City of Sierra Madre

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

The City of Sierra Madre MUNICIPAL CODE TEXT AMENDMENT 15-03 From: Subject:

(MCTA 15-03) Applicant: City of Sierra Madre

Project Location: Properties in the City of Sierra Madre, County of Los Angeles, State of California

The City of Sierra Madre gives notice, pursuant to State of California law, that the Planning Commission will conduct a public hearing to consider recommending adoption of a text amendment to Chapter 17.22 of the Municipal Code to remove the minimum allowable floor area of second units, and reduce the maximum height of single-story detached second units. The amendment also adds a side yard setback requirement for the secondary frontage of reverse corner lots, removes the requirement that new second units are only allowed on those residential lots that conform with all existing R-1 Zoning standards, removes the limitation on minimum unit size, reduces the allowable height for one-story units, adds the requirement of a conditional use permit for a new second story unit, and adds a health and safety inspection requirement for the conversion of existing structures to second units. The purpose of the proposed revisions is 1) to further an objective of the City's 2014-2021 Housing Element to encourage and facilitate the production of second units in order to meet the City's Regional Housing Needs Assessment (RHNA) allocation, and 2) to protect the health and welfare of the City's residents. Following a Planning Commission recommendation for approval, the proposed text amendment will be forwarded to the City Council for their consideration. the secondary frontage of reverse corner lots, removes the requirement that new second

Planning Commission meeting Thursday, October 1, 2015 (Hearing begins at 7:00 p.m.)

PLACE OF HEARING

All interested persons may attend this meeting and the Planning Commission will hear them with respect thereto.

ENVIRONMENTAL DETERMINATION: An Initial Study was prepared for the 2008-2014 Housing Element in accordance with the City's guidelines implementing the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA). This Initial Study was undertaken for the purpose of deciding whether the measures identified in the Housing Element to fulfill the City's RHNA allocation may have a significant effect on the environment. On the basis of the Initial Study, City staff concluded that they will not have a significant effect on the environment, and a Negative Declaration was adopted by City Council on June 11, 2013. The project also qualifies for a Statutory Exemption pursuant to Section 15061(b)(3), in that the City can say with certainty that there is no possibility that the activity in question may have a significant effect on the environment because adding the regulatory requirement of a conditional use effect on the environment because adding the regulatory requirement of a conditional use permit in order to build a second story unit is not likely to result in additional construction beyond that already permissible.

APPEAL: A decision by the Planning Commission is subject to a 10-day appeal period to the City Council. If in the future anyone wishes to challenge the decision of the Planning Commission in court, one may be limited to raising the issues that were raised or presented in written correspondence delivered to the Planning Commission at, or before, the scheduled public hearing. For further information on this subject, please contact the Planning and Community Preservation Department at (626) 355-7138.

On Friday morning, before the much noticed guard who stands in front of Bank of America came to work, an unidentified man, not shown in this picture) lost control of his vehicle. With his truck facing BOA, the driver of the pickup attempted to exit the parking lot of Fiesta Taco on the north side of Sunnyside when the truck malfunctioned.

According to SMPD Detective Kam Kamchamnan, the man, in his 50' and not pictured above, got out of his stalled vehicle in an attempt to quickly check under the hood. However, when he did so, he was unaware that his brakes were not engaged and the car slowly drifted across Sierra Madre Blvd., jumped the curb and landed in the front window of BOA

Miraculously the vehicle crossed Sierra Madre Blvd., without running into oncoming traffic. The driver had a few minor scrapes and was not transported to the hospital.

The victim stated that 20 minutes prior, she and her young son were in her bedroom when they heard noises outside her window. The victim's son got on the floor and looked under the windows blinds and reported seeing someone. He stated that as soon as he looked outside, the pant legs moved back from the window and headed toward the front of the house. Officers walked the perimeter of the home and were unable to locate any further evidence. This case has been forwarded to the Detective Bureau.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"Respect for self, Respect for others, Respect for the world." Gooden School Motto

One of our favorite places to walk in Sierra Madre is anywhere near Ascension Church and the Gooden School. We have enjoyed exceptionally nice moments there; i.e., the wine and cheese and Chamber Orchestra afternoon a while back; meeting with the fourth graders who were in charge of the garden a couple of years ago, admiring their cold frame boxes filled with Italian eggplant and fabulous tomatoes. There was yellow squash, watermelons still on the vine, and a pomegranate tree, with a good dozen pomegranates hanging from the branches.

When good friend Sharon Pevsner invited us to come to the Dedication of The Kelly Watson Reading Garden and Blessing of the Renewed Classrooms there last Sunday we were thrilled. What a lovely event this was, with Rev. Michael Bamberger (Rector of Church of the Ascension), Rev. Michael Cooper (Chaplain, The Gooden School) and Thomas, a very serious young altar boy and holy water bearer, blessing the classrooms which are home to Kindergarteners through third graders. Ribbons were cut by Emma and Natalie Watson, daughters of Kelly and Alan Watson, opening the new Reading Garden and refurbished rooms. The classrooms were gloriously cool, bright and friendly with windows overlooking flowers and trees. Can't you just see these little people learning wonderful things... like reading!

The Reading Garden is right outside these new rooms and is a spot tailor-made for a peaceful moment or two with a good book. Kelly Watson, as it says on our program, was "throughout her entire life, a passionate reader. She enjoyed not only the intellectual stimulation of a good book, but the respite it could provide from an otherwise hectic life. This new reading garden honors her well-lived life, and is dedicated to provide to everyone in this community a chance to have a moment, however brief, of breathing space...." Kelly Watson left her family, this community and the Gooden School, which she loved, in 2014. "Kelly always believed that even serious things, like dealing with cancer, are better with a dose of humor and moments to reflect." There are benches painted bright blue, covered with whimsical animals, birds, bees, fish, sea horses - radiating pure joy, right in front of the garden. Kelly was my youngest daughter's age.

