Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"There's nothing like a jolly good disaster to get people to start doing something." Prince Charles

"I have always tried to turn every disaster into an opportunity." John D. Rockefeller

We're doing our utmost, my joint tenant, John, and I, to put the best possible spin on the disaster which continues at our home. Our home which, up until now, has been a comfortable, roomy, beautiful place to live. Its one hundredth birthday will be in 2016 and, until recently, we had been planning a celebration... possibly involving family members, neighbors... some really nice champagne and something good to eat. Now, however, it's gruel for all of us! House, family, joint tenant! And when our water bill arrives, our gruel ration will be cut drastically.

As you may recall from a few weeks ago, a pipe burst in our back yard, creating an expensive marsh. Wringing our hands over the water loss, we got it fixed. That, alas, was just the beginning. A few days before we were preparing to leave for Texas to celebrate our granddaughter, Emily's, fifth birthday and our youngest daughter, her mommy's, somewhat older birthday, we arrived home from doing a hundred errands, to find that our new carpeting downstairs was also a marsh, a pipe having burst in the ceiling. John shut off the water and, once again, we called Mike, our amazing go-to guy for all plumbing disasters. Yes, friends and neighbors, more proof that all the galvanized pipe in our house has to be replaced as it is, apparently, more fragile than Kleenex and subject to blowing itself up at the most inconvenient time. Mike capped the pipe.

Thinking we were doing the right thing, we spent several days sopping up the water in our carpet with every towel we owned. We were wrong. Yes, disaster was underway. Mold is its name and mildew is its evil twin. The Titanic was a bigger disaster. The Sierra Madre earthquake was a bigger disaster. All hurricanes, typhoons, tsunamis, stock market downturns, floods and Albertson's closing are bigger disasters, but when water is everywhere and people are breaking through your walls to set up blowers and dehumidifiers, your new carpet is history and your airline tickets are unchangeable...that feels like disaster. However, there is a blessing here: It didn't happen while we were gone with water flooding unbeknownst to us for eleven days.

As Prince Charles said, our jolly good disaster has us gearing up to replace all the galvanized pipes in our house with Flexpipe, a wonderful new type of pipe that, apparently, has the capability to bend around corners and will make our life permanently free from the specter of more broken pipes.

We had a wonderful time in Texas, knowing our daughter, Patti, was here keeping an eye on the workmen who were systematically destroying our downstairs walls in search of moisture. We also were able to relax knowing we had turned off all the inside available there... water and the gas to the water heater.

Emily had a several splendid parties, received more stuff than Toys R Us, including the Barbie Power Princess Cape and mask you see her wearing here in her role as the Caped Avenger. We wined and dined, shopped, made fabulous breakfasts, visited the Perot Science Museum in Dallas, (really great and very kid friendly) and had a delightful time. Texas was even cooperative with their weather and resisted the urge to be 113 degrees, which it has been in previous Julys when we visited. As they are now out of drought conditions and have had more rain than anyone has seen for years, Texas is green and lush with overflowing lakes and ponds, ducks meandering across the roads.

Sadly, all good things must come to an end. We returned to Sierra Madre, which is also beautifully green thanks to a bit of rain recently. Happy to be home, John turned on the water very slowly and carefully and not five minutes later, a new leak appeared in the ceiling. Turned the water back off, called Mike, he capped the pipe and now we have hot water in our kitchen, no cold. No washing machine water. Water in two bathrooms and one hose connection. We are grateful. But the water bill is coming. We are looking for the opportunity John D. Rockefeller assures us is in every disaster.

CITY STALLS REPORT OVER TREE INCIDENT

Two children released from the hospital By Dean Lee

Pasadena Information William Boyer announced Tuesday that an anticipated report by an independent arborist that inspected a large pine tree that collapsed July 28, in Brookside Park, near the Kidspace Museum was taking longer than expected and should be released to the public sometime this Boyer said that once they receive the report, city officials, including the city attorney, still needed to review the document something he said would take a few days. Boyer said that if the city did not have the report by last Wednesday, it would not be released until this week. He also said they planned to be as open as possible, only redacting information as part of legal issues.

Pasadena Fire Department Public Information Officer Lisa Derderian said that the two remaining children hospitalized as the result of the tree incident have both been discharged and will be recuperating at home. The children were released last weekend she said.

"On behalf of the City, I want to extend our thoughts and prayers to the injured children, especially those still hospitalized, and their families. We are praying for their full recovery," said Pasadena Mayor Terry Tornek in a statement to the public last week.

The tree fell at about 4:45 p.m., Tuesday, July 28, striking a group of elementary school-aged children who were outside the museum. Six children were treated at the scene and released to their parents.

Boyer also said that city crews have been trimming, as many as 50, trees in the area as well as removing a number of dead trees from the park.

About The Arcadia Performing Arts Center and Arcadia Performing Arts Foundation

The opening of the Arcadia Performing Arts Center, which anchors the northwest corner of the campus of Arcadia High School, on October 18, 2012, was the realization of a long-standing dream for the citizens of Arcadia to have a major center for arts and culture in the community. This 40,000 square foot, state-of-the-art facility includes a main performance hall with seating for 1,150, a stage that holds 200 musicians, tunable acoustics and professional lighting and sound. In addition, the center boasts an orchestra room with practice rooms and music library, a dance studio with sprung wood floors, a professional stagecraft workshop and a Black Box theater with separate control room and flexible seating that can host 125 guests.

The realization of the Performing Arts Center clearly shows the commitment of the Arcadia community to the arts. With this realization comes the need for another commitment – to the future of the building, arts education and arts programming. The Arcadia Performing Arts Foundation is dedicated to maintaining the Performing Arts Center as a nucleus for the arts, education and engagement where the lives of students and the greater community are enriched.

The Arcadia Performing Arts Foundation has currently set a fundraising goal $10 million that will result in an endowment to provide regular funding for the school district arts programs and the Performing Arts Center. The Arcadia Performing Arts Center provides a first-class venue for the San Gabriel Valley where the public can enjoy major concert and performing arts attractions, and where student talent can be fostered and supported with a venue for their work.

ANOTHER GREAT DAY AT THE BEACH

By Joan Schmidt

August is time for grandkids and fun! First request is a day at Santa Monica's great beach/pier. Transportation is the County Sponsored Beach Bus.

Visit www.LAGoBus.info or call (888) 769-1122. There are several options, and you won't see "Duarte". Click "Charter Oaks". The cost is $3 per adult/child, and $1.50 for seniors. The total was $12that's the cost of the parking lot! Plus no aggravation of fighting traffic or the OUTRAGEOUS price of gasoline! They give you a confirmation number, you print out the page, and you must bring cash (exact change) when you board the bus at Pamela Park.

