VOLUME 10 NO. 4 COUNCIL TO CONSIDER TEMPORARY CONTRACT

TEEN BOYS FOUND MURDERED IN ARCADIA; INTERNATIONAL MANHUNT LAUNCHED

Male Asian, black hair, black eyes, 5'06", 155 lbs. Known to frequent Santa Anita Inn130 W. Huntington Dr. Arcadia Stays with friend in Alhambra, business in San Gabriel

Two teenage brothers were found dead in their Arcadia home Friday. Now, police are looking for the victims' uncle.

The boys, ages 15 and 16, were murdered Thursday inside their home in the 400 block of Fairview Avenue, according to the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

But their bodies were not discovered until Friday morning by their parents, who thought they were safe asleep in their beds.

The suspect, Deyun Shi, 44, is also wanted for allegedly attacking his wife with an ax Thursday night in La Cañada Flintridge because she wanted a divorce.

According to deputies, the victims' parents were visiting the suspect's wife at a hospital the night their sons were killed.

Deputies say the boys' mother discovered their bodies. They suffered blunt force trauma, according to a press release by the sheriff's department.

Investigators said Shi took a flight to China that was expected to land about 11 p.m. Friday.

Authorities found his car at Los Angeles International airport.

Please contact the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department Homicide Bureau if you have any information about these crimes.

FOR SUPPLEMENTAL POLICE SERVICES FOR SIERRA MADRE NIGHTTIME PATROL

At the Tuesday, January 26, 2016, City Council meeting, the City Council will review an agreement for the City of Arcadia to temporarily provide police patrol services, seven days a week between the hours of 6:00PM and 6:00AM beginning Sunday, February 7, 2016. Staffing levels within the Sierra Madre Police Department (SMPD) have reached a level where there are insufficient personnel to provide safe and reliable police services twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

Over the course of the last few months, the Sierra Madre Police Department lost nine of its twenty full-time employees, three part-time Community Service Officers, and one part-time Police Officer, and there is the possibility that the Department may lose a few more employees. Employees are resigning for a variety of reasons including retirement, an opportunity to work at higher paying departments, and a perceived lack of job security in light of the scheduled decrease of the Utility Users Tax and the pending revenue measure on the April ballot.

During the term of the temporary contract, Sierra Madre Police Department will continue to staff a dispatcher in the Sierra Madre Police Station during the nighttime hours. This will allow the Dispatcher to greet and assist walk-in lobby traffic, answer routine business calls such as overnight parking permits, and lessen the temporary impact to citizens who call the Police Department. All non-critical reports and calls for service will be handled by SMPD officers during their daytime

The Sierra Madre City Council will review the contract at its regular meeting on Tuesday, January 26, 2016 at 6:30PM in the City Council Chambers, 232 W. Sierra Madre Blvd. The Arcadia City Council is scheduled to review the contract at its February 2, 2016 meeting. The temporary supplemental policing services for nighttime patrol are anticipated to begin on Sunday, February 7, 2016 and be in effect until June of 2016.

For additional information, the Sierra Madre staff report is available on the City's website at: http://www.cityofsierramadre.com/

SIERRA MADRE CANDIDATES WILL RUN UNOPPOSED

When Sierra Madre voters go to the polls on April 12, 2016, they will find that none of the candidates running for office face any opposition. For the first time in decades, and, according to some longtime residents, for the first time in the last 40 years, there is only one candidate for each office.

According to the last press release sent by retiring city clerk Nancy Shollenberger on January 19th, only the following persons filed:

City Council - Two Vacancies: John Harabedian, Incumbent John Capoccia, Incumbent

City Treasurer Mike Amerio Melinda Carrillo City Clerk

The only other item on the ballot will be the User Utility Tax measure which will seek voter approval of an increase in the tax to 10% with escalation or a sunset. MVNews

IT IS TIME FOR YOU TO DESIGN NEXT YEARS FLOAT.

TOR President Ratliff announced "Echoes of Success" as the theme for the 128th Rose Parade. "Echoes of Success" celebrates those people, organizations and institutions that play a part in the stories of the success of others," shared Ratliff. "Success cannot be achieved alone. It takes the support, dedication, compassion and love of many others to help in finding that satisfaction of success. Family, friends and teachers contribute selflessly and tirelessly to the success of many. These influences in our lives, these people of selfless commitment, these Echoes of Success make us who we are"

The 2017 Rose Parade and Rose Bowl Game tells the story of how our character has developed through the selfless contributions of others and celebrates their inspirational gifts. Our successes are unique to each of us. Success is not gauged by the final score, not by how much wealth we accumulate and should not be weighed against the accomplishments of others.

Success is measured by our own personal satisfaction in knowing that we achieved our utmost by doing our best.

Your daughter's first piano recital.

A Special Olympian crossing the finish line.

A wounded warrior's first steps.

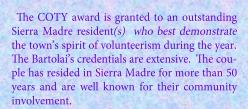

All are examples of success.

But success cannot be achieved alone. We need the support and influences of others. Family, teachers, friends, organizations and coaches contribute to our success. Music, art and education further inspire our success. Theses echoes help make us who we are. Americas New Year Celebration for 2017 celebrates those people and institutions that have been instrumental in helping each of us and in helping others achieve success. It's about the people and cultures that lend us a hand in reaching our destination.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"Sunshine is delicious, rain is refreshing, Wind braces us up, snow is exhilarating, There is really no such thing as bad weather, Only different kinds of good weather."

"Wherever you go, no matter what the weather, always bring your own sunshine." Anthony J. D'Angelo

"A great deal has been said about the weather, but very little has been done about it." This quote has been attributed to Mark Twain, Charles Dudley Warner and several other people, but whoever said it was right on the money. Here we are, well into January, and the threat or promise on the news we see Dallas Raines forecasting tricycle, and Patti, our South Pasadena daughter impresses them at all.

