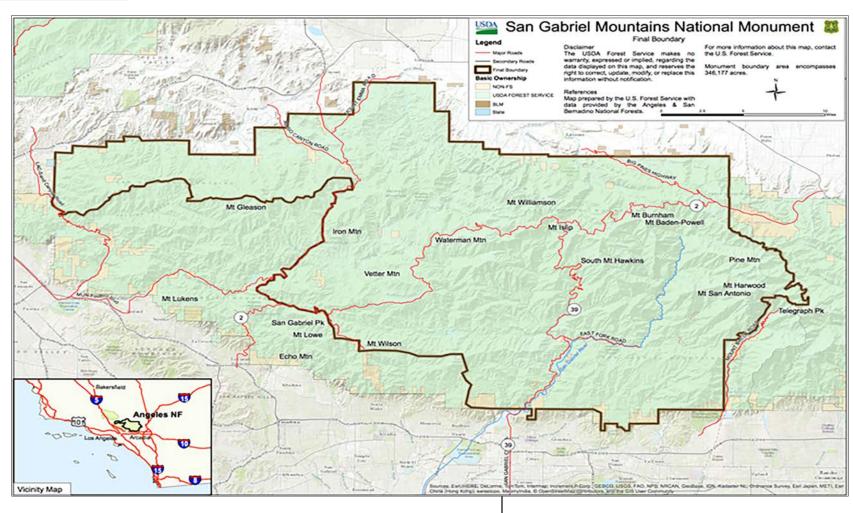

Congresswoman Chu and the President are bypassing stakeholders by rushing this Monument Designation," said Antonovich. However, The Antiquities Act of 1906 gives the President the authority to declare a national monument on federal lands, if they are historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific

ULYSSES "GRANT" BETHEL

October 8, 1923 - October 4, 2014

Longtime Sierra resident Ulysses Madre "Grant" Bethel passed away on Saturday, October 4th, just four days shy of his 91st birthday. He was born in Boston, MA and raised in Upstate New York, mostly in Lake Luzerne, NY.

Grant had an illustrious career as a biochemist in the field of hematology. From 1951 - 1969 He was hired by Dr. William Hinton in 1951, who was the first African American Director of the Wasserman Laboratory at Harvard. The lab was the official lab for the Massachusetts State Department of Public Health.

During that time, Grant also worked with Dr. E.J. Cohen, the father of blood fractionation. Dr. Cohen set up a protein foundation at Harvard Medical School and taught the process to medical students. It was the only place in the United States where one could learn the process at that time.

In 1969 Grant went to work with the American Red Cross in Boston where he helped set up the largest red blood cell frozen bank in the world. He retired as a biochemist from Hyland Laboratories in Glendale, CA in 1989.

After that, he worked as an independent consultant basically acting as a troubleshooter in the area of blood fractionation, teaching for instance, how much pH and alcohol concentration goes into any respective formula.

Shortly before retiring, Grant moved to Sierra Madre in 1987. He eventually took a part time job at Happy's and when not working, Grant could be seen around town sitting on the bench in front of Happy's Liquor Store or, when the 76 Gas Station was there, he could be seen sitting on a chair in the bay. He loved it here, loved looking at the beautiful mountains every day and he also loved talking with everyone in town. Local Businessman Ed Clare jokingly called him the Mayor of Sierra Madre.

Grant is survived by his wife, Marcia; daughter Denise (Denis) Stacke; granddaughter Sudip Peterson; Sisters Jeanne Mayo and Sylvia Henry and brother Robert Bethel.

A memorial service is planned for Friday, October 17, 2014 at Sierra Madre Congregational Church with a reception following at the church. Family requests no flowers. Instead, in lieu of flowers, please make a donation in Grant's name to Methodist Hospital, Arcadia, CA; An organization working for a cure for Alzheimers disease, or the American Red Cross Blood Program.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side by Deanne Davis

"All things bright and beautiful, All creatures great and small, All things wise and wonderful, The Lord God made them all."

Anglican hymn, first published in 1848 in Mrs. Cecil Alexander's Hymns for Little Children

It's time again for the annual Blessing of the Pets. This celebration of life is conducted in remembrance of St. Francis of Assisi's love for all creatures. Francis, whose feast day is October 4th, loved the larks flying about his hilltop town. He and his early brothers, staying in a small hovel, allowed themselves to be displaced by a donkey!

Walking around Ascension Episcopal Church on north Baldwin this week was peaceful and pleasant. The Gooden School Orchestra was practicing under the trees in the shady south garden. The windows of the classrooms at Ascension are papered with pumpkins of every size and artistic design imaginable. Don't you just love walking through schools, imagining all the small people behind the doors working away inside to master the intricacies of reading, writing and arithmetic.

The Rector of Ascension, Rev. Michael Bamberger, was all smiles as we chatted about the upcoming Blessing of the Animals, which is this Sunday, October 12th at 11:45 a.m. Rev. Bamberger has been the Rector at Ascension for 29 years. Many of you will remember him as a retired Battalion Chief of our fabulous Fire Department. Asking how long the pet blessing has been going on, he said it's been 40 years plus! This is one of the events Sierra Madre enjoys tremendously, as do the Rector and congregation of Ascension. The Episcopal Church embraces a theology of creation and that means ALL creatures. The church is the place where the bond of creation is celebrated.

Rev. Bamberger has blessed horses, goats, snakes, hamsters, dogs, cats and even a few racehorses have been chauffeured up from Santa Anita for a blessing. There is a disclaimer that goes with that blessing, though: horses won't run any faster after being blessed. There are therapy dogs and service dogs. Small children's stuffed animals have been blessed, precious pets who have passed on, people have brought pictures of a beloved pet; in general, this is a moment when relationships are blessed, not just animals. Blessing prayers are also directed to wise stewardship of endangered species and I'm sure our local deer and bears are mentioned.

There's excellent attendance for the church service on Blessing Day when pets are welcome to be part of the morning worship. For those creatures great and small who are a little too rambunctious for worship, there is pet care available in the upper field. There are folks who make a special trip to Ascension just once a year for Pet Blessing Day and all are welcome. The actual pet blessing takes place in the South Worship area, just below Laurel, where there are trees, shade and plenty of room for the whosoever will. This area is such a lovely spot, close to where the Gooden School children have their vegetable garden. In case you didn't know, the food grown in the garden goes to the Friends In Deed Food Pantry in Pasadena. Ascension is setting aside additional space for food production and they grew tomatoes this year for their neighbors on Laurel, available for the picking. Obviously, they had more success with their tomatoes than I did with mine. Maybe it's that blessing thing!

Each pet is sprinkled with holy water and blessed in the name of the Holy Trinity. When I asked if there have ever been any disagreements between any of the creatures, Rev. Bamberger said absolutely not! The only instance when there was a little difficulty was when a snake, who was being rather absent-mindedly minded, decided to see if he could visit a hamster, who was equally absentmindedly minded. No permanent damage was done, but that hamster is probably not going to be making friends with snakes any time soon!

One more walk this week: Up Grove above Grandview...super good creepy Halloween décor!

At 2:46 pm, Sierra Madre Police responded to the station lobby regarding a fraudulent scam. Officers were informed by the victim that earlier that day, she received a call from whom she believed to be the IRS. The caller informed the victim that she had an outstanding balance of $8,983 that was owed from the year of 2008, and if she failed to pay they would withdraw the money from her account and issue a warrant for her arrest. Believing it was in fact the IRS, the victim followed the instructions of the caller to go and buy 18 prepaid cards and load them each with money. The victim then contacted the man to provide him with the security code for each card, where the money was transferred electronically. The caller then informed the victim to pay more money to allow a settlement in the case rather than being civilly sued. After refusing to pay more, the victim contacted the IRS and they confirmed to her that she had been a victim of a scam. The estimated loss was valued at over $9,000. This case has been forwarded to the Detectives Bureau.

BRIEF SPOT ON BEARS Photo by Craig Bunch, Sierra Madre

The residents of Sierra Madre live near natural areas and routinely receive unexpected visits from all types of wildlife seeking food, water and/or shelter. With the cities proximity to the San Gabriel Mountains, wild animals occasionally enter the urban areas of the city and place residents and domesticated animals in danger. The wildlife includes coyotes, mountain lions, bobcats and bears. The presence of unwanted wildlife (or predators), in the back-yards of our residents often times evolves into an emergency and public safety is summonsed for help. With the rapid ecological changes in the weather, the police department has seen a huge increase in the number of calls for service in regards to wildlife.