Bob and I didn't want to go into the freezing water. The grandkids said it was really cold, but went in all the way and had a great time. The youngest one spent most of the beach time building sand castles. (We had no bucket or shovel but a vendor came around. The netted bag of "goodies' was only $5! It had a bucket, shovel, hoe, and a few little plastic toys of various shapes that made turrets and parts of a castle!)

Lunch time came and we went up on the pier for burgers: even vegetarian! There were several little stores, an arcade with games and little individual rides that you put kids on and put money in the slot. (50 cents) This time we passed on the rides, but there is that great Ferris wheel-always seen during the "weather" portion of the news, a Merry-Go-Round, a few fast rides, and very high swing. I also saw there was an Aquarium, but that will be good for another

The bus left Pamela Park at 9:30am. It arrived at Santa Monica Pier at 10:30. It left Santa Monica at 3:30 and in spite of heavy L.A. traffic, we were back to the Park at 4:30. It makes for a great day trip. For those who may not want to brave freezing water, there's a lot to do on the Pier. If we go again, we may do the Pier first, before the water. We couldn't take kids with wet bathing suits into Bubba Gump's Shrimp House for example!

People did bring lunches but BEWARE! In front of our eyes, BOLD seagulls got into a girl's tote bag and pulled her subway sandwich out! Before it could be stopped, at least 20 seagulls descended and devoured it. The last thing we saw was a seagull fly off with her bag of chips! They were so smart, that they pulled tee shirts out of a bag in hopes of finding food underneath! How bold is that?

The day we went to the beach there were two buses. Pamela Park's Summer Camp was also going to the beach on a field trip, so there were two buses. We were on the bus with the kids and they were well-behaved. The other bus had mostly people by themselves-even Senior citizens. No fighting traffic and there are compartments on the bottom of the bus that have room for folding chairs! When we go again, we'll bring our chairs! See you on the bus!

SCHOLARSHIPS DELIVERED FOR DHS SENIORS

Each year, many organizations select local High School Seniors for potential scholarships. There is one catch - the recipient must enroll in college to actually receive their checks. At a recent Duarte Kiwanis meeting, two more of those young people came to pick up their checks, and, of course, the club was thrilled to oblige. Pictured from left Duarte Kiwanis President, Mirna de Lira Lopez, DHS graduate, Emmanuel Aviso and DHS graduate Klenn Sabate. JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

Happy Tai by Chris Leclerc

As a youth, I was taught to treasure my native language, which happened to be English. I was encouraged at a very young age to learn as many words as I could, and to use those words as properly as I knew how. In retrospect, I realize how fortunate I was to have had parents and educators who instilled in me a strong appreciation for the value of the vernacular.

This is most likely why I showed a higher aptitude for the language arts in school, than I did for most other disciplines. English, reading, writing and literature were always among my favorite subjects. By the time I graduated college, it was quite clear that I would be more likely to succeed by applying my skills in communication than by pursuing a career in a mathematic or scientific field of interest.

In spite of the teachings I received as a child, to revere words and hone my grammatical skills, I recently realized how rarely I question the meanings or origins of numerous phrases I've heard and used throughout my life. I'm referring to those metaphoric household sayings that mom and dad used to throw in the middle of a lecture, hoping to convince me to be more responsible

You know, those expressions that somehow snuck in while the elders were sharing a wanton word of warning about who or who not to befriend, in hopes that I'd avoid "getting in with the wrong crowd". Somehow, without even asking what they meant, or even looking up the definitions of the phrases they used, I knew exactly what they were trying to convey. Their sayings were by no means conventional in terms of traditional use of the English language, but I understood and it wasn't long before I found myself using the same phrases to make a similar point of my own.

Among the culturally-connected coined phrases that were passed down from earlier generations, many have become commonly used components of our modernday dialogue. Those less-than-conventional comments, whether comical or corrective, somehow wiggled their way into our vocabulary without so much as a smidgen

My favorite 'quip-quotes' are those that involve animals. For example, who hasn't heard the phrase, "Don't look a gift horse in the mouth."? Or, "It's raining cats and dogs!"? Or, how about, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."? The list goes on and on, of abstract adages that possess no true literal meaning, yet they seem to offer a potential answer to just about every buckets these days, bless her hairy little heart! challenge in life.

I recently looked up the meanings of some of the quips commonly used today that include animals, and my findings were quite enlightening. Thanks to a good group of "e-scholars" at www. phrases.org.uk, I found lots of interesting morsels about many metaphoric morals that had me mystified in the past.

I'll start with "Don't

YOU DON'T SAY!

Or, Do You?

look a gift horse in the mouth", because even though it's meaning is probably understood by most folks, my guess is that few are aware of it's origin. It made it's first appearance in written English as part of John Heywood's A dialogue conteining the nomber in effect of all the prouerbes in the Englishe tongue, where it read: 'No man ought to looke a geuen hors in the mouth." It is assumed that Heywood obtained the phrase from a Latin text of St. Jerome, The Letter to the Ephesians, circa AD 400. The intended message is, to not question a good thing when it happens, just as one should not check a horse's teeth to determine it's age, if it performs

One of the more satirical sort of sayings that I never understood until I looked it up, is "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush". This one refers to medieval falconry where a bird in the hand (the predator) was a valuable asset and worth more than two birds in a bush (the prey). A citation of this phrase was first printed in 1670, in John Ray's A Hand-book of Proverbs. The gist of this jocular jest is, it's better to have a lesser but certain advantage than the possibility of a greater one that may come to nothing. Advice well taken by most, but not what a gambler wants to hear during a weekend

One potentially patronizing proverb that had me puzzled before my research, is the old saying, "Don't buy a pig in a poke". Little did I know that this one is actually more literal than most. It's a throwback from the days when pigs were commonly sold in town square farmer's markets, and the advice offered is, don't purchase a pig sight unseen. A poke was another word for a bag and pigs were apparently bagged before going to market, so a smart buyer would ask the seller to expose the pig before making their purchase. The modern day message behind this strange yet savvy saying is, don't buy into a deal before examining it closely first. Who can't benefit from heeding this bountiful bit of advice?

I could go on forever talking about animal-themed adages, but due to space restraints I must limit my list, so here are 3 more, along with a brief description of their origins and meanings. Enjoy!

"A leopard cannot change it's spots." - Jeremiah 13:23 - a being cannot change it's innate nature.
"A fly in the ointment" - Ecclesiastes 10:1 - a small irritating flaw with the potential to spoil the whole.

"A fish out of water" - Samuel Purchas's Pilgrimage, 1613 - Being in a situation that one is unsuited for.

