Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

"Rollin' On the River... Come paddle along! Adventure waits just around the bend." Sierra Madre's 2016 Rose Float

So there are these big pink flamingoes, see, watching Mr. Park Ranger with an intensity that only big pink flamingoes can generate, waiting for him to turn his back and get involved with an inquisitive tourist. The moment comes, they make a break for it, leap aboard their trusty umbrellas, start paddling with all their might... and end up gliding down Colorado Blvd. on New Year's Day. That's our story, as imagined by Richard Burrow, who submitted the winning float concept, and we're sticking to it!

Every year we think it's our best year ever, and this year, the Sierra Madre Rose Float Association has outdone themselves creating this flamingo masterpiece. The umbrellas rock back and forth, the flamingoes rear their pink heads high in the air, and four of the nicest, most well spoken, brightest young ladies we've met are riding along. We will be amazed when we see our float covered with at least 12,000 carnations in every shade of flamingo pink, over 5,000 light and dark iris, 10,000 lavender and white roses will create the river and splashes as our escaping flamingoes roll on down the river. Pine branches will form the base, lentils, coffee grounds, assorted seeds, peas and beans will form the umbrella handles and other earthy areas. Dried items, such as strawflowers, will fill the insides of the umbrellas where the flamingoes sit as they make their race to freedom. Let's just say it's going to be gorgeous and you will be so proud of our princesses, as they are stellar young women.

We visited the float barn the day our princesses were learning what to do in the unlikely case of a fire on the float. Between drills, I got to chat for a few minutes with each of our princesses, who will be beautifully dressed by Sarah and Arthur of Les Champs Elysees on Baldwin here in town.

Princess Emily Lopez, a senior at Alverno, plans to attend college on the east coast and will be majoring in biology with an eye toward a career in neonatology. And, yes, she's well aware that there will be heartbreak in that branch of medicine. Emily is a Sierra Madre resident, of course, as are the other three princesses. She's in the National Honors Society, plays softball, is in the book club and has visited Greece. Emily thought Greece was a beautiful place with all the white houses, the deep blue ocean, and a view of antiquity in practically every direction she looked. When asked how she liked the food, she got that far-away look of ecstatic remembrance and said she loved the food.

Princess Cameron Martinez, also a senior at Alverno, has her eye on Santa Clara, LMU or Stanford for college. She's planning a Political Science major leading to becoming an attorney. Cameron is active in sports, volleyball and softball, she's a reader, a writer, and enjoys travel. She has spent some time in France and went to the top of the Eiffel Tower, even though she's not all that fond of heights. But it was so worth it as the views from the top are beyond amazing. The gardens, the Seine, all of Paris in every direction. Cameron is ready to go back

Princess Katie Stapenhorst, a junior at Polytechnic, is giving thought to possible colleges, but it's too soon to be making serious decisions just yet. Katie enjoys meeting and talking to people and thinks she'd like a career where people skills would be important, possibly education or social services. And, she's on her school dance team. Katie has also spent some time in France where she was involved in a home study program, where French was spoken most of the time. In northern France, near Calais for part of her visit then in Paris. She loved the fact that everything is so accessible, thanks to the Paris Metro. And the bread! Ah the bread, the fresh baguette every day! She'd like to go back. Katie has been a float worker for several years and now she'll be riding, too.

Princess Kari Savoie, a junior at Flintridge-Sacred Heart Academy, is considering medical school as she wants a career where she will make a difference. She attended a week long camp at Irvine Medical Center where attendees shadowed doctors and nursing staff. Kari sees herself as a surgeon. She has been in synchronized skating for 8 years, figure skating for 11 years and is part of a 16 person team centered in Anaheim called The Iceka-Teeks. She and her team have competed around the country: Massachusetts, Michigan, Rhode Island, Colorado, and they are on track for international competition!

These delightful young women will be appearing at events around town in the next month: Kiwanis Club, Rotary, the British Home, the RV show at Santa Anita, the Kensington and, of course, before the City Council. They are charming, witty, bright and we can be immensely proud of them. Watch the Mountain Views News to see where you could meet them before the parade. "Rollin' On the River" is sure to be another prize winner in this year's Rose Parade!

According to Country Living, Sierra Madre is the only California city to make the list! "Where do Southern Californians go to get the Christmas spirit? Sierra Madre, a foothills town just a few miles east of Pasadena, imports snow from the San Bernadino Mountains every year to build a big snowman in the town's central square, Kersting Court, until the balmy local temperatures send him downstream. There's still plenty to see, with the town's houses and businesses decorated for the season, a life-size nativity scene....." ### MARIO ANTHONY LALLI 1923 - 2015

Operatic Tenor, mentor & entrepreneur Mario Anthony Lalli passed away peacefully at his home in Sierra Madre, CA on October 8th, 2015 at the age of 92. Mario was predeceased by his wife of 44 years, Edalyn Doris Lalli. Mario was born in Springfield, MA in 1923 to Italian immigrants Antonio Lalli and Giacinta Lalli. He was the youngest of four children, sister Dora Cummings (Lalli) and was predeceased by his two older brothers Tullio Lalli and Roland Mario's life was greatly centered around his passion for music, particularly the Opera. His love for music started very young. At 10 years old, he was a fixture at his uncle's record shop, listening to the great operatic composers as well as the popular Italian singers of of the era. As a teenager in Springfield, Mario began singing in the Mount Carmel Choir, where he was discovered by the Springfield opera company. He toured with the company and was featured in many local performances. Moving to New York in the late 40's to pursue his music career, Mario studied in a vocal program at the Juilliard conservatory and eventually toured in a New York based opera company. In 1950, the talented tenor was a winner on the famous CBS Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts Radio show, sharing the honor with such stars as comedian Lenny Bruce.

In 1952 at age 28, he partnered with his brother Tullio Lalli and fellow singer Tish Klongia, and headed to the burgeoning ski resort of Aspen, CO with the dream of opening a restaurant that featured live entertainment. "Mario's, Where They Sing While You Dine" was such a success it would last another 60 years. The restaurant concept would open 13 locations over the years, where Mario and his wife Edalyn would sing six nights a week, entertaining diners in Denver CO, Palm Springs CA, San Diego CA, Newport Beach CA, Palm Desert CA, Ranch Mirage ĈA, La Quinta CA, Pasadena CA, and finally in Sierra Madre CA, where Mario at the age of 88 years old was still a featured performer, often singing duets with his 17-year old granddaughter, Olive Lalli. In addition to his entrepreneurial endeavours and vocal talents, Mario was a mentor, offering guidance, financial support and opportunity to many singers and musicians over the years. Traveling to Opera houses all over the US Arcadia, CA 91008 and Europe with his wife Edalyn every summer was something he loved, as well as golfing. Every day off you could find Mario and his brothers on the golf course. Mario Lalli and the restaurants he created were featured in the documentary film "Sing Your Own Song" by director Anne O'Neal.

