The Sierra Madre Rose Float Association has won 2015 Mayor's Award with it's 83rd entry, "I Think I Can". The award was presented for the "Most Outstanding City Entry - National or International". It was designed by Joanne G. Garcia, Nancie Filkins, and Justin Brandstater.

Riding on the float were Sierra Madre Rose Princesses Rose Princesses Kayla Rice, Alexi Zate, Britney Stone, and Kristine Kuhn. Ms. Rice is a junior at The Peace and Justice Academy, Ms. Zate is senior at LaSalle, Ms. Stone senior at San Marino High School and Ms. Kuhn is a junior at St. Lucy's Priory High School. (Above right - MVNews Photo)

Congratulations and thanks are in order for all of the hard working volunteers who spent countless hours painstakingly painting, gluing and placing millions of seeds and flowers on the float. Preparations for the float began in early 2014.

Special congratulations and thanks go to veteran volunteers and SMRFA leaders Bonnie and Dave Colcher, Kay and Dick Sappington, Barbie Bevington, Donna Sutcliff, Illona Linden, and float drivers, Dave and LaDonna Gaydosh (Partial listing). Their help was especially critical this year in helping the group carry on after the untimely death of longtime SMRFA President Bob Young, The float was dedicated to Bob's memory and the last car expressed the sentiment of the SMRFA and the entire city of Sierra Madre, "Forever Young". (right)

So what's next for this award winning organization? Breaking down the train after a brief stop in Kersting Court and beginning working on the 2016 entry.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in 6-7 good size carrots (or a package of baby carrots) the year." Ralph Waldo Emerson

"Let our New Year's resolution be this: We will be Salt there for one another as fellow members of humanity in Pepper the finest sense of the word."

Goran Persson

It's 2015. Hard to believe. Looking back over the past year, we think it was pretty good. Hope yours was, too. We went to more baby events and children's birthday parties than funerals and we've learned to enjoy the Chuck E. Cheese birthday party, with pizza and soft drinks for the kids, vast quantities of tokens to play all the games and parents taking thousands of phone pictures. OK, grandparents, too. The kids who work at Chuck E. Cheese as birthday party wranglers are indefatigable and beyond nice to everyone. Besides, if your little person has their party at Chuck E. you don't have to clean house afterwards. No chocolate frosting on your white couch. Seriously! No downside at all!

"Your success and happiness lies in you. Resolve to keep happy, and your joy and you shall form an invincible host against difficulties."

Many people like to start their New Year's with black-eyed peas, a Southern tradition for good luck and prosperity, but my family likes to kick off the New Year with Split Pea Soup. Easy to make, do it ahead of time, and you can make enough to keep hungry teenagers happy all day long. You can double and triple this recipe with great success, if your pot is big enough.

Split Pea Soup

1 package split peas (these are found in the market aisle where rice, noodles, beans, etc. are located) 4 ham hocks (usually packaged 2 to a package in the meat section) or a ham shank, or the ham bone left over from Christmas. 3 medium-size onions

1 good size bunch of celery

Split pea soup is an opportunity to creatively express yourself. There are few rules, just a few suggestions:

Get a really large pot and put the ham hocks or the ham bone in the bottom of the pot. Throw the peas on top of that, followed by the onions, carrots and celery which you've washed and cut into big chunks. Cover all this with water, or a combination of water and chicken broth. Say about 8-10 cups of water. Season with salt and pepper and whatever else you like. If you're partial to thyme, put some in there. Or Cover your pot and put in the oven at about 300 degrees. Leave it in there for about six hours, or till the peas have become very tender. Take it out and let the mixture cool to where you can handle it without burning yourself. Take out the ham hocks or ham bone and set them (it) aside.

Assemble your blender and blend your lukewarm soup/veggie mixture into a smooth puree. Put this into a large container with a cover, like your crock pot. When all your soup is pureed, remove whatever meat is on your ham hocks or ham bone, tossing out all fat and other non-meaty parts and put the meat into your soup. Refrigerate. Let it sit for a day or so to develop flavor, reheat it and stand back so the hungry relatives don't run over you as they rush to grab a bowl of the best split pea soup anywhere. You could make some cornbread or corn muffins to go with your soup and everyone who has some will love you forever.

Happy New Year, dear Walking Sierra Madre friends. Hope to see you out and about in 2015. Check out my book page on Amazon.com: Deanne Davis@Amazon.com

EVOLUTION OF A THEATRE - SIERRA MADRE PLAYHOUSE

The Sierra Madre Playhouse has evolved from a theatrical heritage that stretches back to the days when Sierra Madre was just a tiny village. Residents presented dramas and musicals as early as the 1880s in their homes, in the Town Hall, and in the Woman's Club.

Then in 1923, the structure presently housing the Sierra Madre Playhouse was built. During the ensuing years, it has served as the focal point of the city's family entertainment center, whether as a movie house, an arcade, or most recently, a theatre.

Its names have changed, as well as its functions. It was the "Wistaria Theater" when it first opened, but by 1929 it became the "Sierra Madre Theatre."

As with most community theaters, the Sierra Madre Playhouse has often been in tight financial straits. To support the theater, a small group of dedicated local citizens spearheaded a campaign in 1995 to assist the Playhouse, with George Enyedi and Lee and Barbara Cline playing lead roles. The Playhouse reorganized and became a non-profit corporation. A Board of Directors was formed in 1996 comprising nine dedicated community volunteers and theater lovers.

Each season-which runs from January through the following December, The Playhouse presents six to eight events, featuring well-written comedies, musicals, and intriguing mysteries. More serious dramas are interspersed occasionally. All are family oriented, and they showcase a repertoire remarkably varied for a community theater.

Playhouse Productions

An Equity-waiver theater with ninetynine seats, the Playhouse attracts both union and non-union actors of the finest caliber. The SMP can even boast a onetime performance in the 1982-83 season by Oscar-winner Tom Hanks, who filled in for a friend in Neil Simon's "Barefoot in the Park."

Many of Neil Simon's and Agatha Christie's successes have been produced at the Playhouse. A few plays have enjoyed return engagements through the years. Weightier scripts include "The Madwoman of Chaillot," "Rashoman," "The Lion in Winter," "The Miracle Worker," "Steel Magnolias," "Caine Mutiny Court Martial," "All My Sons," "The Member of the Wedding," "The Innocents," and "Golden Boy."

"Oliver," "Dames At Sea," "The Fantasticks," "Sound of Music," "Spitfire Grill," "Putting it Together" and "Side by Side by Sondheim," and "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" are among the musicals which have been offered. Favorites at the holiday season are "Scrooge" and various versions of "A Christmas Carol."

BEWARE: TAX SCAMS ARE INCREASING

IRS-Impersonation Telephone Scam

An aggressive and sophisticated phone scam targeting taxpayers, including recent immigrants, has been making the rounds throughout the country. Callers claim to be employees of the IRS, but are not. These con artists can sound convincing when they call. They use fake names and bogus IRS identification badge numbers. They may know a lot about their targets, and they usually alter the caller ID to make it look like the IRS is calling.

Victims are told they owe money to the IRS and it must be paid promptly through a pre-loaded debit card or wire transfer. If the victim refuses to cooperate, they are then threatened with arrest, deportation or suspension of a business or driver's license. In many cases, the caller becomes hostile and insulting.

Or, victims may be told they have a refund due to try to trick them into sharing private information.

If the phone isn't answered, the scammers often leave an Phony Arguments

"urgent" callback request.
Note that the IRS will never: 1) call to demand immediate payment, nor will the agency call about taxes owed without first having mailed you a bill; 2) demand that you pay taxes without giving you the opportunity to question or appeal the amount they say you owe; 3) require you to use a specific payment method for your taxes, such as a prepaid debit card; 4) ask for credit or debit card numbers over the phone; or 5) threaten to bring in local police or other lawenforcement groups to have you arrested for not paying.

Email Phishing Scam: "Update your IRS e-file"

The IRS has been alerted to a new email phishing scam. The emails appear to be from the IRS and include a link to a bogus web site intended to mirror the official IRS web site. These emails contain the direction "you are to update your IRS e-file immediately." The emails mention USA.gov and IRSgov (without a dot between "IRS" and "gov"), though notably, not IRS.gov (with a dot). Don't get scammed. These emails are not from the IRS.

Taxpayers who get these messages should not respond to the email or click on the links. Instead, they should forward the scam emails to the IRS at phishing@irs.gov. For more information, visit the IRS's Report Phishing web page.

The IRS does not initiate contact with taxpayers by email to request personal or financial information.

THE SAN GABRIEL VALLEY AND FUN LEARNING EXPERIENCES FOR THE FAMILY

By Joan Schmidt

During my tenure at Annunciation School, Arcadia, there were two certain field trips for my sixth grade class: The Norton Simon Museum in Pasadena and the El Monte Historical Museum in El Monte. Although I retired from teaching, the subject came up again during the Breeders Cup. At a media function, I met the Toronto Jockey, Jamie Stewart's mom, who asked about local museums (The wife of her son's mount's owner was wondering about local attractions.) I returned home, located the museums' info and gave it to her!

