trees are suffering from drought property. Sierra Madre is not the only community in Southern California that is experiencing this problem. According to the primary cause for the rapid decline and death of these trees is a reduction in soil moisture content and levels caused by the multiple-year drought. As you may have noticed, some species Some of Sierra Madre's mature in our Community Forest are harder hit than others.

Public Works staff would like the community to know that it is our intention to have dead they provide shade to reduce or non-viable trees removed as quickly as possible. Dead or non-viable trees may pollutants from the watershed, eventually become hazards from branch or total failure, and also become homes for inherently much more valuable pests that can further damage our Community Forest. Supervisor Michael D. Antonovich remembered those who died, the firefighters and law enforcement who perished in rescue efforts, and called for renewed awareness and preparedness.

September 11, 2001 was a dawn that will see no sunset. I was in Washington D.C. on that fateful day and witnessed firsthand the devastating aftermath of the attack on our Pentagon. Fifteen years later, we remember the thousands of innocent victims who perished ,the heroic first responders and the men and women in our armed services fighting to protect our nation. Our thoughts and prayers are with their families and we will never forget their sacrifice. prevent future acts of terror, we must remain vigilant and prepared. While our Armed Forces and allies fight terrorism abroad, LA County agencies continue to monitor and prevent attacks locally and prepare for the possibility of an incident. It is vital for each of us, in our communities and neighborhoods, to be vigilant in observing any potential threat or violent act and reporting it to authorities. If you see something, say something.

SAVE THE 85 S. BALDWIN FICUS: APPEAL LETTER FILED

Sierra Madre resident Daniel Golden filed a formal appeal with the city in an effort to save the Ficus tree on North Baldwin. The appeal is requesting a temporary halt to plans for removal of the tree pending further research and examination of the tree and the buckled sidewalk. It also requested that the matter be placed on the September 21st Agenda of the Energy, Environment and Natural Resource Commission meeting.

The story behind the appeal was published in this newspaper August 20th. (http:// mtnviewsnews.com/v10/htm/ n34/index.htm).

Golden believes, "there may be other solutions that could preserve the tree and ensure public safety for all." He offers the city two options:

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

"If all the cars in the United States were placed end to end, it would probably be Labor Day weekend." Doug Larson

Walking Sierra Madre on Labor Day weekend has been splendid. Saturday's weather was so perfect that I didn't have to close the windows and turn on the A/C. Of course, the only thing wrong with Saturday was the start of the long-awaited, long-anticipated start of college football. Watching Texas A & M stomp all over UCLA – 31 to 24 – was sad but when Alabama wiped the stadium floor with the Trojans – 52 to 6 – that was flat out depressing. We did see a fantastic game Sunday afternoon: Texas Longhorns vs. Notre Dame. That one went into double overtime with Texas winning 50-47. As our Texas girls are all Longhorn supporters, we were delighted.

It was so cool Sunday morning that...dare I say it...we were chilly while walking. It's been so long since we were chilly outside that we hardly knew what to say. Labor Day Monday started out with another cool morning and beautiful blue and pink flavored clouds filling the sky.

All the changes are complete at St. Rita's and we stopped to admire the planters, which have some stunning crepe myrtles in place, some succulent things and a bunch of spider plants, which grow with determination and send out runners to make more. My kinda plant! These plants will effectively screen off the seven huge air conditioners they have there in the corner. St. Rita's is going to be cool, friends and neighbors! The new steps and railings are gorgeous and if you haven't stopped by to take a look,

Labor Day Monday was very very quiet. I said to my walking buddy and BFF, John, that tomorrow will be different. Tomorrow will be bedlam, chaos, and a traffic nightmare as all the children return to school. We're kind of excited as we love to hear them playing. Speaking of playing, the little kids' play area at St. Rita's – around the corner on Alegria – has been raked perfectly smooth, all the toys are in plastic boxes and it Blog: www.authordeanne.com ooks so lonely without a herd of little people in there. Tomorrow! Took pictures of these scarecrows along Grandview. So clever!

Made this really easy crustless quiche which I adapted from a recipe I saw in the Costco Magazine.

Grape Tomato & Cauliflower Ouiche Preheat oven to 350.

1 small cauliflower, cut into small florets and steamed till tender (about 8 minutes in a microwave steamer bag)

2 TB Olive Oil 2 TB butter ½ an onion, chopped

Put the butter and olive oil in a small pan, melt the butter, add the onion and sauté till it's tender

½ cup fresh basil, chopped (I didn't have that so just used a tsp. of basil flakes)

1 cup all purpose flour 1-1/2 tsp. baking powder

1-1/2 tsp. kosher salt ¼ tsp. ground turmeric

½ tsp. ground cumin

Pinch of chili flakes

Ground pepper to taste 5 oz. Parmesan cheese grated (I used good ol' Kraft's in the green can) 1-1/2 cups grape tomatoes, sliced (use a serrated knife)

Whisk the eggs, add in the onion, combine all the dry ingredients and add to the egg mixture. Gently stir in the cauliflower and tomatoes. Spray a large pie pan - I used a 10" - add the mixture. Place on middle rack and bake 40-45 minutes till golden brown and set. Remove from oven and let set 15-20 minutes. Slice into wedges and enjoy!

Incidentally, if you haven't seen Pete's Dragon yet, you need to treat yourself. It's an excellent movie and Robert Redford is great.

GREAT GEAR AND TOOLS TO MOTIVATE STUDENTS THIS BACK-TO-SCHOOL SEASON

(StatePoint) While some students are eager to return to the classroom, others may need a little motivation and inspiration.

Add a bit of excitement to the new school year by gearing up with the latest and greatest educational tools and school accessories.

A New Set of Wheels

Make getting out the door more appealing by giving students a way to get to school and other activities in style. A new set of wheels -- bicycle wheels that is -- encourages exercise and fosters independence. Just be sure you opt for a model that has the latest safety and durability features.

Any great bike is not complete without a helmet. With so many cool designs and styles available today, finding one that fits properly and looks great should not be a challenge.

Innovative Music Equipment

Help inspire young musicians with space-saving equipment that doesn't compromise sound or quality. For example, the latest addition to Casio's well-known Privia line of digital pianos, the PX-160, features the sound of a 9-foot concert grand with speakers that project towards both the player and audience. It provides split and layer capability allowing students to play bass with the left hand and have two layered tones for the right.