And, speaking of our daughter, Crissy, our Texas girl, she did her Kindergarten there at Ascension School, when Kindergarten was in the house next door to the church, or maybe a house away, starting in 1974. Her teacher, Mrs. Deuchers (spelled wrong, I'm sure) was a wonderful woman and my best friend, Jeannette Crocker, was the Kindergarten chef, creating a delicious meal for these little people every day. All of our encounters with Ascension and the Gooden School have been covered with, wrapped 'round with kindness. Crissy had run across the street on July 19th of 1974 and very nearly stepped into heaven after a car hit her, spending ten days in a coma at Arcadia Methodist. Our own George Maurer, a paramedic at that time, and another dear man, scooped our little girl up off the street and transported her to the hospital. She celebrated her birthday there, we watched Richard Nixon resign the Presidency there, and she spent most of August learning to walk, slowly, haltingly again. We decided, John and I, that she had to go to Kindergarten, even though she was still so broken. Mrs. Deuchers and all the children in her very small class, were kind to her. She spent her first semester just sitting and watching, but kindness and love covered her. She was included, although she was unable to do much of anything. By the second semester, she was doing better and she finished Kindergarten in style, just like everyone else. I am filled, as I write these words, with gratitude; first for the fact that God preserved her life, and secondly for the Ascension School Kindergarten, where she was covered in, protected

REGISTRATION IS OPEN FOR YWCA PASADENA 2015 FALL PROGRAMS

On September 28th, a new session of YWCA programming will begin. The YWCA Pasadena-Foothill Valley will be offering 4 programs at its offices: TechGyrls, Express Yourself, Adult Computer Class, and iPad class. They will all be based at the YWCA Pasadena offices, located at 1015 N. Lake Ave., Suite 205, Pasadena, CA 91104. These 4 programs aim to empower community members of all ages to pursue their goals, realize their creativity, and learn new skills.

TechGYRLS is part of the YWCA's free Girls' Empowerment programming and is designed to introduce the cutting edge technology and techniques to girls ages 10-17, while fostering a love of the STEM disciplines. The YWCA will provide a comfortable, and supportive environment where girls will be able to feel comfortable taking risks and opening up to new learning opportunities. Participants will be able to engage in hands-on activities including designing and printing 3D objects with a FlashForge 3D printer, editing photos and learning graphic design, and exploring science through fun and interactive experiments. The program runs for ten weeks Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3:00 PM to 6:00 PM beginning September 29th.

Express Yourself! is the second part of the YWCA's free Girl's Empowerment programming. This program is designed to allow girls to be creative and express themselves through a variety of media. The YWCA will support and guide girls through hands-on creative activities such as writing creative fiction and non-fiction, documenting local events and history, photographing their world, and creating mixed media masterpieces. The YWCA will also be partnering with the Art Center College of Design to integrate the most up-to-date techniques and styles into the Express Yourself! curriculum through their facilitation of one class a week. The program runs for ten weeks Mondays and Wednesdays from 3:00 PM to 6:00 PM beginning September 28th.

Adult Computer Class will also be continuing this Fall. This class is designed for the un- and underemployed to learn computer skills that will allow them to compete in an ever increasingly technology driven workforce. Participants will learn the basics of Microsoft Office (Word, Excel, Powerpoint), online job searches and safety, and Windows 10. Adult Computer Class is open to all adults in the Pasadena community. The class is free to register, however, the YWCA encourages participants to acquire the class workbook at a suggested $5 donation. The program runs for 10 weeks . Participants attend once a week Mondays OR Wednesdays 9:00AM to 11:00 pm.

The YWCA's iPad Basics course will also be held at the YWCA Pasadena offices. This class designed for adults who wish to understand how to use this amazing tool in their daily lives. The covers the basics of iPad navigation, email/online communications, internet browser use, and Google Maps. ENTERTAINING A GUEST FROM WISCONSIN

About a month ago, my husband Bob received a call from his late cousin Dave's widow, Phyllis (From Wisconsin) that she booked a flight to Los Angeles and would be here seven days. (Not including traveling days.) I never met her and my husband Bob only a couple times before moving out of state. He did see her last year for an hour when he went back for his high school reunion and picked up some family history research. Bob said she used a cane.

So Disneyland, etc. was out of the question. First I went to wheeloffortune. com and learned you can reserve up to four seats to see the show taped. (Also true of Jeopardy)

There are lots of great local museums. El Monte has nearby parking and isn't too large for physically impaired. Phyllis enjoyed all the cubicles with rooms/stores set up, the Gay Lion Farm Display, the Royals Royce and so many memorabilia display cases as well as the tribute to both the Police and Fire

Speaking of Arcadia, we arose early one morning and went to Clocker's Corner to see American Pharoah work out. Coffee and a delicious breakfast are available, and the San Gabriel Mountains offer a gorgeous backdrop. We saw Fernando Perez, Felipe Valdez, Tiago Perierra with his dog in tow, and Gary Stevens who graciously posed with Phyllis.

Our last day was a drive to Carpentaria CITY Beach. It has free parking and picnic tables. The quaint town has plenty of eateries, neat stores and even a

Dr. Alan Mucerino has a great way of sharing the evolutionary change happening in education right now. Moving from the concept of No Child Left Behind to the concept of Common Core and Career Pathways is another shift along with shifting to local funding based on needs of the community. The newest educational developments are helping expand focus from just "content" - or "what" - to also the "how" and the "why" by connecting "what" is learned to "how" to apply it and "why" it's important. He also shared the new type of testing and how teachers will now be able to review how individual students are comprehending new skills - and developing appropriate methods for those needs.

Dr. Mucerino was joined at a recent Duarte Kiwanis meeting by the new Leadership Team of the Duarte High Key Club. The Key Club has been instrumental within their Division with their fundraising efforts focused on Preventing Pediatric Trauma (PPT).

PRELIMINARY REPORT INDICATES NO EVIDENCE OF ACTIVE FAULTS UNDER SAN RAFAEL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL CAMPUS

PASADENA, CA – A preliminary report on tests to re-examine the age of the faults that pass under the Pasadena Unified School District's (PUSD) San Rafael Elementary School indicate that there is no evidence of active faults. The full report is expected in late September or early October.