And last but not least, here's a rather corny quip of my own, which came to mind while I was sweeping my kitchen floor; "Oh the rugs I could weave, with the hair I just retrieved!" It seems the heat has my pup shedding on July 16th along with her brothers, Gordo [A4856272] and Lobo [A4325392] because the owner said the dogs required too much attention. Weighing 8 lbs, this petite chi is sensitive to the stress of the shelter environment and is tentative when meeting new people. With a patient approach she warms up and allows people to pick her up and carry her. Because of this, we are confident that once she is in a home environment and has time to decompress, she will blossom into a steadfast companion with a medium-energy level. Chata gets along well with other small dogs, seems to be more familiar with a lap than a leash right now, she is sure to pick up canine obedience basics quickly with a little guidance and positive reinforcement. Chata will thrive as a loyal best friend in calm home with adults and older, respectful children. Give Chata a second chance!

PASO ROBLES

Paso Robles, Spanish for the "Pass of Oaks" and most commonly pronounced as "Paso Robles" or simply referred to as "Paso" by the locals, is located in San Luis Obispo County, halfway between San Francisco and L.A. on California's stunning Central Coast. Paso Robles has 26,000 acres under vine and is home to over 200 wineries. The most commonly grown grape is the cabernet sauvignon, and that over 40% of all juices are "cab" makes sense with the large swing of climate changes of the area.

My favorite, a rising star from the region, is J. Lohr Vineyards. They have been producing wines from this region since 1974. Jerry Lohr started with 280 acres, and now has over 900 acres in Monterey and 2000 in Paso Robles. Their 2011 Cabernet Sauvignon Seven Oaks is smooth and easy to drink, or I should say ready to drink for those of you who like to enjoy a glass after work or any time. For me, I would pair this with a hearty meat dish such as spare ribs or even a beef stroganoff. I rather enjoy reds with a meal, never alone - but, to each his own.

The quality of the 2011 vintage is apparent in the wine's density and strong regional expression of black cherry and blackberry fruit, and soft tannins. I first discovered J. Lohr simply by luck; I was in Paso Robles on a weekend getaway and invited to go wine tasting. Some ten years later the secret seems to be out on these great Paso Robles wines, but I am okay with that. Is the 2011 J. Lohr as good as my January 25th review of Ghost Block? No, but you can get three bottles of J. Lohr for the price of one Ghost Block. Enjoy!!

NEW MUSIC YOU GOTTA HEAR

home and the life on the road. This is the theme behind "Hotel Parties," the recently announced single "twentyseven" combines the best very best elements of early My Morning Jacket and Kings of Leon. These southern rockers channel The Byrds and others of a bygone era too, but clearly have enough original artistry to showcase. Futurebirds specialize in psychedelic alternative country with reverb-soaked bass and four-part harmonies. The vibes the sextet are throwing out there with "twentyseven" are some of the coolest, most laid back ones the summer has had to offer. "Hotel Parties" is out this September and based on the theme of the single, something tells me that those in their late twenties will need to listen to this record.

FOALS - "MOUNTAIN AT MY GATES" - "Mountain At My Gates" is one high-octane

JR. JR - "GONE" - The artist formerly known as Dale Earnhardt Jr Jr. have dropped the Dale Earnhardt part of their name. The rebranded Jr. Jr. emerge with the sprightly covered, "Gone." Boosting jubilant vocals and soft, but infectious beats, the duo has found another winner on their hands. It's a pleasant track that is both utterly alluring and easy to digest. Jr. Jr. experiments with all types of sounds, but never does it seem unwarranted. Members Joshua Epstein and Daniel Zott will be releasing their third album together on September 25th via Warner Bros. Records. The self-titled record marks the first one under this new moniker and from the looks of it, this record could be the beginning of something

"South" is no exception. Arguably their finest song yet in their LP from Athens, Georgia group. The first their early career, the foursome have constructed a song that balances the upbeat vibe of summer and the gloominess Autumn sometimes has in store for us. Moreover, it's a damn perfect song with lilting guitars and soothing vocals. Lead singer Jake Luppen turns another gear in his vocal delivery halfway through the track giving this buoyant jam some dark edge. The new EP "South" will be out in October and Hippo Campus has major potential in becoming bigger than what they are.

> rock track that desperately needs your attention. Foals are a solid UK rock band that has remained relatively under the radar over the course of three full-length records. This should all change with their fourth LP, "What Went Down" as the quartet are making their major label debut on Warner Bros UK. "Mountain At My Gates" is the second single off the record, but a terrific showcase of what this band is all about. With a deep impetus behind the track, it's no surprise Foals blows mainstream rock acts out of the water. This is a bold, daring, and full of vigor rock jam that begs the question, why isn't Foals headlining stadiums? Well, if they were to ever fully breakthrough, this would be the time. Look for "What Went Down" coming out at the end of this month. I don't think disappointment will be waiting there with it.

A HIT, A HIT, A PALPABLE HIT!

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

Well the reviews are in both from critics and the audience and the message is clear Always...Patsy Cline is a "palpable to quote Shakespeare! quote Standing at the back of the theater (standing because we had NO seats because available at any of the opening weekend performances AND because that music just makes me want to move!) I was able to watch the audience watch the show. Heads were bopping, shoulders were swaying, and gales of laughter went through the audience. I could even hear people singing along with their favorites.

The show is selling so well that we've added already matinees Saturday, August 29; Saturday, September 5; and, Sunday, September 13 all at 2:30. If you think a show may be soldout it is still worth calling Mary Baville in our box office and getting on the waiting list for the show you want – we sometimes get cancellations and Mary will call you and let you know. Remember we give 20% discounts for groups of 10 or more who purchase their tickets ahead of their attendance date. Please call Mary at 626.355.4318 to arrange your purchase.

Last week I wrote about Nikki D'Amico who is playing Louise and the challenge she had building a performance that is so audience-interactive when there was no audience - well, this actress is a pro (she's done countless Broadway tours) and once she was in front of the opening weekend audiences she flirted and charmed her way into their hearts. And Cori Cable Kidder, our Patsy Cline, is wowing audiences with her remarkable talents – I don't think I'll ever get tired of hearing her sing these classic songs. Special mention to A. Jeffrey Schoenberg who has done an incredible job on the costumes the arc of Patsy's career is reflected in the clothes she wears and they are just beautiful. Her look is completed by the extraordinary wigs that have been created for Patsy by Krys Ferhervari. Steven Stanley of Stage Scene LA says: "You'd be 'Crazy' to miss this one. Easily one of the best Playhouse productions ever." And Ron Irwin of LA Examiner says: "OMG. What a truly beautiful show it is. This is a show you will treasure in your memory for a long time." This is such a thrill. Successes like this don't come along very often. I met so many people last weekend who had never been to our theater before and promised me they would be back - to see Patsy again with friends and family but also to see another show. I've written about how much I'm learning about producing theater - well with this one I'm getting a crash course in how to manage a hit. This is a lesson I'm really enjoying learning.

Please come and see Always...Patsy Cline you'll be so glad you did.

