VOLUME 10 NO. 50

SIERRA MADRE POLICE DEPARTMENT TO HOST From the City of Sierra Madre COMMUNITY MEETING

Wednesday, December 14th - 6:00pm - City Hall Council Chambers

It's that time of year again when burglaries and auto thefts are on the rise.

Since October 30th there have been 10 residential burglaries, one commercial burglary, six thefts from vehicles, one stolen car and one attempted stolen vehicle in the City of Sierra Madre. In most of the vehicle burglaries the car was not locked and items where in plain view. In the case of the stolen vehicle the keys were left inside the car and the doors were unlocked.

Successful crime prevention requires a joint commitment from the Sierra Madre Police Department along with the Sierra Madre community members. Please come out on Wednesday, December 14th and discuss how we can all work together to protect this community.

Please do not set yourself up to be a victim!

Here are a few crime prevention tips the Sierra Madre Police Department will be discussing and asking all our residents to follow:

Always lock your vehicle! Whether it is in your garage, driveway or on the street. Do Not Leave Your Keys in Your Vehicle.

Do not leave other items in your vehicle, especially in plain view.

Make sure you set your alarm if you have a home alarm system and/or cameras. Set your alarm when you leave and check that your cameras are in working order.

Pick up your mail promptly after delivery. Don't leave it in your mailbox overnight.

Do not leave packages on the front porch unattended after they have been delivered.

If you see something suspicious - say something. Do not hesitate - call the Sierra Madre Police Department! 911 if it is an emergency or 355-1414

BEWARE OF UTILITY SCAMS

Utility fraud calls are very common. While there have been no recent reports of any scams in Sierra Madre, neighboring communities are reporting an increase in fraudulent calls.

What Do Scammers Do?

Scammers impersonate City staff and utility workers. They may use fear and intimidation to force you to make a payment using a credit card or a prepaid money card immediately threatening that otherwise your service will be disconnected. They may use "spoofing software" that displays the name and phone number of City of Sierra Madre on your Caller ID.

What Should You Do Next?

Hang up! Do not give the callers any personal information and do not pay!

Call City of Sierra Madre at (626) 355-7135 to check your account balance and to inform us about the scammer. Make payments 24/7 online at https:// www.municipalonlinepayments. com/sierramadreca

Do not call any other number that the caller gives you. Do not give any information to the caller, not even an account number which can be used to threaten you in future phone calls.

What You Need to Know:

calls asking for payment or a customer's credit card information. City of Sierra Madre NEVER visits residential customers to solicit program enrollment or ask for payments.

Be Aware of Fraudulant Utility Calls

Your safety and security is our top priority at Sierra Madre Water. Utility fraud calls and visits can be convincing. Know our procedures so you can prevent being a victim of these scams!

> inform you first or respond if you request this service. City of Sierra Madre employees never enter a home to check for water quality. Always ask utility employees for proper identification and look for City of Sierra Madre vehicles.

Spread the Word!

Share this information with your friends, family, City of Sierra Madre NEVER makes outbound neighbors, and co-workers to protect them from scammers. Business owners - educate all your employees about phone calls that may threaten service interruptions. Many times managers or employees who do not have account information are worried that if If we do need to make a water quality check, we will they don't act quickly and pay, services will be shut off.

ANNUAL CANDLELIGHT WALK DECEMBER 18TH

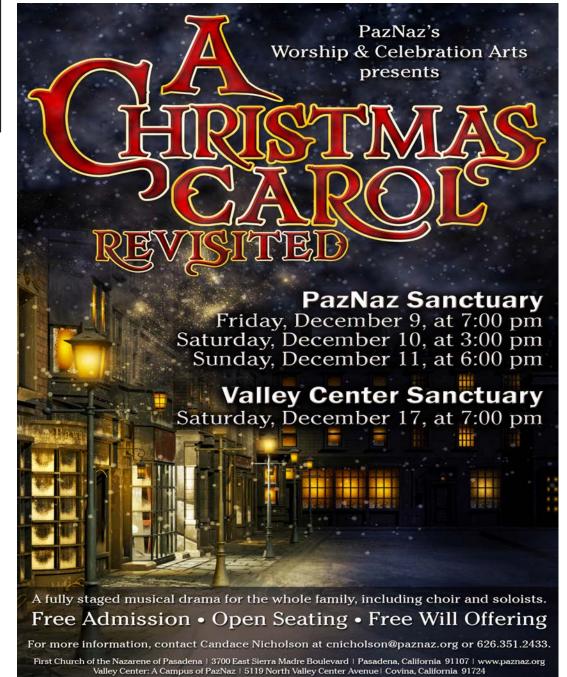

God commanded, "Let there be light," and what a sweet light we shall see.

As the season dies in darkness Christmas reminds us of that glorious child who entered the world. The Sierra Madre "Candlelight Walk" is wrapped with the wondrous warm that encircles this great Season of Celebration.

The Candlelight Walk is held each Christmas season to celebrate the journey Joseph and Mary made to Bethlehem where Jesus was born over 2,000 years ago. With "Mary and Joseph" leading the way, the procession will begin at St. Rita's Catholic Church in Sierra Madre, accompanied by participants holding candles and singing traditional Christmas carols. The procession will end at Kersting Court in the center of town where the Christmas story will be read from the Scriptures.

The event begins at St. Rita traveling down Baldwin to Kersting Court. It is recommended to arrive at 6:45p.m., as the walk will begin promptly at 7:00 p.m.

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"People come into your life for a reason, a season or a lifetime..."

A delightful person came into my life about a year and a half ago, Elaine Holmgren, the mother of my son-in-law, Chuck, married to our oldest daughter, Leah. Elaine had been living in Lewiston, Idaho but it was getting to be too much for her, after all, she was 92! Chuck arranged for his mom to move into the beautiful new Kensington Retirement and Assisted Living facility here in Sierra Madre, where she had a lovely room overlooking an outdoor patio with gardens in every direction. I had met her several years ago, but now she was in Sierra Madre to stay.

We met again right around Elaine's 93rd birthday, which was one day after my birthday. We realized immediately we were going to be best friends. And we were. I would drop in to the Kensington for Happy Hour at 4:00 for a glass of wine while an excellent pianist played songs we actually recognized, or a violinist might be playing show tunes, or we'd just sit and chat in her quiet, peaceful room. Elaine loved to read and, frequently, that's what she would be doing when I arrived.

Our best times, though, were our special outings. We would go, every now and then to the Cheesecake Factory for cheesecake and champagne. If you have not tried cheesecake and champagne, you are missing out. Elaine was partial to the Salted Caramel cheesecake and as soon as pumpkin season started, we were all pumpkin all the time. Pumpkin cheesecake is so good it's slightly immoral.

