Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

From the Editor: Congratulations John and Deanne!

"There is nothing in a caterpillar that tells you it's going to be a butterfly."

"What the caterpillar calls the end of the world, the Master calls a butterfly."

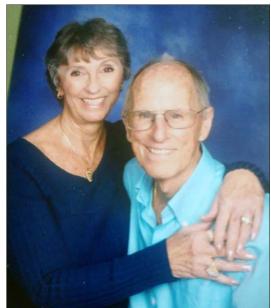

There was an intriguing article in the Los Angeles Times last Monday entitled: "Coming: an inundation of insects." "Heavy winter precipitation has fueled plant growth not seen since at least 2005 and that in turn should produce bumper crops of butterflies, moths, beetles, mosquitoes and even subterranean termites!" Well! One day last week I was out in back of the house watering when my eye caught movement. A large caterpillar was inching its way up the back of our house. Looking further, I was aghast to see a whole bunch of caterpillars inching their way up the house, their destination being the roof, where they were intent on turning themselves into cocoons and dangling off our eaves. Quite frankly, I was horrified as I had never seen this happening before in all the 47 years we've lived here. And they only want to be on the back of the house, sheltered from wind, I guess, with lots of sun exposure. I promptly texted my sonin-law, Chuck, arborist, champion herb/tomato/rose grower and part-time lepidopterist, sending along a picture of one of these guys, two inches long with black spines topped with red spots and said something along the lines of, "AAACCCKKK!!" What is this!!" He sent me pictures back of Red Admiral butterflies and said most likely that is what my caterpillars will be when they emerge. Well, OK! I'm good with running a butterfly hatchery.

A couple of things coming up you won't want to miss: The Library's used book sale is today and you can still get tickets for the Art of the Garden tour, Sunday, April 23rd. Self-guided tour of five fantastic gardens in the foothill communities. Stop by Creative Arts on Baldwin to pick up your tickets.

The picture here is of me and my best friend and Walking Sierra Madre buddy, John, who laughs at my humor, likes my cooking and tells me every week that he liked my column. We celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary on April 1st and spent the day at daughter, Patti, and son-in-law, Dave's house visiting with lots of family, some very dear friends, and a lot of reminiscing. There was cake, there was a taco guy, there was champagne, and about a million pictures were taken. I actually like some of them.

As this is something that doesn't happen every day of the week, I thought I'd talk about it a little bit. The day we were married, it poured. Buckets! There is an old wives tale which says that if it rains on her wedding day, the bride will not shed many tears during her marriage. This proved to be true as I have laughed way more than I've cried.

In these fifty years, we have successfully raised four amazing children, none of whom live with us, who have given us 13 fabulous grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. We have survived the building of, running of and sale of a radio station in the desert without losing our collective shirts or sanity. We have had so much fun, laughed so much, been to beautiful places together, and made delightful friends along the way, many of them Sierra Madreans. We have shared all that there is in life: joy, sorrow, laughter, tears, death, birth, pleasure, misery, poverty and not quite so poverty, pride in our children and other times, not so much; and always we have had each other to hold on to. Fifty years has flown with the speed of light! To quote one of our favorite singers, Kate Wolfe, "Who knows where the time goes...who knows where the time goes?

If you've married the right person, one who appreciates you and likes that you love to garden, is proud of everything you write; books, Kindle novelettes, blogs, newspaper columns; never gets annoyed or rolls his eyes when you endlessly point out sunrises, sunsets and flowers, and is ready to go out to dinner any time you say, "Let's go out!" Will go to movies you pick without complaining...too much, and will hug you and hold you when you're hurting, without telling you how to fix it, you'll be happy. I know I certainly have been, and am looking forward to the next fifty years!

