In November 1919, President Wilson proclaimed November 11 as the first commemoration of Armistice Day with the following words: "To us in America, the reflections of Armistice Day will be filled with solemn pride in the heroism of those who died in the country's service and with gratitude for the victory, both because of the thing from which it has freed us and because of the opportunity it has given America to show her sympathy with peace and justice in the councils of the nations..."

With the approval of this legislation (Public Law 380) on June 1, 1954, November 11th became a day to honor American veterans of all wars. Later that same year, on October 8th, President Dwight II had required the greatest D. Eisenhower issued the

as Chairman of the Veterans Day National Committee applied to all subsequent VA Administrators. Since March 1989 when VA was elevated to a cabinet level department, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs has served as the committee's chairman.

The Uniform Holiday Bill (Public Law 90-363 (82 Stat. 250)) was signed on June 28, 1968, and was intended to ensure three-day weekends for Federal employees by celebrating four national holidays on Mondays: Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Veterans Day, and Columbus Day. It was thought that these extended weekends would encourage travel, recreational and cultural activities and stimulate greater industrial and commercial production. Many states did not agree with this decision and continued to celebrate the holidays on their original dates.

The first Veterans Day under the new law was observed with much confusion on October 25, 1971. It was quite apparent that the commemoration of this day was a matter of historic and patriotic significance to a great number of our citizens, and so on September 20th, 1975, President Gerald R. Ford signed Public Law 94-97 (89 Stat. 479), which returned the annual observance of Veterans Day to its original date of November 11, beginning in 1978. This action supported the desires of the overwhelming majority of state legislatures, all major veterans service organizations and the American people.

Veterans Day continues to be observed on November 11, regardless of what day of the week on which it falls. The restoration of the observance of Veterans Day to November 11 not only preserves the historical significance of the date, but helps focus attention on the important purpose of Veterans Day: A celebration to honor America's veterans for their patriotism, love of country, and willingness to serve and sacrifice for the common good.

LOCAL ENVIRONMENTALIST FEATURED ON BOOKMARKS

Sierra Madre, CA. - October 28, 2014 - Sierra Madre resident and local environmentalist, Caroline Brown, is featured on new READ posters and bookmarks by the Sierra Madre Public Library.

"I love to read. I have several books going at once by my bed as well as on my iPad," said Brown. The book she chose to feature on the READ bookmarks is, Moby-Duck: An Accidental Odyssey: The True Story of 28,800 Bath Toys Lost at Sea and of the Beachcombers, Oceanographers, Environmentalist, and Fools, Including the Author, Who Went in Search of Them by Donovan Hohn.

Moby-Duck charts the movement around the North Pacific of over 28,800 rubber ducks that spilled from a cargo container and ended up in garbage islands, or gyres, in the Pacific Ocean. They were called the "Great Pacific Garbage Patch" and grew from the size of a football stadium to twice the size of Texas.

A former environmental science teacher at Claremont High School, Brown has a special interest in the health of the ocean. "The ocean is the heartbeat of the earth and, as we treat it so badly, we only bring ourselves more and more environmental misery. The tale of the ducks must help us to do better," she said.

Brown is a member of the Environmental Action Council, helped form the local Mountain Conservancy, volunteers with the California Department of Fish and Wildlife Service, and helps preserve Sierra Madre's Urban Forest.

"I THINK I CAN! I THINK I CAN!' 2015 Sierra Madre Rose Float Theme

What a delight to see so many folks at our polling place this morning! Sierra Madreans are most definitely

Had a great time with Dick Sappington, LaDonna and Dave Gaydosh, and dear friend, Donna Sutcliffe, at the barn up behind Sierra Vista Park where the Sierra Madre Rose Parade floats are constructed. This was my first visit since July and, oh my gosh! they have gotten so much more done. The float is going to be incredible! Dick Sappington kindly turned on all the engines and hydraulics and I got to see exactly how brilliant he is as the float's master mechanic! The cars rock from side to side, the wheels on the engine and the cars spin, the engine comes right up off the track to show how hard he's trying to get up that hill, the engine cab parts exactly like the Red Sea, the smokestack lowers itself and the passengers of the cars, two giraffes and one huge bear rock in opposite directions from their cars! AND, the giraffes bend their long necks to accommodate getting under bridges!

I can't wait to see our float on New Year's Day. We are definitely prizewinners again this

Here's something you might not know, I know I didn't, there are three tests our float must pass before it gets it gets its official certification. There are two mechanical tests for roadworthiness and one more for safety. On this third one, all the riders are aboard, this year including a crew of four and four princesses. They have to perform a fire drill where they are allotted 45 seconds to get everybody off the float, the riders and crew safely out of harm's way and the float totally shut down. Dick said they've never taken more than 20 seconds. If you could see how the driver of the float is reclining inside the left side of the float, just a foot or so off the ground, and driving backwards, that's quite a

The third and final test took place Saturday, November 1st when "I Think I Can!" left the barn, drove down to Sierra Madre Blvd., headed west to Baldwin, turned around at Baldwin and back to the barn, missing the showers by mere minutes. Everything worked perfectly!

Right now, the cars are fully constructed with wood sides, and the engine and most of the rest of the float is heavy construction wire. There is foam overlay on the lower portions. After an unexpected incident while applying the flowers last year, the engines and all the "works" will be covered in plastic to be sure no hot glue drips down on them.

Some of the dried flowers and other nonfresh items are already in the house. Donna showed me a big box of bright yellow straw flowers which will need to have their stems clipped off and ground down before they can be applied. The engine will be covered in Ti leaves, which are long, flat green leaves. The first shipment of fresh flowers arrives the day after Christmas.

As you already know, our float is always an all volunteer project. Dave and LaDonna drive in from Hawthorne every weekend and some week days to work on this project, which is so dear to their hearts and they've been doing this for more years than they want to admit. Same with Donna Sutcliffe, whose husband, Doug, was right there with her for so many years until he passed away. Donna, as always, is in charge of our princesses, who were crowned recently at The Lodge, Sierra Madre's historic meeting and banquet hall, which was built in 1927, just in case you wanted to know! And she is delighted with these young ladies who will be riding on our float New Year's Day, representing our city.

Barbie Bevington is serving as Interim Rose Float Association President until December when a new president will be elected. Barbie has been working with our Rose Float Association longer than anyone else in the current group of Association members. She was there when the floats really were constructed in an old barn. I bet she's got some great stories!

The new t-shirts are available now at the barn for $15.00 and they are really nice. The "I Think I Can" engine is on the back. Post cards are available, as are pins. You could be wearing the shirt today! One more thing, donations are a real necessity and volunteers will be welcomed with open arms when it's time to decorate the float with flowers. Just one more wonderful thing about Sierra Madre!

If you like Walking Sierra Madre, you oughta take a look at my book!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

NAVAL SPECIAL WARFARE COMMAND'S ADMONISHMENT "SHAMEFUL & DISRESPECTFUL"

As a Navy Veteran that served for over nine years on two warships and deployed to operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, I proudly admit that I am that veteran. You know the one, the guy that tears up every time he hears our National Anthem. I'm the veteran that thinks military march music is the most inspirational music ever written. The one that cringes every time I see our "Stars and Stripes" displayed improperly (as a side not SM residents, we all could use a refresher on flag etiquette please visit http://www.usflag. org/flagetiquette.html). I am as patriotic as you can find and would have easily given my life, on the orders of others, if asked while in the service of my country.

I have always been relatively quiet about my service and the classified information I was charged with. For three years of my service in the US Navy I served in the intelligence office for the Pacific Fleet Commander. This person is the highest ranking military commander in the Pacific Command. He is overall responsible for all service members (Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, and Coast Guard) that serve anywhere the Pacific Ocean touches. It was my duty to provide daily intelligence briefings and ship/force movements to the Admiral and his staff officers. In my position I was privvy to the intimate details of every single military action of the United States and our Allies as well as any information regarding opposition forces obtained through a myriad of methods. At no time ever, had I even considered leaking any sensitive information. So when I first learned that there were Special Operations veterans willing to sell their stories I was obviously outraged. As I see it, your service doesn't end just because you no longer wear the uniform. That was until Admiral Losey, the Navy's top commander for Special Operations wrote an open letter to former operatives reminding them to keep quiet. To Admiral Losey and the rest of our military leaders who are willing to speak up about the breaches of military conduct I ask one question, why are you all woefully silent on the issue of care for our veterans? As many as 131,000 veterans are homeless in this country on any given night in this country (nationalhomeless.org). One out of every three homeless men at one point in their lives proudly wore a uniform of our armed services. Military veterans comprise 34% of the male population and 40% of the male homeless population. These men are not societal pariahs, considering that: 89% received Honorable Discharges 69% served 3 years or more 33% served in warzones

In other words, most of these men were the bravest of the brave.

