RESIDENTS RALLY TO SAVE YET ANOTHER TREE

It was almost five years ago (December 1, 2011), when tragedy struck the City of Sierra Madre and did millions of dollars of damage to structures. Fortunately, there was no loss of human life but unfortunately hundreds of trees were lost. Trees that for the most part have not been replaced and have altered the beauty of Sierra Madre somewhat. Far too many Sierra Madreans did not realize until they were gone how important to the ambience of this city trees are. They took for granted the seemingly endless tree lined streets until Mother Nature removed them from

What followed was a greater appreciation for every single leaf on every single tree in the city. (When the Pepper Tree in Kersting Court had to be removed, there was a gathering that was just short of a funeral to mourn the natural landmark.) Since the windstorm, no longer was the Tree Commission (now the Energy, Environment and Natural Resource Committee - EENR) and their like-minded friends the only champions of protecting what was left of the town's trees. Support Case in point: The Ficus Tree in front of 85 S. Baldwin.

This particular tree, pictured left, has grown beyond the confines of the sidewalk and has created a dilemma for tree lovers and city officials alike. On July 29, 2016, the Sierra Madre Department of Public Works posted notice on the tree that indicated it was scheduled to be removed due to "continuous damage to the surrounding hardscape". What followed was a flurry of activity in an effort to save the tree. Because the tree is so close to the Post Office the notice no doubt attracted more than the normal want the city to find alternatives that will save the tree.

In a telephone conversation with Public Works Director Bruce Inman, he explained that the current state of the tree and the sidewalk pose a public safety hazard. The potential hazard is not limited to people with disabilities, but also the general public as the sidewalk currently is quite uneven.

has until August 31, 2016 to file an appeal and hopefully that will help the city come up If root pruning is impossible

Option 1. Secure a Second Opinion. Though the City's a full sense of any possible root pruning to alleviate buckled sidewalk could only be made upon temporary removal of the damaged sections of sidewalk slabs. A Second Opinion from slabs. A Second Opinion from Even allowing for the time and a certified Arborist at that point expertise of the City Attorney and amount of attention, upsetting seems in order. It took 24,000 others in securing an easement, more than a few residents. They days, more or less, for this tree to as well as costs of diagnostic reach its mature splendor, but it removal of sidewalk slabs and would take less than 24 hours to getting a second opinion from remove it.

the City lift the two sidewalk slabs in question. Given the two large trees that sit on private property at 85 S. Baldwin, we might, in fact, also discover upon lifting the sidewalk slabs that the buckling has been caused or partially caused by the roots of those trees. Inman noted that the public But for complete diagnosis, access underneath the slabs is essential.

a certified Arborist, the City would still save considerable The only way to truly gauge the costs, compared to the safe root structures would be to have removal of this large tree.

> If the appeal is filed in a timely manner, the issue will come before the EENR commission at its September 21st meeting.

> For more information regarding the removal of the tree and/ or the appeals process, contact James Carlson at City Hall -(626) 355-7135.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"And what's romance? Usually a nice little tale where you have everything as you like it, where rain never wets your jacket and gnats never bite your nose, and it's always daisy-time." D. H. Lawrence

Obviously, D. H. Lawrence was in a bad mood that day, or he'd been out for a nice morning walk and gnats invaded his personal space like they're invading ours this time of year. Yep, gnats want to be inside our eyes, nose and ears and hope we'll talk so they can zip right in our mouths, too! Ugh! We did see a deer last week, all by his/her lonesome, walking through someone's yard with a dissatisfied look, nothing good to eat and no water either.

Stopped in at Goody Bags, our newest and cutest store here in town. They're at 49 W. Sierra said was: "The Department of Public Works has Madre, right on the corner and you have got to go in and meet Valerie Bango and see all the goodies she's assembled. Valerie has wanted to create a candy and gift store for twenty years. She's been a real estate agent and an appraiser, all the while storing up exciting ideas for Goody Bags. The graphics on the walls are charming and Valerie has gathered a stock of old fashioned candy, candles, bread mixes and lollypops. Oh friends, there are This, of course, brought Joyce Kilmer and "Trees" lollypops everywhere, outside the front windows in the garden, in jars, in all sorts of sizes...and she has socks! Valerie and husband, Rick, have been married for fifteen years, with three children - the aforementioned Miss Valerie my favorite question – What made you pick Sierra Madre for your new store – she responded as everyone always does, "I just love this town!" City moves forward on construction of hotel

The city council approved Monday night Environmental Impact Report for the YWCA/ Kimpton Hotel project that would rehabilitate the historic YWCA building and-construct a new two to six-story building across the street from city hall

The, approximately, 127,912-square-foot, 179room Hotel with restaurant and banquet would be bound by Garfield Avenue on the east, Union Street on the south, Marengo Avenue on the west and Holly Street on the north.

During the five hour meeting nearly 50 people spoke, of those only four people were in support of the project. Many of the speakers were opposed to the removal of parkland and the encroachment on Jackie and Mack Robinson memorials.

The group Pasadena Civic Center Coalition said they are seeking a lawsuit.

All parking for the proposed project would off-site and valet only and would be provided something many were also upset at.

Pasadena hotel hacked, credit cards compromised

Pet of the Week

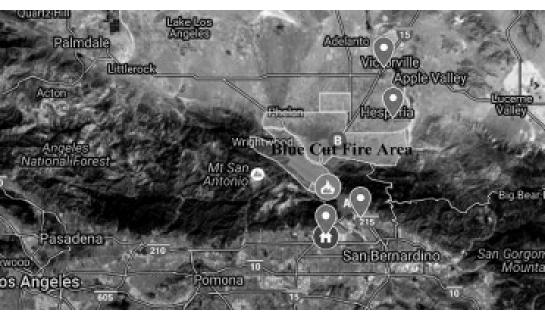

J.J. (A403288) is an adult, male, white and tan guinea pig looking for a new home. This sweet boy enjoys petting and burrowing in his bedding for a good nap. J.J. got along well with other guinea pigs in his previous home. Guinea pigs aren't able to produce their own Vitamin C, so a proper diet should include plenty of timothy hay and leafy green vegetables, and occasional fresh fruit.