"The Board of Education will receive a briefing on the preliminary report at their September 24, 2015 meeting, however, no action on the site or the report findings is expected to be taken at this time," said Mercy Santoro, PUSD Associate Superintendent of School Support

According to Santoro, in 2012 an extensive fault rupture investigation was conducted at the San Rafael School site in preparation for modernization projects under the Measure TT facilities bond. As under the Measure TT facilities bond. As part of the initial testing, what appeared to be four active earthquake faults were found on the school property, with an approximately 90 percent probability for each one existing and being active (exhibiting evidence of seismic activity at some point within the past 11,700 years). With this discovery, the Board of Education was provided information that Education was provided information that the Division of State Architect would not allow or approve plans to move forward with any modernization or upgrades on any school facility that was within 50 feet of any earthquake faults. It is important to note that public school sites must meet Field Act standards which are more stringent for K-12 public schools than for any other buildings, including homes and businesses. Based on these findings, the Board moved to surplus the property. Subsequent to the Board's action to surplus the property of the string of the surplus the school site additional surplus the school site, additional information was provided that other testing methods, similar to those used by the City of Pasadena to evaluate possible faults near Fire Station 39, should be used. No faults were found near Fire Station 39 which is in close proximity to San Rafael Elementary.

In May 2015, the PUSD Board of Education approved testing to re-examine the seismic faults under San Rafael, acting upon the primary recommendation from the 7-11 Surplus Property Advisory Committee that was convened in 2014. The committee recognized the strong desire in the community to maintain a school on the San Rafael campus, and recommended the continuation of seismic investigation to determine if the identified faults or anomalies were active or not. To complete the validation of active faults on the school site, trenching was done on the campus during summer 2015.

The preliminary report issued by Earth Systems of Southern California Sept. 11 indicates active faults are not present within the depth and location explored at San Rafael Elementary School, stated Santoro. The potential for surface fault rupture at the site during the design life of the existing structures is considered to be very low. The effects of ground shaking in the event of a large earthquake or a nearby earthquake can be mitigated by proper engineering design and construction in conformance with current building codes and engineering practices.

"The district plans a school and community meeting in the next few weeks once the full report is available," said Santoro. "The report will be presented at the regular Peard of Education meeting." the regular Board of Education meeting scheduled October 22, and formal action to remove the school site from the surplus list expected to be taken."

"This is obviously great news for the San Rafael School community," said Scott Phelps, the PUSD Board of Education member who represents the area. "It is the result of a strong, dedicated school community and effective leadership by district staff."

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show THE TRANSPORTER REFUELED REVIEW

Every so often, franchises that had faded into obscurity in your mind seem to be brought back from the dead. Most of the time it seems like there is no good reason for it (do we really need a Ghostbusters remake with Melissa McCarthy?); however, there is the occasional remake that manages to surpass the original (the live-action Cinderella, for example). Can Luc Besson resurrect his action-thriller franchise or has it been in obscurity for too long?

Frank Martin (Ed Skrein) is a transporter: he takes important packages from one point to another without asking any questions. His packages usually consist of important letters, legal documents, and large sums of money; however, this all changes when four identical looking women lure him into a life and death game with Russian 'Transporter Refueled' is laughably bad, it's that simple. The plot, which is extremely uninteresting, goes back and forth between either being shoved down your throat, with characters repeating plot points several times, or is just nonexistent at times. The dialogue is terrible and the actors' accents are so strong half the time you cannot understand what they are saying. The acting is stiff, the cinematography is bland, and, overall, this remake is not worth your time or money.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

Happy Ta by Chris Leclerc

THE MAGNIFICENT MIGRATING MONARCH

flitting about in Sierra Madre recently. They seem to enjoy the flowers on the bougainvillea bushes growing along the fence in my back yard, and like a voyeur, I like to watch them through the window as they pass from one blossom to another before flying back up into the sky and on their merry way. They intently investigate each blossom on the bush with their bright orange wings striking a stark contrast against the green fauna. The way they fold their massive wings in and out with such grace somehow gives me a sense of peace.

Seeing so many monarch butterflies in such a short period of time reminds me of an experience I had several years ago while visiting the beach in Carpentaria. There was a huge colony of monarchs lingering in clusters, hanging onto the bark and leaves of a very dense and shady eucalyptus grove. That was the first time I had ever seen so many butterflies lurking together in one area at the same time. I had to blink and take a second look before I could be certain of what I was seeing. All those butterflies clinging in clusters to the trees created a surreal scene that, from a distance looked like a colorful work of moving art. And, I guess that is indeed what it was. God's art.

Until I got close enough to see that the brilliant orange menagerie was actually made up of thousands of live butterflies, it crossed my mind for a split second that perhaps someone had come along and spray-painted that entire grove of trees with some sort of sophisticated stencil. But, in reality I was looking at a vast population of magnificent migrating monarchs taking a break to rest and restore their energies before resuming a very long and treacherous journey from their original spring season home, to their final fall destination.

The monarch is the only butterfly in North America that is known to migrate north in the spring and south in the fall, much like various species of birds migrate semi-annually. I find it quite remarkable that such a small and delicate

I have been seeing so many monarch butterflies creature could have the energy and tenacity to travel so far without loosing it's way or falling from the sky to it's death before reaching the next resting spot. It is a phenomenon of nature that I find hard to wrap my mind around, and certainly one that is worthy of human attention and appreciation.

The Monarch butterfly migrates for 2 reasons. One, they cannot withstand the freezing weather in the northern and central continental climates during the winter months. And two, the larval food plants do not grow in their over-wintering nest sites, so the spring generation must fly back north to places where the plants are plentiful. The south-bound monarch migration usually starts in about October of each year, but can start earlier if the weather turns cold sooner than that.

When the weather changes again, and the temperatures in the south start to rise in the spring, the monarch knows that it is time to head back north, and off they go once again on that long journey to their next seasonal destination. This magnificent migration pattern explains the sudden appearance of the many monarch butterflies we have been seeing in Sierra Madre recently.