A great feature for the student learning to play is duet mode, which allows the keyboard to be split into two equal ranges, so the student and teacher can play simultaneously. The model also features left and right 1/4" audio outputs, making it easy for musicians to connect to other devices for external amplification or recording purposes, as well as simulated ebony and ivory-textured keys for a realistic piano touch. More information can be found at CasioMusicGear.com.

Study Aid

Ease the pain of cramming for an exam with a high-quality music system that allows users to stream their favorite tracks via Bluetooth from a computer or mobile device and is paired with an excellent set of speakers. There are many set-ups  $\ensuremath{t\bar{h}at}$  are perfect for portability and small rooms -- ideal for high schoolers, college students and others on-the-go.

Send your student to school in style. Great new tools and accessories can give the new school year a bit of extra appeal, while encouraging students to get active, get creative and hit the books.

EYE EXAMS AND CLEAR VISION EMPOWER STUDENTS TO LEARN MORE

Every child deserves the opportunity to excel in the classroom, and clear vision empowers students to perform up to twice as well in school, according to research from the Rural Education Action Program. In fact, experts at The Vision Council confirm that 80 percent of children's learning occurs through visual processing.

Unfortunately, many kids are missing out by not getting proper eye care. Thirty-five percent of children have never seen a vision care professional, according to The Vision Care Institute. And of those that do take and fail a vision screening, a large portion don't receive follow-up from an eye care professional

"An eye exam should be part of every family's back-to-school check list to help ensure children reach their full potential in the classroom," says Lisa Curcuruto, Focus on Sight program manager at OneSight, an independent nonprofit that provides underserved students and communities worldwide with comprehensive eye exams and glasses. "Through the OneSight Focus on Sight program, we are committed to helping students in need and their families have access to vision care and glasses. We believe every child deserves the opportunity to excel."

Throughout the school year, parents should also periodically check in with children to ask how school is going and if they are having any trouble seeing the board. Many kids don't share their vision struggles with parents or teachers and lose interest in the classroom.

Families can also help all students see better and succeed in school by providing eye care to children in need. OneSight works with local communities to provide vision care to students during their school day. Consider making a donation to OneSight, which works with school-based health centers to integrate vision care into their healthcare offerings. The OneSight schoolbased vision centers provide students in need and their families access to comprehensive eye exams, quality glasses and repair of glasses. In addition, the vision centers can provide referrals to ophthalmologists for complicated eye issues and education on the importance of eye health and wellness. To learn more, visit onesight.org.

The importance of clear vision can't be overstated. Help kids make the most of school by ensuring they are headed back to the classroom with the vision care they need to succeed.

FOOD AND DRINK

TAILGATING BEER

Seems summer doesn't want to leave us quite yet. I turned my attention just this week away from wine and to concentrate on beer. Though there are some fine wines to sip on a hot day. This will go well with your tailgating plans. I left out our regular domestic beers and the new 'craze" of craft beers, to introduce or reintroduce you to three beers that have been around for a while. That are my favorites on a blistering day that I call "beer drinking weather beer".

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

Peter Dills

Dining With Dills

5pm Saturdays

First we visit the Czech Republic, for Pilsner Urquell-Czech for "original pilsner" was first brewed in the 1840's this is a clean, light beer with a relatively low alcohol rate of 4.4%, this the perfect beer for a tailgate party on a hot summer day, when I see Pilsner Urquell on a menu it is my first choice, probably my favorite beer in the Pilsner class, a little bit of that skunky smell, though not as noticeable as Heineken.

4 ½ stars !!! Available by the six pack at most grocery stores and is on tap at the Yard House.

Off we go to Japan for Sapporo Beer also a Pilsner with a German Style, this beer has serious drinkability, and can stand alone without a food pairing, though Mexican and spicy Thai food would indeed complete this refreshing beer. Alcohol content is 4.7%.

4 out of five stars

For my last beer I travel south of the border for Negra Modelo, sure Corona gets the notoriety but Modelo for me is the best of the best as far as Mexican Beer, go to any restaurant were patriots are drinking beer and nine times out of ten it's Modelo they are drinking. The Negra Modela reminds me of a German Dunkel style, makes sense since many German beer makers made their homes in parts of Mexico. This a dark beer, goes well with tailgating foods such as bratwurst, potato salad and of course fried chicken.

4 out 5 stars

With hundreds of beers I might have missed your favorite. Email me at thechefknows@yahoo.com. Listen live Sunday 5 pm to Dining with Dills on AM 830 KLAA twitter kingofcusine

CHEAP CELLPHONE PLANS FOR SELDOM CALLING SENIORS

Dear Savvy Senior,

What are the cheapest cellphone options available to seniors today who only want one for emergency purposes or occasional calls? I have a cellphone now that cost me $30 per month, but I hate paying for something I hardly ever use.

Infrequent Caller

Dear Infrequent,

still want one for emergencies or occasional use, there are a many super-cheap plans available, or depending on your income level you may qualify for a free cellphone. Here's where to find some of the best deals.

Super Cheap Plans For seniors who are light/infrequent cellphone users, "prepaid" or "pay as you go" plans are the way to go if you want to save money. With these services, you buy a certain amount of minutes (for talk or text) that must be used within a specified period of time. While many cellphone providers still offer these lower cost plans, the very best/cheapest deal available today is through T-Mobile's pay as you go plan (T-Mobile.com,

For just $3 per month, this plans provides any combination of 30 minutes of talk or 30 text messages. If you want more, you can pay an additional 10 cents per minute/ message when you sign up, or you can make adjustments later. You also don't have to worry about overage charges with this plan, because once you reach your talk/text limit for the month, the phone stops working. And, if you have a compatible device, you won't need to purchase a new cell

If you're looking for a little more talk time or text messages, another low-cost option is Pure Talk USA (PureTalkUSA. com, 877-820-7873), which offers a Senior AddVantage 80 Plan. This plan provides any combination of 80 minutes of talk or 240 text messages for only $5 per month. Pure Talk your state, visit LifelineSupport.org. also accepts unlocked phones and they don't have overage

Senior-Friendly Cellphone If you would rather have a senior-friendly phone with a large

For seniors who don't use their cellphone very often but keypad and simplified features, and an "SOS" emergency alert button, the Doro PhoneEasy 626 sold through Consumer Cellular (Consumer Cellular.com, 888-532-5366) is the best, low-cost option. It runs $50 for the phone, with calling plans that start at $10 per month.

Free Cellphones

If your income is low enough, you may qualify for a free cellphone through the Lifeline Assistance Program. This is a government-sponsored program that subsidizes wireless (and landline) companies who in turn provide free cellphones and usually between 250 and 1,000 minutes of free monthly talk time and texts to low-income Americans. (Some programs in some states charge a small monthly fee.)