The adoption fee for guinea pigs is $10.

New adopters will receive a complimentary health-andwellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information about how to care for your pet.

Call the Pasadena Humane Society & SPCA at (626) 792-7151 to ask about A403288, or visit at 361 S. Raymond Ave. in Pasadena. Adoption hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday; and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Pets may not be available for adoption and cannot be held for potential adopters by phone calls or email. Directions and photos of all pets can be found at pasadenahumane.org.

MALDEF ISSUE UPDATE

As you may be aware, last week, the City received a demand letter from a group known as the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, or MALDEF. In that letter, MALDEF has demanded that the City of Monrovia change our current at-large based system for electing City Council members to a district-based electoral

In the letter, MALDEF cites both the California Voting Rights Act of 2001 and the lack of Latino representation on the City Council as the basis for their demand. Furthermore, in their letter, MALDEF states their intention to seek judicial relief if they do not receive a satisfactory response from the City by August 24, 2016.

Here at the City, we are taking the issues raised by MALDEF seriously, especially in light of the fact that Monrovia has such a rich history of electing individuals that represent a diverse range of backgrounds and perspectives to serve on the City Council. To that end, the City Council held a special closed session meeting yesterday (Tuesday, August 16, 2016, at 5:00 p.m.) to further discuss the overall matter. As this issue unfolds, please feel free to let me know if you have any questions regarding this matter.

3 TIPS FOR KEEPING YOUR KIDS DRUG-FREE THIS SCHOOL

All parents want to feel confident that their children are happy, healthy and focused on the future. The unfortunate reality is that drug use can derail these goals and put a strain

Parents can do a lot to curtail their child's risk. Here are three tips to help keep kids drug-free this school year and beyond.

1. Get kids active in extracurricular

Adolescents aged 12 to 17 who participate in extracurricular activities are less likely to use alcohol, cigarettes and illicit drugs, according to the National Survey on Drug Use and Health (NSDUH).

Many extracurricular activities are known to have positive effects on students' grades, attention span and behavior. Afterschool activities will keep kids engaged in something positive while they are outside the classroom and also provide an incentive for staying healthy. If your school lacks a particular activity in which your child expresses interest, investigate offerings at local community centers.

2. Open the lines communication.

The importance of communicating with your child can't be overstated. A regular, open dialogue will make children more likely to talk to you about peer pressure and stress—the kinds of factors that can lead to drug

You can foster communication by regularly sitting down to dinner as a family and checking in on homework and school projects. Encourage children to invite friends over, so you know more about others with whom they spend their time.

3. Test your child.

If you suspect your child is experimenting with drugs, there are tools that can help you find out for certain in the privacy of your own home. Seventy-five percent of high school students have used addictive substances, according to CASAColumbia. Additional research by NSDUH showed that 1.8 million adolescents had used marijuana in the past month since the time of the study. Home drug testing kits are readily available at your local pharmacy so you can get answers quickly and confidentially. For example, First Check home drug tests detect up to 12 of the most commonly abused drugs in five minutes with over 99 percent accuracy. Testing tips and resources for parents can be found at firstcheckfamily.com.

Be proactive. You have the power to help kids make healthy choices this school year and beyond.

HOW TO TRACK DOWN THINGS YOU ROUTINELY MISPLACE

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can you recommend any products or devices to help seniors track down lost or misplaced items, like car keys, wallet, cell phone, etc. My husband has become forgetful in his old age, so we spend a lot of wasted time looking for things.

Frustrated Spouse

Dear Frustrated,

There are actually a wide variety of tracking devices that can help you and your husband find items that are commonly misplaced or lost. Here are some top options to consider depending on how tech savvy you are.

Smartphone or Tablet Users

If you or your husband uses a smartphone or tablet, you can easily track down lost or misplaced items like keys, a purse, wallet, remote control, smartphone, tablet or laptop with a Bluetooth tracker like TrackR (thetrackr.com, $25 or $30 per tag) or Tile (thetileapp.com, $25 per tag). Both of these products pair with an Apple or Android locate the missing item.

All you do is attach a small TrackerR or Tile tag to the items you want to keep track of with an adhesive sticker, a key ring or you can just slip it inside the item.

Then, when a tagged item goes missing, you simply access the app on your smartphone or tablet to see how far away you are from the item 100 feet, you can make the tracking device ring so you can follow the sound.

Or, if you or your husband loses your phone or tablet, both TrackR and Tile work in reverse, so you can follow the sound to locate the missing allowing you to press a button on the device to make your phone or tablet ring (even if it's on silent) as long as it's nearby. And to help you avoid leaving items behind, TrackR can be set to sound an alarm when there's too much distance between your phone and device.

Low-Tech Finders

If, however, you or your husband don't have a smartphone or tablet, there are radio frequency devices like Click 'N Dig (clickndig.com) that can help you find lost/misplaced items. This device comes with one finder fob/remote and four or six tags for $26 or $39 respectively. Attach a tag to the items you want to keep track of with adhesive or a key ring. Each tag is color-coded and corresponds to a colored button on the finder.

When an item goes missing, you simply press the colored button on the finder fob and the tag will flash and beep. The signal will go through walls and cushions, but you'll need to be within at least 60 feet of your lost item. Make sure you keep the finder fob in a safe spot, because if you smartphone or tablet app, which will help you misplace it, you won't be able to find the tagged

> Another good option, and one that doesn't require a finder fob, is Find One Find All or FOFA (findonefindall.com). This device can manage up to six items. It comes in a key-fob finder and/ or a flat, credit card sized finder for your wallet, remote, phone, tablet, etc.

These finders can be attached to items you wish or last known location on the map. If you're within to keep track of, and because each finder is also a transmitter, as long as you can find one FOFA agged item, you can locate the rest.

> FOFA finders sound an alarm when signaled item, but the range for this device is only 30 feet. Cost: $25 for two finders.

