PROTECTING THE VILLAGE CHARACTER

The latest community action group in Sierra Madre has demonstrated that it is possible for citizens with diverse ideas and a common goal to work together

You've probably seen the signs on lawns all over town and wondered what they were about. You may have even seen your neighbors wearing T-Shirts proudly. Or, you may have heard representatives speak at Council and Planning meetings.

The signs, etc., are spreading the message that everyone in Sierra Madre says they want to, preserve the small town character of our city and that is what the group, Preserve Sierra Madre (PSM) is all about.

At a recent meeting of the local Kiwanis Club, founder Matthew Bryant gave a very informative and encouraging presentation about PSM. Below are excerpts from his presentation:

History: Starting with the Save the Monastery Coalition

"Before I can tell the story of how Preserve Sierra Madre came into existence, I have to tell the story of the Save the Monastery Coalition because that was the original group that was rapidly formed in response to the threat of a housing project over at Mater Dolorosa or as it is often known, The Monastery.

We began accumulating a data base of supporters as well as receiving very heartfelt emails from people who told us what those Monastery grounds meant to them in terms of the peace, the solitude, the sacredness of the land, and as a sanctuary for the wildlife that lives there.

Preserve Sierra Madre is Formed

When the Mater Dolorosa project went into hibernation, it got us to thinking about creating a new coalition that would expand beyond just a focus on the Monastery project.

We realized that in the past, different threats had appeared, whether it was One Carter back 10 years ago or the Measure V campaign to control development in Sierra Madre's commercial district, and each time this had happened, people would get aroused, form a group, sometimes succeed or not in removing the threat and then the group would completely disband into obscurity.

We wanted to create a group that would focus on development issues throughout the entire City of Sierra Madre and not just on one particular project. And we wanted to create a group that would not dismantle itself completely as was done in the past, but would exist in

Bryant characterized the main goals of PSM as:

We believe in preserving the last remaining open space. We believe in sustainable slow-growth.

We believe in limiting the quantity and size of new homes. We believe in balancing the property rights of owners with the property rights of the

We believe in preserving our historical heritage. We believe in preserving the small town, village-like

Throughout his speech, Bryant touted the group's emphasis on working together as a community. At one point he used a quote from one of our city leaders, "I think Mayor Harabedian at that meeting said it best when he said that, "There is not right or wrong here - it's just about preferences.

The group has had a number of successes under their belt that have been covered by this paper.

voice of inclusiveness, civility and commitment to the common goal of 'Preserving Sierra Madre' do appear to be the principles that guide To learn more about Preserve Sierra Madre go to their website: website at www. PreserveSierraMadre.

CO-FOUNDER OF MT. WILSON INSTITUTE, ARTHUR VAUGHAN, JR., PASSES AWAY

Born on July 19, 1934, in Salem, Ohio, he was the son of Arthur Harris Vaughan, an engineer, and Helen Higley Vaughan, a former math teacher. He excelled as a student at Salem schools, and went on to Cornell University, where he received his Bachelor's degree in Engineering Physics, and then attended The University of Rochester where he was awarded a PhD in Physics, Mathematics and Astronomy.

He first came to Southern California in 1964, when he was awarded a Carnegie Institution Fellowship for research on interference spectroscopy of infrared emission lines in gaseous nebulae at Mount Wilson Observatory. After becoming a scientific staff member of the Observatories, he built, and put into operation, a spectrophotometer that he designed specifically to study cyclic variations of chromospheric activity in stars like the sun. Results of his pioneering studies with this instrument, invaluable to the scientific community, have been cited hundreds of times by scientists worldwide over the past 30 years. Concurrent with his research, Arthur assumed responsibility for the optical design, testing and commissioning of the Irenee DuPont 100-inch telescope at Carnegie's Las Campanas Observatory in Chile, where he acted as assistant director.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side by Deanne Davis

"Victor Espinoza, who rode American Pharoah to victory in Saturday's 141st Kentucky Derby, became the seventh jockey with three Derby victories and the sixth to post two consecutive wins (California Chrome in 2015 and he won on War Emblem in 2002)"

Los Angeles Times May 3, 2015

What a weekend, friends and neighbors! First our own Victor Espinoza wins his second consecutive Kentucky Derby on a horse that has been referred to as "lightly raced" and "sort of a problem child!" Trainer, Bob Baffert, "gave Espinoza simple instructions, 'Man, I don't know, just go ride your race!' Espinoza recalled, laughing. "Good idea, Bob!" he said. That's our guy, an amazing jockey and a hero to young cancer patients at City of Hope. If you happen to see Victor around town, give him a high five! Coming up: The Belmont and the Preakness...maybe Victor and American Pharoah will take the Triple Crown this year. Fingers crossed!

Then we had the Art Fair, which was the nicest one ever, we think...of course we say that every year and you probably do, too! First of all, we stopped at Lew Watanabe's Weeping Wall Memorial and took a moment to read the plaque once again:

"Dedicated to all the armed forces veterans of Sierra Madre...

Who served our country in peace and war... Who helped to preserve peace and freedom for our city, country and the world. The wall weeps...not with sorrow, but with pride. God bless them all. April 1999'

And there was something we hadn't noticed before, though it's probably been there all along; a directory of the location of each veteran's picture on the Sierra Madre Memorial Wall. Nice.

Here are a few of the things we especially liked: John Wortham's photography. He calls himself a photographer of the world and his landscapes and animal photographs are some of the best we've ever seen. My Art Fair companion and favorite pilot, John, and the beautiful bonsai by featured artist Frank Yee. One in particular, a tiny cypress forest with a little man seated in a meditation pose was unusually lovely.

Cessnas (his plane of choice). Kay Taylor's jewelry, featuring some Blog: www.authordeanne.com "Tablespoon of Love, Tablespoon of gorgeous turquoise and silver pieces was busy, as was Marva's Quilts Laughter" is available there...

The Creative Arts Group had a wonderful project for kids featuring boxes, lots and lots of glue, buttons and all sorts of accessories to create your own robot. Susan Henderson, Editor of Mountain Views News, was holding a balloon animal and waiting for her robot to dry when we wandered by.

The Celtic Music group, Luck Penny, who were at the Art Fair last year were back with some sprightly tunes and a nice group of folks sitting in the shade enjoying their playing. The Garden Club were selling some lovely iris at very reasonable prices. I have no luck at all with iris, which is disappointing as I really like them. Ours look healthy and put out new spears every year but they never seem to make any iris! Dutch Iris does OK with us, but regular iris, which I see all over town, not so much.

We chatted a while with the Sierra Madre Library group and heard about the Mary Tumilty Endowment Fund. What a splendid woman she was! Witty, acerbic, and she let our twelve year old daughter, Leah, pick out books in the adult section (Perry Mason mysteries) when she outgrew the children's library, which was pretty much unheard of at the time! Mary made a trip to the library an adventure. Check out her endowment fund next time you stop by the library.

As we were walking Sierra Madre this morning, we commented on how blessed we are to live here where so many wonderful things happen...really, think about it! Our own Rose float, the Art Fair, the Huck Finn Fishing Derby, the Halloween festivities and scarecrow contest, the Wistaria Festival, the Mt. Wilson Trail Race, which is coming up in just a couple of weeks, our July 4th Parade, concerts in the park. Don't you love it here!

Happy Mother's Day to all the moms out there and if you haven't bought your mom a card yet, get on it! It's Sunday, May 10th! Have a great week and watch the jacarandas... they're working overtime this year!

Altadena Residents Evacuated

LA County Fire officials evicted people from their homes Monday afternoon in an East Pentagon Street neighborhood after authorities were alerted that ammunition was found in the backyard of a home on fire.