The free phones and minutes are provided by a number of big prepaid wireless companies like Safelink, Assurance Wireless and Budget Mobile, along with a host of other regional carriers throughout the country.

Most states have several wireless companies that provide the free phones and minutes. If you are eligible, the free cell phone you'll receive is a basic phone that also offers text messaging, voice mail, call waiting and caller ID.

To qualify, you'll need to show that you're receiving certain types of government benefits, such as Medicaid, Food Stamps, SSI, home energy assistance or public housing assistance. Or, that your household income is at or below 135 or 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Guidelines – it varies by state. To find out if you're eligible, or to locate the wireless companies that provide Lifeline government cell phones in

HEALTHY LIFESTYLES

THE JOY OF YOGA EMOTIONAL CHECKPOINTS

In my opinion, one of the most admirable and attractive qualities of a yogi is this calm, collected, non-reactive manner. Both this mental stability and emotional balance drew me to yoga, wishing I had the ability to be (or at least appear to be) calm and let troubles roll off my back.

After a good stint of practice, this DID take place for me. I was instantly calmer and more balanced emotionally, just from improving and nourishing my physical and mental well-being. After that initial settling, I needed some additional tools of self-study, or svadhyaya, to continue to check my reactions and responses.

The first step was to measure the reaction or energy given to an event (or comment or accident, or...) using a scale of 1-10. Where does my reaction fall on this scale? Did I break a nail and rate the reaction an '8'? Or was the event more serious, like a car accident? Was I able to regulate my reaction and lessen the amount of energy I gave the situation? Did I use the scale?

Using the breath in a conscious way in a high reaction moment can help reel us in from the brink. Once there is energy awareness, the next step is noticing how we feel at the beginning of the day. If I know that I'm low on energy or overwhelmed in some way, I can pre-plan to take care of myself. Taking care of myself means popping into a yoga class to engage all the good, nurturing physical practice learned so far, establishing evensmooth breath, eating well, and paying attention to my environment.

Between these tools of measuring my reaction and cultivating personal energy awareness, I calmly - one day at a time - can slow down quick reactions. Deliberately, I can respond to people, places and events in a thoughtful way that stays true to who I am and where I am in any given day. This is living authentically and freely. There are always choices and options available.

Hope to see you in class and get balanced and free!

SEEKING PLANET NINE

In the race to discover a proposed ninth planet in our solar system, Scott Sheppard of Carnegie Institution for Science and Chadwick Trujillo of Northern Arizona University have observed several never-before-seen objects at extreme distances from the Sun in our solar system. Sheppard and Trujillo have now submitted their latest discoveries to the International Astronomical Union's Minor Planet Center for official designations. A paper about the discoveries has also been accepted to The Astronomical Journal.

The more objects that are found at extreme distances, the better the chance of constraining the location of the ninth planet that Sheppard and Trujillo first predicted to exist far beyond Pluto (itself no longer classified as a planet) in 2014. The mass, ranging in possibility from several Earths to placement and orbits of small, so-called extreme a Neptune equivalent, is shepherding these smaller they are so far away. The smaller objects can lead b.eklund@MtnViewsNews.com trans-Neptunian objects can help narrow down the size and distance from the Sun of the predicted ninth planet, because that planet's gravity influences the movements of the smaller objects that are far beyond Neptune. The objects are called trans-Neptunian because their orbits around the Sun are greater than Neptune's.

In 2014, Sheppard and Trujillo announced the discovery of 2012 VP113, which has the mostdistant known orbit in our solar system. At this time, Sheppard and Trujillo also noticed that the handful of known extreme trans-Neptunian objects all cluster with similar orbital angles. This led them to predict that there is a planet at more than 200 times our distance from the Sun. Its objects into similar types of orbits.

Some have called this Planet X or Planet 9. Further work since 2014 showed that this massive ninth planet likely exists by further constraining its possible properties. Analysis of "neighboring' small body orbits suggest that it is several times more massive than the Earth, possibly as much as 15 times more so, and at the closest point of its extremely stretched, oblong orbit it is at least 200 times farther away from the Sun than Earth. (This is over 5 times more distant than Pluto.)

"Objects found far beyond Neptune hold the key to unlocking our solar system's origins and evolution," Sheppard explained. "Though we believe there are thousands of these small objects, we haven't found very many of them yet, because us to the much bigger planet we think exists out there. The more we discover, the better we will be able to understand what is going on in the outer solar system."

"Right now we are dealing with very lownumber statistics, so we don't really understand what is happening in the outer solar system," Sheppard said. "Greater numbers of extreme trans-Neptunian objects must be found to fully determine the structure of our outer solar system.

According to Sheppard, "We are now in a similar situation as in the mid-19th century when Alexis Bouvard noticed Uranus' orbital motion was peculiar, which eventually led to the discovery of Neptune."

LEARNING TO GARDEN

In the very beginning, back when I was still living with my parents in suburban Pasadena, I began to learn how to garden, and learn (by doing) what works and what doesn't.

I already had the paranoid mindset that a comet could hit us any day, and any day the world (well, at least our city) could devolve into urban anarchy and mobs would be rushing in to my garden to steal all my swiss chard and tomatoes.

Well, that never happened, and I like to think that it was because it was really hard to tell that my garden patch was a food garden at all. There were no neat rows, barely any paths, and it was mostly a random hodge-podge of wild and domestic plants, though it all looked very wild and abandoned.

I grew amaranth for seed and greens, and found it very easy to grow. I grew tomatoes, a very easy crop to grow. I grew potatoes by burying kitchen potatoes that had sprouted, and I was amazed how easy it was to produce a crop of potatoes. I planted Swiss chard, and had year-round greens, because I let the plants go wild and reseed themselves.

I also learned that all manner of bugs like the plants you grow in your garden, and my first attempts at pest control involved making a mix of garlic and hot peppers which I sprayed onto the offending bugs mostly aphids and earwhigs. My corn was a disaster, also fertilizing that garden. and the bugs seemed to love the corn.