It blows my mind to think that those little winged wonders I have had the privilege of observing in my own back yard will soon be living in a place very far away from here, planning their next move to survive the winter months! Nature never ceases to amaze me, and it really brings things into perspective for me when I take the time to notice and appreciate all of it's wonders.

Aldo is a sweet senior boy, about 10 years old and weighs about 14 pounds. Aldo is a Pomeranian mix with a lovely soft red coat of medium length. If it weren't for his "frosted face" you would never guess that he is a senior.

When Aldo first arrived at the shelter, he had severely decayed teeth and was badly in need of dental care. Unfortunately, most of his teeth couldn't be saved, so they were pulled. He is still able to eat food that does not require a lot of chewing, and he is very good natured in spite of it.

Aldo has an easy-going shelter. He has a bit of an independent personality, of his front legs when he walks with a little hitch in his step, but it does not seem to bother him.

Aldo recently went to an off-site adoption event and behaved very well meeting new people and was featured at the Sierra Madre Kiwanis breakfast adoption event this weekend. He is a calm boy who just takes life as it comes. His kennel mate is another senior boy and the two of them get along well with each other.

Aldo is waiting for his forever family to find him shady yard to relax on a nice day, and a comfortable to sign up! bed to sleep in. Aldo might be just the companion you are looking for, so come in to meet him soon. Aldo qualifies for our 'Senior for Senior adoption program.

WHO HAS THE BEST FRENCH

It's National Potato month and I wanted to share with you a brief history of our little friend. Plus, I will give you my annual report on where I think the best fries in town are.

Potatoes were first eaten some 6000 years ago in Peru, as far as the French Fries goes, there is an argument if it was invented in Belgium or France.

Today, French fries account for more than onefourth of all potatoes sold in the U.S. market,

There are over six million pounds of potatoes are processed into frozen fries annually. Twenty-five percent of kids report eating French fries instead of vegetables, and the average American eats thirty pounds of the greasy things in a year. The potato has come from being reviled to being revered and is now the second most popular staple food in the world. So the next gratitude for the feeling I have in the present moment. As a friend reminded me recently, all things are manageable in the present moment. In the experiencing it. There's no resistance from me, I just am where I am in total focus on what's in front of

If I'm in past, I can feel regret, guilt or nostalgia. In the future, and ooh baby, the fear can creep in over situations that have not even happened. It's in the those little gaps of awareness (or present-ness) that I lose my way. Mistakes happen and I miss moments

I cannot express this present moment awareness. Using the breath with deliberate movement, we almost instantly slip into the now. The mind settles and the process reduces our distractions. Granted, we may still be distracted, but our entire focus is being directed back to the here and now. Just directing our efforts can bring about an amazing result. This is another reason why yoga is so enjoyable. We practice moment, I not only live life as its happening, but I'm heightened awareness, we practice consciousness, we practice being in the present moment. It's in this experience, we connect with our greatness and bigger Self. Our ability to appreciate the beauty and simplicity of the moment is strengthened.

> Take a deep breath and enjoy this very moment. Look down at your feet and be where they are!

5 REASONS YOU NEED AN ALOE PLANT

Dr. Tina is a traditional naturopath and nutritionist at Vibrant Living Wellness Center

Aloe succulent leaves store a gel-like juice with powerful protective and healing properties which have been recognized for many centuries. The only thing you need to do is break off a leaf, scrap out the gel and the aloe will do its magic all on its own.

- Aloe is anti-inflammatory and has a cooling effect so it works wonders on bug bites. You may want to break off a leaf and place it in you fridge for several minutes. The extra cold will enhance its cooling effect and help to reduce the itch.
- My favorite use of aloe is for burns. If you have never burned your hand cooking or suffered a sun burn you are lucky. Aloe not only soothes a burn but it also heals and moisturizes the skin. The only thing you need to do is open up a leaf and rub the inside over your skin to get
- Aloe is great as a skin moisturizer as it hydrates and provides nutrients for the skin. It is full of vitamins C, E, and beta carotene which are all known to help prevent premature aging.
- Aloe is not only anti-inflammatory but it is also anti-microbial. These two properties make aloe a great choice to treat a wide range of skin problems such as eczema, rashes, psoriasis, and acne. It reduces inflammation, cools and moisturizes the skin all while promoting cell renewal
- Lastly is you have stretch marks either from weight gain or from pregnancy, applying aloe gel on a daily basis helps to reduce their visibility. Stretch marks are the result of minor tears that appear in the top layer of our skin. Aloe can help to heal those tears when applied early to stretch

Aloe is so easy to grow... everyone should have a plant somewhere in their yard. It can even grow in a planter on a balcony.

SAVING FOR COLLEGE: WHAT, WHY, WHEN, WHERE, AND HOW

If it's important to you that your children attend college, the time to start saving is now. The real question is where to place your savings

If you start saving early in your child's life, you can afford to take a riskier approach in the early years. The closer you get to needing the money, however, the less acceptable risk becomes. For example, a sharp downturn in the stock market right when you need money can be devastating if your investments are in market-sensitive securities. Regardless of which savings vehicles you use, it's key that you stay connected to your investments. Handing them over to a financial advisor blindly is usually not in your best interest. Understanding and participating in your own investment decisions almost always makes more sense.

There are two main types of savings vehicles I recommend you consider: The "529 Plan" and the Wealth Creation Trust.

The 529 Plan is the most common way to save for college. This college savings opportunity is named for the section number of the Internal Revenue Service Code that provides for its use. Under a 529, taxes are not paid on the earnings if used for college, including tuition, books, and living expenses. If the money in a 529 Plan is not used for college, however, a 10% penalty is assessed on the earnings (though the principal may still be withdrawn tax free).

