COUNCIL TO TACKLE DIMINISHED REVENUE ISSUE WHILE NEW PETITION TO CIRCULATE IN EFFORT TO ABOLISH USER

On Tuesday, the Sierra Madre City Council will begin discussions on the impact of the reduction of Utility User Tax income for the budget for the fiscal year of 2015/2016 as well as the following fiscal year 2016/2017.

UTILITY TAX

When voters decided not to keep the existing UUT at 10%last year, the rate will decrease by 2% over the next two years until it is down to 6%. With such a significant decline in revenue, finding ways to balance the budget and maintain city services will be a challenge.

Unlike like neighboring cities of Arcadia, Monrovia, Duarte and Pasadena, Sierra Madre derives less than 2% of its income from Sales Tax and relies on the UUT heavily.

The council will begin budget negotiations on Tuesday, April 14th at 6:30 pm. Residents are encouraged to attend.

UUT Opponents Launch New Petition

There are residents in Sierra Madre who would like to see a total repeal of the UUT. Led by Sierra Madre resident Earl Richey, a new Notice of Intent To Circulate Petition has been issued and the group is authorized to begin collecting signatures in an effort to get the repeal of the UUT on the ballot. 30 MILLION DOLLAR CLAIM FILED AGAINST SIERRA MADRE

CETT Investment Corporation Files Demand Over Stonegate (1 Carter) Development

Since the Sierra Madre City Council overturn the Planning Commission's approval of the proposed plans for 610 Baldwin Court in January, 2015, many residents have been wondering what would come next.

The action denied the developer's permit application on the grounds that it did not comply with the city's existing land use policies. A little less than 3 months later, CETT Investment Corporation took the first step towards suing the city. They filed a "Claim for Damages asking for "no less than 30-32 million dollars, including but not limited to the lost value of its land, the lost value of its infrastructure improvements, and the lost profits on the sale of each and all of the residences it is permitted to build in the One Carter Project."

"I'm not surprised", said Sierra Madre Mayor John Harabedian, who is an attorney by profession. "This is a desperate claim with no merit."

In the filing, CETT says, "..The City of Sierra Madre reversed unanimously [the] Planning Commission decision approving the Hillside Development Permit application" and "instead, denied it for reasons set-forth in City Council Resolution 15-03. Since then, City Staff has arbitrarily and capriciously changed the application process and refused to apply the proper and agreed upon standards for the consideration of the remaining HDP applications". (The project is approved for 29 single family homes.)

In October, when the Planning Commission approved the CETT applications for a Hillside Development Permit and a Conditional Use Permit to begin construction on the first home, the next step in the process was Council approval. Council members Denise Delmar and John Capoccia called for a review of the decision, and an ad hoc committee was formed to take on the task. Council members Delmar and Gene Goss volunteered and on December 10, 2014 they met with the developer's attorney, Richard McDonald, in an attempt to address the council and community's concerns - primarily the project's failure to comply with the HMO. Their attempt was unsuccessful as McDonald was unwilling to make any changes.

What followed was the Council's reversal of the Planning Commission's decision in its entirety. The staff report presented by Planning and Community

CITY LOOKING FOR PUBLIC INPUT ON PROPOSED SMALL-SCALE, WASTE-TO-ENERGY PROJECT

By Kim Clymer- Kelley

There will be a public meeting and presentation on Wednesday April 15 at 6 PM in the City Council Chambers at Sierra Madre City Hall. The presentation will be on a possible Waste-to-Energy project that the city is in the process of developing. In order to create a system that will best serve and consider the residents and businesses of Sierra Madre, the city would like your input on the project so that your ideas and visions may be incorporated into the project and your concerns addressed. This project, if realized will make Sierra Madre a vanguard city in sustainable waste management and independent green energy production. This small-scale facility could potentially produce enough energy to reduce the city's energy bill by $16,000 per month and would serve as a main power source for the city's water system. It would use biomass from the city's municipal solid waste stream to create clean, green energy, thus diverting 6-8 tons a day from the area landfills, while at the same time offering an opportunity to thoroughly sort recyclables before processing. The facility would give local universities an excellent research opportunity and would serve as a model for how other cities can divert waste and create energy for their municipalities.

Waste-to-Energy (WTE)is a common practice in many European nations where land for landfills is scarce, making diversion and recycling essential. These countries use the biomass in their waste stream to create energy and heat for residences and businesses. Here in the US, we have not built any new WTE facilities since the early 1990's. These new, very simple, clean, and safe technologies make the process a carbon neutral or even a carbon negative process. Yes, some such systems can actually remove carbon from our atmosphere. In addition to electricity, the systems can also provide fuel for vehicles that run on compressed natural gas and produce different types of natural fertilizers and soil enhancers. Keeping the systems small and localized allows for communities to become less dependent on outside energy sources, reduces the impact of the process of waste handling by reducing the many lengthy trips to outside processing facilities, allows a community to customize and control the use of their facility to best serve the city, and reduces the amount of electrical energy lost in transmission.

If you want to learn more about the plan, have your ideas considered, or offer your expertise, please join us in this meeting to develop this exciting plan. There will be plenty of opportunity for Q&A and experts on hand to answer your questions. Refreshments will be served.

Wow, you're saying! We have a Community Foundation? We do, friends and neighbors! We didn't know anything about it either until we saw their table at the Wistaria Festival a few weeks ago. There was this lovely woman sitting behind a table with a bunch of brochures. She introduced herself as Gina Long and said the Community Foundation has been around for years doing all sorts of good things. Had an opportunity to chat with Sharon Pevsner, who is on the Board of Directors of the Foundation and was thrilled to hear all the good stuff they're involved with here in our

For instance: The Sierra Madre Community Foundation arranges the funds for the Kids Race portion of the Mt. Wilson Trail Race, which will be taking place this year on May 30th. The Kids Race is free to all children who plan to run up Baldwin and back. You'll remember Simon (pictured) the Rabbit, who got all the kids going on their race last year. Kids race for free, get a nifty t-shirt for free and a ribbon, too. That's really cool!

And, speaking of the Mt. Wilson Trail, the Fletcher Fund which provides the maintenance and all the tools they need for both the Trail and Bailey Canyon is administered by the Community Foundation. Grants & Service Recipients include: The landscaping project at City Hall which will feature drought-resistant plants; Sierra Madre Pool Family Night; the renovation of the Kids Room at the Sierra Madre Library; Memorial Park Cannon Renovation, July 4th committee's activities; Sierra Madre School Library eBooks purchase; A Summer Concert in the Park and so much more.