But the work goes on, Monday night we begin rehearsals for Deathtrap which is scheduled to open October 2. I've assembled a great cast who are all committed to making this thriller one that will scare the daylights out of you! It will be so much fun to get back into rehearsal. I'll let you know how it's

A New History of Life: The Radical New Discoveries about the Origins and Evolution of Life on Earth by Peter Ward Charles Darwin's theories, first published more than 150 years ago, still set the paradigm of how we understand the evolution of life-but scientific advances of recent decades have radically altered that understanding. In fact the currently accepted history of life on Earth is flawed and out of date. Now two pioneering scientists, one already an awardwinning popular author, deliver an eye-opening narrative that synthesizes a generation's worth of insights

MOBILE SAFETY PRODUCTS THAT CAN HELP SENIORS ON THE GO

Dear Savvy Senior:

Do you know of any medical alert SOS buttons for seniors that work away from the home? I would like to get one for my 80-year-old mother, but would like to find one that's not limited to the house. Shopping Son

Dear Shopping:

There are actually a number of medical alert products on the market today that give seniors the flexibility to call for help both inside and outside the

For years, medical alert devices (also known as "personal emergency response systems" or PERS) have been popular home safety products for elderly seniors that live alone. These systems come with a wearable SOS pendent button – usually a necklace or wristband - and a base station that connects to the home phone line.

At the press of a button, your loved one could call and talk to a trained operator through the system's base station receiver, which works like a powerful speakerphone. The operator will find out what's wrong, and will notify family members, a neighbor, friend or emergency services as needed.

But these devices are limited because they only work in and around the house. If you're away from home and need help, you're out of luck. But today, there are numerous mobile products that work anywhere. Here are some top options.

High-End Device

If you're interested in getting your mom a The Splash can be purchased at GreatCall.com comprehensive, high-end medical alert device that (or 800-918-8543), or at Walmart, Sears, Best Buy works everywhere, consider the Philips Lifeline and Rite Aid Pharmacy stores. she could press the button and the home-base communicator system would be activated to make the call to the response center, who would then dispatch help as needed. But if she fell or needed help away from home, the system's AT&T wireless network would kick in and place the call.

This system also has six sophisticated locating technologies so the response center would know your mom's exact location, even where GPS signals org. The GoSafe is available at lifelinesys.com (or 855-276-7761) for $149, with monthly services fees that start at $55.

Most Affordable Alert

If the GoSafe is more than your mom needs, another option that's easier on the budget is the GreatCall Splash, which costs only $50, with a $35 activation fee and monthly service fees that starts at $20.

This pendent-style waterproof device, which fits in the palm of your hand, works like a cell phone with GPS tracking capabilities, and can be worn on a belt, around the neck or attached to a key chain.

To call for help, your mom would push one button, and an operator from the device's emergency monitoring service would be on the line to assist her, and because of the GPS technology, her general location would be known. Or, for even more peace of mind, there's the Splash with fall detection capabilities (this option costs $35 per month, and the pendent must be worn around the neck for it to work) that will automatically call for help when a

JUNK -- A CAUTIONARY TALE

"A place for everything, and everything in its place." This is a familiar platitude along with other classics such as, "Cleanliness is next to godliness" and "Have nothing in your home that you do not know to be useful or believe to be beautiful." And then there's my personal favorite, "If there is righteousness in the heart, there will be beauty in the character. If there is beauty in the character, there will be harmony in the house." I wonder if the dusty pile of sneakers and flip flops in my closet implicates a questionable character, a disharmonious dwelling, or both? But it gets worse, "If there is harmony in the house, there will be order in the nation. If there is order in the nation, there will be peace in the world." Shoot! Now I've got the responsibility for world peace on my guilty conscience!

Although keeping ahead of my own junk is a challenge, I can only begin to imagine the physical and mental exhaustion of going through someone else's stuff! This is the daunting feat my parents are dealing with at the moment. Before they retired, neither of them had the time or energy to sort through the things they had accumulated over the years. And when my grandparents passed, my parents inherited even more stuff. Some people prefer to keep their things out of sight and out of mind in storage, but that's expensive! Therefore, my parents' things occupied the living room for a while, and then spilled over into the back room. They finally condensed it all into a tightly packed area in the garage while the house was being remodeled.

When I say that storage, I don't just things up. Oh no! of available space gills. This meant that taken apart so that the limited space. and I moved into my parents said we dining room table we're accustomed to something there's and tacky about TV why we haven't Anyway, our yet. I suppose inherently disorderly trays --that's probably achieved world peace table was trapped in for a long time. Every glimpse of a leg sticking like an appendage in a

At last their building project is done, and now they're faced with deconstructing the core in the garage. Mind you the garage dates back to the 50's. It vacillates between freezing in the winter and sweltering in the summer. So you can imagine my parents' discomfort toting boxes around and dodging avalanches of "the sands of time" --literally! But any physical exertion pales in comparison to the difficulty of their decisions as to which of the things they should keep and which they should get rid of. One small box often holds a multitude of miscellaneous items from generations ago, all with a certain amount of sentimental

It doesn't seem to help much whether or not there's a logical reason to keep the stuff in question. The other day my mom asked me if I wanted my old bassinet or any of its blankets or other things. "Did you make any of them?" I asked. "Yes, a couple of blankets," she said. "Okay, I'll keep them." "What are you going to do with them?" she asked. "I don't know. I can't get rid of them. You made them!"

Well, after many weeks and much deliberation, the clutter in the garage is starting to thin out. My dad's work bench is almost visible, so hopefully he'll be able to return to his ship model building before 2015. And my husband and I just recently brought home our very first proper dining table and chairs. Maybe world peace is within our grasp!

ESTATE PLANNING WITH GIFTS TO GRANDCHILDREN

If you are in your "golden years" and are looking for ways to spread your wealth, you should consider the various tools that will allow you to financially protect and benefit your grandchildren. Carefully planning your gifts to your grandchildren is not only a generous act, but can also be a financially wise move in your estate planning and in growing your overall family wealth as well.

So, where do you start with your gifting? You must consider how much you are comfortable with giving. Currently, the Internal Revenue Service permits you to gift up to $14,000 per year, per beneficiary, tax-free. This amount can be doubled to $28,000 if you are married and both spouses make a gift. As you can see, you can gift a substantial amount without paying gift taxes, but it is important to confirm that you can afford to do it without it having a negative financial impact on Create and fund a "Wealth Creation Trust" for the benefit of your grandchildren. A "Wealth Creation Trust" provides you with substantial flexibility to control, invest, and protect the gifted money for the benefit of your grandchildren as well as incentivizes them to grow the gift instead of squander it.

Set-up a custodial bank account for each grandchild to hold the funds -- this is basically the same as an outright gift and not advised as this account will be at risk from their creditors, lawsuits, bankruptcies and future divorce.

Purchase a life insurance policy with a cashvalue component and with your grandchild named as the beneficiary of the death benefit. If you use this strategy, consider using an Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust to own the life insurance so it remains outside of your estate and their estate for successive generations.