Rembrandt, Van Gogh, Degas, Renoir, modern like Picasso, Kandinsky, and many more; Eastern art-statues of Buddhas from India and China; Medieval altar pieces; tapestry-the list goes on and on. (The late Norton Simon and his late wife, actress Jennifer Jones traveled to Asia on their honeymoon, and this is how they acquired the beautiful Eastern works. Norton Simon was an amazing man who amassed a great fortune at an early age; he loved art and wanted to share it with many to enjoy and appreciate.)

What has fascinated me about our area is all the cities have a different founder and such interesting history. Many years ago, my mom came to California each year from New Jersey. Disneyland was too crowded, too much walking and too pricey. Thanks to the yellow pages' "museum section" I found several! Her very favorite was the El Monte Museum. Signs call the city, "The End of the Santa Fe trail". That's because several wagons continued past Santa Fe and ended up in the current city-a lush, fertile area. In the Museum on one side are several little "cubicles" including two bedrooms, barber shop, apothecary, music shop, dress shop, classroom area, general store, living room, kitchen, and classroom!

Walking to the other side, the hall has a display from "Gay's Lion Farm". The circus couple came from Europe and began this popular farm. Ĉelebrities and even a president came to visit! There are display cases throughout with dresses, jewelry, memorabilia from different wars, a tribute to the El Monte Police and Fire Departments and a Rolls Royce Winston Churchill

"Learning or Living History" is the theme for the Homestead Museum, 15415 East Don Julian Road, City of Industry. This museum covers the history of the LA Region from the 1840's when it was still part of Mexico through the 1920's when Los Angeles was known world-wide as a metropolitan city. Encompassing three acres there are three sites to see, the Workman House, The Norton Simon has so many beautiful works of an 1870's Victorian country home constructed around n 1840's adobe I a Cas Revival mansion, and El Campo Santo, one of the region's oldest private cemeteries. (Pio Pico is interred

> There are three other must-sees in the area. Arcadia's Ruth and Charles Gilb Historical Museum (380 West Huntington Drive, Arcadia, (626-574-5400) has a tribute to Anita Baldwin (Lucky's daughter), Veterans, famous Arcadians in addition to tracing the history of the local area.

> Washington Irving, Mount Wilson, and General George Patton are connected to Alhambra's founder, Benjamin Davis Wilson. To find out how, visit the Alhambra Museum, 1550 W. Alhambra Road, Alhambra. (626) 300-8845. Call ahead for days/hours.

> Monrovia's founder, William Newton Monroe played an important role in railroad construction! He was born in Lexington, Indiana, and fought in the First Iowa Calvary during the Civil War. He and his wife came to California in 1884 and was the Superintendent of Construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad for twelve years. A successful businessman, he bought 240 acres of land from Lucky Baldwin in 1886 for $30,000! He also built railroads in Mexico and the first one in Alaska. The museum covers his life, the history of the city and more. Monrovia Historical Museum is at 742 East Lemon Ave, Monrovia. (626) 357-9537.

How to make good use of holiday togetherness when you're caring for a senior loved one elebrating the holidays together with family is one of the best rewards of the season. If you are caring for an older relative, however, the holidays can be worrisome. You might notice that your loved one seems lonely, feels isolated or is overwhelmed. Or maybe you identify safety issues that signal your loved one needs more assistance than you are able to provide. If so, then the holidays offer you and your family a special opportunity: to share in the discussion and decision-making about care alternatives for someone you all love.

At The Kensington, we are getting close to officially opening our doors. In the meantime, especially during this holiday season, we invite you to visit together with family. Learn about our care options and, if you're ready, let us help you lay the groundwork for wonderful change. Bring us your hopes, dreams, memories and traditions. REPORT FINDS COUNTY HAS $162 MILLION IN FUNDING FOR PARKS AND OPEN SPACE

Supervisor Mark Ridley-Thomas, the County Counsel revealed that approximately $162 million in available Proposition A funds can be spent without state legislation. The report determined that no State or County regulations exist that would prevent the Board of Supervisors from dispersing any of the available Proposition A funds.

"Voters were wise enough to reject Proposition P's tax increase, despite being told by the bureaucrats and some newspaper editorials, that there was not enough money for parks and open space projects -- and that access to any funding would require the passage of new state and county laws. This was untrue." Further, the measure was developed without the vital input of our communities and town councils, gave little notice to the public, and lacked a complete study as to need and purpose.

In August, the Board of Supervisors, on a 3-2 vote with Supervisors Antonovich and Ridley-Thomas dissenting, tax on county residents to generate approximately $54 million a year over the next 30 years. In November, Proposition P failed to meet the two-thirds vote needed to pass.

"Parks are a vital component in enhancing the quality of life for our county residents. However, voters should not be rushed into saddling themselves with billions of dollars in taxes," Antonovich added. "Before burdening county residents with additional taxes, the County needs to determine what funds are currently available and how best to meet the needs of county residents. We need a comprehensive plan to spend existing unallocated revenues and a proposal specifying the need for additional revenue – that is what the voters and taxpayers deserve."

Antonovich will introduce a motion in January directing the Chief Executive Officer to identify park

Alleged DUI Driver Arrested Driving Golf Cart on the 210 Freeway

A man was arrested Thursday night after confessing to stealing a Rose Bowl golf cart from the stadium and then driving it onto the 210 freeway —the man told officers he was trying to get to his car in East Pasadena.

CHP officers arrested 19-year-old Andrew Aldridge around 10:45 p.m. after officers received 911 calls from people saying a man was driving a golf cart, without headlights in the slow lane, on the eastbound 210 near Lake Avenue. California Highway Patrol officers arrested Aldridge, form Dana Point, on Corson Street after he exited the freeway at Hill Street. He was the only person in the cart according to a CHP statement.

The cart had stickers on the side indicating it was from the Rose Bowl CHP officers said. Earlier in the day, the Rose Bowl stadium hosted the college football semifinal game where the Oregon Ducks beat Florida State, 59 to 20.

Four People Hurt in Freak Wind Accident

Just 24 hours before the Rose Bowl game, a freak wind event Wednesday afternoon left four bystanders injured as video posted on YouTube shows people running for cover as tents and tables were picked up and slammed to the ground.

Pasadena Fire Public Information officer Lisa Derderian said three of the injured had minor injuries and a four individual had a slight finger injury, all were treated at the scene she said. The incident happened around 1:30 p.m. outside Lot H as crews were getting ready for the Rose Bowl game.

According to Senior weather. com Meteorologist Nick Wiltgen, the "dust devil" was, most likely, caused by strong north winds coming over the San Gabriel Mountains that induced turbulence in lower elevations.

As of Friday the viral video, "Tornado at the Rose Bowl" had over $2.3 million views on You Tube.

We will use this experience to reinforce our commitment to good governance through our policies and procedures," Beck

SHERLOCK HOLMES EXHIBIT AT THE DUARTE COUNTY LIBRARY

Happy birthday Sherlock Holmes! The famed sleuth's birthday is said to be January 6, 1854, as deduced by scholars after researching many literary clues. It is on that date each year that Sherlockians gather to celebrate and the Baker Street Irregulars converge on an iconic Holmes spot such as 221B Baker Street in London.

A fictional character created by Scottish author and physician Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Holmes is known for his astute logical thinking and his ability to adopt a variety of disguises. He is thought of as a real person by his fans, after first appearing in 1887 in four novels and 56 short stories by Arthur Conan Doyle. Over the years, Holmes has become even more popular with dozens of new stories, television series and movies, offshoots of originals stories, and even new books characterizing those traits for which he is admired. An avid Sherlock Holmes fan, Duartean Alan Heller, will pay his birthday respects at the Duarte Library, 1301 Buena Vista, with an in-depth exhibit featuring Sherlock Holmes books, videos, action figures and other ephemera. Alan has collected all things pertinent to the British detective and has studied Doyle's writings. The display will run through the month of January.

EDUCATION & YOUTH

CHILD SAFETY INTERNET AWARENESS

Editor's Note: With many of our children receiving smartphones, tablets and computers over the holidays, we thought it would be a help to parents to hear from law énforcement regarding keeping your child safe from internet predators and inappropriate materials. S. Henderson, Mountain Views News

From The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department:

The Internet has opened up a world of information for anyone with a computer and a connection. Your children will learn about computers. As a parent, it is your responsibility to make sure your child stays safe online. Too many dangers from pedophiles to con artists can reach children (and adults) through the Internet.

GETTING STARTED

Explain that although a person may be alone in a room using the computer, once logged on to the Internet, he or she is no longer alone. People using the Internet can find out who you are and where you are. They can even tap into information in your computer. Set aside time to explore the Internet together.

CONTROLLING ACCESS

The best tool a child has for screening material found on the Internet is his or her brain. Teach children about exploitation, pornography, hate literature, excessive violence, and other issues that concern you, so they know how to respond when they see this material. Choose and download a commercial online service that offers parental control features on all your devices. These features can block contact that is not clearly marked as appropriate for children; chat rooms, bulletin boards, news groups, and discussion groups; or access to the Internet entirely. Purchase blocking software and design your own safety system. Different packages can block sites by name, search for unacceptable words and block sites containing those words, block entire categories of material, and prevent children from giving out personal information. Monitor your children when they're online and monitor the time they spend online.