Just in case you hadn't noticed, Valentine's Day is three weeks away. You don't have to panic yet, but you can start thinking about getting a nice card for your sweetie and maybe a couple for small family members who love getting mail. Tucking a few bucks in there for the small people is nice, too. Speaking of small people, saw the cutest little bike in the front window at Centric Bikes, on Sierra Madre Blvd. It was called First Bike and was about the size of a two-year old. Now I don't know many two-year olds who can ride a two-wheeler, but I suspect Centric can make it work for you as they're in the custom bike business and can create the perfect machine for just about anybody. I have vivid memories of however you want to look at it - of El Nino has Crissy, our Texas girl, when she was about four been hanging over us for weeks. Almost nightly racing up and down the sidewalk on her purple torrential rains any minute now. But nothing whose first bike was bought at a yard sale for happens. Vera in the evening and Henry in the morning on KTLA point toward their weather maps showing storms out in the ocean, heading right for us. Get ready! Gear up! Don't leave home without your umbrella! And nothing. The current rumor heralding El Nino is that the end of January is going to be rainy, and not just in Northern California where they've gotten way more rain and snow than they deserve and we're all down here trying to decide whether or not to turn the sprinklers on again, until Tuesday when we had that nice little rain...right after we turned the last few years. We had an enormous white ahead, have one cookie! one and an equally enormous red one out on our front terrace a couple of years back but then an invasion of white flies found them and, friends and fellow gardeners, when the white flies show up you might as well dump your plant and move on with your life as nothing you spray on them authordeanne.com

$2.00 when we were all very young and very poor. What we didn't realize was that it had no brakes. Patti was about seven and conquered riding a two-wheeler in about five minutes and frequently stopped herself by running into a tree. Ah... good

How are you doing with your New Year's resolutions? We've been walking more. My best walking buddy, John, and Sierra Madre daughter, Leah, hiked up to First Water on the Mt. Wilson Trail yesterday and said the sound of water rushing through the stream was wonderful to hear after so long of hearing nothing down there. The sunsets and sunrises have been fabulous Trying to turn a blind eye to all the goodies, except and the sun came out long enough for me to plant a very dear friend gave us a big container of those three of the leftover Christmas poinsettias, all very thin waffle cookies that are beyond delicious cute little $2.99, 3" pot guys from Trader Joe's, in and we are trying to ration ourselves to one each a big pot. I don't know what it is about Christmas after dinner. To quote Mark Twain, "Abstinence poinsettias, but I've had great success with them is so important I abstain from abstinence." Go

During the week of Sunday, January 10th, to Sunday, case was forwarded to the Detective Bureau. January 17th, the Sierra Madre Police Department responded to approximately 284 calls for service.

Sunday, January 10th At 12:16 am, Sierra Madre Police were patrolling the area of Auburn and Highland when they witnessed a vehicle come to a four-way stop and stop in the intersection. As Officers followed, the vehicle failed to make several complete stops at posted intersections. Officers initiated a traffic stop and upon making contact they immediately noticed the driver's blood shot eyes and slurred speech. A strong odor of alcohol was present and the woman informed Officers that she had several drinks that night. The woman agreed to a Field Sobriety Test and ultimately failed. The woman complied with a breath test and it was determined that her blood alcohol level was twice the legal limit. The woman was taken into custody and cited for driving under the influence and driving under the influence with a blood alcohol level exceeding the into the street. Officers attempted to grab the man

Wednesday, January 13th At 6:30 pm, Sierra Madre Police responded to the 1000 block of Arno Drive regarding a burglary report. Upon arrival Officers were informed by the victim that earlier that day he left for work but failed to set his house alarm because his maid was scheduled to stop by during the day. The maid arrived and left by 4:30 and informed the victim that the house has okay when she left. Around 6:20 the victim arrived home and discovered his victim's bedroom and office were ransacked. This resisting arrest.

Friday, January 15th At 9:33 pm, Sierra Madre Police were patrolling the area of Baldwin and Grandview when they observed 3 males standing on the sidewalk in front of a local church. As Officers drove by they asked the men if they were doing alright and one man responded by yelling at Officers that his grandmother had passed away. The other two men informed Officers that their friend had been drinking, was upset and that they were attempting to help him get back home. Officers left the man with his friends and as they were driving away they witnessed the upset man aggressively pull away from one of his friends and jump into the street causing an oncoming car to slam on their brakes. Officers turned around and attempted to make contact with the man who was now walking away from the area. When Officers blocked the man's path with the patrol car, he went around the car and jumped to get him out of the street but the man spun free and got into a "fighting stance." Officers repeatedly instructed the man to get down on his knees or he would get tased. The man's friends pleaded with the man to listen to Officers as he continued to yell at Officers. After several attempts, the man complied but as Officers were placing him in handcuffs he pulled away and began resisting. After a small struggle between him and the Officer, the man was ultimately tased. Paramedics were called to the scene to treat the man and transport to the hospital. After rear bedroom sliding glass door was shattered. The treatment he was booked for public intoxication and

LUCY NICOLORO SWORN IN ON THE TOWN COUNCIL; CAROL WONG QUAN FROM LA COUNTY TAX ASSESSOR'S OFFICE SPEAKS

By Joan Schmidt

Last night at the Monrovia-Arcadia-Duarte Town Council Meeting, Lucy Nicoloro was sworn in by Kathryn Barger to fill-in the position vacated when Lucy's late husband John passed away.

Kathryn, Supervisor Mike Antonovich's Chief of Staff for twenty-five years, has been endorsed to fill in his seat when he leaves office next year. Kathryn was an intern, and the health and children's services deputy, before becoming Chief of Staff. The big plus is all her knowledge and experience from those twentyfive years. She'd enter office with no need of on-job training. I was a founding member of the Town Council and was on it ten years. I have two huge binders of correspondence with the Supervisor and the county agencies that addressed various issues. All this knowledge Kathryn already has and she's dealt with all the various agencies during her twenty-five years under Antonovich.