Also consider that approximately 1.5 million veterans are at risk of being homeless (amercianprogress.org), or the fact that 30% of our veterans between the ages of 18-24 are unemployed or the 1.2 million veterans that have had to seek mental health services for service related disabilities last year, and it is clear to me that military leaders are failing to care for their own. In addition to being left to die after service, our veterans are being failed by our local, state, and federal governments. We live in a different world these days. So many citizens care more about their individual rights than they do about our collective responsibitilies. Too many elected officials seem to be more concerned with proving their intellectual superiority than working tirelessly on behalf of every citizen. Not just their supporters. It's no surprise to me that our veterans are treated with such disregard as this is the same treatment that is evident in the way we treat each other. As a whole, this country has lost its sense of civic responsibility and we are all suffering as a result...especially our veterans.

This Veterans Day, I challenge each of you to take a moment from your hectic lives to think of ways to help our forgotten heroes. I'm not asking for people to (cont. on pg. 7)NAVY

ROSEMEAD, CA. - November 3, 2014 - Don Bosco Technical Institute (Bosco Tech) will host its annual Fall Open House on Sunday, November 23, 2014, from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

Prospective students and their families are invited to tour the school's extensive applied-science and engineering labs and participate in hands-on technology, science, and engineering workshops.

"The popular interactive workshops provide young people visiting the campus the chance to 'try out' what Bosco Tech students actually do," said Bosco Tech Principal Xavier Jimenez. "Each of our technology programs, as well as our fine arts and science programs, will offer interesting samples of our experiential learning curriculum. We encourage elementary and middle school students to sit in and see what Bosco Tech offers." Seating for the 30-minute workshops is limited and reservations are encouraged.

Also during the Open House, the school's many extracurricular clubs and nine CIF athletic teams will provide information, while the award-winning Royal Techmen marching band will entertain the visiting crowds. THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show

NIGHTCRAWLER REVIEW

When a new thriller comes out, it always tries to redefine the genre. Most fall flat and follow the usual cookie cutter pattern. However, after seeing the first trailer for 'Nightcrawler', it looked different enough that it caught my interest, yet I was not sure if it would be revolutionary. Louis Bloom (Jake Gyllenhaal) has no idea what he's going to do with his life. He's hardworking, dedicated, and always does what it takes to get the job done. However, he cannot determine what job that is. All the changes one night when he happens upon a car accident on the freeway and the freelance cameramen documenting this. Once he sees all of this, his entire life is focused on one thing: making it big in the business of 'Nightcrawler' is that rare, low budget, action thriller that happens to have both an refreshingly original story and absolutely stunning visuals. All this is fueled by an excellent directing job from first time director Dan Gilroy and a revolutionary performance from Jake Gyllenhaal. 'Nightcrawler' will leave you shocked and with plenty to talk about when you leave the theater.

MR. MANNERS

Must admit with all the past election non-sense and trivial trivia, I almost missed out on National Nachos Day and National Cappuccino Day, and what type of foodie would I be, but fear not friends, I did partake in a Margarita and a plate of Nachos. I have to take my Andy Rooney Card out again and give you my fellow diners the rules of Etiquette 101. I love my daughter, and some of my friends

I am asked frequently asked about etiquette and table manners, so I compiled this simple list based on the most common questions.

Your napkin goes in your lap, folded in half, as soon as you sit down. Many people wait until the food arrives, but the proper form is to be prepared.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

If you leave the table, place the napkin to the left of your plate, loosely draped.

A napkin is never for blowing your noise or wiping your mouth. Use it to dab at the corners of your mouth or your fingertips. If you need to cleanse further, leave the table and use the appropriate products in the restroom.

In formal dining, a charger will be under the place setting. It remains there during the starter course and is removed at the main course.

Your eating utensils go in the order of use, starting from the outside (furthest from the plate) and working their way in. Forks go on the left; knives and spoons on the right, as you face the plate. Dessert utensils are placed at the top of the plate, sideways.

The bread and butter plate goes to the left, above the forks.

The water glass goes above the knives (behind the wine goblet, if there is one).

Food should be passed counter-clockwise.

It is considered impolite to start eating before everyone is seated and served, including your

Only the meal settings and food belong on the table. Do not place your elbows, eyeglasses, notebook, pen or other objects on the table.

Cut no more than two bites of any item at a time. When it comes to bread, tear off one bite at a time and butter it, rather than buttering a whole roll.

Do not season your food until you have tasted it.

It is permissible to use a piece of bread to wipe up excess gravy, as long as you use your fork and not your fingers.

If you need to leave the table, place your utensils on the edge of your plate so that the tips point to the plate's center, in a V-shape. To signal when you are finished, lay your utensils side by side diagonally on the plate.

begrudgingly toss change out of your car window as you pass these veterans on standing in the intersection panhandling trying your best not to make eye contact with them as if you believe homelessness is an airborne disease you might catch. Nor do I want you to hand out those perfunctory "thank you for your service" comments which is oftentimes delivered with little to no sincerity. I am asking each of you to spend some time educating yourself about the plight of our veterans. Please don't be a silent observer, do your best to support elected officials with a documented and well-known track record of fighting for our veterans. Give our veterans the blind support that they gave to you and your family when they voluntarily stepped up to defend our nation.

Even though I can no longer begrudge a forgatten veteran that has decided to sell their exciting.

Even though I can no longer begrudge a forgotten veteran that has decided to sell their exciting stories in an effort to secure a better financial existence for their families, I will still never share what I know. ## JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

PRESERVATION SOCIETY HOSTS A TOUR OF ADAMS' PACK STATION

As most Sierra Madre locals already know, Adams' Pack Station, located in the Chantry Flat Recreation Area at the top of Santa Anita Boulevard in Big Santa Anita Canyon is a rare and amazing historical landmark. Too many people who live in our small burg still have yet to pay a visit to this beautiful hidden-away place, so for those who haven't seen it, now is your chance to take a peek and learn about a real-life working pack station, considered the only one of it's kind in the United States.

On Sunday, November 16th from 2:00-5:00pm, the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society (SMHPS) will be hosting a tour of the pack station and all are invited to attend, so you'll want to make your reservations right away. To reserve your spot, call Leslie Ziff at 626-321-7735 or e-mail her at HYPERLINK "mailto:lbziff@ roadrunner.com" lbziff@roadrunner.com.

In case you have no idea what the pack station is all about, here is a bit of history to pique your interest and help fill you in on this wonderful and rare treasure of Sierra Madre. Many thanks and full credit are given to the good folks at SMHPS and to Deb Burgess at Adams' Pack Station for sharing this information.

Adams' Pack Station was built in 1936, as a base of operations for hauling freight up the mountain by use of pack animals, mainly donkeys. Although the station is within the boundaries of Angeles National Forest, its roots are firmly implanted in the Village of Sierra Madre. At the height of "The Great Hiking Era" (roughly 1900 - 1935) many hostels and cabins dotted the Big and Little Santa Anita Canyons. The materials and supplies for these were packed into the mountains by teams of donkeys based in Sierra Madre. Notable examples of pack stations from which these operations emanated were the Mount Wilson Stables, near Lizzie's Trail Inn, and Corum's Pack Station to the east.

Before the existing depression-era road was built into Big Santa Anita Canyon, the main trail began near Corum's, at the top of Sturtevant Drive. The initial plan was to build a road from Sierra Madre, following the old Newcomb Trail, whence it would meet the Angeles Crest Highway at Newcomb's Ranch. The cabin owners in Big SAC and preservationists halted this intrusive plan. When the road to its edited terminus at Chantry Flat was completed in 1936, a Los Angeles building contractor and entrepreneur named James P. Steele set out to capitalize on modern access to the heart of The Canyon.

Steele, who owned First Water Camp, 600 ft below Chantry Flat, obtained a special use permit in late 1936 for a pack station, store and parking lot at Chantry. He built a two-story house roughly located where the public flushtoilet facility sits today. The barn he built still stands virtually unchanged. Steele also built a 2-room bunkhouse (now the backbone of today's pack station home/store) at the southern-most end of the flat. Packing operations went well for a year until the great flood of March 1938.