Mario spent the last 15 years in the Pasadena CA area, living with his son's family. He is survived by his son, Mario Enrico Lalli , daughter-in-law Illiana Lalli and his grandchildren Dino Von Lalli and Olive Zoe Lalli; sister Dora Cummings, stepdaughter Sharie Harmon & family, stepson Edward Burger & family, as well as dear friend and partner Estrella Formoe.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO CIRCULATE PETITION California Elections Code § 9202 – PROHIBITION ON ALTERNATIVE

LAW ENFORCEMENT SERVICE PROVIDERS

Notice is hereby given by the persons whose names appear hereon of their intention to circulate the petition within the City of Sierra Madre for the purpose of prohibiting the City from utilizing alternative law enforcement service providers for general police services, absent voter approval. A statement of the reasons of the proposed action as contemplated in the

The residents of Sierra Madre declare that the City's top priority is to provide the best level of public safety service possible. To obtain such level of service, upon passage of this measure and thereafter, the City of Sierra Madre shall maintain its own Police Department. Contracting with alternative law enforcement service providers often results in a lack of accountability by the contracting agency and lack of oversight regarding police-related matters. Additionally, officers from a contract agency do not have the same understanding of community concerns and issues as police officers employed and trained by the City. In order to ensure minimum service levels, accountability, and a police force that is aware of community needs, the citizens of Sierra Madre desire to maintain their own police force, rather than to contract with an alternative law enforcement service provider.

> Proponents: Stephanie Coyne of Sierra Madre, CA, 91024; Shinji Nakagama of Sierra Madre, CA, 91024.

BALLOT TITLE AND SUMMARY

The city attorney has prepared the following title and summary of the chief purposes and points of the proposed measure:

PROHIBITION OF ALTERNATE LAW ENFORCEM ENT SERVICE PROVIDERS

This initiative is submitted by the Sierra Madre Police Officers Association to prohibit the City of Sierra Madre from contracting for general police services without prior voter approval. Simple majority voter approval is required for approval of this proposed ballot measure.

Background. The City of Sierra Madre operates its own police department, with 20 full-time members, including the Chief of Police, one Police Captain, four Sergeants, one Corporal, nine Police Officers and several part time employees and volunteers. The present cost to fund the Police Department is $3,887,798 according to the City's 2015-2016 adopted budget, which is paid from the City's general fund. The City has lost more than $500,000 in general fund revenues through the "sunset" of its Utility Users Tax (UUT) from 10% to 8%; with an anticipated further reduction to 6% on July 1, 2016 for a total anticipated reduction of $994,474, according to the October 13, 2015 City staff report. Public safety represents the largest cost of general fund resources, and with the projected loss of $994,474 in general fund revenues, the City's cost of providing general fund services, including public safety, is challenged. While the City may seek to increase its revenues (including asking the voters to approve an increased UUT), the City is simultaneously studying options to cut its general fund costs, which may impact services. One of the options which is being studied is whether to contract for police services through the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

Measure: This initiative seeks to prohibit the City of Sierra Madre from contracting out its Police Department to any public or private entity, including the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department. The initiative does not preclude agreements for specialized police services to enhance the in-house Police Department or shared police services, such as mutual aid agreements. The initiative does not mandate any particular level of services or Police staffing to be maintained within the City's Police Department.

The initiative provides that if the City contracts out the City's Police Department prior to passage of this measure, resulting in the lay-off of any City police employees, that all laid-off police employees shall be reinstated. The measure does not specify what would happen to any City contract for police services from another agency in the event of reinstatement of

The initiative provides that it may not be a mended or repealed except by another initiative approved by the voters. Additionally, the initiative provides that any person bringing an action to enforce this initiative shall recover reasonable attorneys' fees against the City, upon prevailing in the enforce action.

A LETTER FROM CAROLYN THOMAS

Dear Friends,

As all of you know, I will be retiring on December 10 this year. It is time for me to spend time with my family, my own community, and to pursue some interests (including catching up on my reading!). This is a gem of a library, and all of you work your hearts out to make it so! I deeply appreciate your efforts and your commitment to library services - it is a tall order these days, but I think a defin-ing and purposeful one. Library service has brought great meaning and joy to my life and I wish the very best library services for this community.

The hard part for me is leaving all the folks I have met and worked with these past four years. There are so many nice people in Sierra Madre; I like all of you and your children. This has been a great town to work in and one that shows a lot of love for the library.

Sierra Madre Public Library has a sense of place in the community. We are located on the original lot of the library that was built in 1887. Then, 40 families formed a Library Association and provided funding for 23 years. By 1910, the City assumed responsibility for managing and maintaining the library. Sierra Madre has been offering library services for 128 years. Our collections are unique with the archives, art collection, California collection, rare books, maps, media, eBooks, and all of the newer materials. Our patrons get free Wi-Fi, free pro-grams, a quiet, secure place to read, and really friendly staff. All of you, through your efforts, support these services and help make the library a real treasure. I am thankful that Sierra Madre is a community of readers, that we are currently launching an effort to update (not replace or rebuild) the facility, and we are adopting some (not all) of the new technologies. The latter is important, as the children growing up here need to know how to use these new resources. It is my hope that you continue to use the library, discover its resources, take care of the facility, and try, just try some of the new technologies we are offering. It has been my pleasure to meet and work with you and I hope to see you from time to time.

At first, Dad and I didn't see eye to eye about moving to The Kensington, but ever since he did, we've both been thrilled

f you were to ask my Dad before he moved to The Kensington why he should, he'd have assured you that everything was fine—that there was no need. However, I didn't see things the same way. Sure, my Dad had enjoyed a wonderful life with his wife in their home. But for the last few years, he'd been caring for her while she was terminally ill. Once she died, he was lonely and sad living by himself. It broke my heart. I understood that leaving memories behind would be hard, but when The Kensington came to Sierra Madre, I got excited for both of us. It took some persuasion to get my Dad to move. Finally, he did! Now, he is joking around again. New friends and lots to do have made him incredibly happy. Thanks to The Kensington, I have my Dad back.

SWAT Takes Parolee Into Custody After Standoff

Police on Wednesday said that a situation in which SWAT and Crisis Negotiations Teams responded to a residence near the 210 freeway after a parolee ran from police and barricaded himself in a family home was not related to the San Bernardino mass shooting as had been reported earlier in the day.

According to police, at approximately 11:00 a.m Pasadena police officers attempted to arrest 21 year old Daylon Camp of Pasadena, who had an outstanding arrest warrant for burglary. The suspect fled from his parked vehicle and ran inside his father's residence located in the 400 block of N. Raymond Officers established a perimeter at the residence in order to contain the suspect and attempted to gain compliance to exit his father's home. When he refused, police evacuated the immediate residences surrounding the suspect's father's residence and the department's SWAT and Crisis Negotiations Teams responded to the location.

At approximately 1:21 p.m., the suspect peacefully surrendered to officers and was taken into custody.

On Thursday, President Obama, made a statement saying the motive was still unclear in the shooting around 11 a.m. at a party in the Inland Regional Center killing 14 people and injuring 21. Suspected shooters Syed Rizwan Farook and Tashfeen Malik were later killed after a car chase later that afternoon.