We would tour the town, look at everybody's gardens and trees, bemoan the lack of water and sad appearance of many of our trees. We would talk about our families, our parents, our children, incidents from our past where we might have done better. Elaine loved to talk about her mother, who, I do believe, was a mix of Wonder Woman and the best Presbyterian church member ever. Elaine had great stories of her youth and her mother's exploits. She always thought of herself as a Californian as her dad, John Good, grew up in Northern California. He survived the 1906 earthquake and earned his pharmacy degree from UC Berkley. Elaine's parents met when her adventuresome mother visited San Francisco for the 1915 Panama-Pacific Exposition. Some time after their 1916 marriage, Elaine's mother longed for home and the couple moved to Indiana. Elaine was born at the Galbreath family farm in Collamer, Indiana, in the same room where her mother was born 32 years 22 years later.

Around the beginning of the Great Depression, her mother would fearlessly take her four children, Elaine being the 3rd child, only girl and about 8 at the time, on long road trips to see the country while her dad stayed home and worked. These were true adventure trips as they "car camped" and dined on the healthy stews her mom created in the pressure cooker pot she had had welded to the engine block of their car, visiting campsites and Presbyterian or Methodist

Elaine married young and there were three Laughter" is available from me! children from that union, our son-in-law, Chuck, sister, Diane, and brother, Philip. Not the happiest marriage but some years later after it ended, she met Myron Holmgren and they spent 30 wonderful years together, "mostly playing," as she put it. They loved playwrightdd to ski, bought property in Mesa, Colorado, near a ski resort and built a beautiful home there, moving on to Prescott, Arizona when the altitude became uncomfortable for Myron, then on to Santa Rosa, California, eventually ending in Lewiston, Idaho.

Elaine thoroughly enjoyed the Halloween scarecrow contest here in town. We would tour the scarecrows and the amazing pumpkin creations by our neighbors and be astonished by the creativity on display. We looked and laughed and had a great time. While she was in residence at the Kensington, she had a steady stream of visitors: her children, their families, Myron's children, Mark and Rennie, who absolutely adored her, and many other friends. Every time I appeared where she was, Elaine would greet me with an enthusiastic, "Sweetie!!" and was always glad to see Elaine was in my life for a reason, to make us both laugh a lot and enjoy a little champagne from time to time. Her season with me was not nearly long enough as she left us very early November 13th. She was a joy to me for such a short time. I would have liked more cheesecake dates.

If someone is in your life for a reason, a season, or earlier, and where her daughter, Diane, would be born a lifetime, take time to go have a little champagne and cheesecake with them, or a cup of tea and a muffin. But enjoy them, my friends, enjoy them.

Pet of the Week

Harvey (A408713) is a 7-month-old, male, brown tabby cat who has made it his mission to make everyone in the world fall in love with him! He rushes to the front of his kennel to greet you with a head bump before settling down for all of the petting and head rubs he can get. Our volunteers report that he'll even knead your arm and roll over for stomach rubs to show how much he likes you! Harvey is still a playful kitten, so he would love a forever home with plenty of time to both play and cuddle with him.

The adoption fee for cats is $70, which includes the spay or neuter surgery, microchip, and vaccinations New adopters will receive a complimentary health-andwellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information about how to care for your pet.

FOOD AND DRINK

TWO HEYS

Many years ago my dad, Elmer Dills, would take us all the way up to Oxnard to a little restaurant called the best Lobster Rolls Sandwiches this side of the Atlantic. A few years back I was in Boston for a wedding and made way to Faneuial Hall, an inside marketplace with shops and restaurants. It was more like counters I should say, and that is where I found a lobster roll sandwich which I thought was the end all. Teamed up with a Boston Beer (not Sam Adams), it was truly a sandwich from heaven.

Twohey's Restaurant on Huntington Dr. if not 1001 times, darn close. You know the place the cute sign with the guy with the clothespin on his nose, and the banners of Baby Back ribs now until then all you can eat specials. Sharing a parking lot with In n' Out must be a competitive nightmare or... well I digress. I just never felt like going in, maybe I had a preconceived thought of Marge pouring cold coffee or a patty melt that had seen better days. I know they are famous for serving breakfast all day and night, but I must admit a bowl of fruit for breakfast and I am golden. But one afternoon I stopped in and as I always try to do if I am at Houstons, Ruth Chris or now Twohey's, I sit at

My answer is a big Yes! This sandwich, if not right on the mark, was so close that I have to do my best Paul Revere and let all my neighbors this sandwich, served with freshly cut potato chips is a winner. I found out that GM Charlie Cristos and family hail from Beantown and in fact owned Jimmy's Harborside Restaurant and they still import the Now, in 2016, I have driven past by hot dog bun from Boston. Now, that is authentic. I was sold the first time having the Twohey's Lobster Rolls sandwich, but thought I'd take advantage of the bar or counter seating, since I have to be in the editor Susan's generous expense account and go middle of the action. Twohey's has over 300 items twice, so I changed things up a little and had the on the menu, a big red flag for me! I think fifty carrot salad, and yes thumbs up. What else can I is too many. After checking out the menu, hidden discover here at Twohey's? Jimmy the owner tells on the second column of the sandwich selection me that the onion rings being made every morning, was a Lobster roll, nothing about world famous or and they make a pretty mean chili. I will return!

THE JOY OF YOGA 2016 HOLIDAY GIFT GUIDE FOR YOGIS

Looking for gifts to position. promote health and healing? How about the gift of yoga or a special item to enrich the mind or a yogi's practice someone's life! Here a few yoga-friendly gift ideas: 1. A gift certificate for a series of yoga classes. Good for beginner or seasoned yogi. Everyone needs to start somewhere. And, nothing says, 'I want the best for you' like the gift of yoga. If the recipient is new to yoga, they can pick their classes and attend when is good for them. 2. A private lesson with their favorite teacher. Many students find it hard to make the extra splurge for a private session with their teacher. This gift is an unexpected, and well-appreciated surprise!

3. Gear and accessories. Every yogi needs a their own mat! I recommend a quality Manduka mat. They are not cheap, but last forever and give the extra firm padding needed for our knees and wrists. Less expensive mats such as a Jade or Tapas mat work very well too, but may need to be replaced sooner. Other props such as a bolster or block are extremely helpful and almost essential for a home practice. Don't forget the meditation cushion, or 'zafu', to allow that perfect lift for a comfortable seated Keely Totten

Curriculum includes: Yoga Philosophy, Meditation,

Asana Sequencing, Pranayama,

Chakras, Anatomy, Ethics, Self

4. Sacred Space Essentials. Typically, a student of yoga has a space at home for practice or meditation. A set of mala beads, or prayer beads, is a very special gift. A deity to place on an altar, or dresser is a lovely gift too. Any deity, whether it be a statue of Ganesha or Mother Mary can make the space sacred. To complete the space, a special candle is perfect. Yoga Madre carries Breathe Feel good about what you're giving, it could just change In Candles, which are handmade organic soy blend candles. They are infused with Reiki healing energy and make the perfect gift for yogis and non-yogis alike. 5. Books. There is not enough space in this article for all the recommended book titles! Light on Yoga by B.K.S. Iyengar and the Secret of the Yoga Sutra by Pandit Rajmani Tigunait are essentials. An excellent cookbook is The Everyday Ayurveda Cookbook by Kate O'Donnell, which lists recipes by the Season. Finally, do not miss the new just released book, by Girish, Music and Mantras, The Yoga of Mindful Singing for Health, Happiness, Peace & Prosperity. Happy gift giving this season! Yoga Madre has many of these great gifts! Come see us, take class and take something home for your special someone.