The Chantry Flat compound sat well above and away from any high water threats, but the Steeles' private cabin, no. 23, and the main lodge/ dining room of the camp was washed away. This loss, along with the loss of 68 cabins and extensive trail damage, convinced the Steeles that the future was not long for the canyon, at least not in a lucrative sense. They moved the house to Monrovia, parceled out the remaining cabins of the resort, and sold the pack animals. All that was needed now was a buyer for the pack

A young man named Frank Adams, who worked nights at the Supreme Dairy and sometimes helped out at Santa Anita Racetrack with his brother, Bill, was familiar with the managers of Orchard Camp in Little Santa Anita Canyon, Wayne Buck and a girl named May. Word was out that the Steeles wanted to sell and Wayne talked Frank into buying the pack station in the fall of '38 with the promise that he and May would run it for him during the day. Things were up and running when, just a few months into the venture, Wayne left town for good so Frank employed the help of his brother Bill and his sister, Katie. In spite of ever increasing business, Frank lost interest and sold the business to Bill. In 1984, following a series of events, the Adams' sold the pack station to Bill's nephew, Dennis Lonergan and his wife, Jody. After fifteen years of ownership, the Lonergans sold the pack station to Kim Clymer-Kelley, a recent divorcee and mother of three teenaged boys. Though the Kelleys survived five difficult years while hurtling obstacles of regulation and Mother Nature, the cabin owners, the Forest Service, and Ms. Kelley all agreed that a new pack station owner was what The Canyon needed.

Today the pack station is now known as Adams' Pack Station, named in honor of Bill and Lila Adams, and is owned by the energetic Deb Burgess. She not only respects the history of the pack station at Chantry Flat, she is determined to keep alive the lone survivor of a by-gone era. The donkeys regularly pack in supplies to the remaining privately owned cabins and Sturtevant Camp, the last mountain resort, and pack out garbage. Adams' Pack Station has also become a destination spot, showcasing local musicians. The mountain resorts of the "Great Hiking Era" often featured live music, and those of Big Santa Anita Canyon attracted partygoers who would hike miles from the trailhead in Sierra Madre to fill the dance halls. This tradition is now being relived in summer months.

SIERRA MADRE HISTORICAL LOOKING FOR A BEST FRIEND??

Looking For A Best Friend??

So is Claudia! Claudia is estimated to be 3 1/2 years old, and is a 12 pound Chihuahua mix. She is really more "generic dog" than Chihuahua, so "mix" is a closer description of her breed. She is a beautiful white dog with short fur that doesn't require a lot of care.

Claudia has a friendly, happy personality, and loves people. She will greet you with a joyful bark and smile when you walk by her kennel, asking to be taken out for a walk or some play time.

Claudia does love going for walks. She has a lot of happy energy and enjoys running with her partner. She also looks forward to getting some treats and attention after she has burnt off some of that energy. Claudia has an observant, inquisitive nature and doesn't want to miss out on any activities going on nearby.

Claudia gets along well with her kennel mate and seems to like the other dogs she has met at the shelter. She would love to be part of an active family who can give her the love, attention and exercise she needs. She would do best with a yard with space for her to run and play, as well as daily walks with her family. Come in to meet our sweet Claudia to see if your home is the right one for her.

She currently resides at the San Gabriel Valley Humane Society located at 851 E. Grand Avenue in San Gabriel with her roommate. We are and south of Las Tunas.

To arrange a 'Meet and Greet' with Claudia, please stop by any time from 10:00am to 4:30pm

Tuesday thru Sunday. We are closed on Mondays. Her adoption fee is $120 which includes a microchip, spay surgery, first vaccinations and a free wellness check-up at a participating veterinarian. Feel free to call us at (626) 286-1159 for more information on Claudia.

THE JOY OF YOGA DON'T MISS SAVASANA!

can say that long Savasana at the beginning very of class! When do I ever get a chance to rest and lay completely still? Unless I'm sleeping, almost never. Savasana, or corpse pose, is almost always the final pose of a group yoga class. It's one of the most important poses we can do.

If Savasana is not part of the class you attend, find a different class! The benefits of it are immense. It's where we absorb and assimilate all the benefits of the practice. It's incredibly refreshing and soothing to the body and mind to rest completely without effort. All the great benefits seep in: peace, calm, acceptance and confidence.

In this all important pose, we lay down on our backs and allow the legs to stretch out. Our arms stay along our sides with the palms facing up.We let go of any effort with the breath and keep our eyes closed. As we feel the support of the floor beneath us, we relax any remaining areas where we might be "holding."

If we need extra comfort in Savasana, place a bolster underneath the knees to assist with lower back pain or a thin blanket under the head. We need to make sure we're warm enough too.

Savasana can be particularly hard to complete in our home practice. We might feel there's not time to just lay down and do nothing. Set a timer, if even just for 3 minutes, so you don't have to worry about the time. This easy pose is so essential; it's like hitting the reset button on the body and mind. Refreshed, calm, and ready to do the day.

See you in class,

Keely Totten Yoga Madre

CALIFORNIA CITY BECOMES FIRST IN THE NATION TO PASS SUGARY DRINK TAX MEASURE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5, 2014 - California made history yesterday - continuing its role as a public health leader. From clean indoor air to happy meal incentive ordinances, California has led the way. The voters of Berkeley delivered a big win for not only the health of their children, but children across the country by demonstrating that cities have the power to initiate positive change.

"We commend Berkeley for rejecting the false arguments of 'Big Soda' and standing up for what is right for their community," said Alistair Phillips, MD, Board Member of the American Heart Association Los Angeles Division and Co-Director of the Congenital Heart Program at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. "Families declared no to nutritionally void products and proclaimed yes to a heart healthier generation of kids."

Evidence shows adults should not consume more than 36 ounces, or 450 calories, each week yet the average 8-year-old boy consumes eight servings, or 64 ounces, each week. These statistics are even higher for our children of color and those who live in communities with limited access to healthy food and beverages.

The American Heart Association is proud to stand with the residents of Berkeley as they become the first city in our nation to deliver a victory against big soda. Berkeley's Measure D raised more than $325,000 in cash - including $23,000 from the American Heart Association and nearly $412,000 in in-kind contributions. In all, the beverage industry spent about $10 million to defeat Measure D and Proposition E in San

"The American Heart Association is proud of Berkeley's game-changing passage of Measure D and thank the more than 50% of San Francisco voters who cast a "yes" vote for children's health," said Kathy Rogers, Executive Vice President of the American Heart Association Western States Affiliate. "Multiple solutions are needed to address the obesity epidemic and this is a first step in our efforts to build healthier environments and reduce poor health outcomes especially within our at-risk variety of winter squash. However, winter squash is grown in the summer and harvested in the fall so how come it is called winter squash? That's because winter squashes have a hard thick skin making them ideal to be stored for several months and eaten during the winter season. Butternut squash, called butternut pumpkin in Australia, is a great vegetable to add to your diet this time of year because it is in season. If it's in season then it's going to be fresher, tastier and less expensive than any other times of the year. Butternut squash is full of potassium and vitamin A. It is also fat free, low in calories and high in fiber. A big push in my practice is to get my clients eating more plant foods like butternut squash because vegetables are associated with decreasing the risk of obesity, diabetes, heart disease and Butternut squash is a overall mortality. You get all of those benefits from increasing your intake of high fiber vegetables plus a healthy complexion, increased energy, and overall lower weight.

Butternut squash has a naturally sweet, nutty taste but as it ripens, it increasingly turns a deeper orange and becomes sweeter and richer. It provides significant amounts of potassium, important for bone health. It is also high in vitamin B6, essential for the proper function of both the nervous and immune systems.

Hopefully you have heard that you should eat a rainbow of colorful foods. That is because there are benefits to all the different colors. In the case of butternut squash, its orange color provides an abundance of the powerhouse nutrients known as carotenoids, shown to protect against heart disease. In particular, it has high levels of beta-carotene, which your body automatically converts to vitamin A. The vitamin A derived from butternut squash helps to produce sebum which helps keep your hair

So if you have never bought a butternut squash you are missing out. Try it baked, roasted or mashed with cinnamon, maple syrup or balsamic vinegar ...it's all good!

FROM CHEESE TO CHANGE by Amanda Rogers

Mmm...Velveeta cheese. The color, texture, taste – the packaging! It was like finely aged Camembert to my six year old taste buds. Today, you couldn't pay me enough money to ingest that neon block of rubbery cheese food. So what happened? Did my taste buds develop? Mature? Or could it be that they simply...changed?

What is change? If my pallet can change, does that mean the rest of me is capable of change? You know, the other parts...the quirks, the neuroses, the way I deal with random Lego pieces left all over the living room rug. No doubt we've all been motivated a time or two or twenty by an enlightening book, or inspiring sermon or maybe our child's Karate Master with the soulful eyes. But what happens to that inspiration? Does it ever last? Or are we simply inspired for a brief period of time to "slip into" or "try on" a newer, fresher attitude, quality or philosophy? At the end of the day, like the designer clothes we package ourselves in, do these new skins fall to the ground as we climb back into our comfy, old, not always redeeming but certainly familiar, flannels?

For those who can pull off the transformation, how long do they have to wear this new skin before we are convinced of their metamorphosis? Does the celebrity at the center of the newest scandal need to spend the next month, year or decade living a life of integrity (enjoying French cheese, if you will) before the public is satisfied that he or she has changed? At what point will we stop digging through his or her trash in search of empty boxes of Velveeta?