JUNK -- A CAUTIONARY TALE

"A place for everything, and everything in its into our house in February, my parents said we character, there will be harmony in the house." I wonder if the dusty pile of sneakers and flip flops in my closet implicates a questionable character, a there will be peace in the world." Shoot! Now I've got the responsibility for world peace on my guilty conscience!

At last their building project is done, and now

Although keeping ahead of my own junk is a challenge, I can only begin to imagine the physical and mental exhaustion of going through someone else's stuff! This is the daunting feat my parents are dealing with at the moment. Before they retired, neither of them had the time or energy to sort through the things they had accumulated over the years. And when my grandparents passed, my parents inherited even more stuff. Some people prefer to keep their things out of sight and out of mind in storage, but that's expensive! Therefore, my parents' things occupied the living room for a while, and then spilled over into the back room. They finally condensed it all into a tightly packed area in the garage while the house was being remodeled.

When I say that they used the garage for storage, I don't just mean that they stacked things up. Oh no! Every last cubic inch of available space was jam packed to the gills. This meant that some furniture was taken apart so that it would better fit into the brought home our very first proper dining table place." This is a familiar platitude along with could have their old dining room table (to replace other classics such as, "Cleanliness is next to the TV trays we're accustomed to eating off of). I godliness" and "Have nothing in your home that suppose there's something inherently disorderly you do not know to be useful or believe to be and tacky about TV trays --that's probably why beautiful." And then there's my personal favorite, we haven't achieved world peace yet. Anyway, our "If there is righteousness in the heart, there will be table was trapped in "the core" of stuff for a long beauty in the character. If there is beauty in the time. Every so often I'd catch a glimpse of a leg sticking out at an odd angle like an appendage in a disharmonious dwelling, or both? But it gets worse, they're faced with deconstructing the core in the "If there is harmony in the house, there will be garage. Mind you the garage dates back to the order in the nation. If there is order in the nation, 50's. It vacillates between freezing in the winter and sweltering in the summer. So you can imagine my parents' discomfort toting boxes around and dodging avalanches of "the sands of time" --literally! But any physical exertion pales in comparison to the difficulty of their decisions as to which of the things they should keep and which they should get rid of. One small box often holds a multitude of miscellaneous items generations ago, all with a certain amount of sentimental

It doesn't seem to help much whether or not there's a logical reason to keep the stuff in question. The other day my mom asked me if I wanted my old bassinet or any of its blankets or other things. "Did you make any of them?" I asked. "Yes, a couple of blankets," she said. "Okay, I'll keep them." "What are you going to do with them?" she asked. "I don't know. I can't get rid of them. You made them!"

Well, after many weeks and much deliberation, the clutter in the garage is starting to thin out. My dad's work bench is almost visible, so hopefully he'll be able to return to his ship model building before 2015. And my husband and I just recently limited space. When my husband and I moved and chairs. Maybe world peace is within our grasp!

TWO PAIRS OF PLANETS PERFORM IN THE AUGUST TWILIGHT

Step outside as the stars come out, look southwest, and you'll see an eye-catching pattern. For the next few days, bright orange Mars shines to the right of Saturn and the reddish supergiant star Antares. The three form a tall triangle that changes every night.

Mars is moving leftward on its way toward passing between the other two. On August 23 and 24, the triangle shrinks down to a nearly vertical line of three

After that, Mars will continue leftward and the triangle will widen again, now pointing in the opposite direction.

Not that the three have anything to do with each other. Mars is the nearest of them, 7 light-minutes from Earth (79 million miles). Saturn is almost a dozen times farther away: 82 light-minutes (914 million miles). Antares, the lowest of the three in the sky, is about 550 light-years in the background, or 3.3 quadrillion miles into deep space.

Fainter stars of the constellation Scorpius glimmer in

Notice that, being a star, Antares is the only one of the bright three that twinkles. That's not the star's own are always rippling through in Earth's atmosphere, mostly just a few miles from your eyes. Planets appear each point on a planet's face generally average out to a MtnViewsNews.com.

VENUS AND JUPITER TOO. Meanwhile, the two brightest planets—Venus and Jupiter—are going through a dance of their own. They're very low in the sky, due west after sunset. Look for them close to the horizon, somewhat left of where the Sun went down, 20 or 30 minutes after sunset. If you have a very low view and clear air, you'll see that Venus and Jupiter are drawing closer together every evening. Venus is the lower one. If the air is hazy, binoculars will help.

The brightest of all the planets, Venus recently returned to the evening sky after spending several months as our "morning star." We will continue to enjoy its presence as the "evening star" through the fall and winter months.

By August 24th, Venus and Jupiter will appear separated by just two finger-widths at arm's length. On the 26th they'll be less than one finger apart. Then on August 27th, they'll have such a close conjunction that you may need binoculars to see that they're two objects, not one!

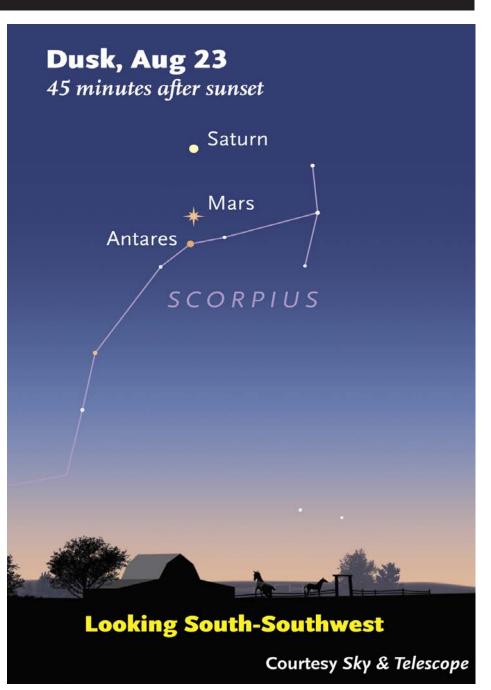

Again, looks are deceiving. The two planets merely happen to be along our same line of sight. Venus on August 27th is 13 light minutes from Earth (144 million miles), while Jupiter is four times farther: 53 lightminutes away, or 592 million miles.