After Lucy was sworn in by Kathryn, it was "business" as usual. First the two County Deputies introduced themselves and spoke of the various problems. There has been a spike in burglaries and larcenies. People were advised to LOCK THEIR CARS and report ANYTHING UNUSUAL/ UNFAMILIAR! This is OUTRAGEOUS! These perpetrators actually RENT high end cars like Porsches to fool people when they stake out the neighborhoods. They knock on the doors and pretend to be selling something. If no one answers, one goes around back and breaks in through sliding

Deputy Art Valenzuela gave an update of the wonderful youth activities at Pamela Park. We also got reports from both the Live Oak and Duarte Libraries on upcoming events/programs. MONROVIA POLICE DEPARTMENT NOW ON NEXTDOOR.COM

Last week, the Monrovia Police Department established a presence on Nextdoor.com. We engaged this new communication mechanism after receiving an increasing number of public safety related questions through the social media medium. We plan on using Nextdoor.com to share information on crime prevention, safety, public events, and emergency notifications. It is important to note, however, that we established our presence on Nextdoor.com in such a way that the Monrovia Police Department staff will not be able to see any of the content posted on neighborhood sites, except for the direct replies to City posts. Furthermore, we would like to note that Nextdoor.com is not the appropriate way to request emergency services, police services, report criminal suspicious activity, or file a report. Rather, we established the presence on Nextdoor.com in an effort to build stronger, safer neighborhoods throughout

SMILE FOR THE CANINE

I spend a lot of time hanging out with animals. I've always enjoyed (perhaps even preferred) the company of my furry and feathered friends, and I kind of like to think they enjoy spending time with me. While I do appreciate the presence of all animals, I have to admit the dog has become my favorite. Dogs make such great friends. They can make me laugh out loud, and at times they can make me cry, but regardless of what the mood of the moment may be, they are always there for me emotionally.

I used to have a dog named Lady. She was unique in that she would smile when you looked at her. I don't mean the kind of smile that only shows through the eyes from inside, I mean she smiled the same way we humans smile. Well, maybe her smile looked a little different because of her long snout and pointy teeth, but as far as the way our lips curve back and curl upward, and our eyes get squinty during a smile, Lady actually smiled, like people do. I had to explain it to the folks we'd meet along the way, that she was just happy to see them, not baring her teeth as a warning that she may bite. No, that girl was sporting a big grin - she

I smile at dogs all the time. I'm pretty sure I have always smiled at dogs I've met along the way, but I guess it's possible that it could be a relatively new habit for me. One that I've developed over the years from spending so much time with canines. Lately I often find myself smiling at dogs I don't even know, like ones riding in the back seats of cars looking out at me through the window. I smile and wave, as if I'm trying to engage a small child to smile and wave back. I don't even care if people see me doing it. It just seems like the natural thing to do. Other than Lady, I have yet to see a dog smile back at me, but I'll keep trying.

Now I have a dog named Molly. She's a very attentive and somewhat sensitive pup. She uses facial expressions all the time, to tell me what she's thinking. I'm sure of this, because she is consistent in repeating the same expressions in response to what is going on at the time. For example, if I reach for my keys and head for the front door, she follows me, plops down on the floor in front of the door and stares at me with her hopeful look...the one that says, "You're taking me with you, right?". It's the same look she gives me when I am sitting eating a meal, only the latter look is one of hope for a nibble of what's on my plate, versus a walk around the block. Still, it's the same facial expression.

It wasn't until recently that I realized how much attention Molly pays to my facial expressions. I don't have to say a word. I can be sitting across the room from her. I suddenly give her a real silly look. I open my eyes wide, lift my eyebrows into tall arches, twist my mouth sideways and look up at the ceiling. That's when she jumps up, runs to her basket and picks out a toy for us to play with. She knows I am teasing her, inciting her to play. If I frown and look down, she walks slowly and tentatively towards me, with a somewhat anxious look on her own face. A look that asks, "Are you okay?". How in the world does that dog know something's up just from looking at my face?

Over the past 10+ years, much focus has been placed on studying the canine's capacity to recognize human emotion through facial expression, in the scientific research field. The results of a 2014 study conducted by researchers at the Messerli Research Institute of the University of Veterinary Medicine Vienna in Austria indicate that dogs are indeed able to discriminate emotional expressions in human faces. Meaning, not only can a canine tell the difference between a sad or happy human face, a dog can also interpret the inner emotions that human facial expressions represent...sadness or happiness. (Source: HYPERLINK "http://www.cell.com/current-biology" www.cell.com/

current-biology)

What made the 2014 Messerli study and it's results unique to several others before it, is that there were no ulterior cues used to encourage the dogs' responses, as had been typically used in other studies. "Here, we show that dogs use the emotion of a heterospecific (organism of another species - in this case a human face) as a discriminative

In this study, the scientists used only picture pairs showing parts of human faces (some only the mouth, some only the eyes, and some only a halfface) with either an angry or happy expression, as cues for the canines' responses. Interestingly enough, all of the subject dogs in the study were more than willing to approach and touch the pictures showing happy expressions, while consistently resisting the images showing angry or sad expressions. Smart dogs! The researchers involved attribute their results mainly to the amount of time people now spend with their canines, which makes total sense to me.

Regardless of how or why dogs "get" our moods just from looking at our faces, I think it is awesome that my Molly can tell by looking at me, how I am feeling. I know some humans who would rather run the other way than stay, if they see a sad look on my face. I know Molly doesn't necessarily like to see me sad either, but I have yet to see her turn around and run the other way when I've expressed myself in a sad way. My experience has been quite the opposite. She'll approach, perhaps slower than if I were happy, but approach she will, and the give me a little lick on the cheek, or a pat with her paw as if to say, "I love you, cheer

Everybody needs an opportunity to unwind from dayto-day stresses.

There are many ways to do that; exercise, time with friends, a vacation, even a few drinks. But what about the accumulated stresses that we can't unwind from? Usually a result of shouldering responsibility, or having a full busy life.

These tensions remain even when we go on vacation or take a day off. We stay tight and irritated just under the surface. Yoga can help in this situation.

We hold our "stuff" in our physical body, emotional body, energetic body, and in the mind less, hips feel good, stiffness in the neck is relieved. in class.

Emotional and energetic body are also addressed during practice. We have an opportunity to find balance, and check in on our inner space. Often, the great feeling after class is a change in our Prana, or life force energy. The mind body is certainly given a break with concentration and focus on our breath and the practice at hand.