[Nyerges has been teaching with older farmers and gardeners, I learned that there survival and self-reliance was one traditional, tried and true way to always grow skills since 1974. He is the good crops that were not only bug resistant, but also author of "Guide to Wild drought resistant, and cold resistant. The solution was Foods and Useful Plants," to build the soil. I began to make my own compost, "Extreme Simplicity: Homesteading in the City," "Nuts which adds nutrients to the soil, but the biggest and Berries of California," and other books. For more noticeable effect on my garden was when I began to information on his books and classes, go to www. layer the entire surface of the garden with mulch, in SchoolofSelf-Reliance.com, or Box 41834, Eagle Rock, my case, grass clippings. Many substances can be used as a mulch, and wood chips are very popular today. Wood chips are great because they help to keep in the moisture and you won't need to water too much, and it does give your yard a very natural, almost "wild" look so your food producing yard can be as inconspicuous as possible.

[I recorded a lot of these lessons in my "Extreme Simplicity" and "Self-Sufficient Home" books, both of which are readily available from Amazon.]

A SQUATTER'S GARDEN

I was also a squatter for a year and a half in a ruralish part of Los Angeles. While living there, I had a local tree pruner dump a full truckload of wood chips in a fenced area of my yard. I watered that wood chip patch, and in time I had rich soil ready for planting. In that patch, I grew the traditional "three sisters" garden popular with indigenous people of the American

I first planted blue corn, which eventually produced stalks about 6 feet tall that looked like a scruffy grass from a distance. I planted beans at the base of each corn, and let them twirl up onto the corn stalks, while their roots "fixed" nitrogen in the soil, meaning, the beans were natural fertilizer for the corn. I also planted a native gourd, which sprawled all over the place producing a ground cover that kept water loss to a minimum. Eventually, I got some ducks, who loved to go into the corn patch and eat all the bugs, all the while

For the most part, I am not too impressed by the words. words/names people throw my direction, but I do duck when they throw sticks and stones at me. I not sure who is in charge of policing politically ducked most of them. It is not the sticks and stones incorrect words. Some people just do not have anything bouncing between their ears. Like last week, for example. I was minding my own business and I am not quite sure what started the whole situation and I do not know who was responsible for it. If it was me, I really did not know what I did.

Suddenly, the man next to me started to scream all kinds of foul language. Believe me; I think foul language is for the birds. When this man realized what he had done, he said the inevitable, "Pardon my French." And he smiled a greasy, slinky smile.

I was not very much impressed with this turkey's gobbling. If I had an egg or two on me, I would have thrown it at him with all the strength I had. I was supposed to forget all that foul language he used because he said the magic phrase, "Pardon my In high school, we had to take a foreign language and so I took three years of first year French. I must say I flunked each year, but that is beside the point. Even though I was not very good at French, I knew that what this man was saying was not in any French dictionary I had ever looked at.

I was tempted to look up my French teacher and ask her what these "French words" meant. But, I'm certainly not "temporarily metabolically abled."

If I was French, and I am not, I certainly would have been offended by him referring to this foul language that he used as part of the French language. It's people like this that I would like to give them a little bit of their own medicine.

Here is how I would do it. I'm not French, but I am Pennsylvania Dutch. Therefore, I would like to go up to this "French-speaking" person and slap him soundly on the right cheek and then say, "Pardon my Pennsylvania Dutch."

I am not too sure I could get away with it, but there have been many incidences when I certainly was tempted to try it.

I must confess I lean towards being offended

When I was young, a saying went around, "Sticks when people around me use coarse and foul you do not use other very sensitive and offensive

> Then there is one word I am a little concerned about and that is "Bald," which, according to the dictionary here means, "follicularly challenged." And I thought I was just losing hair!

Then there is a list of other words. "Body Odor" is "non discretionary fragrance."

How many fragrances are there? 'Criminal" is "behaviorally challenged." Of course I think you would have to get a good definition of the word "behaviorally" because I have no idea what that means.

Here is one that really grabbed me. "Dead" which is simply "living impaired." Seriously?

I did like the word "Dishonest," which is defined as "ethically disoriented." Somebody is disoriented, that's for sure.

Then the one that really from my point of view makes no sense at all. "Drunk," which is defined, "chemically inconvenienced."

Whoever can keep up with this list of words is simply "willy-nilly challenged." Do not ask me what that means because I have no idea.

Talking to some people, it is like talking in a foreign language of some sort. You have to be careful what word you use or you do not use. For all of these I would like to say, "Pardon my politically correct challenged brain.'

PET OF THE WEEK: LADY: ANIMAL ID #A4985576

Lady (A4985576) is an angelic 7-year-old redwith-white long-haired Chihuahua who came to the Baldwin Park Animal Care Center on August 22nd as an owner surrender with no reason given. Weighing 8 lbs, Lady simply couldn't be sweeter. She is a born lap dog. She walks okay on leash, but has some weakness going on in her back legs (volunteers don't know what it is) that adds to her love of being carried and cuddled. She adores people and turns to them for comfort, and she loves just hanging out, getting chin and neck scratches, eating treats (roast beef and turkey are two favorites), and snuggling (which she did a lot of at the photo shoot). The shelter is no place for this dainty little girl -- if you're looking for your perfect little snuggle buddy, she's waiting for you right now. #### HEARTWORM TESTING: WHAT EVERY DOG OWNER NEEDS TO KNOW

(StatePoint) Your dog is your best friend, and you take good Mistakes Can Happen care of him, making sure he gets quality food and exercise, immunizations and heartworm medication. Why, then, does your veterinarian also insist on a yearly heartworm

Chances are, your veterinarian is following the advice of the American Heartworm Society (AHS), whose mission it is to lead the veterinary profession and the public in the understanding of heartworm

"The AHS recommends annual testing for all explains veterinary parasitologist and AHS board member Dr. Patricia Payne. "Heartworm is a devastating disease. It is preventable and can be treated in dogs, but early detection is essential.'

Unprotected Dogs are at Risk

Along with testing, the AHS recommends year-round administration of heartworm preventives. Unfortunately, says Dr. Payne, far too many dogs do not receive this measure of care. Almost two-thirds of dogs in the U.S. that are seen by veterinarians are given no preventives at all, according to studies conducted by heartworm medication

Among those on prevention medication, far too many are only given medication in spring, summer and fall, when the mosquitoes that transmit heartworm larvae are active. Because weather is unpredictable and hardy mosquitoes can survive indoors as well as outdoors in protected areas, so-called "seasonal" usage creates ample opportunity for animals to unintentionally

Another factor is human -- and animal -- error. "Pet owners who give heartworm medications year-round and on time are to be commended," says Dr. Payne. "Even so, it is still possible for heartworm infection to occur.

The following are three scenarios that make heartworm testing a necessity for all dogs:

• Even the most diligent owner can forget a dose now and then. "If you have medication left when your veterinarian reminds you that it's time to purchase more preventive, it's a pretty clear sign that you missed a dose or two," says Dr. Payne.

