Coco's Restaurant, located at Colorado and Foothill in Arcadia was victimized by an armed robbery on Sunday evening. Photo courtesy infoUSA

By Dean Lee

A man walked into the restaurant with a semi-automatic handgun late Sunday night and demanded cash from the manager before locking two employees in the freezer and fleeing the scene with a backpack full of money.

As of Monday, Arcadia police officers were still looking for the suspect described as a 20 year old Black male about 5 feet 10 inches tall with a slim build. Reports suggest the suspect was wearing dark clothing, including a hooded jacket and a facemask.

According to local news reports, Arcadia police officers responded to an armed robbery call at 10:31 p.m. after employees from Coco's Restaurant, 1150 W. Colorado Boulevard, dialed 911 saying they had been robbed.

During the robbery the suspect demanded the restaurant manager fill a backpack with cash before locking two employees in a freezer. The suspect entered through a back door. No customers were in the building at the time. A third employee was unaware of the robbery and no one was hurt.

Anyone with information can call Arcadia Police at (626) 574-5123 or anonymously through "Crime Stoppers" at (800) 222-8477.

COMMANDER DAVE LOERA CHOSEN AS SIERRA MADRE'S 2014 CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

The Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce announced on Thursday the winner of the 2014 Citizen of the Year. By an overwhelming number of ballots cast, Dave Loera, Commander of VFW 3208 was selected.

The announcement came as a complete surprise to Loera who was lured to the Veterans Wall in Memorial Park by VFW colleague Duncan MacGillivray. Known as an extremely punctual man, Loera was there ten minutes early and wasn't the least bit surprised to see his daughter-in-law Shawna and grandson, 5 year old Lancelot in the park. Nor did he notice members of the Chamber of Commerce Board slowly assembling. In fact, he struck up a regular 'how are you doing' conversation with one member. But soon, when he saw his son and daughter and other family members, he was a bit puzzled. When told by Chamber President Ed Chin that he had been nominated and selected as the Citizen of the Year, he was speechless. The site of the presentation was chosen because it would not be difficult to get Dave to the Veteran's Wall in a moment's notice. He has worked and still works diligently to get Sierra Madre residents to submit names and photos to be placed on the wall.

JOSEPH JACK RAMSEY 11/1/56 – 12/29/14

Joseph "Joe" Jack Ramsey passed away Dec. 29th, 2014 at Arcadia Methodist Hospital. Joe Ramsey, son of Jack S. Ramsey and Helen L. Ramsey, was a father, a husband, and a friend, loved and respected by many. He was also a musician, a record producer, and a small business owner.

Joe was born at City of Angels Medical Center in Los Angeles. He spent his first three years living in Altadena, then moved to Arcadia, where he attended Dana Middle School, Arcadia High School and Pasadena City College. In the mid-1970s, Joe moved to Sierra Madre where he (mostly) lived until he moved to Monrovia in 2011. Joe's early jobs were at Licorice Pizza and the Wherehouse, record stores where he could indulge himself with his first great love, music. These jobs were a natural progression following his entry into performing, appearing with bands as early as middle school. Joe went on to perform with numerous bands, including HiFi, Chance, Foul Play, The Item, The Cyclones and many others. His greatest musical success came with The Prime Movers from 1983 to 1988, which was signed to Island Records and toured the UK, opening for Big Country, as well as domestically, and Dread Zeppelin, with whom he performed more than 900 gigs during several world tours. Dread Zeppelin's first album, Un-Led-Ed, sold a million copies, and the band appeared on television and portrayed themselves in the motion picture National Lampoon's Last Resort. Ramsey performed under the stage name Severs Ramsey with The Prime Movers and Jah Paul Joh in Dread Żeppelin.

In his later years, Joe's life went full circle, as he went back into the work force selling vinyl records during its recent resurgence in popularity, first at Berdan Records in Monrovia and then partnering with Sean Sprinkel to open Resistor Records, also in Monrovia. But he hadn't given up performing, organizing a concert at Matt Denny's in Arcadia that featured many of his old bandmates from both his school days and throughout his career.

In the late 70s, Joe partnered with several friends to open Marquee West, a rock and roll club in Arcadia. In 1983, he opened his own independent record label, Birdcage Records, home to such acts as not only his own Prime Movers and Dread Zeppelin, but artists such as Stan Ridgway, Ron Asheton, and Pietra Wexstun, In Vivo, The Mystery Band and others.

In 2002, Joe met and began dating Allison Koester-Martinez. The two were married, and had two daughters, Mika, 6 and Kaiya Jo, 4. And Joe loved being their daddy...according to Allison: "Joe's sole passion in life was creating music. He lived and breathed it. After we had our babies, his focus shifted and he only had eyes for them. He still had that musical fire burning in him, but all he wanted was to make sure these little girls were happy, secure, and loved like crazy."

Joe is survived by his wife, Allison, his two daughters, Mika and Kaiya Jo, and a sister, Elizabeth Brierty. Members of the family gathered on Jan. 2nd to say goodbye prior to Joe's cremation at Forest Lawn in Glendale. Plans are in the works for a memorial gathering/concert possibly in February or early March with several bands that Joe had discussed bringing together for a concert. An announcement will be made when the details are worked out, you will be able to find the information on line at the website referenced below.

Joe's passing was the result of a decade long battle with medical problems consisting of a heart attack, cancer, and a recent stroke. Some of Joe's legion of friends and fans have created a website to help the family with the bills incurred by these issues, and if you'd like to donate you can do so by visiting www. JoeRamseyFamilyFund.com.

From the website: This fundraiser is initiated and supported by the many people who have known and loved Joe Ramsey and his family over the years. Donations to this fund will go to help defray medical costs as well as funeral expenses, costs of living for Allison and the children, and future needs of the little Submitted by Bill Coburn

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"Three phrases that sum up Christmas are: Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men, Not Included." and Batteries Anonymous

Why is it that putting up Christmas decorations, even though they're the same ones you've had for a million years, is so much more fun that taking them down. Also, why is it that the Christmas decorations that seem so few and so light as you take them out of the basement and up the stairs have doubled (like wire hangers) in size and tripled in weight and you can't remember when on earth you carried all those up, said the Grinch who seems to unearth a bunch more of them every time she turns around.

Did you get downtown to look at our Mayor's Trophy prize winning, "I Think I Can!" float while it was on display in Kersting Court? It looked so great under construction and then as it went by on Channel 5's telecast. But when we saw it up close and personal...just plain gorgeous. It was such a nice day to be outside and then seeing all the roses, the giraffes, the bear and the sock monkey. Delightful! Saw Rose Princesses Alexi Zate, Britney Stone and Kristine Kuhn looking very cute in their tiaras and jeans selling flowers out by the float to get a head start on next year's float. Our princesses are not only lovely, but they are

We're a week into the New Year and I'm actually keeping the resolution I made. OK, it's only a week, but how are you doing with yours? What's at the top of most people's resolution list? Lose weight. Yep, year after year, we all want to lose weight. What else do we want to change about ourselves? More exercise? Less TV? More reading? Tackle the World's Great Books? Meditate? There are so many things we can do to make ourselves crazy trying to remake ourselves.

Exercise. Sigh... I don't do enough of it and I know it. You probably don't either. My best walking buddy and I do about half an hour most days, but I know that's not enough. He would be totally thrilled if I'd bump the walk time up to more, but I'm a terrific excuse maker...Ît's cold! It's hot! But those are really lame and we'd both be better off with just a little more. For years we've talked about taking a walk in the evening but there's something about it getting to be the end of the day when all one really wants to do is get into the jammies and not do anything more difficult than walking into the kitchen for... wait for it... not ice cream...not cookies... no, we want another glass of Trader Joe's sparkling water.

We get to the gym about once a week, which also isn't enough. The world of serious exercise folks tell us that we need just as much resistance training as we do cardio. Weight training makes for stronger bones and all good stuff. But you can't go gym till you do something with the bed-head hair, put some concealer on the bags under the eyes and, for pity's sake, just a little blush so one doesn't look dead. The walk – just put on the sweats, the jacket and the shoes and head out the door.