Little by little, we unwind. We unwind from day-to-day stress and from more long standing accumulations too. This makes room for fun, love, and joy, taking the place of the wasted energy our worries were causing us.

Writing reviews on restaurants is subjective, as is drinking and wine . I love mom-and-pop restaurants that you've probably driven past 100 times. I always go to the restaurant at least three times before ink hits paper in the form of a review (I do take recommendations). I love Parkway Grill, Panda Inn and Houston's, but you know those already!

Sahara Restaurant in central Pasadena is one of my go-to spots for both takeout and sit-down dining. I probably eat at Sahara at least three times a month. I was born in Athens, Greece, and though Sahara leans towards Lebanese cuisine, Middle Eastern foods are universal in menu selections. They don't have Lebanese beer (the owner's son said they don't have their home brew because they'd drink it all!), so I have my meals with Heineken. COULD YOU HAVE COPD?

Dear Savvy Senior,

I have struggled with some shortness of breath for the past five years or so. I just thought I was getting older and out of shape, but a friend recently mentioned I may have COPD. What can you tell me about this?

Breathless Bob

Dear Bob,

COPD, or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease is a serious lung disease that, over time, makes million people have COPD today, but about half of them don't know it.

Many people mistake shortness of breath as a shape, but that's not necessarily the case. COPD a term used to describe a variety of lung diseases including emphysema and chronic bronchitis develops slowly, so symptoms may not be obvious until damage has occurred.

Common symptoms include: an ongoing cough or a cough that produces a lot of mucus; shortness of breath, especially during physical activity; wheezing; and chest tightness.

Those most at risk are smokers or former smokers over age 40, and people who have had long-term exposure to other lung irritants like and dust. There is also a rare genetic condition known as alpha-1-antitrypsin, or AAT deficiency that can increase the risks.

symptoms, you need to get tested by your doctor. A simple breathing test called spirometry can tell screening can also identify COPD before major COPD information line at 866-316-2673. loss of lung function occurs.

If you do indeed have COPD, you need to know that while there's no cure, there are things you can Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior. do to help manage symptoms and protect your org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today lungs from further damage, including:

Quit smoking: If you smoke, the best thing you can do to prevent more damage to your lungs is to quit. To get help, the National Cancer Institute offers a number of smoking cessation resources at smokefree.gov or call 1-800-QUIT-NOW. Or ask your doctor about prescription antismoking drugs that can help reduce your nicotine craving.

Avoid air pollutants: Stay away from things it hard to breathe. What's more, an estimated 24 that could irritate your lungs like dust, allergens and strong fumes. Also, to help improve your air quality at home, remove dust-collecting clutter and keep carpets clean; run the exhaust fan when normal part of aging, or a result of being out of using smelly cleaning products, bug sprays or paint; ban smoking indoors; and keep windows closed when outdoor air pollution is high (see airnow.gov for daily air-quality reports).

Guard against flu: The flu can cause serious problems for people who have COPD, so get a flu shot every fall and wash and sanitize your hands frequently to avoid getting sick. Also ask your doctor about getting the pneumococcal immunizations for protection against pneumonia.

Take prescribed medications: Bronchodilators (taken with an inhaler) are commonly used for COPD. They help relax the airway muscles to secondhand smoke, air pollution, chemical fumes make breathing easier. Depending on how severe your condition, you may need a short-acting version only for when symptoms occur, or a longacting prescription for daily use. "GREEN MANSIONS!"

Adults tend to idealize childhood things, only later to realize that they are not as impressive as they originally seemed. Your cavernous kindergarten classroom feels smaller, now that your own youngster has started school. Similarly, old pictures of people from your childhood can prompt exclamations like, "Wow, I thought Miss Humphrey was ancient at 37, but she looks pretty hot, now that I'm 45!" An amusement park you visited as a kid was full of excitement and adventure. But 20 years later, it seems a little corny. My glamorized childhood memory was the (minor) motion picture "Green Mansions."

Growing up, my family never had TV in the usual sense. We had a TV set, but we were too cheap to get cable. So, I grew up watching a lot of videos of old movies. At school, I had no clue about the shows my classmates liked. However, I didn't lust after the toys they saw advertized either. (My parents must've saved a lot of money this way!) While some films became as familiar as bedtime stories ("The Road" movies and "The Honeymooners"), others recorded from TV by my grandparents were only watched once or twice. This was either due to the bad quality of the recording or the bad quality of the movie in general. "Green Mansions" was one of those movies.

Produced in 1959, "Green Mansions" starred Anthony Perkins and Audrey Hepburn. The story is set in Venezuela around the turn of the last century. Perkins is a disgruntled army defector in search of gold in the uncharted jungle. He eventually happens upon a tribe of South American natives (played by actors of different races, many sporting what looked like a bad

The chief, Sessue Hayakawa, looks just as Japanese as he did in "Bridge on the River Kwai." But with a loin cloth, feathered arm bands, and a lot of imagination, he fits right in. After Perkins impresses Hayakawa with magical fire (a cigarette lighter) Hayakawa takes a liking to him, much to the dismay of his younger son, Henry Silva. This Silva tells Perkins that his older brother (the man who would be king) was killed by a mysterious woman in the jungle bordering their camp, and that is why Perkins is forbidden from searching for gold there. Ignoring these warnings, Perkins takes off into the brush at first light.

"Jungle" is a loose term for the "Alice In Wonderland"-meets-"Wizard of Oz" type of set created for this film. Perkins walks along an unusually smooth path through massive, waxy leaves and flowers. He hears the sound of a woman laughing as a fawn darts by. (You've heard of jungle fawns, haven't you?) And suddenly -there's Audrey Hepburn!

She's wearing a gossamer dress, clearly constructed of forest fibers. She introduces herself and they talk about a special flower that only blooms for one day, and then dies. But she assures him there's no reason to be sad about its dying. When the flower dies, another one is getting ready to bloom somewhere else in the Hepburn brings Perkins back to meet her "grandfather," Lee J. Cobb, with white hair and a mustache-and-beard stolen from a mall Santa. Cobb has raised Hepburn since infancy. He sounds like a regular American, but somewhere in the jungle she picked up a British accent. Perkins leaves for the village, but promises to return.