 Not all pills are swallowed, and not all topical medications are properly applied. If your dog vomits or spits out a pill when you aren't looking -- or if a topical medication isn't absorbed completely -- a pet may be less protected than you

• Heartworm resistance is rare but real. "Owners can rest assured that heartworm medications are highly effective, but a few cases of heartworm strains that are resistant to common preventives have been documented," explains Dr. Payne, adding that the issue is being studied by

Test Annually

The good news for owners is that heartworm testing is simple and inexpensive. "Your veterinarian can easily conduct this simple blood test during a dog's annual or semiannual wellness visit," assures Dr. Payne. "If your dog tests positive, treatment can begin. With a negative test result, an owner has the peace of mind of knowing that his or her pet has been protected for

CONGRESSWOMAN JUDY CHU PRESENTS MILITARY MEDALS TO KOREAN WAR VETERAN, BUDDY BROWER

By Joan Schmidt

On Labor Day, sixty plus years later, Congresswoman Judy Chu presented Korean War Veteran Buddy Leland Brower with military medals he earned during the Korean War but did not receive

Nineteen year old Buddy Brower enlisted in the Army in 1951 and did his basic training in Hawaii. Soon Corporal Brower was transferred to Korea with the 124th Infantry Division and saw action in the War. He was wounded by enemy fire during an attack. Soon it was apparent his group was greatly outnumbered and in great danger, so there was a decision to retreat. Although he was wounded, Corporal Buddy Brower and a fellow soldier put themselves in harm's way when they wouldn't leave till they were able to carry a wounded comrade to Congresswoman Judy Chu wanted to give Brower a "proper Thank You" for his service during the Korean War. Chu was appalled that Buddy had never received any of his medals. Not only did she have his medals in a glass display frame, but also had a special framed Certificate of Recognition and a folded American Flag in the triangular glass case.

The Medals earned by Brower include the Purple Heart, Good Conduct Medal, Presidential Unit Citation, Army of Occupation Medal and Japan Clasp, National Defense Service Medal, Korean Service Medal and 2 Bronze Star Attachments. During her Presentation, the Congresswoman gave us an account of Buddy's time in the service, and explained why each Medal was earned. She had alerted the major television networks. It was gratifying to see Channel 4 interview Buddy in depth, as well as other major networks' representation.

Monday's event was well-attended. About 50+ attended. They included Buddy's older brother Marty, whom he lives with in Altadena. Nieces Laura and Debbie drove up from Whittier and several Church members from two groups. Buddy belongs to a Bible Study at Lake Avenue Church in Pasadena and among the attendees were Gary and Susie. Buddy and Marty worship in Altadena and it It meant so much to him, his family and friends.

was so heartwarming to see families come with their small children in their Sunday best to see Buddy honored.

Prior to the ceremony Marty told me that their mom had FOUR sons in the service during the Korean War. They included Bob, Air Force; Frank, Navy; Wally Marines; and Buddy in the Army! Marty explained that he had married a year before the War and had a young child when the war began, so he could not enter the service. What a contribution this family did for our country.

I would like to thank Congresswoman Chu for making this ceremony so special. She has so much enthusiasm and is the champion of all our service members. She made Buddy and his family feel so special. When Buddy was asked to say a few words at the end, he said, "I am overwhelmed." He was so thrilled. He then looked around-the Presentation Room was packed, many were standing in the hallway and there were even people in the entry lobby. He said, "I am loved."

God bless you, Corporal Buddy Brower. Thank you for serving our country and saving the life of a fellow soldier. And thank you Congresswoman Chu for the great recognition for Corporal Buddy Brower.

MISSING YOU

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

I find myself at loose ends without a play on stage at the Playhouse. I've lost my momentum a bit. There are still so many things to do as we prepare for the rehearsals of A Little House Christmas, but having stepped off the production

This time "off" has given me a chance to reflect on how hard the SMP team has worked the last few years to build up our theater - and, how much we've accomplished. This is a powerful moment in the history of our theater – so much hinges on the AEA court case which I've written about in a couple of essays. Our future hangs in the balance. Because though our reputation has grown (I just got word from an aactor friend that the casting people in a recent audition were full of praise for the "new" SMP) we haven't grown enough financially to be able to pay even the minimum wage requirements that Actors Equity is proposing. I still feel so strongly about the potential for the growth of SMP into a dynamic make soon! thriving theater but we are still finding our footing as we negotiate that growth.

team and will be casting the show in the next weeks (Christmas already!) It was such a pleasure to share this show with you in 2014 that I look forward to having it back at SMP. This year we are starting the run earlier by a week. This will take it out of the Thanksgiving madness (giving merry-go-round since the rehearsals of Putnam all involved a saner Turkey Day) and will allow County I find I'm having a hard time jumping us to have more performances of a show that sold out last time. I do hope you will make your plans to see it. We open Friday, November 18. Tickets will be on sale soon.

After a hiccough last month, our reading series will be back on Monday, September 25 with The Quality of Life by Jane Anderson. This is a mesmerizing and completely fascinating look at what keeps couples together. It will be directed by Gary Reed.

Fritz Coleman (popular local weatherman and friend to the Playhouse) will be doing a special matinee on October 23 of his show Defying Gravity. Tickets are on sale now. Please don't miss it. AND Fritz is donating all proceeds to SMP! We have a few other special announcements to

I look forward to reuniting with all our friends at these events. I'll say it again – I've missed you! Enjoy our family pictures which will remind you, in the gentlest way, of your own family; or maybe the family you plan to have. Operation Mincemeat: How a Dead Man and a Bizarre Plan Fooled the Nazis and Assured an Allied Victory by Ben Macintyre In Operation Mincemeat he tells an extraordinary story that will delight his legions of fans.In 1943, from a windowless basement office in London, two brilliant intelligence officers conceived a plan that was both simple and complicated— Operation Mincemeat. The purpose? To deceive the Nazis into thinking that Allied forces were planning to attack southern Europe by way of Greece or Sardinia, rather than Sicily, as the Nazis had assumed, and the Allies ultimately chose.Charles Cholmondeley of MI5 and the British naval intelligence officer Ewen Montagu could not have been more different. Cholmondeley was a dreamer seeking adventure. Montagu was an aristocratic, detail-oriented barrister. But together they were the perfect team and created an ingenious plan: Get a corpse, equip it with secret (but false and misleading) papers concerning the invasion, then drop it off the coast of Spain where German spies would, they hoped, take the bait. The idea was approved by British intelligence officials, including Ian Fleming (creator of James Bond). Winston Churchill believed it might ring true to the Axis and help bring victory to the Allies. Filled with spies, double agents, rogues, fearless heroes, and one very important corpse, the story of Operation Mincemeat reads like an international thriller.