Seriously, the Sierra Madre Community Foundation is one of the best kept secrets in town! But we need to change that. I realize that Matthew 6:3 tells us that when you give to someone in need, "Don't let your right hand know what your left is doing..." but

"THE SIERRA MADRE COMMUNITY FOUNDATION, when a community organization is doing as much good stuff as ours is, more people need to know about it. And guess what! The Community Foundation will be hosting "An Afternoon of Giving And Receiving" and to be sure there are hors d'oeuvres and a glass of something good with your name on them, Please RSVP! They also specialize in fresh bagels and bagel sandwiches. A young lady was eating one which featured salmon and I really wanted to take it right out of her hand! They've got your favorite bagel and juice ready from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. 7 days a week. Citta, is the creation of our friends Sarah Vielma and Arthur Franco, owners of Les Champs Elysses, on Baldwin across from Nora Graham's Sierra Juice Company and Casa Del Rey. Sarah and Arthur are also renovating the former children's clothing store down a door or two from Citte. Rumor has it that the menswear section of Les Champs Elysses will be moving there. So happy to see this storefront coming to life again.

If you ever heard his laugh or ever saw his smile, you would remember "Big Al" as his grandchildren call him. He was a well-known figure in Sierra Madre and had developed a fan club on his morning walks in the foothills. Al had recently developed a new set of friends at the Hart Park Senior Center

The Police Department reminds the Community that request for money with the threat of being arrested is a FRAUD. No government agency deploy any of these types of tactics, even though they sound official and use common law enforcement jargon.

PASADENA QUILT MAKER, 87, HAS MADE 1,000 QUILTS FOR CHARITY AND COUNTING

(PASADENA, CA) Mie Harboe estimates that over the last 15 years, making class years ago sparked her interest in the craft, and she's she's made 1,000 quilts.

That's probably an understatement.

And doesn't take into account the many blankets she's crocheted. Harboe, 87, spends her days and evenings at her home in Pasadena sewing quilts and crocheting blankets, many of which she donates to the children and families of Hillsides, a Pasadena- headquartered non-profit serving children, youth, and families in need throughout Los Angeles County.

Harboe starts her day at her sewing machine at 7 each morning and finishes around 6 p.m. She spends her evenings crocheting blankets or hand-sewing while watching TV. "If I stay with it all day, I can make a quilt in one day and a half," she says. An Afghan blanket takes three to four evenings.

She rarely takes a day off - usually only when her daughter, who lives in nearby Rancho Cucamonga, visits.

have something to do with my hands," she said.

Age has not hampered her output. She still possesses the manual dexterity and keen eyesight that such detail work requires. "My eyes are good," she said. "Not as good as they used to be, but I can still thread a needle.'

For years, a friend of hers distributed her quilts to the homeless. Her colorful "log cabin" patterns made their way to faraway places such as Mexico and Afghanistan. When her friend recently died, Harboe began to look for a new home for her quilts and blankets, and found Hillsides.

She is happy that her colorful and warm creations are still "going out into the world."

Friends supply her with a steady stream of fabric for the quilts. She buys yarn for the crocheted blankets from local thrift stores.

Originally from Odense, Denmark, Harboe moved to Pasadena in 1967. Her cozy home is filled with hand-crafted wooden furniture made by her late husband Aksal, who passed away seven years ago after the couple had been married for 61 years.

Harboe can't say if quilt making and crocheting keep her young, Harboe says she sews because she likes to stay busy and values but the spark in her eye as she talks about her passion for sewing gives credit to this theory.

She does say that she can't imagine a life without quilt-making. Luckily for the children and families of Hillsides, it appears there will be many more quilts in Harboe's future - and that's no understatement.

TATER LOVES PAPER! HEALTH RISKS & CONCERNS ASSOCIATED WITH PUPPY PAPER PICA

My dear bloodhound, "Tatertotts" (RIP) just loved had changed shape, of course, but it appeared to to eat paper. Soft products such as toilet paper, napkins and facial tissue were her favorites. I discovered Tater's paper fetish inadvertently one day, when I noticed her nudging at the pocket of my jacket, where I had a tissue stashed, just in case. She was relentless in her pursuit for that wad of paper, and even though I realize she had a nose that could detect a scent of any kind from a mile or more away, I was still surprised she knew I had a small bit of tissue in my pocket, sight un-seen. She apparently smelled it through the thick denim fabric of my jacket. When I refused to give it to her, she finally pushed her enormous nose inside my pocket and snagged it out.

She then proceeded to chew it with a look on her face as if I'd given her a piece of tender loin! I expected her to spit it out eventually, after mashing it into a saliva soaked ball, but instead she swallowed it and looked up at me with begging eyes, in hopes of talking me into another piece! When I said "no", she started nudging at my jacket again, until I finally had to turn my pockets inside out to convince her there was no more paper there.

It struck me as strange that Tater would be so intrigued with eating a seemingly tasteless wad of paper, so I decided to do a little research on why a dog would want to do such a thing. Meanwhile, I Other theories have to do with diet or health, decided it would be best to keep paper out of Tater's and still others indicate a simple need to chew, reach, but she was one sneaky girl. Suffice it to say she kept me on my toes with her great big nose.

desire to eat paper) is quite common among canines, particularly large breeds and there are numerous theories as to why dogs love to eat paper, although I had already formulated a couple of theories of my own. First of all, Tater was a bloodhound with the longest, floppiest, sloppiest lips I have ever seen on a dog, and I think maybe chewing on something that "melted in her mount" probably gave a sensation much like what we feel when we chew on gum.

For that reason, I could understand why she would want to chew on paper, but that doesn't explain her napkins and tissues, rather than chewing and day!

spitting them out, the way many dogs do? I was quite sure Tater didn't have any medical issues that would cause the obsession, but just to be sure I consulted with my veterinarian and ruled out any apparent health-related

It wasn't until one day while I was picking up Tater's poop (pardon the graphics) in the back yard and saw the "end result" of her sneaky fetish that I realized the paper she'd swiped out of the trash can the day before had made it's way through her digestive tract almost fully intact! It be all there, un-torn and in one piece, like a long twisted rope. It was then that it dawned on me that the paper may have performed a practical purpose in the process, acting as a bonding agent in Tater's digestive system, and if so, it suggested that perhaps Tater needed more fiber in her diet.