From January through September 2014, the Sierra Madre Police Department has responded to 254 calls for service regarding assistance with the wildlife that co-exists with humans in our city. Bears sightings are at the forefront of these types of calls, with officers responding to 222 calls of the 254 calls for service this year so far. With the bear population almost doubling over the last 25 years, water and food shortages in the hills above our city, bears are visiting our community out of necessity.

Although the behavior of a wild bear may appear to be predictable, we cannot underestimate the potential for danger. When dealing with incidents involving wildlife, officers do so in the safest manner possible, placing the safety of human beings as its highest priority, while ensuring that all services and tools at its disposal are utilized to provide for the safety of the wild animal. In the event you, a family member, or neighbor believe you are in immediate danger from any type of wildlife, please do not hesitate to call the Sierra Madre Police Department at 626-355-1414 or 911 in an emergency. The Pasadena Humane Society and the California Department of Fish and Gameare mutual partners in the effort to control animal related incidents within the city.

Family to Represent G r a n d Marshal Zamperini

Tournament of Roses President Richard Chinen announced Monday that members of the Zamperini family will represent and honor Louis Zamperini in this year's Rose Parade. He died earlier this year after being named grand marshal of the 2015 Rose Parade.

"In honoring Louie as this year's grand marshal, he will be represented by his family in the parade," Chinen said. "He would have been so thrilled to share this Tournament season of any one of these 31 incredible young women."

Chinen made the statements during the announcement of this year's royal court finalists.

"One of the things that Louie told me when we first met was how he was looking forward to meeting the royal court."

Chinen said this year's parade centered on the selection of Zamperini as grade marshal.

"Our grand marshal, Louis Zamperini, was announced in May and was the embodiment of this year's theme, 'Inspiring Stories.' Chinen said. "He was a former Olympian, a WWII prisoner of war, and a lifelong encourager of grace and forgiveness."

Zamperini qualified to run in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin. During World War II he survived for 47 days, after his aircraft crashed into the Pacific Ocean and drifted into a Japanesecontrolled region where he was held and tortured for another two years.

In December, Universal Pictures will release the movie, "Unbroken," about Zamperini's life.

Chinen said Zamperini passed away July 2, at the age of 97.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show THE BOXTAILS REVIEW

Modern children's movies, for the most part, fall into two categories: the ones that a solely for children and that the adults despise, and those that can entertain both children and adults through clever, witty jokes. 'The Boxtrolls' is certainly the latter, yet has a darker, stranger side that 'Coraline' had.

When a young boy (Isaac Hempstead Wright) is kidnapped by the mysterious Boxtrolls, they immediately become the bane of the town of Chessebridge. While hunted like vermin, they raise the child. But, when Archibald Snatcher (Ben Kingsley), the town's head exterminator, makes a final attempt to kill of the Boxtrolls, they must decide whether to hide or fight.

'The Boxtrolls' is the perfect movie for the 21st century. Its visual will hook you and its charm will make you fall in love with the world and the characters that inhabit it. Couple that in with spoton political commentary, as well as a message of be yourself, no matter what you look like or people think, and you have yourself a perfect movie for anybody of any age.

DINING AT THE TRACK

Many of you have asked me why such an interest in horse racing? Was your dad a gambler? Quite the opposite he was happy with 3% interest at the bank, remember those days? It all started over 30 years ago when I was a driver for Jurgensen's Grocery stores, my territory was East Pasadena and Arcadia and on racing days I'd stop by the infield to make my $5 bets. My bets haven't increased that much but my love for the track continues on.

Oh my friends, times are a changing at 'The Great Race Place', I'm not talking about a fresh coat of paint,

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

I am talking gourmet food. Don't worry, the track still has the out of this world carving stations with those delicious trimmed sandwiches and yes you can have a hot dog, but new Food and Beverage Manager Todd DeSilva has told me that even if you aren't a horse racing fan you will enjoy the food faire at the track, Santa Anita aims to be a "foodie" destination. I stopped him and I said, "what no Clocker's Corner for breakfast"? Todd assured me there will be Clocker's Corner, The Front Runner, Turf Terrace everything you love at the track just better!!! I have always said that Executive Chef Eric Maranowski makes some of the best Crab Cakes in Southern California, they are only available in the Front Runner, I might have to change my seat locale, recently as last week I had the Cubano sandwich and it was as good as the famous Porto's Restaurant sandwich, now those are real winners!! One more thing I like about the Front Runner-Fossleman's Ice Cream the real deal imported all the way from Alhambra.

Todd DeSilva mentioned that racing is usually in the afternoons and that this means visitors are at the track right after lunch and right before dinner, he sees a need for finger foods, passing trays and Spanish Tapas, which makes sense to me. Now let's get real here, a lot of hard core gamblers are there to play the ponies and to have a stiff drink. The track is looking at drink recipes that visitors will consider "drinks for the table" -these drinks will offer track signature drinks like the "Macho Mary" in a larger format (pitchers) to add value to the tables experience, and everyone knows a horseplayer loves a value play! And with the Breeders Cup coming up quickly I can think of 100,000 taste testers.

If luxury is in your program, consider these two options.

The Chandelier Room is open on weekends, is full of elegance, yes they even let me in with my shiny shoes and tie on. This room offers signature trays passed and live entertainment. Now if you want to impress your guests or stay away from the crowds I suggest the Luxury suites, stay for a day or the whole season. They serve Seasonal food selections plus cocktail and bar service.

I make my home at the Turf Terrace for me it's the best vantage point and has plenty of energy with full service. The menu is a California Bistro theme including a Jidori Organic Chicken dish, which is out of this world, for you burger lovers a half pound angus cheeseburger, my buddy Carl D. always orders the Caesar Salad with Chicken, he must know he is at the track everyday!! Oh and for starters check out the Shrimp Cocktail, it's Mexican Gulf Shrimp served with a Bloody Mary cocktail sauce. I have been to many swanky restaurants and hotels and the prices for wine and cocktails is very reasonable.- seating has been expanded to accommodate large crowds.

Dining Program Turf Terrace California Bistro Theme. Salads, sandwiches, fish, chicken. Appetizers range from $7 to $17. Front Runner Fresh Seasonal Dishes Sandwiches $14 dollar range Entrees $24 to $29 range Club House Mezz Sushi and carved sandwiches $8 and

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

"SAVE EXCALIBUR" CAMPAIGN FAILS

Of late, I've been wondering if I am the only one who has a difficult time differentiating between what is really going on in the world, versus what the people who speak through the media would like us to think is happening in the world today.

Notwithstanding my lack of trust in what the talking heads have to say, recent over-the-top news coverage on the Ebola virus has caught my attention. They say it started in Africa and has begun to spread to the US and other parts of the world, leaving me somewhat concerned as to when it might arrive in my local community. I do hope they are wrong, and I'd rather err on the safe side, if at all possible.

The population of humans living on earth has grown exponentially over the past several decades, which makes me also wonder if disease might be a means by which God uses less-than-best circumstances to help keep our human numbers 'in check'. Since the 1995 release of "Outbreak", a feature film that I can't help thinking of every time I see news updates regarding the current Ebola epidemic, the human race has proliferated to unprecedented numbers. Please forgive me for admitting that in my opinion, if this disease is as threatening as we're told, perhaps it is meant to

One of the many recently released news casts related to Ebola was about a nurse from Spain who contracted the disease while working in Africa, and was presumed to have come into close contact with her dog, Excalibur soon after having been infected. Apparently, part of the protocol for treating an Ebola-infected patient is to identify all persons with whom they may have come into contact, and with whom they may have thereby inadvertently shared the disease. I guess "personal contact" in this case includes animals and humans, alike.

As it turns out, the Spanish nurse who contracted the Ebola virus admitted that she was in contact with her dog, Excalibur soon after she was infected. Considering the circumstances and without much thought or further research, the 'powers that be' in Spain decided Excalibur should be considered a potential carrier of the disease and for that reason he was euthanized, in spite of the efforts of numerous animal advocates who tried so hard to spare his life. The authorities could not confirm whether the dog was a threat, they just decided in short order that it simply wasn't worth the risk.

Please understand, I realize there are numerous unanswered questions regarding the Ebola virus and I am relatively confident that disease-control professionals around the globe are doing their best to prevent it from spreading. I just wish the Spanish authorities would have been willing to keep Excalibur alive if for nothing more than to observe his condition in a controlled setting. Instead, they put him to death before they even knew he was a threat to other beings. If they'd just taken the time to think it through thoroughly, we all may have learned something from his demise and the way I know dogs, Excalibur would have been happy to help. As it is, we'll learn nothing from his death, and he basically died in vain.