According to authorities at approximately 2:42 p.m. deputies from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department and Altadena Sheriff's Station responded to a residential fire in the 200 block of East Pentagon Street, Altadena.

REP. SCHIFF WRITES LETTER TO METRO BOARD MEMBERS OPPOSING 710 TUNNEL ALTERNATIVE AFTER EIR RELEASED

(D-Burbank) sent a letter to Chairman Eric Garcetti and members of the Los Angeles Metro Board opposing the SR 710 North freeway tunnel alternative proposed in the SR 710 North Study by the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) and the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro). In the letter, Schiff pushes the Board and Metro to instead study a more innovative, multimodal approach, combining mass transit, bikeways, new parks to improve air quality and more efficient ways of moving cargo.

"Metro could help reshape the transportation future of Los Angeles by thinking outside the box to get people outside their vehicles, by integrating parks and better urban planning, smart traffic lights and smarter mass transit, all of this and more, and all for less than the cost of a tunnel," said Schiff. "At the beginning of this process, many in the community were afraid that Metro would plow ahead with a predetermined conclusion that the freeway must be finished, and other ideas would only be entertained so that they might be rejected in a process with only the appearance of deliberation. As the challenges facing Los Angeles are new, I urge Metro to think anew, reject the tunnel, and give serious consideration to other, more forward thinking and more suitable options."

The full letter that Schiff sent it below:

Dear Chairman Garcetti and Metro Board Members: I write to express my opposition to the SR 710 North freeway tunnel alternative proposed in the the idea. This has also proved not to be the case.

of Transportation (Caltrans) and the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro). After review of the draft Environmental Impact Report/Environmental Impact Statement (EIR/EIS), it is my belief that a tunnel would be cost prohibitive and detrimental to the communities overall, including many cities that I represent in

When the idea of a tunnel was first raised and it was believed that the rare common ground in the decades-long fight over the 710 might be underground, I was willing to explore its fiscal, technical and community feasibility. At the time, Metro represented that due to improvements in tunneling technology, a below ground option might cost the same or only fractionally more than the discredited at-grade proposal - or roughly $1.5

This estimate would prove wildly optimistic. Whatever the technological feasibility, a single-bore or dual-bore tunnel is cost prohibitive and could cost anywhere between $3.15 billion and a whopping $5.65 billion. All of the four other alternative proposals put together would cost less than even the more modest tunnel option. Furthermore, experience on other major transportation projects teaches us that even these costs are likely to be considerably higher than the estimates produced in an EIR/EIS report.

It was also believed by Metro at the time a tunnel was first proposed that the agency would be able to garner strong community support for

Washington, DC - Today, Rep. Adam Schiff SR 710 North Study by the California Department To the degree a consensus has formed around the tunnel - at least insofar as the communities along its path are concerned – it is a consensus against the proposal, finding it too costly, too disruptive and too backward a solution to transportation needs in the 21st Century. Our communities want new and innovative ways to move people and improve air quality, not more freeways above or below ground with their smokestacks for ventilation and even more vehicles belching exhaust through their neighborhoods.

I was discouraged to see that the draft EIR/EIS did not seriously consider a more innovative, multimodal approach, combining mass transit, bikeways, new parks to improve air quality and more efficient ways of moving cargo. These are the approaches favored by so many constituents who have written in to the Board. Many urban areas in the United States, including Los Angeles, are starting to take an "all of the above" approach to addressing their transportation needs using bus, light rail, and other forms of transportation to address their commuting needs. While I believe the bus rapid transit and light rail transit approaches are good starting points, I encourage Metro and Caltrans to continue seeking community input to further explore a multimodal approach that combines the best of these options and makes our communities more interconnected, smarter mass transit, all of this and more, and all for less than the cost of a tunnel.

Metro could help reshape the transportation future of Los Angeles by thinking outside the box to reject the tunnel, and give serious consideration to get people outside their vehicles, by integrating parks other, more forward thinking and more suitable and better urban planning, smart traffic lights and options.

At the beginning of this process, many in the community were afraid that Metro would plow ahead with a predetermined conclusion - that the freeway must be finished, that it must proceed along its historic route, above or below ground it did not matter - and other ideas would only be entertained so that they might be rejected in a process with only the appearance of deliberation. As the challenges facing Los Angeles are new, I urge Metro to think anew,

ASSEMBLYMEMBER HOLDEN'S BILL TO ENSURE VICTIMS OF HUMAN RIGHTS ABUSES GET THEIR DAY IN COURT (AB 15)

Sacramento - As we remember the horrors of the of the Armenian Genocide some 100 years ago and the Nazi Holocaust during World War II, Assemblymember Chris Holden has introduced legislation to extend the statute of limitations for the victims of human rights abuses.

AB 15 was approved today with unanimous, bi-partisan support in the Assembly Judiciary Committee. The vote was 10 to 0. The bill now goes to the Assembly floor for consideration.

AB 15 will bring California law into line with federal regulations for filing civil lawsuits based on acts of genocide, torture, war crimes and human trafficking. În California, these human rights abuses are brought as assault, battery or wrongful death claims and carry a two-year statute of limitations. AB 15 extends the statute of limitations to ten years aligning the time limit for filing a human rights claim in California with current federal law.

"This reform is long overdue. Victims often suffer mental and physical problems that prevent them from filing quickly," pointed out Assemblymember Holden. "Because of that, many of these crimes are never prosecuted and the abuse continues. This bill would help the victims and their families find some measure of justice in the face of these horrific crimes."

"In 2001, I was trafficked from my village in Mexico and forced to work 18-hour days sewing dresses in a factory in Los Angeles," said Florencia Molina, one of the witnesses testifying in support of AB 15. "Once I was able to escape, I wanted to bring a claim against my trafficker. But no one knew much about trafficking back then, and I was not sure what I could do. If AB 15 had been around, I would have been able to get restitution for the abuses I suffered and the wages that were stolen from me. I want other survivors to know that justice is never too late"

This bill would also revive eligible claims finally allowing victims of the Holocaust, Armenian Genocide, and other historic incidences of human rights violations to seek a remedy for the abuse they

"Passing this measure would be a critical step towards re-balancing the scales in human rights cases where short filing deadlines currently favor abusers over victims," said Amanda Werner, Legal and Policy Fellow with International Corporate Accountability Roundtable. "Though the number of cases brought under AB 15 would be small in number, they would be significant in allowing a remedy for survivors, ensuring that perpetrators of the worst human rights abuse cannot find safe harbor within California's borders.

AB 15 is supported by a number of local, national and international human rights advocates including Armenian National Committee of America (ANCA), American Jewish World Service, Amnesty International, Consumer Attorneys of America, EarthRights International, International Corporate Accountability Roundtable and Oxfam.

LAWSUIT HALTS CITY PROJECTS, NOT HISTORY

From Arcadia's Best By Scott Hettrick

Repercussions from a lawsuit that could impact the growth of Downtown Arcadia and the preservation of historical buildings in the Highlands while improving preservation elsewhere, a decision to shut off the city's most prominent water fountain, a new ordinance dictating new rules about realtor For Sale signs, and discussion of the City's upcoming $100 million-plus budget were just a few of the topics covered during more than five hours of Arcadia City Council meetings that could have been called Cinco de Mayor on Tuesday evening, May 5, 2015.