Astronomers refer to such close apparent pairings as conjunctions, and this is the last of a recent trio of very close ones involving Venus and Jupiter. The other two occurred before dawn on August 18, 2014, and on October 26, 2015.

HOW I EARNED AN INCOME AND LEARNED TO SPEND LESS

following is adapted from a book I wrote about that period called "Squatter in Los Angeles," available as a Kindle book.

I had no regular job during this period, though I earned $5 each week by writing an outdoor column for a local paper. It wasn't much money, but it seemed to add up when I my name out there, and I began to get requests to give talks to local groups and to lead walks

Even though I paid no rent, I did have a utility and phone bill to pay, so I needed a bit me to attend the various small classes offered by the non-profit during the week. I found work doing such tasks as roofing, framing, writing magazine articles.

I landed a part-time job doing typesetting, which also led to my writing for that little newspaper, the Altadena Chronicle, owned by Sue and Rich Redman. I thought I was on top of the world with that income and my $5 a week income from the local paper. I also ended up doing some framing and painting at the newspaper office when they remodeled.

In reality, I was on the edge of poverty financially, and yet I felt good, at peace most of the time, and loved to try new things and experiment. My primary source of mental stimulation was through my classes and involvement with the non-profit next door, and I believed this was the most important work I could do. In fact, there was no reason why I could not have gotten some full-time job like all my friends, or enrolled back into college full-time and gotten a degree that would that his own peers would have regarded him enable me to earn a reasonable income. But as a saint and savior. Wrong! I was starting to see driveway. Furthermore, I constantly wavered that there were more between confidence and doubt that my way of life had any effect whatsoever on the direction the planet was taking.

My time was divided between my work, my studies and research with the non-profit organization that brought me to Highland Park in the first place. I drove a Honda 90 motorcycle at the time that got 100 miles to bum who chose not the gallon so my transportation costs were to work and who just information about his classes and books, go to I read Thoreau's Walden Pond for the www.Schoolof Self-Reliance.com, or Box 41834, first time during this period, and found my state of mind frequently resonating with the basic themes in the book. Remember, From 1977 until 1979, I was a squatter in Thoreau wasn't a bum, or a drop-out, or an an abandoned house in Los Angeles. The alcoholic. Actually, for that matter, he was no squatter either, for the land where he was given permission to do his "experiment" was owned by fellow writer and friend William Emerson. He built for himself a little house (a "shack" by most accounts), and did a lot of his writing there. It would be accurate to say that Thoreau – like me – was profoundly interested got a check at the end of each month. It also got in the very meaning of life and wanted to discover the point of all the rushing about to get somewhere. Unable to discover these answers in his town, Thoreau built and moved into his little shack in the woods and learned how to grow the food that he ate, and found more than $5 a week. I sought out part time it nourishing and satisfying. Indians and work here and there which would still allow trappers would visit and talk, and somehow through this unprejudiced intercourse, he found that all people were more alike then different, and a life lived for purely material reasons is a life wasted.

Now I found myself in a similar setting, though it wasn't in the woods but a ruralish part of Los Angeles. I had no pond nearby, but I did manage to get over the Arroyo Seco which was as close to my personal Walden Pond as I felt I would get.

At night, thinking over the day's classes and studies, typing up my notes and insights, I often ruminated over how life should be lived, and wondered why we take up so much time and waste so much of life on trivial

I did learn some years later when Thoreau was mentioned by the academics he was regarded as a brilliant intellectual who discovered the simple reality that was right in front of everyone. Be here now. Imagine. The kingdom is within. Which is why I naturally assumed they said that in the day, Thoreau was by no

HOT... AND I LOVE IT

Recently it has been rather hot around here. A little hotter than usual, in my estimation. I really don't know if it is getting hotter or as I get older, I'm not able to handle the hot weather.

words out, "it's hot outside."

That did it for me. I did not need to go outside to check to see if it was hot outside, I did not have to listen to the weather report to see how hot it was, the wife said it was hot and therefore it was hot.

I have learned after a gazillion years of marriage that life is a lot more pleasant when you agree with your spouse. I would not say this in public, but, she is not always right, but I will never tell her when she is wrong. Of course, I cannot think of any time right now when she was ever wrong. However, that does not close the book for the holding my breath.

Truthfully, I must admit that she has been right concerning the weather. It has been hot and everybody is complaining about how hot it is, even her better half. When she complains about it being too hot, it is too hot, guaranteed! Not only is it too hot, but the humidity has gone out of sight. "The air is so heavy outside," my wife said which means the humidity is really bad.

For the longest time I was also complaining about how hot it was outside. Then I had one of those, what do you call it, euphoric moments. You know what I mean, a moment when something bad all of a sudden has a good side to it. Well, I

I did not realize this until the other day when my wife said something along the line, "Don't you think you should go out and mow the backyard?"

advantage, at least for someone like me.

At the time, I was busily engaged in reading a book. I cannot remember what book it was but I did not want to stop where I was at and go out and mow the backyard. As I was reaching for my bookmarker to put in my book so I could come back and pick up where I left off, a brilliant thought exploded in my mind.

Specializing in:

I love it when a plan comes together! The conversation went something like this.

"I would love to go out and mow the backyard," said with a deep sigh, "but it's just too hot outside Whoever invented air-conditioning needs today." When I said that I was expecting a little confrontation from the other side of the room. But I was greatly surprised.

"Yes," she said stammering a little bit, "it's too hot to go outside and mow the grass."

That was it! I won this battle. I was so excited, this is probably the first time ever I won anything like this but I could not get back to reading my "My goodness," she said hardly able to get the book. I wanted to break out into my happy dance. It is not every day that I accomplish something this significant.

Then, not surprisingly, she wanted to know if I could help her go outside and do something. I rather forget what it was but I took it as an opportunity to try my new ploy.