We humans are more than willing to utilize other animals strictly for the purpose of research and observation, at our will. Sadly enough, we even breed animals for that very purpose. Indeed, humans have no problem using other animals as a means to their end when it comes to research. But when it came to the life of a living dog, it apparently never crossed their minds that they could benefit from letting him live so we could learn. I am dumbfounded. I don't claim to be an intelligent person, nor do I go about judging others for their actions, except when it comes to choosing death over life for another being.

In this case, I am not only dumbfounded, I am also saddened and disappointed by the sudden choice to take Excalibur's life, without even knowing whether or not he was a threat. I've nothing much else to say, other than this admonition: Take the opportunity to be still and quiet when you can; give yourself a moment alone without the influence of someone else's opinion or advice; take a deep breath and use the brain that God gave you to think with, then try...dear God, please try to love and LET LIVE.

THE JOY OF YOGA THE INFAMOUS DOWN DOG

an inversion, and it's grounding. Finding the proper alignment is critical for comfort in this pose. We don't want the hands slipping, wrists hurting, or rounding in the upper back.

To best access the pose, we'll begin on all fours (hands and knees). The hands should be nice and wide on the mat, pinky finger almost reaching the outer edge. The fingers are spread like starfish gripping the mat. Each finger pressing down, in particular, the thumb and index finger. Each knuckle and "finger pad" pressing down. As you begin to lift the knees off the mat, lift the hips up and back, and tilt your tailbone to the sky. Feet can stay at hip distance and knees can be bent slightly. Arms will become straight, eye of the elbow on the outside of the arms. Shoulders externally rotate (inner upper arm wraps toward ceiling) and forearms wrap in as you push the earth away with the hands (relieving pressure in the wrists). Inner thighs wrap inward and begin to press down through the heels. Think about elongating the spine, tugging navel towards back body and relaxing the neck completely. Stay 4-6 breaths to start, and progress to 8-12 breaths as you

Because Downward Facing Dog is so common, it's important to truly find this pose for your body. You'll want to be active, strong, and comfortable. The benefits are immense, we build strength, improve circulation, relieve lower back pain, and enliven the entire body. A longer hold in the down dog can serve as an anchor to bring concentration and focus.

Modifications could include coming down onto the elbows/forearms when your wrists won't permit weight bearing. A deep bend to the knees can assist tight muscles in the backs of the legs. Students with high blood pressure need to check with their doctor first before practicing this pose. Only stay in the pose if it's pain-free. It may be very challenging, even uncomfortable at first. Check in while you're there and see how the entire body is doing. Enjoy!

So what are the best foods for that brain gut connection? First and foremost we need to eat a diet rich in whole organic foods, foods that are not processed, or are minimally processed including as many greens as possible. Leafy green vegetables contain high concentrations of nitrates that turn to nitrites when we chew them thanks to the good bacteria in our mouths. These help blood vessels increase oxygen flow, specifically to places that are lacking oxygen! Other foods that are good for our brain are things like fresh ginger. #### ANTONOVICH CALLS FOR REPORT ON COUNTY PREPAREDNESS FOR EBOLA

LOS ANGELES COUNTY-- Supervisor Michael D. Antonovich WILL ask the Departments of Health and Public Health to report to the Board of Supervisors at Tuesday's meeting on the actions being taken to prevent an outbreak of the Ebola virus in the county.

"It is vital that we have the information available to the public on preventive measures being taken by county departments to protect our residents

In addition to the efforts being made by county departments, the supervisor will ask what role the county will play in coordination with agencies from the federal and state governments.

County departments engaged in preparedness and prevention efforts include the Department of Health, the Department of Public Health, the Office of Emergency Management and others.

THE GOOD LIFE

HOW TO CHECK UP ON YOUR HOSPITAL

Dear Savvv Senior.

What resources can you recommend for researching hospitals? I need to get a knee replacement next year, and want to find a good, safe hospital to have

Shopping Around

Dear Shopping,

Most people don't give much thought when it comes to choosing a hospital, but selecting the right one can be as important as the doctor you choose. Here are some tips and resources to help you research and check up on your area hospitals.

Hospital Shopping

While you may not always have the opportunity to choose your hospital, especially in the case of an emergency, having a planned procedure can offer you a variety of choices.

When shopping for a hospital, the most important criterion is to find one that has a strong department in your area of need. A facility that excels in coronary bypass surgery, for example, may not be the best choice for a knee replacement. Research shows that patients tend to have better results when they're treated in hospitals that have extensive experience with their specific condition.

In order to choose a hospital that's best for you, it is important to discuss your concerns and alternatives with the doctor who is treating you. Some doctors may be affiliated with several hospitals from which you can choose. Or, if you've yet to select a doctor, finding a top hospital that has expertise with your condition can help you determine which physician to actually choose.

Another important reason to do some research is the all too frequent occurrence of hospital infections, which kill around 75,000 people in the U.S. each year. So checking your hospital's infection rates and cleanliness procedures is also a wise move.

Researching Tools

Today, there are a number of online resources that provide hospital safety and performance data to help you research and compare facilities. Because hospitals are such complex places, it's wise to get information from a variety of sources. Here is a summary of some top guides.

Hospital Compare (medicare.gov/ hospitalcompare): Operated by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, this free tool lets you compare general quality of care, as well as care for many medical conditions and surgical procedures in more than 4,000 U.S. hospitals.

Consumer Reports Hospital Rankings (consumerreports.org/hospitalratings): If you don't mind spending a few dollars ($7 for one month or $30 per year), Consumer Reports ranks 4,500 hospitals in all 50 states plus Washington D.C. and Puerto Rico. The reliable resource provides information on up to 34 performance and safety measures.

U.S. News & World Report (usnews.com/ best-hospitals): This online publishing resource identifies the best hospitals for 16 specialties, and provides rankings by metro area and by specialty for free.

Healthgrades (healthgrades.com): A private, for-profit organization, they provide free hospital ratings on patient safety and medical procedures, and scores hospitals using a 5-star scale.

The Commonwealth Fund (whynotthebest. org): This is a private foundation that provides free performance data on all U.S. hospitals.

The Joint Commission (qualitycheck.org): This is a not-for-profit organization that accredits and certifies more than 20,500 health care organizations and programs in the U.S. Hospitals receive a checkmark for each set of measures they have met. But there's no way to tell whether a hospital is stronger in one area over another.

Hospital Inspections (hospitalinspections. org): Established by the Association of Health Care Journalist, this focuses on violations and inspection reports.

The Leapfrog Group (hospitalsafetyscore.org): This national, not-for-profit organization grades hospitals on their overall performance in keeping patients safe. Use your city, state or ZIP code to search more than 2,500 hospitals.

VA Hospital Compare (www.hospitalcompare. va.gov): If you're a veteran, you can research and compare VA medical centers here.

KATIE Tse.....This and That ATTRACTIVE NUISANCES

It's strange some of the things people feel passionate about. Politics and religion are up there, but there's a host of unusual topics that really concern some folks. I recall one of my friends saying that she knew her boyfriend was "the one" in part because he had numerous spools of dental floss in his bathroom. She probably doesn't realize that the rest of us might not consider dental hygiene a "make or break" issue. But I suppose we all have our own priorities.

Many of our opinions were developed during the formative years of childhood. My mom always warns me of the dangers of "wedge" shoes that were popular when she was young. These high heels originated during the 70's, and have been experiencing a vibrant rebirth in modern fashion. Since I am as far from fashion consciousness as Kim Kardashian is from a pair of size 3 pants, my mom's admonition didn't register with me. That is, until one of my professors broke both ankles at once by tripping on the two inch sidewalk incline outside our classroom. She was wearing wedge shoes at the time, and ended up in a wheelchair for months. If I had any latent interest in sporting wedges, that incident put me off them for good!

Other opinions come from personal experience and aren't necessarily common among the general public. My opinion about the dangers of carpeted stairs is an example of this. I was having lunch with a friend when the topic of stairs came up. If you have no strong feelings about carpeted stairs, please let me try to dissuade you from ever, EVER having them. Stairs on their own are dangerous enough. Thank goodness for building codes regulating the ratio of rises to treads! If you've ever walked on stairs not built to code, you know what I'm talking about. It takes complete concentration to not trip down the whole flight.