This is getting way too close to home! I'm actually going to have to act on this as I've written it down. OK, the world is my witness, I'm going to start walking further every time we go out the door. Even if it's freezing? Yep, even then. Resolved! And so far, so good. Here's another resolution I made after reading Susan Henderson's editorial in last week's paper. If you missed it, here are a few of her thoughts that really struck me: If we want to make society better, we must start with ourselves. How about not making generalizations that disparage people who are different. Consider making a concentrated effort to see people as individuals instead of lumping them in with whatever group is making bad news currently. If we start with ourselves, we can diminish the amount of hatred that permeates the air. Here is her resolution, with which I wholeheartedly agree: Let's all do better! Let's start with ourselves, one person at a time. Let's see if we can make love and respect spread that way. Let's make 2015 the year when we passionately, as individuals work on real change.

"Let there be peace on earth and let it begin with me." Jill Jackson Miller and Sy Miller

Upon arrival, Officers were informed that the location was locked and secured on December 24th, and upon returning that morning, one of the garage door locks was missing. After a walk through was performed, it was determined nothing was missing from the garage. As Officers investigated the area further, they were contacted by another city employee who informed them two other garages had the locks cut off. Further investigation determined scrap metal and copper wiring had been stolen from the facility. The estimated value exceeded $1,000 in property loss. This case has been forwarded to the Detectives Bureau. At 10:38 am, Sierra Madre police responded to the 300 block of North Lima St. to meet a citizen requesting assistance. # Antonovich Criticizes Cost of AB60

L.A. County Mayor Michael Antonovich sharply criticized the $240 million dollar cost to implement AB60, authored by Democratic Assemblyman Luis Alejo of Watsonville and signed by Governor Brown, to issue 1.4 million California driver's licenses to illegal immigrants over the next three years. "Once again, the state has shortchanged the needs of foster children, emancipated foster youth, the mentally ill, and public safety by reallocating funding to a program that provides illegals with driver's licenses," said Mayor Antonovich. "The $240 million dollars should be used to enhance programs that serve the needs of the underserved and underprivileged which have been neglected for years by the state."

Implementation of this program will require hiring an additional 900 Department of Motor Vehicle employees. The funding for those employees will not come from the State General Fund; rather AB 60 assumes the cost will be covered by the license applications themselves at $32 a license. However, the DMV is already considering raising the fee for all new drivers' license from $32 to as $100 to cover the implementation cost of AB 60.

"AB 60 is an irresponsible law which provides another incentive to those who break federal immigration laws." said Mayor Antonovich. "In Los Angeles County alone, children of illegal immigrants born here are receiving over $640 million a year for welfare and food stamps. In addition the cost to provide medical services exceeds $500 million. These costs do not even include those illegal immigrants incarcerated in County jails".

Extremely long waits for scheduled appointments and walk-in appointments have been reported at most DMV offices. Residents living near DMV offices have reported dangerous conditions associated with parking and long lines on residential streets. The impacts of these lines and crowds have caused exasperation from business leaders as well as residents.

THE FROSTIG CENTER TO HOST DINNER AND AUCTION TO RAISE MONEY FOR CHILDREN WITH LEARNING DIFFERENCES

Pasadena, CA - Dining, dancing, inspiring entertainment and hard-to-resist auction treasures await guests attending The Frostig Center's benefit Saturday, February 21 at the Altadena Town & Country Club.

Proceeds from the event, "Celebrating the Students of Frostig - Courageous Hearts, Exceptional Potential," will support the school's Arts Program and FrostigBeyond, giving young adults the transition support they need for success after high school.

Whit Johnson, co-anchor of NBC Southern California's "Today in LA" will serve as Master of Ceremonies for the evening. Frostig's music and drama students will perform and long-term Frostig Center board members will be honored for their dedication. The event will also feature an auction of getaways to Napa Valley, Lake Arrowhead and New Mexico, a Florida resort package, artwork, culinary experiences, jewelry and much more.

Arts education and transition services play a critical role in teaching students who learn differently the life skills necessary to find personal strengths and weaknesses, and perseverance.

"Every day, starting right at first grade, Frostig School helps students with learning differences develop these crucial qualities so they can reach their full potential," said Dean Conklin, Frostig's executive director. "Sometimes success achieving these life skills doesn't happen during math class. Sometimes language arts doesn't hold the key either.

"For many Frostig students, music, art and drama have unlocked the door to confidence, creativity, and a previously unknown strength," Conklin said. "Kids who have a hard time talking to others or who find typical academics frustrating suddenly find joy and accomplishment acting and singing in the school play or selling their creations at our annual Evening with the Fine Arts.

The benefit begins at 6 p.m. Saturday, February 21 at the Altadena Town & Country Club, 2290 Country Club Drive in Altadena. Tickets are $150

This assistance might include help with college homework, job development or independent living skills. Other students may need community based support at the beginning of a new endeavor, such as navigating a new campus, learning the public transportation system, banking or shopping.

There is no mistaking the crucial importance of these kinds of transition support services for students with learning differences. According to a study published by the American Academy of Pediatrics, more than half of all young adults on the autism spectrum are not in school or employed during the two years after high school.

ASSEMBLY MAJORITY LEADER HOLDEN'S STATEMENT ON GOVERNOR'S 2015-16 PROPOSED BUDGET

PASADENA - "I echo the Governor Brown's sentiment that 'selfdiscipline and real prudence' are essential to keep our budget balanced and maintain the progress California has seen in the past few years. I thank the Governor for his leadership on the Rainy Day Fund and for following through on his promises to voters by saving $2.4 billion for future economic downturns.

This budget includes big gains for public education. I am very pleased to see $7.8 billion in new funding for K-12 education and California's community colleges. Although I had hoped the Governor would be able to give the University of California a larger budget increase, $120 million in additional funding is significant. The Cal State University system will get a similar amount. I remain committed to making college more affordable.

As a former mayor and city councilmember I am pleased to see Governor Brown paying back $533 million to local governments. This money will have a direct benefit to all Californians by improving local services and ensuring local governments can meet their obligations.

And, after years of neglect I am glad that Governor Brown is now willing to have a conversation about reinvesting in our state's infrastructure. I stand ready, willing and able to have that conversation with the Governor and my Legislative colleagues and draft a workable infrastructure plan to rebuild California's infrastructure, create jobs and put California's economy on track for sustained growth.

The Governor's proposed budget puts California on solid ground to continue to build up reserves while investing in a growing economy. I look forward to working with the Governor and the Assembly to produce a workable budget.

FOOTHILL MWD NOW OFFERING REBATES FOR LARGE RAINWATER TANKS

Foothill Municipal Water District (Foothill MWD or District) is pleased to announce the availability of rebates for cisterns. Cisterns are large rainwater harvesting tanks typically used to supplement the water supply for landscape irrigation. They are substantially larger than rain barrels and constructed of durable material, such as reinforced plastic, polyethylene or metal. Foothill MWD collaborated with Hey!Tanks LA and TreePeople to develop the cistern rebate program.

The offering of a cistern rebate complements an already existing rain barrel rebate program. The popularity of rain barrel rebates prompted the District to investigate an expansion of rainwater harvesting opportunities. While the rain barrel rebate program provides financial assistance for smaller rain catchment systems, the cistern rebate program will support residents looking to expand their rainwater harvesting capabilities.

Rebates will start at $0.15 per gallon for cisterns that are a minimum of 300 gallons up to a maximum of $2,000 per customer. Click here for the rebate application.

"Rainwater is a valuable resource that is currently wasted to the ocean when it runs off into the stormwater system," said Foothill MWD Board President Richard Atwater.

Atwater points to the sediment accumulation behind Devil's Gate Dam as an example of impeding stormwater capture. "Approximately 1.3 million cubic yards of sediment have accumulated behind Devil's Gate Dam since the Station Fire. This severely reduces the capacity for stormwater capture and recharge into the groundwater basin and ultimately impacts local water supplies. By capturing rainwater in large cisterns, we can at least use the water for our landscapes and reduce demands on imported water."