Back at the ranch, Silva is angry at Perkins because, by Perkins coming out of the jungle in one piece, Hayakawa believes him to be an even greater warrior than his late son. Silva warns Perkins not to get too comfortable as Hayakawa's new favorite, because the village will be hosting the right of passage ceremony for all the young men that night.

As I recalled this scene, it took place on a dark beach, thick with palm trees and roaring surf lapping at the villagers' feet. The men wore exotic costumes as they danced around a raging bonfire. To prove their manhood, they had to endure a large wooden board covered with bees being pressed against their ast one standing won.

In reality, the set had barely any sand, dirt, or stones to suggest the outdoors. Harsh lighting didn't help either. The boards had bees, but only half a dozen at most. Three very old-looking women hobbled over to Silva and two other youths. They pressed the boards against the men's chests with all the mighty force you'd expect from a frail old lady. The two other guys quickly screamed and crumpled to the ground, but Silva maintained an icy stare 'till the end. (You get the impression that he bribed or threatened the other two to give up quickly so that he would win.)

Perkins watches all this from a stake to which he was bound. (At some earlier point Silva persuaded Hayakawa that Perkins was no good.) Silva swaggers over to Perkins and informs him that his trial by bees has proven his supremacy as the ultimate warrior; and now he's Havakawa's favorite again. Perkins better enjoy himself, Silva warns, because he's going to kill him and the evil jungle woman the next morning. (It's so helpful for the victim to have a schedule beforehand.)

Several hours later the party has dissipated, and only one of the old bee ladies is left snoozing near Perkins. He wakes her up and gets her to give him something sharp, with which he frees himself. I forget how he persuaded her to do this, but what do minor details matter? Perkins rushes into the jungle to warn Hepburn and Cobb of Silva's plot.

I imagine the overwhelming suspense of our Hero's fate has you falling off the edge of your seat right now. (Or not!) Stay tuned for Part II.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

On the Marquee: Notes from the Sierra Madre Playhouse

A BOUNTY OF CHOICES

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

A couple of years ago I was inspired to reach out to the Colburn Conservatory to see if they would be interested in collaborating on a series of concerts featuring musicians from their school. To my great pleasure they thought the idea was good and after seeing the Playhouse and appreciating just how good the acoustics are signed on. Since then we've had a wonderful succession of pre-professional musicians create truly magical evenings of music. We've had pianists, string quartets, brass quintets, vocalists, and small ensembles playing music as varied as Mozart, Ravel, and Piazzolla. I have said about the series "see them at the Playhouse before you see them at the Phil!" and I haven't been too far off as several of the musicians have already gone on to much bigger venues.

On Sunday, January 31 at 7pm we will host our first concert of the year (we have 3 more planned through the spring including February 14 and May 8 with another to be scheduled in March/ April) featuring Regulo Martinez-Anton in a piano concert dedicated to the music of Enrique Granados a Spanish composer who drowned while attempting to rescue his wife after their ship was torpedoed by a German u-boat. Granados' music is well known in Spain but not often played here. This is the 100th anniversary of his birth and Mr. Martinez-Anton has crafted a lovely concert which will introduce him to many for the first time.

Tickets for the concert are $20 for adults and $15 for students. A few essays back I talked about making the Playhouse your drop-in living room. How wonderful to amble down and hear this beautiful music just blocks from your home. I think for those of you who haven't attended one, a single visit will make you a fan.

On Monday, January 25 at 7pm we are launching a new Initiative at the Playhouse – a once-a-month FREE reading series of plays I am interested in producing in the future. These plays will generally be the last Monday of the month and will be directed and star many actors you've enjoyed over the last few years. D.J. Harner (who played Mother and General Cutter in Battledrum) will work with me to produce this Series (we haven't settled on a name yet). Arthur Hanket (who was in The Twentieth Century) will direct and perform in Eric Overmyer's On the Verge a wonderful play I can't wait to hear out loud. Do come, we'll have refreshments and it should be great fun. I have a wonderful list of plays coming up: Bus Stop, The Skin of Our Teeth, The Octoroon and many more. The complete schedule and list of plays is on our website: SierraMadrePlayhouse.org

Deathtrap is selling briskly, it runs through February 20. This one is great fun – opening night audience were shocked by all the surprises - don't miss it. Reviews have been glowing! Please visit our website at SierraMadrePlayhouse.org or call Mary at 626.355.4318 to arrange your purchase.

When singer, musician, and broadcast journalist Malka Marom had the opportunity to interview Joni Mitchell in 1973, she was eager to reconnect with the performer she'd first met late one night in 1966 at a Yorkville coffeehouse. More When Breath Becomes Air by Paul conversations followed over the next four decades of friendship, and it was only after Joni and This book is a profoundly moving, exquisitely

In Joni Mitchell: In Her Own Words, Joni and Malka follow this thread through seven decades of life and art, discussing the influence of Joni's childhood, love and loss, playing dives and huge festivals, acclaim and criticism, poverty and affluence, glamorous triumphs and tragic mistakes . This riveting narrative, told in interviews, lyrics, paintings, and photographs, is shared in the hope of illuminating a timeless body of work and inspiring others.

Why do hedge-fund billionaires pay a far lower tax rate than middleclass workers?The conventional answer is that a popular uprising against "big government" led to the ascendancy of a broadbased conservative movement. FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

WATCH OUT FOR PREDATORY TAX LIENS ON YOUR FAMILY HOME

As our parents and other loved ones age, they may need a little more attention from us. Parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles, or and even neighbors who are aging may want to be seen as strong and independent. Often, however, their abilities to take care of household and financial affairs begin to erode as they get older.

What's at Risk?

One such example which can have catastrophic consequences is the failure to pay property taxes. A lot of retired people are struggle to make ends meet and may not be able to pay their taxes as they come due. This puts their home at risk because unfortunately, governments have processes in place to collect back taxes by placing liens against the property.

Worst Case Scenario

Different locales have different approaches to filing liens against property, but one of the worst is Washington, D.C. There, the city made a policy change in 2001 that has had devastating effects on homeowners. Prior to that time, the city would sell a lien at auction to individuals who could then charge interest on the amount due until it was paid. If it was not paid, the city could move to foreclose on the property.