A class-action lawsuit filed by residents in the Highlands who are trying to stop construction of large homes has resulted in the City halting work on a citywide modification of residential and commercial zoning that was nearing completion after about two years of staff efforts survey of historical structures in the Highlands. The latter decision sparked Highlands resident April Verlato to chastise the all-male fivemember Council during the public comments of Tuesday's City Council meeting, suggesting that it's starting to look like they are making decisions simply because they don't like women telling them what to do. (Verlato is an attorney in the Downtown Arcadia district where she is President of the Arcadia Improvement to save the homes targeted for replacement by larger homes, one of which is next door to her and which she has said holds significant historical of the city, likely hiring a consultant already identified by City staff in the near future to conduct the survey to determine what buildings in town may be considered of historical significance, and then propose a Historical Preservation ordinance over the next six months or so, which could incorporate the Mills Act like many other cities that would allow property owners whose homes and buildings are considered historic to take advantage of tax breaks in exchange for preserving the historical elements of their homes and buildings.

This decision was made during a closed session at the end of a 2 1/2-hour budget study session open to the public and prior to the first regular Council meeting under new Mayor Gary Kovacic. The vote was reported at the beginning of the Council meeting that got underway more than ten minutes late due to the closed session a continuation of a closed session from April 7. and community input, as well as a long-sought It was reported that the Council voted unanimously in the closed session to defend the City against the lawsuit challenging the Council's decision to allow developers to build two new larger houses — the lawsuit is hinged on negative environmental impacts. But the Council split 3-2 on three votes in that closed session related to ongoing projects they felt could be used against the city's advantage in defending its position in the lawsuit: to continue with the historical survey minus the Highlands area to cease work Association. She has been a leader in the fight on zoning modifications throughout the city that would have created more effective and attractive zoning to allow more desirable types of businesses in areas such as Downtown Arcadia as well as value, although her name is not on the lawsuit.) commercial and residential areas throughout But the Council did vote 3-2 to approve moving the community to cease Neighborhood Impacts General Fund portion of the budget: forward on the historical survey in all other parts community meetings

Once they got to the regular items on the the City's overall revenue and continues to show agenda of the main City Council meeting, there was really only one agenda item that required much discussion but that took an hour-and-ahalf: a public hearing also carried over from the one-time $719,000 reimbursement-type payment last regular meeting on April 7 concerning an ordinance to apply regulations on realtor For Sale and Open House signs that are more enforceable while meeting the needs of realtors. Several representatives from the Arcadia Association of Realtors and a few others offered comments, after which new regulations were adopted that, among other things, will allow:

Only one Open House sign per yard and allow them to be displayed from 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. on the day of the Open House allow all signs to be a uniform six-feet high. ## CELLULAR TOWER PLACEMENT DISCUSSION - RIDGESIDE WATER RESERVOIR

During the past several months, staff has been interfacing with representatives from Verizon Wireless, who have requested that the City consider leasing them space to place a cell tower on our water reservoir off of Ridgeside Drive. Before we would consider the application, however, staff informed Verizon Wireless that they would have to do outreach to the neighbors in the area to ascertain issues of concern in the neighborhood.

An initial meeting that was hosted by Verizon Wireless a few months ago did not go well. Representatives from Verizon Wireless were late to the meeting and were unable to address some very basic concerns raised by the neighbors off of Ridgeside Drive. Following that meeting, we informed Verizon Wireless that we would no longer be considering their application unless they took the outreach process

Those discussions culminated in an additional meeting with the neighbors that was coordinated this past week. Representatives from the Community Development Department and the City Manager's Office did a great job facilitating the meeting, and based on feedback from those that participated in the discussion, the conversation with Verizon Wireless at this second meeting resulted in feedback from the residents that they vehemently oppose locating a cell tower on the City's water reservoir off of Ridgeside Drive.

Staff will be meeting this upcoming week to address next steps in the matter, and we will be sure to keep everyone informed moving

COMMISSIONER RECRUITMENT APPLICATION DEADLINE BEING EXTENDED TO MAY 15, 2015

As you may be aware, the application deadline for those interested in serving a Commissioner was initially scheduled for Friday, May 1, 2015. However, given the results of the most recent City Council election, which created an additional vacancy on the Community Services Commission, and given the fact that several incumbent commissioners have decided not to reapply, staff has extended the recruitment period through Friday, May 15, 2015. Please contact City Clerk, Alice Atkins for more information - aatkins@ci.monrovia.

LAB LAUNCH MONROVIA UPDATE

Working in cooperation with Samuelson Fetter, a new biotech incubator company called Lab Launch Monrovia has executed a lease agreement to locate their operations here in our community. Lab Launch Monrovia is leasing approximately 11,000 square feet of research space at 605 East Huntington Drive via a unique leasing arrangement in which Samuelson Fetter discounted their typical lease rates by several hundred thousand dollars in an effort to support local job creation in the science and technology sector here in Monrovia.

At this point in time, based on the work that Lab Launch Monrovia has done to date, they anticipate being able to open their doors by July 1, 2015. Included as an attachment to this email are several outreach and marketing materials that their firm has developed touting their new operations.

In parallel with the efforts of Lab Launch Monrovia, staff has continued working with representatives of Oak Crest Institute of Science in an effort to develop a supplemental science and technology incubator program. This additional program will be focused on attracting entrepreneurs who are not yet at a point where they need the type of lab space offered by Lab Launch Monrovia, and will, in our estimation, enhance the appeal of Monrovia as one of the first places that those working in the science and technology industry will consider when deciding where to locate their business.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

WHY DOES FIDO WIPE HIS FEET?

Dogs do some pretty funny things sometimes, and I think it's great that they keep me entertained while I walk them to keep them in shape. Much like we humans, dogs are individuals, each with their own personality, unique quirky behavioral patterns, and hilarious hang-ups & habits. Also, much like we humans, not everything a dog does has to have any real meaning or purpose. Maybe they just behave certain ways because they want to, or perhaps they do it to get a response from us because they simply enjoy making us laugh.

For example, one of my canine clients, a wonderful white female shepherd named Charlee just loves to jump up on top of the stone walls all around town during our walks, and follow along looking down at me while I stay below on the sidewalk. I sometimes wonder if she does that because she likes the feeling of being taller than the human who happens to be walking her. Or maybe she likes having the vantage point where she can see more squirrels in the trees.

Another one of my dog buds really likes to lean in on my leg with his behind while I am petting him. I can always tell he's ready for a massage, when he stands in front of me, looking in the same direction as I am, and waits till I sit down, then literally backs up and pushes himself into my bent knees. He then looks over his shoulder as if to say, "OK, go ahead, I'm ready for my petting session!". It cracks me up so much, because I am thinking, "Why not just put your face towards me while I pet you?", right? Anyway, I get a real kick out of observing the oddities and idiosyncrasies displayed by my furry four legged friends, and I consider it comic therapy. They all have a way of brightening up my day.

One particular behavioral trait that just about all my canine clients tend to demonstrate during our walks is that of wiping their feet on the ground after relieving themselves. Now and again I even catch clumps of grass being kicked in my face while bending down to clean up the dog's poop. (You can use your imagination to get a good grip on that visual). In my younger years I always assumed when a dog scooted it's paws after taking a dump, it was trying to cover up the stink, but I found out recently that is not necessarily so.

Apparently the general consensus among most animal behavioral scientists who have studied this particular trait in dogs, is that they scrape the grass after doing their business because they have glands in the pads of their feet that secrete a fluid that other dogs will be able to smell. The purpose is to add a secondary signature to the spot they just finished marking. I am sure the researchers are right, but as a layperson who loves mutts so much and likes to think she knows the mind of a dog, I still can't help thinking they're just trying to cover up the mess they just left.

There are so many curious canine quirks manifested by the average domestic dog during their daily lives, some of which are sure to put a person in stitches when or if they get to be the lucky by-stander. I think the funniest favorite of all animal antics I have had the opportunity to observe is when a dog acts out in it's sleep with rapid eye movements, air galloping legs and muted bays and barks, all clearly because they are dreaming. No stand up comedy act out there could ever compare to the show an animated dreaming dog can put on!