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

By Sean Kayden

LOCAL NATIVES – "SUNLIT YOUTH"

It only took 9 months, but here it is, the best album of 2016 by far. "Sunlit Youth" is the third record from once indie rock aficionados, Local Natives. The long awaited release (well over 3 years since their previous effort, "Hummingbird") finds the five-piece Silver Lake act showcasing their raw skills and evolving musical talents over the course of twelve gorgeous tracks. Over the span of third albums, all of which display a poignant impression in their own distinguish way, the band keeps things fresh yet again. The transition from debut record "Gorilla Manor" to "Hummingbird" was a monumental change in direction, but Local Natives still crafted music they seemingly wanted to make. The epically beautiful "Hummingbird" was released in 2013 with delicate arrangements, spiritual undertones, and a melancholy sound. It never felt forced or strained, only completely organic and entirely sincere. Local Natives positioned themselves into the category of elite rock bands within their generation with a defining sound they can easily call their very own. With "Sunlit Youth" you still have that overwhelming expressive onetwo emotional punch from them yet the band expands their sound palette even further. While the previous record felt as if track was deeply connected and rooted with one another by the overall sound, "Sunlit Youth" has the band taking huge risks track by track and reaping significant rewards by doing just that.

"Villainy" kicks off the album with tight snyths, slick productions, and terrific vocals. From the first few seconds, you notice the discernible shift from their previous composition. However, starting off with a renewed approach was the right course of action. The bouncy, sprawling tune is undoubtedly a strong opener to get things headed in a seemingly right direction. The subsequent track materialized several months ago and it was the awakening of Local Natives since it had been so long since we last heard from them. At first listen, this could be deemed as an immense return since "Past Lives" has this driving force behind it that would play exceptionally well on a live stage in front of a large crowd. Lyrically, the song is what we've come to expect and love from Local Natives. It's reflective, emotionally driven, thought provoking, and features the vocal harmonies from Taylor Rice and Kelcey Ayer. "Dark Days" is another highlight as we get into the third track. This subtle, more subdued offering is smooth and gentle. With beautiful arrangements and irresistible guitar hooks, Local Natives hit their stride convincingly here.

The band makes good use of electronics without going overboard on the record. I really enjoy the mixture and balance of guitars and electronics, but the real draw are the warm vocals and the vulnerable lyrics. "Ellie Alice" originates with the strumming of an acoustic guitar and tender vocals. As one of two tracks here less than three minutes, it's a brief outing but wildly gorgeous from beginning to end. It comes in like waves, subtle at first and before you know, there's a big tide. It may very well be their finest effort here, but that's a tough argument as the record is bountiful with mesmerizing tracks. The one track here that is the anthemic driven showcase of

Local Natives – "Sunlit Youth" Artist: Local Natives Album: Sunlit Youth Release Date: September 9th, 2016

'Sunlit Youth" is "Everything All At Once." It features a choral arrangement, bold guitars, and purging vocals. It's stirring with wondrous sounds that can't be ignored, as the listener will be instantly drawn to the magnificent piece that reaches the highest of heights. Saying it is absolutely stunning would not be nearly enough to describe the places this track can take you. And guess what? There's more as the closing track "Sea of Years" keeps that same feeling going. While most albums this year I've noticed tail off as you approach the end, Local Natives do the opposite. They lift you back up and draw you in closer than ever presumable. "Sea of Years" is outstanding as it fully expands into areas untouched before. This sort of questioning, dig-deeper-than-ever-before song is grand and unequivocally incredible as it sonically changes at every chance it gets during the five minutes and thirteen seconds running time. In the end, "Sunlit Youth" offers everything you could ever want in a full-length rock record. It's bold, daring, distinctive, cohesive, and wildly original as well as being collectively amazing every step of the way. Local Natives deeply touch upon youth culture here and effortlessly capture the zeitgeist of this year. Without question, you won't find another record this year quite as enthralling, immersive, or emotionally rewarding as what you'll receive with "Sunlit Youth."

Grade: 9.8 out of 10 Key Tracks: "Past Lives," "Ellie Alice," "Everything All At Once," "Sea Of Years"

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

KHAN ACADEMY REINFORCES CRITICAL EDUCATION SKILLS -FOR FREE!

The quality of the education a child receives through public or private school systems can vary greatly. The end product is a function of many variables, including teachers, administrators, parents, and of course, the children themselves.

In a school setting, the teacher-to-student ratio can have an enormous impact on how well any given child progresses in her academic pursuits. Tutoring is often the fallback option for parents with children struggling to keep up in class, but that's not always affordable for everyone. So what else can be done?

The Khan Academy; that's what. The Khan Academy is a free, non-profit, online educational resource with the mission to "provide a world-class education for anyone, anywhere." A lofty goal to be sure, but what it easily does is provide is readily available online help to students, parents, and even teachers.

The Academy offers video-based tutorials coupled with machine-graded assessments and comment threads. This allows students to select a subject, watch the video, and take a test to see what they learned. The comment thread allows students to make observations or clarifications that are helpful to other users. Subjects mirror the traditional fields of study in the school systems and can even be set up for Spanish-, French-, and Portuguese-speaking students. It also has components which help students prepare for college entrance exams.

Parents can use the Academy in several ways depending on their particular situation. If they have a child who is self-motivated, it may be as simple as pointing her in the Academy's direction. If not, then a parent may approach the Academy as a student - to brush up on a particular subject matter - in order to directly help the child. The Academy also has a feature that allows a parent or others to participate as the coach of an enrolled student. This allows the child to navigate the courses independently, with the coach following along, monitoring progress, and stepping in with additional help as necessary.

The Khan Academy is a great resource to meet the remedial or supplementary educational needs of students (and parents). There are far too many able children who get left behind scholastically in today's world. But that doesn't have to be the case with your children. There are many resources available for parents, like the Khan Academy, and they are getting easier to access all the time.

OPINION

"Gee, dad, I can't wait to do my civic duty. How do you suggest I

"Well, son, a good place to start is to re-read the American Constitution to understand the basic principles upon which our country was founded." 'It's been a while since I read it in school, dad."