At press time authorities were still looking for a possible third suspect. Obama said the act could have been terrorism or possibly workplace related.

THE REEL DEAL: by Ben Show MOCKINGJAY: PART TWO REVIEW

'Hunger Games' marked the beginning of a new fad of a movie genre: postapocalyptic teen romance. The first film was a good starting point, and 'Catching Fire' was perhaps the best entry in the franchise, but by the time 'Mockingjay - Part One' rolled around, the whole post-apocalyptic romance genre had been done to death. 'Divergent' and 'Maze Runner' we're both getting started, and 'Mockingjay - Part One' was a dramatic deviation from the other 'Hunger Games' films in that the theme and focus of the franchise was changed. Since both parts of 'Mockingjay' were made at the same time, Part Two may share many of the themes that caused people to dislike Part One so much. Does Part Two end the franchise on a high note or should 'Mockingjay' just have been one movie instead of two?

Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) is on a war path with President Snow (Donald Sutherland). She must find some way to defeat him and help the people of Panem free themselves from his tyranny. As she and a team of soldiers work their way through the Capitol, she begins to question the intentions of Alma Coin (Julianne Moore) and who should become the new leader of Panem.

Part Two is a completely continuation of Part Two; the two really could just be one long film. The first films in the franchise really drew people's attention with the actual Hunger Games themselves, the disgusting political commentary they provided, and the fact that the films did make them massive, action-packed spectacles. Neither 'Mockingjay - Part One' or 'Part Two' have the Games in them; the focus of the franchise changed from the Games to the world around them and all the characters and their stories. 'Part Two' certainly has more action than 'Part One'; however, if you are not invested in the story of Panem, its people, and how Katniss can change their future for the better, then 'Part Two' will be very boring. 'Part Two' is worth seeing if you have read the books already and know what to expect, or if you have watched the franchise so far and genuinely care about the characters, not just the Hun-

PLAY NICE, KITTY!

I have a new furry, four-legged feline friend named Kingsley. He is a mere 5 months old and he is undoubtedly one of the most adorable kittens I have ever met. (As you can clearly see in the photo). Kingsley loves to spend time with his humans, Jeff and Meagan; he eats more like a full grown lion than the tiny kitten that he is; and oh boy, does he love to play!

After spending a few days taking care of Kingsley while his people were away, they asked if I had any ideas on how to get him to stop biting while playing and I had to admit I didn't. Later, I looked up techniques on training a kitten not to bite during play and I found an article by the Humane Society of the United States. The tips they offered seemed to make practical sense, so I decided to share them in this week's column. Credit goes to the HSUS website for this insightful, hopefully helpful information. Happy training and best of luck!

Learning to Play Nice

A kitten's first playmates are his mother and siblings, and from them he learns how to inhibit his bite. A kitten who is separated from his family too early may not have learned that lesson well enough and doesn't know when to stop. Acceptable behavior can quickly escalate. If you use your hands and/or feet instead of toys to play with a young kitten, he may learn that rough play is okay. In most cases, it's not too difficult to teach your kitten that rough play isn't acceptable.

If playing with your kitten evolves from peek-a-boo to professional wrestling in a matter of seconds, follow these tips to keep playtime interesting and reduce the number of trips to the first-aid kit.

Don't let your kitten play with your hands or feet (or any other body part). This sends the wrong message.

Use a toy when playing. Drag a toy, preferably a fishing pole-type toy that keeps your hands from kitty's mouth and claws, along the floor to encourage your kitten to pounce on it, or throw a toy for him to chase. Some kittens will even bring the tow back to be thrown again.

Give your kitten something to wrestle with, like a soft stuffed animal that's about his size, so he can grab it with both front feet, bit it, and kick it with his back feet. This is one of the ways kittens play with each other, especially when they're young. It's also one of the ways they try to play with human feet and hands, so it's important to provide this type of alternative play target.

Éncourage play with a "wrestling toy" by rubbing it against your kitten's belly when he wants to play roughly-and be sure to get your hand out of the way as soon as he accepts the toy.

Don't hit or yell at your kitten when he nips or pounces. This will only make him fearful of you and he may start to avoid you. The idea is to train him, not

Discouraging "Bad" Behavior

Playing is not bad behavior, but you do have to set the rules for your kitten; no biting. Everyone in the household has to be on the same page, too; your kitten can't be expected to learn that it's okay to play rough with dad but not with the baby. First equip yourself with the right training tools: toys, toys, toys, and a water pistol.

A Gnawing Problem: You shouldn't let your kitten play with your body parts, but if you're petting him and he starts gnawing on you, immediately for gnawing. Don't try to pet him again until he's tuckered out and no longer tempted to "kill" your hand. You can also make your hands unattractive by putting a bad-tasting, harmless substance on them such as Bitter Apple or Tabasco sauce. Most kittens catch on quickly.

Gimmie That!: Kittens always seem to want to play with whatever you're using-knitting needles, pencil, telephone, remote control. If yours starts "attacking" our utensils, sharply say "uh-uh" to disrupt his behavior. Then give him one of his own toys. Be sure he's not attacking when you give him a toy or he'll hink he's being rewarded.

On the Hunt: Kittens also like to "hunt" you while you're walking around. They'll jump out from behind a door or under a chair and pounce on your ankles. If he doesn't pounce, praise him with "Good kitty". If he does pounce, use your sharp "uh-uh" to distract him and interrupt his behavior, and offer an acceptable toy. Be sure he's not pouncing when you provide the toy or he'll think he's being rewarded.

Pay no Attention: Withdraw attention when your kitten doesn't get the message. If the distraction and redirection techniques don't work, the most drastic thing you can do to discourage rough play is withdraw all attention. The best way to do this is walk to another room and close the door long enough for him to calm down. If you pick him up to put him in another room, then you're rewarding him by touching him, so you should be the one to leave the room.

Remember, your kitten wants to play with you, not just toys, so be sure to set aside time for regular, serious and safe play sessions.

Surely, everyone is not meant to teach yoga. More and more students are taking a foundational 200hr yoga teacher training for HEALING. The whole experience envokes healing and growth in all areas of life. Yoga is an ancient practice nurturing body, mind and spirit. The practices are vast and not all are appropriate for group classes. It's in the trainings that students (and health professionals) gain valuable knowledge and vital, deeper practices of yoga. For some, the immersion into the deeper teachings of yoga unveils a missing link deepen within. Joy and inner radiance are brought forward in a unique way. Do you I have you intrigued?

Here are just a few reasons why a yoga teacher training may be right for you:

1. You have been a consistent student of yoga for a while and are ready to expand your practice---and your toolbox! Tools for living joyfully in the world with the rich tradition of practices.

2. You're ready to boost your confidence and yoga creativity. It may seem like facing fear is the opposite of what you'd like to do, but that's where confidence is fostered! We accomplish what we thought we could not. Tapping into our skills of innovation and resourcefulness is key.