I had always included some sort of fresh vegetable mixed in with her dry food, but after finding the paper in her poop that day, I decided to add more fibrous ingredients to her diet, such as apples, carrots, broccoli, sweet peas, spinach and lettuce. The new additions to Tater's daily food rations certainly were good for her, but by no means did it change the way she felt about paper. That, I'm afraid, was a love affair that lasted Tater's entire life.

Some of the theories and opinions that I discovered during my "puppy pica research" online, helped confirm my own theory about Tater's love for tissues, but there were other indications that had not come to mind. Boredom, for example showed up on several blogs and websites as a potential prompt for paper pica. Another possible cause is puppy promiscuity. Some young dogs simply like to get into things, much like a child who enjoys catching mom off guard by raiding her closet or jewelry box while she's not looking.

Whatever the reasons or causes, the general As it turns out, puppy paper pica (a dog's desperate consensus is that paper pica among canines is unhealthy and should be prevented. Over a period of time, ingested paper can cause serious problems in a dog's digestive system, such as blockage resulting in septic shock and internal infections. Regardless of the reasons why a dog wants to eat paper, it is important that the human do whatever it takes to keep it out of their reach. When I came to understand the health risks associated with canine paper pica, I was careful not to leave facial tissues, napkins or toilet paper in a place where Tater could get to them. It still remains a family joke, though, desire to swallow it. Why would she want to ingest that Tater preferred a wad of paper over a treat any

PET OF THE WEEK BROWNEE: Animal ID #A4812626

Pups do not come sweeter than young Brownee! Brownee (A4812626) is a mellow and familyready 4-year-old red neutered male Puggle (Pug and Beagle) mix who came to the Baldwin Park Animal Care Center as an owner surrender on March 28th for no known reason. Overweight at 45 lbs, Brownee is a laid-back boy who has never met a face he didn't like! Brownee gets along with humans as well as with canines (of all sizes). He especially perked up during our photo shoot his tail wagging happily—when he greeted and socialized with a German Shepherd. Brownee has a low-to-medium energy level and walks very well on leash (not pulling one bit). He was clearly a beloved pet to someone who showed their love for him with too many treats and not enough exercise (hence, his chunky frame). Because

LOOKING FOR A BEST FRIEND?

Dexter (right top) and Shenzi (right below) don't have a lot in common, but they were found abandoned in the Humane Society parking lot a few months ago. Dexter, a young collie-Australian shepherd mix weighing around 37 pounds, is the larger of the two and was left tied in the front of the shelter. Shenzi, a petite Chihuahua mix weighing 9 pounds, had been in a box nearby, and stayed close to Dexter. One thing they did share was a skin condition that affected their fur. After several months of treatment and weekly medicated baths, they are both cleared for adoption. Dexter is growing a lovely soft multi-colored coat, but Shenzi's shorter coat is slower to

Dexter and Shenzi have formed a strong friendship and when they see each other, their spirits perk up and they break into play. In spite of Shenzi's much smaller size, she can hold her own and often initiates play with

Dexter. Dexter loves to play and has also found some other dogs that he loves to romp with, too. Both Dexter and Shenzi get along with other dogs they have been introduced to at the

Although Dexter and Shenzi were both a little shy at first, they have become friendly, trusting, and like meeting new people. They both have a happy disposition that has charmed the volunteers and staff they interact with. They can use some leash training, as they tend to bounce all over on their walks, but with a little time and practice, they will learn quickly.

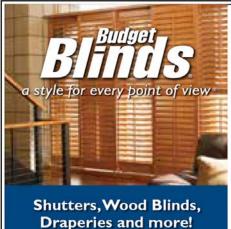

It would be wonderful if these two best friends could be adopted into the same home, as they clearly love each other. But they have shown their resilience, and will make great family pets, either together or separately. Why not come in to meet Dexter and Shenzi and see them in person? They are sure to put a smile on your face and you just might want to take them home with you

They currently reside at the San Gabriel Valley Humane Society located at 851 E. Grand Avenue in San Gabriel. We are located off San Gabriel Blvd., north of Mission and south of Las Tunas. To arrange a 'Meet and Greet' with Dexter and Shenzi, please stop by any time from 10:00am to 4:30pm Tuesday thru Sunday or feel free to call us at (626) 286-1159 for more information on them.

Dexter's adoption fee is $135 which includes his neuter surgery, a microchip, first vaccinations and a free wellness check-up at a participating veterinarian. Shenzi's fee is $120. If adopted together, they are eligible for the shelter's reduced-fee Buddy Adoption Program. Maybe you'll see them at this month's Tea for Tails/ Taste of Westfield event featuring Warren Eckstein and Garth Kemp along with a doggie fashion show and treats from your favorite restaurants. See our website at www.sgvhumane.org for information and photos of all our available pets and more details on how you can join animal lovers for this fun afternoon event.

ODD COUPLE AT LAST! By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

I had never seen Neil Simon's The Odd Couple onstage until I caught the closing performance of Laguna Playhouse's production at the end of March. I grew up watching the original series on television, and I had seen the classic movie with Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon, and I know there is a new updated version, but I'd never seen the play. And now that I have, I can say quite honestly that SMP patrons are going to

For those who don't know it, it's the story of what happens when two recently single men – one an uptight neat freak, the other an unapologetic slob - move in together. That simple premise is one that is ripe with opportunities for laughs – and Neil Simon mines it for all it's worth, but what makes this one of the most popular shows in theater history is that it's about so much more - friendship, loyalty, and the genuine, albeit most often unexpressed, love that men have for their buddies. And did I mention that it is hilarious?

We have a terrific cast of actors new to the Playhouse (except for Brad David Reed who played Boolie in Driving Miss Daisy who is playing Felix), a wonderful director, Alan Brooks (who was in Twentieth Century a couple of seasons back), and a wonderful design team – all of whom have worked at the Playhouse before.

The show premiered in 1965 making this its 50th Anniversary. We are staying true to the era which creates some difficult "gets" in terms of props - a working period vacuum cleaner?, a "puretron" air filtration machine? Luckily for us the theater community is a small one and we have built some goodwill. Through a friend, I was put in touch with the producers of the Laguna Playhouse production and they are graciously loaning us the much-sought after period props. It really is a blast from my childhood to see some of the things we are using in the show. I know that audiences are going to be as delighted as I was to see some of this stuff again.

The show opens May 8 and runs through June 27. Tickets are on sale now through our website sierramadreplayhouse.org. We offer a 20% discount on the purchase of 10 tickets or more, call Mary Baville, our Box Office Manager, at 355-4318 to arrange groups.