Adding carpeting just makes stairs all the more slippery. And if you're wearing socks and walking on carpeted stairs, Watch out! My aunt knocked herself unconscious one night when she fell down her friends' carpeted stairs. There's still a dent in the plaster where her head hit the wall. One of my friends tripped when walking (in socks) down their flight of carpeted stairs while carrying his infant son. The child made it out unharmed, but my friend bruised a vertebrae or two.

The take away message is clear. So for all you wedge-wearing, carpeted stairs-owning people --you've been warned!

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS: GONE GIRL

By Sean Kayden

David Fincher's "Gone Girl" is a new psychological thriller that's based on the novel by Gillian Flynn. It stars Ben Affleck and Rosamund Pike as a once loving couple who's seemingly perfect marriage spirals out of control due to unemployment and personal issues. The film examines many social elements such as marriage, deceitfulness, the media, economic problems, and identities. Flynn noted the film, which she wrote the screenplay for, deviates from her own book. The 149-minute running time whizzes by at least for the first two-thirds of the way. The dialogue is swift, sharp, and incredibly witty. "Gone Girl" is a dark drama that explores the concept of an American marriage gone wrong. It's shot extremely well with a color palette that's moody yet visually stunning. The direction from acclaimed director, David Fincher ("The Social Network," "Zodiac," "Seven," "Fight Club") is precision sharp. There may be a few qualms to nitpick along the way, which would include the very last shot of the film. However, overall, at a purely entertainment standpoint, the film mostly delivers. It may not be strikingly perfect, but on a technical and creative level Gone Girl is fairly rock solid.

Ben Affleck plays Nick Dunne, a magazine writer whose wife Amy (Pike) has gone missing one morning after he returns home from the bar he owns in town. The disappearance and peculiar behavior of Dunne causes the media and small town to get involved. The first act of the film consists of numerous flashbacks of the couple's earlier days. It depicts their deep connection as well as their overwhelmingly sexual desires for one another. However, there's something amiss with their idyllic marriage. Layoffs, moving from New York City to Nick's hometown in Missouri to care for his dying mother as well as money problems all have appeared to taint the once promising marriage. There's also something strangely off about Amy even though the attention is on Nick's behavior. The film quickly swifts to the central question, Did Nick kill Amy? As time continues on and new revelations are unfolding, Nick starts to look like the most hated man in America. Along the way there are twists and turns, but the biggest surprise comes around the halfway point. However, after the somewhat shocking discovery, "Gone Girl" starts to run low on stream. It almost feels like the balloon was popped too soon. Don't get me wrong, it was still an entertaining time at the theater. However, seeing as how much time you already invested into the story by that far, I felt as if it wasn't as ultimately gripping as I had intended it to become.

The outrageously crazy third act almost seems to go overboard just a bit with Amy's character. Her sociopathic tendencies clearly get the best of her. Affleck over the years has become a better actor since he's picking better projects. He's good for the role, but his character is sort of aloof. The persona he displays is straight out of real world headlines. "Gone Girl "is a movie that feels like real life. It tracks the suspicious behavior of a once loving husband, how a small town bands together to help find one of their own, and how the media portrays this know of scenario at hand. I certainly enjoyed the social commentary and the way America can put someone's life under a microscope. Even if the media is wrong, they still can spin it well enough to make them appear as if they were right all along. It's a sad, but cruel reality. The notion of marriage and whom you're sleeping with every night is at the forefront. "Gone Girl" will have you thinking or at least scratching your head as the credits roll. If it can at the very least allow you to do that, I think it's safe to say it's worth the price of admission.

Being Mortal: Medicine and What Matters in the End by Atul Gawande In Being Mortal, bestselling author Atul Gawande tackles the hardest challenge of his profession: how medicine can not only improve life but also the process of its ending.Medicine has triumphed in modern times, transforming birth, injury, and infectious disease from harrowing to manageable. But in the inevitable condition of aging and death, the goals of medicine seem too frequently to run counter to the interest of the human spirit. Nursing homes, preoccupied with safety, pin patients into railed beds and wheelchairs. Hospitals isolate the dying, checking for vital signs long after the goals of cure have become moot. Doctors, committed to extending life, continue to carry out devastating procedures that in the end extend suffering. Gawande, a practicing surgeon, addresses his profession's ultimate limitation, arguing that quality of life is the desired goal for patients and families. Gawande offers examples of freer, more socially fulfilling models for assisting the infirm and dependent elderly, and he explores the varieties of hospice care to demonstrate that a person's last weeks or months may be rich and dignified.Full of eye-opening research and riveting storytelling, Being Mortal asserts that medicine can comfort and enhance our experience even to the end, providing not only a good life but also a good end

The Roosevelts: An Intimate History by Geoffrey C. Ward (Author), Ken Burns A vivid and personal portrait of America's greatest political family and its enormous impact on our nation—the companion volume to the seven-part PBS documentary series With 796 photographs, some never before seen. The authors of the acclaimed and best-selling The Civil War, Jazz, The War, and Baseball present an intimate history of three extraordinary individuals from the same extraordinary family-Theodore, Eleanor, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt.Geoffrey C. Ward, distilling more than thirty years of thinking and writing about the Roosevelts, and the acclaimed filmmaker Ken Burns help us understand for the first time that, despite the fierce partisanship of their eras, the Roosevelts were far more united than divided. All the history the Roosevelts made is here, but this is primarily an intimate account, the story of three people who overcame obstacles that would have undone less forceful personalities. Theodore Roosevelt would push past childhood frailty, outpace depression, survive terrible grief—and transform the office of the presidency. Eleanor Roosevelt, orphaned and alone as a child, would endure her husband's betrayal, battle her own self-doubts, and remake herself into the most consequential first lady in American history—and the most admired woman on earth. And Franklin Roosevelt, born to privilege and so pampered that most of his youthful contemporaries dismissed him as a charming lightweight, would summon the strength to lead the nation through the two greatest crises since the Civil War, though he could not take a single step unaided. The three were towering shows that they were also flawed human beings who confronted in their personal lives issues familiar to all of us: anger and the need for forgiveness, courage and cowardice, confidence and self-doubt, loyalty to family and the need to be true to oneself. This is the story of the Roosevelts-no other American family ever touched so many lives.

by Dennis Lehane From Gone, Baby, Gone to Mystic River to Shutter Island to The Given Day, the phenomenal Dennis Lehane has proven himself to be one of the most versatile and exciting novelists working in America today—whether he's breaking new ground with uniquely inventive psychological suspense, redefining the detective story, or bringing a bygone era to life with sweeping and masterful historical fiction. He's back with Live by Night, an epic, unflinching tale of the making and unmaking of a gangster in the Prohibition Era of the Roaring Twenties. Meticulously researched and artfully told, Live by Night is the riveting story of one man's rise from Boston petty thief to the Gulf Coast's most successful rum runner, and it proves again that the accolades Lehane consistently receives are well deserved.

MESSAGE IN A BOTTLE By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

I write these essays every week without any real sense of whether anyone is reading them. But I continue to write them because they are one way that I can share what is going on at the Playhouse with the readers of the Mountain Views News. I'm so proud of what is going on behind the marquee.

Our production of 4000 Miles has gotten wonderful reviews. I am so proud of this work. Audiences have been telling me how much they have enjoyed the play and how terrific the performances are. Unfortunately, those audiences have been small. It may be because the play doesn't have great name recognition, but the play isn't selling very well. And that is such a shame – and is costing us. In the calculus of the season (as I explained a few essays back) I tried to create a season that was balanced and that had something for everyone. In theater there are no "sure things" but I was counting on that by insuring that everything that we put up is of the highest quality we can manage - that audiences would trust that the work at the Playhouse - recognizable or not - was worth attending.

SMP is really at a watershed moment in our history. We are being acknowledged by the wider theatrical community for all the strides we've made, we are hiring theater artists who are bringing a higher level of sophistication and talent to our stage than ever before, we are stretching ourselves with new initiatives and programs and yet we don't seem to be able to make an impression on our local community.

I have begun to wonder if we closed our doors if anyone in town would notice or care? Would we be missed? As I meet people in town and introduce myself as the Artistic Director of SMP I am saddened by how many locals tell me that they have never been to the theater - but that they hear that we do good work. No theater can survive on box office receipts alone - it has to be a healthy mix of earned (box office) to unearned (donations, grants, and underwriting) income. Most theater analysts suggest that ratio should be 60/40 unearned to earned income. We come nowhere near that ratio.