That sounds like a wonderful thing," I said as cheerfully as I could grind it up, "but don't you think it might be just a little too hot to go out and do that kind of work?"

I had no idea if this would work, but I was

'You know," she said rather slowly, "I think you're right. It's probably too hot for us to go out and work up such a sweat." She then walked away. Talk about wanting to break into your happy dance! Did I discover something or what?

Just this morning she said something to the effect that we needed to go to the store to get a few things. I was just about ready to open my mouth when she said, "And, if you mention how hot it is outside, you will be in deep, deep trouble." And she was not smiling.

"Oh, no, my dear," I said as I got up out of my chair, "the weather is perfect to go to the store."

Obviously, there was no perchance of breaking into my happy dance; however, I did put on a happy smile.

One thing I have learned and that is no matter I found that being too hot outside is a great how bad a situation may be, there is always something good that you can discover. Sometimes it's rather difficult to find anything good in some

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

EQUINE THERAPY: SERENITY FOR THE SOUL. TRANQUILITY FOR THE TROOPS

The concept of using canines for comfort therapy is nowhere near new to most of us dog lovers and others alike. In fact, the idea of dogs helping bring up the spirits of people who are sick or distressed has been around for centuries. And in this day and age, the culture of having comforting canines come to hospitals, nursing homes, rehab centers and schools to lend a helping paw to people in pain has become common practice.

Dogs doing what they do best - loving unconditionally - is certainly not a foreign concept, but how often do you hear about horses bringing hope to a broken soul or healing to a broken heart? Actually, equine therapy is more common than you might think. Spending time with the equine has indeed proven to be just the right medicine for many people seeking some semblance of serenity in their lives.

I happened to pick up a free magazine in front of a real estate office during a dog walk in town this past week, and in it I read about one amazing lady who is very aware of how a human/horse relationship can have a remarkably positive impact on the mind, body and soul. For Jennifer O'Neill, equine therapy has played a big part in living a peaceful life since she was a young child.

Most folks (at least the ones from my generation) best know O'Neill as an awesome actress. She played several major roles in a list of Hollywood hits such as "MASH", "Love Story", "The Exorcist", "The Godfather" and many more. Most of her films came out years ago, so while we 'older folks' may have memories of her on the silver screen, the younger generation may not. But with the numerous globally-good things O'Neill is currently involved in, she need not rely on the roles she played in her early acting career to maintain a good name.

One of the many notable accomplishments
Jennifer O'Neill has achieved in recent years is her special way of reaching out to a part of our population that is, far too often, overlooked. Early in life, she recognized the amazing healing affect that spending time and sharing love with horses had on herself and others. As she grew older she horses. Love and let live.

also began to recognize the need for such healing among the brave souls who put their lives on the line for our nation's freedom.

With a deep compassion and a strong conviction that interaction with horses has a healing affect, O'Neill decided to create a place where she could freely share that rare and natural source of peace and comfort with the people whom she believes deserve it most - veterans of war, active military troops, first responders and their families.

At Hillenglade, O'Neill's sprawling horse ranch located in the rural outskirts of Nashville, Tennessee, welcomed visitors are known to find new hope through kind equine interaction and other relaxing and therapeutic activities designed to bring serenity to the soul and healing to the heart.

Having been raised in a military family herself, O'Neill understands and appreciates the unique needs many of our troops and first responders are left with after the fact. For many, the mind, body and spirit are depleted and weary due to trauma stemming from the extreme, unsettling and lifethreatening experiences they've had to endure. They are often left in desperation for all three forms of nourishment with no idea where to go to

To O'Neill, it just seemed like the natural thing to do, to open up her heart and offer up her horses as comforting companions to those she considers be America's greatest hero's. She is a sincerely patriotic woman with a strong drive to help others thrive, and the best way she could think of to accomplish that goal was to introduce the troops, first responders and their loved ones to her furry, four-legged, kind equine friends.

I know from personal experience that horses can heal the heart and lend serenity to the soul. They just do it, because that's what they do. They don't have to work themselves up to it. They don't dread doing it or feel as if they are being put out. It just comes natural for them to be a comfort to us. I find that amazing. And equally amazing to me is a remarkable lady like Jennifer O'Neill. This is a woman who possesses a unique brand of kindness and willingness to reach out and help others.

O'Neill makes it her business to be a burdenbearer on behalf of those who fight for our freedom and put themselves in harm's way to protect the lives of others. It is heart-warming to know there are people out there like Jennifer O'Neill, and it tells you something about what happens to the heart of a human who spends a lot of time with

PET OF THE WEEK: BOO BOO: ANIMAL ID #A4981640

Boo Boo (A4981640) is a gregarious 7-year-old white male Maltese and Miniature Poodle who was surrendered to the Baldwin Park Animal Care Center on August 9th for no good reason. Weighing 13 pounds, Boo-Boo is quite scared in the shelter and is looking for familiar faces, eagerly scanning the surroundings in the shelter yard. He walks well on leash, showed signs of being housebroken, and likes other dogs. In fact, when he saw another white dog about his own size, he became overjoyed, excited, and tried to get the other pup's attention by barking. Once he was taken over to meet that dog, he sniffed him and instantly settled down by him, seemingly feeling like he was with a friend (we think he might have had a buddy in his former home who resembled this dog). Boo Boo has a skin condition on parts of his body and around his eye that the shelter hasn't named but that we think is likely to clear up once he is in a less stressful living situation and getting good care and nutrition. He should, of course, be seen by an outside vet for these issues. Boo-Boo was cooperative with the groomer and shows every sign of being a sweet and easygoing family dog for any household. We also think he'll be classically fluffy and gorgeous once he's been given proper love and care.

To meet Boo Boo in person, please see him at the Baldwin Park Shelter, located at 4275 N. Elton, Baldwin Park, CA 91706 (Phone: 626-962-3577). He is currently available now. For any inquiries about Boo Boo, please reference his animal ID number: A4981640. The shelter is open seven days a week, 12 pm-7 pm Monday-Thursday and 10am-5pm Friday-Sunday. This is a high-intake shelter with a great need for adoptions. For more information about Boo Boo or the adoption process, contact United Hope for Animals Volunteer Adoption Coordinator Samantha at Samantha@hope4animals.org. THE FUTURE OF ALTADENA????