3. Do you need a change in your life? If the student allows it to happen, the dynamic personal transformation can be quite profound. Many health professionals join the trainings. They only increase their skills to provide to clients, but they come better service providers to the people they care for.

There are many trainings available and some may not be right for every student. It's best to do some investigating. For the sixth year, Yoga Madre is offering it's 200 hr foundational Yoga Teacher Training. Next session begins January 15, 2016. Inquire now and see if it might be the right time for

ACUPUNCTURE AND BACK PAIN

What is back pain?

Back pain is one of the most common reasons people seek medical attention. It is one of the most frequent causes of missed workdays and one of the most expensive conditions in the United States

Back problems can be caused by an inordinately wide range of problems. It can exist alone, or it can be caused by a condition that occurs elsewhere in the body, with the pain being transmitted (referred) to areas of the back by the nervous system. The majority of backache sufferers complain of pain in the lower back; the second most common site of discomfort is the base of the neck.

Who suffers from back pain?

The fact that humans walk upright puts great pressure on the spine and the muscles that support it. Over time, factors such as disease, accidents, poor posture and overexertion can lead to immediate and/or long-term back problems.

Most back pain is muscular in nature. In the pain cycle, pain causes a muscle to spasm, which may distort the discs, joints and nerves of the spine. This spasm leads to further pain, leading to further spasm, which compounds the original problem. If the nerves are irritated enough, it may cause experienced via a herniated disc.

What can acupuncture do?

Acupuncture can play an important role in the reduction or elimination of back pain by reducing recovery time and preventing a chronic condition from developing.

Research has shown that acupuncture causes the body to produce natural steroids and promote the production of natural endorphins. Steroids decrease inflammation, while endorphins are produced by the body to kill pain. Both substances can play an integral part in the breaking up of the pain cycle.

By reducing acute back pain, acupuncture may also reduce the chances of chronic back pain from occurring. It can help avoid the need for costlier and more invasive surgical procedures. And if back pain can be significantly reduced with acupuncture, it also lowers the need for painkillers or other medications that can either cause unwanted sideeffects or prolong a patient's condition.

As with any other form of care, however, remember that not all patients will respond to acupuncture. Make sure to discuss the situation thoroughly with your acupuncturist before undergoing treatment for back pain (or any other condition).

Many parents confuse the kind of responsible that provides real peace and true security, which I'll speak to in a moment, with the dictionary definition of responsible, which is more of obligation or duty.

Responsibility based in obligation or duty is not nearly as deep or as powerful as responsibility based on inspiration and internal motivation.

True responsibility actually means less about your children's ability to live up to their obligations, hold down a job in the same way you did, or even re-create the lifestyle you've been able to provide for them (though all those things would, of course, be great), and more about your children being able "to be trusted to do what is right."

Over the rest of this series, I'll look at several different examples of what this means in various contexts, including money, relationship, and

I'm looking forward to exploring this with you as we all strive for the true peace of mind and security that comes with raising responsible

HOW TO RAISE RESPONSIBLE KIDS

My guess is that if we did a poll of every parent we know and asked them what they most want for their children, what we would find at the core is that we all want to raise responsible kids.

We may each have a different definition of what responsible means, but after working with many families to plan for the children's future, I can say with confidence that raising a responsible child is a hallmark of success for most parents.

Once your child becomes seen and known as responsible, your level of freedom and ease increases substantially.

In service to that, I will be sharing with you a series of articles on How to Raise Responsible Kids, starting with this one.

The first step in raising responsible kids, means truly understanding the meaning of the word "responsible", so we'll start there.

The classic dictionary definition of responsible is not really what I am speaking of here.

One dictionary definition of responsible is: "having an obligation to do something, or having

HOW MUCH YOU'LL PAY FOR MEDICARE IN 2016

Dear Savvy Senior:

I know there won't be a cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits next year but what about Medicare? I've heard some beneficiaries will get hit with a big Part B monthly premium increase in 2016. What can you tell me, and who will this affect?

Planning Ahead

Dear Planning:

All things considered, the news regarding your Medicare costs next year is pretty good. For about 70 percent of the nation's 52 million Medicare beneficiaries, there will be no Part B premium increase in 2016. And thanks to the 2015 Bipartisan Budget Act that was signed into law by President Obama on Nov. 2, the other 30 percent will pay much less than previously projected. Here's what you can expect.

Part B Premiums

Because the Social Security Administration will not be giving out a cost of living increase (or COLA) in 2016, the Medicare Part B premiums for most current beneficiaries will not go up either. Thanks Deductibles and Co-Pays to the "hold harmless" provision in the Medicare law, which prohibits Part B premiums from rising in any year that there's no COLA, the 2016 monthly premium will remain at $104.90 for most current Medicare participants.

However, this provision does not protect new Medicare enrollees (those who enroll in 2016), beneficiaries who are directly billed for their Part B premium, or current beneficiaries who have deferred claiming their Social Security. This includes people 65 or older who are still working but have signed up for Medicare because their employer doesn't offer health insurance. It also hits people who have filed and suspended Social Security benefits to allow a spouse to claim.

If you fit into any of these categories, your Medicare Part B premium will increase to $121.80 a month in 2016 - which is much lower than the $159.30 that it would have been, had the budget deal fell through.

The hold-harmless rule also does not protect high-income Medicare beneficiaries who already pay higher Part B premiums because their annual incomes are above $85,000 for an individual or $170,000 for a couple. If you fit into this category, here's what you'll pay for your Part B premium next year, based on your 2014 tax returns.

Individuals with incomes of $85,000 to $107,000, or married couples filing joint tax returns with incomes of $170,000 to $214,000, will pay $170.50 per month.

Individuals earning $107,000 to $160,000 (couples $214,000 to $320,000) will pay $243.60.

Individuals with incomes of $160,000 to $214,000 (couples $320,000 to $428,000) will pay $316.70. Individuals over $214,000 or couples above $428,000 will pay $389.80.

Another increase high-income beneficiaries (those with incomes over $85,000, or $170,000 for joint filers) need to be aware of is the surcharge on Part D premiums. Affluent seniors that have a Medicare Part D prescription drug plan will pay an additional $12.70 to $72.90 per month, depending on their income, on top of their regular Part D

Other changes you need to know about that will affect all Medicare beneficiaries include the Part B deductible, which will increase to $166 in 2016 (it's currently $147); and the Part A (hospital insurance) annual deductible which will go up to $1,288 (it's currently $1,260) for hospital stays up to 60 days. That increases to $322 per day for days 61-90, and to $644 a day for days 91 and beyond. And the skilled nursing facility coinsurance for days 21-100 will also increase to $161 per day (it's currently

TIPPING ANOTHER VIEW

My dearly departed pappy Elmer Dills would tell me, don't argue sex, politics and or religion, I must add tipping to the list. I have used this topic many times on my radio show, Dining with Dills on KLAA AM 830 to get the phones buzzing. Just got back from Santa Barbara and I was put into this situation. The owner of the restaurant we were at was kind enough to act as our server as his bar was very busy, the bottle was $50, my question is do you tip the owner of the restaurant... In this case we did because it was my feeling he was going to pass it along to the help. A couple of notes from my dads tipping guide. Let's call them my father's rule of thumb was 10% for a buffet and couple of extra dollars to the busboy and never tip the full amount on an expensive bottle of wine, he thought was it takes up the same amount of energy to open a $25 bottle of wine that of a $200 bottle of wine. Makes sense to me.