Explore the opportunities offered by websites such as Upromise anad Babymint. These websites allow members to accumulate rebates on items purchased at participating stores and direct those funds into your grandchild's 529 account or wherever else you choose. Over time, these funds can grow into a substantial amount.

The above list is just a few examples of ways you can provide for your grandchildren's financial future while also obtaining a tax benefit. Call my office today if you're interested in exploring any of these ideas further.

BEE'S BREATH

of all ages, I have been buzzing like a bee a lot this Adults and kids both love the pranayama called Bee's breath, or it's proper name Bhramari. This is an excellent pranayama with fantastic benefits such as emotional balance, stress relief, and alleviating anxiety and anger. Additionally, it's a perfect tool for those who have a hard time meditating because it induces a meditative state and inward focus.

It's best to try Bhramari in stages. First, think of what a bee sounds like. They buzz while in movement, so if you hear a bee buzzing near your ear, it may come and go. Also, there's different pitch sounds to the buzz. Don't worry about the pitch for now, just first establish an open-lipped buzz on your exhale as practice. Notice the sound of your buzz and the vibration. To officially begin, inhale through your nose, then buzz on your exhale, lips closed this time. Repeat six times with slow, deep Keely Totten

In teaching yogis breaths. Let your buzz (and exhale) out a little a time, as if there were a bee buzzing around, coming and going. Next, close the eyes and try six more breaths. Full inhale though the nose; slow exhale with the buzz, lips closed. To further experience withdrawal of the senses, place your thumbs on the flap of your ears (to plug them) and index fingers on your eyelashes as you close your eyes. Repeat six more breaths.

> Take the time to notice the vibration of the buzzing sound. This vibration helps to cut through the emotional looping of thoughts that sometimes plagues us. Bhramari can be practiced at any point in the day and is excellent prior to meditation as a way to turn inward. Your children or grandchildren will love it! It instantly heightens internal awareness and generally calms the practitioner. If you need instruction, come to class and ask the teacher if he or she may be willing to teach it that day.

For example, the DNA of fungus, mold, bacteria, viruses, fish, humans, and jellyfish have been injected into corn, potatoes, and strawberries in an effort to increase crop yields. should make you question the validity of GMO's. The most common GMO foods in this country are conventional corn, soy, canola, sugar beets, Hawaiian papaya, zucchini, and yellow squash or any processed food products containing any one of these foods. Your best defense to avoid GMO's here in the USA is to eat only organic food. According to the USDA, the use of GMO's is prohibited in organic products. This means an organic farmer can't plant GMO seeds, an organic animal can't eat GMO alfalfa or corn.

Somewhere in the latter half of the last century a group of humans bought into the idea that man could create a superior food over what nature gives us. You need to make a decision for yourself as to whether they were right. Organic food may cost more but we are talking about your health and the health of your family. For me the choice is simple, I will forgo other things I want in order to consume nature made foods! NEW NAMES AND INSIGHTS AT DWARF PLANET CERES

Colorful new maps of Ceres, based on data from NASA's Dawn spacecraft, showcase a diverse topography, with height differences between crater bottoms and mountain peaks as great as 9

Scientists continue to analyze the latest data from Dawn as the spacecraft makes its way to its third mapping orbit.

"The craters we find on Ceres, in terms of their depth and diameter, are very similar to what we see on Dione and Tethys, two icy satellites of Saturn that are about the same size and density as Ceres. The features are pretty consistent with an ice-rich crust," said Dawn science team member Paul Schenk, a geologist at the Lunar and Planetary Institute, Houston.

Some of these craters and other features now have official names, inspired by spirits and deities relating to agriculture from a variety of cultures (since Ceres takes its name from the Roman goddess of agriculture). The International Astronomical Union recently approved a batch of names for features on Ceres.

The newly labeled features include Occator, the mysterious crater containing Ceres' brightest spots, which has a diameter of about 60 miles and a depth of about 2 miles. Occator is the name of the Roman agriculture deity of harrowing, a method of leveling soil.

A smaller crater with bright material, previously labeled "Spot 1," is now identified as Haulani, after the Hawaiian plant goddess. Haulani has a diameter of about 20 miles. Temperature data from Dawn's visible and infrared mapping spectrometer show that this crater seems to be colder than most of the territory around it.

Dantu crater, named after the Ghanaian god associated with the planting of corn, is about 75 miles across and 3 miles deep. A crater called Ezinu, after the Sumerian goddess of grain, is about the same size. Both are less than half the size of Kerwan, named after the Hopi spirit of sprouting maize, and Yalode, a crater named after the African Dahomey goddess worshipped by women at harvest rites.

'The impact craters Dantu and Ezinu are extremely deep, while the much larger impact basins Kerwan and Yalode exhibit much shallower depth, indicating increasing ice mobility with crater size and age," said Ralf Jaumann, a Dawn science team member at the German Aerospace Center (DLR) in Berlin.

Dawn is currently spiraling toward its third science orbit, 900 miles above the surface, or three times closer to Ceres than its previous orbit.

Ceres, with a diameter of 584 miles, is the largest object in the main asteroid belt, located between Mars and Jupiter. This makes Ceres about 40 percent the size of Pluto, another dwarf planet, which NASA's New Horizons mission flew by earlier this month.

On March 6, 2015, Dawn made history as the first mission to reach a dwarf planet, and the first to orbit two distinct extraterrestrial targets. It conducted extensive observations of asteroid Vesta in 2011-2012.

LEARNING FROM OUR DOGS

One Dog-Sitters' Experience of "Listening."

Helen Sweany recently shared a wonderful and insightful story about her relationship with the dog she is dog-sitting. Her story sounds very much like the book "Kinship with All life," and was very reminiscent of the great articles by "dog-whisperer" Chris Leclerc

The dog, Olaf, is about 120 pounds of Great White Pyrenees and a rescue animal. His age of about 7 is only a guess, as well as what his history may have been. The owners knew that Helen liked to hike and was told that Olaf never seemed to tire, so they told Helen, "By all means, take him with you on hikes. He'll love it!" Helen was instructed to feed Olaf a cheap type of dog food located in owners' garage, and to mix in melted butter and leftovers from their fridge. Olaf would pick through the leftovers but didn't touch the dog food. Maybe he wasn't eating because he was missing his "pack," i.e., his owners. He didn't like the 99 Cent store treats. Olaf ate scrambled eggs and even a small amount of Jack Daniels pulled-pork. Helen had never tended a dog who was on a hunger strike. This was supposed to be his standard diet and he didn't seem hour by then, and that last little bit of water got him to stand and walk slowly back to the car. When they arrived home, Olaf was still panting a good hour more. Helen wet a towel and tucked it under Olaf, which he seemed to appreciate.