"This is an exciting program to roll out into the New Year," stated General Manager Nina Jazmadarian. "Last year the Governor declared a statewide drought emergency in January. As California continues its annual wet season, the cisterns program will support our residents in capturing stormwater to combat the ongoing drought. With the large rainwater tanks, more water can be captured and used for an extended period of time."

Residents are encouraged to read all program requirements and recommendations prior to applying.

Please submit completed applications to 4536 Hampton Road, La Cañada Flintridge, CA 91011. If you have any questions, please call 818-790-4036 or email ddrugan@fmwd.com.

Rebates will be on a first-come, first-served basis until funds are depleted.

Foothill Municipal Water District provides imported water to Crescenta Valley Water District, La Cañada Irrigation District, Mesa Crest Water Company, Valley Water Company, Lincoln Avenue Water Company, Las Flores Water Company and Rubio Cañon Land & Water Association. Kinneloa Irrigation District, another retail agency, takes no water from Foothill.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show THE HOBBIT: BATTLE OF THE FIVE ARMIES REVIEW

When it comes to 'Lord of the Rings' films, there are three important factors they always do well: intelligent plot, complex characters, and very well shot action sequences. However, 'Battle of the Five Armies' focuses on latter of the three but does not suffer because of it. Bilbo (Martin Freeman) and the band of dwarves have conquered

Smaug (Benedict Cumberbatch) and retaken the mountain. Now they must defend it from the elves, humans, and other dark forces that seek to take over Middle Earth. Like 'Return of the King', 'Battle of the Five Armies' is basically just one long battle. Most of the main character development and storyline have been explained and this is the massive payoff for the first two Hobbit movies. It is visually stunning, very well acted, and directed as well as any other Peter Jackson 'Lord of the Rings' films.

OLD SCHOOL FIST IMPRESSION AND A LOBSTER ROLL TO DIE FOR

This past week I finally made it to Old School Eatery, though my final review will have to wait till next week, because my findings were inconclusive because of only sampling two dishes. Spoiler alert: I did enjoy the dish that I had.

Years ago my dad Elmer Dills, would take us all the way up to Oxnard to a little restaurant in the harbor for what he thought were the best Lobster Rolls Sandwiches this side of the Atlantic, a few years back I was in Boston for a wedding and made way to feniel hall, an inside marketplace with shops and restaurants, more like counters I should say, that is where I found a lobster roll sandwich which I thought was the end all. Teamed up with a Boston Beer (not Sam Adams) it was truly a sandwich from heaven.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

Circa 2015, I have driven past by Twohey's Restaurant on Huntington Dr. if not 1000 times, darn close to it. You know the place the cute sign with the guy with the clothespin on his nose, and the banners of 4th of July specials or Baby Back s now until then all you can eat specials. Sharing a parking lot with In n' out must be a competitive nightmare or... well I digress. Just never felt like going in, maybe I had a preconceived thought of Marge pouring cold coffee or a patty melt that had seen better days, I know they are locally famous for serving breakfast all day and all night, but I must admit a bowl of fruit for breakfast and I am golden.

Ah but one afternoon I stopped in and as I always try to do if I am at Hustons, Ruth Chris or now Twohey's it is the bar or counter seating for me, I have to be in the middle of the action. Twohey's has over 300 items on the menu, a red flag for me!! I think fifty is too many. Upon perusing the menu, hidden on the second column of the sandwich selection was a Lobster roll $12.95, nothing about world famous or house specialty, no fanfare just a brief description of Maine lobster, diced and tossed with celery and house mayo. Could it be? Could something such as this bring back those memories of driving up to Oxnard with my dad, or my trip to Boston. I say Yes! This sandwich if not right on the mark was so close that I have to my best Paul Revere and let all my neighbors know about this sandwich, served with freshly cut potato chips is a winner. Found out that GM Charlie Cristos and family hail from beantown and fact owned Jimmy's Harbor restaurant and still import the hot dog bun from Boston. Now that is authentic. I was sold the first time having the Twohey's Lobster Rolls sandwich, but thought I'd take advantage of editor Susan's generous expense account and go twice, I changed things up a little and had the carrot salad, yes thumbs up. What else can I discover here at Twohey's? Honcho Jim Cristos tells me that besides all the onion rings being made every morning they make a pretty mean chili. I will return!

INGREDIENTS

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

3 tablespoons chili powder

1 tablespoon jalapeno hot sauce

2 pounds thin-cut bone-in pork chops (about 6 chops)

Kosher salt

4 stalks celery, chopped

1 large white onion, chopped

3 cloves garlic, chopped

2 cups low-sodium chicken broth 1 14 .5-ounce can no-salt-added diced tomatoes

1 15 -ounce can no-salt-added white beans, drained and rinsed

15 -ounce package chopped kale (about 6 cups packed)

Preheat the broiler. Whisk 1 tablespoon each olive oil, chili powder and hot sauce in a bowl. Season the pork chops with 1/2 teaspoon salt. Pierce the chops all over with a fork and rub with the spice mixture on both sides; place on a rack set over a baking sheet. Set aside.

Heat the remaining 1 tablespoon olive oil in a Dutch oven or large pot over medium-high heat. Add the celery, onion, garlic and the remaining 2 tablespoons chili powder. Cook, stirring, until the vegetables are translucent, about 8 minutes.

Add the chicken broth and tomatoes to the pot. Cook, stirring occasionally, until reduced by about one-third, about 7 minutes. Add the beans and kale; toss to coat. Reduce the heat to medium, cover and cook until the kale is tender, about 7 minutes. (Add up to 1/2 cup water if the mixture looks dry.) Season myself, how can I improve my life? neglected? enjoy doing this year? I always go back to my yoga practice. It's pure sustenance and gives me the inspiration to do what I want in my life.

Meanwhile, broil the pork until browned, 4 to 6 minutes. Flip; broil until cooked through, 2 more minutes. Serve with the kale and beans.

THE JOY OF YOGA THERE'S NO TIME!

Along with this self reflection, or Svadhyaya, goes my intentions I have set for the year. It's an exciting undertaking. But now comes the hard part; time to put the effort, energy, and time into bringing my aspirations to fruition. Yet, about Mid January, my personal time already feels squeezed with work, the kids, and a million other things. It's easy to sink into the rut of doing life and crossing "spiritual nourishment" off the to-do list. Yet, it's the very thing that will give me the energy and clarity to be present in my life. Funny that way.

Each new year I ask I have mentioned this before, many times, and I always have to reminded.

Getting on my mat gives me that vital check-in time that I need. My body receives the movement and exercise it needs while my mind can slow down and settle down. The at-home practice is always available, but nothing beats the group Shakti, or power, from attending class.

Expanding my practice is always at the forefront of my intentions. Whether it be through meditation, yoga studies or even through practice of core principle of yoga such as Ahimsa, or non violence. Broadening my self-understanding this way, makes me a better wife, mother, friend, and member of the community.

Make the time for your yoga practice, and life will be full and rich! No doubt about it. Come to class even when it feels impossible!

DISCIPLINE & A HEALTHY LIFE

"Discipline is getting yourself to do something you your health? Good habits require discipline and don't necessarily want to do to achieve a result you really want to get." -Andy Andrews

Most people want to be healthy, want to feel good, want to function well and live a long life. The healthiest and happiest people on the outside have usually done a lot of work on the inside or in

The discipline it takes to be healthy requires daily choices done consistently for a long time. Many of these choices are not easy. It requires that we have habits, good habits that we rely on to give us the best opportunity to have a healthy state of being. This requires that we take responsibility for our lives.

"Learn to love the things that are good for you." -Dr. Eric Plasker, author The 100 Year Lifestyle

If we can discipline ourselves and take responsibility for our lives, we recognize that between stimulus and response we have the ability to respond and this is where our power lies. We discipline ourselves to make choices, good choices and when we practice this discipline we develop habits and these habits develop our true character and this character determines our ultimate results. This discipline frees us to live unencumbered by illness or injury.