TELL YOUR CHILDREN

- To always let you know immediately if they find something scary or threatening on the Internet.
- Never to give out their name, address, telephone number, password, school name, parents' name, or any other personal information.
- Never to agree to meet face to face with someone they've met online.
- Never respond to messages that have bad words or seem scary or just weird.
- Never to enter an area that charges for services without asking you first.
- Never to send a picture of themselves to anyone without your permission.
- Once a picture, a message, a post is sent, it cannot be retrieved and will remain on the internet virtually forever.
- It's okay to say no and to never let anyone pressure them into doing something they feel uncomfortable doing.
- That everything they read or see on the internet may not be true and that people online may not be who they seem.

WHAT YOU CAN DO IN THE COMMUNITY

Make sure that adults monitor access to the Internet at your children's school. Know your children's friends and their parents. Set reasonable rules for computer use and discuss them with your children. Investigations have shown that children will likely have a social media page whether you approve or not, so it is imperative that you teach them internet safety. If your child's friend has Internet access at home, talk to the parents about the rules they have established. Find out if the children are monitored while they are online. If your child receives threatening e-mails or pornographic material, save the offensive material and contact that user's Internet service provider and your local law enforcement agency. If you come across sites that are inappropriate for children when you are surfing the Net or become aware of the transmission, use, or viewing of child pornography while online, report it to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

WHAT EVERY PARENT NEEDS TO KNOW ABOUT CHANGES IN THE CLASSROOM

(StatePoint) If you have school- age children, you likely have heard about the new Common Core State Standards. Already adopted by forty-three states, the District of Columbia, four territories, and the Department of Defense Education Activity, the Common Core focuses on developing the critical-thinking, problem-solving and analytical skills students will need to be successful in college and the workforce. What does this mean for your children and their education?

With these new standards in place, parents may need to offer their students extra support. How can you help your young scholars be better prepared to meet the new challenges of the classroom?

English Language Arts

Vocabulary development is a major component of the new standards for English Language Arts. Encourage your children to build their vocabulary organically by supplementing their required reading with a wide range of elected choices, such as classical myths, historical documents and seminal literature. If you don't already frequent the library, consider making that part of your family's routine.

Analysis and comprehension of reading is also important. So consider reading the same articles as your children and discussing what you both learned.

Mathematics

Supplement classroom learning with free online resources. For example, Casio Education offers in-depth information about standardized tests, including sample questions from various state exams. They also offer webinars and reference guides to help both students and teachers make better use of technology in math class, including topical calculator instruction. Free education resources and information can be found at www.CasioEducation.

Math is all around us -- from sports statistics to creating a family budget to investing for college. Parents can leverage real-life events and circumstances to both illustrate the importance of math comprehension, as well as help students further understand the Common Core curriculum.

"Mathematics education is most meaningful when it promotes abstract and quantitative reasoning skills and appeals to innate human curiosity," says Yuji Sasajima, vice president of Casio's education division. "We've developed programs and technologies that allow teachers and students to take on the Common Core curriculum from multiple fronts."

Students will need to adjust the way they learn to keep up with changes in the classroom. By learning more about the Common Core standards, parents can help ease the transition.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

The 2010 Simi Landslide Cabernet Sauvignon from Alexander Valley (not Valley)) is one cabernet that you should definitely put on your post-holiday wine purchase list. I discovered this one simply by the price point - I wanted a Cabernet in the mid $20's, and I made a wise choice. The grapes are all harvested right on the estate. Remember wine fans, cabernets are one of the world's most widely recognized red wine grape varieties. It is grown in nearly every major wine producing country among a diverse spectrum of climates from Canada's Okanagan Valley to Lebanon's Beqaa Valley, and of course right here in California. Its popularity is often attributed to its ease of cultivation—the grapes have thick skins and the vines are hardy and naturally low-yielding, budding late to avoid frost and

A few weeks ago I mentioned Chrissy Whittmann from Wild Horse being one of a handful of female wine makers. That trend continues here at Simi where the director of winemaking is Susan Lueker and the winemaker is Megan Schofield. Bravo ladies!

The cabernet goes great with a goat cheese salad, crusty sourdough bread or even goat cheese pizza with red peppers. The blending of this cabernet brings the alcohol content down to a modest 13.5%. The flavor starts with a hint of blackberry, and then somehow bursts into a red berry with notes of spice that come from the French oak. Despite it's youth (2010) the wine finishes with wonderful tannins. I find this cabernet compares with many wines at a higher

THE JOY OF YOGA SET AN INTENTION

I simply love

beginning a new year. There's no time that provides the feeling of endless possibility and optimism. I enjoy looking back on my successes and trials of the past year as well. All of my experiences hold knowledge and invaluable wisdom that help propel me to the next place I'm supposed to be. With that development, I bring my focus upon setting my intention for the year ahead.

Once an intention is made, it can carry great power and energy. The more energy and thought we give to any certain intention, helps it to gain and compassion you'd give to anyone whom you strength and eventually manifest to actuality. In yoga, we refer to energy as Prana. We are beings of be around the people who support you in your Prana, or vital life force energy, and it is constantly changing or waxing and waning. Day-to-day life can drain Prana from us, while experiences like our yoga practice, pour Prana in. It's so

A NEW YEAR; A NEW YOU

Chances are, you ate and drank more than you really wanted to this holiday season. And many of you have a New Year's resolution to shed some unwanted pounds and improve your overall health. What better way to give you that jumpstart to weight loss and better health than with cleanse, detox or purification program.

A cleanse helps your body to purify and rebuild from the inside out. Cleanses go by multiple names. They all work the same in that they limit what you can eat or drink and some offer some sort of supplementation. Some target specific organs and others are whole body. There are lots of cleansing programs on the market. Some are good and some are not so good. The best cleanses support your major organ systems with the proper nutrients that are only found in whole foods. The follow up to a good cleanse is transitioning to a healthier way of eating that is pleasurable.

This is the time of year to do a cleanse. A cleanse helps your body to detoxify from the toxins that have accumulated from too many holiday parties! A cleanse also helps your body to maintain a healthy weight. The holiday food and drink are not the only ways our bodies obtain toxins. We are exposed to toxins on a daily basis including air pollutants, pesticides, and even household cleaners. Our bodies are made to rid themselves of toxins but can and do become overburdened with the task. A purification program or cleanse will offer your body additional support while ridding it of toxins naturally, reducing your weight and bringing about a feeling of vitality.

If you have never tried a cleanse, this is the year to do so. Cleanses and purification programs are not just for the stars or the rich and famous. You too can start a journey towards looking and feeling your best. Find out what it is like to live a healthy and vibrant life where your body functions at its best.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

As a pet sitter in Sierra Madre, I spend a lot of my time hiking the hills and strolling the sidewalks of our small town with my furry, four-legged canine clients. On any given day, during the course of a dog walk in this tiny burg, it is not unusual to stumble across at least ten or twelve other dogs walking with their humans and of the several dogs I might come into contact with in such a short period of time, it is rare that any two are anything

The wide variety of colors, shapes, sizes and behavioral patterns among the many breeds in today's society truly amazes me. My most recent internet search for how many dog breeds there are currently in existence rendered a result of 181 purebred canine types registered with the American Kennel Club. If you add the list of unregistered breeds that have been officially named and propagated throughout the US and other parts of the world, the total count comes to a total of 200+ recognized canine breeds and I must say, that blows my mind. Especially when you consider the fact that the variety of characteristics from one breed to another are the direct result of nothing more than a minute .2% genetic difference!

For the past two centuries, man has been asphyxiated with the concept of breeding the "perfect" dog through the applied science of eugenics, the intentional practice of "improving" or somehow altering the genetic composition of a given population. In this case, the population happens to be the canine species, or what we dogloving Americans like to call "Man's Best Friend". What lead to the human's insatiable desire to create the ideal specimen of a dog? How did man come to rely on the canine to be his "best friend"?

There are various schools of thought on how it all came about, however a combination of extensive research & scientific studies have left little room for argument that the domestic dog that we are so familiar with, originated from the grey wolf, scientifically known as Canis lupus. The mainstream theory among most canine history research scientists is that man's first one-on-one $contact with the {\tt grey wolfoccurred unintentionally}.$ It is said to have happened sometime around 7000 BC (+/-), when the human population began to grow, moving away from an extremely primitive way of life, to occupy previously un-developed territories where they built living structures and established unprecedented property perimeters between themselves. The grey wolf was already in residence in the forests and other natural pristine spaces where man made claim to the land as "home", therefore the interface between the two species became inevitable.

Remains of the earliest known domesticated dog, scientifically known as Canis lupus familiaris, were discovered at the Jaihu archaeological site in China, dating back to the early Neolithic period (7000-5800 BC). Needless to say, a lot of changes occurred between that time and two hundred years ago, when intentional breeding resulted in the various varieties of the domestic dog that we know and love today. By the early 17th century, the dog had become a very important part of everyday human life. In fact, without the assistance of the dog, one can't help but wonder where man would be today, in terms of basic survival and "progress".