THE GOOD LIFE

LOCATING LOST LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES

When my mom passed away we thought she had a life insurance policy, but we have no idea how to track it down. Do you know of any resources that might help?

Searching Susan

Dear Susan,

Lost or forgotten life insurance policies are very common in the U.S. It's estimated that more than $7 billion in benefits from unclaimed life insurance policies are waiting to be claimed by their rightful

While unfortunately, there isn't a national database for tracking down these policies, there are a number of strategies and a few new resources that can help your search. Here are several to get you started.

Search her records: Check your mom's financial records or storage areas where she kept her important papers for a policy, records of premium payments, or bills from an insurer. Also contact her employer or former employer benefits administrator, insurance agents, financial planner, accountant, attorney or other adviser and ask if they know about a life insurance policy. Also check safe-deposit boxes, monitor the mail for premium invoices or whole-life dividend notices, and review old income-tax returns, looking for interest income from, and interest expenses paid, to life insurance companies.

Contact the insurer: If you suspect that a particular insurer underwrote the policy, contact that carrier's claim office and ask. The more information you have, like your mom's date of birth and death, Social Security number and address, the easier it will be to track down. Contact information of some big insurers include: Prudential 800-778-2255; MetLife Metlife. com/policyfinder; AIG 800-888-2452; Nationwide 800-848-6331; John Hancock JohnHancock.com - click on "Contact Us" then on "Account Search Request."

Get state help: Nineteen state insurance departments have a policy locator service program that can help you locate lost life insurance, and many other states offer resources that can help you with your search. To find direct access to these resources visit the

DO YOU NEED HELP

American Council of Life Insurers website at ACLI. com/consumers - click on "Missing Policy Tips."

Search unclaimed property: If your mom died more than a few years ago, benefits may have already been turned over to the unclaimed property office of the state where the policy was purchased. Go to MissingMoney.com, a website of the National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators, to search records from 40 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. The pull-down menu under Links connects you to a map and addresses for unclaimed property agencies. Or, to find links to each state's unclaimed-property division use Unclaimed.

If your mom's name or a potential benefactor's name produces a hit, you'll need to prove your claim. Required documentation, which can vary by state, is detailed in claim forms, and a death certificate might be necessary. If you need a copy of your mom's death certificate, contact the vital records office in the state where she died, or go to VitalChek.com

Search fee-based services: There are several businesses that offer policy locator services for a fee. The MIB Group, for example, which is a data-sharing service for life and health insurance companies, offers a policy locator service at PolicyLocator.com for $75. But it only tracks applications for individual policies made since 1996.

You can also get assistance at Policy Inspector (PolicyInspector.com) for $99, and L-LIFE (LostLifeIns.com) for $108.50, who will do the searching for you.

KATIE Tse.....This and That FROM REYKJAVIK WITH LOVE stolen -"written" a story from my mom's friend, Florence. You may remember Florence from past article involving unusual pets, and just plain unusual situations in general. Yes, Florence is always good for material when I'm out of ideas. Florence retired from teaching last year and has filled her new found freedom with trips to several exotic destinations so far, most recently Iceland.

After a dinner with Florence and some other friends, my mom relayed some of Florence's adventures to me. Mostly it was about the unusual Icelandic cuisine. There was something about rotten shark marinated in shark urine. "Wait," I told Mom, "How do you collect shark urine? Doesn't it just dissipate into the water?" My mom thought a moment, "I'm not sure." "Maybe they catheterize the sharks before they butcher them," I mused. Imagine being the guy with that job! "No, it must have been something else," Mom remarked. "They put the dead shark in a pit to marinate, so maybe all the people take turns peeing on it," she recalled, "Maybe that's how it's done." "Well what did Florence say?" I asked. "It was hard to catch it all, there were a lot of us there," she replied. I knew I had to call Florence and get the story straight from the source.

Florence corrected me on the whole rotten shark issue, but before we get to that, let's consider Iceland's "survival food," as Florence describes it. Iceland is an island and it's

Therefore, a hamburger will be much more expensive than say, a bowl of fish stew. Iceland has about 2-3 months of "summer" during which crops can be grown. The rest of the year is dismally dark, cold, and wet. Hothouse vegetables are pretty much the only plants that can be harvested in these conditions. Other than that, the native diet consists of animals raised on, or caught near, the island, such as sheep and fish. "Survival food" is what Icelanders can eat cheaply throughout the year. So while we may think of shark as being an endangered species, as in shark fin soup, it is actually a commonplace meal in Iceland. The shark is prepared by burying it in a pit to ferment for a few months and then hanging it to dry to complete the process.

Therefore the shark is more accurately "fermented" than

It's been a expensive to have foods shipped rotten, although it has a strong odor of ammonia. The purpose of this convoluted method is to rid the flesh of an acid which renders it inedible when freshly caught. It reminded me of the Nordic dish Lutefisk, which takes fish on a long journey from the ocean to the table, involving lye at some point.

Any mention of fermented shark would be incomplete without a chaser of "Black Death," a schnapps made from potatoes and caraway. Other popular snacks are dried fish jerky, which is typically slathered with butter. There is also sheep's head, complete with the eyeball and other parts. There's a hilarious video online of two guys eating it as a dare. The guy eating the eyeball chewed it for a good three minutes before working up the courage to swallow it. There's also ram's testicles, minke whale, and fish stew. Minke whale is common in that part of the world and is not on the endangered list. Hot dogs with lamb are very popular, and are reported to be some of the best in the world, very snappy. Iceland also has a lovely selection of breads. But I think the most horrifying dish Florence told me about were the puffins!

I do feel guilty about eating lamb, chicken, beef, and most other meats, but there's just something about eating puffins that I can't wrap my mind around. They're just too cute, and I've always been a "bird person." I will always appreciate Florence for her wealth of stories, but I can never look at her the same way again now...

CASSINI MAKES FIRST RING-GRAZING PLUNGE

NASA's Saturn-orbiting Cassini spacecraft has made its first close dive past the outer edges of Saturn's rings since beginning its penultimate mission phase on Nov. 30.