In regards to our physical health we will make choices in the areas of exercise, nutrition, rest and protecting our spine and nervous system.

The question arises are you developing good or bad habits in regards to taking responsibility for are not easy to put in place but once they are in place they are easy to live with. Bad habits develop when you are not responsible and do not discipline yourself. Therefore bad habits are easy to put in place but hard to live with.

When you are in crisis and suffering, the situation requires your utmost attention, you are motivated and desirous to reclaim your health. You will do whatever is required and follow instructions in an admirable fashion. However, as you become stable and relief has been achieved, do you proceed into the critical transition of rehabilitation and regeneration with the same fervor? Do you continue on the path to achieve optimum fitness and achieve lifestyle care?

Protecting your spine and nervous system with exercise, nutrition, rest and practicing good posture, and having your spine checked for interference and function is a discipline and practice of top performers whether it be in sports, entertainment, the board room or top performers in any industry. They make chiropractic care part of the health disciplines they practice regularly so their nervous system can function with ease and be well connected. The nervous system controls all the other systems so they are all necessary to build and maintain health.

In 2014 make regular chiropractic care part of the disciplines you employ to create great habits, outstanding character and the life you desire and

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

The gray wolf has been an indigenous inhabitant endangered species. Last month, Howell made her of what we now call North America, since way before Euro-settlers came into residence and began documenting the history of this amazing continent. In that way, I guess we modern-day Americans could say wolves are our predecessors. In fact, the gray wolf has contributed enormously to the human's success in occupying natural spaces globally, in all areas where they lived before us.

When European settlers began to show up on the shores of North America, and proceeded to travel from one side of the continent to the other, the gray wolves and all other wild animals who lived here were forced to migrate and acclimate as necessary, in order to survive and keep their populations in tact. Eventually, as the natural spaces became more occupied by humans, most wolves and many of their wild counterparts were forced completely out of their natural habitats, only to find themselves on the opposite side of a fence, peering over at a new type of animal they'd never before been privy to - domestic pets and livestock.

While the new American settlers were going about their business of taking over this continent's natural landscape and bullying the indigenous people out of their way, they soon realized that the wolves could provide pelts for protection against the elements. And so, the wolf became the new American's friend and their potential enemy all at the same time. The new-comers considered the wolf valuable for it's coat, but it was also a nemesis because of it's desire and ability to eat their delicious livestock and pets. That is when man's advantage of having guns and ammunition helped create a natural imbalance for all species involved, and sadly enough, the battle between wolf and human still continues to this day.

In recent years, the gray wolf has been revered as friend by some and as foe by others, and I believe that our government is rather stuck in the middle. Unfortunately, many our federal folks are too easily influenced by the color green, and I don't mean the environmental kind of green. Indeed, some of our elected officials on capital who are willing to pay to get their way on behalf that play a collective part in keeping it that way. of those who hired and pay them handsomely to pound the pavement for the mission. Fortunately, however, there are some "powers that be" who still maintain a standard of morality, and care about nature's balance and understand how it effects all of we humans in both the short, and long

One current "person of power" who understands and cares about the balance of nature is U.S. District Judge Beryl A. Howell. In fact, she cared enough to use her power to overturn the 2012 decision made by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that the gray wolves in the Great Lakes region should be removed from the list of protected

GRAY WOLVES HAPPILY HOWLING, YET AGAIN

would-be-but-not clandestine call based on the fact that the federal government had not complied with the Endangered Species Act of 1973 in their 2012 decision. I am so pleased that we still have leaders who pay attention to the details, and care enough to bring important facts to light, and in this case I know it made all animal and nature lovers extremely happy! Kudos to our beloved

Now, let's get down to the true reality that abides, and can bite when it comes to protecting wildlife in this country. Lobbyists will do and pay anything possible to get their way on capital hill. It's a fact that most people apparently don't like to address. I guess it's because it sounds wrong in a nation that we want to think of as being so strong and morally sound. Well, the truth does bite at times, so let's keep it real. The wolves in the Great Lakes Region are protected from hunters and other killers for now, but they still need our support. Soon enough, there will be a swing of the pendulum. There will be more lobbyists snuggling up to our leaders to get what they want to satisfy the other side of the fence. So, those of us who understand and care about what is happening with the wolves and, ultimately, with nature's balance, need to be vigilant.

It takes a nation to save a wolf, so it seems. I beg all of you to please do your part by keeping yourselves informed of current and proposed legislation. Take a moment to contact your elected officials regarding issues of importance, when they arise. Conduct frequent internet searches on what's happening with wildlife in America, and pay attention to what our leaders are doing on capital hill.

I know we Sierra Madreans don't live near the area immediately affected by this new switch of legislation - Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan (aka: Great Lakes Region) - but we should be supportive of any decision made to protect wild animals on our continent, and globally. We have our own battles to pick here in California, but the same mentality prevails for all states, which is the hill are vulnerable to the influences of lobbyists need to preserve nature's balance, and all species

Jeff's Book Picks By Jeff Brown

A COLDER WAR by Charles Cumming Internationally acclaimed as "a premier writer of espionage thrillers" (USA Today). Cumming returns with MI6 agent Tom Kell in a tour de force that will dazzle readers . A top-ranking Iranian military official is blown up while trying to defect to the West. An investigative journalist is arrested and imprisoned for writing an article critical of the Turkish government. An Iranian nuclear scientist is assassinated on the streets of Tehran. These three incidents, seemingly unrelated, have one crucial link. Each of the three had been recently recruited by Western intelligence, before being removed or killed. Then Paul Wallinger, MI6's most senior agent in Turkey, dies in a puzzling plane crash. Fearing the worst, MI6 bypasses the usual protocol and brings disgraced agent Tom Kell in from the cold to investigate. Kell soon discovers what Wallinger had already begun to suspect, that there's a mole somewhere in the Western intelligence, a traitor who has been systematically sabotaging scores of joint intelligence operations in the Middle East.

ASTORIA: JOHN JACOB ASTOR AND THOMAS JEFFERSON'S LOST PACIFIC EMPIRE: A STORY OF WEALTH, AMBITION, AND SURVIVAL

Astoria is the thrilling, true-adventure tale of the 1810 Astor Expedition, an epic, now forgotten, 3 year journey to forge an American empire on the Pacific Coast. Peter Stark offers a harrowing saga in which a band of explorers battled nature, starvation, and madness to establish the first American settlement in the Pacific Northwest and opened up what would become the Oregon trail, permanently altering the nation's landscape and its global standing. Six years after Lewis and Clark began their journey to the Pacific Northwest, two of the Eastern establishment's leading figures, John Jacob Astor and Thomas Jefferson, turned their sights to founding a colony on the West Coast and transforming the nation into a Pacific trading power. Stark recreates this pivotal moment in American history for the first time for modern readers, drawing on original source material .Unfolding over the course of three years, from 1810 to 1813, Astoria is a tale of high adventure and incredible hardship in the wilderness and at sea. Of the more than one hundred-forty members of the two advance parties that reached the West Coast one crossing the Rockies, the other rounding Cape Horn—nearly half perished. Though the colony would be short-lived, it opened provincial American eyes to the potential of the Western coast and its founders helped blaze the Oregon Trail.