Olaf loved the hikes that Helen started to take him on. On their first Friday, Olaf walked with Helen on a 5.2 mile loop, smelling many things along the way. When they reached the peak of a hill, Helen gave Olaf two and a-half bottles of water. About half way back down the hill, Olaf stopped, laid down in the shade and refused to move. He was panting heavily, so Helen gave him the remaining water that she had. Another hiker came by and gave Olaf a partial water bottle. Then, a third hiker came, and she gave her water to Olaf, and poured a little on his paws. (Dogs cool down through panting and also on their paws).

When Helen had started the hike, it was about 70 [Nyerges is the author of degrees. Three hours later, it was already 92 degrees "How to Survive Anywhere," The heat plus the humidity was just too much for Olaf, and Helen was very thankful that Olaf made it through alright. Helen, a mountain climber, was used to the warm weather and the hikes, but Olaf was not. Now, Helen walks him in the neighborhood in the coolest times of the day and she givese him shorter, slower walks. Olaf likes that.

Food was another issue. It was clear to Helen that Olaf did not care for the food provided by his owner. One of Helen's friends runs a Meetup group for German Shepherds, and she suggested to Helen a kibble that does not contain cornmeal fillers and is slightly more expensive, along with a large tablespoon of canned dog food, mixed with a little warm water.

Helen obtained that, and Olaf loved it. Helen then went through the fridge and tossed out all the food that was past expiration date or had mold, and this made a very empty refrigerator. Marrow bones were about a month past expiration date. The bones could have been frozen and then thawed as needed but they had been kept in the fridge and spoiled. Helen reasoned that by giving Olaf a healthy diet, perhaps he'd take less trips to the vet. Helen emailed the owners who were on vacation and shared each development with them daily, but they never responded. Helen was told to only email because it would be costly to give daily phone updates. Helen had only one email address, which she'd used before they went on vacation. Maybe, she wondered, they didn't have internet at their vacation location. But why then did they ask Helen to email? Whatever the case, without hearing from them, Helen chose to place the needs of the dog as the high priority and do what she thought was right, rather than blindly follow the instructions left by the owner.

In fact, this is a decision that people make every day in the corporate world. Do I do the job that Mr. Boss instructed, even though his orders are less than desirable, and even counterproductive? Or do I do what is Right to any rational person, and risk losing my job? Obviously, you can take this analogy to all levels. Soldiers are trained to follow orders, but at a Helen and Olaf had been in the shade about a half certain point, you must disobey orders. During the Nuremburg trials, simply following orders was no longer a defense for those who committed crimes against humanity.

As of this writing, Helen is still dog-sitting, and feeling very good about her decisions regarding Olaf.

DANCING IN THE SUMMER RAIN

This is the time of the year when rain is a frequent visitor, especially in the afternoon. It is then that a person is tempted to go outside and dance in the rain. One famous singer was so caught up with a rainy afternoon that he did his famous, "Singing in the rain." At my age, the only dancing I do is the bathroom shuffle, which has become more frequent

The early Native Americans used to do their "Rain Dance," in the hopes that some rain would come their way and water their crops. It is hard to tell what their average of success was in that practice. Obviously, it was not so successful that it is carried on down today. It may very well be that their "Rain Dance," was simply some contrived activity to break the monotony while waiting for the white man to steal their land.

Rain is a funny thing. Well, not so much a funny thing as something that confounds the average common sense, which is not that hard to do. From the advantage of many years of observation, rain will come when rain comes, and just when you think you have enough rain, it rains some more. In addition, when you desperately need rain those clouds are deliberately looking the other way.

When it is raining a friend of mine always says, "I guess we needed the rain." To me this does not make sense. Because it rains when we need the rain and then it rains when we have had enough rain. Or at least when I have had enough rain. My definition of enough rain is, when I have an afternoon outing planned.

I have yet to hear my friend say when the sun is shining and not a cloud in the sky, "I guess we don't need rain today." The truth of the matter is, we may need rain that day. I have come not to pay much attention to what my friend says. In fact, I think I'm going to Rain is a very important part of our social makeup. Without rain, much of what we do would simply dry up and blow away. Not only do we need rain for horticultural reasons, but for sociological reasons as well.

For example, we use rain to identify somebody who is not very smart, or at least not as smart as we think we are. We say of such a person, "He doesn't know enough to get in out of the rain."

What we do not know is, perhaps that person has a good reason to be out in the rain. He may, in fact, know that he is out in the rain and has chosen to stay out for reasons known only to him. Perhaps, he is just so delighted with the summer rain he just felt like dancing in the rain. Are we really going to fault a person for indulging in such activity?

I am beginning to think that rain really gets a bad rap all the way around. Another example comes to mind. Some people will say, "I am saving up for a rainy day." All I want to know is what a rainy day has to do with saving money. Nobody ever says, "I'm saving up for a snowy day." Nor, does anybody ever say, "I'm saving up for a sunny day." The latter would make more sense to me. There are plenty of sunny days that I could use plenty of money. All I say, if you want to save money, save money and let the rain out of it. The rain has enough to do without being burdened down with helping you save money. Anyway, the only thing the rain can give you is a rain check.

Perhaps the worst of all is the phrase, "Don't rain on my Parade." I have never really understood this. No person who has ever said this to me was involved in a parade at the

Take last week for example. The Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage was telling me about some plans she was putting together and I simply indicated that I did not think it was a good idea. I know when to keep my mouth shut; I just do not always do it. With both hands on her hips, looking at me with one of "those looks," she said to me in that familiar tone, "Don't you dare rain on my Parade."

At the time, I had no idea what parade she was talking about. If she was planning a parade, I wanted to be in on it. I love a parade. Furthermore, where did she get the idea that I could snap my finger and cause it to rain? I'm good, but not that good. Of course, who am I to argue with her? The only thing I know for sure about rain is that God is in charge of it and he dispenses it at his good pleasure. Jesus said, "That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." (Matthew 5:45 KJV).

I certainly cannot control the rain but I can thank God for His wisdom in sending the rain when He chooses. Rev. James L. Snyder is pastor of the Family of God Fellowship, PO Box 831313, Ocala, FL 34483. He lives with his wife, Martha, in Silver Springs Shores. Call him at 1-866-552-2543 or e-mail jamessnyder2@att.net or website www.jamessnyderministries.com.

PRO-LIFE IS ANTI-GUN TINA Dupuy

Let me get this out of the way: I don't agree with the pro-life position on abortion for two reasons. The first is if abortion is criminalized, all women of childbearing years legally be-come public incubators. The ability to bear children will mean being subjected to special scrutiny by the government. If you believe women are more than just transportation systems for wombs, abortion—love it or hate it—has to be legal. Family planning, privacy and the right to keep personal decisions personal are at the core of what we know as

Second is that the pro-life movement is strangely also anti-birth control—conflating very ef-fective means of preventing pregnancy, like IUDs and Plan B, with abortion. These are not abortions, and declaring them as such smacks not only of antiscience, but anti-sex. Specif-ically, anti-sex-without-consequences.