DID YOU KNOW that the County is planning to make changes to the Community Standard District (CSD) guidelines for Altadena that could allow developers to build five story buildings along Lake Avenue and other commercially zoned areas? The changes proposed for would also allow for more drive-thru establishments to be built in the commercial areas in Altadena.

The CSD says....

NEW PROPOSED CSD IS: P.23 Bii "Height. Except in the Lake Ave. Mixed Use Zone, maximum height shall be 35 feet.... and P. 33 Lake Avenue Specific Development Standards.

- 1. Height limits. The maximum height limit permitted in the area for a commercially zoned property is 48 feet (up from 35)
- 2. Drive through will be allowed within twenty feet from a residential area and does not require a concrete block wall between residential and commercial drive thru. Will allow 24 hour operation.
- 3. Will have enforcement of fence and hedge heights.

SEE INFORMATIONAL VIDEO:

http://cfpup.org/2016/08/altadena-csd-revisions-and-why-you-need-to-be-concerned/

A CSD committee has been put together by the County made up of 11 people that claim to represent the 43,000+- people living in Altadena. Do you know who they are and are they representing your desires for Altadena?

What you need to do NOW

Contact Supervisor Antonovich and his Land Use deputy, Adel Vizcarra and demand

- 1. That meetings be held in Altadena to allow those that will be affected by these changes have an opportunity to learn about the CSD plans and provide input.

LEARNING LESSONS

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

I've mentioned before that I am a work in progress as an Artistic Director. I have learned so much these last few years - but still, I get walloped by events and have to muster the fight and energy to keep moving

The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee closes this Sunday with a completely sold-out weekend. This follows an almost sold-out weekend last week. After running for six weeks this Ovation Recommended and extremely well-reviewed show started selling. The difference - Frances Baum Nicholson's review appeared in the Star-News. I have discounted the value of reviews before, but now I've had to adjust my thinking and accept that some reviews in certain outlets CAN make a difference. I wish it had happened sooner – for the cast, who played for houses some nights of 35 and for the Playhouse, which still relies on box office to make our budget. We'll end up losing money on this show and we shouldn't have.

CarneyMagic is on stage next from Thursday, August 25 through Sunday, August 28. For those of you who missed John Carney's show in May, here's your chance to see one of the world's best sleight-of-hand magicians. There are still tickets available for every show. I do hope you'll come out to see him – you will be so glad you did.

We've had to postpone Bee-luther-hatchee until January. Suddenly one of the creative team members became unavailable and we decided to postpone the show rather than go on without them. This may be a blessing in disguise as it gives us more time to properly market this unknown show AND will allow it to coincide with Black History Month. A more natural fit for the show. I'm very disappointed, however, as it was going to be my return to acting. I know the cast was disappointed when I contacted them, but we felt we had to make this decision. I do hope it goes off as plan – I think it is a very worthy show.

We now have a hole in our programming and I'm going to have to do some dancing to fill it. We have a couple of prospects, but nothing sure.

We also had to cancel the Off the Page Reading of Foxfire this Monday night. We didn't get the rights in time to properly cast and rehearse the reading. I'm sorry to disappoint the many patrons who look forward to this new series, but again, given our small staff, it became too difficult to substitute something else at the last minute.

So these are the lessons I'm learning. Lessons that keep me up at night. I still think my time at the Playhouse is worth the stress. I'm proud of what we've accomplished and thrill to hear the wonderful comments we get.

This is your Playhouse. Please let me hear from you. Please visit our website at SierraMadrePlayhouse. org or call Mary at 626.355.4318 to purchase tickets.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

FIVE REASONS TO NEVER GIVE AN OUTRIGHT INHERITANCE TO YOUR CHILDREN -AND WHAT TO DO INSTEAD!

for your children. It's likely a big part of the reason you work so hard. But far too often, the way an inheritance is left actually does more harm than good. And that's something no parent wants.

kids could put everything you've left behind at risk. Why, how, and what can you do about it?

Let me share with you the five reasons leaving an outrightinheritancetoyourkidsisamistakeandthen show you the way to protect your kids' inheritance not just for them, but for generations to come.

Your Child's Future Divorce

According to current statistics, forty-two percent (42%) of our children will divorce during their lifetime. In most divorces property is divided evenly. So if you have a married child, or a child who will get married in the future, and you leave them an inheritance, and they later divorce, as much as half of their inheritance could go to their ex-spouse. You aren't working as hard as you are to support your child's future ex-spouse, right?

Bankruptcy

Your child may incur such extreme debt that the only possible relief will come through bankruptcy.

Possible causes of such debt are a business venture gone bad or a major health event such as addiction, mental illness, accident, or disease that results in either a temporary or permanent inability to work in combination with staggering

Bankruptcy does happen to good people so why not ensure the inheritance you leave behind will never be at risk due to a mistake or health issue?

Unintentional neglect that injures someone else's it. person or property could wipe out an inheritance these recent lawsuit judgments:

$49 million in California for an automobile accident where the family of 21-year-old college student sued drivers of two vehicles involved in the multi-vehicle crash. The plaintiff's counsel claimed one defendant was sleep-deprived, while the other was on their cell phone. The plaintiff was in a coma for one month and happiness, is expected to require lifetime 24-hour care.

$20 million in Florida for an ATV accident where a teenage male was killed while riding an ATV on the neighbor's property. The neighbor had invited him to drive the ATV, permitting him to operate it without proper safety equipment and without adult supervision. The teenage male struck a fence and was killed.

$11.9 million in Florida for an internet defamation suit brought by a Florida consultant against a Louisiana woman for posting defamatory statements about the plaintiff on an internet bulletin board. The defendant called the plaintiff a "crook" and a "fraud."