The Wealth Creation Trust on the other hand, does not offer any tax savings, but it does offer more flexibility. You can establish a Wealth Creation Trust for your child at an early age and then ask all of your family members to contribute to the trust for the benefit of your child at important events, birthdays and other rites of passage. The funds in the Trust are then held for the benefit of your child, who can eventually become a Trustee of the Trust and learn to manage the assets when she hits a level of maturity you determine to be appropriate.

Funds in a Wealth Creation Trust can be used not only for education, but to start a business, travel the world, purchase a home, or for any other purpose you determine.

Sometimes when contemplating how to pay for college, parents are tempted to tap into money that has been set aside for other purposes--most notably, retirement. Using these funds, however, can affect a student's eligibility for various needbased tuition assistance programs. Retirement funds withdrawn to pay college expenses must be reported on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid as additional income.

Consequently, the Expected Family Contribution derived from the FAFSA will be higher and will therefore reduce the possibility of financial assistance when using retirement funds.

Two bright spots in the challenge of college expenses are the American Opportunity Tax Credit and the Lifetime Learning Credit. These are tax credits that allow a student or her parents to reduce their tax liability dollar for dollar based on tuition payments. The AOTC gives a credit of 100% of the first $2,000 in tuition- costs, and 25% of the next $2,000. The Lifetime Credit allows a credit of 20% of the first $10,000 in tuition costs regardless of how many children are incurring the expenses. Both programs have income limits to qualify: $180,000 and $130,000 respectively for those married and filing joint tax returns. If single, the limits are $90,000 and $65,000.

One of my favorite things about being a personal family attorney is building lifetime relationships with my clients. I am able to serve as a resource for them as they navigate the same challenges I face in life -- and yes, saving for my kids' college is a big one! If that's the kind of relationship you'd like to have with your lawyer, give us a call and schedule a Family Estate Planning Session with me. We'll look at your unique family situation, goals, and challenges. If things aren't quite where you want them to be we'll look at strategies, tools, and techniques to help get you there.

THE GOOD LIFE

ROADSIDE ASSISTANCE SERVICES FOR OLDER DRIVERS

Dear Savvy Senior,

I would like to get my wife and I set up with some type of roadside assistance service in case we get a flat tire or our battery conks out. Can you recommend some good and affordable services for retirees on a budget? Too Old to Fix a Flat

Dear Too Old,

Getting set up with a roadside assistance service you can call on day or night if your vehicle breaks down is a smart idea, and can provide you and your wife some real peace of mind. Here are some different options to look into that help you find a plan.

Already Covered?

For years, auto clubs like AAA were the only option drivers had when it came to roadside assistance, but today you have lots of choices. Most roadside assistance plans provide services like towing, flat-tire changes, jump-starting a battery, lost-key or lockout services, fuel delivery and help with stuck vehicles.

Before you start shopping for a roadside assistance plan, you first need to find out if you already have coverage, or have access to inexpensive coverage that you're not aware

For example, if you drive a vehicle that is still under warranty, there's a good chance you're already covered. Most auto manufacturers now include comprehensive roadside assistance coverage for free when you buy a new or certified used car. This typically lasts as long as the basic warranty, but not always. Be sure you check.

Also check your auto insurance provider, your credit card issuers and cell phone service providers. Many of these services provide different variations of roadside assistance as add-on plans that cost only a few dollars per

But be aware that many of these services are limited in what they cover. When investigating these options, find out the benefit details including: Who's covered (individuals and vehicles); how many roadside-assistance calls are allowed each year (three or four is typical); the average response time per service call; and the towing rules on where they will tow (to the nearest repair shop, or one that you choose) and how far (about 5 miles for basic plan is common, although some plans might cap the amount they pay for a tow at $100 or less).

Auto Clubs

If you find that you aren't covered, or you want a better roadside plan than what's currently available to you, you'll want to check out auto/motor clubs. Most of these clubs offer two or more levels of membership depending on how much roadside assistance you want and are willing to pay for, and they often provide a variety of discounts on things like hotels, rental cars and other services.

One of the best known and longest running clubs, AAA (aaa.com) offers comprehensive services and has an extensive network of more than 40,000 roadside assistance providers, which usually means fast response times. Costs vary widely from $48 to $162 per year depending on where you live and the plan you choose, plus an additional fee for adding a family member.

Some other clubs to consider that may be a little less expensive include Allstate Motor Club (allstatemotorclub. com); AARP Roadside Assistance (aarproadside.com) for AARP members only; Better World Club (betterworldclub. com); BP Motor Club (www.bpmotorclub.com); Good Sam (goodsamroadside.com); and GM Motor Club (gmmotorclub.com).

On-Demand Assistance

Another new money saving option to consider is pay-ondemand roadside assistance services like Urgently (urgent. ly) and Honk (honkforhelp.com). If you use a smartphone and live in their service area, these non-membership appbased services will let you call for help via smartphone, and will only charge you for the assistance you need at a

SATURN'S MOON ENCELADUS HOSTS A GLOBAL OCEAN

Every square inch of Saturn's small moon Enceladus overlies a potentially habitable ocean. Observations of Enceladus' slight wobble as it orbits Saturn can only be explained if the outer crust floats freely from the inner core, according to scientists studying images taken by NASA's Cassini spacecraft. This means there is a globespanning ocean beneath Enceladus' icy surface.

Enceladus has been a prime location for studying the potential for life in the solar system for the past decade, since Cassini found in 2006 a fine spray of water vapor, icy particles, and simple organic molecules erupting from fractures near Enceladus' south pole. Measurements of the saltiness of geyser particles in 2009 proved that they must emanate from a liquid reservoir, and a 2014 analysis of Enceladus' gravitational pull on the Cassini spacecraft demonstrated that the liquid reservoir is at least a regional sea underlying the entire south pole region. The new results—derived using an independent line of evidence based on Cassini's images—prove that that regional sea is a widening of a global ocean. This discovery is published online in the journal Icarus.

"This exciting discovery expands the region of habitability for Enceladus from just a regional sea under the south pole to all of Enceladus," said Matthew Tiscareno, a Cassini participating scientist at the SETI Institute, Mountain View, California, and a coauthor of the paper. "The global nature of the ocean likely tells us that it has been there for a long time, and is being maintained by robust global effects, which is also encouraging from the standpoint of habitability," he said.