Can people's morals, behaviors, fundamental natures change like their sense of taste? Whose demonstration of change can we really trust? I believe the answer is...our own. The only way to trust that people can make profound and lasting changes is to start with ourselves. In my own life I have set forth on a mission to change a quality that does not serve me. A tweak, if you will, on the original design. Nothing too enormous but the change could have enormous positive results. Give it a try. We should all take a lesson from our taste buds... some things just don't taste so good

THE GOOD LIFE

HOW SENIORS CAN QUIT SMOKING WITH THE HELP OF MEDICARE AND OTHER

Dear Savvy Senior:

Can Medicare help me quit smoking? I just turned 65, and would like to quit but need some help. Coughing Connie

Dear Connie:

TOOLS

Yes, Medicare actually covers up to eight face-to-face counseling sessions a year to help beneficiaries quit smoking. And, if you have a Medicare Part D prescription drug plan, certain smoking-cessation medications are covered too. Here are some other tips that can help you kick the habit.

Of the 46 million Americans who smoke, about 5.5 million are Medicare beneficiaries. According to the Center of Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), about 50 percent of smokers, age 65 and older, indicate they would like to completely quit, but because of the nicotine, which is considered to be more addictive than heroin, it's very difficult to do.

Tobacco use is the leading cause of preventable illness, responsible for an estimated one-fifth of deaths in the United States each year.

But research shows that quitting, even after age 65, greatly reduces your risk of heart disease, stroke, cancer, osteoporosis and many other diseases. It also helps you breathe easier, smell and taste food better, not to mention saves you quite a bit of money. A $5 pack-a-day smoker, for example, saves about $150 after one month without cigarettes, and more than $1,800 after one year.

The first step you need to take is to set a "quit date," but give yourself a few weeks to get ready. During that time you may want to start by reducing the number or the strength of cigarettes you smoke to begin weaning yourself. Also check out over-the-counter nicotine replacement products - patches, gum and lozenges - to help curb your cravings. And just prior to your quit day get rid of all cigarettes and ashtrays in your home, car, and place of work, and try to clean up and even spray air freshener. The smell of smoke can be a powerful trigger.

Studies have shown that you have a much better chance of quitting if you have help. So tell your friends, family, and coworkers of your plan to quit. Others knowing can be a helpful reminder and Then get some counseling. Don't go it alone. Start by contacting your doctor about smoking cessation counseling covered by Medicare, and find out about the prescription antismoking drugs that can help reduce your nicotine craving.

You can also get free one-on-one telephone counseling and referrals to local smoking cessation programs through your state quit line at 800-QUIT-NOW, or call the National Cancer Institute free smoking quit line at 877-44U-QUIT.

It's also important to identify and write down the times and situations you're most likely to smoke and make a list of things you can do to replace it or distract yourself. Some helpful suggestions when the smoking urge arises are to call a friend or one of the free quit lines, keep your mouth occupied with some sugar-free gum, sunflower seeds, carrots, fruit or hard candy, go for a walk, read a magazine, listen to music or take a hot bath. The intense urge to smoke lasts about three to five minutes, so do what you can to wait it out. It's also wise to avoid drinking alcohol and steer clear of other smokers while you're trying to quit. Both can trigger powerful urges to smoke.

For more tips on how to quit, including managing your cravings, withdrawal symptoms and what to do if you relapse, visit smokefree.gov and nihseniorhealth.gov/quittingsmoking. If you're a smartphone user, there are also a number of apps that can help like LIVESTRONG MyQuit Coach, Cessation Nation and Quit It Lite.

KATIE Tse.....This and That GOD IS IN THE DETAILS

the work you do? Maybe you feel as if your occupation is insignificant in the grand scheme of things. Or maybe you don't even get "paid" for your work staying home to raise children or caring for an ailing loved one. Our work can seem especially tedious if we complete the same task, day after day, while the movers and shakers ascend their corporate ladders in leaps and bounds. Not seeing tangible evidence of our efforts can also be discouraging. When we feel like this, it's comforting to remember that our toiling is very important to someone who is truly "high up" --God!

I was reminded of this while reading the third chapter of the book of Nehemiah. Nehemiah is one of those books with repetitive lists that seem to have little or no application for our lives as believers in the present day. In this particular chapter, Nehemiah records the different people who helped rebuild the wall surrounding Jerusalem after the Jews returned from the Babylonian captivity. He notes that "Shallun the son of Col-Hozeh, leader of the district of Mispah, repaired the Fountain Gate" (3:15). A few verses later we learn that "The Levites, under Rehum the son of Bani, made repairs" (3:17). You get the picture, not exciting stuff.

However, tucked away among the many

Have you ever wondered if people who helped in rebuilding, Nehemiah anyone knows, or cares, about records for us that "Baruch the son of Zabai carefully repaired the other section" (3:20). Name after name, structure after structure, suddenly interrupted with a comment about a particular worker doing his repairs carefully! I'm no authority on Biblical studies, but this special note about the care Baruch put into his repairs encouraged me.

Even when everyone else might not notice the effort we put into our job, nothing escapes God's attention. This is comforting, but also convicting. The same God who notices and cares about our best efforts in completing small tasks also sees when we cut corners or rationalize putting forth less than our best at work. As Christians, we must not only strive to witness for Jesus by doing our best wherever He has placed us, but we must also remember that He sees past our outward performance into the motives behind our actions, whether they are pure or self serving.

But what a blessing it is to know that we don't have to rely on our fickle work ethics, we have the empowerment of His Holy Spirit to accomplish the "good works He prepared beforehand, that we should walk in them" (Ephesians 2:10). Whether those good works are as a CEO or a housewife, they are equally important in God's eyes. Good thoughts to remember as we get up for work on Monday!

FOR YOUR FUNNY BONE - A 45 year old woman had a heart attack and was taken to the hospital. While on the operating table she had a near death experience. Seeing God, she asked, "Is my time up?" God said, "No, you have another 43 years 2 months and 8 days to live." Upon recovery, the woman decided to stay in the hospital and have a face-lift, liposuction, breast implants and a tummy tuck. She even had someone come in and change her hair color and brighten her teeth! Since she had so much time to live, she figured she might as well make the most of it. After her last operation, she was released from the hospital. While crossing the street on her way home, she was killed by an ambulance. Arriving in front of God, she demanded, "I thought you said I had another 43 years? Why didn't you pull me out of the path of the ambulance?" God replied, "I didn't recognize

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:CLAP YOUR HANDS SAY YEAH

By Sean Kayden

"Only Run" is the fourth studio album from experimental pop aficionados, Clap Your Hands Say Yeah.

A lot has occurred in the interim since 2011's "Hysterical." The band went from a quintet to a solo endeavor leaving Alec Ounsworth as the only creative force behind the band. In 2005, the band released their eponymous album, which was critically acclaimed. However, their subsequent albums all have digressed in critical praise. This particular record seems like a rebirth or grasping onto new life. "Only Run" is more in comparison with "Hysterical" than the other two records. A reliance on synthesizers is apparent, which makes sense since three band members departed. The National's Matt Berninger is featured on "Coming Down," which reminds me a lot of that band. Not so much with the vocals, but with how songs are structured. If anything, 2000s indie rock act Wolf Parade first comes to mind when listening to "Only Run." However, the album feels organic and imaginative. It's not a completely accessible pop type of record to become immersed into all the time. Nonetheless, there's a unique quality about it.

Ournsworth's crackling voice still fuels this very record. His sense of optimism has been restored despite circumstances that have developed in the past few years. "Only Run" is reflective and harrowing at times. In some cases, I was disconnected with certain tunes such as title track "Only Run" and "Your Advice." While neither song is egregious by any means, I never seemed to fully become attached to these tracks. The last minute of "Only Run" really saves it with a beautiful arrangement as Oursnworth hums along to his own creation. "Beyond Illusion" has a hypnotic synth beat paired with Oursnworth typical hiccupping voice. "Impossible Request" digs deep lyrically and really allows for Oursnworth to shine as the lone songwriter. "Little Moments" is beautiful and quite experimental. "As Always" kicks off the album with some really nice sounding guitar, which bursts half way through. It's very U2-ish in that matter, but Clap Your Hands Say Yeah never feel as if they are imitating anyone else.

"Only Run" was a difficult album to identify. It's part art-pop, part snyth-pop, and part experimental. Ournsworth's distinctive vocals really separate the band from the crowd. While CYHSY may never be a full band again or conquer the likes of their first standout record, time will only tell what Ournsworth takes his project. "Only Run" comes out during the band's 10th year anniversary. The journey leading up to 'Only Run" is imprinted on this record. For the individual listener at hand, "Only Run" stands as an album looking back at the last ten years and what the next ten years may bring. It echoes the sentiment of thinking back at moments that feel like another lifetime, but really make up for the life you're currently living and one you will continue to live. "Only Run" may not be the answer or lead you to where you want to be, but it could pose the questions in helping one to figure out where to begin.