THE INVENTION OF WINGS: A NOVEL by Sue Monk Kidd

Sue Monk Kidd presents a masterpiece of hope, daring, the quest for freedom, and the desire to have a voice in the world.. Hetty "Handful" Grimke, an urban slave in early 19th century Charleston, yearns for life beyond the suffocating walls that enclose her within the wealthy Grimke household. The Grimke's daughter, Sarah, has known from an early age she is meant to do something large in the world, but she is hemmed in by the limits imposed on women.Kidd's sweeping novel is set in motion on Sarah's eleventh birthday, when she is given ownership of 10 year old Handful, who is to be her handmaid. We follow their remarkable journeys over the next 35 years, as both strive for a life of their own, dramatically shaping each other's destinies and forming a complex relationship marked by guilt, defiance, estrangement and the uneasy ways of love. As the stories build to a riveting climax, Handful will endure loss and sorrow, finding courage and a sense of self in the process. Sarah will experience crushed hopes, betrayal, unrequited love, and ostracism before leaving Charleston to find her place alongside her fearless younger sister, Angelina, as one of the early pioneers in the abolition and women's rights movements. Inspired by the historical figure of Sarah Grimke. This exquisitely written novel is a triumph of storytelling that looks with unswerving eyes at a devastating wound in American history, through women whose struggles for liberation, empowerment, and expression will leave no reader

HOW TO CLAIM THE RETIREMENT SAVER'S TAX CREDIT

Dear Savvy Senior:

A coworker was recently telling me about a tax credit she got last year for simply contributing to our company's 401(k) plan. What can you tell me about this, and who's eligible?

Dear Over:

It's called the "retirement saver's tax credit," and it's Here's an example of how this works. a frequently overlooked credit that's available to low and moderate-income individuals and families who make saving for retirement a priority. Here's how it

If your contribute to a traditional or Roth IRA, or an employer sponsored plan like a 401(k), 457, 403(b), SEP plan, SIMPLE IRA or other retirementsavings plan, the retirement saver's tax credit will allow you to claim 10, 20 or 50 percent of your contribution, depending on your income, up to a maximum of $1,000 per person or $2,000 per

To qualify, you must also be at least 18 years old and not a full-time student, and were not claimed as a dependent on someone else's tax return. And your How to Claim adjusted gross income in 2015 must be $61,000 or less as a married couple filing jointly, $45,750 or less if filing as head of household, or $30,500 or less if you're a single filer. These income limits are adjusted tax return. Don't use the 1040EZ Form. annually to keep pace with inflation.

To get the 50 percent credit, you'll need to have an income below $18,250 if you're single, $27,375 if you're filing as head of household, and $36,500 for couples in 2015.

The 20 percent credit rate applies to individuals earning between $18,251 and $19,750; for head of household filers it's $27,376 to $29,625; and for couples it's $36,501 to $39,500.

And the 10 percent rate is for individuals with an adjusted gross income between $19,751 and $30,500; for head of household filers 29,626 to $45,750; and couples it's between $39,501 and $60,100.

HOSE DRINKERS

Let's say you're married and have an income of $37,000, and your spouse is not working. If you contribute $1,000 to your company's 401(k) plan, your adjusted gross income would be reduced to $36,000 on your tax return. You would also be able to claim a 50 percent retirement saver's credit, which is worth $500, for your $1,000 401(k) contribution.

Keep in mind though that this is a tax credit, not a deduction, so it lowers your income tax dollar for dollar. It is, however, a nonrefundable tax credit, which means it cannot reduce the amount of tax owed to less than zero.

To claim the credit, you will need to fill out Form 8880 (see irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/f8880.pdf) and attach it to your 1040, 1040A or 1040NR when you file your

If you think that you would have qualified for the credit in previous years but didn't claim it, you can file an amended return as far back as 2011 and still get the credits. A 2011 amended return is due by April 15, 2015. See IRS Form 1040X (irs.gov/pub/ irs-pdf/i1040x.pdf) for instructions on how to file an amended return.

And for more information on the retirement saver's tax credit, see IRS Publication 590 "Individual Retirement Arrangements" (irs.gov/ pub/irs-pdf/p590.pdf).

10 TIPS TO ENSURE FAMILY HARMONY OVER YOUR ESTATE PLAN

One of the many challenges my wife and I face as parents is simply trying to keep the peace between our children. Our six-year-old son and five-year-old daughter can be the best of friends ... and the worst of enemies (often alternating between the two multiple times within the span of just a few minutes).

I suppose it's all part of raising small children, but unfortunately, I see this same scenario play out time after time among adult siblings when a messy estate causes family rifts. And it doesn't need to be that way. In fact, if handled properly, your estate plan should help bring your children together rather than tear them apart. Here are 10 tips to help prevent your children from fighting over your estate:

1. Talk to children about your estate plan. It may be a difficult discussion to have, but you need to have it. If you find it too difficult, enlist the help of your estate planning attorney to go over the details of your estate plan with your children and answer their questions. In fact, because this is so important I include just such a "family meeting" in every estate plan I put together for my clients.

2. Write your children a letter. If you can't face a face-to-face discussion (or even if you can), put it in writing with as much detail as you are comfortable providing to your children. You can frame the discussion in general terms and ask for their input. This is a great way to get them invested in ensuring your plan works the way you want it to.

3. Émail your children your estate plan summary. Your estate planning attorney will usually provide you with a summary of your estate plan that doesn't disclose details or actual dollar amounts. Ask your estate planning attorney to copy your children on an email with the summary and ask for their input.

4. For complex estates, consider a mediator. If you com for more information. have a complicated estate that may include valuable collections or a family business, ask your attorney about bringing in a professional mediator who can meet with you and your children separately to identify any potential issues and then meet with you together to iron out those issues.

5. Use equal treatment. If possible, leave your children an equal inheritance; most family fights result from children being treated unequally.

child as a co-trustee of their own trust at a certain trust so they can learn about handling an inheritance with the guidance of the main trustee.

7. Consider staggered distributions from a trust. To help a child learn how to manage a substantial inheritance, estate planning experts often advise staggering distributions over a period of time (i.e.,

8. Provide children with an option to remove or replace the main trustee. Similar to arranged marriages, you never know if children and trustees will make a go of the relationship. Give children limited power to remove and replace a trustee with a different, qualified trustee.

9. Allow children to name their own co-trustee. If your children are competent adults, give them the power to name the independent co-trustee of their

10. Include mediation instructions in your estate plan. Your estate planning attorney can add mediation language so that if a dispute arises, your children will not be tied up in emotionally and financially draining litigation.

If you'd like to ensure your estate plan doesn't lead to a family feud, I'd be happy to sit down with you and help identify the best strategies to provide for and protect the financial security and family harmony of your loved ones.

How many stars like our Sun host planets like our Earth? NASA's Kepler Space Telescope continuously monitored more than 150,000 stars beyond our solar system, and to date has offered scientists an assortment of more than 4,000 candidate planets for further study—the 1,000th of which was recently

Using Kepler data, scientists reached this millenary milestone after validating that eight more candidates spotted by the planet-hunting telescope are, in fact, planets. The Kepler team also has added another 554 candidates to the roll of potential planets, six of which are near-Earth-size and orbit in the habitable zone of stars similar to our Sun.

Three of the newly-validated planets are located in their distant suns' habitable zone, the range of distances from the host star where liquid water might exist on the surface of an orbiting planet. Of the three, two are likely made of rock, like Earth.

Two of the newly validated planets, Kepler-438b and Kepler-442b, are less than 1.5 times the diameter of Earth. Kepler-438b, 475 light-years away, is 12 percent bigger than Earth and orbits its star once every 35.2 days. Kepler-442b, 1,100 light-years away, is 33 percent bigger than Earth and orbits its star once every 112 days.

"With each new discovery of these small, possibly rocky worlds, our confidence strengthens in the determination of the true frequency of planets like Earth," said Doug Caldwell, SETI Institute Kepler scientist at NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, California. "The day is on the horizon when we'll know how common temperate, rocky planets like Earth are."

"I HATE MY JOB"

particular gifts, serving the community by doing the things you love, even though it means starting small. Money is the fringe benefit of a job you like." Author unknown

It is not surprising to hear reportsthat 80% of all "workers" dislike their jobs, and that "jobs" are identified as the single greatest cause, or contributory factor to sickness or disease in nearly 80% of the people studied. I don't know how many Sierra Madre workers hate their jobs, but I suspect it is similar to the this study. In a 1973 survey in Massachusetts, a special Department of Health, Education, and Welfare task force reported that the best predictor for heart attack was none of the classic risk factors, but rather, the level of one's job dissatisfaction (Work in America: Report of a Special Task Force to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, 1973). It is possible that this finding might be related to the observation that heart attacks (in the United States and other Western industrialized nations) cluster on Monday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m., which is the beginning of the work week. [Kolata, 1986; Muller et al., 1987; Rabkin et al., 1980; Thompson et al., 1992].