During the early stages of canine breeding, the main focus was to develop a dog that would make life easier for the human. The hunting dog helped by keeping food on the table. Herding dogs helped control livestock, and perhaps the more loyal yet aggressive breeds served to protect the home and the family. Around the mid 19th century, man's effort to refine the specific qualities and characteristics of the domestic dog had become far more focused on aesthetic values than practical needs, and by the turn of the twentieth century the dog had become well known as a symbol of social status.

While the dog has proven to be man's best friend over many years of change, man has proven to be somewhat less than a best friend to the dog. While the side effects of breeding were certainly not intentional, they definitely have taken their toll. One example of eugenics gone bad is in the case of the Dalmatian, sometimes known as the "Firehouse Dog", mainly used as a carriage dog in it's early days. The Dalmatian's white and spotted coat are what set this breed apart from the others, however it is the white beneath the spots that is directly associated with it's tendency for blindness due to a gene that will not allow vitamin A to nourish the retina. Other examples of experimental breeding side effects include hip dysplasia in the German Shepherd and obsessive compulsive disorder in the Bull Terrier. Eye & ear allergies in the Bloodhound are other examples of undesirable results of intentional breeding of dogs for a specific purpose. Yes, man has benefited immensely from the efforts made to create the perfect pup. But there has been a high price to be paid.

Fortunately, there is a proverbial pot of gold at the end of the eugenic rainbow. Scientific research on how to reduce the side effects of breeding have had a double benefit to human society. By studying the problems that prevail as a result of canine eugenics, we are also learning how to treat some of the diseases that we as humans fall victim to. So, the dog has indeed been man's best friend through thick and thin, from the beginning to the end. In earlier days, the dog helped us move from the "cave to the castle", now it helps lend knowledge and understanding for our own health as human

I personally feel strongly about adopting and not shopping for domestic pets. I dream of a day when there will be less animals kept in cages until they are euthanized in shelters throughout our country. All the beautiful breeds are amazing to behold, but until we humans get a grasp on the responsibilities that come with that beauty, I believe we should refrain from breeding and focus on finding forever homes for the millions that are now being held captive behind bars, hoping someone will care enough to love them and give them a good life.

To start the New Year with? Can you say "Fetch?" If you like to play with a happy, active dog, Hurley is the right one for you! Hurley is about 6 years old, and is being called a Chihuahua mix. that gives him a very unique look. He is mostly wonderful home. Why not come in to meet him tan, with some black ticking in his coat. His face and see what a special dog he is? has beautiful markings of both colors. His coat is short and easy to care for.

When we first met Hurley, we thought he was a bit on the shy side, but once he felt more comfortable, he showed us what an outgoing guy he really is. He gets along well with his kennel mate, who also likes to run and play. Hurley is very fast to fetch his toy, and then will run and jump into a lap to keep his toy safe. He is very nimble and can easily jump on laps and chairs during playtime. At the shelter, we saw him jump onto a table where he happily landed in a container of dog sweaters and blankets - still holding his toy in his mouth! He is very focused!

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS: THE GAMBLER

By Sean Kayden

In fact, I'm not sure what it even is. Mark Wahlberg tries to fill the shoes of James Caan in this reimagining "Hollywood" version of the original 1974 underrated classic. Director Rupert Wyatt ("Rise Of The Planet Of The Apes", "The Escapist") does a satisfactory job keeping this film remotely entertaining. His work behind the camera is slick and cuts through with impeccable precision. However, the script by William Monahan ("The Departed") isn't nearly as gripping or as convincing as the original film that was penned by James Toback. I perceive this to be the case because Toback wrote about his own real life experiences. Monahan's script feels like the work of a person who doesn't know the first thing about gambling. It appears to be just a falsely depicted account of what it means to him as a distant outsider. Fortunately, Monahan's dialogue is often witty with sharp one-liners, but ultimately the story is flat with undeveloped secondary characters. Furthermore, Wahlberg's hapless and self-destructive character was far from anyone you could truly root for. He made it vastly difficult to be even slightly likable. Rounding up the supporting cast is Brie Larson, John Goodman, Michael Kenneth Williams, and Jessica Lange as "The Gambler" is lacking any sort of backbone or spiritual material to warrant the remake.

Iim Bennett isn't so much a gambler as he's a guy who's superbly depressed. Why? You really don't know why. He comes from money, has a good job as a college literature professor and is very bright. The types of wagers he makes are ones no respectable gambler would even attempt. All he bets is double or nothing in blackjack. He has a streak of four or five winning hands and then loses movie it is the same scenario. He comes off utterly pretentious to his students, where he believes only one of them in the entire class is capable of a "gambler," but he tells her that's not who he is. The strange romantic relationship between these note, John Goodman in his four or so scenes unsurprisingly nails his role of a big time lone shark. He's supplied with the best and most witty lines in the entire film. Michael Kenneth Williams "The Wire," "Boardwalk Empire") is also great as Neville, another lone shark. Unfortunately, the reason he even comes into Wahlberg's life felt unwarranted. There are two students in Bennett's class he has a fuzzy relationship with. One is an allstar basketball player and the other a top ranking tennis star. The basketball player tries to help Bennett's character out in the third act of the film. the mother of Wahlberg's Jim Bennett character. Bennett's life is at stake and Wahlberg's character acts as if he rather die than pay any money back to the numerous characters he owes. The other relationship with the tennis star makes no sense at all. Something was either cut from the final film because his existence was far short of any sort of value to the film.

Speaking of any value, in the end, what is this movie even about? It's obviously not about gambling because it's demonstrated in such an amateur way. In the original, James Caan would it all in one play. Continuously throughout the be sweating over owing $44,000 to the bookies. You can see the fear and anxiety in his character. Wahlberg's character couldn't give two shits if he won or lost to pay back the $260,000+ debt he being an actual writer (Brie Larson's character, accumulated. If anything, Bennett was addicted to Amy). Amy knows about Bennett's secret life as losing than winning. There's no rhyme or reason to why he's like this, at least it wasn't accurately represented. As a whole the movie entertained two is completely unripe. It's pretty unclear to in fragments as well as having a few players why she has any ties to him whatsoever. American diplomat Joan Honeyman and her opposite number from Russia, Andrey Botvinnik, meet for a series of meetings in a tranquil forest in Switzerland, as the two representatives of the last remaining Western superpowers engage in negotiations at a particularly tense moment in the annals of world history. The very fate of the human race may depend on the ultimate outcome of these talks. Can these two adversaries become friends? Can they prevent Armageddon?

Originally produced in 1987, the play is just as timely today, as the U.S. is once again confronted with a Russia with a belligerent head of state. "A Walk in the Woods" is described as "a seriously funny play about saving the world," and it is, featuring the warmth, humor and wit characteristic of its playwright's work. Lee Blessing is deservedly one of the most commercially successful living American playwrights, and Los Angeles in particular loves his body of work. Other plays by the prolific writer that have seen production locally within the last few years include "Cobb," "Down the Road," "Two Rooms," "Independence," "Fortinbras" and Geoffrey Wade directs. His previous directing credits include "Ruffian on the Stair," "Celebration," and "The Crucible" (shared credit). Also an actor, he has numerous credits on episodic television, with the L.A.-based Antaeus Company, and in regional theatre. He appeared on Broadway in "Translations" and "An American John Prosky portrays Botvinnik. He has appeared in 45 films, on episodic television (especially on "The Medium"), in regional theatre, and in multiple productions with Antaeus Company, among them, "The Crucible," "Cousin Bette," "Tonight at 8:30," and most recently "The Wedding Band: a Love/Hate Story in Black and White." The role of Botvinnik was performed in the original 1988 Broadway production by John's own father, the late celebrated actor Robert Prosky in a Tony®-nominated performance. Nancy Youngblut plays Honeyman. She directed "God's Man in Texas" last season at Sierra Madre Playhouse and also appeared here in "Our Town." Other stage roles include turns in "Burn This," "Fool for Love," "The Heidi Chronicles," "Dancing at Lughnasa," "The Dinner Party," and "A Life in the Trees." On TV, she has appeared as recurring characters on "Dr, Quinn, Medicine Woman," "Weeds," "Perception," and "Diagnosis: Murder." Assistant director: Amelia White. Stage manager: Sarah Poor. HOW TO CLAIM THE RETIREMENT SAVER'S TAX CREDIT

Dear Savvy Senior:

A coworker was recently telling me about a tax credit she got last year for simply contributing to our company's 401(k) plan. What can you tell me about this, and who's eligible? Over 55

Dear Over:

It's called the "retirement saver's tax credit," and it's a frequently overlooked credit that's available to low and moderate-income individuals and families who make saving for retirement a priority. Here's how

If your contribute to a traditional or Roth IRA, or an employer sponsored plan like a 401(k), 457, 403(b), SEP plan, SIMPLE IRA or other retirement-savings plan, the retirement saver's tax credit will allow you to claim 10, 20 or 50 percent of your contribution, depending on your income, up to a maximum of $1,000 per person or $2,000 per couple. To qualify, you must also be at least 18 years old and not a full-time student, and were not claimed as a dependent on someone else's tax return. And your adjusted gross income in 2015 must be $61,000 or less as a married couple filing jointly, $45,750 or less if filing as head of household, or $30,500 or less if you're a single filer. These income limits are adjusted annually to keep pace with inflation.