COYOTE SLAUGHTER CANCELED AFTER PETA FILES LAWSUIT

Arcadia, Calif. — In response to a lawsuit filed by PETA and Arcadia resident Sarah Rosenberg, the Arcadia City Council voted on Tuesday to rescind its prior resolution to use cruel neck and leg snares to trap coyotes and then kill them.In the lawsuit, PETA alleged that because the city council voted to approve the plan on February 21 without first considering the impact on the environment, which is required under the California Environmental Quality Act, its decision was illegal.

"Coyotes are an important part of the ecosystem, and we have to learn to live alongside them in peace," says PETA Senior Vice President Lisa Lange. "The Arcadia City Council's decision to rescind its cruel extermination plan should make other California municipalities think twice before delivering a death sentence to coyotes and their orphaned pups."

As PETA—whose motto reads, in part, that "animals are not ours to abuse in any way"-pointed out to the mayor and city council, coyotes suffer when caught in painful snares, which could also indiscriminately harm companion animals and nontarget wildlife. The vast majority of city council meeting attendees opposed the plan to slaughter "nature's dogs," who are an integral part of California's ecosystem. In addition to eating vegetables and fruits, as predators, they help keep populations of smaller animals such as squirrels and rats in check.

Nonlethal means of living together with coyotes include informing the public about deterring them through habitat modification and repellents as well as strictly prohibiting feeding wildlife. It's also important to ensure that companion animals are supervised and cats are kept indoors. For more information, please visit PETA.org.

EDITORIAL - SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

H. SUSAN HENDERSON

IT'S TIME FOR A CHANGE

Relax, this is not about make it right. Washington, Sacramento is about change right here hemorrhage starts to emerge. in Sierra Madre. Change at home.

would say that things are perfect in our pristine Village, but it is far removed from some of the major problems that plague other cities. As of this writing, we don't have a 'gang' problem, we don't have a 'homeless' population to help, we don't have issues of political corruption that we know of. For the most part, Sierra Madre is the poster child of what small town, idyllic America is all about. The issues that we find most disturbing are mostly inflicted upon us by outside forces, for instance, the increase in burglaries. But even with that we have our own not commission a professional survey of all the very competent Police Department to deal with

No, those aren't the things we need to change. We have the whole 'small town ambiance' thing down pat. At least for now.

What needs to change is our lack of attention to preserving Sierra Madre as it is. For as long as I can remember, we have been reactive rather than proactive as far as maintaining our small town. We don't think about anything until there is a problem. For instance, the Henry A. Darling House situation. A few years ago the property was purchased and the new owners attempted to remodel as they felt was their right to do. Bam!

They ran into a brick wall when they found out that the property really had historical value to the council reorganization in 2004. WHY DON'T city and the general population had no desire to see the property altered. So, they sold the property and moved their family far away. The next buyer, who we presume was aware of the previous owner's dilemma, attempted to work with the city to correct the structural flaws and yet retain the property's historical value. Bam! Another brick wall. Loose ends that had never been tied up have created, in this author's opinion, a situation that upon resolution will probably satisfy the city and permanent problem.

And that Is what needs to change.

The preservation of Sierra Madre as a safe, family friendly, environmentally friendly, wildlife friendly, community that values its history, has got to become top priority to every resident, every employee, every elected official in this town.

It's not enough to move to town and embrace becoming involved in the activities and things that make it that way.

what is going wrong without doing something to structures.

And, most importantly, it is not enough to or even LA County. This keep putting band aids on problems every time a

In order to preserve Sierra Madre, we have to be PROACTIVE! And that starts with our leadership. No one who has a clue Don't get me wrong, our current Mayor and Council have been the most productive and civil groups in the last 15 years. The fires that have been before them, like the Utility Users Tax, were handled professionally and kept the town from coming apart at the seams. But....We have to do

> For example, earlier in this article, I mentioned the dilemma of the Darling house as a historical property in Sierra Madre. I believe that whatever can be done to appease both parties will be done, but we must put into place the necessary codes and ordinances to prevent a recurrence. Why historical and potentially historic homes in Sierra Madre so that as the ownership changes, the new buyers are aware of what they have purchased? In addition, why not include in the city's Municipal Code a requirement that realtors disclose to buyers that the home is on the City's Historical (or potentially historical*) Homes list? By so doing, Sierra Madre would save thousands in staff time and legal fees. Both the SM Historical Preservation Society (www.smhps.org/) and Preserve Sierra Madre (www.preservesierramadre.com/) would no doubt embrace those efforts as they continue their activities.