Cassini crossed through the plane of Saturn's rings on Dec. 4 at a distance of approximately 57,000 miles above Saturn's cloud tops. This is the approximate location of a faint, dusty ring produced by the planet's small moons Janus and Epimetheus, and just 6,800 miles from the center of Saturn's Fring.

About an hour prior to the ring-plane crossing, the spacecraft performed a short burn of its main engine that lasted about six seconds. About 30 minutes later, as it approached the ring plane, Cassini closed its canopy-like engine cover as a protective measure.

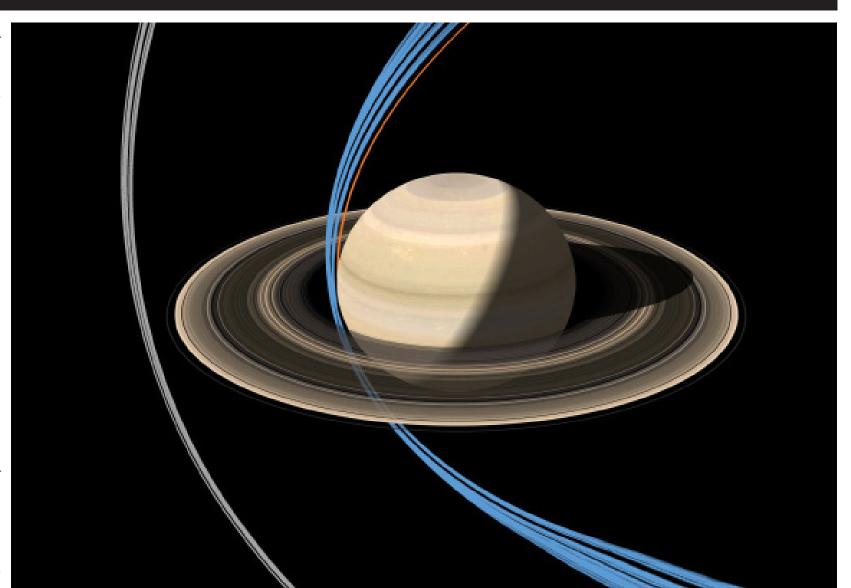

"With this small adjustment to the spacecraft's trajectory, we're in excellent shape to make the most of this new phase of the mission," said Earl Maize, Cassini project manager at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, California.

A few hours after the ring-plane crossing, Cassini began a complete scan across the rings with its radio science experiment to study their structure in great detail.

It's taken years of planning, but now that we're finally here, the whole Cassini team is excited to begin studying the data that come from these ringgrazing orbits," said Linda Spilker, Cassini project scientist at JPL. "This is a remarkable time in what's already been a thrilling journey."

Cassini's imaging cameras obtained views of Saturn about two days before crossing through the ring plane, but not near the time of closest approach. The focus of this first close pass was the engine maneuver and observations by Cassini's other science instruments. Future dives past the rings will feature some of the mission's best views of the outer regions of the rings and small, nearby moons.

A woman I know saw me trying to select chocolate at a store. "Chocolate?" she said to me. "Why are you looking for chocolate? I thought you only ate health foods. Chocolate is a junk food!" Was she right? Is chocolate a worthless food, something to be avoided?

I made my first "authentic" chocolate drink by steeping the coarsely ground beans of the chocolate plant in warm water, adding a little honey. If historians are correct, this was the type of beverage -- called "xocoatl" -- that Cortez found Montezuma drinking. The whole beans were oily. Once ground and made into a beverage, the drink had the color of weak coffee. It had a pleasant bitter-chocolate flavor. To me, one cup seemed as stimulating as two to three cups of coffee. It was good!

Montezuma believed chocolate to be a food of the gods, which was brought to the Aztecs by a healer or prophet who traveled over the waters, possibly Quetzalcoatl. To this day, chocolate is known to botanists as Theobroma, or "Food of the gods." It was widely regarded as an aphrodisiac, a food that gave Montezuma the strength do deal with his many Chocolate pods are produced on a smallish tree; they are about a foot long, and contain white beans. Once picked, these beans are allowed to ferment for a few days or longer, whereupon they take on their characteristic chocolate aroma and brown color. Once dried, the beans are then exported and typically processed with modern machinery. However, it is certainly possible to process your own, as it's often done today in Mexico.

During the normal manufacturing process, the beans are first "conched," which means that heat and grinding pressure are applied to produce a thick liquid called chocolate liquor. When this chocolate liquor hardens, bitter -- or baker's -- chocolate results. This is indeed bitter – and most people don't care for it since it has no sweetness. When this baker's chocolate is then subjected to great pressure, both a liquid and solid result. The liquid is cocoa butter, and the solid is cocoa. Cocoa butter added back to baker's chocolate in greater amounts results in bitter-sweet, semi-sweet, or sweet chocolate, three more grades or types of chocolate. The addition THE GOOD of milk creates milk chocolate. Sugar, vanilla, and various other ingredients are often also be added.

Serotonin A neurotransmitter which plays a role in regulating mood. Though found in chocolate, it's found in much higher amounts in other carbohydrates. Caffeine This stimulant is found in very small amounts in chocolate. Theobromine Cocoa beans are about 2% theobromine, a central Hooray!

Cannabinoids These chemical, which are the active ingredients in marijuana, are found in very small amounts in chocolate, and may influence the brain's own production of painkilling compounds. By "very small amounts," you'd have to eat about 22,000 pounds of chocolate to have any drug-like response.

Certainly, chocolate is fattening if you consume a lot and are sedentary. A small 12 ounce candy bar typically contains about 220 calories.

The raw bean does contain high amounts of theobromine and caffeine, but these oil-soluble stimulating alkaloids are largely lost during the processing. An average ounce of bittersweet chocolate contains from five to 10 mg. of caffeine, compared with 100 to 150 mg. of caffeine in an average cup of coffee. Although it is commonly believed that eating chocolate causes an increase the incidence of acne, there is no scientific data to support this belief.

As for cavities, at least three separate research centers have revealed that the cocoa powder within chocolate contains a substance that actually inhibits

The culprit in this case is not chocolate, but sugar. Sugar is clearly is a cause of cavities. Milk chocolate, for example, contains 55% sugar by weight. And most often, chocolate is made with "white sugar," which is the cocaine of the food industry. White sugar is a foodless "food." In most cases, the worst thing about chocolate is that it contains so much white sugar. Most commercial chocolate products list white sugar (in any of its various guises) as the primary ingredient.

One way to sidestep the detrimental effects of so much white sugar in chocolate is to make your own chocolate products by mixing cocoa (or bitter or baker's chocolate) with honey, or other natural sweeteners. There are a few commercial chocolate bars which contain no white sugar, but these are not yet common, and cost up to three times as much as others with white sugar.