It strikes me this isn't just pro-life, it's pro-dictating others' lives. This week, former governor of Arkansas, presidential candidate and admitted statutory rapist Ted Nugentapologist Mike Huckabee said he wouldn't rule out using federal troops to stop women from exercising their constitutionally protected right to terminate their own pregnancies.

Because nothing says freedom more than a martial-forced birth.

But let's just say I'm cynical. I grew up in the foster care system, so I'm very skeptical when people profess they care about the welfare of children, but not actual welfare. Prolifers seem to revel in lamenting the fates of unwanted children, but are not holding marches at the steps of the Supreme Court to humanize foster care, reform adoption laws or give public assistance to families in crisis. They're not holding vigils and prayer circles to increase funding to house abused or neglected children. Remember all those child refugees at the Mexican border? They're children, too. When I see a dead fetus placard I see time not spent fundraising for scholarships for kids in the system.

Where's the heavily edited video exposing how macabre and horrible it is to grow up in this country as a ward of the state? I'm still waiting.

But let's say I've misjudged the pro-life movement. Let's say they're not currently using an activist's hoax in hopes of sparking a moral panic alleging Planned Parenthood sells body parts. Let's pretend abortion clinics haven't been under constant "pro-life" terrorist attacks or threats. Ignore all the bombings and harassment, and forget that Dr. George Tiller wasn't shot in the head while attending church. Let's just take them at their word that they really believe every life is sacred and they really care about children.

Then I welcome pro-lifers to join the anti-gun movement. There's not as much raucous slut-shaming—but there are a lot of actual children dying. Pro-lifers can be more than just pro-birth. If it really is a moral conviction that life is sacred, then get out of women's birth canals and grow up.

The U.S. has more guns and more gun deaths than any other country. Those who say guns make us safer have disregarded all data and common sense to make that claim. Just in 2013 we lost 11,000 Americans to gun homicides, 21,000 to gun suicides and 500 to accidents involving guns. We, as Americans, have decided kindergarteners getting blown away in Sandy Hook is just the price of freedom, yet just under half the country say they're pro-life?!

How is this possible?

It's time to branch out. Time to stop using junk science to scare women and time to start rallying against the real death industry in this country: Gun manufacturers. If pro-lifers are incensed and galvanized by the falsehood that Planned Parenthood profits off death as a non-profit organization, why aren't they furious arms dealers are legally immune to lawsuits thanks to an act of Congress? Gun makers and dealers have no liability, all profit and don't screen for cancer.

So in case no one has offered it before now, pro-lifers, you're invited to champion for stricter guns laws. You'd be a welcome addition to those who know the Second Amendment states the militia is well-regulated and not wholly deregulated.

WILL Durst - Raging Moderate A REPUBLICAN SWEET 16...PLUS 1

Get to high ground everybody. Our nation is in danger of being inundated by a candidate tsunami of 17 Republicans. The Sweet Sixteen and Never Been Kissed Plus One. Seventeen Shades of Grey. If they used a designated pitcher they could split up into two teams and play softball against each other. No hardball allowed.

In an attempt to winnow the enormous aggregate down to a manageable number, Fox News, host of the big first GOP presidential nomination debate, has declared only the top ten in an average of recent polls will be allowed to participate. Welcome to the Big Boys Table. They also announced another earlier debate with everybody else. The little kids table. The consolation debate. The also-rans. The B-sides. Most at 3 percent or less in polls with margin of errors of plus or minus 3 percent. Accustomed to their constant whining about the media treating elections as horse races, we think this is the perfect time to fuel their paranoia by handicapping the voluminous number of contending plugs. So here's the morning Line on the 17 dark horses of the apocalypse. And down the stretch they come!

MAKES THE BIG BOYS DEBATE Jeb Bush. 4-1. Deserving favorite. Best chance is to convince America he's adopted. Donald Trump. 6-1. Race would be over if his feet ran half as fast as his mouth. Scott Walker. 8-1. Strong finisher but may be carrying too much weight with both Koch Brothers clinging to his saddle. Marco Rubio. 10-1. The guy voted against a bill he co-sponsored. Could be own worst enemy.

Ted Cruz. 12-1. Likes to lead. Likes to lead loud. Also likes to box other horses right into rail.

Rand Paul. 30-1. Keeps spitting out bit in order to bite other horses. Comes from stable comfortable with losing.

Chris Christie. 40-1. Enjoys the run but does it with all the grace of a tumbling dumpster.

Rick Perry. 80-1. Lost some zip after donning blinders. New shoes don't seem to help either.

Mike Huckabee. 100-1. Tends to sag the more we see of him. Ben Carson. 300-1. A black guy running for GOP nomination. Has about the same chance as a black guy would of running for the GOP nomination. AT THE KIDS TĂBLE

Rick Santorum. 500-1. Not old fashioned as much as he is Old Testament. His idea of progress is smelting a lighter alloy for the buckle on his hat.

Pivush "Bobby" Jindal. 500-1. Tends to shy away when bright lights switch on. Needs at least three pile-ups on early turns to become a leader.

John Kasich. 500-1. Late entrant may have timed it perfectly. Or won't make it onto track for post time. One or the other.

Lindsey Graham. 500-1. Always runs risk of disqualification for barking at officials.

AMERICA'S SECURITY BLANKET ...

Carly Fiorina. 1000-1. Only filly GOP interested in is Barbara Bush. Not as a contestant, as a brood George Pataki. 1000-1. This grisly warhorse was put out to stud years ago. If he wins, be prepared for a stewards' inquiry.

Jim Gilmore. 6000-1. Longest shot in a field of longish long shots. If he wins, be prepared for stewards to be shot.

a global scale through radioactive materials and a steady increase in carbon dioxide from the burning of fossil fuels."

President Lyndon Johnson, February 1965

As I write this, the big story is that Fox News has decided on the nine Republican candidates who'll get to flank Donald Trump on stage Thursday night. I'll be watching - for moments like eight years ago, when the moderator asked for a show of hands of candidates who didn't believe in evolution. Nothing makes them squirm more than risking their base by referring to science.

On stage Thursday night, Mike Huckabee was one who raised his hand eight years ago. Last February, Gov. Scott Walker (R-WI) demurred when asked during a London interview whether he accepted evolution. The interviewer prefaced the question by explaining it was asked "particularly of Republicans who come to London", then responded to Walker; 'Really? Any British politician, right or left wing, they would laugh and say, 'Yes, of course evolution is true'." Ieb Bush has said that although he accepts evolution, he wasn't sure students needed to; "I don't think it should actually be part of the curriculum, to be honest with you."

There's squeamishness about the science of medical research. Republicans in Congress are threatening another government shutdown after being punked by "gotcha" videos on Planned Parenthood – an organization annually providing pap tests and breast exams, contraceptive services, and tests and treatments for HIV and sexually transmitted diseases primarily to low-income women - 2.7 million served annually; one-in-five American women at some point in their lives.