To get the 50 percent credit, you'll need to have an income below $18,250 if you're single, $27,375 if you're filing as head of household, and $36,500 for couples in 2015.

The 20 percent credit rate applies to individuals earning between $18,251 and $19,750; for head of household filers it's $27,376 to $29,625; and for couples it's $36,501 to $39,500.

And the 10 percent rate is for individuals with an adjusted gross income between $19,751 and $30,500; for head of household filers 29,626 to $45,750; and couples it's between $39,501 and $60,100.

Double Tax Break

You also need to know that the retirement saver's tax credit can be claimed in addition to the tax deduction you get for contributing to your employer's retirement plan or a traditional IRA. Here's an example of how this works.

Let's say you're married and have an income of $37,000, and your spouse is not working. If you contribute $1,000 to your company's 401(k) plan, your adjusted gross income would be reduced to $36,000 on your tax return. You would also be able to claim a 50 percent retirement saver's credit, which is worth $5,000, for your $1,000 401(k) contribution.

Keep in mind though that this is a tax credit, not a deduction, so it lowers your income tax dollar for dollar. It is, however, a nonrefundable tax credit, which means it cannot reduce the amount of tax owed to less than zero.

How to Claim

To claim the credit, you will need to fill out Form 8880 (see irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/f8880.pdf) and attach it to your 1040, 1040A or 1040NR when you file your tax return. Don't use the 1040EZ Form.

If you think that you would have qualified for the credit in previous years but didn't claim it, you can file an amended return as far back as 2011 and still get the credits. A 2011 amended return is due by April 15, 2015. See IRS Form 1040X (irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/i1040x.pdf) for instructions on how to file an

And for more information on the retirement saver's tax credit, see IRS Publication 590 "Individual Retirement Arrangements" (irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p590.pdf).

If you don't have Internet access to see or download these forms, call the IRS at 800-829-3676 and ask them to mail them to you.

Awkward moments. We've all had them, and we can usually look back at them and laugh at our mishaps. But it's always funnier if it happens to someone else. In this case, my mom was the embarrassment victim. But you have to understand the background story first. Some people are dog people, other people are cat people. And then there are bird people. Bird people can always tell other bird people because they're the crazy-looking ones. Over the years my family has had many birds and developed a reputation as the go-to people when others find a baby bird that needs caretakers until being released back into the wild. One of their recent "visitor" birds was a mockingbird that my mom's friend, Florence, found. (You may remember Florence from her many stories I've written when I needed ideas for articles. She's a

During the two or three weeks while the mockingbird, whom my mom named "Baby," stayed with my parents, my dad often put its cage next to their two parakeets' cage out on the deck. After Baby was released, he continued to come back and sit in a certain spot at the top of the orange tree and chirp to the parakeets. Baby probably figured his caged friends were going to be released soon like he had

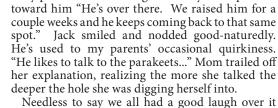

Looking for Baby's arrival became a daily routine for my parents. If they didn't see him Mom worried that something might have happened. It was after a couple days of absence that Baby returned and Mom happily went outside and said, "Hi Baby!"

Imagine her surprise and embarrassment when their neighbor (we'll call him Jack) answered, "Hi." Flustered, my mom tried to explain herself, "I'm sorry, I meant the mockingbird." mockingbird?" From Jack's angle he couldn't see Baby perched in the orange tree. My mom pointed toward him "He's over there. We raised him for a deeper the hole she was digging herself into.

Needless to say we all had a good laugh over it later. Now every time Mom gets up to go outside we tell her, "Remember to say hi to Baby!'

As I help clients get their financial affairs in order, Therefore, it is important to name secondary as well New Year I want to encourage you to look at how you've named the beneficiaries of your IRAs.

You see, you could be unintentionally reducing your family's wealth potential if you do not properly designate the beneficiaries of your IRAs. The ramifications of this mean your IRA assets could pass to the wrong people or entities, so how you execute your beneficiary designations is critically important. Here are some issues to be aware of regarding your funds into his or her existing IRA or establish an inherited IRA and take distributions that will be calculated based on his or her life expectancy. It is often (though not always) a good idea to name your spouse as the primary beneficiary of your IRA.

Children: Just like spouses, children can stretch required distributions from an inherited IRA over their own life expectancies. But be careful. Naming minor children as primary or even contingent beneficiaries is almost never a good idea.

Trusts: A trust can be named a beneficiary of an inherited IRA (and this is often the right way thing to do), but there are a number of complex issues involved, so be sure to consult with an attorney for so the assets can pass to children or grandchildren. for more information.

one of the most common mistakes I see is how as primary beneficiaries for your IRA so assets remain beneficiaries are named on IRAs. As we kick off the within the control of your family. Naming the right contingent beneficiaries is often as important as naming the right primary beneficiary.

BASIC BUSINESS MARKETING TOOL KIT

Developing a marketing kit is one of the things that every entrepreneur needs to complete. It will be used to support the successful launch and promotion of a Business Cards business and should include the following items:

Logos & Taglines

McDonald's golden arches and the Nike swish are two of the most familiar corporate logos around the world. Each one is simple, with very little detail, which makes it easy to recognize no matter its size. A logo should be designed so that it is still easily recognizable when it is reduced to a size small enough to fit onto a business card. A tagline, also referred to as a slogan, should be succinct and memorable like the Nike "Just Do It" tagline that Brochures, Flyers or Postcards launched a marketing campaign that is remembered to this day. Many companies have several designs of their logo, including some layouts that include the company name or tagline.

Internet Presence

Every entrepreneur needs to determine which combination of digital media will best meet the needs of the company. Websites are no longer the only centerpiece of an online presence now that an increasing number of social media services can be customized with features to display and sell products, support customer used to build the company's brand.

Success happens when preparation meets opportunity. dialogue and include links that allow visitors to choose the social media tool of their liking.

Traditional business cards are still in demand as they remain one of the most inexpensive, tangible business tools that can be distributed to potential customers. Like the logo, the design should be simple and the style and size of the font should be easy to read. Too much information will make it look crowded and difficult to read. The main purpose of a business card is to provide contact information and where to find your company online or on social media.

Businesses that cater to those in the Baby Boomers generation and older will still find it necessary to include printed marketing materials in the tool kit. These collateral materials should convey professionalism and be designed to convey the image and message that will encourage people to visit your website, join you on Facebook*, Twitter*, Pinterest* or other digital media. Younger people are inclined to use smart phones, tablets and computers to view information from businesses attempting to bring them in as customers.

Once completed, each tool in the marketing kit can be

FROM "LESS" TO "YES"

The painful truth: Sellers who do not price their property competitively are the most likely targets of lowball offers. In soft markets, buyers are more prone to make low offers on listings seen to be priced too high. Listings that don't sell usually require price reductions, which in turn often mean ultimately accepting an offer lower than you could have received by pricing aggressively from Day One.

Since selling your home can be such an emotional and subjective experience, it's easy to understand why you'd be reluctant to counter an offer below your asking price. But rather than feel insulted, try to see it as the beginning of a dialogue that could ultimately produce a sale.

If you feel any of the terms or conditions of the offer are unacceptable, ask your agent to present a counter-offer. Sometimes buyers and sellers don't really know beforehand what price they'll accept until they've begun the negotiations. For example, a buyer might agree to a higher price than planned if interest rates suddenly drop. If you've received a lower than expected offer, but the buyers have proven their qualifications and commitment by securing loan pre-approval, you have grounds for serious consideration. The process of counter-offering can be swiftly settled or carry on ad nauseam. Be prepared to explore all options and act quickly before letting your LIFE LINES by Amanda Rogers

Writing Coach "New Clients - mention this ad for 50% off! now through January 1, 2015 Please call (323)377-0323 to make an appointment www.amandarogerscoaching.com

Many of my coaching clients come to their last session in December wanting to talk about resolutions and how to make changes in the New Year. I respond by asking the client to leave the room. No, really. I instruct my client to wait outside and send in their "Saboteur" instead. You know, the self-judge we all have. That powerful, internal voice that tries to convince us we're not good enough and gets in the way when we want to

Seconds later, the Saboteur enters the room (cleverly donned as my client) acting a bit on edge. It tells me we have to keep it short because New Years is a very busy season for Saboteurs, with resolutions to discourage and promises to hinder. I invite it to sit, assuring it that it is welcome and that I just want to get to know it.

I can see it relax...a little. I ask the Saboteur what exactly calls it forth. It tells me that whenever my client takes the initiative to illicit change in his life, an alarm sounds, waking the Saboteur from its slumber. I ask the Saboteur what it is most fond of saying to my client. It tells me it uses whatever manipulation the moment calls for. Examples? "You're not good enough," "It's too hard," "It won't work anyway," "You can do it later," "You're fine the way you are," "It's too scary," "You might get hurt," "You don't deserve it" ... Whatever angle it knows will be most triggering. And how does it know what triggers my client? Well, the Saboteur explains to me that it's known him for a very long time. Yes, they go way back.