Ninety percent of the cocoa bean is digestible, comprising 40% carbohydrates, 22% fat, and 18% protein. Chocolate contains substantial amounts of vitamins A, D, B2, as well as vitamin E and K, calcium, thiamine, riboflavin, iron, phosphorus, linoleic acids, and phenylethylamine. For a food that is often regarded as a junk food or pleasure food, it's really pretty good for you!

A study conducted at the Harvard School of Public Health indicated that people who eat from one to three chocolate bars a month live almost a year longer than those who do not eat chocolate.

THE MERRIFICATION OF CHRISTMAS

It is the word "merry." I a Merry Christmas. Although, for some, it may hen the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage too realistic from my point of view. approached me with a request. It is very difficult for me to deny her request, even though it goes mall and pick up a gift that I had ordered?

Being married to GMP for more years than I can remember, is very difficult for me to say no. Actually, even when I do say no, someone on the other end of the conversation is not listening.

I should be rather grateful, because of all of the husbands she has, I am the only one she asks to do favors. Through the years, I have gathered that I must be her favorite husband. So, in a really grateful frame of mind, not to mention merry, I headed for the mall to get her purchase.

I am not sure if there is another place in the whole world that I hate worse than going to a shopping mall. If there is, I haven't got there yet. Every time I walk into a shopping mall, I get nervous because everybody is looking at me, especially at my wallet. Even my wallet shivers when we walk through the opening door.

Just getting inside the shopping mall is a drain on my "merry" attitude. I figured before I really get started I should grab a cup of coffee and go sit down in a lounge chair.

There was a coffee shop in the mall and I got a $0.79 cup of coffee for $7.90. I guess where you put the decimal is really important. Personally, I would have enjoyed a $0.79 cup of coffee more.

I got my coffee, sat down in one of the lounge chairs, took a deep breath, a nice gentle sip of hot coffee and started to relax. Christmas music was being played in the background, which contributed to my relaxing attitude.

The mall was rather crowded, people were hurrying here and there, in the background Merry Christmas music was being played and I thought I would just take the time and enjoy the moment.

After I got through about half of my coffee, I happened to look around carefully watching the people coming and going. There was such a rat race going on that I could hardly believe it. I looked around trying to find some Merry Christmas faces. Unfortunately, there was not any in the direction I was looking.

"I hope they don't run out of this before I get there," I heard someone complaining.

"I hope I have enough money to cover this,"

One word defines Christmas. someone else complained.

"I hope I can get it in time to get to the party never tire of wishing people tonight," complained another person.

I listen to all of this and was simply amazed. not be politically correct, but for the rest of us who Where in the world was this merry spirit that have at least two gray cells working, it is wonderful. Christmas is most noted for? Everybody was I was relaxing one afternoon this past week hoping for something, but their hope did not seem

At the merriest time of the year sitting in a place where people were buying Christmas presents, it against my current energy status. was very disconcerting to realize there were not that many merry people in the mall. Everyone seemed to be under some kind of pressure and aggravation.

A thought began to jingle in my mind. What would it take for some people to really experience a Merry Christmas? What would make them merry?

Taking another sip of this expensive "Merry Christmas" coffee, I began to think about life in general. Am I really living a merry life? Or, am I all caught up with the holiday season?

Just because someone says, "Merry Christmas" does not mean in fact that they are experiencing anything quite near to merry.

Watching people scramble here and there in the shopping mall, I realized that merry had nothing to do with Christmas. For so many people, Christmas is a time when you are so busy trying to get things to make other people "merry" that the whole spirit escapes.

What we really need during this particular holiday season is what I call, The Merrification of Christmas. Christmas is what it is, but there is the possibility of really having a Merry Christmas if you understand what the attitude of merry is all about.

It is not about gifts, or parties, or traveling. It is something more substantial than that. In order for me to Merrificate my life, I need something more than just the holiday spirit.

Weaving through the crowd at the mall, I picked up the item my wife sent me to pick up and headed for the parking lot. As I was going, I realized why I really did not like the mall, especially during the holiday season. Too many people are struggling with anxiety and frustration in trying to keep up with the Christmas Joneses.

I thought of what Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28).

The key ingredient of "Merry" is rest and only Jesus can give the rest that creates a merry spirit.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS

Too weird for words, or too precious to pass up?

the instant accessibility to information made available to us through high technology is great, and I am typically willing to try any new idea that might make navigating through life a little easier. However, I also believe that some of today's technological advances have the potential to, slowly but surely, rob us of our ability to think for ourselves.

What ever happened to using one's head to work out a problem rather than relying on a random room of virtual strangers on-line for the answer? How much has this relatively new access to the super-highway of data exchange taken from our self-reliance and our ability to solve problems on our own?

I agree that some of life's challenges have been made much more surmountable in recent decades now that we can get instant answers to questions and solutions to problems that used to take a lot more time and energy to solve. But, is it really necessary to reinvent every cog in the wheel of human thought? One thing's for sure, I do love being able to shop on line, particularly this time of year!

Seriously though, I think there is a fine line between what we've come to rely on as a staple source of information, and what could easily become an addictive means for getting from point A to point B with little or no effort on our own part. By the way, who's to say the answers we gain through Google or on Wikipedia are worth their weight in gigabytes? A wise web-user will surely include a healthy helping of common sense when asking the net to solve a problem that truly matters in life.

My mulling over of these concerns about the potentially problematic results of depending on high-technology was prompted by an ad I saw (on the net, of course) for a new doggie device called "No More Woof". The device is designed to read the mind of a dog and interpret it's thoughts into human language, allowing the human to know and respond to what the dog is thinking.

That's the claim anyway, and I know how silly it may sound. But from what I understand, it's been proven effective. No More Woof is comprised of an oversized, tightly-fitted headset with EEG censored appendages that curve around and press down on the dog's forehead where they reportedly pick up on and interpret a dog's thought Theoretically, the data gathered by the sensors is then transferred to an electronic voice device located elsewhere on the headset which interprets the data and sends out an audible message through a tiny speaker.

For example, if the animal is thinking fearful thoughts of abandonment, the verbal response might be, "Where are you going? How long will you be gone?" Or if the dog is having stressful thoughts due to a change in the typical daily routine, the message might be, "What's going on? Are you (we) OK?"

Although the inventor/manufacturer, a Swedish group known as The Nordic Society for Invention and Discovery, is careful to iterate that the product is still in the developmental stage; "a work in progress", as it were, they clearly claim that the EEG micro-sensors are able to pick Technology is terrific. Until it's not, right? Actually, I think up on what the animal is thinking and that the resulting messages are accurate interpretations of those thoughts, in human language.

When I first heard of this new canine mind-reading machine, I was (and, admittedly still am) really quite skeptical. And even if the thing does work the way they say it does, I already know my dog is going to wonder where I am going and when I'll return if I pack a few bags and head for the front door. This is made clear by the look on her face and the change in her body language.