All in all, whether the comical things canines do that make us laugh are meaningful in the big scheme of things, I think we can all agree that they matter enough without the consensus of research scientists. It has been said many times that laughter is the best medicine, and I agree fully. Therefore, I want to thank all of the darling doggies I have the privilege of spending time with for keeping me happy with their adorable antics. Keep up the good work my dear canine companions, and let the show go on! Love, laugh and let live!

PET OF THE WEEK FRANKIE ANIMAL ID #A4821969

Meet a handsome young guy with a personality to match, Frankie (A4821969)! Frankie is a regal 1-year-old tricolor male purebred Siberian Husky who was left at the Baldwin Park Animal Care Center on April 23rd because his former owner complained that he wanted too much attention. Weighing 44 lbs, Frankie's only crime is that he is indiscriminate in his affection; he will happily and confidently approach strangers and dish out kisses. Frankie walks okay on leash, but can benefit from additional leash and other puppy training basics. He is certainly treat motivated, so that should make training him all the easier. Frankie also shows signs of being housebroken, so he is well on his way to being an amazing canine citizen. Frankie will make a perfect indoor companion for an active family living in a private home with a fenced yard especially a family who will enjoy bringing him along for various outdoor activities! If you're looking for a great hiking or running partner, Frankie is your guy! Please visit him at the shelter and fall in love. To watch a video of Frankie, please check out the following link: https://youtu.be/u6-WaKMN9go

LOOKING FOR A BEST FRIEND?

Abra is a darling terrier-Chihuahua mix girl, around a year old and weighing about seven pounds. She is a petite girl with a wiry black coat and a very striking white goatee that gives her a unique look all her own.

Abra and her current kennel mate, Princess, have developed a very sweet mother-daughter relationship. When they get back together after being separated, they check to be sure each other are okay. Abra seems to want to please Princess and is often seen giving her kisses.

Abra is very alert and doesn't miss much going on around her. One of her favorite things to do is to try to catch flying insects. Her reaction time is very quick, although we haven't seen her catch anything yet. She is very focused and seems to be a quick learner who would benefit from some training to put her energy to good use.

Abra likes to go for walks, sniffing and exploring along the way, and is easy to handle on leash. Now that she has gotten over her initial shyness, she is quite friendly and loves to be with people. She enjoys pets and cuddles and is happy to sit in a lap and give kisses in return. She is also a social girl who does well with other dogs. She was a hit at the Tea for Tails/ Taste of Westfield event where she was featured in the doggie high fashion show and got to mingle with her fans.

Abra is looking for a safe and secure home where she can develop into the wonderful family pet she is sure to be. She would probably enjoy the company of another dog as a playmate, and would do well in an active home where she gets the exercise and attention she needs. Please come in to meet Abra and she is sure to put a smile on your face. You just might want to take her home.

She currently resides at the San Gabriel Valley Humane Society located at 851 E. Grand Avenue in San Gabriel. We are located off San Gabriel Blvd., north of Mission and south of Las Tunas. To arrange a 'Meet and Greet' with Abra, please stop by any time from 10:00am to 4:30pm Tuesday thru Sunday.

Her adoption fee is $120 and includes spay surgery, vaccinations, microchip and a free wellness exam at a participating veterinarian. Feel free to call us at (626) 286-1159 for more information on Abra. If you are interested in meeting Abra or any of the other wonderful pets at the shelter, visit the San Gabriel Valley Humane Society at 851 E. Grand Ave., San Gabriel, Calif., 91776, Tuesday through Sunday. For more information, call (626) 286-1159. See our website at www.sgvhumane.org for information and photos of all our wonderful pets.

FIRST-GENERATION PASADENA CITY COLLEGE STUDENT NAMED JACK KENT COOKE SCHOLAR

Ryan Liu, a Pasadena City College summa cum laude student who will be delivering the valedictory address at this Friday's commencement ceremony, has been named the recipient of the prestigious Jack Kent Cooke Foundation Undergraduate Transfer Scholarship. A political science major and first--generation college

"The scholarship will give me the opportunity to continue my education without worrying about the costs," said Liu, who will be graduating from PCC with a 4.0 GPA and an associate degree in social and behavioral sciences. "It opens up a lot of doors. I can now choose a school without having to burden my family."

Although still undecided on where to transfer, Liu has narrowed his decision to a pair of elite West--Coast institutions: UC Berkeley and Board as an elected school official. He was also involved in numerous campus organizations, including the Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Society and the Honors Scholar Program. Off campus, he is an assistant high school speech and debate coach, and helps manage an e--Commerce business he co-- founded.

"This was a well--deserved honor for Ryan," said David LeClaire, assistant director of the PCC Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid. "The Jack Kent Cooke Foundation scholarship is clearly the most prestigious and competitive scholarship at the community college

"Federal aid and most scholarships won't cover a majority of a student's higher--education costs. This type of scholarship will bridge that gap," he added.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show AVENGERS: AGE OF ULTRON REVIEW

One of the central complaints that people have about action movies is that that is all the are: action. They never have much in the way of story, character development, and many do not even seem realistic. Can 'Age of Ultron' continue Marvel's dominance over the blockbuster film or does it fall victim to these action movie clichés?

The Avengers (Robert Downey Jr., Chris Evans, Scarlett Johannsson, Mark Ruffalo, Chris Hemsworth, and Jeremy Renner) are seeking to destroy the last of the evil organization, HYDRA. With SHIELD disbanded, they find themselves alone, trying to take down a HYDRA fortress in Eastern Europe, when then discover the twins: Wanda and Pietro Maximoff (Elizabeth Olsen and Aaron Taylor-Johnson), with their own respective superpowers. It becomes clear that they will not stay out of the fight and quickly influence the Avengers to create the new, sentient AI known as Ultron (James Spader), who seeks to create a perfect world. But do his plans involve humanity's survival or Marvel films do very well, not only nationally but internationally, because they do not fall victim to weak plot, little character development, and being completely unrealistic. The Avengers fit together perfectly as a team, and are the closest thing to a depiction of superheroes in real life. Each one of them is a fully fleshed out character, each with their own backstory. The plots are extremely well thought out and developed, perfectly balancing action, dialogue, character development, and world-building. 'Age of Ultron' is one of Marvel's strongest entries in the series, and sets the stage for the next slew of Avenger films.

While it still has that basement feel and do it yourself kind of production value, it features their most published sound ever. This year, several bands they get further into their respective careers. As for Best Coast, this new cut off their new record the past few years a 80s sound was coming back, but now many bands are bringing back the 90s rock (more or less a better era for rock music). tune that's surely the opening track for one's summertime adventure or simply just heading to Mumford & Sons - "Tompkins Square Park" - Here we go again with another opening track worth mention that's off the third LP from British aren't doing the folk thing any longer. This is a pure melodic rock song that pushes the band into new heights. Many fans and critics were surprised new resonance. After two albums ('Sigh No More' and 'Babel') that sound nearly identical, the last and boy did they ever veer off the folk road. The universal appeal than ever before.

It is the ideal song to start off with to settle in with the band's latest transformation. I will admit, I never was an avid fan of their style, but with 'Wilder Mind,' I am a believer in the power of Mumford & Sons. Mumford & Sons' 'Wilder Mind' was released May 4th via Island Records.

PUTTING IT IN CONTEXT

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

When I became Artistic Director, part of my vision for SMP was to contextualize the work on stage. By that I hoped to have supporting lobby exhibits, a speaking series, readings of plays by the same author, music of the period, etc. all working to deepen our audiences' understanding of the work and its place in our culture. We have managed to make some of that happen for each show - when we get a bigger staff we might be able to handle taking on more.