> And wait, there is more. This one has been a pet peeve of mine since I attended the city WE INCLUDE A PLEDGE TO THE CITY OF SIERRA MADRE IN THE OATH OF OFFICE FOR ALL CITY OFFICIALS?

Our city leaders take an oath to uphold the U.S. Constitution and the State of California Constitution but there is nothing in the oath that binds them to upholding the Charter of the City of Sierra Madre or its Municipal Code and related laws. Can we add such language to the Oath so that our leaders are reminded of their public the owners, but will not address the larger, more pledge that in their every action, Sierra Madre and its preservation is their No. 1 priority? Perhaps that would inspire current and future leaders to remember what their real job is....to Protect and Preserve the City and Residents of Sierra Madre. That may appear to be a seemingly small gesture, but it is the kind of lasting change that we need!

*potentially historic: This phrase is used to include all the good Sierra Madre has to offer without those homes that were previously designated as Historical landmarks and could in fact become landmarks again, and those homes that were never It's not enough to sit back and complain about on any registry but are identified as historical

Pet of the Week

Energetic, playful and loving, Gonzaga (A412995) is living proof that age doesn't have to slow you down. This 9-yearold, neutered male, Chihuahua mix walks well on a leash and has gotten along well with other dogs at the shelter. Gonzaga has been the star of the show on field trips with our Wiggle Waggle Wagon. After he has a chance to meet visitors, he'll happily hop up on their laps for snuggles and sweet face kisses. Gonzaga has a medical issue with one leg that occasionally causes him to limp. Our veterinarian has decided it doesn't need treatment at this time, but Gonzaga's adopters will need to monitor his leg with their veterinarian in case treatment becomes necessary.

The adoption fee for dogs is $125, but as part of our Slam Dunk for the Animals event, Gonzaga's adoption is free thanks to generous donors! All dogs are neutered, microchipped, and vaccinated before being adopted.

New adopters will receive a complimentary health-andwellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information about how to care for your pet.

Pasadena Man Arrested in Narcotics Seizure at LAX

As part of an investigation stemming from a multikilogram narcotics seizure at Los Angeles International Airport last month, a Pasadena man, has been named in a federal criminal complaint that alleges he, along with a second man in Detroit, were key operatives in a drug trafficking organization that shipped cocaine and heroin from Los Angeles to Detroit.

Pasadena resident, Kevin Blair, also known as "Wood," 45 was arrested by the Pasadena Police Department pursuant to an outstanding felony warrant for assault with intent to murder that was issued by a court in Wayne County, Michigan. The second man, Delano Leflore, also known as "Bop Bop," 37, of Detroit – is a fugitive who is being sought by federal authorities.

According to police, Blair and Leflore are responsible in the seizure of approximately two kilograms of heroin and approximately one kilogram of cocaine at LAX on March 7. After the narcotics were discovered in checked luggage, federal prosecutors charged a 28-year-old Detroit woman with being a drug courier. Last Friday, a federal grand jury indicted the woman, Kennsha Mason, on three counts: conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute and to distribute heroin and cocaine, possession with intent to distribute heroin, and possession with intent to distribute cocaine. On Monday, law enforcement authorities in Michigan intercepted a package Blair sent by UPS, and recovered one kilogram of suspected heroin and one ounce of suspected fentanyl, a synthetic opioid pain medication. The DEA Los Angeles International Narcotics Task Force, an inter-agency task force based at LAX, is conducting the investigation. The Pasadena Police Department provided

GIANT LOVE FOR MINI HORSES

This year's Wistaria festival was the best I've ever attended. The weather was awesome, the vine was lush, the food was delicious, and there was a variety of vendors showing off their wares. It was all lots of fun, but my personal favorite part was meeting the adorable adoptables from So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary.