Our theater needs you. We are about to launch a fundraising campaign to address long-delayed capital improvements and to rebuild our reserves. We have a long list of serious needs that will make our theater more comfortable and our productions more enjoyable. There are several ways you can help - I call it giving us ADVICE:

Attend our plays and make sure that you bring someone new to every show – empty seats cost us; Donate what you can to keep our theater alive and vibrant;

Volunteer to help us - we are a very small staff (all unpaid) and there is always more to do than we

Include us in your conversations with the City Council members and local businesses as one of the things you treasure about Sierra Madre;

Connect us to people to whom we can reach out

Express yourself – let us know what you like and don't like about what we are doing - I can be reached ArtisticDirector@ SierraMadrePlayhouse.org

FEEDING THE HUNGRY: FOOD FORWARD IS A PICKIN' IN THE SAN GABRIEL VALLEY

Across the valley, plump persimmons, gorgeous and more than they can share with friends and guavas, and peak pomegranates have ripened to fruition and are begging to be picked. For those homeowners who have more backyard fruit than they can eat or share, fallen fruit means a wasteful over--abundance. For those in need, excess fruit means a bounty of sweet and direly needed nutrients. For Food Forward, this means incredible potential and a call to the community

Food Forward is the largest non--profit fruit gleaning organization in Southern California; since 2009, Food Forward has rescued and donated over five million pounds of fresh, local produce that would otherwise go to waste. When a fruit donor in the neighborhood has fruit to spare, Food Forward organizes volunteers from the local community to pick it, provides harvesting equipment and a trained leader as support, and then arranges for a local food pantry or receiving agency to collect the fruit donation.

As Los Angeles is home to some of the nicest weather anywhere in the world, it also has some of the best growing conditions. Because of this, fruit grows wildly on healthy trees, often producing more than the owner can eat by him or herself, neighbors.

The abundance on the branches hangs in stark contrast to LA's serious problem of food insecurity. One in six adults and one in four children in LA County are food insecure, meaning they don't get enough nutritious food to lead a healthy and active lifestyle. Food Forward fills a vital role in the community by connecting those with abundance to those who need it the most. In the 5 years since their establishment, Food Forward has collected over 5 million lbs. of fresh produce, donated 20 million servings, engaged 6,000 volunteers, and picked at over a thousand properties.

In order to continue growing, Food Forward is always looking for more properties and volunteers so spread the word! If you or someone you know has fruit to donate, check out foodforward. org to register your tree. Anyone interested in volunteering can check out foodforward.org/ events to find a pick or farmers market glean happening close by; the picks are fun and highly rewarding, so grab a friend or two and come out

THE HUNTINGTON ENRICHES BRITISH PAINTINGS COLLECTION WITH "THE THREE WITCHES" BY FUSELI

In private hands since its creation around 1782, the dramatic depiction of the "weird sisters" from Shakespeare's Macbeth will go on public view for the first time on Oct. 11

SAN MARINO, Calif.—The Huntington Library, Art Collections, and Botanical Gardens announced today the acquisition of one of the best-known compositions by the Anglo-Swiss painter Henry Fuseli (1741–1825). In private hands since its creation around 1782, The Huntington's version of Fuseli's The Three Witches or The Weird Sisters appears to be a finished, full-size study, presumably made before the two other known full-size, final versions Fuseli made of the subjects. These are in the collections of the Kunsthaus Zurich, and the Royal Shakespeare Company, Stratford-upon-Avon, England. After months of conservation treatment at The Huntington, the new acquisition will go on public view for the first time on Oct. 11 in the Huntington Art Gallery.
"Given the fame of The Huntington's collection of 18th-century British paintings, it may come as a surprise that we did not already have a painting by Henry Fuselione of the most celebrated, notorious, and inventive artists of the period," said Kevin Salatino, Hannah and Russel Kully Director of the Art Collections at The Huntington. "Finally we do, and a great one, a picture full of mystery and suspense. Its powerful composition packs an incredible punch, second in impact only to the artist's famous painting The Nightmare at the Detroit Institute of Arts, which is from the same period. The acquisition of The Three Witches now fills a major gap in hours (Memorial Day through Labor Day) are 10:30 our collection."

REMEMBRANCES PIETRO CAROLFI: Sculptor Extraordinaire

October 24, 1915-October 6, 2014

Monday afternoon, I received the call from New Jersey; my beloved Uncle Pete had passed away. Of course I was sad, but then I thought of what one remarkable man accomplished in his almost 99 years of life and the personal sacrifices made along the way.

Uncle Pete was born in northern Italy, the second youngest of several children. An Italian soldier who fought in World War II, he was captured by the British in Tunisia in 1943 and sent to America as a prisoner of war. Like most Italian POWs he agreed to support the US War Effort by joining the Italian Service Unit over the next three years. Meanwhile, serving as a volunteer at Ft. Dix, was Natalie Allegrini who was fluent in Italian. Natalie and Pietro fell in love. After the War ended, he returned to Italy and they corresponded for one year till Natalie reunited and they married on a beautiful hill in Tuscany.

They moved to Park Avenue in Collingswood in 1952 where Uncle Pete established his sculpting/casting business; in 1956 they purchased a larger Victorian home on Haddon Avenue with an attached large studio where "Uncle Pete" did his magic. I am most proud of his statue of George Clymer (signer of the Declaration of Independence) in front of Independence Hall in Philly. His lifelong career turned models into hundreds of works of art in the Delaware Valley. During his time running Carolfi Studio, he made molds for hundreds of statues, including Church saints, the fountain-leaping gazelles at Philadelphia

Zoo,  $W\;h\;i\;t\;m\;a\;n$ at Rutgers-Camden

University, installations in front of the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Philadelphia Convention Center, and molds and casts for famous artists such as Angelo Frudakis and John Giotti. Another favorite- an awardwinning bust he designed of himself used as the model for Caesar's head in Atlantic City!

What I failed to mentioned was Pietro left behind his ENTIRE family to come to America-his parents and five living siblings. I am sure that was not easy. But he and Natalie did go back many times over the years on vacation to see them.

Natalie and Pete shared a special love till her death in 2005. He leaves behind six children and their spouses, Joseph (Muriel) Carolfi, Maria (Mike) O'Donnell, Francis (Lorraine) Carolfi, Angelo (Anne) Carolfi, Emilia (Thomas Mihalek) Carolfi and Claire (Michael) Locantore, 18 grandchildren and 9 great-grandchildren and sisters-in-law Martha Tenuto and Margaret Allegrini.

JAN GARRIGAN Submitted by K. Lansdown

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE

...But not in the form of the much expected rain. The water is from the tears shed for Jan Garrigan who passed away from cancer on October 2nd. The Water is in the form of tears from the children on Oakdale Street in Monrovia. For years they have been greeted by Freddy Kruger, Bela Lugosi, Frankenstein, Various witches and ghosts, sound effects and spiders. Jan was indeed the 'Santa Claus' of the neighborhood and children came from far and near to be at her house. They waited in anticipation every year. Her unquenchable curiosity and genuine delight in human interaction drove her to form deep and lasting relationships to be cherished and nourished for life. She charmed everyone she met. No one could hold, hug, nor love as warmly as Jan. She gave herself selflessly to the whole world. What we have done for ourselves dies with us, what we have done for others and the world remains and is immortal" Albert Pike

THE SEARCH FOR THE FINGERPRINTS OF LIFE ON MARS BEGINS

NASA's Astrobiology Institute (NAI) announced that the SETI Institute has been selected as a new member of the NAI for a 5-year research program, "Changing Planetary Environments and the Fingerprints of Life." Led by SETI's planetary geologist and Senior Research Scientist Nathalie Cabrol, the team's work will address key questions: How can we identify the signature of life not just here on Earth, but on Mars as well? How does a planet's changing environment impact the evidence for life?

"I am absolutely thrilled that the SETI Institute is joining the NAI. In the next five years, along with our partner institutions, we will focus on decoding the fingerprints of life—the biosignatures—in extreme environments here on Earth to help us look for life on Mars," said Cabrol.

"Our goal is to understand the survival of biosignatures from an early, wetter Mars to the harsh environment of the red planet today," she added. "Understanding the role that the changing Martian environment has had on biosignatures will inform us on how to recognize these signatures, and how to explore them. We bring to this ambitious quest new exploration tools and, with NASA's Mars 2020 on the horizon, the timing could not be more perfect."

To model and test strategies for biosignature detection, Cabrol's team will conduct fieldwork in extreme environments on Earth that are analogous to sites on Mars where water once flowed.