I ask the Saboteur what it is trying to accomplish with all its negativity. Its tough exterior softens. It quietly confesses that all it really wants to do is protect my client from danger, loss of relationship, and a catastrophe of some kind. It's there to keep him from taking potentially unsafe risks. "I understand," I say. "But you are most commonly overcautious at times that call for great risk, for the sake of positive change! And it's very CONFUSING because when you recite an old litany of judgment, rules and limiting beliefs, my client actually hates you and trusts you at the same time! Making my job very difficult!"

The Saboteur pauses, deciding whether or not to admit something to me. ``I fear that if I take a vacation, I'll be forgotten.I'll be out of a job." "No," I counter. "My client needs you. Sometimes your voice gives him instruction, or reminds him of past scenarios he may have chosen to forget. Sometimes you actually challenge him to commit to something. The harder he pushes against you the more committed he becomes to the change he's trying to make." It seems as if I've struck a chord.

As a rule, I never let any of my clients' saboteurs leave before asking their name. If my clients are going to live with these Saboteurs, they should know exactly with whom they are dealing. I've met quite a host of colorful characters in my office around the New Year...Captain Inertia, Lady Nit Picky, Madam Martyrdom, Dr. Did It Wrong, Sir Never Satisfied,

Finally, I thank the Saboteur for coming in and I tell it how I see its future relationship with my client. I suggest that up until now it has loved my client with fear. And fear stifles life and gets in the way of fulfillment and our freedom to complete ourselves. I suggest we re-negotiate the relationship a bit. And I suggest that it put out an all points bulletin to all Saboteurs the world over, from me. "Lead with love! Help us remember lessons we've learned in our past so we don't have to learn the same lesson over and over again! And as long as all you Saboteurs out there approach us with a healthy sense of safety that doesn't hinder or control us, none of you will be out of a job."

Satisfied, the saboteur and I ask the client to come back into the room and the three of us toast to the New Year.

MONICA HUBBARD, EL PATRON NAMED ALTADENA'S BEST FOR 2014

Citizen of the Year Monica Hubbard

Monica Hubbard has spent her career putting disparate things together to make a greater whole. From 1966 through 1999 she conducted choirs in academic, church and community settings. When Caltech first admitted women undergraduates, she taught voice and conducted choirs there from 1972-1999, as well as conducting choirs for public and private schools. She was the national repertoire and standards chair for the American Chorale Directors Association and was instrumental in getting ACDA to have a national women's honor choir perform at a national convention, as well as working to develop and commission new choral works. She also started the first database of repertoire composed specifically for women's voices, and repertoire for upper voices by women composers.

After 27 years at Caltech, she left conducting to open a consulting practice for arts and social services nonprofits with a focus on board development and capacity-building. Her clients have included the Pasadena Playhouse, Los Angeles County Arts Commission, the AIDS Service Center, and Occidental College.

Her foremost tool has been her computer: "Caltech gave me my very first computer," she said, and she quickly mastered its possibilities in terms of research, communication, and creating databases, and carried this into her consulting work. Along the way, she created "Wired Women," a weekly email newsletter that covered women's issues and events in the greater Pasadena area. But as an Altadena resident, she said she also wanted to connect "the people who were doing positive things" closer to home, and created a second newsletter, the "Altadena Women's Network." She also began to work more closely with and cultivated relationships in the Altadena community, serving as a neighborhood watch co-captain, joining the Sheriff's Community Advisory Committee and serving on the town council's Public Education Committee. She is a member of multiple community groups, including Altadena Heritage, the Altadena Historical Society, and Friends of the Altadena Libraries, among many others. She is a founding member and/or board member of Invest in PUSD Kids, Pasadena Village, and the Pasadena Educational Foundation. She was also a member of the Altadena Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors from 2007-2009.

More recently, she has been involved in founding two organizations: the Altadena Library Alliance, which recently succeeded in passing Measure A, assuring funding of the Altadena Library District through a special parcel tax for the next ten years; and Neighbors Building a Better Altadena. A group that was started to raise concerns about a Walmart Neighborhood Market opening in Altadena, NBBA is now working on making Altadena's business districts more "walkable" and art-filled. NBBA models working with other organizations, such as the Altadena Town Council and Chamber of Commerce, to cooperatively make concrete things happen to improve the community.

"I really like connecting people with resources," Hubbard said. "When I see people do good, I like to help them in any way possible."

As for being named Citizen of the Year, "I'm surprised and delighted," Hubbard said. "It's an honor. When I look at some of the people who received it in the past, it's a little

Business of the Year: El Patron Mexican Restaurant

For a relatively new business -- it will be five years old in May -- El Patron Mexican Restaurant has already made a big splash in Altadena. Not only has it gotten a reputation for good, hearty food and excellent service -- and has opened a second location -- but you can count on the restaurant helping out at local events, fundraisers, and other gatherings, giving back to the community that brought it success.

2014 Honorees - El Patron Co-Owner Alex Cortes and Community Activist Monica Hubbard

All this in a location that has seen many restaurants come and go over the years. El Patron is here to stay.

Owner-founder Alex Cortes comes from a family in the restaurant business, and always wanted to have a restaurant of his own. He was working for an Irwindalebased candy distributor ten years ago when he opened his first restaurant with his brother at an Irwindale location. They sold that business after a year, and Cortes continued working for the candy distributor.

When his employer announced it was moving to El Segundo, farther from home, Cortes began looking for another opportunity to open his own restaurant. An amateur boxer, Cortes said that he went to his gym one evening, found it closed, and decided to drive around a bit in the late night. In Altadena, he came across a "For Rent" sign at a wedge-shaped Googie-style building almost on the corner of Lake Avenue and Altadena Drive, a site where many restaurants were born and died over the

He called the landlord, took a tour of the building, and decided it was what he was looking for. While he and his wife Margarita had saved money for a down-payment on a home, she encouraged him to invest their money in the restaurant he always wanted.

Cortes said that, when the landlord called to offer him the building, they were in the hospital, with Margarita in labor. That day, his son was born, and the next day, he had a restaurant.

While the original location at 2555 N. Lake Avenue is a full sit-down restaurant, they opened another location at Lincoln Crossing, 2234 Lincoln Avenue, that emphasizes take-out Mexican food.

El Patron has also branched out to help the community in many ways. Once a month, the restaurant holds a fundraiser where 15 percent of the proceeds go to a local organization. Beneficiaries have included the Altadena Relay for Life, the Altadena Library Alliance, and the St. Mark's Church Haiti fund.

El Patron's pop-up tent also shows up at community events, including the Farnsworth Park summer concert series, the Altadena Community Center 10th Anniversary Celebration, the North Lake Pole Holiday Festival and Sidewalk Sale, and it has been part of last year's "Taste of Altadena" at the Chamber of Commerce annual meeting.

"I feel good -- it's exciting," Cortes said about the Chamber's honor. "I wasn't expecting to be Business of the Year. It's an accomplishment for me and my team."

El Patron Mexican Restaurant and Monica Hubbard will be honored at the Altadena Chamber's installation of officers and "Taste of Altadena" dinner at the Altadena Town & Country Club on Feb. 6, 2015.

DAWN SPACECRAFT BEGINS APPROACH TO DWARF PLANET CERES

NASA's Dawn spacecraft has entered an approach phase in which it will continue to close in on Ceres, a Texas-sized dwarf planet never before visited by a spacecraft. Dawn launched in 2007 and is scheduled to enter Ceres orbit in March Dawn recently emerged from solar conjunction, in which the spacecraft is on the opposite side of the Sun, limiting communication with antennas on Earth. Now that Dawn can reliably communicate with Earth again, mission controllers have programmed the maneuvers necessary for the next stage of the rendezvous, which they label the Ceres approach phase. Dawn is currently 400,000 miles from Ceres, approaching it at around 450 miles per hour.

The spacecraft's arrival at Ceres will mark the first time that a spacecraft has ever orbited two solar system targets. Dawn previously explored the protoplanet Vesta for 14 months, from 2011 to 2012, capturing detailed images and data about that body.

"Ceres is almost a complete mystery to us," said Christopher Russell of UCLA, principal investigator for the Dawn mission. "Ceres, unlike Vesta, has no meteorites linked to it to help reveal its secrets. All we can predict with confidence is that we will be surprised."

The two planetary bodies are thought to be different in a few important ways. Ceres may have formed later than Vesta, and with a cooler interior. Current evidence suggests that Vesta only retained a small amount of water because it formed earlier, when radioactive material was more abundant, which would have produced more heat. Ceres, in contrast, has a thick ice mantle and may even have an ocean beneath its icy crust.

Ceres, with an average diameter of 590 miles, is also the largest body in the asteroid belt, the strip of solar system real estate between Mars and Jupiter. By comparison, Vesta has an average diameter of 326 miles, and is the second most massive body in the belt.

The spacecraft uses ion propulsion to traverse space far more efficiently than if it used chemical propulsion. In an ion propulsion engine, an electrical charge is applied to xenon gas, and charged metal grids accelerate the xenon particles out of the thruster. These particles push back on the thruster as they exit, creating a reaction force that propels the spacecraft. Dawn has now Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California. completed five years of accumulated thrust time, far more than any other spacecraft.