What made me scratch my head is a recent posting by what seems to be a very capable blogger/ that is someone that posts on the Internet. This was a list of nine recommendations to us uninformed diners on how to tip in the year 2016, of course it might be a little biased coming from a person that works for tips, going through the list I agreed with the concept, $1 per drink at the bar as the tip, if you are using a coupon or getting part or whole of your meal comped, you should tip on what the amount should be, agree and agreed, but here is where the scratching took place.

Times have changed, (ok I am with you), and a 15 % tip is now should be considered a bad tip, I am reading it as if you received bad service please tip 15 % or that your server gave great service and 15% is an insult. The reasoning continues to say that with the cost of living going up, that to be a server that 15% doesn't cut it anymore. Here is my argument against that thought process. As a professional person such as a waiter, indeed you will not get a raise from the owner of the restaurant, it is set in stone and is a timeless practice, the job pays minimum wage plus tips. Not the end of story though, many restaurants will pay $2 more an hour to the "training" waiter or the headwaiter. As your experience grows and you become better, it would make sense that your tips as a percentage would grow accordingly. Tips... To insure proper service. Here is my rundown and no it hasn't changed in twenty years of reviewing restaurants.

Anyone in any country that provides a service should be rewarded.

10% buffet plus $2 directly to busboy that brought you water and had to clean up after the kids through Jell-O on the ground.

$1 for each drink at the bar

$2 for a to go order, as long as they got it right 12% fair service, means they brought you the food and came back with your check

15% Good service brought you your food and drinks and refilled drinks and asked how was it 18% Very Good service all of the above plus asked you if your meal was prepared to your liking 20-25% All of the above, brought items in proper order, waited for you to ask for check, asked if there is a validation needed and please ask for me next time.

One more note... I subtract 5% when the server blames the kitchen for a mistake, got it!!

This a fun conversation please watch my TV Show Straight off the Menu at 3 PM on Charter 188. Saturday and Sundays of like a Thanksgiving meal. You know exactly what you're getting, but it's still one of your favorite meals of the year. CREED is the brand new film in the ROCKY series, which debuted 39 years ago. However, it's the first ROCKY film not to center on its titular character. In fact, it's the first film in the series that wasn't written by Sylvester Stallone himself. This time around, cowriter/director Ryan Coogler, who helmed the terrific FRUITVALE STATION in 2013, sent his dream script to Stallone. He was so impressed by it that he took it to the original studio that made his classic first film. The movie shifts gears as it focuses on Adonis Johnson, the son of Rocky's late friend and former rival Apollo Creed. Michael B. Jordan (FANTASTIC FOUR, FRUITVALE STATION) plays Adonis, a twenty-something year-old man who never knew his father. He wants to follow in his father's footsteps, but he wants to make his own legacy by not adopting his father's last name. He travels from Los Angeles to Philadelphia to become a fighter in the hopes to seek mentoring in none other than Rocky Balboa himself. Balboa refuses to help the novice boxer because that particular time in his own life has past, but Adonis remains persistent. Ultimately, Balboa reconsiders to help the son of his former comrade.

By Sean Kayden

Yes, there are the very familiar scenes where the older and wiser mentor trains the amateur fighter, but they're portrayed with such authenticity and precision. Frankly, Stallone hasn't been this good in awhile and despite everyone familiar with the Rocky character, he brings new life to the aging, out of touch with reality, former boxing champ. He chieves sixth and life. to the battered character that just exists through life in the distant background as everyone he's ever loved has passed on. There are some wonderful scenes with Stallone and Michael B. Jordan that are emotionally inspiration and heart, drama and action, friendship

Speaking of Jordan, the young, but already seasoned thespian, is absolutely terrific in this role. He plays Grade: 4.5 out of 5

EED, which debuted last holiday weekend, is kind the character of an ambitious and perceptive aspiring boxer convincingly. Adonis is the illegitimate son of Apollo, but Apollo's first wife adopts the young Adonis when he was 8 years from a juvenile delinquent center. He always believed his father didn't want him, but that wasn't entirely true (since he died when he was just a baby). Adonis is adamant about not exercising the name Creed while trying to make a name for himself. However, it's the name Creed that everyone in Philadelphia knows and admires and there's no hiding from it. CREED is a stellar film which goes beyond any expectations one could ever have for another Rocky movie or even simply a boxing drama in general. Cinematographer Maryse Alberti shoots the boxing sequences brilliantly. Often times in the fight scenes for boxing films, multiple cameras are used, but in CREED on numerous occasions only one camera is used with just a single take. It's an amazing feat to say the least and comes off as some of the most realistic fight scenes in any movie. The conclusion CREED is deeply satisfying and doesn't go off the rails in the slightest (which tends to be easy for sports drama). As a whole, CREED is indisputably a knockout. # On the Marquee: Notes from the Sierra Madre Playhouse

A SEASON OF GIVING

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

This has been a remarkable year for the Playhouse – perhaps in the future we'll look back on 2015 and see that it was the year which started a new era. We had wonderful critical successes – many of our shows landed on "Best of" lists and we received two Ovation Recommends for our productions of A Walk in the Woods and Always...Patsy Cline and two of the leads from those shows went on to be nominated for their performances (our first nominations ever!)

We increased our attendance by 30% over the year and most wonderfully 37% of that number were patrons who had never attended our theater before.

We have established wonderful relationships with local businesses in Sierra Madre, the Rotary, the Kiwanis, the Women's Club, the Historical Society, the library and so many more. All as part of our commitment to be a theater "of" its community.

We launched our Advisory Council which is helping us make important decisions about our future growth and we've increased the size of our Board in anticipation of creating a new Strategic Plan in

And we have increased our donor base to help us achieve many of the long-term goals we've defined with many gifts given in honor of what we are doing at the Playhouse. What this tells me is that audiences are liking what we are doing and appreciate having SMP in their community. We received the largest gift in our history from a private family foundation earmarked for two initiatives: our Field Trip Series play Charlotte's Web and an electrical upgrade of our building. This generous donation is allowing us to offer the play at a greatly reduced price for public schools - we have practically soldout our run already - we'll be offering shows on the weekends for families and fans of Charlotte! And the electrical upgrade will allow us to use our stage lights more efficiently and creatively.