Grade: 7.0 out of 10 Key Tracks: "As Always," "Coming Down," "Beyond Illusion," "Impossible Request"

THE INNOVATORS: HOW A GROUP OF HACKERS, GENIUSES, AND GEEKS CREATED THE DIGITAL REVOLUTION by Walter Isaacson

Following his blockbuster biography of Steve Jobs, The Innovators is Walter Isaacson's revealing story of the people who created the computer and the Internet. It is destined to be the standard history of the digital revolution and an indispensable guide to how innovation really happens. What were the talents that allowed certain inventors and entrepreneurs to turn their visionary ideas into disruptive realities? What led to their creative leaps? Why did some succeed and others fail? In his masterly saga, Isaacson begins with Ada Lovelace, Lord Byron's daughter, who pioneered computer programming in the 1840s. He explores the fascinating personalities that created our current digital revolution, such as Vannevar Bush, Alan Turing, John von Neumann, J.C.R. Licklider, Doug Engelbart, Robert Noyce, Bill Gates, Steve Wozniak, Steve Jobs, Tim Berners-Lee, and Larry Page. This is the story of how their minds worked and what made them so inventive. It's also a narrative of how their ability to collaborate and master the art of teamwork made them even more creative. For an era that seeks to foster innovation, creativity, and teamwork, The Innovators shows how they happen.

WINGED OBSESSION: THE PURSUIT OF THE WORLD'S MOST NOTORIOUS BUTTERFLY SMUGGLER by Jessica Speart

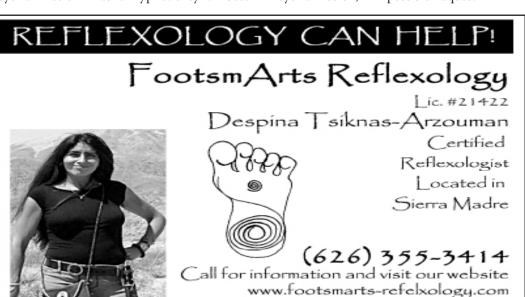

One of the world's most beautiful endangered species, butterflies are as lucrative as gorillas, pandas, and rhinos on the black market. In this cutthroat $200 million business, no one was more successful or posed a greater ecological danger than Yoshi Kojima, the kingpin of butterfly smugglers. In Winged Obsession, author Jessica Speart tells the riveting true story of rookie U.S. Fish and Wildlife Agent Ed Newcomer's determined crusade to halt the career of a brazen and ingenious criminal with an almost supernatural sixth sense for survival. But the story doesn't end there. Speart chronicles her own attempts, while researching the book, to befriend Kojima before betraying him unaware that the cagey smuggler had his own plans to make the writer a player in his illegal butterfly trade.

THE WARMTH OF OTHER SUNS: THE EPIC STORY OF AMERICA'S GREAT MIGRATION by Isabel Wilkerson

In this epic, beautifully written masterwork, Pulitzer Prize winning author Isabel Wilkerson chronicles one of the great untold stories of American history: the decades-long migration of black citizens who fled the South for northern and western cities, in search of a better life. From 1915 to 1970, this exodus of almost six million people changed the face of America. Wilkerson compares this epic migration to the migrations of other peoples in history. She interviewed more than a thousand people, and gained access to new data and official records, to write this definitive and vividly dramatic account of how these American journeys unfolded, altering our cities, our country, and ourselves. #### THE EPHEMERAL NOW

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

By the time you read this essay, 4000 Miles will have closed after a critically successful sevenweek run at the Playhouse. Closing a show is always bittersweet. It is sad to say goodbye to the world that was created and the family that a group of actors became over the three months of rehearsals and performances, but it is exciting too. The closing of one show means that a new show will soon open and a new world will live on our stage. In three weeks we will be opening A Little House Christmas based on the Little House on the Prairie books by Laura Ingalls Wilder and adapted for the stage by James DeVita and I'm so happy to be sharing this wonderful holiday play with our friends and patrons.

I've thought a lot about what makes theater so special to me – why I continue to pursue it after all these years. I have talked a little about my motivations in previous essays, but what I don't think I've ever articulated is the impact that the ephemeral nature of theater has on me and I hope on you. A play, a performance only exists in the immediate now – and will never exist in quite that way again. The group of actors who created the world of 4000 Miles could conceivably reunite to do another production but it would NEVER be this production. Each play (and indeed each performance when you consider the influence an audience has on a show) is the sum of many contributions and those exact circumstances will never align again. That is the distinction between theater and film or television. Once something is captured on film (or digitally these days) it will always exist in exactly the same way in countless viewings. But were you to see every performance of a play in its run, you would never have exactly the same experience in the theater. Every night would be different based on the influence of the audience and the reactions of the actors. I don't think audiences appreciate how much a part of the performance they are. It really is a dance over the "footlights" – plays don't happen on stage and don't happen in the audience, but at the intersection of the two. It is that elusive combustion, ephemeral as it is, which makes theater exciting.

There has been a lot of dialogue lately about the state of theater in Los Angeles. It is so often overlooked and underappreciated, and there are constant wails over how theater is dying. But the magic of that combustion, the ephemeral now, is what I think will keep theater alive. If you haven't experienced that, I invite you to see a show at the Playhouse. Once you feel that magic you will be seduced. A Little House Christmas opens the day after Thanksgiving, November 28. I hope we'll see you in the audience.

SEPTEMBER WATER USE CONTINUES TO DECREASE

Foothill Municipal Water District would like to thank residents in its service area for their conservation efforts and urges to continue reducing demands on potable water. Demands for September continue to drop in comparison to the same period in 2013 with a 12% reduction. This follows the trend in conservation that the District has experienced since the State implemented mandatory conservation measures.

FMWD Board President Richard Atwater stated, "This savings of over 70 million gallons shows the effort our residents have made to conserve water even with the above-normal temperatures that we have experienced. The savings in one month is enough for about 300 homes in our service area for one year."

The past three months of decreases in water use result in a decline of almost 25% in per capita water use since 2006.

FMWD is the imported water provider for seven agencies located in the City of La Cañada Flintridge and the unincorporated communities of La Crescenta and Altadena.

"Although we have not had an allocation this year, we anticipate a water allocation from our supplier, the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, if conditions do not improve. This would trigger cutbacks of water deliveries to Foothill's retail agencies," said General Manager Nina Jazmadarian. "To make this allocation easier, we offer rebates through Metropolitan, a wide range of incentives for reducing water use in and around the home. These devices make water savings permanent and help maintain and increase our long-term trend in conservation."

For a list of all water-saving rebates offered, please visit www.socalwatersmart.com or www. fmwd.com/conservation.aspx. Residents and businesses must register and prequalify for rebates prior to starting any work.

Foothill Municipal Water District provides imported water to Crescenta Valley Water District, La Cañada Irrigation District, Mesa Crest Water Company, Valley Water Company, Lincoln Avenue Water Company, Las Flores Water Company and Rubio Cañon Land & Water Association. Kinneloa Irrigation District, another retail agency, takes no water from Foothill.

FAREWELL 'SITE J'; HELLO 'AGILKIA'

The site where Rosetta's Philae lander is scheduled to touch down on Comet 67P/Churyumov-Gerasimenko November 12 now has a name: Aoilkia

The landing site, previously known as "Site J," is named for Agilkia Island on the Nile River in the south of Egypt. A complex of Ancient Egyptian buildings, including the famous Temple of Isis, was moved to Agilkia from the island of Philae when the latter was flooded during the building of the Aswan dams last century.

The name was selected by a jury comprising members of the Philae Lander Steering Committee as part of a public competition run October 16–22 by ESA and the German, French and Italian space

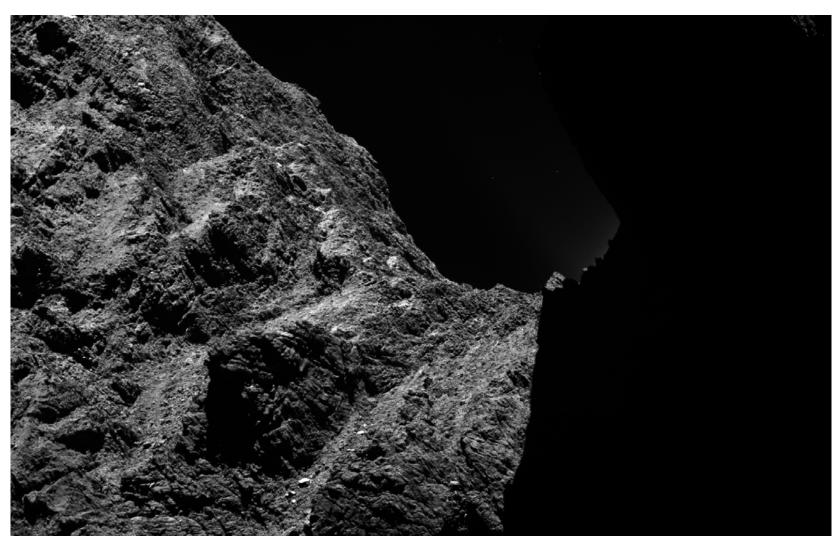

Agilkia was one of the most popular entries, proposed by over 150 participants. Although perhaps not quite as complicated as navigating Rosetta and Philae towards the comet, the task of choosing a name was by no means simple. More than 8,000 entries from 135 countries were received in one week, showing great creativity and cultural diversity.