I was lucky to think of a friend whom I knew from my time working at the Museum of Television & Radio in Beverly Hills. Diane Siegel (a 5-time Jeopardy Champion!) agreed to come on board and help us with our first Field Trip Series play Battledrum, and when we launched the new season this year with 6 Rms Riv Vu I talked her into taking a more active role in helping us curate the lobby and other events surrounding each play. She has been extraordinary.

"As a curious person, it has been great fun to dig into the possibilities for adding value to the audience experience," Diane told me. "My work in museum education has left me with a strong commitment to audience engagement and starting conversations about big ideas and interesting objects and photographs."

She is also endlessly creative - she created a "What chair are you?" wall based on characters in 6 Rms Riv Vu likening themselves with different styles of chairs. It proved immensely popular with our patrons. For A Walk in the Woods she created a wonderful timeline that visually explained the arms race. "Timelines are invaluable in helping people place themselves and the events of a play in context," Diane explained. "The hardest part was illustrating the story of the negotiators from the US and Soviet Union. Sometimes I needed to create photo-shopped images with flags and chairs and a table to illustrate a crucial meeting on the time-line.

For The Odd Couple, Diane has divided our lobby into a "Felix" side and an "Oscar" side - inviting the audience to decide whose personality (and neatness) they are more like! "We create our exhibits on a shoestring. The current lobby reflects the usefulness of the 99 Cent store. We are using dustpans and ping pong balls to give the exhibit a playful 'pop," she said. Wait until you see it. Great fun for a funny play!

Now that I have worked on five lobby exhibits for the Playhouse it is interesting to reflect back on the process. Each time I have begun with the task of 'telling people something they don't know already.' I start with a research checklist that helps me understand things from the play," she explained. "Even in big blockbuster exhibitions in world famous museums, the typical visitor will spend no more than 20 minutes looking at the objects and text. In our lobby, the time people will typically spend is less than five minutes. What will help them understand and enjoy the experience are strong visuals, simple text, large font – hey I read with glasses, too! - and a simple time line."

I am so grateful to the wonderfully talented people who have joined us at SMP in our quest to make the Playhouse a thoroughly enjoyable experience from start to finish. The American Revolution was a home-front war that brought scarcity, bloodshed, and danger into the life of every American. In this groundbreaking history, Carol Berkin shows us how women played a vital role throughout the conflict.The women of the Revolution were most active at home, organizing boycotts of British goods, raising funds for the fledgling nation, and managing the family business while struggling to maintain a modicum of normalcy

IS IT POSSIBLE TO INHERIT DEBT?

In general, when a loved one passes, his or her debts fall to the estate to be paid. However, in situations where debt is shared -- for example, jointly owned credit cards or shared student loans -- the debt can pass to the account co-owner, even if he or she was unaware of the

This is why it is important to consider debt planning as part of your overall estate planning process. Here are some tips on dealing with the debt of a deceased loved free credit report every year from the three major credit reporting agencies: Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. Spouses should obtain and share their credit reports with each other so they are informed about any debt issues that could impact their estates. If debt will potentially impact adult children, be honest with them about your financial situation as well.

Get advice. Seek the counsel of trusted attorney or other financial professional on your debt issues and learn how to resolve them. Deal with personal debt before it spirals out of control and becomes a potential issue for your family.

Get organized. Ideally, all of your estate and financial planning documents should be kept together in one place where your family knows where to find them. Among these documents should be an updated list of current assets and debts, including financial institution information, account numbers and passwords.

Get educated. Heirs should educate themselves about what types of debt will need to be repaid and what types may be cancelled or forgiven. Generally, any unsecured debt held in the deceased person's name alone (such as credit cards, student loans, etc.) will be discharged. Be aware, however, debt collectors do have the right to attempt to collect on these kinds of debt -- and may contact survivors to try to "guilt" them into paying. Being educated about liability for debts after the death of a loved one will arm you with the knowledge you need to respond to each situation appropriately.

Award-winning wines are plentiful. As I peruse the aisles of my local supermarket on a weekly basis, I notice many ways for the wineries to let you know that their wines are the "chosen" ones - stickers on the bottles, shelf talkers, neck hangers, and if the wine is lucky enough to have a floor stack, there might be a full review taped on the box for you to read. Just like TV awards there are so many awards given out to wines your wine is sure to get some kind of medal. Notables include Wine Spectator and Robert Parker. As far as competition in California, we have the San Francisco International Wine Fest, the California State Fair, and locally, the LA County Fair in Pomona. Many newspapers have long since had their own awards, notably the San Francisco Chronicle and the Dallas Morning News. My point is that you look hard enough your favorite wine is most likely been given some type of an award. Are these awards bought for? In some cases, yes. A few years ago I interviewed George Millitos, a fourth degree sommelier (take note there are more brain surgeons in the world than there are fourth degree sommeliers) who stands by the adage "if you like it drink it".

This week I enjoyed a Robert Hall 2012 Cabernet from Paso Robles. Robert Winery has been around for 40 years and produces some solid wines with prices ranging from $10 to $40. I'd consider 2012 a perfect picnic wine - something you could share while passing around the garlic bread and pasta. This wine is easy drinking and far less complex then other Paso Robles cabernets that I have tried, thus proving that soil does matter even in an area the size of Paso Robles. I liked the solid fruit flavor and a hint of cider, and that there was no real spiciness to the finish. No need to store, ready to drink. Award winning? The winery has a ton of them.

Hmm. least I hope so. Yes!

I want the answer to be yes. But how?

People do not judge based on thoughts, but by our actions. We are basically how we behave. This is what others see, this is how they know us. So yes, it's possible to be a giver with bad motives, but does it really matter when we are still taking the right

HOW TO RECOGNIZE STROKE SYMPTOMS AND WHAT TO DO

Dear Savvv Senior:

What are the symptoms of a stroke? My 66-year-old aunt had a stroke a few months ago and neither she nor my uncle had a clue it was happening. Concerned Relative

Dear Concerned:

Unfortunately, most Americans don't know the face droop? signs of a stroke, but they need to. Stroke is the fifth leading cause of death in the United States and the No. 1 cause of disability. Being able to recognize a stroke and getting to the hospital quickly can make a huge difference in reducing its potentially devastating effects. Here are some tips that help you recognize a stroke, and what you should do if it happens to you or your loved one.

Types of Stroke

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, every year more than 795,000 people in the United States have a stroke – three-quarters of which are over the age of 65. A stroke occurs when a blood vessel that carries blood to the brain is suddenly blocked by a clot (ischemic stroke), or burst (hemorrhagic stroke), causing parts of the brain to become damaged or die. About 87 percent of all strokes are ischemic.

Depending on the severity of the brain damage, strokes can cause mild to severe disabilities including paralysis, loss of speech, vision and memory, along with other health and emotional issues, and death.

Stroke Signs

a stroke may not realize it. Stroke victims have the best chance if someone around them recognizes the symptoms and acts quickly. The five most common symptoms include:

Sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm, or leg, especially on one side of the body.

understanding.

Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes.

The easiest way to identify a stroke is to use the F.A.S.T. test to identify the symptoms.

A (Arm): Ask the person to raise both arms. Does one arm drift downward?

S (Speech): Ask the person to say a simple sentence. Is their speech slurred? T (Time): If you observe any of these signs of stroke,

To help you remember the signs, the American Stroke Association has a free "Spot a Stroke FAST" app (see strokeassociation.org) that you can download on your smartphone or mobile device. Or, visit the National Stroke Association at stroke.org and print their "Act FAST" wallet card to keep as a reminder.