Still, like many other pet owners, I've always wanted to know what my dog is thinking. Would it not behoove us both for me to know if she is stressing out about something, such as an impending storm or an earthquake soon to occur? Yes, some thoughts my dog may have are made all-too obvious by her behavior and facial expressions, but some are not so clear.

One thing that would sure be great is to know instantly if my dog is experiencing pain. I understand that most animals have a pretty high threshold for it and most dogs definitely do a great job of hiding it from us humans. If I could have known years ago that my previous girl Lady was hurting months before I had to "let her go", I might have made that difficult decision much earlier, for her sake.

Anyway, the idea of having a device that can read a dog's mind and interpret it into human language is certainly intriguing, but at the same time kind of creepy. Say, just say this thing takes off and every dog owner goes out and purchases one for their pet. How might it change the way we interact with the animals we now think we understand and already love so much?

And, what about the dog's perspective on wearing a device that tells all it's inner thoughts and secrets? Will the constant human voice response to every thought they have drive them crazy? It might even drive the human crazy to hear some strange voice calling out the dog's thoughts every time they come to mind. Who knows, maybe the dog would like to keep some of his private thoughts just that...

Time will tell if the No More Woof device, or one like it will become yet another must-have pet accessory to add to the growing list of gadgetry littering our every day lives. Meanwhile, we'll just have to assume what our dogs must be thinking when they look up at us with those precious, pouting pup's eyes, tilt their head sideways and place a paw on our lap. After all, who doesn't already know what that means?

According to the Pentagon, almost 10,000 members of the Army National Guard may have received improper benefits from 2004 to 2010.

The language in the NDAA prevents the Army from recouping those funds from any service members who unknowingly received them during that time period. It also requires the Army to reimburse any soldier who has already repaid the government, and to notify credit agencies that any debt previously reported was invalid.

Notes from the Sierra MadrePlayhouse

By Artistic Director, Christian Lebano

We have a special treat for our patrons - on Sunday, December 18 at 7:00 we will be hosting the AlmaNova Duo with special guest vocalist Abram Peliakoff in a "Classical Christmas Concert". This marks the first of three concerts we have planned through the spring with Sierra Madre Music, who just happen to be the AlmaNova Duo better known as Jessica Pierce and Almer Imamovic.

I was outside the theater one night a few months ago when I met a young mom and her son. We got to talking and I soon discovered it was Jessica. That led to a meeting with Jessica and Almer where we hatched a plan to collaborate on all things music at the Playhouse. I have been struggling to curate and manage our Music Series and now Jessica is going to help me. She and Almer are incredibly well-connected in the music scene in Southern California and both have wonderful ideas about how to broaden what I've been trying to build.

We'll continue our collaboration with the Colburn School - in fact, we have concerts set for January 26 and March 26 and hope to schedule a few more. I want to build the theater into an acknowledged place to hear chamber music and soloists. For those of you who haven't attended a concert at the Playhouse, we are blessed with really wonderful acoustics. It really is a little jewel box. I hope you will join us as we build this series. I couldn't be more excited for the possibilities.

Tickets for the "Classical Christmas Concert" are $20 for adults and $15 for youth 21 and under and are available for purchase on-line or by calling Mary to make a reservation at 626.355.4318.

On Thursday we learned of the dismissal of the actor's suit against Actors Equity Association - the Union of Professional Actors and Stage Managers. This means our costs will be rising as we now must pay considerably more for our talent. We have been reaching out to our supporters and donors to make commitments of support for the next year - with this decision by the Federal Court it is even more important than ever that we can look to you to help us afford to continue bringing the talented artists that you've come to look forward to on and off our stage. I hope you will consider making a generous gift to SMP and join our Marquee Giving Circle. Please help us keep SMP as a vital and treasured part of this community. Donations can be made by sending a check to the Playhouse at PO Box 123 SM 91025 or by contacting me at Artistic Director@ 123, SM, 91025 or by contacting me at ArtisticDirector@ SierraMadrePlayhouse.org Your support means everything to us. FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

ESTATE PLANNING FOR YOUNG FAMILIES

Young families face different estate planning needs and challenges than their more established counterparts. While established families may be concerned with what will happen to their family when they pass on, young, growing families can be more focused on what is happening to their family in the present. And they even may find it hard to justify planning for an "estate" they haven't yet developed!

Young couples tend to think that they don't really need to start worrying about estate planning until they reach retirement. They may think it is better to focus on building a life than planning what will happen when that life ends. But even young families can - and do - benefit from estate planning, regardless of their net worth. Here are a few estate-planning issues important for young couples to consider as soon as they start a family:

The Care and Custody of Your Children

If you die or become incapacitated before your children reach 18, they will need a legal guardian. To prevent avoid them from becoming wards of the state and placed in foster care, you will want to name both temporary and long-term guardians. Identify a willing and appropriate guardian for your children and document your choice. You'll also want to document backups in the event your first choice is unable to perform. This will provide you with the peace of mind that comes from, knowing your children will be well taken care by the people you want if anything should happen to you.

The Management of Your Children's Property Don't forget that if you die, the property left to your minor children will need to be managed by someone - at least until they turn eighteen. If no one is identified for this task, the court steps in and takes over the role, which results in unnecessary expenses and less control.

The Distribution of Your Belongings and Asset

As with your children's property, your estate plan should include the details on how you want your property will be managed. Again, if your wishes are not expressed, the court may step in to handle things. That means a loss of control, extra expense, and an impersonal experience for

The Management of Your Estate

Again, if you do not name a personal representative who will manage your estate, the court will appoint one. This can result in delays, extra fees and costs, and, in the end, there is no guarantee the representative will act in accordance with your wishes.

The Authority to Make Decisions for You

You should also consider giving powers of attorney to someone in the event you are unable to make sound personal financial or health care decisions for yourself. Not doing so makes things harder on your family both financially and emotionally.

Young families face different challenges than established families do, but all families share concern about their children's futures. You don't need a large estate to begin estate planning, but you should know what you want to do to protect your family and your assets should you die or become incapacitated. Far from being a morbid task, estate planning actually gives young families peace of mind, confidence, and security when it comes to the future well-being of all members of the

RAGING MODERATE by WILL DURST

PRESIDENTIAL APPRENTICE

Two months before joining the government in an entry level position, President-elect Donald Trump has been learning the ropes and is busier than a bartender ten minutes before midnight at a Times Square Applebee's on New Year's Eve.

A large amount of time was spent selecting a cabinet of deplorables from his basket of deplorables and making sure the two sons from his first marriage, Uday and Qusay, had the proper security clearances. Their safari trophies were also expedited though customs.