Participants proposed names in a variety of languages, both ancient and modern; some were even in Esperanto. There were also some interesting acronyms, curious sequences of digits, and onomatopoeic words.

The entries covered a tremendous range of themes, from abstract concepts to the names of places on Earth. As with the winning entry, many suggestions echoed the Egyptian origins of Rosetta and Philae, named in recognition of milestones in decoding hieroglyphics, the sacred writing system of ancient Egypt.

Many names dated back to the history of our planet's exploration, as those journeys into the unknown are the natural forebears of Rosetta and Philae. Mythological names from all over the globe were also proposed, including gods and goddesses of water, fertility, life and creation, relating closely to the fundamental themes investigated by the mission.

Other names were drawn from ancient history and prehistory, while others recalled milestones in the history of science, particularly the history of our understanding of comets.

The progress of the Space Age was also honored by many entries. There were many references to science fiction, celebrating the work of Jules Verne, Arthur C. Clarke and Douglas Adams, among others.

And, of course, there was no shortage of more humorous entries, many referring to the resemblance of the comet's nucleus to a rubber duck, a potato or even the cartoon dog, Snoopy.

But the final choice was Agilkia, which is how the landing site on the comet will be referred to by ESA and its mission partners.

"And it couldn't be a more appropriate name," comments Fred Jansen, ESA Rosetta mission manager. "The relocation of the temples of Philae Island to Agilkia Island was an ambitious technical endeavor performed in the 1960s and 1970s to preserve an archaeological record of our ancient history.

"In eight days' time, Philae will be deployed from the orbiter onto Agilkia. On 12 November, we'll be attempting a unique comet landing, an even more ambitious endeavor to unlock secrets of our most remote origins."

Rosetta will release Philae at 08:35 GMT/09:35 CET on November 12 at a distance of 22.5 km from the center of the comet, with a scheduled landing about seven hours later at Agilkia.

WHY GO TO THE MOUNTAINS? By Christopher Nyerges

In his classic book, "The One Straw Revolution" (Rodale Press, 1978), Masanobu Fukuoka describes his path that led him to natural farming. When he was young, he had a realization that completely changed his life. It was hard for him to put it into words, but he described it like this: "Humanity know nothing at all. There is no intrinsic value in anything, and every action is a futile, meaningless effort." His experiences in the world seemed to verify this realization.

Years later, after contracting acute pneumonia from what he describes as "an aimless life coupled with fatigue from overwork," he was hospitalized. Upon his release, he experienced great depression and wandered about. He collapsed on a hill overlooking the harbor, and spent the night there. He was awakened by a great heron flapping its wings and crying. His realization came back to him, and the words that came from his mouth were "In this world this is nothing at all." He felt as if he understood nothing.

He returned to his father's farm in the country, and began the path that led to his radical way of farming, letting nature teach him what is best, using no pesticides, doing no tilling, pulling no weeds, and -- remarkably - eventually producing crop yields the equal of conventional farmers.

Why do I go to the forest? I think of Masanobu Fukuoka whenever someone asks me that. Going to the forest isn't an escape from the nothingness of modern urban life, but it does provide a chance to allow one's self to come forth.

One day in late winter, we'd just finished a day of intensive outdoor training in the foothills of the Angeles National Forest. We were now back at our cars, saying our goodbyes, when one woman asked me, "Don't you ever go to the mountains just for fun?" She looked quizzically at me, waiting for an answer to her sincere question. I had to think for a moment.

"Perhaps my difficulty is with the word fun," I finally responded. "To me, fun implies frivolity, diversion, and something not to be taken seriously," I slowly responded. "So I rarely go to the mountains for fun. I enjoy studying nature, learning new things, expanding my ability to see the unseen, and developing new skills. These serious pursuits are my 'fun' since they provide me with a means to stretch my limits, to grow, to seek to find meaning in a world that sometimes seems to have no meaning. So I go to the mountains for my spiritual nourishment." She nodded. I didn't want to seem overly philosophical, so we said our final goodbyes and departed.

Since then, I have considered her question.

People today spend billions of dollars talking to psychologists, and self-improvement seminars, and seeking out various self-appointed "masters" who suggest they know "the way." The reason for this occasionally desperate search for "answers" is that our society has cut us off from raw nature. The result seems to be that we have lost touch with our inherent, but dormant, spiritual faculties.

We live our lives cramped in houses and apartments and freeways in a highly structured organized society. We thus have lost a healing and a grounding that people closer to the earth took for granted.

I am not one who believes that closer contact with nature automatically imparts a greater spiritual wakefulness, more awareness, deeper sense of the meaning of life, etc. Observation demonstrates that people who are lazy, sloppy, wasteful, and unaware in their urban environment will practice those same bad habits when they go to the country or wilderness. Some prophets of the wilderness suggest that if we all went back to the wilderness, the world would be a better place. That's simplistic and silly

The unexplored wilderness that we need to investigate is within our own minds, and in the hills and valleys of the unused portions of our brains. And, in general, two things are required in order to find and to explore that inner wilderness. One is a guide – someone (or something) to point the way. Usually this is a person who has already traveled the path ahead of you. Another requirement is to get away from the patterns and paradigms of man so you can attempt to discover a natural rhythm, and so you can attempt to listen, and to see, and to think, in ways that no one could do for you.

So that's part of what I attempt to do. I go to the hills and valleys and rivers and mountains and deserts of the Angeles National Forest and beyond to find myself, to re-awaken and to revitalize that inner spiritual part which is usually assaulted non-stop in the urban wilderness of man.

Still, for awhile, I couldn't get her question out of my mind. "Don't you ever go to the mountains just for fun?"

I had to think back 45 to 50 years ago when I began my treks to the mountains in earnest. Yes, back then, sometimes I did go just for fun, to pass the time, to avoid boredom, or to exercise. We walked from our home up to the hills, and explored the trails, caves, and old forgotten sites. We could walk a few miles up the street from our home, and then hike on the mountain trails to old cabin sites and ruins of the old resorts right up there in our extended backyard.

At a very early age, I began to think about life's "big questions," and I read books voraciously. I found some answers, but concluded that true answers are personal and can only be found through personal realization. Thus, I set out to find my Self, to awaken that Self within, as my individual quest. In a sense, I had the same realization as Masanobu Fukuoka, except that instead of going to the farm to find answers, I went to the hills.

So why did I find myself dwelling so much on the question posed to me? I suppose it is because I have drifted. In my youth, I knew that all answers were obtainable from within, if you only had the clarity to define your quest, and the patience and concentration to pursue the answers. I knew this from my own personal experience, and from an inner knowing. But, as I became more enmeshed in the adult world of jobs and bills and resumes and rents and mortgages and repairs and insurance and taxes and business ventures and organizations and worldly success and failure and politics and social issues, and on and on – well, what I think happened to me is what happens to nearly everyone, except most people seem barely aware that anything at all has happened. This external "self" slowly becomes the master, and the inner Self is forgotten.

So I go to the mountains to look, in order that I may see. I see, in order that I may remember. I remember, in order that I might Learn. And my goal is to learn one new thing each time I visit the hills. One new thing, whether from my own thinking and observation and memory, or from another person.

And as a result of being born right here at the base of these mountains, these mountains are not only my home and "backyard," but they have been my spiritual training ground. I regard these mountains as sacred since they provide me (and you) with the means to escape the complex artificial order of man, and to find True Self if I work at it.

That is why I go to the mountains.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

HALLOWEEN CANDY LINKED TO BLOWN INHERITANCE ... SOMEWHAT

The longer I am a part of this community, the more I appreciate all it has to offer. Last weekend was my first Halloween in Sierra Madre. My kids are 6 and 4; perfect trick-or-treating age. And let me tell you, they had a blast! I love how Sierra Madre does Halloween. It was an amazing blend of cooperation between government, businesses, and residents. And as a parent, trick or treating in Sierra Madre with my kids gave me the opportunity to watch them enjoy themselves thoroughly, encourage them to be polite and use their manners, and talk to them about the down side of overindulging in candy. All in all, a winwin-win situation!