Act Quickly

Remember that stroke is a medical emergency and every minute counts. Even if you're not sure a stroke is happening, call 911 anyway. The longer blood flow is cut off to the brain, the greater the damage. Immediate treatment can save a person's life and improve their chances for a successful recovery.

Ischemic strokes are treated with a drug called t-PA that dissolves the blood clots that block the blood flow to the brain. The window of opportunity to start treating a stroke is three hours. But to be evaluated and receive treatment, patients need to get to the hospital within 60 minutes.

If you have a choice, wait for the paramedics rather than driving the patient yourself. Patients who are transported by EMS are evaluated and treated much quicker than people who are driven in. And, of course, don't drive if you are the one having a stroke.

It's also very important that you call 911 even if symptoms go away. When symptoms of stroke disappear on their own after a few minutes, a "ministroke" or transient ischemic attack (TIA) may have occurred which is a warning that a major stroke may be coming. That's why mini-strokes need to be treated like emergences too.

KATIE Tse.....This and That COUNT DOWN!

> "It's the most wonderful time of the year!" That song is typically played at Christmas, but if you have school-age children or know people who work at elementary schools, you've probably heard them humming it lately. I have several friends and relatives in education, but I draw most of my information from my mom's 30 plus years of teaching third grade in a public school.

Some years, the count down to the last day began the first week of school! My mom's district printed the calendar of the entire school year on a single sheet of paper, with each week represented by a small box containing five dots. Holidays or "student free days" (a.k.a. professional development) were represented by a minus or pound sign. My mom highlighted all the non-dot days, and every Friday she'd shear another week off the page. My grandma used to tell her that she was clipping her life away. But, as my mom put it, "The time's going to pass either way. Why not celebrate

That's how a lot of people in education see the countdown to summer. I've heard of many creative ways teachers make the arrival of the last day more exciting. Nearly every school has a white board in the lounge, and the office staff start numbering the remaining days starting from 20 if it's been a decent year, and maybe 30 if the year's been rough. Some people write the numbers on squares of toilet paper and rip one off each day.

number of remaining days, to a corkboard and popping them with darts. I like that idea, but with the heightened security at schools, I somehow doubt that darts are allowed on campus.

With all the excitement surrounding summer, we can forget those people who start counting the days until school starts again --parents! One of my favorite television ads was for Staples and first aired in the 90's. The ad came out around September, and featured an exuberant father sailing down the aisle at Staples on a shopping cart with two sullen school-aged children in tow. They scowled at him as he flung notebooks, pencils, and other school supplies into the cart. People in education can identify with the children, facing the year ahead of them. But for the parents, it is "The Most Wonderful Time of the Year!"

ASTRONOMERS SET NEW DISTANCE RECORD FOR GALAXIES

An international team of astronomers led by UC Santa Cruz and Yale University has pushed back the cosmic frontier of galaxy exploration to a time when the universe was only 5 percent of its present age. The team discovered an exceptionally luminous galaxy more than 13 billion light-years from Earth and determined its exact distance using the powerful MOSFIRE instrument on the Keck I 10-meter telescope at the W. M. Keck Observatory in Hawaii.

These observations, published May 5 in Astrophysical Journal Letters, confirmed it to be the most distant galaxy currently measured, setting a new record. Known as EGS-zs8-1, the galaxy was originally identified based on its particular colors in images from NASA's Hubble and Spitzer Space Telescopes. It is one of the brightest and most massive objects in the early universe.

"One of the most dramatic discoveries from Hubble and Spitzer in recent years is the unexpected number of these very bright galaxies at early times close to when the first galaxies formed. We still don't fully understand what they are and how they relate to the very numerous fainter galaxies," said coauthor Garth Illingworth, professor of astronomy and astrophysics at UC Santa Cruz.

The new distance measurement also enabled the astronomers to determine that EGS-zs8-1 was still forming stars very rapidly, about 80 times faster than our galaxy does today.

"It has already built more than 15 percent of the mass of our own Milky Way today. But it had only 670 million years to do so. The universe was still very young then," said lead author Pascal Oesch of Yale University, who began studying these bright young galaxies as a Hubble Postdoctoral Fellow at UC Santa Cruz.

Only a handful of galaxies currently have accurate distances measured in this very early universe. "Every confirmation adds another piece to the puzzle of how the first generations of galaxies formed in the early universe," said coauthor Pieter van Dokkum of Yale. "Only the largest telescopes are powerful enough to reach to these large distances.'

The discovery was only possible thanks to the relatively new MOSFIRE instrument on the Keck I telescope, which allows astronomers to efficiently study several galaxies at the same time. Harland Epps, professor emeritus of astronomy and astrophysics at UC Santa Cruz, designed the optics for MOSFIRE.

uniquely capitalism and greed is the

our many holy days and holidays. There is plenty of blame to go around for this, even beginning with the marketing of holiday "stuff" by the various stores, the and the general population for passively accepting this dumbing-down of our sacred traditions.

When we reduce what should be a time of great reflection and learning to a time of buying foods and "stuff," we become the victims of our own ignorance. We deprive ourselves of these annual reminders that our lives should be something more, something greater than merely going through some pointless physical motions.

Mother's Day is therefore not alone in the way it has been outright perverted. And this is really sad, since everything begins at home. A child learns all his or her values in the home. We have heard it said that charity begins at home, but much more begins at home. He who is undisciplined at home will practice that same undisciplined thinking in the workplace, at school, and in the community, even though such is easier to hide "out there" than it is at home.

He or she who practices hypocrisy and dishonesty at home will practice the same in the workplace, at school, and in the community. This is so, despite the defensive denials of so many public officials who want the gullible among us to believe that what they do at home is wholly separate from "their job." No! That's a big lie. The idea that we can think and act one way at home, and another in the community, is absurd! The home is the fundamental "training ground" where one's ideas and ideals and principles can be practiced and tested "safely," and where one can grow and evolve, hopefully amidst a loving and concerned

The mother is more often than not the heart of family, carrying on a 24-hour a day job. The ultimate essence of motherhood is self-discipline. First, selfdiscipline to conduct one's self in a manner that is a fitting example to one's children. After all, children "learn" the most from watching what their parents do. Then there is the self-discipline of motherhood to see that all the physical and emotional and spiritual needs of the children are tended to.

at a regular job and the mother raises the children, emulate those highest principles of Motherhood.

One of the victims of our the mother's job is far more important and far harder "American"-style than men ever give them credit for. The average man's job is relatively simply. He get ups, eats breakfast, goes demise of real meaning within to a job, works, comes home, eat dinners, maybe goes to a meeting in the evening, goes to bed, and repeats it all the next day.

But the scope of responsibility of a mother at home media for going-along-with the pablum messages, is much vaster than the father's. The mother who exemplifies the Principle of Motherhood is working at a level akin to a CEO of a company, focusing on the education, security, nutrition, and spirituality of the children. The mother, more often than not, is the psychologist and nurse, and provider of entertainment and stimulating mental activities. Of course, all this is taking place while the mother must put many of her personal desires on the back burner.

The point that is lost on so many of us today is that we have confused "the Principle of Motherhood" with a female body who has given birth to at least one child. This is a serious error in our thinking. The Principle of Motherhood is a Universal Principle, which means it's there to be studied and learned by anyone, including men (actually, especially men). The principles of motherhood can and should be studied, and practiced by all. It begins with a way of thinking, a way of taking responsibility, a way of embracing, a way of loving. Men are the most deficient in motherhood principles because they have been duped (by their peers, by society, by themselves) into thinking that since they reside in male bodies, they needn't be concerned about that female stuff.