The discovery was made through a combination of imaging, dynamical modeling, and statistical analysis. "This was a hard problem that required years of observations, and calculations involving a diverse collection of disciplines, but we are confident we finally got it right," said Peter Thomas, a Cassini imaging team member at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, and lead author of the paper.

Enceladus has a tiny, but measurable wobble as it orbits Saturn. The icy moon is not perfectly spherical, and because it goes slightly faster and slower during different parts of its orbit, Saturn pulls and pushes the small moon back and forth as

Tiscareno developed a series of dynamical models of this wobble, technically called a libration, and Thomas's group then tested each model against hundreds of Cassini images, taken of Enceladus' surface at different times and from different angles, to find the best fit to the observations with extreme precision. The team plugged their best-fit value for the wobble into different models for how Enceladus might be arranged on the inside, including ones where the moon was frozen from surface to core.

"If the surface and core were rigidly connected, from the core," he said.

the core would provide so much dead weight that Although a handful of worlds are now thought the wobble would be far smaller than we observe it to have subsurface oceans, Enceladus joins only to be," said Tiscareno, "This proves that there must be a global layer of liquid separating the surface as the destination of NASA's next flagship mission) in having an extraterrestrial ocean that is known to

One day I get a call out of the blue.

"Do you know anything about solar ovens?"

"I suppose so," I responded. "I've taught people how to make low-cost solar cookers for 20 or so years, and give the step-by-step process in my "How to Survive Anywhere" book." 'We're looking for a solar oven expert. Are you a solar oven expert?" asked the man on the phone. He identified himself as a producer with the Storage Wars show. This is a program where various individuals bid on the contents of storage units that the owners quit paying for. The show tracks each of the bidders to see what they get in the storage units. Sometimes they get junk, and sometimes they get some real interesting things. They hope that what they end up with is worth more than they bid on the

Have you ever seen the show," the man asked me.

"Nope, I've never even heard of it." The producer laughed.

"That's OK," he told me. "It sounds like you know about solar cookers." He went on to explain that one of the stars of the show purchased the contents of a storage unit, and has an object that is believed to be a solar cooker. "We want you to look at it, on film, and tell him what he purchased."

I explained to him that all of this could be done in about 10 minutes in my own backyard, but I was told that they wanted to do the segment in a more natural setting, preferably somewhere in the desert. We agreed on a day, and a man in a fast car picked me up one morning and whisked me out to the desert, beyond Palm Springs, in a very wild-seeming area.

The star of the show, Ivy, rides up in his SUV, and we meet and greet, and we set up the box he brought me. I'd never seen that particular solar oven before, but it was a top-of-the-line Australian solar oven called the Sun Cook solar oven. I opened it and showed Ivy how to use it, and we even put some eggs and sausage into a pan to cook.

It was overcast when we started, but then the sky cleared as Ivy and I did a short walkabout, looking at the desert plants.

When we came back, the breakfast was done and we feasted on some sun-cooked food.

The Storage Wars show focuses on the dollar value of the items so I had to give him a dollar figure of what I thought the oven was worth. It was not new, but I estimated it could probably fetch $450 at Ivy's secondhand store in the high desert, and $450 was a bit more than he paid for all the contents of the

It was an enjoyable day. If you want to view it, go to http://youtu.be/Y-3sG0azfBU. My segment comes in at 20:53.

SOLAR OVENS

Cooking with the sun is an ancient art. But modern solar ovens are quite another thing. At home, I have the American-made Sun Oven, which cooks about as fast as being on a gas oven if the day is hot and sunny. It easily gets up to 350 degrees f. temperature.

Simple low-cost solar ovens are easily made. I begin with a box that has a lid, such as the boxes where reams of paper are stored. I find a smaller box that goes into the bigger box, and I fill the space between the boxes with crumpled newspaper for insulation. I line the smaller inner box with tin foil, and then I cut a hole in the lid and secure a pane of glass to it. That's really all there is to it, and this low-cost solar cooker doesn't cook as quickly as a commercial model, but it still works well. able to get some help to find housing. The July heat did not deter her from making the 43-mile trip from the shelter where she was residing in Santa Monica to arrive at her destination, the 103-year old craftsman home at the corner of Los Robles Avenue and Claremont Street. Established in 1983, Journey House is a nonprofit organization whose sole purpose is to assist emancipated foster youth to meet their independent living needs.

Like thousands of former foster youth in California, at the ripe old age of 20, Destiny has the full responsibility for her shelter, food and other necessities of life. For her, there is no family to go to for support, financially or otherwise.

Her parents divorced when she was 10. She lived with her mother and grandparents, and as the oldest child in the home, she was given the responsibility of caring for her three younger cousins who were ages 13, 5 and 3 by the time Destiny was placed in kin-gap foster care right before her 16th birthday. School officials had grown suspicious after seeing signs of physical abuse, and when a social worker from Department of Children and Family Services was sent to investigate, one of the neighbors revealed that she had witnessed Destiny being abused by her mother.

Fortunately, Destiny had always loved school and was very motivated when it came to her schoolwork. After being placed in foster care, she maintained a rigorous schedule, rising at 4:30am to catch the bus from El Monte to Lincoln Heights. She immersed herself into volunteering and usually got back home at about 9pm. Her hard work paid off and she graduated high school with a 4.0 and at the age of 18, she struck out on her own, moving into a subsidized apartment for former foster youth that she shared with a roommate.

After living there a short time, she had gotten three jobs and was working 72 hours a week. She worked full-time at a law office Monday thru Friday, evenings at a Chinese restaurant till 11pm and a part-time on the graveyard shift at Target. She was on a mission, building up her savings to pay cash for her dream car at the time, a Honda. Before she had put away the full amount to purchase her car, she suffered the tragic loss of a loved one and used her savings to pay for the funeral.