Even though Einstein is a Dummy is still running, and The Odd Couple hasn't opened yet, we've begun working on Always....Patsy Cline which opens July 31! As I've said in a previous essay – these shows take so much planning that there is never any down time. Look for an announcement soon about the 2015-16

As always we do all this for you - our SMP family whose support and loyalty mean so much to us and for whom we hope we bring pleasure and joy and moving experiences in the theater. Please let me know how you think we are doing.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show HOME REVIEW

'Home' is one of their last chances to turn their luck around, but is it the comeback Dreamworks needs? Tip (Rihanna) has been torn from her mother (Jennifer Lopez) when the strange alien race known as the Boov decide to make Earth their new home. Now she must not only find her missing mother but also look after the Boov fugitive Oh (Jim Parsons), who will discover the true nature of humans and try to change his species for the better. 'Home' is an interesting take on the alien invasion movies. Rather than taking over Earth for natural resources or to enslave humans, the Boov only need a new place to live. This film looks at the cultural differences between the humans, Boov, and the mysterious and dangerous Gorg. The lesson of this film (democratic approaches to meeting new people are the best) is a good one for both young children and older generations; it is the , visually striking, and well acted comeback that Dreamworks was looking for.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

JOE NORMAL'S - CRUDE FOLK

By Sean Kayden

crude folk

Crude Folk is a 14-song collection coming from Sierra Madre native Joe Normal. It's his fifth LP to date, but with this endeavor the folk rock musician explores lo-fi over high-end studio productions. He drifts away from the standard way to produce a record and it works wonders. The results for the DIY artist are grand as he seeps into his own true artistry. Joe love and loss are apparent, but it's the more heartrending topics of parenting a special needs child and | the humbleness as a genuine artist that shine throughout the course of the album. Taking comparisons from Paul Westerberg to Paul McCartney, Joe Normal exceeds similarities by proving his signature sound is both original and distinctive. The acoustic guitars, the laidback feel, and the potent lyrics come together for one cohesive sound of pure folk bliss. With weathered vocals, Joe Normal is a veteran with many anecdotes to share, all of which consume deep meaning hidden beneath. "Mockingbirds (We're a Couple Of), "Ain't This A Wonderful Life," and "Valentine" completely gleam as the standout tracks on Crude Folk. The folk/poprock sensibilities are present, but the cuts are much deeper than typical affair in the genre. There are two versions of Valentine – both the acoustic and electric rendition. Both are potent in their own earnest ways, but the acoustic one tugs on the strings of one's heart just a little bit more. The stripped down take on the song definitely feels honest and heartfelt. "One of These Days" occupies a sound from classic Beatles sound. From the way Joe sings like Lennon to the arrangements showcased here, you would think he was covering a rare Beatles tune. For all accounts, it works tremendously well with a worn-in style that feels like something from a bygone era. "I Wish She Would Call Me Tonight" is a lovely ballad evoking the 70s singer/ digs deep from personal stories and tales to find the songwriter era. Normal plays a simple tune with a inspiration for Crude Folk. The themes of alcohol, hope, profusion of passion and soulful tendencies. "Be Bop A Lula" takes you for a spin, rooted more in rockabilly. It's the time of song you may hear at a old dive bar in Middle America. The authentic Americana feel to it displays Normal's penchant for psychobilly, a theme he has explored with various sideprojects from previous times.

Another gem off Crude Folk "Something Starting New." It blends the likes of a 90s singer/songwriter alternative rock but takes elements from previous generations before it. It's a reflective tune that will take the listener back to another time and place of serenity. Crude Folk ends with "Bookends Theme," a cover of the 1968 classic from Simon & Garfunkel. The song is a glimpse of life through youth and age. And perhaps, Crude Folk is a byproduct of another era where youth had a different meaning than what it has now. For what it's all worth, Joe Normal has crafted a record that can speak to generations of yesterday and today with sounds sprawling from 60s, 70s, and 90s folk, pop, and rock. The combination of eras and genres merge into a distinct vibe from a veteran musician looking back at not only the past, but also what the future may have in store. 10 THINGS TO CONSIDER DURING AN ESTATE PLAN REVIEW your life. As such, it should be reviewed with a qualified estate planning attorney at least every few outdated due to recent changes in the law and that they still support your overall planning goals.

When reviewing your estate plan, keep these ten decisions.

important points in mind:

1. Your estate plan only works if your assets are owned properly. If you have acquired new assets or sold assets you had at the time you made your plan, you will need to update your family wealth inventory spreadsheet (and you absolutely should have a family wealth inventory spreadsheet which lists all your assets) and retitle the newly acquired

2. Be sure your named fiduciaries are still the right people for the job. Your fiduciaries include the agents for your financial and healthcare powers of attorney as well as the executors or trustees of your estate. In addition, confirm all your fiduciaries know what to do if called upon and have access to the documents they would need if something happens to you (we take care of this by sending letters to all of our clients' fiduciaries to introduce them to their roles and responsibilities and provide them with instructions).

3. Determine if the terms of your estate plan still meet your objectives, and that the beneficiaries and your bequests are still up to date and relevant. Be sure to look at whether you are leaving assets to your beneficiaries in a lifetime asset protection trust that ensures what you pass on is protected from a future divorce, creditors or lawsuits.

4. If you have minor children be sure you have a Kids Protection Plan in place naming short- and long-term guardians, providing instructions and guidelines for those guardians and including executed medical powers of attorney that allow you to dictate medical care for your minor children in case they are injured when you are not with them.
5. Confirm all beneficiary designations for retirement plans, insurance policies and financial accounts are correct. Never name a minor child as the beneficiary (or even contingent beneficiary) of an insurance policy or retirement account.

DANIEL BOONE MADE WINE

Many of you remember Fess Parker as the actor who played Davy Crocket "King of the Wild Frontier" and Daniel Boone of the TV series in the 60's. In fact, Walt Disney personally signed Fess Parker to a contract in 1954. His fame and fortune set up his second career as a real estate developer. Fess Parker died in 2010, but he left his mark in the hospitality arena in Santa Barbara.

Parker built his first resort hotel in Santa Barbara in 1986 - Fess Parker's Double Tree Resort. I've stayed there a few times; it has the perfect view of the Pacific Ocean.