I was walking through Memorial park with Zola, a big white Great Pyrenees, when I got my first glimpse of the tiny equines. Immediately I made my way over to where they were, to get a closer look. It became instantly clear that Zola was equally intrigued, as she headed in their direction alongside me, lickety-split.

I wondered what those mini horses might be doing at the Wistaria Festival so I made a point of introducing myself to the friendly lady who was there tending to the little tikes. She told me the little horses had been rescued and brought to So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary in Hemet, California for rehabilitation and rehoming. İ was baited & hooked and I wanted to know more!

What I learned about So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary during my visit with Jeanne Candelario, the organization's founder, is that they are a 501(c)3 organization that rescues, rehabilitates and rehomes malnourished, neglected or abused mini horses. The darling divine equines that come to So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary receive all the love and nourishment they need to heal both physically and mentally in preparation for finding forever loving homes.

Jeanne explained that, much like dogs and other domestic pets that end up in shelters, the horses that come to the Sanctuary have had histories of neglect and abuse. I was saddened to hear that the same sort of cruelty that often happens to dogs and cats also happens to mini horses. Apparently folks start out thinking a mini horse would make a great pet, only to realize how much love and care they actually require.

Jeanne, who has been a horse lady all her life, knows very well how much love and care horses need and she is more than willing to give it. She has had horses all her life, and she was actually an avid rider until she sustained injuries in a riding accident that prevented her from getting back in the saddle again. After the accident Jeanne was forced to give up riding, but she absolutely refused to give up horses.

Jeanne's first mini horse was a little sweetie named Splash, with whom she fell head over heals. And that is where the Mini Horse Sanctuary story begins - with a mini horse named Splash. Rescuing Splash was quite gratifying for Jeanne, but there was lots more love to share at the Candelario home. And so it wasn't long before Splash was joined by more precious minis desperately in need of refuge and hope

Jeanne and her family began attending local livestock auctions where they purchased malnourished and neglected mini horses, brought them home and gave them the care and love they so needed and deserved. Soon the Candelarios found themselves virtually surrounded by the adorable furry four-leggers and thus the rescue began.

Over time, their rescue efforts evolved and so did the team effort. Today the organization has grown to include a team of loving, capable volunteers who have a knack for teaching abused horses how to trust again. When they gained their status as a 501(c)3 non-profit, they continued to expand their efforts across state lines and into the feedlots.

Jeanne and her team are grateful for the "rescue angels", as the group so endearingly refers to their supporters, who've banned together with them to save neglected and abused minis from questionable fates. indeed many escaped death's door. The Sanctuary, along with it's network of "angels", has succeeded in saving upwards of 100 mini horses and has found loving forever homes for more than 60 of them.

Their rescued minis receive only the best, including regular veterinary care, hoof trims and of course, daily nutrition, tender-loving-care and attention. As part of their rehabilitation efforts, So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary takes their minis on adventures into the community where they get to meet and greet members of the public. They know how important it is for the minis to be well prepared for the world and all its excitement as part of their grooming for placement into forever loving homes.

The minis also take part in regular community functions as well as pet adoption days and local equestrian events. Many of the minis have participated in holiday parades and have done their best to bring attention to their cause. On New years day, 2017 the group's efforts really paid off when, through a strange series of events, they were invited to walk in the Tournament of Roses Parade as substitutes for some horses that had fallen too ill to attend.

That random chance to participate in the 2017 Tournament of Roses Parade was a magical moment that allowed So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary the golden opportunity to gain exposure on a much broader level than ever before. They were able to make lots of new friends through their participation in the parade and they hope it will be the first of many years to come.