We're not sure how scientific such studies can ever really be, but we're convinced from personal experience, and observation, and interviews, that the so-called workplace, and the human dynamics of the workplace, are a major culprit when it comes to poor health and sickness.

There are some of the obvious issues that have been reported excessively. Sitting behind a computer terminal all day, staring at that screen, your hands in one position. The loud noises associated with certain blue-collar jobs. The fumes and toxins associated with some manufacturing jobs and farming jobs. The repetitive and non-thinking nature of so many service-oriented jobs. But beyond these basic points, there is a more fundamental issue to look at. In general, these observations apply to someone who is working for someone else, not the person who owns or runs the business. Why is that? Because it is harder to enjoy a job which is essentially fulfilling someone else's goals.

WHY DO I DO WHAT I DO EVERY DAY?

Do you enjoy your work? No one seriously questions that we ought to perform duty in life, and that these duties are required to earn the medium of exchange for those things we cannot or choose not to make ourselves. But we seem to have taken this to a radical extreme. We recall a cartoon from an anti-automobile magazine. Two men are driving in a car on a gridlock freeway. The cars are not moving. The driver says, "I hate driving, but I need my car to get to work." The passenger says nothing. In the next panel, the two men are sitting behind computer terminals in a big office, and the first man says, "I hate work, but I need my job to pay for my

The cartoon was funny, but insightful into the way we have chosen to think about our world, and the choices that we have come to believe are necessary. That is, if 80% of traditional workplace workers hate their jobs, then that is having a profound effect, hour by hour on their health. Assuming a 40 hour work week, this means (conservatively) that one spends 30 minutes getting ready for work, 30 minutes driving to work, 30 minutes driving home, 30 minutes undressing, and "unwinding." That equals at least 10 hours a day, for most people, five days a week, with two days "off" to have to do whatever else it is that is important in your life. And if you hate whatever it is that you have devoted 50 hours a week to, you will very likely spend some of your free-time doing things to relax and get-away from what you felt you had to do to "pay the bills." In other words, your "job" under such circumstances takes even more from your life than just those 40 to 50 hours. In essence, a job that we perform becomes our very life. We identify with that job, whether or not we like it. It is foolhardy in the extreme to not consider "what we do for a living" as being a major contributory factor to our health and well-being.

So, now what?

Work is necessary. Work is good. But how do we get to a place where each person is spending the cream of their life promoting their own health and well-being, feeling good about what they are doing, making their own choices?

There are many trends in this direction already. Home-schooling is one example where parents want to take-back control of their child's education from an educational system that seems to have

Earn your living through your failed in most cases. And though there are many late night TV schemes you can buy to work at home and be independent, we suggest you switch off the TV and start with yourself.

What do you like? What do you like to do? What are you good at? Where would you like to spend a good portion of your day? What skills do you have which can be improved upon, or further developed, so you can turn that interest or skill into a profession? That is how you get started.

Let's go one step further. What is your purpose in life? We are not referring here to everyone's ultimate purpose in life. We are referring to your individual purpose for embodying on the earth. What is your dharmaic destiny? Have you ever asked yourself: "What did I come here to do?"

If you limit your concern only to "ways I can make money," you might succeed at breaking out of the nine-to-five rat race, but you will not yet have risen to the level of fulfilling your own dharmaic destiny. As long as one is spending the majority of one's life, time, and Light, at a job that they do not like, it is inevitable that your body rebels, and fights back, and explodes with occasional bouts of sickness, and flus, and colds, and headaches, and disease, until death.

Our health in the fullest sense is a factor of what we do, what we think, how we use our emotions and feelings. Yes, "we are what we eat" is true on both a physical and psychic level, though that does not go far enough. Everything we do arises from our thinking. This includes whatever work we choose, whatever life we pursue. Thus, it has also been said that "We are what we think we are," which is not quite the precision we prefer. We think it is more accurate to say: We are what we think.

Finding your optimum daily "work" activity is something that only you can do for you. You have to work at it. You may not hit-upon the all-around ideal best occupation at first, but if you have an attitude of willingness to learn, and a feeling of gratitude that you can actually pursue your own occupation (in many countries of the world today, this is neither legal or practical to do, because of the prevailing political, economic, or social conditions). It can only help to continually take classes at a local college, or even TV classes, and learn more to expand your skills. It can only help to take small business classes (via H&R Block or the Small Business Administrations, or local colleges). We are not in any way suggesting that there is some "magic" in finding the ideal occupation for you. We are simply saying that the very act of seeking your ideal occupation, and working towards it with an uplifting, positive attitude, can have a remarkable influence upon your overall mental and physical health.

One of the ways to begin pursuing "self-employment" is to take a large sheet of paper or poster, and vertically list all your skills and talents and interests and work-experience. Then list in the columns to the right all the "pros" of each pursuit, and all the "cons" to each pursuit. At this stage you might eliminate some pursuits because the cons outweigh the pros. In the next column, write how you might actually earn an income from each skill, talent, or interest. Let it be a brainstorm -- you won't know until you actually get into the field and apply this -- but list whatever possible ways you can determine to earn an income from each item on your list. Next, check off those skills, or talents, or interests which are at a level of competency where you could feasibly go out and begin earning an income.

Where possible, such a pursuit can be done with other family members or close friends and associates. Then you must make a decision, and where you know that you do not know something, find out! Call people already engaged in the activities you'd like to pursue. Ask them questions. In most cases, they will be willing to help and answer questions.

We again point out that our intent here is not to provide business advice" or "career planning." But this is an important area to personally deal with when you've decided to take control of your life, and ipso facto, your health.

The fact that money permeates our modern life is neither good" nor "bad," -- but it is something to be reckoned with. It has been said that arguments over money is the single greatest cause of marriages breaking up, and worry over money is one of the biggest ulcer and cancer causes in anyone who deals with money as a profession (stock broker, investor, commodity broker, etc.).

"No man can hope to control his destiny. The best he can hope for is to control himself -- ONE SINGLE ACT AT A TIME. EACH SINGLE ONE of those acts are like bricks in a wall. A wall made of such bricks is a man's character. -- Anon.

Obviously, there's a lot more to be said about this - we'll come back to this in another installment.

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

EVERYTHING NEW GETS OLD TOO SOON

I am not one to stay up New Year's Eve to watch some celebrity drop the ball at Times Square at midnight. All year long I have to put up with people dropping the ball so I'm not going to make a special effort to watch somebody drop another ball.

As for the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and myself we stayed home

New Year's Eve and enjoyed our own society. It's always good to have nothing to do and knowing that nobody will stop by and nobody's going to call us on the phone. A night with the cell phones quiet is like a night in the forest. Everybody is out celebrating the end of the old year. I think everybody has the right to celebrate in his or her own way.

One thing struck both of us as we were reclining and drinking some apple cider tea. Believe me, it's a rare occasion when the same thought invades both of our thinking space at the same time. She seems to always know what I'm thinking and I never seem to be thinking.

She looked at me and said, "Do you know what I've been thinking?" Being a husband for as many moons as I have been, I know a trick question when I hear it. Since this is the last night of the old year, how do I know she's not using it to get in one more trick question? But, it's the last evening of the old year and so I threw caution to the wind (which actually hit the wall) and walked into her question. "No, what have you been thinking?"

"I've just been thinking about how fast time flies." And then she seemed to stare into space.

She had a good point there. I'm not sure which airline time travels on but it sure does go fast. While I was musing, which isn't really that amusing, she then let her thoughts flow.

"Everything new seems to get old too soon. Just as soon as you get something new, in no time it becomes old.'