Many of you know that I have a radio show that airs live from Santa Barbara every Thursday, and I have been introduced to many wines from the Santa Barbara area, and I can say that the 2014 Fess Parker Chardonnay is a true representation of the emerging wine industry. The chardonnay is crisp, with aromas of citrus and a touch of honey, and for you "oak fans", you'll love the fact that is has been 100% barrel aged and fermented in new French and Hungarian oak. On the palate it has great texture with subtle tannins, and a refreshing acidity, creating a true balance, which makes chardonnay a great food friendly wine. The price is right at less then $15. I paired it recently with my signature home made crab cakes, and it made for a great combination.

THE GOOD LIFE

DRIVING SAFELY WITH DEMENTIA AND KNOWING WHEN TO QUIT

Dear Savvy Senior:

Is it safe for seniors with dementia to drive, and if so, when should they stop? My dad has early Alzheimer's disease but still drives himself around town just fine.

Looking Ahead

Dear Looking:

While most doctors agree that people with moderate to severe dementia should not take the wheel, in the early stages, the medical consensus is that driving performance should be the determining factor of when to stop driving, not the disease itself.

With that said, it's also important to realize that as your dad's driving skills deteriorate over time from the disease, he might not recognize it. So it's very important that you work closely with him and his doctor to monitor his driving. Here are some tips that can help.

Warning Signs

The best way to keep tabs on your dad's driving is to take frequent rides with him watching out for key warning signs. For example: Does he have trouble remembering routes to familiar places? Does he drive at inappropriate speeds, tailgate or drift between lanes? Does he react slowly or make poor driving decisions? Also, has your dad had any fender benders or tickets lately, or have you noticed any dents or scrapes on his vehicle? These, too,

If you need some assessment help, hire a driver rehabilitation specialist who's trained to evaluate older drivers. To locate a specialist see driver-ed.org or aota. org/older-driver.

Transition Tips

Through your assessments, if you believe it's still safe for your dad to drive, you may want to start recommending some simple adjustments to ensure his safety, like driving only in daylight and on familiar routes, and avoiding busy roads and bad weather. Also, see if he will sign an Alzheimer's "driving contract" (see alz.org/driving to print one) that designates someone to tell him when it's no longer safe to drive.

In addition, you should also consider getting a GPS com or mobicopilot.com) to help you keep an eye on of "The Savvy Senior" book.

him. These devices will let you track exactly where he's driving, and allow you to set up zones and speed limits that will notify you via email or text message when he exits an area or arrives at a designated location, and if he's driving too fast.

Time to Quit

When your dad's driving gets to the point that he can no longer drive safely, you'll need to talk to him. It's actually best to start having these conversations in the early stages of the disease, before he needs to quit driving, so he can prepare himself.

You also need to have a plan for alternative transportation (including a list of family, friends and local transportation services) that will help your dad get around after he stops driving.

For tips on how to talk to your dad, the Hartford Financial Services Group and MIT AgeLab offers a variety of resources at safedrivingforalifetime.com click on "Dementia and Driving."

If your dad refuses to quit you have several options. First, suggest a visit to his doctor who can give them a medical evaluation, and "prescribe" that he stops driving. Older people will often listen to their doctor before they will listen to their own family.

If he still refuses, contact your local Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) to see if they can help. Some states require doctors to report new dementia cases to the DMV, who can revoke the person's license.

If all these fail, consider hiding his keys or just take them away. You could also disable his vehicle, park it in another location so he can't see it or have access to it, or

SENIORS - DON'T BE A TARGET

THE F.B.I. Common Fraud Schemes webpage provides tips on how you can protect you and your family from fraud. Senior Citizens especially should be aware of fraud schemes for the following

Senior citizens are most likely to have a "nest egg," to own their home, and/or to have excellent credit—all of which make them attractive to con artists.

People who grew up in the 1930s, 1940s, and 1950s were generally raised to be polite and trusting. Con artists exploit these traits, knowing that it is difficult or impossible for these individuals to say "no" or just hang up the telephone.

Older Americans are less likely to report a fraud because they don't know who to report it to, are too ashamed at having been scammed, or don't know they have been scammed. Elderly victims may not report crimes, for example, because they are concerned that relatives may think the victims no longer have the mental capacity to take care of their own financial affairs.

When an elderly victim does report the crime, they often make poor witnesses. Con artists know the effects of age on memory, and they are counting on elderly victims not being able to supply enough detailed information to investigators. In addition, the victims' realization that they have been swindled may take weeks—or more likely, months—after contact with the fraudster. This extended time frame makes it even more difficult to remember details from the events.

Senior citizens are more interested in and susceptible to products promising increased cognitive function, virility, physical conditioning, anti-cancer properties, and so on. In a country where new cures and vaccinations for old diseases have given every American hope for a long and fruitful life, it is not so unbelievable that the con artists' products can do what they claim.

SUN HAS SEASONAL CHANGES, NEW RESEARCH FINDS; DAWN MISSION UPDATE

The Sun undergoes a type of seasonal variability with its activity waxing and waning over the course of nearly two years, according to a new study by a team of researchers led by the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR). This behavior affects the peaks and valleys in the approximately 11-year solar cycle, sometimes amplifying and sometimes weakening the solar storms that can buffet Earth's atmosphere.

The quasi-annual variations appear to be driven by changes in the bands of strong magnetic fields in each solar hemisphere. These bands also help shape the approximately 11-year solar cycle that is part of a longer cycle that lasts about 22 years.

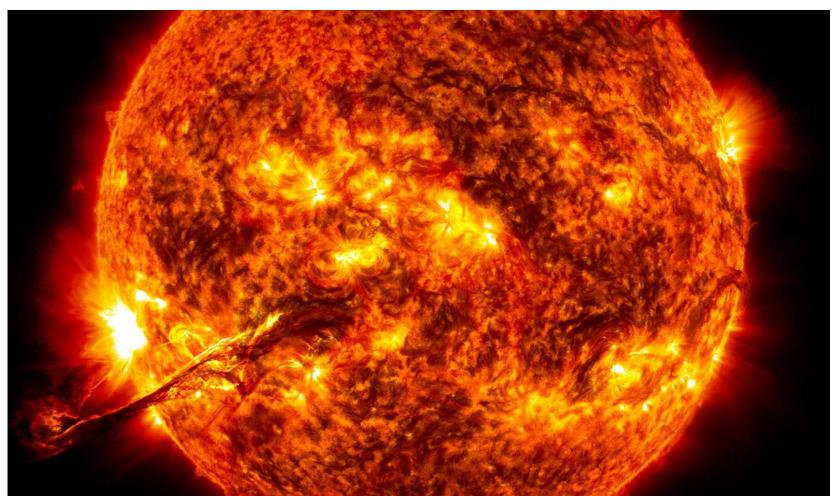

"What we're looking at here is a massive driver of solar storms," said Scott McIntosh, lead author of the new study and director of NCAR's High Altitude Observatory. "By better understanding how these activity bands form in the Sun and cause seasonal instabilities, there's the potential to greatly improve forecasts of space weather events."