The change in 2001 allowed the purchasers of the liens to go directly to court to foreclose on the property they purchased. This attracted predatory lenders from other states that became very aggressive in pursuing the foreclosures. In many cases, people who owned their homes free and clear lost them over unpaid taxes of less than $500. Once investors buy the liens, they can begin charging interest and legal costs, which makes it more expensive for the homeowner to pay off the lien.

While it is true that homeowners have ample time and notice to pay the taxes, even after the liens are sold, Washington's story is replete with cases of owners with dementia or other serious illnesses. Because of these types of conditions, many owners were not aware of or did not understand what was happening. And without family or friends looking out for them, the predators can have a field day.

What Can be Done?

BUSINESS NEWS & TRENDS

Thankfully, Washington is in the minority of governments that allow this predatory approach to tax collection. But it points out the need for those of us with elderly family members and friends to pay attention. CALTECH RESEARCHERS FIND EVIDENCE OF A REAL NINTH PLANET

Caltech researchers have found evidence of a giant planet tracing a bizarre, highly elongated orbit in the distant solar system. The object, which the researchers have nicknamed Planet Nine, has a mass about 10 times that of Earth and orbits about 20 times farther from the Sun on average than does Neptune (which orbits the Sun at an average distance of 2.8 billion miles). In fact, it would take this new planet between 10,000 and 20,000 years to make just one full orbit around the Sun.

The researchers, Konstantin Batygin and Mike Brown, discovered the planet's existence through mathematical modeling and computer simulations but have not yet observed the object

"This would be a real ninth planet," says Brown, Caltech's Richard and Barbara Rosenberg Professor of Planetary Astronomy. "There have only been two true planets discovered since ancient times, and this would be a third. It's a pretty substantial chunk of our solar system that's still out there to be found, which is pretty exciting."

Brown notes that the putative ninth planet—at 5,000 times the mass of Pluto—is sufficiently large that there should be no debate about whether it is a true planet. Unlike the class of smaller objects now known as dwarf planets, Planet Nine gravitationally dominates its neighborhood of the solar system. In fact, it dominates a region larger than any of the other known planets -- a fact that Brown says makes it "the most planet-y of the planets in the whole solar system.'

Batygin and Brown describe their work in the current issue of the Astronomical Journal and show how Planet Nine helps explain a number of mysterious features of the field of icy objects and debris beyond Neptune known as the Kuiper

"Although we were initially quite skeptical that this planet could exist, as we continued to investigate its orbit and what it would mean for the outer solar system, we become increasingly convinced that it is out there," says Batygin, an assistant professor of planetary science. "For the first time in over 150 years, there is solid evidence that the solar system's planetary census is incomplete.'

The road to the theoretical discovery was not straightforward. In 2014, a former postdoc of Brown's, Chad Trujillo, and his colleague Scott Shepherd published a paper noting that 13 of the most distant objects in the Kuiper Belt are similar with respect to an obscure orbital feature. To explain that similarity, they suggested the possible presence of a small planet. Brown thought the planet solution was unlikely, but his interest was half-long collaboration to investigate the distant ideas and to consider new possibilities. objects. As an observer and a theorist, respectively, the researchers approached the work from very different perspectives-Brown as someone who looks at the sky and tries to anchor everything in the context of what can be seen, and Batygin as someone who puts himself within the context of dynamics, considering how things might work He took the problem down the hall to Batygin, from a physics standpoint. Those differences

"I would bring in some of these observational aspects; he would come back with arguments from theory, and we would push each other. I don't think the discovery would have happened without that back-and-forth," says Brown. "It was perhaps the most fun year of working on a problem in the solar system that I've ever had."

classical music. This was probably around 1964 when Bob Dylan was the king of pop, and seemed to be the messenger of the "secret messages" to the younger generation. All my older brothers not Dylan worshippers. We all seemed to regard listening to Dylan as a more meaningful spiritual experience than sitting through Mass at Saint

No one remembers how it began, but it was a legendary conversation that lasted for hours. My father's argument was that the music and lyrics of Bob Dylan were of no lasting value and the young people were simply too ignorant to realize it yet. Frank, my father, said that Dylan would be forgotten in a few years. He compared Dylan to Beethoven in particular. "He engaged with Paul when Paul and Bach, and other classical musicians, and explained that Dylan was not in any way at the level of the classical composers. Paul wholeheartedly disagreed.

Their conversation began in the living room where Frank would sit in his easy reclining chair and watch TV. Paul sat near him on the couch. Everyone in the household only became aware of their conversation wAhen we realized they were still at it after about an hour. As the conversation's volume level would rise from time to time, we could all hear what they were saying: "Of course you can put Dylan in Beethoven's category," said Paul in me, who talked to me, who taught me things, who his deep and sincere voice. "Have you actually ever listened to what he's saying in his songs?'

"He just cackles," said Frank, "and you really can't even make out his words most of the time. And I'm not even talking about the words. And it's only important, as you call it, if you take an hour to explain it all to me. I don't need any explanation to know that Bach's music really is good," said Frank as Paul patiently waited his turn in this lively

Well, I'm not saying that Dylan and Bach and the other classicals can be compared directly. Obviously, they can't," said Paul, giving some ground to Frank. "But there is obviously something that millions of people are responding to that you aren't seeing or hearing. Dylan is not just music; he is also the and months that followed, the entire event was message. So we've got to examine some of the words amusing, meaningless, interesting, a waste of time,

We cleared the table and washed the dishes, and One Saturday, with no warning, Paul Martinez I set up the chess board and began a game with a engaged my father in the relative value of pop vs. neighbor who dropped by. Our game lasted nearly an hour, and Robert won. The Dylan-Classical debate continued.

And then, all of a sudden, Frank and Paul were standing in the kitchen doorway, shaking hands as could fairly accurately be called Dylan fans, if Paul had to depart. My brother David hadn't said much the whole night, but he never did.