Trump cleverly kept America's enemies on their toes by refusing to commit to moving into the White House. Replacing a black family living in public housing would cause him to break out in hives, and nobody wants an itchy beloved leader. Besides, Melania is reluctant to downsize.

Trump then advised people calling for a three state recount to "get over it." Reminded it had taken him seven and a half years to acknowledge Barack Obama was born in America, Trump invoked the classic, "do as I say, not as I do" doctrine, demonstrating a firm grip on the hypocritical handle necessary to wield a leadership baton.

He honed his diplomatic skills getting into a fight with both a Broadway musical and "Saturday Night Live," leading folks to wonder how soon a Twitter war with Lady

But the majority of the future 45th President's time was spent reneging on a slew of campaign promises. Who would have thought a New York City developer would welsh on a deal? Oh yeah. Everybody.

- He settled the lawsuit he "would never settle" against Trump University because nobody wants the presidency plagued by frivolous distractions. And there will be plenty of other lawsuits to be frivolously distracted by.

Trump now looks forward to getting advice from President Obama. Probably expects some problems with his Kenyan immigration policies.

Ône of his major refrains was locking up Crooked Ĥillary. Now he's thanking her for her service to the country. Lock her up with hugs and kisses is what he meant. - He will retain parts of Obama Care instead of getting rid of it on Day One like previously promised. It is thought his major complaint is Obama's name on the bill and as soon as the country starts referring to it as Trump Care, he'll be fine with it. - That whole imposing a Muslim ban thing? No. No. No. He's imposing a muslin ban. No more imported loosely woven cotton fabric. In addition we're going to keep out those nasty Vicuna coats from Peru as well.

- An end to sanctuary cities? Yes. Definitely. Bird sanctuary cities.

- Going to impose tariffs on Chinese gods not goods. The Eight Immortals can remain eternal but they're going to have to do it on Chinese shores.

Bomb ISIS. What he meant to say is the Egyptian goddess Isis is the bomb. - Getting rid of NAFTA? No, he's going to get rid of naphtha and switch to the much more economical liquid gas to heat all his resort swimming pools. - And building a wall- a simple misunderstanding. He's going to build a mall. And get Ross Dress for Less to pay for it.

- Huge tax cuts for the rich because god knows the rich need more money. Yeah. That one he's going to keep.

THE POPULIST AND HIS CREW OF BILLIONAIRES

A cabinet populated by bankers and wealthy insiders. A $1 million premier package of tickets to the presidential inauguration in January. And a posh dinner with Mr. 47 Percent, himself, Mitt Romney. If his earliest actions are any guide, America's incoming chief executive isn't so much draining Washington's swamp as he is refilling it with higher quality sludge.

As The Washington Post reports, three of President-elect Donald J. Trump's cabinet picks have personal net worths running to the billions of dollars. One possible pick for energy secretary, Harold Hamm, is worth $15 billion alone. That's $15 billion - with a "B." Crack open your wallet - do you even have $15 in cash in it right

And if you're thinking about heading to Washington for the inaugural festivities, you'd better take out that second mortgage now. Trump and his team are looking to raise an eye-watering and record-breaking $65 million to $75 million to finance inaugural events across the Capital. They're doing it on the back of high-dollar events that include an "exclusive" luncheon with Trump's cabinet picks; a dinner with Vice President-elect Mike Pence and his wife and a "ladies luncheon" with Ivanka and Melania Trump, The New York Times reported.

The events will run anywhere from $25,000 to as much as $1 million. That's a long way from the hot dogs and chips populism that fueled Trump's packed rallies on the campaign trail earlier this

And, just for good measure, Trump's chief strategist, Stephen K. Bannon, once mused about the possibility of only letting property owners vote. When an associate reminded him that would shut out a lot of black voters, Bannon allegedly said "maybe that's not such a bad thing."

So maybe it's no surprise that the shine went off Trump's populism not long after he entered the halls of power. It was a mirage to begin with. Keep in mind, this is a guy with a private jet; who lives in a gold-plated penthouse on top of a skyscraper in midtown Manhattan, and who has never had a problem showing off the gaudy trappings of his success.

The "blue-collar" billionaire who was going to build a wall; repeal and replace Obamacare and "lock-up" Hillary Clinton has been since been exposed as something much more obvious - and far less surprising - a card-carrying member of the same elite he said he would scourge.

Remember how Trump teed off on Hillary Clinton's six-figure speeches to Goldman Sachs during his rallies? Well, it's not such a nest of vipers that he's above raiding it for two of his cabinet picks.

Trump's choice for treasury secretary is former Goldman partner Stephen Mnuchin. Another Goldman executive, Gary Cohn, might be tapped for budget director. As Politico notes, after a decade in the "wilderness," the Wall Street firm that was the embodiment of the financial collapse is set for a big-time return to Washington and maybe even a rehabilitation of its battered public image.

After all, as recently as October, Trump was Tweeting that Clinton was "[meeting] in secret with international banks to plot the destruction of U.S. sovereignty in order to enrich" her donors.

Putting aside the disturbingly undertones of anti-Semitism from candidate Trump in that 140-character burst, President-elect Trump now seems to find that international cabal of bankers perfectly acceptable. Again, that's no surprise.

It's always been accepted wisdom that Trump, a Washington outsider, with little to no existing political network, was going to have to turn to Washington's elite and veteran Republican hands to populate his administration.

On the one hand, that's a good sign because it means that some of Trump's more radical campaign trail proposals will be moderated. And despite the presence of Bannon, the white nationalist Trump-whisperer at his side, both Mnuchin and Cohn are Jewish, which means some of the uglier, dog-whistle tactics of the campaign might be jettisoned as well. But that again might leave the blue-collar voters who packed Trump's rallies wondering what they signed on for. If Trump doesn't repeal and replace all of Obamacare, doesn't bring back coal or manufacturing jobs, but instead doles out goodies to the 1 percent in the form of tax cuts (as a Republican Congress will no doubt demand), there could be some restlessness in the cheap seats. At the Sex Pistols' notorious final live show at San Francisco's Winterland in 1978, lead singer Johnny Rotten asked the crowd, "Ever get the feeling you've been cheated?"

After 18 months of being promised the Earth - and the moon to boot - Trump's hardcore supporters might want find themselves asking the same thing. An award-winning political journalist, Micek is the Opinion Editor and Political Columnist for PennLive/ The Patriot-News in Harrisburg, Pa. Readers may follow him on Twitter @ByJohnLMicek and email him

SHOULD DEMOCRATS THE PARTY OF NO?