The overlapping bands are fueled by the rotation of the Sun's deep interior, according to observations by the research team. As the bands move within the Sun's northern and southern hemispheres, activity rises to a peak over a period of about 11 months and then begins to wane.

The quasi-annual variations can be likened to regions on Earth that have two seasons, such as a rainy season and a dry season, McIntosh said.

The study, published this week in Nature Communications, can help lead to better predictions of massive geomagnetic storms in Earth's outer atmosphere that sometimes disrupt satellite operations, communications, power grids, and other technologies.

Dawn has been following its planned trajectory (http://dawnblog.jpl.nasa.gov) on the dark side of Ceres—the side facing away from the Sun—since early March. After it entered orbit, the spacecraft's momentum carried it to a higher altitude, reaching a maximum of 46,800 miles on March 18. GETTING TO KNOW THE BITTER HOREHOUND

Many years ago, when I was still in high school and beginning my earnest study of botany, I got a phone call from friend Joe Hall. Joe and I were both interested in wild foods and herbs, and Joe told me that he'd located a patch of horehound. I'd read about horehound, I'd heard about horehound, and it supposedly grew all around us. Yet, I'd never knowingly seen the plant. I hopped on my bicycle and within 30 minutes I met Joe just north of Pasadena's famous Rose Bowl. He was squatting next to a small inconspicuous plant, and I eagerly got off my bicycle and down on the ground to examine the plant.

"Here it is," said Joe, still looking at the plant

'That's it?" I said in near disbelief. It was, after all, a plant I'd casually noticed but paid no attention to. I looked at the opposite leaves, typical of mints. I examined the square stems covered in fine white hairs. Apparently, these "hoary" stems are what gave rise to the name "horehound." I got up close to look at the typical mint-shaped leaf with the typical wrinkled pattern. Yes, it was a very familiar looking plant.

The mints that grew in my mother's garden were more like vines, however, which grew out of control and gradually spread everywhere. This horehound was more like a single bush that grew taller as it produced flowering stalks and then seed.

"What do you think?" asked Joe, still examining the plant himself.

"It doesn't smell like a mint," I told him as I crushed a single young leaf and detected none of the strong fragrance so common to nearly every other mint.

'That's right," said Joe. "Try tasting it." I picked off a clean leaf and slowly chewed it. The texture was furry, like an old mustard leaf perhaps. The initial flavor was fresh and pungent, but as I chewed it became more and more bitter. I spit it out and Joe laughed at my reaction. "It doesn't taste great" said Joe, "if you just eat it like that. But you know that this herb is good for sore

"Yes," I told him. I was aware of horehound candy. My mother once gave my brother and I a horehound drop, and I spit it out as soon as I put it into my mouth. But I gradually got used to it. Plus, despite the odd

After Joe showed me a few other plants in the area, I collected some horehound leaves for experimenting. Then we each bicycled home.

That night, I tried my first horehound tea. You do not boil the leaves in water (a decoction), but rather, you make an infusion. You put the fresh or dried leaves into your cup or pot, add boiling water, and let it sit until it is cool enough to drink.

I had my first taste with no sweetening. It had an interesting flavor, and it was even tolerable as a simple horehound, and my reference book said it should beverage. But there was no getting around it – it is a bitter herb and it really is an medicine.

Over the years, I have had horehound many times, but I usually add honey or lemon juice to the horehound infusion to make it easier to consume. Herbalist Michael Moore (author of Medicinal Plants of the Mountain West), says that horehound (Marrubium vulgare) is the herb for coughs and lung congestion. He also points out that the hot tea helps to reduce feverish coughs, promotes sweating, and has a stimulates the outflow of mucus from the lungs and commonly used as a tonic, and for chronic sore throat, coughs, colds, and breathing problems associated with asthma. Horehound leaves should be gathered in the spring when the plant is young and the leaves are

This plant provides the raw ingredients for horehound candy, which has long been sold in drugstores and markets as a mild cough drop. Here is a recipe for those of you who'd like to try to make the candy yourself. Cook (don't boil) one cup of the fresh herb (or 3 cup flavor, it was very effective at minor coughs and sore of the dried herb) with two cups of water for about 15 minutes. Strain. To each cup of liquid, add one cup of honey. Cook until the mixture thickens. Keep at a low heat or it will run over. Pour onto a cookie sheet and let it cool. Break (or scoop) off pieces as you need or want it. It is best to refrigerate it, since it tends to spread. (For details on making a truly "hard" candy, consult a candy cookbook.) This candy is pleasant as a snack or energy food on the trail, as well as being useful for sore throats.

> I was living in Ohio when I first read about be growing in that state. I never found it in Ohio, but when I returned to California, and was shown the horehound by my friend Joe, I realized that the plant was quite widespread and common in California. The plant is a European native, found throughout the U.S., but most widely naturalized in the Southwestern. You can find it by the roadside, in open field areas, and in areas disturbed (plowed, disced, etc.) by man.

Discovering and learning about new herbs (wild long history as a bitter expectorant (a substance that and cultivated) can be a life-long process. There is no shortcut to learning about wild plants and their uses. You need to treat each one as an individual, and take the time that's required to get to know each one

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

FOR SOME, EASTER IS A HOP AND A SKIP

As may be expected, Easter is one of my favorite holidays. Although I prefer to call it Resurrection Sunday, I am not easily offended by words. Remember the old saying, "Sticks and stones may break your bones, but words will never hurt you."

It is amazing to me how some people get all bent out of shape when it comes to words. I think it is impossible to keep up with the political correctness that some people insist. I have never known a single day or an hour in which I have wanted to be politically correct about

I try to be as sensitive to people's feelings as possible. I do not want to needlessly offend anybody, but it is nearly impossible not to in the day in which we live. It has come to the place that you do not know quite how to greet anybody anymore.

"Merry Christmas," seems to enflame some people, which is why I always give the greeting to everyone I meet, even when it is not Christmas.