$5.9 million in Maryland in a dog-bite case where a 16-month-old child was attacked and killed by a pit bull kept at the home of a family

It is easy to see how well intended, but neglectful behavior on the part of your children could completely wipe out any inheritance you leave

4. Mismanagement

I have many clients who tell me they do not trust their children to manage money. This could mean that their children are spendthrifts, unwise investors, or easily manipulated out of the money. And, the statistics support this for nearly 20% of inheritors.

According to Prof. Jay L. Zagorsky of Ohio State University, 40% of individuals inheriting less than $100,000 will spend or lose the entire inheritance with about half as many who inherit more than $100,000 spending or losing the entire inheritance. It's quite likely that if that inheritance was left in a different way those numbers would greatly improve. I'll share more with you about that below.

5. Lost Work Ethic:

Some people simply can't handle prosperity. In fact, that may even be most people. For example, Thomas Stanley and William Danko in their book, The Millionaire Next Door, uncovered research showing that children who received an inheritance were worth four-fifths less than others in their same profession who didn't. Vic Preisser, of the Institute for Preparing Heirs, If you're like me, you want to leave an inheritance says that unprepared children who inherit money are susceptible to excessive spending, identity loss, and guilt over receiving money they didn't earn. Preisser says, "In a year to 18 months, everything ood. And that's something no parent wants.

Giving outright ownership of our assets to our falls apart -- marriage, finances -- and if there is a drug problem it becomes worse." Thus leaving an outright inheritance to our kids may do more harm than good.

As you can see, an outright inheritance is usually NOT the best answer for your kids.

Most lawyers would tell you that the answer is to leave your kids' their inheritance in a Trust and they'd be right, but they would likely still distribute that Trust outright to your kids at specific ages or

But there's an even better plan (far better, in fact).

The Alternative

An alternative to an outright inheritance to your children ("outright" meaning they both personally own and can personally lose the inheritance) is to gift your assets to your children at the time of your death via a Legacy Asset Protection Trust.

A Legacy Asset Protection Trust can be drafted to give your children full control of their inheritance (if you choose), but ensure they never own the inheritance. And because the rule of law is you can't lose what you never owned, you are gifting your children with lifetime, airtight asset protection, of the kind they couldn't give themselves at any price.

When you gift an inheritance to your children via a Legacy Asset Protection Trust, the trust owns the property, not your children. Thus, if your children ever get divorced, file bankruptcy, or are ordered to pay damages in a lawsuit, they can't lose the inheritance, simply because they never owned

And if they use their inheritance wisely (and you leave your children. For example, consider the trust can be set up to help them do that too), those assets can grow and be passed down via another Legacy Asset Protection Trust from your children to their children and so on. In fact, this tool is something that really helps families grow their assets and build wealth from generation to

If you read Superman comics as a kid, you're probably familiar with Bizarro World the planet where everything is the opposite of life on Earth. I bring it's clear Donald this up because

Trump is running for president of Bizarro World.

Trump is on track to lose female voters like no other candidate in modern times — a new poll in pivotal Florida says that he's losing white women by 17 points so you would think, here on Earth, that he'd want to prepare for the autumn debates by enlisting an adviser who's politically savvy about women. But no. Hewing to the rules of Bizarro World, Trump will take debate advice from Roger Ailes — the Fox News chairman who lost his job amidst allegations that he sexually harassed at least 20 women.

Trump is bursting with Bizarro behavior these days. He has no chance — zero, nada — of winning Maine or Connecticut or Wisconsin ... so naturally he has campaigned this month in all three. He's trying to pitch himself to black voters ... so naturally he staged a rally in a white suburb. He badly needs to broaden his "appeal" beyond the fever swamp ... so naturally he announced this week (in yet another staff shakeup) that his new campaign CEO is Steve Bannon, the notorious chairman of Breitbart News, a fever swamp website that's pitched to people who think Fox News is too nice.

Bannon is bad enough — conservative critic Erick Erickson says the Trump campaign is "moving from dumpster fire to Chernobyl" — but the fateful pairing of Trump and Ailes is what fascinates me most. Two serial sexists, jointly plotting their last hurrah. They deserve each Even as various Trump flacks tried to deny that Ailes is on board, it's patently obvious why Trump wants him around. Ailes is the acknowledged master of using television to fool gullible viewers. Long before he ever worked his magic at Fox News, creating a misinformation propaganda shop that masquerades as Pennsylvania.

journalism, Ailes made his bones repairing and honing the TV images of Republican candidates. And no candidate has ever needed image repair more than

TRUMP DESERVE EACH OTHER

Ailes won't be the only voice in Trump's ear as debate season draws near, but he alone brings expertise dating back to Dick Nixon in 1968. His task that year, as Nixon's media adviser, was to package a New Nixon in place of the Old Nixon. The Old Nixon was paranoid and polarizing; the New Nixon was wise and mature. It was all fakery, of course, but Ailes did his job well. He crafted 30-minute infomercials that featured Nixon taking a lot of softball questions in TV studios from citizens pre-chosen by Ailes. The studio spectators applauded every It'll be the challenge of Ailes' career to soften Trump's detestable image, especially during his debates with Hill-ary Clinton. It's one thing to fool the credulous viewers of Fox News, but it'll be tough to foist a New Trump on the broader, skeptical public.

During debate prep, Ailes will probably try to shave down Trump's rough edges, try to make people forget the divisive bellowing buffoon. Heck, even an alleged sexual harrasser understands that female viewers won't vote for an alpha male who vells at a woman.

But there are two big problems: (1) Trump doesn't listen to anybody, and (2) The rest of Trump's brain trust — new CEO Steve Bannon, Putin-compromised Paul Manafort, and new campaign manager Kellyanne Conway (who has toiled in vain for 20 years trying to get more women to vote Republican) — will be competing to make Trump listen. Bannon, for instance, is not big on image makeovers; he thinks that Trump should just be Trump.

How sad for Roger Ailes. He may have launched his political career as a genius, but now, after leaving Fox News in disgrace, he risks going down in the smoking wreckage.