Speaking with my children about overindulgence got me thinking about my hopes and fears for them when my wife and I pass on our inheritance to them. How did I make that leap? Well, statistics show that most individuals who inherit IRAs completely deplete them within less than two years. My wife and I, and I imagine most of you, would prefer those assets not only benefit our children, but future generations as well. I don't want my kids viewing their inheritance as "found money" to be squandered away and blown. Yet study after study says this is what's most likely to happen.

The good news is, there's an estate planning tool to keep beneficiaries from overindulging and wasting that type of inheritance. A trusteed IRA is like a traditional IRA but with some of the advantages of a trust. They are designed to provide a long-term distribution plan for withdrawals to benefit more than just one generation of beneficiaries. Trusteed İRAs are less expensive than setting up a trust, though generally a bit GarlettLaw.com for more information.

more expensive to administer than a traditional

Trusteed IRAs are a wonderful tool for those who want to control how their IRA assets are distributed after they're gone. With traditional inherited IRAs, the beneficiary has full say over what happens to the IRA assets he or she inherits. And since most elect to completely deplete an inherited IRA, future generations will likely never benefit.

A trusteed IRA allows the original owner to dictate how withdrawals can be made. For example, by allowing only the minimum required distribution that the IRS requires heirs to take every year, you can stretch out your IRA over multiple generations since investments grow taxdeferred (traditional IRA) or tax-free (Roth IRA).

I don't want my kids to be one of the statistics. I hope they respect what my wife and I are leaving them and work to grow those assets so they can pass ARC an inheritance on to their own children. If you feel the same, let's get together and talk.

A CHORE NEXT DOOR

While not a very common problem, if you've got it, it can have a terrible impact on your listing: The Messy Neighbor. If you live next door to a "neglected" property, you might lose up to 20% of your home's market value, particularly with buyers looking for any excuse to reduce their offer.

It's technically not your problem, but ask not for whom the bell tolls. It's well worth your time and effort to resolve this situation amicably. Always be respectful, and don't let your emotions get the best

Unless you believe your neighbor is "unhinged," you should begin with a visit to their home and a positive attitude - no name-calling or fingerpointing. Don't grab everyone on the block and gang up on your neighbor - you'll get better results if you go alone or with one other person.

If you find your messy neighbor is unwilling to take care of their maintenance, it may still be in your best interest to do the work yourself or with the help of other neighbors. No, it's not fair, but if you want a fair sales price, this may be your only option.

As a last resort, you could file a complaint with your property owners association or city government. You could be referred to a mediator who will help settle your disagreement cordially.

FREE REACH IS OVER ON FACEBOOK

Facebook is a channel, just like TV or radio. The people are there. Statistics show that 135 million Americans check Facebook 14 times a day on average! It offers huge exposure for businesses. Unfortunately it is becoming more difficult to get your business page posts noticed on Facebook without paying for it. If you want to reach a target audience on Facebook, it's no longer earned exposure, it's about paid media exposure, just like TV and Radio.

The good news is that Facebook's ad model is much more affordable. You can do quite a bit with $40 a month. A budget of $20 a day is like a prime time TV Spot. Both are very affordable compared to TV, Radio and Print ads.

It's time to realize that business exposure on Facebook is going to cost a little. It's still one of the best places for businesses to reach their customers at all times of the day. But, now just like other media channels with lots of eye balls, you need to pay for a spot.

THERE IS SOMETHING TO BE SAID FOR BOREDOM

This past week I discovered for the first time the true value of boredom. After this, I never gave it too much thought. When I wore a younger man's suit, I had so much activity I did not have time to be bored. But now, that seems to be behind me, far behind me.  $Two \ of our \ grandchildren \ were \ at the house for a sleep over, which on the surface seems \ like$ a very pleasant evening. Of course, they only had half a day of school so they were at the house right after lunch. So, from lunchtime all the way through till breakfast the next morning they were energizing our house. I had forgotten how much energy a person has when they do not have to carry around a lot of age. I suppose I was that energetic when I was their age, but whose memory can go back

It all started out very nice with a lot of activities in the afternoon leading up to suppertime. By this time, I was wearing my age on my sleeves and I was not wearing a long sleeved shirt. They were inside, then they were outside, then they came back inside to tell me what they were going to do outside and then they went back outside.

I do not have many virtues, I grant you, but one virtue I do have is that I know my age. And with my age comes a great deal of limitations when it comes to energetic activities.

I can sit in my chair for hours reading a book or writing an article. But when it comes to going outside and chasing children who are chasing a ball who then begin to chase you and then you fall down and they jump on top of you, that is a different story.

Right around 3 o'clock, I looked at the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and ask a simple question, "How soon is supper?"

"Silly Grandpa," she said with a hearty laugh, "we just had lunch."

I sighed a lack of energy sigh knowing that we had several hours yet to play. Being as careful as I could, I snuck inside and collapsed in my chair only to be found out by the two little grandchildren energizing our domicile. They came screaming into my room, jumped on me and began our infamous tickle game. I am not quite sure, but I think this lasted at least 10 hours.

A thought creaked in my head. Even at my age, I can entertain a thought or two on occasion. So, without any consultation whatsoever with my wife, I made an announcement. "Who wants candy?"

That simple announcement got their attention and drove them like a magnet into the kitchen straight to the candy jar jumping up and down in anticipation.

"One rule with the candy," I explained, "you have to eat it outside." I had a willing and compliant audience and filled both hands with as much candy as they could handle. Screaming with delight, they rushed for the outside where they could set at the picnic table and indulge in the candy.

I headed back to my chair where I could indulge in some non-activity. Supper finally came and with a lot of noisy chatter and laughter we ate our supper. I left the table and went to my chair to relax a little bit and watch a little bit of news on the TV. I was almost dozing when I heard some chatter next to me.

"Grandpa," I heard the dual sing, "we're bored."

"Why don't the two of you sit down and read a book together?" "No, we want to have fun!"

And so fun we had as I abandoned my boredom extravaganza.

Finally, it was bath time, closely followed by bedtime. It took almost an hour to talk the two into bed and convince them to go to sleep.

After a day of using so much energy, I was in the mood to welcome a large dose of boredom. In the quietness of the evening, both my wife and I sat in our chairs listening to the sounds of silence.

In thinking about the activities of the day, I came to one conclusion. As draining as grandchildren are, they are more than welcome in my home. I know I only have a small repertoire of energy, but I am glad to spend it on them.

As my wife and I sat in the silence, she broke the silence and said, "Aren't grandchildren the I thought for a moment and came to full agreement with her. My wife is usually right on everything and on this thing, she was absolutely right. I enjoyed the sounds of silence because I had enjoyed the excitement and turmoil of grandchildren in the house.

I thought of Solomon in the Old Testament. If anybody was an expert on being a grandfather, it was him. After all, he had seven hundred wives, and three hundred concubines and who knows how many grandchildren danced around his throne. Solomon said, "Children's children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers" (Proverbs 17:6). Boredom is something that most people do not really appreciate. It always has a negative connotation, but in the right perspective, boredom can be a reward for lots of activity. Rev. James L. Snyder is pastor of the Family of God Fellowship, PO Box 831313, Ocala, FL 34483. ## EMAIL

Sharon, a very dear friend of mine who shall remain nameless, asked me to address an issue of importance to her. Now you must understand: As a strange visitor from this planet I would change the course of mighty rivers, bend steel in my bare hands, or cleverly disguise myself as a mild-mannered reporter for a great metropolitan newspaper for my friend Sharon. Thankfully she simply asked me to address the issue of email and more importantly email etiquette.

A little background: Which came first? Email or the internet? Answer: Email!

Email or more appropriately, electronic mail showed up first on the Advanced Research Projects Agency Network, affectionately referred to as the ARPANET before the INTERNET. I guess that answers all of your preliminary questions about email.

Of course now email has had to move over for the new concept of texting. Texting is done via smart, and not-so-smart phones. But texting etiquette is for another day.

The friendly folks at ETNI.org, aka the English Teachers Network of Israel have been kind enough to post the Ten Commandments of Email. Seems somehow more appropriate coming out of Israel (though I don't know if these Ten Commandments were inscribed out on stone tables by the finger of God). Anyway, here they are:

Thou shalt include a clear and specific subject line.

Thou shalt edit any quoted text down to the minimum thou needest.

Thou shalt read thine own message thrice before thou sendest it.

Thou shalt ponder how thy recipient might react to thy message. Thou shalt check thy spelling and thy grammar. Thou shalt not curse, flame, spam or USE ALL CAPS. Thou shalt not forward any chain letter.

Thou shalt not use e-mail for any illegal or unethical purpose.

Thou shalt not rely on the privacy of e-mail, especially from work.