"Son, the Constitution is the highest law of the land. All new laws in our country originate from it or should. However, not all politicians buy into the Constitution. Some think it is old

"Outmoded, dad?"

"The Constitution establishes a framework for how our government functions. It establishes a system of checks and balances, so that none of our three branches of government the legislative, executive and judicial — can become too powerful. Some politicians hate having such limitations placed upon them, however. They want to do as they please with the taxpayers' money or impose laws on citizens without following the constitutional process. So you'll want to know their position on the Constitution before you vote."

'OK, dad, I'll re-read the Constitution and be sure to research what each candidate thinks about it. What else should I do before I vote?"

'You'll also want to study the Bill of Rights, son. The bill represents 10 amendments to the Constitution designed to protect the civil liberties of individuals. For instance, the First Amendment protects the freedom of speech, religion, assembly, the right to petition the government and freedom of the press."

"I remember learning in civics class that a free, objective press is essential to the survival of "Which is a worrisome thing, son, when you see how in the tank the major media are for one presidential candidate over the other. You'll also want to read the 17 other amendments. The 16th Amendment, for instance, was passed into law in 1913. It created the federal income

"I'm already very familiar with that painful amendment, dad. What else can I do?"

'Well, son, it's important to study the issues. There's lots of disagreement in America and how to move the country forward. Some people think our government is too big and isn't following the limited-government spirit of our Constitution. However, other people think the government should double down and spend lots more." 'More, dad?"

"Yes, some people think 'the rich' aren't paying their fair share. They think we can impose massive tax increases on them and redistribute the money to others who don't have as much. But others think that would create a huge negative economic backlash that would end up hurting everyone, in particular the poorest among us."

'So you want me to study the political promises each candidate makes and then vote for the best person, dad?"

Yes, son, but that takes time and effort and too few voters are willing to do any due diligence on the candidates. Since many people get their information from the mass media, candidates who raise the most money to pay for the most negative advertising are often able to sway poorly informed voters."

That's disturbing, dad.' "It surely is, son. A thoughtful, well-informed public is the heart and soul of a thriving republic. In my opinion, the candidates who best embrace our country's founding principles will be best able to tackle the incredible challenges we face — debt, spending, government bureaucracy, a flat economy. Regrettably, however, few people think as I do." "Maybe so, dad, but you offer sound advice. I promise to be as well-informed as I can before I pull a voting lever on Election Day."

HOW TO SOLVE THE ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION PROBLEM

Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump's recent speech on immigration really missed the point. I understand Trump's frustration over the U.S. government's inability to control the U.S. borders and keep out those who would come to this country illegally. Trump was right that the media ignore legitimate questions we have on our immigration policy and he is right that special interests have a great interest in maintaining the status quo.

However when it comes to really solving the immigration problem he gets it all wrong. And instead of making us more free and prosperous, his solutions will accelerate our downward slide toward

First let's consider his idea of building a big wall between the U.S. and Mexico. It is said that all one needs to get over an eight foot fence is a nine foot ladder. Or perhaps a shovel. So walls are never very good at keeping people out. But they are very good at keeping people in. Just ask the East Germans. The communist government claimed in 1961 that it had to build a wall around the portion of Berlin it controlled to keep the population safe from the evil capitalist wreckers and saboteurs. It didn't take long for the world to realize that the real threat to the East German leaders was that the people trapped in East Berlin would try to get out. We have all seen the horrific videos of East German civilians risking – and losing – their lives to escape that prison of razor wire and cinder block.

Is this really what we want for our own future?

What a wild conspiracy theory, some may claim. The wall would never be meant to keep us from leaving. Well ask the IRS. Under a tax enforcement provision passed in 2015, the US government claimed the right to cancel any American citizen's passport if Washington claims it is owed money.

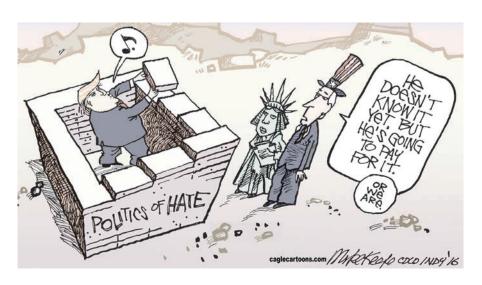

Trump also made E-Verify the center of his immigration speech. He said, "We will ensure that E-Verify is used to the fullest extent possible under existing law, and we will work with Congress to strengthen and expand its use across the country."

While preventing those here illegally from being able to gain employment may appeal to many who would like to protect American jobs, E-Verify is the worst possible solution. It is a police state non-solution, as it would require the rest of us legal American citizens to carry a biometric national ID card connected to a government database to prove that the government allows us to work. A false positive would result in financial disaster for millions of American families, as one would be forced to fight a faceless government bureaucracy to correct the mistake. Want to put TSA in charge of deciding if you

The battle against illegal immigration is a ploy to gain more control over our lives. We are supposed to be terrified of the hoards of Mexicans streaming into our country and thus grant the government new authority over the rest of us. But in fact a Pew study found that between 2009 and 2014 there was a net loss of 140,000 Mexican immigrants from the United States. Yes, this is a government "solution" in search of a real problem.

How to tackle the real immigration problem? Eliminate incentives for those who would come here to live off the rest of us, and make it easier and more rational for those who wish to come here legally to contribute to our economy. No walls, no government databases, no biometric national ID cards. But not a penny in welfare for immigrants. It's really that simple.

TRUMP'S REAL PAY-TO-PAY SCANDAL IGNORED BY THE MEDIA

How refreshing it is, after weeks and months of faux Clinton Foundation "scandals," after all the fatuous media talk about "optics" and "perceptions," to finally have a real Foundation scandal to chew on. An actual example of pay-to-play, of money given and a favor granted. And it comes to us courtesy of Donald Trump.

The Washington Post has done most of the spadework, but most of the so-called "liberal" media has inexplicably ignored it. Fortunately, Trump himself pumped some oxygen into the story when he denied any and all wrongdoing.

Three years ago, the Donald J. Trump Foundation, the family's nonprofit charity, gave a $25,000 campaign contribution to a group that flacked for Florida attorney general Pam Bondi. That donation was illegal, because nonprofits are barred by the IRS from giving money to political campaigns. And at the time the illegal donation was made, Bondi was deciding whether to go to bat for all the Floridians who had been allegedly bilked by the phony Trump University. Should she join the State of New York's class action lawsuit, or Trump's foundation sent the money to Bondi. A month later, Bondi decided not to prosecute Trump University. She claimed that her office had received only one complaint. That was a lie. More than 60 aggrieved Floridians had sought her help, hoping to recoup their money from the scam school.