"Orbiting both Vesta and Ceres would be truly impossible with conventional propulsion. Thanks to ion propulsion, we're about to make history as the first spaceship ever to orbit two unexplored alien worlds," said Marc Rayman, Dawn's chief engineer and mission director, based at NASA's Jet

WEATHER LORE

Aside from consulting with newspapers, the weather service, and such online services as Weather Underground, you should learn to make your own weather observations, and learn to interpret what you see. If nothing else, this helps to increase your awareness of the environment and keeps you alert.

Birds perch more and fly lower before a storm because the lowpressure air makes it harder to fly.

A barometer – either store-bought or home-made – is a good tool for determining if there will be clear days or rain ahead. A rising barometer indicates decreasing air pressure and clear weather, while a rapidly falling barometer sometimes forecasts rain, snow, or other stormy weather.

Though you might have a barometer on your wall at home, most people do not carry a barometer with them into the wilderness areas. However, many people do carry altimeters (sometimes built into their wrist watches), and these are essentially barometers. First, you need to know where you are on your map, and your altimeter needs to be accurate. Then, over the course of a day or so, if our altimeter shows a higher elevation than is accurate, it means the pressure is falling and this could indicate that a storm is coming. If the altimeter shows a lower elevation than what the map indicates, then the pressure is rising and you have a general indication of clear or clearing weather.

The key here is an accurate altimeter, and your observation of a change in the altimeter while you were at the same location.

Dew on the grass at night or early morning can be a sign of fair weather, and dry morning grass can foretell rain or an overcast day. However, in some areas where it is very dry, you may not get morning dew even though the day will be clear.

The presence of a red sunrise or sunset is also a good general indicator of the weather to follow. A red sunset generally indicates fair weather, and a red sunrise may foretell rain within 48 hours. A simple rhyme makes it easy to remember: "Red sky at night, sailors delight; red sky in morning, sailors take warning."

Learning to read the clouds can be another skill for short-term weather forecasting.

For example, cumulus clouds are the puffy, flat-based, cauliflower-like clouds which are constantly changing. They mean fair weather followed by clear nights. However, if they begin to stack up into cumulonimbus clouds, that means rain or snow is on the way.

Cumulonimbus clouds result from strong vertical air currents. These are the most familiar thunderheads, with winds often molding the tops into an anvil form. Their based may almost touch the ground in the mountains, and violent updrafts can carry the tops to 75,000 feet. In their most violent form, they can produce tornadoes. Usually a sign of approaching storms, these cumulonimbus clouds will drop rain or snow, and sometimes hail.

There are many other natural signs which will tell you about upcoming weather systems. Most of these signs are fairly logical once you understand the mechanisms at work. One of the best books on this subject is Eric Sloane's illustrated "Weather Book." Sloane gives the reader a basic understanding of the principles which control weather, and his beautiful drawings make the subject easy to grasp.

I have also learned a lot from Ellsworth Jaegar's "Wildwood Wisdom" and from the weather section of most Boy Scout manuals.

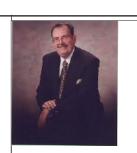

Observing short-term weather signs is a good way to increase your awareness. When planning your trips, take advantage of all the modern resources.

Once while discussing weather with meteorologist Dr. George Fischbeck, well-known to Southern California TV audiences, he told me that he is very suspect of the long-term weather projections of a week to 10 days. "Weather is a very dynamic thing," he told me. "No one can accurately predict the weather beyond more than 48 hours.

How to determine weather conditions by observing a rope that was hung from a tree limb:

The weather condition is: If the rope is: MOVING Windy STILL Calm INVISIBLE Foggy WET Rainy DRY Sunny GONE Hurricane

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

WHAT IT WAS, WAS FRUITCAKE

The period between November 1 and January 1 happens to be my favorite time frame. Oh yes, there is the idea of Christmas and Christmas presents and o all of that. I certainly enjoy Christmas with my family and friends.

As the oldest person in my family, (I will never mention aloud that the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage is a wee bit older than myself), it is my duty to pay for all of these Christmas presents. By the time January 1 rolls around, I am just about broke.

What good is money if you can't spend it on your favorite people in all of the world? I won't say that ny family is the best people in all of the world, although it is true, I just won't say it aloud.

What I do like about this period of the year are the delicacies of the season. It is the time of the year to plurge on the finer elements of life. By that, I mean food. I don't think it's possible to get too much food uring this time of the year.

My wife is infamous for looking at me and saying, "Don't you think you've had enough?" Being married as long as I have I only allow her to say, "Don't you think..." And I stop her right there, shake my head vigorously and say, "No I don't think. Tis the season not to think." And I'm not bragging or anything, but when it comes to not thinking I have perfected the art.

I have one rule when it comes to this time of the year. Vegetables are completely off my diet. All year long my wife force feeds these wretched vegetables on me as though it was good for my health. The only thing good for my health is to eat them so that she doesn't badger me as much as she can. But vegetables? At Christmas time?

This time of the year is the time for me to exploit the delicious delicacies of the season. I can't think of ny dessert at this time of the year that I don't indulge in and do it right smartly. Whenever I'm invited to a party, I always manage to bring some kind of dessert. And I don't bring the dessert for the host. I bring the dessert for me. When you are at a party, it is not polite not to eat the dessert. And I want to be as polite as I can along this line.

It was a couple days before Christmas when I realized something rather strange. Of course, being who am thinking about something strange comes rather normal. But this was something a little different. I turned to my wife and said, "Have you noticed something absent this year during the Christmas

"Vegetables?" She said somewhat sarcastically.

"No, something else."

Then I explained what I have not seen this holiday season. They must be around, but I have not run nto any this year.

What I have missed this year is the good old fashion Fruitcake. What is the Christmas season without Fruitcake?

There was a time when Fruitcake was everywhere you looked and you couldn't get away from it. Of ourse, I never tried to get away from Fruitcake. Being the nut that I am, I absolutely love Fruitcake. I know many people make fun of this holiday delicacy. I'm not one of them. I don't make fun of that vhich has some special meaning. Only during the holiday season can you get this wonderful, delightful

Just think about it for a minute. On the one hand, you have "fruit," and on the other hand, you have cake." What two things could merge in such a harmonious marriage of deliciousness? The goodness of the fruit cancels out the badness of the cake.

Now when I say badness of the cake, I'm only quoting my wife. I have never seen a cake that was bad, xcept the one that I can't eat. Cake is the one thing that makes a gathering worth gathering. Don't you think it's a little hypocritical for those people who think a cake is bad, andthen have it on could go on from there if you want me to. No matter what the celebration, cake makes it better. I fondly remember the first time I brought home Fruitcake for our Christmas festivities. I set it on the table and my wife looked at me and said, "What in the world is that?"

ertain celebrations? For example. How could you have a wedding without having a wedding cake? I

I looked at her and smiled one of those smiles that comes to someone who is happy to be doing what he's doing at the time and said, "This is not from the world, my dear, this is from heaven." Then I explained to her what a fruitcake was. I'm not sure she bought the whole story.

Life is full of combining things and when combined with other things they take on a new identity. I think life is much like a Fruitcake.

Perhaps Jesus said it best, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart:

and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:29-30). When we combine our life with Jesus we take on His identity.

DANNY Tyree 2015: SOME NEAR-SURE BETS FOR THE NEW YEAR

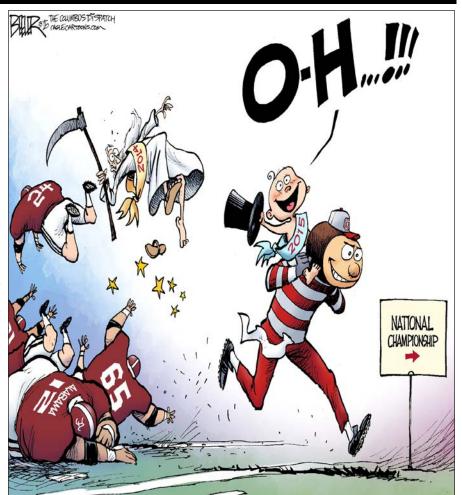

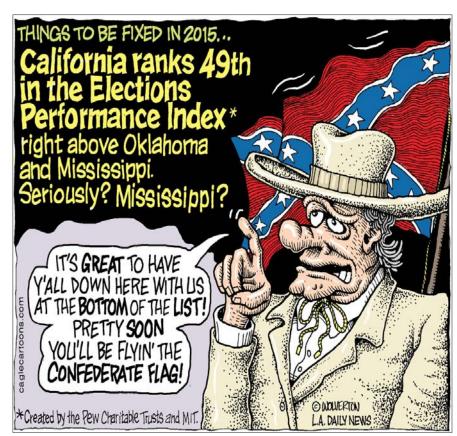

Judging by past performance, I have determined with 95 percent accuracy that you can expect the following "shocking" developments in 2015:

- Archaeologists in Israel discover a thumb-sized fragment of pottery and announce with certainty that Judas Iscariot was in reality (a) the brother-in-law of Jesus, (b) the "love child" of Jesus or (c) a bird-like dinosaur.
- A near-mint copy of "Action Comics" #1 (1938, the first appearance of Superman) sells for an unbelievable amount – and the new owner is dismayed to learn that the ads in the magazine provide waaay better medical advice than Dr.
- August 17: scientists discover 17 species of invisible fifth-dimensional amphibians that defy all laws of physics. August 21: Al Gore declares, "The science
- Rush Limbaugh causes a stir when the world press erroneously reports that he consoled a grieving little boy by telling him that moderate Republicans can go to
- Post-trilogy Hobbit withdrawal sets in. Fans petition Peter Jackson to direct a new $200 million epic based loosely on J.R.R. Tolkien's laundry list.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"In order to maintain an untenable position, you have to be actively ignorant. Our motto on the show is, 'Keep your facts, I'm going with the truth'.