With no savings left and no family members to help, Destiny is focused on stabilizing her living situation and income. Her goal is to complete the required training to become a linguistic translator, for the courts and the United Nations. She already has a head start as a multi-lingual person of Vietnamese and Chinese descent who speaks six languages (English, Spanish, Mandarin, Cantonese, Vietnamese and a dialect of Cambodian).

Destiny never imagined that she would be counted among the foster youth who would come knocking to request assistance after aging-out of the foster care system. She shared that she loves to help others, but it is hard for her to ask for help. But after coming to meet with Journey House staff to get information about the support and referrals they have for housing and educational support, she expresses a sentiment that is typical among former foster youth who seek help, "I didn't know this place existed. It feels like home, it's so welcoming."

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

I REALLY MEANT TO BEHAVE MYSELF...

I have never been in serious trouble except with the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage. I must have gotten in trouble with my parents when I was young, but I am too old now to remember that. The great thing about getting old is having a selective memory.

Now, the only trouble I get into is with her. And trust me; I have had my moments of trouble with her and can remember every one.

We were getting ready to visit our son and his family for a week. Four of our grandchildren live with my son and his wife.

Grandchildren are God's way of apologizing for children. When you have children, you are too young and busy to know what to do with them. At the grandfather stage, it is a different story altogether. I now have the experience and the time to spend with these grandchildren.

Half of my grandchildren live here in Florida and the other half lives in Ohio. It would be great if I could spend half of my time in Florida and the other half in Ohio, but nobody has bought into that suggestion, and by "nobody" I'm referencing my children.

Grandmothers have a positive influence on their grandchildren. Grandmothers teach the grandchildren many nice things. My wife always has a craft party when she gets together with the grandchildren. They are so excited to see her and so eager for the next craft she has prepared for them.

Therefore, it is always a great pleasure to set aside a week and spend with the grandchildren up in Ohio.

As we were packing to head for the airport to catch our plane for Ohio, my wife looked at me with one of "those looks," and said rather sternly, "Do you think you can behave yourself this time?"

Honestly, I am not sure what the phrase "behave yourself" really means. As far as I know, and my memory does not go back too far, I have never behaved like anybody else. After all, I am not an actor. I can "act up," but I cannot act.

I looked at her rather meekly, well, as meekly as I could look and said rather frankly, "I will behave like nobody else."

"No," she said, "you must promise me that you're going to behave yourself on this trip to Ohio.'

I remember another promise I made to her around 44 years ago when I said, "I do." That promise carried on for 44 years and now she wants another promise? Isn't one promise enough for her?

Then she said, "Do you remember the last time we were up in Ohio? Do you remember the trouble you got into then?"

I did, and it was difficult for me not to laugh out loud. I must confess I laughed on the inside, but was trying to "behave myself," whatever that meant.

The last time we were in Ohio, I took all the grandkids out for supper at a restaurant. It is always good to get together on neutral territory. Because, on neutral territory I can really behave like myself and no other.

We were in the middle of supper when casually I picked up my straw. Now, when I am at home my wife forbids me even to have a straw because she knows what a temptation a straw is for me.

However, these grandchildren needed to be instructed on the proper use of a straw. A straw is not just to drink your soda. It has other more ambitious

Casually, I put a little wad of paper in my straw; nonchalantly put the straw to my mouth and one little puff and that wad of paper hit one grandchild

At first, they did not know what had happened. I looked the other way as though I did not know what had happened. The grandchild said, "Who did this?"

good for the turmoil. I acknowledged it was me and immediately a very aggressive spitball fight ensued right there in the restaurant, no straws barred. After all, grandchildren need to know the level of fun a person can have, especially with a straw.

Confession may be good for the soul, but it is also

Glancing over at my wife at the time, I saw her glaring at me with one of "those looks" and I knew I was in trouble. Since I was already in trouble, it could not get any worse, so we exhilarated the spitball battle and by the time we were ready to leave, spitballs were all over the floor like snow on a winter day.

I think that was what my wife was thinking of when she asked me to remember the last time we were in

Looking at my wife, I smiled with one of those freaky little twinkles in my eye, and said, "I will behave just like myself and no other while in Ohio."

I'm not sure, Paul may have had this in mind when he wrote, "These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly: But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Timothy

I always mean to behave myself, but often there are too many other options.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

of President Obama's Clean

Before proceeding, cover up the next paragraph of this column. Don't read it – just put your hand over it. Now, given that Denver, Colorado is at a higher altitude than here, would water in Denver boil at a temperature higher, lower or the same as in L.A.? Give it some thought before moving on.

I had to give it some thought myself, and from somewhere remembered that water boils at a lower temperature where the air is thinner, as it is at higher altitudes like Denver's. Don't feel bad if you missed it - you're there with twothirds of Ámerican adults who didn't know the answer, either, when the question was included in a Pew Research survey assessing scientific knowledge. According to the results, when it comes to science, American adults get a barelypassing "D".

I was never really into science, but even in grade school learned some basic concepts; that stuff happens and people want to know how and why. This might lead to an idea and then, if and when experiments testing the idea are conclusive, that idea might be elevated to the level of a "hypothesis". From that stage, through further testing, peer review, elimination of alternative explanations and eventual acceptance among the scientific community that hypothesis might someday reach the lofty status of a "theory".

We learned that when Columbo comes onto a crime scene announcing, "I have a theory", the meaning of the word is different than when used in reference to the Gravitational Theory or the Theory of Electro-Magnetism. It drives me up the wall to hear folks dismiss evolution as "just" a theory, or who confuse faith, where you start with a conclusion and then seek supporting evidence, with science, which is the opposite observing evidence and then maybe reaching a conclusion based on those observations. Today I heard reference to presidential candidates who don't "accept" the science of human responsibility for climate change - as if it's a matter of personal preference, like whether one can "accept" wearing socks with sandals (my wife won't let me).