Barack Obama had just beaten John McCain by a margin of 10 million votes and 7.2 percentage points - the biggest Democratic win since 1964. Democrats also won both congressional chambers. And yet, despite this decisive pro-Democratic mandate to govern, congressional Republicans resolved, at a private dinner on day one, not to offer a scintilla of cooperation. They resolved to thwart Obama's efforts to fix the Great Recession, hoping that his failures would grease a Republican comeback in the 2012 race. Newt Gingrich, a dinner guest, reportedly told his former colleagues, "You will remember this day. You'll remember this as the day the seeds of 2012 were sown." Here's where we are today: Trump has lost the popular vote (as of Wednesday) by a whopping 2.66 million. His losing share of the popular vote (46.2 percent) is the worst for an Electoral College winner since John Quincy Adams in 1824. Even his winning electoral vote margin (74) is a pittance compared to Obama's winning 2808 margin (192). So why should Democrats on Capitol Hill give Trump the cooperative deference that Republicans denied to Obama?

As Michael Corleone said in "The Godfather II" movie, "My offer is this: Nothing." Cooperating with Trump, behaving as if he were just another Republican, would lend legitimacy to his authoritarian bent. Cooperating with Trump would "normalize" his racist populism and his serial lies. Such a strategy — tantamount to surrender — would be disastrous for a Democratic Party that has spent decades fighting for tolerance and Democrats have buckled in the past. Even though George W. Bush lost the popular vote in 2000, they acted as if the guy had a mandate to govern. Lots of Democrats voted for Bush's deficit-cratering tax cuts. They voted for his Iraq war resolution, despite the dearth of evidence that Saddam had WMDs. They supplied enough votes to put John Roberts in charge of the Supreme Court.

Republicans reciprocated by foiling Obama on a regular basis, blocking everything from his 2011 American Jobs Act (which could've put as many as two million people back to work) to his last Supreme Court nominee (the radical refusal to even hold hearings on Merrick Garland was unprecedented).

David Faris, a political science prof at Roosevelt University, said it well in a column the '[Cooperation] is the first instinct of the Democratic Party even after a crushing, incomprehensible defeat ... The urge to minimize the damage in defense of the public interest is broadly shared, and understandable. It must make many Democrats proud to support a party that truly believes in the public good, even at the expense of winning. "On the other hand, no. It's time for Democrats to say no. To everything ...

"It helps that the Republicans — led by a man who rage-tweets fake news in the middle of the night — are about to embark on a long voyage of turning every single thing they touch into garbage. There should be no Democratic fingerprints whatsoever on the coming catastrophe ... Hand Trump the keys and let him drive into a tree."

That sounds harsh. But, lest we forget, Republicans paid virtually no political price for their eight years of anti-Obama obstruction. Voters didn't seem to care that Republicans thwarted a president who twice won elections with a majority of the popular vote. Why would they punish Democrats for standing in steadfast opposition to an unqualified poseur who was rejected last month by 53.8 percent of all voters? Chuck Schumer, the new Senate minority leader, is indeed warning that when Trump gets too extreme, "we'll go after him with everything we've got."

Senate Democrats can set the tone by putting Trump's Cabinet picks through the wringer, because a number of them deserve to be seriously slow-walked — most notably, attorney general nominee Jeff Sessions (rejected for a federal judgeship 30 years ago, due to his racist remarks), Treasury nominee Steve Mnuchin (who made piles of money foreclosing on homeowners during the Great Recession), and Health and Human Services nominee Tom Price (who wants to kill Obamacare, a move that would nix coverage for 20 million people). And what remotely qualifies Ben Carson to be housing secretary, beyond the fact that he lives in a house?

Fortunately, Democrats are indeed vowing to combat those nominees. Hey, it's a start. My unsolicited advice is simple: Grow a pair.

TRUMP RIGHT TO WORRY ABOUT AT&T, TIME WARNER MERGER

On Wednesday, the Senate Judiciary committee held a significant hearing on the proposed $84 billion merger between AT&T and Time Warner, which owns CNN. AT&T's CEO Randall Stephenson testified, and faced tough questions from senators who seemed to understand allowing this merger will have important implications for a free press and American democracy for many years to come. During the recent election candidate Trump said, "AT&T is buying Time Warner, and thus CNN, a deal we will not approve in my administration because it's too much concentration of power in the hands of too few." Since then a number of press reports – no doubt pushed by AT&T – are suggesting President Trump will have a laissez faire approach and the deal will go through.

Knowing of the grassroots concerns that many conservative leaders share, I doubt President Trump or Congress will rubber stamp this deal.

Trump was right when he warned of the massive concentration of media power in a few

Consider that today 90 percent of cable television networks are owned by just six companies: Time Warner (CNN), Viacom, CBS, ABC, Comcast (NBC) and 21st Century

Of these major conglomerates only Fox gives conservatives a fair shake. New, independent networks like Newsmax TV are on the rise, but the big media still controls, dangerously, the flow of information to the public. Trump was their most recent victim.

A combination of AT&T and Time Warner will be toxic, further constricting competition and press diversity. AT&T is a giant media company which also owns DirecTV. They also were a major corporate backer of Hillary Clinton's presidential campaign. They strongly opposed Donald Trump's election. Time Warner's CNN was nothing short of the "Clinton News Network" - a 24-hour propaganda machine spewing out anti-Trump and anti-Republican venom. Right now AT&T has 26.3 million pay TV subscribers through DirecTV and ATT U-verse service – controlling about 25 percent of the U.S. cable market. They are the largest cable/satellite operator in the U.S. bar none.

By owning the largest chunk of cable home distribution, AT&T will obviously be in a position to favor their own channels like CNN, over other channels like Fox News, Newsmax and many others.

The ability for AT&T to discriminate against other cable networks that could compete against CNN or their other networks would be endless. AT&T, which controls a huge percent of the mobile telephone market, could exempt its mobile customers from data usage charges if they stream CNN content, but streaming independent news networks like Newsmax might continue to count against high speed data caps.

Frankly, I am usually in favor of government keeping its hands-off business activities. But there are exceptions.

When certain businesses act like monopolies or near monopolies, have unusual access to publicly-owned or controlled distribution systems, and get preferential access to broadcast/ satellite airwaves, then government has a compelling need to insure that such media companies act in a fair way to insure competition and the diversity of public opinion.

We already know that vertical integration of cable operators undermines competition. For example, when Comcast completed its merger of NBC back in 2011, it promised that it would not favor its own channels over other channels, agreeing to a condition that would have put the Bloomberg financial news channel on equal footing with CNBC across its distribution platform.

It is well known that Comcast never honored the condition. For this and other reasons, Comcast's recent effort to merge with Time Warner was rejected. AT&T has not demonstrated, in my opinion, a real desire to support the public's interest

Recently the Department of Justice sued AT&T and its subsidiary DirecTV for price fixing and illegally colluding to harm consumers.

There are many reasons why the FCC and Congress needs to handle this merger with intense scrutiny and remember this is not a business decision, but a matter that affects our democratic institutions. President-elect Trump knows this first hand.

in the areas of competition, diversity and fairness.