Fieldwork will be done at Yellowstone National Park, sites in California and Chile, Axel Heiberg Island in the high Arctic, and Western Australia. Each site is an analog to Mars: volcanic and hydrothermal terrain, lake sediments, evaporates, and perennial cold springs. Sites will be explored from satellites, air, ground, and at the microscopic level in the field and laboratory.

Understanding how to integrate this multiscale information will help scientists learn how to select the best sites for discovering biosignatures on Mars.

Cabrol assembled a diverse team of experts in planetary science, robotics, laboratory experimentation, and exploration to conduct fieldwork, analyze samples, and develop a biosignature roadmap to guide the search for life on Mars. In addition to more than a dozen scientists at the SETI Institute, her team brings together scientists from universities, government agencies and industry partners in the United States, Canada, Europe, Australia and South America. In the U.S., partners include Arizona State University, University of Montana, University of Tennessee, Carnegie Mellon, Georgia Institute of Technology, Honeybee Robotics, Pacific Northwest National Laboratory, and NASA Ames Research Center. Non-U.S. partners include McGill University (Canada), Centro de Astrobiologia (CAB, Madrid, Spain), Deutscher Wetterdienst (Germany), Friedrich-Alexander University (Germany), and Campoalto for logistics in Chile.

Over the next 5 years, more than twenty scientists will work together to help answer the question of where and how to search for the right rocks on Mars in order to discover the fingerprints of life—if it now exists or has ever existed—on the red planet.

"The intellectual scope of astrobiology is vast, from understanding how our planet went from lifeless to living, to understanding how life has adapted to Earth's harshest environments, to exploring other worlds with the most advanced technologies to search for signs of life," noted Mary Voytek, director, astrobiology program, NASA Headquarters.

WATER IN MEXICO

I've heard it so long that it sounds like some religious mantra: "Don't drink the water in Mexico."

The meaning is that a visitor to Mexico should not drink the water untreated. And why is that?

One explanation that I used to hear back in the 1970s when I first visited Mexico was that, while every place has its own bacteria and organisms in their water, one will get used to the organisms in their water after a while. And supposedly, this also meant that native Mexicans could drink their municipal tap from the water without concern. When I went to language school in Mexico, I always boiled my water or added water purification tablet to the tap water, or purchased bottled water. Back then, I never thought about asking native Mexicans if they drank their water out of the tap.

More recently, having visited the Yucatan region several times, I asked some of the natives about this. These days bottled water is everywhere, and most of the people whose homes I stayed in purchased all their water and did not drink from the tap. When I asked whether or not they'd get sick by drinking water out of their tap without purifying it, they shrugged and said they didn't know. They buy their water.

Finally, I met someone who seemed to know a thing about the Mexican water situation. I asked Julia, who was an American who married a Mexican man and now calls the Yucatan region her home where she and her husband run a farmt.

"Do you drink from the tap directly?" I asked Julia.
"No, though I'm not afraid to," she responded.

"If I'm out in the fields and I'm thirsty, I will drink from the hose and I don't get sick. But usually, we buy purified and filtered water and they deliver it to our home."

Julia went on to explain that the tap water is used directly for washing, brushing teeth, irrigation, etc.

"When people say not to drink the water in Merida (Yucatan), I don't believe the reason is that the water has bad bacteria. I believe it's because the water here is very high in minerals and calcium, etc. And it's those minerals that might cause sickness if you're not used to it," explained Julia.

I asked Julia about the people living in all the small villages where they could not afford to buy water. "I don't know what they do," responded Julia.

"However," added Julia, "I've been told that in 20 years or so, you won't be able to drink the water in the Yucatan region because it will be so polluted." Julia pointed out that all the water in Yucatan comes from underground, and that the soil is very porous. She adds that everyone uses septic systems in Yucatan, and there is no sewer system (like in most parts of the U.S.) where the waste water is treated before it is discharged into the soil or water. Although the local politicians

A light-colored tinaco on a roof in Merida, Mexico. all talk about installing a sewer system after each flood, Julia doesn't think that will ever happen because of the immensity of such a project.

"Because the soil is so porous, when chemicals are used, they go directly into the ground water," she says.

"So, because there is no sewer system, there is flooding after every major storm, and everyone blames the mayor and they elect a new mayor who makes new promises, and then it rains again and floods again because nothing was done."

I concluded that it was a good thing for me to buy my water, or purify it, whenever I travel. And it's not wise to judge the water of such as large country as Mexico with one yardstick because the "water situation" of any country is vastly more complex than what I've presented here. Unfortunately, we should be suspect of most tap water and most open sources of water, wherever we are.

I asked Julia about the black tanks on nearly everyone's roof in most parts of Mexico. "Those are called tinacos," Julia told me, which my dictionary told me simply means "water tank."

In the United States, people often let their water run a bit so it starts to cool off. However, due to the lack of pressurized water in Mexico, most homes and buildings have large water tanks – tinacos – on their roofs. These then deliver the water by gravity as needed. But since these are traditionally black, the coolest water comes out first and then the water gets hotter as you let the tap run because the water was heated by the sun. Now you can find tinacos white or light-colored so that the water is not heated so much by the sun.

FAMILY MATTERS

7 THINGS TO THINK ABOUT BEFORE MAKING GIFTS TO GRANDCHILDREN

I love being a parent... well, most of the time. But my parents - and my wife's parents - tell me there is nothing better than being a grandparent, and the joy they feel about their grandchildren comes with no interruption. And I get it. After all, they get to spoil my kids and focus on connecting with them while leaving all the heavy lifting to my wife and me.

In fact, many grandparents who enjoy financial freedom are often more than generous to their grandchildren. And some even want to see their grandchildren enjoy an inheritance now instead of waiting to pass along assets after they are gone. If that's you, consider these 7 points before you make gifts to your grandchildren.

Clarify the gift. Most grandparents make outright gifts with no strings attached. But if you intend to provide a loan or an advance on an inheritance, you should always clarify that in writing.

Equal treatment. It is not unusual for a grandparent to be closer to some grandchildren than others, but when gifting assets, unequal treatment among grandchildren will almost certainly lead to family resentments. Even if you give more to some than others during your life, consider treating all grandchildren equally in your estate

Taxes. With the federal gift tax threshold at $5.25 million (double that for married couples), most people won't have to worry about paying federal gift taxes. However, any gift to an individual that exceeds $14,000 each year ($28,000 for married couples) must be reported on a gift tax return.

Education. You can help with a grandchild's college tuition by making payments directly to their educational institution. That doesn't have to be reported. And there is no limit on these contributions. Investing in a 529 plan for each of your grandchildren is also a great way to help them (and their parents!) save for college, building a taxdeferred account that will never be taxed as long as it is used for educational purposes.

Your own needs. It's tempting to be overly generous in making gifts to grandchildren, but you should not give to the detriment of your own needs. Finding the right balance will help ensure your children and grandchildren don't have to support you because you gave too much to

Long-term care. Chances are that you will need some kind of long-term care at the end of your life, research shows that most of us will. If you can't afford long-term care and need help, any gift of assets you have given could make you ineligible for Medicaid benefits for five years. Consider a trust. There are many reasons why you should not give gifts of cash or assets to grandchildren, some that you may not even be aware of. Lots of cash could be fuel on the fire of bad behavior or undermine your own children's goals for their children. To make a lasting gift, consider using a trust that will pass assets along to grandchildren safely and protect those assets for their entire lifetimes from bad behavior, bad credit, and even bad marriages.

see how much my kids love their grandparents. And there's no doubt, the relationship between grandchildren and grandparents is something special. If you are a grandparent, with just a little planning you can deepen that relationship and have an even greater impact on the lives of your grandchildren.

Tips of the Trade: Real Estate Revealed

IT PAYS TO STAY

If you want to take advantage of the affordability of homes today, but anticipate major life changes in the next couple of years, you have to consider the implications of selling so soon. Keep the following factors in mind when making your decision.

As long as you sell for more than you owe on the mortgage, you'll be fine. Otherwise, you'll lose those costs associated with your initial investment, including the money you spent on loan and closing fees.

Also consider the cost of selling your home soon after purchasing. You paid closing costs when you bought it, but you face more closing costs when you sell it. In just a couple of years, most people won't build up enough equity in the home to justify selling so soon and paying transaction fees again.