The least little thing offends so many people. Many people have thin skin, but very thick

Just the other day the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage brought a situation to my attention. At first, I thought she was pulling my leg, so to speak. It became quite evident that According to the article, somebody was objecting to the Easter Bunny. For some reason the person writing this article was objecting to Religious holidays. In his opinion, everything related to Religion needs to be stripped from our society. He gave several examples, but one stood out among all the rest. That one was the humble little Easter Bunny. I have been a Christian for a long time and read my Bible through dozens of times and I have yet to run across any reference to the Easter Bunny. However, this person became very irritated at the Easter Bunny symbol. I am not sure what he thought that symbol His attack on the Easter Bunny was because, in his opinion, it was a religious symbol of some sort. He did not go into any detail about what that symbol was; simply that it needed immediate extraction from contemporary society. In reading the article, I picked up the idea that this person was particularly agitated about everything religious. And he took his vengeance out on the Easter Bunny. I really do not mind people attacking Christianity. After all, they did it to Jesus while he was alive. However, I wish if they are going to attack Christianity, they would at least read the Bible and know what to attack. If this person is as stupid in other areas of the article, as in this particular aspect, how can we believe anything he says? Dumb is as dumb writes. I have been thinking about something for a long time and it might soon be time to put it into action. My plan is to spread the rumor that Punxsutawney Phil, the famous groundhog, is actually a religious symbol. I do not have to mention what it is a symbol of; simply that it is a religious symbol. That will be enough to have people, like the one who wrote this particular article, get in an uproar and demand that this symbol be eradicated from contemporary

I think good old Punxsutawney Phil could handle himself on this particular issue. Even if people should succeed in getting rid of the old boy, he probably could use the sleep.

If this plan succeeds, and the likelihood is pretty high, I might go on to my next plan. I will begin spreading the rumor that Thursday has a significant religious symbolism to it. Again, I need not define what that symbolism is, only that there is the possibility.

Soon high-minded plans will be in place to attack Thursday and do away with it. There will be a bill in Congress to call Thursday, "The Day after Wednesday." Of course, on the Senate side there will be those who will want to call it, "The Day before Friday." Soon it will be a hot topic headlining every media news program in America. The pros and cons will be heatedly debated. Some may even want to call it, "Wednesday Part 2."

No matter what they decide on, it will be certain that nobody who is politically correct could say the word "Thursday," ever again.

Personally, I would not mind that, because like Punxsutawney Phil, I could use the rest. The only holiday that has not yet come under attack is the one celebrated on April 1. My thinking behind this is, every fool should have his or her day. Now, I never object to a fool celebrating on April 1. It seems to me that the celebrants of this holiday are vastly increasing. I make it a point every year to join in the celebration.

Easter is my special holiday. The apostle Paul defined it, "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:" (1

Many people hop over the truth, skip around reality and never find the real purpose of God's intention for them.

"There are two kinds of people in the world; those who divide people into two kinds, and those who don't." - Robert Benchley

I'd first like to answer questions posed by Greg Welborn in his column last week, when we both addressed the "Religious Freedom" (to discriminate) nonsense. Greg wrote:

"Would we want churches to be prohibited from feeding the homeless because they don't meet regulations written for restaurants? We would want the local Baptist church to be forced to hire an atheist? Would we want a Muslim baker to be forced to bake a cake for a Jewish wedding? Taking them one at a time; 1) Yes, if the food and/or manner in which it's served were unsafe; 2) Houses of worship are mostly exempt from such laws, anyway, and 3) If that Muslim had a bakery open to the public, then yes. (I understand the question, but I haven't heard of any Muslim attempting to discriminate against Jews, or Jew against Muslims. The only ones who've sought legal cover for intolerance have been "Christian conservatives".)

A similar question was posed by Mike Huckabee in an interview; whether a customer should be able to demand a ham sandwich at a kosher deli. The answer is a definite maybe. Any business is free to offer whatever it chooses. If a ham sandwich appears on the menu, however, the deli can't pick and choose who they'll serve it to. Pitting "religious freedom" against non-discrimination is a wedge issue meant to divide people for political purposes. But there's more uniting us than dividing us not only in our community and our country but with others around the world. I was reminded of this in a conversation at work last Monday. I'd stopped by to check on a store that sells products of the company I work for and chatted with Afshin, who handles their merchandising. He told me he'd just returned from vacation - having spent two weeks with family in Tehran. I had to ask how he found the mood over there, with the recently agreed-upon framework for a nuclear deal. He didn't hesitate: "Ecstatic - People are in the street with joy." He added, "That 'hate America' stuff – that's just those few in power at the top; the people of Iran love America." Religion and theocracy wasn't mentioned - it was rather a matter of those having power and money being determined to hang onto it; using "hate America" as their own prevailing wedge issue to divide their people from the rest of the world.

According to Afshin, the people in the street weren't buying it. They knew they'd been bearing the brunt of the sanctions while those with the money and power were left unscathed. They knew it was their taxes that supported those in power and fed their protected bank accounts.

I was reminded of a conversation with my wife's friend Nina from Moscow over 25 years ago. The collapse of the Soviet Union was underway. I asked her what she thought was most responsible for the upheaval; the Polish Solidarity movement, Reagan's missiledefense initiative, Glasnost and Perestroika, whatever. Nina cited two factors: Levis jeans and Madonna cassettes. Under Gorbachev, it was easier to bring stuff into the country and the more they experienced things American and from the outside, the less they could

President Obama stressed this isn't about "politics", but of nothing less than "war and peace". However, there's nothing but politics to explain efforts to derail what the president calls a "once-in-a-lifetime opportunity" in order to deny him (and his party) this accomplishment heading into 2016. The "hate America" crowd in Iran has allies in those who once held power here, who, like them, now use fear as their current wedge issue in trying to regain that power (although the mullahs of Iran now appear the reasonable ones compared to the Bush veterans appearing on Fox News.)

But this could also drive a wedge between us, our allies and major powers throughout the world. There's a disconnect in arguments we continue and intensify sanctions, considering the likelihood of the other parties (Germany, France, the U.K., China and Russia) simply going ahead without us – lifting sanctions and seeking to unite rather than divide by pursuing common interests. Actions we took on our own would be hollow, as would be any expectation of continuing to be regarded as a serious negotiating partner regardless of who occupies the White House.

Nicholas Burns, Undersecretary of State in the Bush Administration, made the point on MSNBC that "we've got the entire world with us", saying "President Obama has done very well" in picking up the negotiations stalled under Bush. Council on Foreign Relations fellow Michael Levi described elements as "surprisingly strong and significant ... particularly those on the Iranian supply chain". Thirty U.S. nonproliferation experts and diplomats jointly stated the agreement would "put in place an effective, verifiable, enforceable, long-term plan to guard against the possibility of a new nuclear-armed state in the Middle East", that it "reduces the likelihood of destabilizing nuclear weapons competition . . . and strengthens efforts to prevent proliferation."