We received a Matching Grant from the Sierra Madre Community Foundation for the installation of air conditioning in our lobby. Those of you who sweated through Always...Patsy Cline this summer will appreciate how badly we need to have a/c in our lobby. We are mailing an appeal to our supporters to help us maximize the dollar for dollar matching grant - I hope when you receive the appeal you will choose to support SMP. Please mark your donation "matching grant." I always say that my goal is to make us a cultural landmark of the San Gabriel Valley and with your help we'll get there. We have so many more things we hope to do in 2016.

and you'd still ask how it changed the world. Renaissance was no event but an age that triggered the cultural rebirth of Europe after it was struck by the destruction caused by the Black Death. Columbus and Vasco da Gama changed the World maps intended to look with new civilizations to offer. Books were printed and no more the educated were from the church, the common man had just as much to read as the priests and monks. It was not a cultural change but a breakthrough that made the conservative orthodox Europe adapt to the more logical ways of the world.

The discovery of Penicillin as an antibiotic still remains as one of the greatest of all medical discoveries. It has cut down the human mortality rate by large figures. Not just health, but the discovery led to a series of other discoveries which have impacted human life. Then we have the discovery of vaccination by Louis Pasteur, which again changed the kind of life we enjoy today. There was a time, when a small cut would have killed a man, or diseases like smallpox were regarded as the ultimate form of divine punishment for the evilwould perhaps have long gone into extinction!

Jefferson acquired thousands of books for his library at Monticello. Jefferson's library went through several stages, but it was always critically important to him. Books provided the little traveled Jefferson with a broader knowledge of the contemporary and ancient worlds than most contemporaries of broader personal experience. By 1814 when the British burned the nation's Capitol and the Library of Congress, Jefferson had acquired the largest personal collection of books in the United States. Jefferson offered to sell his library to Congress as a replacement for the collection destroyed by the British during the War of 1812. Some sharp debates occurred in Congress about the wisdom of purchasing Jefferson's library as a replacement for the nearly destroyed contents of the Library . They were particularly concerned that there were large numbers of books in foreign languages and other subjects not believed germane for the use of Congress. Congress finally purchased Jefferson's library for $23,950 in 1815. A second doers. # COULD LIFE EXIST ON OTHER PLANETS?

Perhaps with a Little Help from Planetary Neighbors

Life on other planets? A recent study by University of Nevada Las Vegas astrophysicist Jason Steffen is shedding new light on this persistently challenging

In our galaxy, there may be billions of planetary systems where more than one planet is habitable. NASA's Kepler spacecraft has found planet pairs on very similar orbits—with orbital distances differing by as little as 10 percent. If such a planet pairing occurred in the right place, then both planets could sustain life—and even help each other along.

Steffen and research partner Gongjie Li from the Harvard Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics studied some of the ramifications for life in these multihabitable systems.

"It's pretty intriguing to imagine a system where you have two Earth-like planets orbiting right next to each other," said Steffen. "If some of these systems we've seen with Kepler were scaled up to the size of the Earth's orbit, then the two planets would only be one-tenth of one astronomical unit apart at their closest approach. That's only 40 times the distance to the Moon."

With planets so close together, a number of interesting processes become important. For one, the seasons on the Earth, and the Earth's climate in general, depend upon its "obliquity," or the 23.5-degree tilt of the Earth's axis relative to its orbit. A change of only a few degrees could cause a permanent ice age. If two planets on neighboring orbits caused large changes in each other's obliquities, then their climates would not

"We found that the obliquities of the planets in multihabitable systems were not really affected by their close orbits," said Li. "Only in rare instances would their climates be altered in dramatic ways. Otherwise, their behavior was similar to the planets in the solar system."

Another process that the scientists investigated was lithopanspermia—the means by which lifebearing material on one planet can be ejected by meteor impacts and delivered to the surface of another planet. For example, on the Earth between two planets in a multihabitable system.

simultaneously on two different planets," Steffen noted. "Systems like those that we investigated, and moon systems orbiting a habitable-zone giant planet, are among the few scenarios where life—intelligent life in particular—could exist in two places at the same time and in the same system."

Despite the challenges that life may have in MtnViewsNews.com.

"Multihabitable systems could have a developing on a planet, it appears that the presence microbial family tree with roots and branches of a nearby companion in the struggle may help. "At least the climate isn't likely to be any worse in multihabitable systems, and the possibility of two planets sharing the biological burden could help the system traverse the inevitable rough times, Steffen said.

Reliance.com, or Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CA 90041] It's always best to plan ahead. Carry essential gear, since you never know when you'll need it: knife, firestarter, water, cordage – that sort of thing. Obviously, you also need some sort of pack. Still, sometimes it happens – you just don't have what you need when you need it. Then you have to get creative, and find some makeshift solutions. In the case of a day pack, did you know that you can take a pair of pants, or a sweatshirt, or even a button-up shirt and turn it into a day pack?

It's really simple, and all you'll need is some rope or

Let's use a pair of pants as our example. (Hopefully, you have an extra pair of pants to try this with.) With a bit of twine, tie off the end of each pant leg.

You should tie it tight.
Pull up the zipper and button the top.

Now fill the pants with whatever you need to carry. Fill the legs with soft material first, since the legs will become your pack straps. Next, fill up the upper part of the pants with whatever it is you need to carry. Try to balance the weight, and don't have any sharp object jutting into the back, just like you do with a normal backpack or day

Next, put a length of twine through the belt loops and cinch it up, and tie it well. Then bring each pant leg up to the waist, and secure the bottom of each pant leg to the waist. That's it!

Go ahead and see how it fits. If the pack straps are too tight, you need to let out a bit of the cord on the pant legs and re-tie the pant legs to the waist.

From this explanation, you can see how easy it would be a turn a sweat shirt into a pack. With the sweatshirt, it's all the same except you begin by taking a bit of cord and tying off the neck. You need to do this very securely, otherwise you will lose things on the trail.

There was one time when I actually needed a pack, and the only extra clothing item was my long sleeved shirt. I took off my shirt and buttoned up the front. I stripped some fibre from some yucca leaves, and tied off the neck. Next, I tied off each cuff.

The pants are filled with items and the waist is tied off. The pants are worn like a pack.

Since I was using this "pack" to collect acorns and pine cones, I first filled the arms with acorns, which I put into a few paper bags to keep them contained. Then I filled the remainder of the shirt with pine cones. I tied off the cuffs, and tied the cuffs to the waist of the shirt, securing it all together. It fit well, but was a bit uncomfortable because of the pine cones. Still, I got home OK and didn't lose any acorns or pine cones.

Since it was already dark by the time I'd hiked home, I was a bit cold wearing only my t-shirt, but not too uncomfortable.

An emergency pack like this can be a saviour in a time of need. When I didn't have a pack at home, I have actually taken an old pair of pants and used them for my "pack" for a day trip. Plus, who says you have to spend nearly $100 to have a simple day pack?

Although I have seen many variations of this idea over the years, the first time I ever saw it was in one of Ellsworth Jaeger's books, probably "Wildwood Wisdom."

DEALING WITH THE CHA CHING SYNDROME

more of the strain of the activity of the season: shopping, which is

I cannot say that for the other occupant in our usually merry domicile.

If anybody is a shopping queen, the trophy has to go to the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage. I do not know if she invented shopping, I just know it is in her DNA. In our house, DNA means "Deal Negotiator Authority." If she cannot make a deal, nobody can.