The donation, followed by the decision not to prosecute... what timing! By the way, you may remember Bondi's gig at the Republican convention in Cleveland. She was the one who spoke in rapt terms about championing the rule of law.

It gets worse. After The Post and a citizens watchdog group raised hell earlier this year, the Trump Foundation paid a fine to the IRS — right there, we have a proof of guilt, far beyond any of the Clinton "optics" and "perceptions" — but the Foundation still insisted that it had merely made what it called an "honest mistake." Supposedly, it had intended to send the money to a charitable group in Kansas that had roughly the same name as Bondi's political committee, but gee, somehow the money went to Bondi's committee, not

It gets even worse. Under IRS rules, the Trump Foundation is supposed to withdraw its illegal donation. Bondi's political group has tried to give it back; as the group's treasurer told The Post, "I wrote a check, sent it via FedEx." But what happened next? "I received a call from the Trump Foundation, saying that they had declined to accept the refund."

Which brings us to Trump's remarks. He denied that he had ever tried to buy Bondi for $25,000 in the hopes that she'd leave Trump University alone. "I never spoke to her, first of all. She's a fine person beyond reproach," Trump said. "I never even spoke to her about it at all. She's a fine person. Never spoke to her about it. Never."

Well, that was interesting. Because, just three months ago, Bondi political consultant Marc Reichelderfer told the Associated Press that Bondi and Trump had spoken personally, one on one — about a possible Trump donation. The AP quoted Reichefelder on that, and referenced it in the opening paragraph of its June story, and neither Bondi or Trump denied it.

So was Trump lying yesterday when he said that he and Bondi "never" spoke about a donation that turned out to be illegal? An illegal donation that landed in Bondi's political account shortly before she decided to leave aggrieved Floridians high and dry — a decision that benefited Trump as well?

That's how the game works — according to Trump himself. You give money to pols, you get political favors. In the summer of 2015, he told The Wall Street Journal: "As a businessman and a very substantial donor to very important people, when you give, they do whatever the hell you want them to do."

When he was asked about that statement during a debate last winter, he replied, "You'd better believe it." And he said this, at a rally in Iowa: "When I want something, I get it. When I call, they kiss my ass."

Now let's try a little test. Reread all the aforementioned info, and replace Trump's name with Hillary Clinton's. If she had ever concocted a fake school that allegedly defrauded consumers, and if she had made an illegal political donation to an attorney general who then opted not to prosecute fraud, and if she had tried to cover it up by insisting that the money was supposed to go to Kansas, and if she had ever denied speaking with that AG despite recent statements from an AG ally that she in fact had spoken about a donation ... Well. The mainstream media would be banging on this 24/7.

You know, for the sake of "balance." And that's more disgraceful than Trump's actual

SPEECH SOUNDS GOOD, BUT RINGS HOLLOW

As an immigration lawyer, I approached Donald Trump's speech Wednesday night with anticipation, hope and trepidation.

I was willing to keep an open mind about a topic that, next to abortion rights and religious freedom, is the most important issue for me in this campaign. I was prepared to praise the man if he came out with an honest, workable, non-tweetable attempt to address the extremely complicated factors that go into the whole concept of "illegal immigration." To say I was disappointed is an understatement along the level of "Houston, we have a

I listened politely as the Republican presidential nominee spoke about building his wall, and understood that this was an appealing concept to many - including myself - who are troubled by the fluidity of our borders. As he discussed the modalities that would be used to build that wall, evoking technologies apparently not yet in existence, I realized that his use of this concept was much more symbolic than anything else. "Build a wall" has been an effective slogan over the years for many conservative opponents of immigration, and it doesn't require much cerebral heavy lifting. Trump sounded more poetic than Maya Angelou: "On Day 1, we will begin working on an impenetrable, physical, tall, powerful, beautiful Southern border wall." He talked about "above- and below-ground sensors" which other people call "tunnels." He talked about aerial surveillance, towers and additional manpower.

He also said Mexico would pay for the wall, even though the Mexican president whom he'd met only hours before made it clear that Mexico "no paga." So the estimated $8 billion to $12 billion needed to build this "beautiful Southern border wall" will have to come from somewhere.

Beyond the wall, and the absolute lack of detail on the methodologies by which it would both be built and financed, Trump talked about how he would increase the border patrol force by about 25 percent. I think that is a fantastic idea, but I'd like to know where that money is coming from, too, especially after we build those walls.

Then Trump announced the revolutionary concept that he would change enforcement priorities by "removing criminals, gang members, security threats, visa overstays, (and) public charges." I stood up and gave him a standing ovation when I heard that. But I gave President Obama that same standing ovation when he announced those same priorities in November 2014. Yawn. Trump then talked about screening refugees, and no one who has seen the brutality wreaked by ISIS and other Islamic terror groups should object to that. But, as experts have noted, refugees generally undergo the most rigorous and time-consuming process of any category of immigrants who enter the U.S. Sometimes the process can take up to 18 months, or more. So again, nothing new.

And he talked about jobs, which is a big part of his appeal, the great job creator. Good for him. I agree something must be done to bring workers out of the shadows, provide them with work authorization, give them identification cards and continue to allow them to work legally in our restaurant kitchens, mowing our backyards and cleaning our bathrooms. Oh, yeah, and winning Olympic medals for us when they become naturalized

But the thing that finally made me realize this was not a serious speech was the last part, when Trump brought the mothers of slain citizens on stage to say "Vote for me." In this powerful, hardly subliminal attack on so-called "sanctuary cities," Trump did what the Democratic National Convention was justifiably criticized for doing when it trotted the mothers of Michael Brown and other so-called victims of police brutality on stage. I was appalled then that we would use mothers' grief to advance an agenda, and I was appalled when Trump did the same thing.

The suggestion that illegal aliens must be kept out of the country because they have an innate tendency to be more violent and homicidal than the average native-born American is wrong. Debatable, but still wrong. Statistics consistently show that immigrants commit violent crimes at a significantly lower rate that the native-born. It's an argument we can have; I'm fine with that.

My problem is using death to make your partisan point.

"My boy was shot by a cop. They're bigoted monsters." "My boy was killed by an illegal. They're homicidal maniacs." Same tune, different verses.

And if you don't think it's the same tune, that's because your ears are registered with a different party, and you think some mothers are less entitled to grieve than others. As for me, I'm thinking Helen Keller was lucky.