When in doubt, save thy message overnight and reread it in the light of the dawn.

That which thou findest hateful to receive, sendest thou not unto others.

Finally, the ETNI folks have offered up another Ten Suggestions:

Delete That E-Mail [if it means nothing to you]

Break Free from Attachments [that might convey viruses]
Count to Ten, Then Send [think twice before flaming]

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"Sorry I've been away so long. I won't let you down again." - Superman (Christopher Reeve) in "SUPERMAN II" (1980)

Sorry for my absence over the past several weeks. I told my surgeon at USC/Keck Medical Center, "Over thirty years ago, my wife, Mitsuko, took my heart. Now you've taken my gall bladder, spleen and half my

I'm fortunate this occurred subsequent to insurance plans' coming into compliance with the Affordable Ĉare Act. Thanks to "Obamacare", I didn't have to worry about running up against some annual or lifetime "cap" on benefits. Decisions on what was needed were made by my doctors; not by some insurance company as would've been the case prior to enactment of the ACA. The pancreatic tumor had to be removed immediately. Had I been compelled to wait the 30 to 90 days for insurance company authorization, as would be the case under the system Republicans seem so eager to return to, I might not have made it through to write this column. Hundreds of thousands of American families will no longer be denied coverage because of some family member's pre-existing condition; will no longer face financial ruin should a child get sick; for thousands of American kids, graduation and entering the job market need no longer coincide with being kicked off their family's insurance plan. For this, we can thank On the campaign trail, Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) vowed to take out "Obamacare" "root and branch", but had no problem with Kentucky's own state exchange, with over 500,000 enrollees, more than half of whom were previously uninsured. McConnell supporters interviewed were adamant that a priority of a Republican Congress should be ridding the country of the ACA, but were equally adamant in defending their own state exchange established under the ACA. Go figure.

Over the past few weeks of recuperating, I haven't followed events as closely as I usually do, but did manage to pick up bits and pieces. The big news was all about Ebola: A traveler from Liberia who'd come to Dallas to be with family fell victim to the disease and died. Two nurses who'd treated him contracted the virus themselves and were treated,

President Obama's response had been to send 3,000 troops to West Africa to help fight the disease at its source, and mobilize the Dept. of Health and Human Services and Center for Disease Control to take necessary steps to protect us here at home.

The Republicans' response was to insist on full-blown nation-wide panic. Also, to take those government health officials with presumably better things to do and have them instead appear before the cameras in nationally-televised hearings. Republican panel members couldn't pass up the opportunity to show as much respect for the science of disease control as they'd shown for the science of climate change.

Ón the international front, Republicans express their frustration with President Obama pursuing ISIS with an approach he himself warned will be long and difficult, rather than accepting their presumably quick and easy solution of sending tens of thousands of American troops to another ground war in the Middle East. Last summer, Republicans warned the influx of unaccompanied minors from Central America would bring drug cartels and myriad diseases across our southern border. In advance of the elections, they again tried to ramp it up to full-blown nation-wide panic by warning future would-be immigrants will no doubt be accompanied by ISIS and Ebola. I caught the discussion on the Bill Maher show when he sought to blame beheadings, massacres and the stoning of heretics on the Islamic faith. I also heard the announcement of the Nobel Peace Prize being awarded to Indian children's rights activist Kailash Satyarthi, and to Malala Yousafzai, the seventeen-year-old Pakistani who two years ago survived an assassination attempt by the Taliban for her work promoting education – particularly girls'

Malala spoke of non-violence: "If you hit a Talib with your shoe, then there would be no difference between you and the Talib. You must not treat others with cruelty and that much harshly, you must fight others but through peace and through dialogue and through education." As for tradition, "I don't cover my face because I want to show my identity. Malala says she speaks "not for myself but for those without voice . . . those who have fought for their rights . . . their right to live in peace, their right to be treated with dignity, their right to equality of opportunity, their right to be educated."

Amidst all the condemnations of "Islamic" barbarity, I thought of Malala – a devout Muslim. And, of course, we had our elections. For the most part, Democrats who sought to distance themselves from the president, running from Main Street towards Wall Street, lost. Those who didn't, won - often resoundingly.

With a third of the Senate decided on every two years, this time it was primarily open seats and vulnerable Democrats in red states; two years from now it will be Republicans defending their seats in blue states. Nation-wide, it appears a majority of those under 45 voted for the Democrat, while those over 45 went Republican. It's all a matter of turn-out, and younger voters tend to show up mostly when there's a presidency at stake on the ballot - as there will

Republicans promised that control of both houses would help end gridlock. The real battles, though, may not be between Congress and the president, but within the new majority party President Obama reminds that "As president I have a unique responsibility to try to make this town work." Republicans have two years to show how they view their own responsibility. In the meantime, I'll be following my doctor's orders and going for my follow-up scans. I won't want to miss any of what's to come.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE

What the Republicans accomplished in the 2014 midterm elections is truly of historic proportions. When one looks at the gains in the Senate, in the House, in governorships and in state legislatures, it is not only a wave election, but it is as clear and resounding a repudiation of a set of policies as we have ever witnessed. Now, the question becomes where do we go from here?

Were Jimmy Carter, Bill Clinton or George Bush seated in the White House, the answer would be that we will move toward a more truly bi-partisan phase of governance. But with Barak Obama in the White House, such an outcome is not just questionable;

it is most improbable. We logically reach that conclusion simply by observing President Obama's actions over the last 6 years. Obama has consistently put leftist policy demands ahead of the Democratic Party's interests in maintaining some appeal to the middle of the political spectrum. The "liberal" side of the party has been subsumed by the "leftist" side. This tilt explains much of President Obama's isolation both from many in his own party and from an increasing number of Americans. And, it has cost the Democratic Party more seats in a midterm election than any president since Eisenhower. Sadly, many of the President's inner circle, who encouraged Obama as he drove the party and the country into the ditch, are now encouraging him to redouble efforts to transform America into the leftist utopia they envision they share with him. These are the voices that advocate continued use of executive action to accomplish what cannot be accomplished through a legislative process, or even through judicial overreach. These are the voices that advocate the quick stroke of a pen to deal with immigration the way they want, not as an overwhelming number of Americans want.

The President's speech after the election offered obligatory promises of a bipartisan approach while in the same breath denying that the vote was about his leftist policies or that there would be any pivot toward the new Congress. He told the nation that the losses were either due to a weird timing of which states had senatorial elections this year or that the losses didn't really matter because only 1/3rd of the electorate voted. The implication is that had the other 2/3rd of the electorate voted, they would have somehow voted for him. This is delusional not only in its denial of the statistical validity of a voting block this large but also in what it says about his own supporters. Suppose many of the 2/3rds who didn't vote were Obama supporters. What does that say about how his own supporters view his policies? Even they are so upset that they didn't support him.

So from his history, his temperament and his pronouncements, we must rationally conclude President Obama will never be the unifying force he has often promised, nor will he initiate any significant overture to repair the damage his policies have wrought. This is now up to the

So, what will they do? Where do we go from here? The answer lies in an understanding of what America really is and why so many Americans feel we are on the wrong track. Americans remain an aspirational people. We want to believe that our kids and grandkids can work hard to have a better life than we do, and we're upset that this mobility is now jeopardized. Americans remain a moral people, and we're sickened to see our traditional Judeo-Christian moral values mocked and undermined. Americans are a responsible people who understand the necessity of strong, and good, leadership in the world, and we worry that the vacuum Obama has allowed on the world stage will further embolden the likes of ISIS, Putin and the Chinese communists and ultimately jeopardize our own security. This was the basis of the repudiation of Obama's policies, and it is the basis of the Republican response just articulated by John Boehner and Mitch McConnell.

Republicans will be committed to addressing the most pressing challenges which face the country,

Excessive taxation which is driving jobs overseas,

Healthcare costs which continue to rise under a deeply flawed mega-law, A growing, not contracting, global terrorist threat,

An educational system which condemns too many kids to the margins,

A regulatory bureaucracy which focused its efforts on perpetuating its own power, The demeaning of the participation of our churches and synagogues in the public square, and The burdensome national debt grown well beyond what any generation should bequeath to the Republicans will tackle these issues on behalf of the American people; they will reach across the aisle, but they will not hesitate to propose real solutions to these real problems and thus allow a president to show where his loyalties lie – to the people or to his own ego.

This is where we will go from here. Whether we actually see progress in any of these areas will not depend on Republicans. They now control the House and the Senate, but they do not control the presidency and thus do not have the power to do what they want. We can have every confidence that there will be a full and compelling legislative agenda focused on correcting what has been so badly damaged over the last 6 years. But whether anything is actually accomplished over the next 2 years will be determined by President Obama. It will depend on what he decides he wants to be his legacy: as someone who will now turn and work for the American people, or as someone who will continue to focus on his own vanity.