Men attempting to learn the principles of Motherhood create balanced and stronger men. This is equally true for women attempting to learn and apply the principles of Fatherhood.

Men perform spiritual violence upon our beloved mothers when we fall for the grossest Mother's Day marketing campaigns -- such as buying chocolates, sexy underwear, perfume, or jewelry. (Did you already do that? Well, there's always next year!)

We have attempted for years to explore the real underlying meanings of each holiday and Holy day, and this effort has opened our eyes to how ignorant we have all chosen to become. Becoming part of the solution to this problem may seem difficult and socially-unacceptable. Though picnics and heart-felt hand-written cards have their place, it is also good to take the time on Mother's Day to recognize and In the traditional family where the father works honor our mothers, and to find ways that all of us can

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

I'D GIVE HER A PIECE OF MY MIND IF I HAD ANY TO SPARE

I do not know if grouchy comes with old age or if in old age you are too weak to subdue it. I guess it does not really matter because I am having a little bit of trouble along this line. My grouchy seems to be getting out of control.

I remember the good old days, those carefree days, days when I did not let anything bother me. Oh, how I wish they would return.

Lately, it seems everywhere I go I run into people that irritate me. It does not matter if I am driving in a car or walking down the street or sitting in a restaurant, irritating people seem to be everywhere. At least, they seem to be everywhere that I am. Every time I turn around there is somebody irritating me. I am at the point where I am tempted to stop "turning around."

Driving across town the other day I ran into, almost literally, some driver not watching where she was going. Barely missing her, I noticed she was talking on her cell phone. I am quite sure she did not even see me. I wanted to stop everything, get out of my car and give her a good piece of my mind.

But I didn't. It took me a few minutes to settle down and quiet my nerves and so I decided to go to a little café for a cup of coffee. Nothing seems to soothe my nerves quicker than a nice hot cup of Joe. Let them say what they will, coffee is my Fortunately, I was not in a hurry, but it still was a situation that irritated me and stirred up the grouchy within.

I was standing in line waiting to order my coffee when the lady in front of me was trying to figure out what she wanted. I am not sure if this person had ever been in a café before, but she acted as if she did not know what she was doing or what she wanted.

Then she did something that accented the positive in my grouchy.

"Could I have a sample taste of that coffee?" she said to the person behind the counter.

At first, I did not know what she was saying. But he agreed and went back and got a little cup and gave her a sample.

'I'm not sure," she said quite hesitatingly, "can I try another one?" And pointed to one of the coffees she was interested in.

I am absolutely positive that people should have the ability to make their own choices. I have no problem with that. My choice at that of my mind.

Finally, after tasting about 10 different or website www.jamessnyderministries.com. coffees, she picked one and finally I was able to order my coffee and find a seat and enjoy it.

I say, "Enjoy it," but it was rather difficult because my irritableness just would not go away. After all, there should be some respect for the person behind you when you are standing in line. Especially, if that person standing in line is me.

As I was sipping my coffee alone in the corner, some thoughts began to rattle in my head. The main thought emerging was that grouchy may be an inherited condition. I began thinking of my father and his father and unfortunately, I did not know my great-grandfather, but the two that I did know had a wide streak of grouchy in them. If my memory serves me correct, the older they got, the more grouchy became predominant.

So, if grouchy is inherited I am really not to blame. Just thinking about that made me chuckle a little bit. In fact, I began to chuckle so much that my grouchy ran away in fear of his life. And so he should.

Ás I sat in that café enjoying my 2nd cup of coffee, I began evaluating my life. I think I have found out why grouchy is becoming more dominant in my life. Everybody is born with a certain amount "mind." We can do with that "mind" whatever we want to do with it. And so, if I begin giving people a "piece of my mind," I am going to diminish my supply of "mind."

When the "mind" gets low it introduces the level of grouchy. The last phase is when a person comes to the point where he "loses his mind." Now, once you lose your mind, you can never get it back.

I am at the grouchy stage and so I need to take a little bit of inventory. I have only so much "mind" left and I better take care of because that is all I got. Whenever I am tempted to give somebody a piece of my mind, I am going to stop and think it over a little bit.

Does that person really does serve a piece of my "mind?" If I give that person a piece of my mind, will I miss it?

I like what Peter says, "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 1:13).

I am going to protect my mind and use it wisely because it is all I got. Rev. James L. # HOWARD Hays As I See It

"The fight is won or lost far away from witnesses - behind the lines, in the gym, and out there on the road, long before I dance under those lights."

- Muhammad Ali

I had a choice last weekend; go to Vegas for the fight or to Memorial Park for the Art Fair. I think I made the right decision.

The major bout is still eighteen months away, but the field of contenders is taking shape. Just this past week we saw the entrance of Fox News personalities Dr. Ben Carson (who said being gay must be a "choice" because of how straight guys turn gay in prison) and Mike Huckabee (who argues that if Jesus objected to capital punishment, he would've said so at his crucifixion). Carly Fiorina's officially in it, so we'll be hearing more about how we can blame liberals for the drought and unions for the gender pay gap. Some have entered the ring but haven't made it "official". There's the Koch Brothers' favorite, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker (R), who has to figure out how to campaign on taking their policies nation-wide without letting on how they worked out in his own state.

A Wisconsin blogger compared outcomes with neighboring Minnesota, both states hit hard by the Great Recession. As governor, Walker refused to expand Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. He cut taxes for the rich while slashing education funding, programs for the poor and pay for state workers. Minnesota, under Democratic leadership, expanded Medicaid, raised taxes on corporations and those making over $250,000, increased funding for education, transportation and job programs and raised the minimum wage.

Wisconsin's uninsured rate is now double that of Minnesota's and the state pays $150 million more to cover 85,000 fewer people. Minnesota cut its healthcare budget by $50 million while maintaining the lowest rate of uninsured in the country. Wisconsin falls way behind Minnesota in job creation (ranking 35th out of 50 states), employment and wages. Wisconsin faces a $1.8 billion budget deficit, while Minnesota decides what to do with a $1.5 billion

Another contender who'd rather we not look at his home state is Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL). On the campaign trail, you'll hear him knock "Obamacare" and argue instead for some "market-based" alternative. As then-speaker of the Florida House, Rubio pushed through such a plan in 2008. As of earlier this year, the Affordable Care Act has enrolled 1.6 million Floridians. Rubio's program, Florida Health Choices, has enrolled about 80 - at a cost of $2.5

In the opposite corner, when Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT) was asked on ABC's This Week whether Republicans wouldn't jump all over his suggestion we should be more like Scandinavian countries, he responded; "What's wrong when you have more income and wealth equality? What's wrong when they have a stronger middle class in many ways than we do, higher minimum wage than we do, and they are stronger on the environment ...?" Sanders raised $1.5 million on the first day of his campaign, with an average contribution of $43.

A full card of perhaps more consequential contests is due to wrap up by the end of June. Actually, the fights have already taken place – we're just waiting for the judges' decisions.

In one, the main contender is 64-year-old David King of Fredericksburg, VA – a selfemployed limo driver making $39k a year. With that income he's probably exempt from any penalty for not enrolling in a health plan, but he refers to "Obamacare" as "tyranny" - forcing taxpayers to support those on "welfare". (He'll be eligible for Medicare in a few months, anyway.)