Finally, if you sell your home in less than two years - for a profit - you may have to pay capital gains taxes on that profit. Currently, homeowners are exempt from those taxes up to $250,000 (or up to $500,000 for married filers) - but the home must be your primary residence and lived in for at least two years.

Hardships like health issues or job relocation may allow you a partial exclusion on those taxes, though. Speak with your tax advisor and real estate agent for some solid advice.

and emerging market stocks.

Keep Some Bonds: balance between stocks and bonds prevents the wheels from coming off your portfolio trolley. Bonds may not produce double digit gains, but they help smooth volatility and let you sleep at night.

Invest Consistently: you cannot time the market. I repeat; you cannot time the market. Invest regularly from your earnings and remain consistent in your strategy regardless of world events or headlines.

Take Advantage of Panic: when the market tanks, your portfolio will have more bonds as a percentage and fewer stocks as a percentage than before the panic. Take the opportunity to sell some of those bonds and buy those cheap stocks. It's called rebalancing, and it's the closest thing

The advice above is easy enough to write, but it can be hard to practice. Emotions are powerful things, so now is the time to think about what you're going to do when/if the world goes crazy.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN THE WORLD GOES CRAZY?

By Greg Welborn

Headlines seem to be filled with one calamity after another: Ebola, ISIS, Hong Kong protests, Chines saber rattling, troubles in Afghanistan - the list goes on. And yet, the stock market is still in upbeat territory (anything in the 16,000s to 17,000s is at the top of the historical charts). But what if there is some terrible world event on the horizon which does cause the Dow to really swoon (say a 1,000 or more point loss)? What should an investor do?

The best advice is drawn from a history lesson. A Ned Davis Associates study of worldwide crises from 1940 onward produced some amazing insights. The researchers found that after almost every global crisis, markets react to the fear. Stocks get hammered. But with equal consistency, once the dust settled, stocks bounced back to where they were before the crisis, reflecting the broader economic reality rather than the geopolitical crisis.

After Pearl Harbor, stocks fell 4% immediately and another 14% in the quarter following the surprise attack. But then as the fear dissipated and America responded, the market rose at an average annual rate of 25% for the next 3 years.

The same pattern was present after the fall of France to the Nazis, North Korea's invasion of the south in 1950, Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait, the world trade center 1993 bombing, 9/11, and the 2009 financial crisis. In each and every one of them, there was panicked selling followed by very profitable buying. So here are 4 things to do to handle the next crisis.

Diversify: own lots of stocks, not just a few, and make sure you own them throughout the spectrum. You need some large cap growth, some value, some small cap, some international,

REPARTEE 2014

If you know me you know I love the clever use of the language. Give me a Marx Brothers movie over the Three Stooges anytime.

Repartee is a wonderful use of the language. Webster tells us repartee means "a quick and witty reply". Who amongst us hasn't wished, from time to time, that we had the perfect "quick and witty" retort to someone else's not so quick and witty line? Sometimes two clever wordsmiths will joust metaphorically with words and we have the rest of our lives to enjoy the match. Friends George Bernard Shaw and friend Winston Churchill had a go at it: Playwright Shaw invited Mr. Churchill to the premiere of his stage play, Pygmalion with the following wire: "Am reserving two tickets for you for my premiere. Come and bring a friend – if you have one." To which Mr. Churchill responded: "Impossible to be present for the first performance. Will attend second – if there is one."

Writers William Faulkner and Ernest Hemingway squared off once with Faulkner commenting on Hemingway: "He has never been known to use a word that might send a reader to the dictionary". To which Hemingway responded about Faulkner: "Poor Faulkner. Does he really think big emotions come from big words?"

Among cards, letters and telegrams received by Groucho on his 71st birthday came this cable he received from his good friend Irving Berlin: "The world would not be in such a snarl had Marx been Groucho instead of Karl".

Everyone must remember brilliant British actor Sir John Gielgud. His repartee in the film "Arthur" is legendary. He was once invited by friend Carol Channing to an event which he turned down due to a viral infection. Gielgud penned a note to Channing: "Sorry, love, cannot attend. Gielgud doesn't fielgud."

William Howard Taft was, at 350 pounds, the fattest of all the U. S. presidents. One day he received a telegram from his friend, Elihu Root, the then Secretary of War: "Heard you were sick." The corpulent Taft replied he had been sick but was feeling so much better that he went on a 25 mile horseback ride at an elevation of 5,000 feet. The next day Taft received a second telegram from Secretary Root: "How is the horse?"

Back to Winston Churchill. On his 75th birthday Mr. Churchill was asked by a reporter: "Do you have any fear of death?" Mr. Churchill replied: I am ready to meet my Maker. Whether my Maker is prepared for the ordeal of meeting me is another matter."

In the 1920s, Babe Ruth was not only the greatest home run hitter in baseball, he was the highest paid. In 1927 he made a staggering $70,000 (teammate Lou Gehrig made $8,000). After a phenomenal season in 1931 (373 batting average, 46 home runs, 163 RBIs) Ruth was guaranteed $80,000 for 1932. A reporter pointed out to Ruth that he made $5,000 more than President Hoover to which Ruth replied: "Maybe so, but I had a better year than he did."

By the way, calculating Babe Ruth's $80,000 salary in today's dollars comes out to roughly $1.3 Million. 21 of the Dodgers made more money this year than Ruth's $1.3 million. 7 of the Dodgers: Greinke, Gonzalex, Kemp, Crawford, Kershaw, Ramirez and Ethier made more than 10 times what Ruth made in 1032

Oh well, there's always next year!!

IF EVERYTHING GOES RIGHT SOMETHING'S WRONG

By Dr. James L. Snyder

It was a week when everything went just the way I had planned. It is hard to express your feelings when something like this happens because it rarely happens.

The infamous To-Do-List from the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage was completed to her ecstatic satisfaction. That never happens. In fact, I finished it in time to have a little of "Me Time." I sat on the back porch with a steaming hot cup of coffee and enjoyed an evening with nothing to do. I am not sure how long I sat there, but my coffee was just as hot as it was on my first sip. I do not know how my wife does those things. I have never enjoyed a cup of coffee more.

I had an appointment across town and in traveling across town I never hit one red light. I think that should go into the Guinness book of records. It has never happened to me before and I was reveling in the deepest kind of satisfaction I have ever known. I got to my destination 20 minutes early. I love early. After paying all my bills for the week and balancing my checkbook, I had $100 left over. What in the world, do you do with $100 left over after paying all your bills? It did not take long to come up with a solution. I decided to take my wife out for supper on Friday night at her favorite restaurant. It was a glorious night on the town and the service at the restaurant was superb. Never have I enjoyed a more wonderful time on the town. The steak was done to a perfect T, just the way I like it. The waitress kept my coffee cup filled to the brim.

All through our meal, neither cell phones rang nor did we receive a text from anybody. Now seriously, how often does that happen? I checked several times to make sure my phone was still on. I sat back and decided to enjoy our anonymity. It is good to just chill together.

As we came near the end of our delectable evening repast, I was about to mention to my wife what a tremendous week we were having and then...

Then, I woke up. It was all just a dream. A good dream, but a dream nevertheless.

Why is it dreams never come true? Why is it that my dream life is so much superior to my actual life? No wonder as a person gets older they want to spend more time sleeping. I think I am just about there. For a brief moment, I experienced what a perfect week would look like, even if it was just in my dreams.

A perfect week is not when everything goes our way, because, if everything goes right then you know something is wrong. Call it pessimism if you will or maybe just a dash of reality.

It is when things go wrong that I begin to understand what life is all about. I begin to understand that nothing is perfect. And, if nothing is perfect, then neither am I. I like that. The only perfect person at our residence is my wife, and I have her word on that and she never lies to me.

Demanding perfection is a rather foolish thing. If I demand perfection from someone, they in turn

Demanding perfection is a rather foolish thing. If I demand perfection from someone, they in turn are going to demand perfection from me. That is more stress than I care to live with, especially at my age. After over four decades of marital bliss, I have made an astounding discovery that has made my life so much more pleasurable. It took me a long time to come to this, but I sure am glad I have.

For many years, I was hard on myself trying to be perfect in everything I did. Then, I got married and all of that went away. It was a struggle at first, but I came to one astounding conclusion that has changed my life and brought me to a point of chilling out for the rest of my life.

In our home only one person needs to be perfect. That one person is not me. What a blessing it is to realize that you are not perfect and you do not have to live up to that standard of perfection. I can be goofy, make mistakes and act silly and nobody cares. All those years of trying to be perfect were wasted. Now I have come to the place where I have acceded to the fact that my wife is perfect. I gladly anoint her as Queen Perfection in our humble Castle. All of the burden now rests upon her. She does not need to worry; I am there to support her in that aura of perfection.