It was late and Paul had to go home and so it was over. A stalemate, we presumed. No clear winner, each side having done their best to promote their own arguments to win over the other. But both Paul and Frank were unbudgeable and they each stuck to their guns. For the rest of us, the conversation about the conversation had just begun.

"Why doesn't he ever have meaningful conversations with us," David asked to no one challenged, but shouldn't he take it upon himself to engage us," asked David. No one really cared, but it was clear in the conversation about the conversation that David didn't really care about whose music was best. To David, the conversation was an example of a father that didn't take adequate interest in his own children, but would take extra time and supreme effort in a very engaging discussion - but not with

I inwardly agreed with David, but I didn't say anything. In some very primal way, I am sure that I longed to have a father who took an interest in engaged me in his activities for our mutual benefit. I am sure that David had a good point that Frank should do these sorts of things, but I was not bitter about the fact that he did not do so.

The rest of us had probably long ago accepted Frank for what and who he was. To me, Frank was neither good nor bad, right nor wrong - he simply was my father, doing what he did in his patterns of somewhat predictable behavior. But to David, Frank's conversation was like a slap in the face, saying that he can take the time with a friend of the family, but would not take the time with his own children. At least that's how I took David's reaction.

Depending on who you asked during the various conversations about the conversation in the weeks and see what he's really saying." insightful, and/or demonstrated that Frank was This went on, back and forth, quiet and loud, capable of in-depth abstract thought and could

Though I generally disagreed with Frank's premise, something like hotdogs and baked beans and salad his performance definitely boosted my image of and some other vegetables. We took a plate into him. And likewise my image of Paul was greatly Frank and Paul, and we didn't expect them to come enlarged. Here was a peer of my brother who could debate with intensity and authority, and try to convince my father of a point of view which I held, but felt totally unable to communicate in any about the whole scenario.

Whatever led up to this occasion, I am not sure, but all of a sudden, I found myself in bed at night I laid myself down and tucked myself in hoping and my eyes would not close. Every time I closed my eyes, they snapped open almost violently.

I tossed. I turned. I did everything I could think of but nothing seemed to help me go to sleep. I once heard somebody say that if you cannot This is the first time something like this has ever happened to me. No matter what I did, I could not go to sleep.

I lay quietly staring up at the ceiling. Nothing So, I started counting sheep. One, two, three, four seemed to work.

Thinking if I got up and walked around a little bit, maybe get a drink of water, it would help me relax and I could lie down and go to sleep. It did not help. I was just as wide-awake when I got back to my bed, as I was when I left it.

When I got into bed, a thought struck me. I heard my clock click on the hour every hour. Out in the kitchen were some fresh chocolate chip cookies that the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage had baked that day. Of course, she gave me the usual warning that I was not allowed to touch them. This, however, was an emergency. What if eating one of those chocolate chip cookies made me relax enough to fall asleep? I think the proof is in the eating.

Slowly I extricated myself from bed and my wife muttered, "You're not getting up are you?" "I forgot something out in the kitchen that I need to go get now."

"Remember," she said in somewhat of a stupor,

"do not touch those cookies." Thinking to myself as I shuffled off into the kitchen, "What if eating one of those chocolate chip cookies made me fall asleep?"

I must confess that I have a curiosity streak in me. I like to explore things and find out if something is true or not. Moreover, this cookie-sleeping solution was intriguing me so much that I really did not hear what she was mumbling.

Tiptoeing out into the kitchen, I turned on the Him. light as carefully as possible and walked over to where the cookies were. They looked so delicious. They looked so inviting. In fact, I think one of them winked at me.

"She won't miss one cookie," I thought to myself. After all, there were dozens of cookies there on the cookie sheet.

I am not sure how many cookies I ate that night, but they were delicious. After this eating frenzy, I thought it was about time to slip back into the bedroom and go to sleep. I should be ready to and I kept counting until I hit 197. At this point, I could not fall asleep because all of the bleating of the sheep in my room kept me awake. They simply would not quiet down.

I laid there quietly waiting for the sheep to leave and for the dawn to arrive.

Then a light began to glow through my window. It was the sun. The night was over and the day had begun.

About this time, I fell asleep.

"Wake up," someone was saying as they were violently shaking me. "You're not going to sleep all day are you?'

I got up, drug myself to the bathroom, then went out to the kitchen to sit down for my morning

The night is over and another day has come. I was reminded of a special verse in the Bible that says, "It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat the bread of sorrows: for so he giveth his beloved sleep" (Psalms 127:2).

As I meditated upon this verse, the thought came to me; the more I try to do something, like sleep, the less successful I am. What I need to learn to do is to give everything over to God and trust

NEW YORKIE VALUES WILL Durst

To taunt his rival and sow seeds of evangelical doubt, Rafael Edward "Ted" Cruz informed Donald Trump that the rest of the country was concerned about his alarming New York Values, totally ignoring the greater danger of the real estate developer's aerodynamic coif toppling over and knocking innocent supporters unconscious with its hard candy shell.

The jibe was designed as a sly, wink-wink, nudge-nudge attack resurrecting deeply buried stereotypes about urban areas that also managed to carry a faint whiff of racism and anti-Semitism. It's a dog-whistle the size of the Louisiana Purchase on steroids.

This geographic schism has been celebrated in literature for centuries and elevated to a hoary trope by politicians in order to highlight their imagined connection to real rural folk. But if Cruz is the country mouse and Trump the city mouse, a lot of people are rooting for large herds of feral cats to make a speedy entrance.

It's an age-old rivalry. The difference between paths and sidewalks. Simplicity and glamor. Open spaces or 24-hour supermarkets. Porches versus high-rises. Red and blue. Mosquitoes and muggers. Meadows and low-fat caramel macchiatos.

But is it fair to make sweeping generalizations solely based on longitude and latitude? Well, yes, it is. So, besides New York, what other clichés and prejudices do our little minds instantly make when presented with specific locales? Glad you asked.

New Yorkie Values involve a lot of yipping and the sound of toenails scratching on linoleum.

New Jersey Values are almost exactly like New Yorkie Values but with bigger hair.

New Mexico Values boil every question down to whether it goes better with red or green chilies.