He was tracked down by the Koch Brothers / Google front group Competitive Enterprise Institute to provide a name for their case before the Supreme Court, King v. (U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Sylvia) Burwell, hoping to gut the Affordable Care Act. Republicans initially rooted for King, but since realizing many of those nearly 10 million Americans who could lose coverage might be sore losers heading to the polls next year

Another bout on the same card is Texas Dept. of Housing v. Inclusive Communities Project. Over the years, studies documented instances where – all things equal as far as income, credit history, housing interests, etc. - blacks, Asians and/or Hispanics out house-hunting are shown fewer homes, forced into higher-priced mortgages or denied a loan altogether compared to whites. Discrimination suits have been filed under "disparate impact", where statistical findings are relied upon to show what's going on, since you're not likely to find a memo from a bank exec to employees explicitly telling them to go out and discriminate. Many find it alarming that the Supreme Court agreed to even hear a case to disallow "disparate impact".

There's Arizona Legislature v. Arizona Redistricting Commission, to decide whether any state election laws enacted by ballot initiative - such as preventing legislators from gerrymandering their own districts to ensure perpetual reelection – are constitutional.

Other prelims on the card include bouts over internet threats, lethal injections and depicting the Confederate flag on license plates. Many regard the main event, however, to be Obergefell v. (Ohio Dept. of Health Director Richard) Hodges. This is to decide whether equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment protects against having a state tell you who you can and

The fight last weekend took in some $400 million in revenue. That's 8% of the $5 billion estimated to be spent on the fight to succeed President Obama. For that one we need to find out what happens "far away from witnesses", not just when contenders step out to "dance under those lights". They've talked about a Mayweather-Pacquiao rematch in September, and by then most of us won't care. The outcome of those other contests, however, will affect us for generations.

MOTHER'S DAY: UNSUNG HEROINES GET THE SPOTLIGHT

By Danny Tyree

This year my mother (still going strong at age 88) marks 50 years as an antique collector. Since I grew up in a world of hand-stitched quilts, milk churns, Depression glass and yellowing Montgomery Ward catalogues, I have learned to

So, rather than assailing you with something untested and avant garde this Mother's Day, I will fall back on last year's tried and true theme. Borrowing from comedian Red Buttons' "never got a dinner!" routine on the "Dean Martin Celebrity Roasts" of the 70s, I will once more acknowledge unsung mothers who NEVER GOT A COLUMN. For instance:

Muhammad Ali's mother, who cajoled, "Eat! Eat! Or you'll wind up floating like a butterfly!"

Bruce Jenner's mom, who suddenly realized, "Oops. I ran out of snips and snails and puppy dog tails. I wonder if anyone will notice I made substitutions?

Julius Caesar's no-nonsense mother, who announced, "I came. I surprised. I grounded." The mother of the Brothers Grimm, who hinted, "Now tell me how this vase came to be broken. I know you won't make up anything."

Harry Houdini's mother, who insisted, "We're going to visit your great-aunt and that's final. Let's see you wiggle out of this one.'

Nostradamus' mother, who sang him the lullaby "Whatever will be, will be, the future's not ours to see, qué sera sera."

Captain Ahab's mother, who demanded, "What you need in your life is focus. FOCUS." Paul McCartney's mother, who advised, "Always cross the street single-file - AND DON'T WEAR SHOES!"

Jonah's mother, who reprimanded, "Don't talk when you're food in someone's mouth."

The mother of William S. Harley, co-founder of Harley Davidson, who nagged, "Keep your elbows off the table and don't ask for seconds. Nobody likes a HOG.'

Martin Luther's longsuffering mother, who scolded, "You call them 'theses'. I call them crayon scribbling on my door. Get a washcloth and soap, young man!"

Marco Polo's mother, who prodded, "There are starving children in China who would give anything for that food. If you don't believe me, go (snicker) check for yourself." Galileo's mother, who beamed, "Of course the sun doesn't orbit around the earth. It orbits around YOU, my precious bambino! Plastic Man's mother, who sighed, "Okay, you've got me on the stretch marks. But let me tell you about midnight feedings and toxic diapers..." Clint Eastwood's exasperated mother, who intoned, "Oh, you'll never understand, but sometimes I feel as if I'm talking to an empty chair! Artist M.C. Escher's mother, who moaned, "I turn my back for a minute, and you turn the house topsy turvy!" George Washington's mother, who groaned, "Apparently your new mittens went across the Potomac, too, when you were out tossing dollars."

 $Pablo\ Picasso's\ mother, who\ a pologized, ``Honest, if\ I\ hadn't\ blown\ such\ a\ wad\ in\ Vegas,$ I was taking you to the optometrist.'

Hippocrates' mother, who complained, "Father of Medicine? How about being the father of my GRANDCHILDREN? And why isn't the first law of medicine, 'kiss a booboo to make it feel better'?"

And that's just the tip of the iceberg. Maybe next year...What's this? Mothers are preemptively contributing to a kickstarter campaign to guarantee that they STILL DON'T GET A COLUMN?

Hmph! How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless mother! Speaking of which, Shakespeare's mother, a priest and a rabbi walked into a bar...

It is approximately 17 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles at the base of the San Gabriel Mountains. The city is bounded by the cities of Arcadia to the east and south, Pasadena to the west, and the Angeles National Forest to the north. The City encompasses 2.94 square miles.

Project Description: The proposed project is the update of the Sierra Madre General Plan. The General Plan Update is an opportunity to take a comprehensive look at the city as a system and in a regional context, to address contemporary conditions and laws, and to reflect the latest aspirations for the future of the community. As with the existing Sierra Madre General Plan, the General Plan Update will continue to serve as a long-range policy document that defines the framework by which the city's physical, natural, cultural, social and economic resources are to be managed over time. Consistent with the adopted Vision and Guiding Principles, the updated General Plan will focus on preserving and sustaining the City's distinctive character as a historic small-town; ensuring that adequate City services that match the needs of the community are provided; ensuring the city's natural resources (e.g., San Gabriel Mountain foothills, wildlife, forest, open space, watershed, etc.) are adequately protected; promoting and developing a strong, diversified local economy; and ensuring that new development is harmonious with existing neighborhoods, maintains the smalltown character of the city, and does not unduly burden existing City services and infrastructure or impact the environment.

The General Plan Update will guide the growth and development (e.g., infill development, redevelopment, and revitalization/restoration) of the city 20 years or more into the future. The General Plan Update involves a revision to the current land use map and all elements except Housing. It will guide growth and development within the city by designating land uses in the proposed land use map and through implementation of the goals and policies of the General Plan Update. Assuming a theoretical buildout (post-2035 scenario) of the General Plan Update, the city is projected to accommodate approximately 5,244 residential dwelling units (5,123 existing plus 121 new) and 1,100,228 square feet of non-residential square footage (1,012,836 existing plus 87,392 new), which includes commercial, manufacturing and institutional land uses.

The General Plan Update consists of the following elements: Land Use, Resource Management, Hazard Prevention, and Community Services, which are included as individual chapters in the General Plan Update. The Land Use chapter covers topics such as distribution and intensity of land use development, urban form, historic preservation, and economic development. The Resource Management chapter covers topics such as hillside preservation, dark sky, co-existence with wildlife, trees preservation, water resources, waste management and recycling and air quality. The Hazard Protection chapter addresses fire safety, flooding and landslides, seismic safety, and noise. Finally, the Community Services chapter covers topics such as law enforcement, recreation services, library services, community cultural and special events, transit, and public services.

The DEIR addresses the short- and long-term effects of the General Plan Update on the environment. Mitigation measures are proposed for impacts that are determined to be potentially significant.

Notice of Public Meeting: The City of Sierra Madre Planning Commission will conduct a public meeting to take public comments on the DEIR at City Hall. The meeting will be held on Thursday, May 21, 2015, at 7:00 PM at the City of Sierra Madre Council Chambers, 232 W. Sierra Madre Boulevard, Sierra Madre, CA