The nice thing about all of this is, she does not need much help from me. It is almost like I am retired for the rest of my life with nothing else to do. The burden of perfection does not rest upon my shoulder.

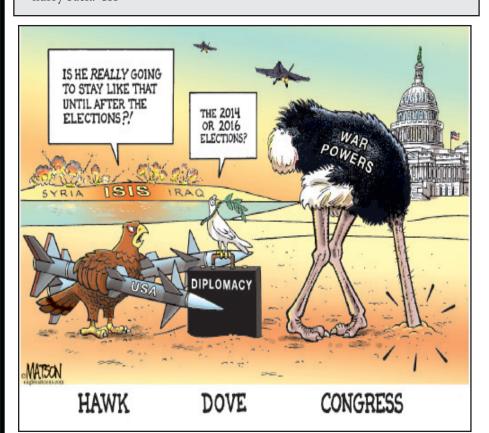

Oh yes, the checkbook. After looking at it while awake, I discovered I was $100 overdrawn. Solomon understood this when he wrote, "All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes; but the Lord weigheth the spirits," (Proverbs 16:2).

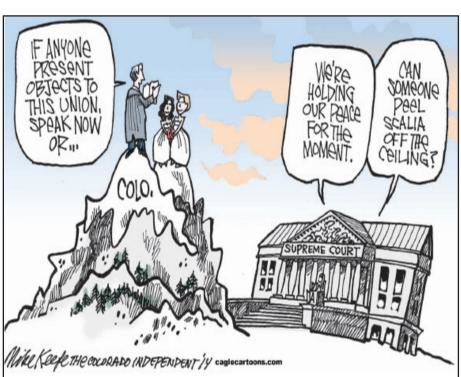

Everything does not have to go right for me to rejoice in the goodness of the Lord.

Ebola Should Be Off Limits!!

Ebola plague to our shores. As much as I would like to avoid it, truth must be spoken to this lie and shame cast upon those who would seek partisan advantage when national unity is required.

One of the most contested Senate races pits Arkansas' incumbent Democrat, Mark Pryor, against Republican challenger, Tom Cotton. It is in such races where the rubber meets the road, where the national Democrats are choosing to place their ad money and craft their message – an outrageous message they hope will turn the race. This is where the Democrats ran an ad blaming Republicans for Ebola's appearance on our shores.

The Pryor-for-Senate ad says: "Tom Cotton voted against preparing America for pandemics like Ebola. Congressman Cotton voted to cut billions from our nation's medical disaster and emergency programs." When called on it, all Democrats can offer is that votes against the stimulus, or votes for the sequester, represented votes against the Centers for Disease Control (the CDC). But to make this argument, Democrats have to rely once again on that old accounting gimmick of classifying a vote against a planned increase as a vote to decrease funding. In the temporal world, such a mathematical argument proves only that someone is desperately in need of remedial education in math. In the moral world it proves someone lacks a functioning moral compass someone lacks a functioning moral compass.

The budget of the United States has been so inflated under President Obama that $500 billion deficits under George Bush have grown to multiple $1 trillion deficits. There is no economist (liberal or conservative) that will tell you these deficits are sustainable. Voting to reduce these deficits to – dare I say – more manageable levels was, and is, a highly moral act; to place multiple trillion dollar burdens on our kids and grandkids is indefensible practically or morally.

With specific regard to the CDC, the agency's budget (including its subsidiary, the Toxic Substances and Disease Registry) was $10.7 billion in 2014 and averaged $10.8 billion during all of the Obama years. The agency's budget during the last years of Bush's presidency was $8.7 billion. How's that a decrease exactly?

As a secondary, but no less important issue, Congressmen and Senators – not to mention the tax payers – have every right to ask how an agency's budget is being spent. Nobody is required to write blank checks, and holding federal agencies to some standard of financial accountability is very much the job of Congress and every member thereof. So how is the money being spent?

The CDC's budget is supplemented by access to additional funding from the Public Health Fund, of which an additional $2 billion a year is available without strings. Any perceived deficit in funding for critical tasks (like Ebola programs) could have been drawn down by the CDC's management. Instead, the Public Health Fund has given money to lobbying firms in D.C., and "invested" in dance fitness, massage therapy, pet neutering, urban gardening, and a variety of other purportedly health-enhancing programs according to The Wall Street Journal. If this administration, and the Liberals in the Senate seeking to keep their jobs and perks, were so concerned with funding the CDC's critical tasks, why didn't they exercise the necessary oversight to make sure taxpayer money was used appropriately for those tasks?

Beyond budgetary lies, Americans also have every right to ask what steps this administration has actually taken to prevent Ebola in the U.S. That's not a question the Obama team really wants to answer. For at least two weeks that I can document there have been calls to restrict flights from the West Africa Ebola hot zone to the U.S. There have been additional calls for the administration to direct the CDC to develop a set of standard procedures for first responders and local hospitals to follow when/if presented with a potential Ebola patient.

There are 6,000 people per week who come from the hot zone into the United States. Seems like a high number, but it simply reflects the incredible amount of investment which is being made in Africa right now - $48 billion worth by some credible economic estimates, which of course represents a significant number of people with a vested interest in keeping open those travel lanes. As of this writing, we still do not have travel bans or restrictions.

The administration would tell us that "procedures" are being put in place, but we also have a right to question the efficacy of those procedures. Something as simple as making a call to a couple of hospitals, or police or fire departments, will tell you that there are still no policies emanating from D.C. or the CDC in Atlanta. CNN's Jake Tapper reported the other day talking with a specialist in infectious diseases who said that fire and police personnel still don't know what to do with somebody who has Ebola-like symptoms. They don't know what to do with their vehicle, or to their house or apartment. Hospitals don't have standard procedures to deal with the potentiality either. The painful truth is there are no recognized standard procedures in place.

It bears repeating, as I opened this article, that Ebola is serious enough and deadly enough that politics should be put aside. This is not another "crisis which shouldn't be wasted". We should unite as a country to prevent Ebola, and to fight it where we can't prevent it. This is not the time for any politician to use the crisis to scare voters into casting a ballot one way or the other. In fact, to do so should be enough to disqualify that politician from ever holding any elected office again. So shame on you, Mark Pryor, for running that vile ad, and shame on you, Senate Democrats, for funding it.

Monster Mix-Up!

LEGAL NOTICES

One of my favorite monster movies is called The Mysterious Island. Some people escape a battle by jumping into a hot air balloon and sailing off into the sky. They land on a hidden island. It is full of danger and mystery. The best part is that there are giant crabs.

Monsters! We find them in books, movies and stories. We even make up monsters to scare one another - and ourselves. Why do we like monsters?

Most people like to be scared a little bit, so we enjoy the idea of monsters. Since we use our imaginations to create monsters, we know they're not real. When we want to scare each other, we make up monsters that are waiting under beds, living in closets or smashing buildings.

Some people believe that we have real "monsters" on our planet. Huge whales, giant snakes or piranha fish that attack humans are sometimes called monsters. They are actual animals that frighten us. When we run into one of these animals, we should be truly frightened!

Read the clues to fill in the puzzle with monsters that are "real" and ones that are made up for a bit of spooky fun.

Monsters that are not real (Fictional) – Across

At The Kensington, we'll remember what your loved ones are beginning to forget

Introducing two unique levels of memory care

f your Mom was an amazing baker who loved yellow lilies or if your Dad was a decorated colonel who started every day with strong, black coffee, we'll be sure to know. We will acquaint ourselves with the meaningful details of your loved ones' lives. Then, when memory fades, we will help them revisit the pleasure of past times, even if only moments. We will care for them—and you—as progressive memory loss occurs.

The Kensington's memory care programs are highly personalized. Two distinctive "neighborhoods"—Connections and Haven feature support that accommodates residents with different degrees of memory loss.

Connections residents are in the early to middle stages of dementia. They can independently engage in activities that give purpose to each day. Haven residents are in the middle to late stages of dementia. They need a higher level of clinical assistance and soothing care that increases comfort and reduces agitation.

Connections and Haven neighborhoods are cozy, intimate environments. Here, loving professionals honor the past but "meet residents where they are" now. By making the most of their strengths, they make today as joyful as possible.

Call us at 626-355-5700 to schedule a visit or to learn more about expert memory care coming to Sierra Madre this fall