Stephen Colbert

I know it's premature, but with the start of the New Year I look forward to getting my taxes taken care of. If I'm due a refund, the sooner the better. If it turns out I owe, I like to know how much I've got to get together by April 15. I also like to have time to try to make the facts and figures produce a desired outcome; establishing that practically everything I spent money on over the past year was either a business

I try – but it doesn't work. Most all of what I get is taxable income, and I can squeeze out only so many deductions. The facts and figures speak for themselves, regardless of what I'd rather have them say.

This brings me to the incoming 114th Congress. The majority party has already made news the week before it convenes: Rep. Michael Grimm (R-NY) has resigned after settling charges of felony tax evasion; Rep. Blake Farenthold (R-TX) has been sued by a former communications director for sexual harassment; House Majority Whip Steve Scalise (R-LA), the third-most powerful member of the new Congress, first said he couldn't remember having spoken before a white supremacist group a dozen years ago, then later remembered but denied having been aware of the views of the group, the European-American Unity and Rights Organization led by former KKK Grand Wizard David Duke.

(Conservative RedState blogger Erick Erickson asked, "How do you show up at a David Duke event and not know what it is?" Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) commented, Whip Scalise's involvement with a group classified by the Anti-Defamation League as anti-Semitic and the Southern Poverty Law Center as a hate group is deeply troubling for a top Republican leader of the House." Rep. Steve King (R-IA) compared Rep. Scalise to Jesus.) It didn't make as much news, but Republicans announced that under new rules the figures pertaining to our nation's budget will no longer speak for themselves, but will say whatever the majority party wants them to; whatever it takes to produce that desired outcome, regardless of the facts.

Their proposal involves a process called "dynamic scoring", and blocking the reappointment of Doug Elmendorf as head of the Congressional Budget Office. The problem's been that the CBO has let facts and figures speak for themselves. Under the new rules, the CBO and House Joint Committee on Taxation would be required to factor macroeconomic considerations into their scoring, such as how more tax cuts for the wealthy and corporations lead to breaking open capital markets bringing wealth and prosperity to

Never mind they've been using the same "trickle-down" argument for decades, and for decades it's been shown to be wrong. It's like requiring the IRS, in deciding whether to classify all my expenses last year as deductible, to consider what the impact on the community will be as I use the inflated refund check to support local charities; never mind that refunds in the past have inevitably gone towards car repairs and credit card balances

House Ways and Means Chmn. Paul Ryan (R-WI) calls the proposed new dynamic scoring rules "reality-based". Prof. Robert Reich of UC Berkeley calls it "magical"; a term borrowed from Reagan budget director David Stockman, who, in his report to Congress rationalizing Reagan's proposed cut in the top tax rate from 70% to 28%, dealt with "embarrassing questions" with what he termed "magic asterisks". As it turned out, the result of that rate cut was a near-doubling of our nation's debt.

Reich points out how the CBO, referred to by Newt Gingrich during his presidential campaign as a "reactionary socialist institution", has become a "truth-telling thorn in the Republicans' side". It reported how the mostly-for-the-rich tax cuts of the first Pres. Bush cost our nation some $3 trillion in revenue. It took a look at Rep. Ryan's own budget proposal, which entailed more tax cuts for the rich and corporations, slashing Medicaid and turning Medicare into a voucher program. Rep. Ryan maintained it would cut the budget deficit; the CBO clearly did not agree.

It's not just tax policy and the CBO; Prof. Reich cites Republicans' approach to topics as diverse as climate change, wealth inequality, prevalence of "voting fraud" to justify voter suppression, torture revelations and even evolution, concluding, "The pattern seems to be: if vou don't like the facts, make them up."

In its editorial, USA Today describes dynamic scoring as "the budgetary version of voodoo math", a process "tailor-made to produce the results that politicians want, enabling them to avoid tough choices." As for ousting CBO Director Elmendorf, "He is being targeted by overtly political groups that want a CBO that will provide support for ideological arguments on fiscal policy.' It's not the facts, but the messaging that matters. As reported by Media Matters last

July, segments dealing with economic issues on nation-wide broadcast and cable news shows during the second quarter of 2014 featured a total of 654 guests, of whom 59% were journalists and 25% were political. The number of actual economists appearing in these segments on economic issues was 18,

That fact and those figures speak for themselves.

Happy New Year!

A WORD FROM THE PUBLISHER

Susan Henderson, Publisher/Editor

DO YOU WANT A BETTER 2015?

Well, we've entered into another year and for that everyone should be happy. We've lived to see another day, another year. Most people hope that the New Year will bring more peace and happiness than the last. I certainly do. Personally, I've been blessed. Wonderful, loving family, good health – not perfect but certainly nothing to complain about. I've completed my eighth year of publishing this weekly newspaper in Sierra Madre and surrounding communities with a fantastic group of supporters, contributors, and staff; and much more. As my parents used to say, "Be grateful you have a roof over your head and food on your table", and I certainly am. However, that does not mean that for one minute I am not disturbed with much of what I see in the world outside my little bubble.

2014 has been a year that has really poured salt into the wounds of racial division that still exists in our country. And it is not just against African Americans, it's against Latinos

- "send them all back", it's against Asian Americans, "not in my backyard", and everyone else who is 'different'. But during the last year, the African American community has garnered the most attention and people, including me, are upset about it. It is so hard to listen to people go on and on about how "Michael Brown should have just stopped when the policeman told him to". That's correct, however, I've read nowhere where the penalty for disobeying a police officer is immediate execution. Same goes for Eric Garner, the man who died in a police chokehold for selling cigarettes in New York. And on and on. Things are still not as they should be in this country when it comes to how we view each other.

I had someone who I thought was a friend (not of color) tell me once that "black people just shouldn't wear hoodies then we wouldn't be scared". Seriously. And what is so sad is that she, and probably some of you who are still reading this column don't see a thing wrong with that statement.

We've got to get a grip people. The problems that plague our society do not get better by trying to make a particular group of people responsible for them. That goes for the racist who makes judgments based on ethnicity as well as those who generalize all police officers as bad. I can't offer you any instant way to fix things but they must get better before our society implodes.

I take that back. I can tall you have we can start to make things botter. We can start with ourselves

I take that back. I can tell you how we can start to make things better. We can start with ourselves. Let's stop the generalizations, even jokingly, that disparage people who are different. Let's make a concentrated effort for seeing people as individuals, and not as the twin of the last person we saw on the news. And for heaven's sake, let's not take what we hear on social media or even network news as gospel until you've heard the story for at least a week. Then you will know which parts are accurate.

Let's deal with our fears in a rational manner. The other day I got on the elevator and before I reached my destination, a young white man got on. A young man who was dressed like the average twenty something, baggy pants, hoodie with a demeanor that seemed to exude 'I don't give a damn'. We rode together for what seemed like forever and finally I reached the floor where I got off. I was so relieved. And then I had to stop and ask myself, "why were you afraid"? What did that young man do to make you concerned about your safety? Not a damned thing. But, as a senior, black woman on an elevator alone, every negative thing that you can imagine flashed across my mind. Was I going to be assaulted, was I going to be robbed or what? For no reason other than my giving in to the stereotypes that we have for young people who dress like, well, young people. And, I was really annoyed with myself because I think I am really one of the most open minded people on the planet. I suppose that with all the hysteria and hype about violence and this craze of just running up to people and hitting them, even I was concerned.

But, I will tell you what I did do. When the young man got on the elevator, I nodded my head as to acknowledge his presence and when I got off, I told him to have a nice day, respecting him as an adult human being. That's the kind of thing we all can do to help make things better. Show respect each other regardless of what you think they ought to say or do.

Perhaps if we start with ourselves we can also diminish the amount of hatred that permeates the air. It will also help us fend off the insane manner that we select people to run for public office. In my opinion when you find a candidate who can only spew forth vitrolic rhethoric about what's wrong and cannot articulate anything that he/she will DO to make things right, let's pass on that candidate because they are doing nothing but playing on our fears and emotions. The government isn't some alien entity, it is our government and it is the sum total of what we put into it.

So I guess my welcome to 2015 message is let's all do better. Let's start with ourselves, one person at a time. That's how hatred spreads, so let's see if we can make love and respect spread the same way. Let's make 2015 the year when we passionately, as individuals, work on real change. Ujima!*

*Ujima is the Kwanzaa principle of Collective Work and Responsibility which reminds us of our obligation to the past, present and future, and that we have a role to play in the community, society, and world.