The shutdown is threatened unless government support for Planned Parenthood - a half-billion dollars a year, 40% of their budget - is ended. As Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-MA) put it, "I simply cannot believe that in the year 2015, the United States Senate would be spending its time trying to defund women's health care centers"

Supposedly, the outrage isn't about abortion which comprises 3% of Planned Parenthood's services and receives no government support, anyway - but in donating fetal tissue for medical research. This has been going on since approved by a near-unanimous Senate vote (93-4) in 1993, and has proved invaluable in researching diabetes, Alzheimer's, muscular dystrophy and other degenerative diseases.

Now even Republicans who backed it in 1993, like Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY), are aghast that it continues. Trump is on board for the government shutdown in order to defund Planned Parenthood, as is Carly Fiorina (who complains "how extreme Democrats are"). To Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) it "appears to be a criminal enterprise". Jeb Bush says he's "not sure we need half a billion dollars for women's health issues."

Meanwhile, President Obama addressed the real science and the real threat of carbon emissions

"This generation has from power plants. The science has been there since altered the composition President Johnson made his statement to Congress of the atmosphere on fifty years ago. The rules announced by the president were made under the Clean Air Act, adopted in 1970 under President Nixon. The science on greenhouse gasses and climate change has been there for thirty > Campaigning against Al Gore in 2000, George W. Bush promised, "We will require all power plants to meet clean-air standards in order to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide", though he reversed course once in office. Then a bipartisan effort in Congress, led in the Senate by John McCain (R-AZ) and Joe Lieberman (D-CT), unsuccessfully sought to pass legislation to limit emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gasses.

> Finally, a dozen states (including California) went to the Supreme Court to get action. The Court ruled in 2007 the Environmental Protection Agency must regulate emissions under the Clean Air Act, provided it first determines they "may reasonably be anticipated to endanger public health or welfare.' The EPA determined they did, so Bush ignored his own EPA. Under President Obama, the EPA picked up where the it was blocked under Bush.

> Obama preferred that Congress act in coming up with legislation on carbon emissions from power plants (producing 40% of our carbon pollution). Current candidate Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) pushed a bipartisan effort to get something through, but couldn't get the sixty Senate votes needed. The president realized that since Congress wouldn't act, under the 1970 Clean Air Act and the 2007 Supreme Court ruling, he had to.

> As for the science, to Rick Santorum climate change is a "beautifully concocted scheme". Ted Cruz knocks the scientists ("alarmists"); "they don't like to look at the actual facts and the data". Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL) doesn't "believe" it; "I don't agree with the notion". "Global warming is a total . . . hoax", says Trump, "created by and for the Chinese.'

> While a 2013 report finds 97.1% of scientific papers on the subject concluding that humans cause climate change, Jeb Bush maintains that for "people to say the science is decided on this" is "intellectual

> The science of evolution, healthcare and climate change might escape Republican candidates, but they can do math - and they know the cost of a campaign. Fifteen months out from the election, the energy industry has already chipped in $1.8 million 82% of it to their party.

> Candidates appeared at another forum last weekend, making the pilgrimage to the Koch Brothers' "Freedom Partners" donor summit at Dana Point. Freshman Republican Senators were there to thank the brothers for helping buy them control of Congress. Presidential aspirants Walker, Fiorina, Cruz, Bush and Rubio pledged fealty, and schmoozed with donors not unaccustomed to writing seven-and-eight-figure checks.

> Whether grounding our students in scientific literacy, medical research and reproductive care for millions of low-income women, or addressing climate change in what President Obama calls "our moment to get this right and leave something better for our kids", it doesn't stack up to going after a piece of the billion dollars the Koch Brothers have pledged for this election.

The Republican Party may be evolving, but perhaps not in the direction Darwin anticipated.

MICHAEL Reagan Making Sense

NO SALE, MR. OBAMA

Did you catch President Obama's sales speech for his Iranian nuclear deal at American University?

My head is still spinning and I think I did something to my back trying to follow the president's arguments on Wednesday afternoon.

Basically, the president said if Congress doesn't approve the treaty that he, John Kerry and his State Department softball team made with the ayatollahs, three bad things are gonna happen.

Iran will develop nuclear weapons in

There will be a new war in the Middle

And the United States will lose its credibility as the global leader of diplomacy.

You can argue that the same three bad things will happen, or are already happening, whether or not we sign the Iranian nuclear deal, but let's not

Obama pulled out all the stops trying to persuade everyone that his bad deal is not only a good deal, it's the best deal with Iran we can ever hope

He ended his sales pitch by asking Americans to contact their representatives in Washington to urge them to approve the Iranian deal.

He said two years of negotiations "have achieved a detailed arrangement that permanently prohibits Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon" and contains "the most comprehensive inspection and verification regime ever negotiated to monitor a nuclear program."

Republicans in the Senate and a few Democrats beg to differ with the president and his self-congratulatory BS. They'd prefer to study the details of the deal - and maybe improve them -- before they sign it.

They also want to make sure the smiling Iranian despots in Tehran realize that we have this thing called a Constitution and no treaty Obama and his team whips up can become law until the Senate ratifies it.

The president appeared at American University in Washington because that's where John Kennedy gave his "Strategy of Peace" speech in 1963.

JFK called for the U.S. and the Soviets to seek peaceful solutions to the Cold War, which Obama noted was how it ultimately ended.

Obama praised Kennedy and Ronald Reagan and quoted them about the importance of seeking peace and the avoidance of war through diplomacy.

He forgot to mention that Kennedy and Reagan also backed up their hard diplomacy with big military sticks and a willingness to swing them.

Sometimes diplomacy - which Obama acts likes he invented in 2008 - has to take a backseat to a military solution.

In his speech Obama didn't quote Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, though he did point out that İsrael's leader strongly disagrees with the Iranian deal.

That's an understatement. As Netanyahu has said, "The nuclear deal with Iran doesn't block Iran's path to the bomb. It actually paves Iran's path to the bomb.'

The deal won't bring peace or security for Israel or anyone else, Netanyahu said.

It will "spark a nuclear arms race in the region. And it would feed Iran's terrorism and aggression that would make war, perhaps the most horrific war of all, far more likely."

President Obama expressed his deep respect for Netanyahu, then said he was wrong to be against the deal.

Obama also expressed his love for Israel. Saying he'll always see to it that America defends our loyal ally, he insisted the deal he has crafted is "in America's interests and Israel's interests."

Deal or no deal, in the long run everyone knows Iran is as untrustworthy as any nation on the planet.

Its leaders are responsible for destabilizing half the countries in the Middle East and they've not even pretended to renounce their intentions to destroy the state of Israel.

On Wednesday Obama boasted that his nuclear deal with Iran could become one of our country's greatest diplomatic feats.

Let's hope not.