I suspect she was thinking of me when she used the word "old." I didn't say it, but I wanted to say, "Old is better than dead." Sometimes it's best to keep your mouth shut especially when I'm with

I don't say this too often, but she had a great point there. It's like when you buy a brand-new automobile at the auto dealer. It's new when you sign the contract, it's new when you step into the car and smell the freshness, but as soon as you drive it off the lot it's an old car. We then started to talk about all the happenings during the past year. Many things happen, some bad, some good. Then, for whatever reason, my wife brought out our old family photo album.

Whatever possessed her to do that I'll never know nor will I ask. We began looking at some of the old pictures, but those old pictures were new when they were taken. When we came to our wedding pictures, I was a little shocked. I didn't know anybody could look that young. There we were, a beautiful young bride and a somewhat handsome young groom. The only thing we had in common at the time was, we were both young.

Looking at those old pictures, particularly of myself, it hardly seems possible that this old geezer staring back at me in the mirror each morning is the same young man in those pictures. Whatever happened to that young man? Then we went through the arrival of children and then grandchildren. They were so young when they were born! Look at them now. As my wife closed the photo album, she asked a very simple question. "I wonder what's going to happen this New Year?" That sure opens up Pandora's Box.

That's an excellent question to ponder and only time will tell. Next year at this time we will know the answer to that question.

One thought did come to me, but I sure didn't want to tell her. Certain things a person needs to find out for herself. The only thing I'm sure of for this coming New Year is it I'm going to get a little bit older, whatever that means. I hope it doesn't mean I get grouchier or anything like that. Of course, I'm probably as grouchy as I'll ever get or anybody could get. Grouchy gets old real fast. Trust me. For a few moments, we sat in quiet, musing our own thoughts and if she was on the same wavelength as me, she was thinking about how fast our time has gone. You don't get a second chance to do many things in this life.

I'm not one for making New Year's resolutions, but if I were, I think one New Year's resolution I would make would be, make sure I take advantage of the time and people I have when I have them. Appreciate each day and each person because it may be the last time.

I think David might've had some thoughts along this line. "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread" (Psalm 37:25). I can't be young again but I can enjoy what God has put in front of me today.

A WORD FROM A BUCKEYE FANATIC

expression you just have to go and find your own happiness!", well after struggling through the horrific events of this week, I am desperately in need of

Don't get me wrong, as I said last week, the world in my bubble is fine. But the world outside gives me much more than a headache, it gives me a true pain in my heart. It makes me fearful of what the world will be like for my children when they get to be my age, or for my grandchildren when they become adults. So rather than letting my fears of what the future holds depress me; rather than worry if we will continue to exercise our 'freedoms' irresponsibly and ultimately destroy our way of life, I've decided to look to something that gives me hope and joy regardless of the consequences.

But before I get to that, I have to go back to something I referenced above. Today I have been absolutely overwhelmed with people voicing their opinions about the horrible situation in Paris. No doubt about it, the tragedy is inexcusable. But as journalists all over decry the actions as an assault on free speech, which it was, we also need to stop and think. Just like those madmen should not have taken the lives of a single person because they were angry or on a crusade, should those cartoons have been printed? Honestly? They were not just cartoons, they were much more than that. They demonstrated a total disrespect for the religious beliefs of millions. Can you imagine if the cartoons had been drawn about Jesus? So when you start your next conversation about the our lives in peace. Imagine that.

Have you ever situation in France, consider how would heard the you feel if your God were depicted by cartoonists in the same way? Yes, we have 'Sometimes a right to freedom of expression, but as members of the human race, we also have a responsibility to respect others and their beliefs. And of course, we need to respect human life, even when we don't agree.

Just because you CAN do something doesn't mean that you should. And just because you have a gun, you just can't go around killing people who piss you off. We have to stop being so irresponsible when it comes to exercising our rights and realize that we do have to exercise some restraint. Like or not, we have to live together on this earth, or perish.

Anyway, that whole situation is why I want to focus on something much more pleasant.

As many of you know, not only do I love golf, I love to cook. Well, this Monday night, I am hoping that I can be a part of the kitchen crew that makes a big pot of DUCK SOUP!

Yep, that's right, I'm putting all my energy into helping The Ohio State University whip up a main course made out of the Oregon Ducks for the College National Championships. Now, I do have some friends who are duck lovers, but this will be a level playing field and all I can say to you is that you better 'bring it'!

This game is important to Buckeye fanatics like myself, but also to my Big Ten brothers and sisters! Like any good family we pull together when necessary. It is comforting to know that even my Michigan buddies will be rooting for the Buckeyes!

So, taking a break from the troubles of this world, Go Bucks! By the way, when this battle is over, regardless of the outcome, no one will be hurt, nations won't be destroyed, a few wallets may be empty but economies won't crumble and at the end of it all, we will shake hands and go on with

JOE Gandelman An Independent's Eye

Good-bye and good-riddance to 2014. As we move into 2015, what can we learn from how 2014 ended and how we're now "trending" in various areas? Here are a few items to watch: Look for signs of President Barack Obama's REAL intentions.

Not only were the results of the 2014 Congressional elections a "shellacking" for Democrats and Obama, a major paint job -- with four coats of black and blue paint. Now the question is whether Obama intends to spend his remaining two years nurturing compromises where he can get them, or looking for ways to embarrass, check-mate, thwart and weaken the Republicans who've spent his term stalemating his agenda, trying to destroy his legacy and demonizing him. By December 2015 who will have had the last laugh?

Will the Tea Party tail continue to wag the Republican dog -- or is the Republican dog now the Tea Party's tail? There are already signs that House Speaker John Boehner and Republican Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell are headed into a political buzz saw in their dealings with Congress' most conservative members who favor confrontation, political brinksmanship and power politics over compromise, consensus and bipartisanship. Will Boehner and McConnell prove to be leaders who direct party members on a political path, or fearful followers and panderers obsessed Notoriety means big box office. North Korea and its hacking buddies' attempt to keep Sony Pictures from releasing the comedy "The Interview" featuring a story involving the assassination of North Korea's very much alive leader Kim Jong-un utterly backfired. By hacking Sony and allegedly being responsible for making terrorist threats against movie theaters which subsequently pulled the movie, North Korea helped the flick shatter online movie sales records. Add its almost certain release on DVD, cable and overseas showings, and North Korea turned a reportedly lame and inept comedy into... big B.O. Get ready for some studio to announce a movie about a team of Navy Seals assigned force ISIS leaders to eat pork chops.

Hollywood may get more daring. Never underestimate Hollywood's ability to grind out predictable sequels, formula action pix and cookie-cutter kids' movies. 2014 gave us the film "Birdman," featuring a comeback-generating performance by Michael Keaton, filmed to make it appear to have been shot in one or a few continuous takes, with an ending that left moviegoers debating and guessing. It started off in limited release and immediately soared, with more theaters quickly added.

Acceptance of the quirky film is a sign that Americans don't only yearn for (God save us) more Adam Sandler movies. Another sign came in early 2015 with the hit release of the film adaptation of Stephen Sondheim's and James Lapine's "Into the Woods." While Sondheim's famous complex scores that often seem to be fleeing traditional melody may make theatergoer's swoon, they're more of an acquired taste to others. The pizza revolution will continue. Pizza remains one of the biggest offenders when it comes to unhealthy fast food. But consumers are now demanding more than just sauce and cheese on crust, and they're often getting it. Frank Peppe Pizzeria, the 90-year-old top ranked pizzeria from my home city of New Haven, has started to add restaurants in New York and Massachusetts. Pizza Hut revamped its menu with some unusual and often weird new flavors. When I went to Colgate University from 1968-1972, local pizza in the town of Hamilton, New York was terrible to tolerable. Today, Hamilton's pizza places offer r-e-a-l world class pizza flavor.

Will those mistreating women find zero tolerance? 2014 was a bad year for politician and celebrity sex harassers, offenders and exhibitionists in the U.S. and in Canada. Will 2015 end in the definitive implosion of comedian Bill Cosby, who is reportedly hiring private investigators?