The good folks at So Cal Mini Horse Sanctuary are driven by a sincere passion for the horses, and that passion continues to carry them down a road of rescue, rehabilitation and rehoming. If you share the same kind of passion for horses and are interested in learning more about this awesome organization, visit their website at socalminihorse.org and like them on Facebook.

LOOKING FOR A BEST FRIEND

Tigress is one of our residents who was surrendered because of owner allergies. Tigress is a beautiful torbie (a tabby with tortoiseshell coloring) and her soft fur is touched with stripes of gold. Her brilliant green eyes look serenely out at the world with wisdom of its ways. She is very affectionate and loves to have people come over to stroke her soft coat. She will sometimes come forward to greet people seeking to be petted. She has a calm and gentle nature. Her play style is also calm - she likes to bat at toys close to her, and go for the red dot when it comes by. But she won't fight like the huntress whose name she shares.

Tigress gets along with her roommates so she would do well in a multi-cat home. She would also enjoy being a sole companion. While Tigress knows her way around the Meow Manor, it's not a forever home and she would gladly give it all up to explore a new forever home and have a special family to call her own. Her adoption fee is $99 which includes spay surgery, a microchip, first vaccinations and a free wellness check-up at a participating veterinarian. Feel free to call us at

Can you smell the clean Ocean breeze; hear the waves falling on the sand. Read carefully for the captain of the ship is bringing in the freshest catch of the day. Or another dozy, is never go to a seafood restaurant on Sunday Night. I have been going to Cameron's Seafood Restaurant on Colorado as far back as I can remember. Though I must admit, not until recently did I delve into the menu. I found myself going to the bar for that San Francisco sourdough bread and the Elmer Dills' approved Clam Chowder . By the way that is a heck of an endorsement.

For over 30 years Cameron's Seafood has been a favorite in Pasadena. Inspired by the San Francisco fish houses that sit upon the bay, Cameron's Seafood provides the just off the boat freshness that every seafood lover is searching for.

So what to order? Just last week for dinner I started off with Oysters from Virginia, and had a most enjoyable succulent New Zealand Orange Roughy. HOW WORKING IN RETIREMENT CAN AFFECT YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS

Dear Savvy Senior,

I'm considering retiring later this year and starting my Social Security benefits, but would also like to work part time. Will this affect my benefits, and if so, how much?

Ready to Retire

Dear Ready.

You can collect Social Security retirement benefits and work at the same time, but depending on how old you are and how much you earn, some or all of your benefits could be temporarily withheld. Here's what you should

Social Security says that if you're under your full retirement age - which is 66 if you were born between 1943 and 1954, or 66 and 2 months if you were born in 1955 - and are collecting benefits, then you can earn up to $16,920 in 2017 without jeopardizing any of your Social Security if you don't reach your full retirement age this year. But if you earn more than the $16,920 limit, you'll lose $1 in benefits for every $2 over that amount.

In the year you reach your full retirement age, a less stringent rule applies. If that happens in 2017, you can earn up to $44,880 from January to the month of your birthday with no penalty. But if you earn more than $44,880 during that time, you'll lose $1 in benefits for every $3 over that limit. And once your birthday passes, you can earn any amount by working without your benefits being reduced at all.

Wages, bonuses, commissions, and vacation pay all count toward the income limits, but pensions, annuities, investment earnings, interest, capital gains and government or military retirement benefits do not. To figure out how much your specific earnings will affect your benefits, see the Social Security Retirement Earnings Test Calculator at SSA.gov/OACT/COLA/

It's also important to know that if you do lose some or all of your Social Security benefits because of the earning limits, they aren't lost forever. When you reach full retirement age, your benefits will be recalculated to a higher amount to make up for what was withheld. For Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today show and author details and examples of how this is calculated, see SSA. of "The Savvy Senior" book.