In Israel, there's criticism of the deal but also of P.M. Netanyahu for his having antagonized allies to the point he had little if any influence on the negotiations. After allowing himself to be used as a wedge issue by Congressional Republicans, one Knesset member quoted by the L.A. Times said Netanyahu's "mission" now should be to "try to rehabilitate relations with the Obama administration as much as possible" in order to have some influence going forward.

To paraphrase Benchley, there are two kinds of people in the world; those who create wedge issues hoping to divide people for politics and power, and those who realize that, whether regarding who gets served at a local deli or negotiations among the world's nuclear powers, Bill Clinton got it right in his First Inaugural Address: "There is no 'us and them'. There is only us."

WE DON'T NEED NO STINKING DEAL

Very few op-eds have been as easy to write as this one; in fact, the article almost wrote itself from the daily headlines of the last several days. The toughest thing for me to do was to come up with a catchy title. As for the article, well anyone who believes that Iran and the civilized world have a "deal" desperately needs to read this article. Everyone else can skip this page and move on to the movie reviews. As the grand, great, overweight, self-important, pompous, supreme, high mullah of Iran made painfully clear today, Iran doesn't need no stinking deal, but if they did, it certainly wouldn't be the deal President Obama is claiming his team has negotiated.

In the last several days since Secretary of State Kerry's return from Switzerland, President Obama and his team have shifted into high gear and double overtime to convince America that the deal they've negotiated is not only the best possible deal we could get, but it's actually good for America. The President has even gone so far as to steal some of the symbolism employed by Israel's Prime Minister Netanyahu in his U.N. presentation against the deal to argue in favor of the deal. But plagiarism of cute illustrations isn't going to be enough, and so the President, as so often has been his practice, launched into misdirection and accusations to convince skeptical Americans that our only option is to appease the grand mullahs.

President Obama told America that, "when you hear the inevitable critics of the deal sound off, ask them a simple question: Do you really think that this verifiable deal, if fully implemented, backed by the world's major powers, is a worse option than the risk of another war in the Middle East?" Before dissecting all that's wrong with this, let me answer the question: Yeah, this deal is worse than another war, because this deal would bring about a nuclear holocaust in the Middle

In order for any deal to be good, let alone truly beneficial to perpetuating peaceful coexistence, the deal has to be mutually agreeable and verifiable. What Secretary Kerry brought home to President Obama as his legacy present fails on both counts. But we don't need to take my word for Today, Iran's Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei ripped into the U.S. and its western partners in comments he released on his Twitter account and on his official website. He made it absolutely clear that President Obama's understanding of when sanctions would be released was not the same as his understanding of when sanctions would be released. Obama has relied heavily on the argument that the deal is good because Iran doesn't get what it wants (economic relief) until it gives us what we want (implementation of key components). The Grand Poohbah of Iran said that the sanctions lift the minute Iran signs the deal. No efforts on their part, no verification of good faith gestures or even actual reductions in nuclear capability would be accepted as a condition.

That's a hard enough stance to take, but Iran went one better. Today also, the country's military head stated that access to Iran military facilities would not be granted to U.N. or any other international body's inspectors. The geek squad is free to poke around the facilities Iran wants them to see, but anything else would be off limits.

Contrary to President Obama's presentation of our false choice, the deal negotiated by Kerry-The-Intrepid doesn't require Iran to do anything to reap their reward, and what it does require later can't be verified because access to suspicious sites won't be granted. I'm not Donald Trump, but even I can smell a bad deal like this one.

Beyond the asymmetry of the deal (we don't get anything, they get everything) and the lack of verification (we can inspect only what they want to let us see), the deal, if signed, would be a disaster for a couple of other important reasons.

We need look no further than our experience with North Korea to learn that dictators who are determined to get a bomb won't let a little thing like an international agreement stand in their way. President Clinton spent years negotiating a deal with North Korea only to have the Hermit Kingdom turn off the U.N. cameras, break through the crime scene tape the U.N. thought secured the nuclear facilities and build a bomb they agreed they wouldn't build in order to get economic benefits from the U.S. Only an idiot would believe that a similar piece of paper would stop the mullahs from getting their bomb.

The second reason is much more practical. From what I can see (just now corroborated by no less than President Obama on television this week), Iran will have a bomb before the final details of the deal are worked out. We learned from Obama's NPR interview that Iran is, as of right now, only 2 to 3 months away from "breaking out" - the period necessary to actually assemble a bomb. The deal, if implemented, is supposed to force Iran to stretch that out to one year.

Now, I'm pretty good in math, but it doesn't take more than 5th grade skills to figure out that Iran will have a bomb before the "final" June 30th deadline for a final agreement. The date today is April 9. 3 months from now, Iran will sign a deal and then detonate a nuclear bomb underground. Iran don't need no stinking agreement.

The only thing that can stop this nightmare is a military strike to really set them back. Sadly, another war in the Middle East is inevitable. The only thing that's negotiable is whether there's going to be a nuclear holocaust. Let's hope the Israelis are smarter and braver than our fearful

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF ETHEL ALMARINE BROCK Case No. BP160849

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of ETHEL ALMARINE BROCK A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Mary Kathryn Dennis in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Mary Kathryn Dennis be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant

A HEARING on the petition will be held on April 15, 2015 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 29 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

To: The Clerk of the City of Sierra Madre:

Notice is hereby given by the persons whose names appear hereon of their intention to circulate the attached petition within the City of Sierra Madre for the purpose of repealing existing ordinances permitting the taxation of utilities.

Pursuant to applicable provisions of law, we respectfully request that you immediately deliver this notice to the City Attorney and that he prepare a Title and Summary within the time prescribed by law and return it to us. All communications and correspondence may be directed to us in care of Earl Richey at his address below.

TITLE AND SUMMARY

TITLE: REPEAL OF UTILITY USERS TAX ("UUT")

SUMMARY:

The current rate for utility users tax is 10%, which will step down to 8% on July 1, 2015 and again to 6% on July 1, 2016. If approved by a majority of Sierra Madre voters, this initiative would repeal all current City utility users taxes, including those imposed on charges for telephone, electricity, gas, water and video services.

The City's existig utility users taxes fund general City services, including police, paramedics, parks, libraries, streets, and other public services and facilities. If voters approve the initiative, the City must either reduce funding for these programs and services or find some other funding source for them, if possible.