Can several big corporations stay afloat? Will 2015 end with a big "buh-bye" to the greatly-ailing JC Penny and to Radio Shack?

Species going extinct: The Siberian Tiger and 14 other species may be gone by the of the year, mostly due to human negligence or aggression. The black rhino is almost extinct. The Republican RINO is extinct.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

"We're proud of this diversity as Democrats . . . we don't have to manufacture it as the Republicans will next month . . . by propping up mannequin delegates on the convention floor.

- Mario Cuomo at the 1984 Democratic National Convention

A good column brings to mind things that might otherwise have faded from

In Susan's column last week, she mentioned an acquaintance who'd offered her view that black folks should simply stop wearing hoodies; as they wouldn't then be as scary to the rest of "us". This brought to mind a story from a few days ago, that if a Republican

Oklahoma state senator has his way, the act itself of wearing a hoodie would land a $500 fine. You could be busted for simply appearing to be trying to hide your face, but there are exceptions; for religious attire, weather protection, Halloween celebrations and "minstrel troupes". (Yes, that exception does appear in the language of the bill. Yes, this is the year 2015. And no, you can't make this stuff up - especially when it concerns Republican legislatures.)

In Greg Welborn's column, he expressed the view that doing away with the corporate income tax would bring economic prosperity to everyone. This brought to mind an article in the current issue of The Atlantic, called "What's Wrong With Georgia?" It describes how that state's low-taxes, probusiness, corporate-friendly policies led to the highest unemployment in the nation last fall.

As one unemployed machine operator put it, "This may be a good place for companies, but not for people actually looking for work.'

60% of new jobs require college degrees, while only 42% of young adult Georgians have one. With $8 billion in cuts from education over ten years, skyrocketing tuition increases, slashed scholarship programs and cutting unemployment benefits that provided opportunities to train in new skills, corporations are going out-of-state to fill positions.

Quoting Wesley Tharpe of the Georgia Budget and Policy Institute, "It's a misconception that these so-called business-friendly policies are closely related to economic growth. A state's economy depends on an educated workforce, transportation infrastructure, public safety, reliable street cleaning, and snow removal."

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution titled its editorial, "Ga. has followed GOP playbook to 50th in nation", referring to Georgia's rank in per capita transportation funding as well as per capita revenue. It points out that while Republican Gov. Nathan Deal brags about Georgians' low tax burden, the corollary is that Georgia relies on the federal government for nearly 40% of its budget the eighth highest level in the country.

The editorial reminds, "slashing taxes . . . has been Georgia's approach to economic growth since the 1870s... In effect, we're applying a 19th century industrial strategy to a 21st century economy, then wondering why it isn't working. Because it isn't. By any number of metrics - poverty, income, jobs - we've been losing ground for 15 years."

The commentary on the passing of former N.Y. Gov. Mario Cuomo brought to mind a lot of things, including wondering what my wife Mitsuko thought she was getting herself into when, for one of our first "dates" some thirty years ago, I took her to a Walter Mondale campaign rally. Okay, so he wasn't the most compelling speaker. And he was up against one of the most engaging presidents ever behind a microphone or in front of a camera.

Ronald Reagan came across as a well-meaning guy who didn't "get it". We had fun with his blaming trees for pollution, and attempt to classify ketchup as a vegetable in school lunches. We also had a fatalistic approach towards the upcoming election. And then, in his keynote address at the 1984 Democratic National Convention, Gov. Cuomo

He referred to President Reagan's "amiability" and wondered "maybe, Mr. President, if you asked a woman who had been denied the help she needed to feed her children because you said you needed the money for a tax break for a millionaire or for a missile we couldn't afford to use." But he didn't wonder long, reminding that this "social Darwinism" was "how we were warned it would be"; "Make the rich richer, and what falls from the table will be enough for the middle class and those who are trying desperately to work their way into the middle class."

He asked, "What chance would the Republican candidate have had in 1980 if he had told the American people that he intended to pay for his so-called economic recovery with bankruptcies, unemployment, more homeless, more hungry, and the largest government debt known to

He reminded us who we've been as Democrats "ever since Franklin Roosevelt lifted himself from his wheelchair to lift this nation from its knees", through "Truman's NATO and the GI Bill of Rights; Kennedy's intelligent tax incentives and the Alliance for Progress; Johnson's civil rights; Carter's human rights and the nearly miraculous Camp David Peace Accord."

He contrasted with how Republicans "divide the nation into the lucky and the left-out, into the royalty and the rabble . . . and they would call that division recovery." As for foreign policy, "We give money to Latin American governments that murder nuns, and then we lie about it.'

For Lawrence O'Donnell on his MSNBC show, Cuomo's passing brought to mind the 1994 campaign for re-election as New York's governor. Republican George Pataki hit hard on Cuomo's refusal to endorse the death penalty, no matter what the crime. If Cuomo fudged just a little, say to endorse the death penalty in the case of cop killers, he'd probably keep his seat. And he'd be aware that, pragmatically, there wouldn't be any death penalty carried out in his state, anyway.

Mario Cuomo refused to back off his principles, though it cost him the governorship. I wonder how often, if ever, such considerations of principle over pragmatism will be brought to mind in the political battles lying ahead.

QUARTERBACKING CONGRESS

I'm not a huge fan of John Boehner.

But now that he has both houses of Congress to work with, let's give him a chance to move the Republican offense down the field to the end zone.

After fighting off a challenge to his speakership this week, Boehner has held on to his job as the starting QB of the GOP's legislative team in Boehner and his Boys of Winter have a lot of hard work to do for the next two years, on and off the field.

But thanks to six years of fumbles by Obama at home and away, and Republican victories in the midterm elections last fall, the GOP is looking like the team to beat

The Republican position in Congress is stronger than it's been in decades.

Boehner has the largest majority – 246 to 188 – in the House since Truman was president. And the Senate is solidly in Republican hands with a 54-seat majority. It's now or pretty much never if Republicans hope to retake the Oval Office and reverse the damage done to America by Team Obama.

But before QB Boehner even thinks about which legislative play to call first "Keystone -- 686 Pump F-Stop, on two"? - he and his party need to do some cheerleading for their own team.

Boehner has been badly roughed up by everyone since 2011. The liberal media mock him.

The conservative media have booed him unmercifully and he was almost sacked by some of his own teammates for being a wimpy conservative or a stooge of Obama. But Boehner and the Republican House he has presided over deserve credit for a miraculous accomplishment that few people, even Republicans, know about. Thanks mostly to the House, Congress has actually reduced federal spending for the last two years. The cuts are nowhere near what they should be -- $3.60 trillion in 2011 to $3.54 trillion in 2012 to $3.45 trillion in 2013.

But it's an important turnaround. It's the first two consecutive years of federal spending cuts since 1953. Republicans should be tooting their own horn about that spending drop from coast to coast, because the liberal media sure aren't going to do

Meanwhile, Boehner's game plan for the next two years is nothing new or complicated. The people of America want the Congress to work – and get to work.

They want it to pass legislation that will create jobs and opportunity for Americans. It's up to Congress – and QB Boehner -- to make that happen by pushing through laws to kill ObamaCare, cut taxes, cut spending budgets, slash regulations and repeal legislation (like ObamaCare) that harms the economy.

If President Obama wants to veto everything a Republican Congress passes, fine. Let him become known as the obstructer in chief. Let Americans see that he's the one whose policies need to be rejected in 2016.

Boehner and his conservative Congress have to be careful, however. They need to approach the Washington political "game" the way Ronald Reagan did. My father looked at the legislative process in Washington like it was a football

He knew that if you move the ball 10 yards at a time, you'll eventually get to the end zone and you'll accomplish something. He knew politics is always a work in progress. It's the art of negotiation.

Boehner and the Republican Congress don't need to do everything this week or all The worst thing QB Boehner could do is to start throwing a bunch of Hail Mary passes into the end zone. He should move the ball 10 yards at a time. If he plays it right, Republicans will score their TD and win the Super Bowl – the presidency of the United States in 2016.