I have discovered something quite disturbing during this time of the year. I call it the Cha Ching Syndrome.

It all came together when my wife came home from one of her shopping sprees very excited about how much money she had saved. If there is a coupon available anywhere, she has it, or knows where to get

It hit me one day; how much money did she have to spend to save money?

I first recognized my Cha Ching Syndrome when my wife convinced me to go shopping with her. She caught me by surprise and I could not think of any excuse not to go with her. At least not any excuse she would buy

"It will not take too long," she pleaded in such a way that I could not refuse. "I just need someone to help me take the packages out to the car."

Then," she said with an infectious smile, "we can go and have lunch together. Doesn't that sound like fun?"

How can you possibly argue with that? I could not come up with any legitimate excuse and so I "volunteered" to go with my wife shopping with one qualifying element; she had to take her car. I did not want to use my gas to do something I was not excited about doing.

I had a sinking feeling in my stomach that it would not be my favorite day. A favorite day for me would be staying at home reading one of my favorite books on my favorite easy chair. The word "favorite" can never be associated with going to the mall.

We made it to the mall and my wife knew exactly where to start. I knew where I wanted to go, but I was under strict orders to assist my wife in this shopping extravaganza. I could not help but notice how many stores there were in this mall. I never knew there were this many stores in the entire world. Where do these stores come from? Who in the world is buying all this stuff to keep the stores operating?

Maybe because I am As I looked around, I noticed the mall was getting older I am feeling crowded with people. I had to be careful so not to be run over or run over anybody. There was such an obsession to buy that I not my favorite pastime any time of the year. had to be careful not to get in anybody's way. I am ready to die, but I sure do not want to die in a shopping mall. That would be the epitome of blasphemy as far as I am concerned.

> "Oh," my wife said gigglingly, "are we going to save money today.'

> Then it slowly began to dawn on me. How can you save money in a shopping mall whose only intention is to get as much money out of your wallet as possible?

> As we went to the first cashier to pay for our purchases, I heard a faint Cha Ching. I did not think too much of it at the time.

When we came to the second cashier, I heard a little louder, Cha Ching, Cha Ching. The first one did not get my attention, but this one did. Then we went to the third cashier. Almost booming in my head I heard, Cha Ching, Cha Ching, Cha Ching.

We were getting close to the end of her shopping spree and she said there was one more store she needed to go to. Patiently, and loaded down with packages, I followed her to the last store of the day. Do not ask me which it was, after awhile they all look the same to me.

I felt like I was backed into a corner. We were at the register and my wife looked at me and said very calmly, "Do you have any cash on you? I've used up all mine."

Slowly, I open my wallet, pulled out all the cash I had and with a trembling hand handed it over to her. Cha Ching.

"Thank you," she said, "you helped me save a lot of money today."

All I could hear was Cha Ching echoing in my head and I could barely understand what she was saying.
When it was all over my wife saved $39.14

(Cha Ching) which only cost me $219.79 (Cha Ching, Cha Ching, Cha Ching).

During our lunch, which I ended up paying for (Cha Ching) all she could talk about was all the money (Cha Ching) she had saved today and had me to thank for it. Sometimes it is best to go along so you can get along.

Paul understood the power of money, he wrote "For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows" (1 Timothy 6:10).

To be obsessed with money is to lose the real value of life.

PETER FUNT GUN VICTIMS NEED MORE THAN PRAYER

The New York Daily News cries "Fire!" so often on its front page that readers are wary of false alarms. But what the News came up with following the shooting rampage in San Bernardino was one of the boldest moves a newspaper could make.

The boxcar headline said: GOD ISN'T FIXING THIS.

Against a grim black background, the paper reprinted tweets from four Republican lawmakers. In separate posts following the bloodbath, each focused on "prayers" - for the victims and their families.

Not that there's anything wrong with that, of course. Indeed, sending "thoughts and prayers" after a tragedy is the decent thing to do - a practice followed by politicians from both parties. It's also the safest thing to do.

The Daily News ran a quasi-editorial summary at the bottom of the dramatic page. It read: "As latest batch of innocent Americans are left lying in pools of blood, cowards who could truly end gun scourge continue to hide behind meaningless platitudes."

Deep breath. The "cowards" the paper called out were Ted Cruz, Lindsey Graham, Rand Paul and Paul Ryan.

The point, driven home in heavy-handed tabloid style, is not a knock on religion. Rather, it's a blast against those who have the power to pass meaningful gun legislation yet refuse to do so - even in the face of one ghastly shooting incident after

Following the terrorist attack in Paris, the hashtag #prayforparis turned up quickly on social media and then on billboards across the city. "The terrorists pray, good people think," was an instant response from many in the Twitterverse.

Writing from Paris, columnist Maura Judkis noted, "As #prayforparis spread and was used by people farther and farther from the tragedy, it wasn't long before people began to question the veracity of those prayers, calling out a double standard. If we pray for Paris, many asked, why are we also not praying for the people of Beirut, who suffered losses in an Islamic State attack, or any other place in the world where innocent people die?"

Which brings us back to California, where 14 innocent people died and many others were wounded. Where prayers are welcome, but action should be demanded.

No matter what emerges regarding the two shooters' ties to radical Islamic groups, the availability of guns, especially military-style weapons, must be addressed. In the words of Pope Francis, "You pray for the hungry, then you feed them.

That's how prayer works." Yet, thanks to the Daily News, the issue of prayer could become an issue in itself.

If so, that would be a complete distortion. Prayer isn't the thing, hiding behind prayer is. When confronted any day now by interviewers and debate moderators asking about the News front page, there are two approaches politicians might take: (a) There's nothing wrong with prayer! How awful that anyone would use a tragedy to take away not only our right to defend ourselves with guns, but also our right to pray!

(b) We extend our prayers because we genuinely sympathize and care. But we don't stop there. It's time to cast aside partisan politics and take meaningful action to curb the gun epidemic in America. That's what the victims deserve, along with our prayers.

"day job" in my car. A week ago Friday, rather than tuning in to whatever NPR station was coming in as I usually do, I kept it on KNX. I couldn't leave the breaking coverage of the shootings at the Planned Parenthood clinic in Colorado Springs.

What struck me early on were statements, I believe attributed to local police, that the shootings were unconnected to the clinic itself; not that there wasn't yet evidence of a connection, but that there simply wasn't a connection – period. The narrative became that the shooting likely started somewhere else, with the shooter happening into the clinic while fleeing.

at a nearby nail salon, who seemed to recall the incident as having begun at the Chase Bank next door – with the story then becoming that of a "bank robbery gone wrong". Though Chase soon tweeted it wasn't involved, the right-wing blogosphere breathed a sigh of relief and ran with this new narrative, anyway. While a shooter remained on the loose with unknown numbers of casualties and of those still in danger, they blogged and tweeted highfives to each other, celebrating that pro-choicers might yet be denied a potential talking-point.