An ongoing shtick on KFI's John and Ken show has been lambasting Gov. Jerry Brown for tying California's current drought to climate change. Co-host John Kobylt cites a centuries-long drought beginning 850 AD, a time long before carbon-spewing industry and automobiles, as evidence such phenomena "just happen". In science, things don't "just" happen. In the case of the 850 drought, evidence points to possible causes including increased solar activity, fewer volcanic eruptions and a La Nina cooling of the tropical Pacific. But science doesn't hold that causes of droughts must behind it, or not. necessarily be the same.

"Republican doubters and Last month, a study in the journal defeatists - including every Geophysical Research Letters found that while Republican candidate for global warming isn't entirely responsible for president - won't offer any our drought, it is for a good 20% of it. While credible solution. The truth rainfall patterns come and go, our temperature is; they don't want one . increased 2.5 degrees over the past century -They refuse to accept enough to send more of that rain back to the sky through increased evaporation. Higher -Hillary Clinton, in support temperatures might well cancel out whatever benefits we might've gotten from increased rainfall, as droughts become increasingly severe. According to the study's lead author, though that 20% figure might seem small, global warming has increased the probability of future "extreme" droughts by 100%.

As for the rainfall, a study out of Stanford last year tied in this really intense high pressure area, or "blocking ridge", over the Pacific with global warming. Such high pressure areas block rainstorms we'd normally be getting, with the exceptional strength and resilience of this current one traced to greenhouse gasses and global warming; in particular to changes in trade winds caused by warming Arctic waters. Another Pew survey, this one from last year, finds that although 87% of scientists "accept" that human activity drives global warming, only half the American people do. More troubling was the fate of a Republican House resolution, 'affirming that human activity contributes to climate change and endorsing action to respond to the threat of Earth's changing climate." The resolution got all of ten (out of 246) House Republicans to sign on to it. So - among those who "accept" the science of global warming, we have 87% of scientists, 50% of the American people and 4% of House Republicans - and they're the ones making policy.

But, there are signs of progress. Ninetythree years after the Scopes Monkey Trial in neighboring Tennessee, as of next year evolution and climate change will, for the first time, become part of the required science curriculum in Alabama schools (though disclaimer stickers describing evolution as a "controversial theory" remain in textbooks, for the time being). Only 21% of Alabama 10th-graders currently reach national science testing standards.

Sometimes, it's not so much choosing whether to "accept" the science as it is willfully ignoring it. When asked on a recent California visit about ties between human activity and climate change, Republican candidate Dr. Ben Carson complained no one's ever shown him the "overwhelming science" to support the

In response, Gov. Jerry Brown sent Dr. Carson a flash drive containing the report of the U.N. Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, along with a letter stating it "assessed over 30,000 scientific papers and was written by more than 800 scientists, representing 80 countries around the world, who definitely concluded that '. . . human influence on the climate system is clear and growing, with impacts observed across all continents and oceans."

Gov. Brown reminded in his letter that "Climate change is much bigger than partisan politics". He warned that "These aren't just words. The consequences are real." It's true, whether we "accept" that reality, and the science

MICHAEL Reagan Making Sense

SCORING THE GREAT DEBATE

Making Sense by Michael Reagan I didn't watch CNN's telecast of the Republican debate because I was there in person. For some reason – maybe it was my last name

-- I was able to score three second-row seats at the Reagan Library for the two debates. More than 20 million people around the world tuned in, apparently making the three-hour debate CNN's highest rated show ever. It was a long night of politics and entertainment.

I just hope my fellow conservative Republicans watching on TV saw the same political reality show I did -- and learned some lessons. It's pretty clear to everyone from Joe Scarborough to the New York Times editorial board that the three big winners Wednesday night were Carly Fiorina, Chris Christie and Marco Rubio.

All three shined on stage when it came to substance, but Fiorina made herself a national household name overnight.

She was smart, tough, passionate and quick on her feet, proving why she deserves to be on the main stage. She had several big "moments" and demonstrated a phenomenal grasp of the issues.

Christie did well, connecting with voters, hitting several questions out of the park and reminding us why he was once a favorite in the 2016

Rubio still looks like he's in grad school, but he showed he's done his foreign policy homework and knows what makes America great. Meanwhile, the good doctor Ben Carson was a clear loser.

He offered virtually no specifics, had no "moments" and showed that while he's a nice guy and a great surgeon, the presidency is out of his

The biggest loser of the night was Trump, who was as awful in person as he reportedly appeared on mil-lions of split-screen TVs. He made crazy faces, offended people, refused to apologize when he should have, spoke in his usual platitudes and never said a substantive sentence. I heard more than a few groans and complaints from the Republicans sitting behind me. Most of the other candidates – the governors and others who were not there because of their celebrity – did OK. They didn't hurt themselves but they didn't stand out, either. Jeb Bush did better than last time, which isn't saying much, but he's in for the long haul. He'll do better when there are fewer candidates left and the debates turn more serious. Scott Walker did better too, though he seemed to disappear sometime late in hour two. Last time I re-member seeing him, he was staring at fiery Fiorina and nodding in agreement like a bobblehead. Ted Cruz was correct on all the issues, but he's not as likable as Rubio, whose only flaw is he still looks like he's in grad school. Mike Huckabee got in a lick or two, but he's still beating the drum for his Fair Tax, which everyone except him knows will never go anywhere.

Rand Paul was there, I think. So was Gov. John Kasich. Kasich was Kasich – solid and substantive. He's a winner who knows how to govern Ohio sensibly, but he probably should have been included in the preliminary debate with Rick Santorum, George Pataki, Bobby Jindal and Lindsey Graham. The opening debate, which Graham stole with his humor and GOP team spirit, was better in some ways because without the 2,000-pound celebrity in the room it was all substance.

I'm concerned about Trump for a lot of reasons. Yet for all the trouble he's causing the GOP, his celebri-ty presence is actually doing real conservatives a great favor.

He's already brought tens of millions of new eyeballs to the debate broadcasts that otherwise would never have been made aware of the existence of candidates like Fiorina or Kasich. I just hope those millions of viewers saw what I saw at the Reagan

Library - that Emperor Trump had no clothes on and most of the other real Republican candidates were well dressed.