New Orleans Values mean partying like there's no tomorrow and encourages yesterday to bleed into tomorrow and the next day. New Hampshire Values believe in not just the electric chair, but electric

New England Patriots Values mean doing anything and everything to win, including the blurring of boundaries that lesser competitors might consider "the rules."

New Balance Values take into account sneakers and sneaker accessories. New Zealand Values revolve around sheep and sheep accessories

New Caledonia Values indicate the matrix that occurs when French culture meets the remote South Pacific. Think Tahiti without all the hustle

New Delhi Values include not just the hustle and bustle but also cows and cow effluvium where you least expect them. Washington DC Values are a mix of New Yorkie Values, New England Patriots Values and New Delhi Values. Florida Values are indicative of folks who think just plain crazy is not giving it your all. Texas Values mostly have to do with barbecue, guns and executing people, not necessarily in that order.

Wisconsin Values are totally measured by how the Green Bay Packers are doing. And cheese.

Arkansas Values are more family oriented, and totally understand that fathers can be uncles at the same time.

San Francisco Values are indicative of a tolerance for almost anything, except the intolerant. That we cannot abide. Berkeley Values are not as restrictive as San Francisco Values.

Madison Values are similar to Berkeley Values but mitigated by snow and cheese and the Packers.

Maine Values are none of your business.

HOWARD Hays As I See It

morning tastes different.'

Radford of Flint, Michigan – January 2015 One of my more dumb moments came fifteen years ago when I asked myself, "What's the worst that could happen?" I'd voted with the majority of Americans for Al Gore, was dismayed as the Supreme Court reversed our decision and handed the office to George W. Bush, but consoled myself with, "What's the worst that could happen?" ('Nuf said.) Some might have asked themselves that question ten years later, when tea-baggers swept into office at the mid-firstterm of the Obama presidency.

Among those elected was Republican Gov. Rick Snyder of Michigan. He spent $11.6 million appealing to voters wanting to rid government of those "career politicians"; who'd prefer to see government fall to a hostile takeover by a multimillionaire CEO of a venture capital firm.

Snyder started off by cutting taxes on corporations and raising them on pensioners. He was into union-busting "right-to-work" laws (which President Obama termed "right-to-workfor-less-pay"), and extending visas for thousands of skilled foreigners happy to undercut the wages of Michigan workers.

He was especially into Emergency Managers. It was originally a way for outsiders to come and straighten things out in financially strapped municipalities and school boards. But under this new administration, power was given the governor's office to toss local elected leaders and send in his own people to take over.

Under "financial martial law", those outsiders could fire elected members of local boards and councils, void union contracts, sell public assets and impose taxes on residents. All the while, state funding for municipal services was slashed ensuring there'd be more hard-hit places where the governor could come in and take over. Eventually, the majority of blacks in Michigan was under this "financial martial law", rather than governed by elected leaders.

A couple years ago there was Gov. Snyder's appointment of Kevin Orr as Emergency Manager for Detroit. Pensions were slashed, as well as funding for schools, hospitals and public safety, and there were threats to sell off priceless artworks from Detroit museums. Meanwhile, Snyder and Orr were having Detroit taxpayers chip in $400 million to help the billionaire owner of Little Caesar's build a new $650 million arena for his NHL Red Wings.

Then there was Flint, and an example of what's the worst that could happen. Gov. Snyder's Emergency Managers in Detroit and Flint dealt with clean water not as a government responsibility, but as a business deal. Flint's EM thought Detroit's water was too expensive, so decided to move ahead with plans to get its own water from Lake Huron. But that project wouldn't be ready for a couple of the worst that could happen?" If the irreversible years, so rather than continuing to pay Detroit's neurological poisoning of thousands of our kids price in the meantime, the EM decided to switch isn't the answer, then what is?

"I think the coffee in the over to water from the Flint River in order to save $5 million. The switch was made in April 2014.

Within days, residents were complaining about - General Motors retiree Dale the color, smell and taste of the water. "Boil First" warnings went out with evidence of E-coli and other bacteria, which led to pumping in more disinfectants. The following October, General Motors announced it could no longer use the water because it was corroding engine parts.

Maybe too corrosive for GM, but Flint residents were assured they had nothing to worry about - as long as there were no infants, elderly or anyone with bad immune systems in the household. There might be liver, kidney, nervous system and cancer risks, but that would be over a period of years - so nothing to worry about now.

But that wasn't the worst that could happen. Last January, Dr. Joan Rose of MSU told a citizen's meeting the cause of the murky water was stuff flaking off from inside the city's old pipes. There was talk of hooking back up with Detroit's water, but Gov. Snyder's Emergency Manager decided the $12 million cost to do so was too high.

Last August, researchers confirmed that flaking was a sign of dangerous amounts of lead in the water. Flint pediatrician Dr. Mona Hanna-Attisha explained this lead is "a neurotoxin, it affects your brain, it affects your development, it drops your IQ. It also causes problems with behavior - increases the incidence or likelihood of violent offenses, aggressive behavior." And, it's irreversible. At the time this finding was made, kids in Flint had already been drinking and bathing in this water for over a year.

A study in September found lead levels in kids 2-3 times higher than they were before the water source was switched. A Virginia Tech researcher found the water 19 times more corrosive than before. It later came out that state officials had been made aware of concerns at least since July, but Gov. Snyder's office continued insisting changes were "seasonal" and Emergency Managers determined it would be too expensive to switch back to Detroit water, anyway. And who wants to pay higher water rates?

State officials charged with protecting the public instead were determined to protect their administration by stonewalling researchers' requests for the state's own data and spinning whatever results were out there, assuring communities it was safe to drink the water that was poisoning their kids - poisoning one in ten of them, in some areas.

Finally, last October Gov. Snyder signed the measure switching Flint's water source back to Detroit - though the contamination in the pipes would remain for another six months. He deemed the water unsafe for Flint's children fully a year after GM deemed it unsafe for their engine parts.

Earlier this month, President Obama signed an emergency declaration to help Flint. It wasn't the disaster declaration Gov. Snyder wanted, because those are reserved for natural catastrophes. This one was man-made.

In deciding who to vote for, or whether just to stay home on Election Day, we might ask, "What's