As reports confirmed fatalities, including that of at least one police officer, the right was busy ridiculing the "liberal spin machine" for suggesting it was an attack on Planned Parenthood. Jonah Goldberg joked, "Shooting at a bank? Has anyone blamed Bernie Sanders for his extreme rhetoric yet?" From Fox News contributor Erick Erickson, "(the) Left upset the only people dying at Planned Parenthood today are babies." As more information came out, Erickson deleted his tweet but later compared Planned Parenthood president Cecile Richards to Joseph Mengele.

The shooter, Robert Dear, reportedly told arresting officers, "No more baby parts" in suggesting a motive for his actions. This recalled those bogus videos of last summer alleging Planned Parenthood's illegal sale of fetal tissue allegations state and federal investigations showed to be a lie. More specifically, it recalled the rhetoric used by the right wing in referring to those videos. GOP contenders Mike Huckabee, Carly Fiorina and Donald Trump went on news shows the day after to condemn the shootings, but then repeated the lie about selling "body parts" that apparently motivated it (while Fiorina described suggesting such motivation as "typical left-wing tactics".)

Fiorina also lied that "the vast majority of Americans are prepared . . . to defund Planned Parenthood." According to a recent USA Today poll, less than a third would support cutting off funds. Last August, the month after the videos came out, Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL) declared that "what's happening at Planned Parenthood . . . is atrocious, it's grotesque, it's barbaric" and that it's time for

"The language you choose people to get "fired up". Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) took matters. You are not free it further, describing on the Senate floor how we from the judgement of the "treat children like agriculture, to be grown and

Some questioned the likelihood of prosecuting Ilyse Hogue, president a terrorism charge against Robert Dear, because of NARAL Pro-Choice of the difficulty in establishing motive with a guy dismissed as some delusional, mentally-unstable recluse. The day after the shootings, however, I spend a good part of my the Washington Post quoted an official who described the incident as "definitely politically motivated", with NBC News reporting that Dear brought up President Obama with investigators, as well. Two days after the shootings, Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) offered his own assessment of Dear as "a transgendered leftist activist", and complained about "the vicious rhetoric on the left blaming those who are pro-life." For his part, Dr. Ben Carson blamed extremism on "both sides". (Responding to the videos, Carson reminded a radio host that "the whole purpose" behind Planned Parenthood "was trying to eliminate black people".)

According to the National Abortion Federation, Fox News latched onto comments from a witness it's not a matter of "both sides". Since the late 1970s through last year, there have been eight murders and 17 attempted murders of abortion providers, 42 clinic bombings and 182 arsons. But according to NAF president Vicki Saporta, the "intensity and volume" since those videos were released is "unprecedented . . . calling clinics and making threats to murder all the doctors or to wipe out all

> National Abortion Rights Action League vice president Sasha Bruce agrees, "This isn't something new, but it's definitely been notable since the summer with these videos. What's notable is the intensity and the level of these attacks. It is not common that you hear about three arsons in a row" (New Orleans, LA, Pullman, WA and Thousand Oaks, CA)

> Ilyse Hogue, quoted above, addressed the creator of those videos in a Facebook post: "Sorry, David Daleiden. You don't get to create fake videos and accuse abortion providers of 'barbaric atrocities against humanity' one day and act shocked when someone shoots to kill in those same facilities the > Writing in Salon, Heather Parton suggested that "The fact (Robert Dear) is reported to have used the same rhetoric as mainstream politihcians should give those politicians some pause. In fact, they should have paused before they cynically dispersed these hoax videos and exploited them for political gain."

> After the shootings, I heard a radio interview with an OB-GYN practitioner working out of a clinic in the Washington, D.C. area. She described how, in addressing her own security concerns, she'd periodically google her own name to find personal details - home address, medical credentials, etc. on threatening websites. What concerned her most was finding pictures and personal details of her young daughter, as well.

But, as Parton noted, such websites are no longer necessary to push some madman over the edge; "They can just tune in to a Republican presidential

FEAR NOT, TRUMP WILL STILL CRASH AND BURN

Month after month, execrable bullhorn artist Donald Trump remains perched atop the polls, and there's growing concern that the guy might actually win the nomination. Various super PACs allied with the party establishment keep threatening to bomb him with ad campaigns, and Republican regulars are freaking out at the prospect of an autumn 2016 debacle that features landslide losses in on Donald Trump's detestable appeal. I've long felt that he'll fade when the game truly gets serious — when voters start paying close attention and seek to get the maximum value for their ballot. I'm happy (and relieved) to report that two smart, sane political observers are saying much the same. The number-crunching Nate Silver reports what's so often overlooked: Trump's first-place status is far weaker than it seems, because most likely Republican voters have barely tuned in yet. Trump is on top, for now, mostly because people know who he is and the media magnifies whatever emanates from his big mouth. "Right now," Silver points out, "he has 25 to 30 percent of the vote in polls among the roughly 25 percent of Americans who identify

Apollo moon landings were faked." Silver reminds us that most of the current surveys "cover Republican-leaning adults or registered voters, rather than likely voters." He also notes it's still too early to query likely voters, because "if past nomination races are any guide, the vast majority of eventual as Republican. That's something like 6 to 8 percent of the electorate overall, or about the same share of people who think the Republican voters haven't made up their minds yet.' Silver looked at the exit polls for the last four competitive Iowa caucuses — the Democrats in 2004 and 2008, and the Republicans in 2008 and 2012 — and found that 65 percent of the voters made up their minds during the final month. And in the last four competitive New Hampshire primaries, 71 percent of the voters made up their minds during the final month.

Which brings us to David Greenberg, an historian based at Rutgers, who points out that early polls, conducted one year away from the general election, have traditionally given us only "fleeting impulses of an electorate that remains overwhelmingly disengaged." And when pollsters query people who are disengaged, the respondents tend to gravitate to the candidates they've heard of. As Greenberg notes, "Many people who are actually undecided ... will cough up a name when a poll-taker calls and prompts them." Right now, Greenberg writes, "only about 10 to 20 percent of voters are tracking the campaign closely. Normal people tend to tune out the arcane, minute developments that the Twitterati are quick to label game-changers. Believe it or not, they have better things

So, here are past samplings of the disengaged elecorate: One year away from the 1976 election, the Democratic frontrunners was Ted Kennedy. One year from the 1988 election, the Democratic frontrunner was Jesse Jackson. One year from the 1992 election, Democratic voters wanted Mario Cuomo. One year from the 2004 election, the Democratic fave was Howard Dean; before Dean, it was name-recognition favorite Joe Lieberman. One year from the 2008 election, the Republican frontrunner was Rudy Giuliani. The early autumn Republican favorite, one year from the 2012 election, was pre-oops Rick Perry.

Could Trump be the exception? Conceivably. But all told, Silver rates Trump's nomination prospects at "considerably less than 20 percent.'

Of course, it would greatly aid humanity if the Republicans could begin to coaelsce around a relatively sane Trump alternative. (Jeb Bush? John Kasich? Even Chris Christie?)

The longer the vacuum persists, the higher the odds of Trump fill-