JOHN L. Micek

TWO CAMPAIGN CONTROVERSIES VOTERS SHOULDN'T SHRUG OFF

If you ever wonder why some people think the game is rigged, why they believe the rich get access to government and power and influence the way the average working stiff doesn't, then two headlines are instructive.

Earlier this week, The New York Times reported that Paul Manafort, the campaign manager for Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump, had popped up in a secret ledger" showing $12.7 million in cash payments were earmarked for him from a political party headed by Ukraine's former president, a pro-Russian strongman named Viktor F. Yanukovych.

That came on top of revelations last week of what appears to have been an entirely too cozy relationship between Democrat Hillary Clinton's State Department and major donors to the controversy-prone Clinton Foundation.

Both incidents are each, for their own reasons, profoundly troubling. And they would be, on their own, in a normal campaign year, a serious argument for disqualification for the respective candidates. But this isn't any other year. The voting public has proven strikingly immune (or perhaps is now simply indifferent) to shocking, shameful or embarrassing things the Democratic and Republican nominees have said or done. However, there is something more unsavory and unseemly about Manafort's

Ukrainian payday and the reports that Clinton's State Department skated right up to the edge of "pay-to-play." Let's stipulate up front that the skills of a political consultant like Manafort are entirely portable. Getting a candidate elected in Pretoria isn't that much different from getting one elected in Pittsburgh. The difference here, of course, is the candidate. Yanukovych was a strongman whose stormy tenure was beset by allegations of police abuse and corruption, according to There's no evidence Manafort, based on the ledgers, received any cash. And he has denied taking any. Even still, it's more than a little troubling that Trump would pick a guy who was apparently okay with shilling for someone as repellent as the pro-Russian

Meanwhile, at issue for Clinton are two email conversations, dating from 2009 and made public by the right-leaning Judicial Watch.

They showed that Douglas J. Band, then the head of the Clinton Global Initiative, pressed senior Clinton aides Huma Abedin and Cheryl D. Mills to arrange a meeting between a foundation donor and a senior State Department official.

That donor, Gilbert Chagoury, has denied that a meeting with anyone at the State Department ever took place. And he says that he was just trying to relay information about his home country of Lebanon, The Post reported.

As The Post also notes, Clinton herself was not involved. But Abedin, who simultaneously (and improperly) worked at both the State Department and Clinton Foundation, was involved and apparently encouraged the interaction.

And, no, there's no direct evidence of illegality here. Even so, it doesn't pass the basic smell test. In the end, a deep-pocketed donor received favorable consideration in a way that is unimaginable (and unavailable) to the average citizen. And that's just unacceptable.

If Trump is serious about his bumper-sticker pledge to make America great (whether it needs to be made great "again" is open to debate), then he can't employ a guy who takes money from governments whose values are not consonant with our own. And if Clinton is going to credibly champion the little guy on the stump, then she needs to thoroughly explain (and perhaps be held to account by voters) why the Clinton Foundation was not a favor bank for the rich and powerful. And then she needs to reassure voters that it will never happen in the White House.

And if neither thing happens, then ask yourself (again) why people think the game is rigged. It shouldn't be hard to answer.

MAKING SENSE by Michael Reagan

TRUMP NEEDS MORE VOTES, LESS APPLAUSE

I've finally figured out what Donald Trump's main problem is. No jokes, please.

It's because at his core he's an entertainer who's looking for applause, not a politician who's looking for votes.

Applause makes you feel good on stage at the Improv or at the end of a Broadway play. But it doesn't get you elected.

If Trump really wants to save what's left of Western Civilization from four years of President Hillary Clinton, he's got to learn how to get his message out to more voters. When he gives his big policy speeches, he does fine. The addresses he delivered recently about fighting terrorism and fixing the economy were generally good.

They'd make good stump speeches and he should shorten them to twenty minutes and repeat at least one of them every day.

But the most important thing about those careful, joke-free teleprompter speeches wasn't what Trump said or even how he said it.

It was that he was speaking to the whole country, not just the people in the auditorium. He wasn't seeking the instant approval of the audience with his "Crooked Hillary" shtick or promises to build a border wall and make Mexico pay for it. In those two serious policy speeches Trump did what my father did in Berlin in 1987 at the Brandenburg Gate, when he told Mikhail Gorbachev to "Tear down this Wall!"

My father wasn't merely speaking to the huge crowd in front of him, he was speaking beyond them to all the people on the other side of the Berlin Wall who were not free. Trump has to start speaking to a wider, broader, larger audience -- the independents and Republicans that he's got to get to vote for him.

He needs to do it every day. He can't slip back to delivering his applause lines. We've heard those jokes.

We'll soon see whether Trump's new team of Kellyanne Conway and Steve Bannon can make a difference in his behavior or focus.

Conway is a pro who knows what she's doing. But you can hire the best people on the planet and it won't help if you don't listen to them. While Team Trump is in a hiring mood, how about finding someone who actually knows how to stage a campaign speech?.

When Trump was in Wisconsin earlier this week talking about the economy and how the Democrat Party's has failed and betrayed black people, I don't think I saw a single black person.

It was incredibly amateurish stagecraft.

President Obama.

It'd be like giving an important policy speech about the plight of out-of-work coal miners to an audience of nuns or guys in three-piece suits.

I realize Trump isn't exactly surrounded by black supporters. And I know the part of Wisconsin he was in was 95 percent white.

But couldn't someone in his campaign have found fifty black people to be in the crowd so the media couldn't react in the knee-jerk way they did?

My father's media genius, the late deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver, would have had a thousand blacks in that audience even if he had had to pay them to be there.

Trump has to do a lot more learnin' and a lot more hirin'. And if he doesn't do it real soon he'll be back running his business empire, living a quiet life in Trump Tower and getting in almost as many rounds of golf each week as all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of DOROTHY SPANGLER BRANDLEY.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: DOROTHY SPANGLER

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by RONALD JAMES BRANDLEY in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

PETITION PROBATE requests RONALD JAMES that BRANDLEY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The WILL and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 09/15/16 at 8:30AM in Dept. 9 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