In addition to the Social Security rules, you need to factor in Uncle Sam too. Because working increases your income, it might make your Social Security benefits

Here's how it works. If the sum of your adjusted gross income, nontaxable interest, and half of your Social Security benefits is between $25,000 and $34,000 for individuals ($32,000 and $44,000 for couples), you have to pay tax on up to 50 percent of your benefits. Above $34,000 ($44,000 for couples), you could pay on up to 85 percent, which is the highest portion of Social Security that is taxable. About a third of all people who get Social Security have to pay income taxes on their benefits.

In addition to the federal government, 13 states -Colorado, Connecticut, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont and West Virginia - tax Social Security benefits to some extent too. If you live in one of these states, you'll need to check with your state tax agency for details.

of the Ants," a sci-fi gem from 1977

The film starts off with anonymous "government agents" dumping barrels of radioactive waste, conveniently labeled "Radioactive Waste: Danger! Hazardous! Skull & Crossbones!" into the ocean. They wash ashore and ooze mercury-colored liquid which the resident ants start to eat. Cut to Joan Collins, who plays a crooked realtor trying

We get little snapshots of them as they leave on a boat ride and bus tour around the properties. One philandering man abandons his wife to hit on another female passenger. Another man on board admits that he's just out of a bad divorce and is having trouble with his child from the marriage. One of the women describes how she broke up with the man who was cheating on his wife

What struck me the most during all of this was the gratuitous references to sex and overly raunchy language. This is 1977!" I thought. My parents were married that year! People back then weren't the crude animals they are today, at least their movies weren't as crass as they are now, or so I thought. Interestingly, after the first 15 minutes, the language improved and the innuendo stopped.

CASSINI MISSION PREPARES FOR 'GRAND FINALE' AT SATURN

since 2004, is about to begin the final chapter of its remarkable story. On Wednesday, April 26, the spacecraft will make the first in a series of dives through the 1,500-mile-wide gap between Saturn and its rings as part of the mission's grand finale.

"No spacecraft has ever gone through the unique region that we'll attempt to boldly cross 22 times," said Thomas Zurbuchen, associate administrator for the Science Mission Directorate at NASA Headquarters in Washington. "What we learn from Cassini's daring final orbits will further our understanding of how giant planets, and planetary systems everywhere, form and evolve. This is truly discovery in action to the very end."

During its time at Saturn, Cassini has made numerous dramatic discoveries, including a global ocean that showed indications of hydrothermal

NASA's Cassini spacecraft, in orbit around Saturn activity within the icy moon Enceladus, and liquid methane seas on its moon Titan.

> Now, 20 years since launching from Earth, and after 13 years orbiting the ringed planet, Cassini is running low on fuel. In 2010, NASA decided to end the mission with a purposeful plunge into Saturn this year in order to protect and preserve the planet's moons for future exploration—especially the potentially habitable Enceladus.

> But the beginning of the end for Cassini is, in many ways, like a whole new mission. Using expertise gained over the mission's many years, Cassini engineers designed a flight plan that will maximize the scientific value of sending the spacecraft toward its fateful plunge into the planet on Sept. 15. As it ticks off its terminal orbits during the next five months, the mission will rack up an impressive list of scientific achievements.

"This planned conclusion for Cassini's journey was far and away the preferred choice for the mission's scientists," said Linda Spilker, Cassini project scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory some of its most extraordinary observations at the end of its long life."

The mission team hopes to gain powerful insights into the planet's internal structure and the origins of the rings, obtain the first-ever sampling of Saturn's atmosphere and particles coming from the main rings, and capture the closest-ever views of Saturn's clouds and inner rings. The team currently is making final checks on the list of commands the robotic probe will follow to carry out its science observations, called a sequence, as it begins the finale. That sequence is scheduled to be uploaded to the spacecraft on Tuesday, April 11.

Cassini will transition to its grand finale orbits, with a last close flyby of Saturn's giant moon Titan, on Saturday, April 22. As it has many times over the course of the mission, Titan's gravity will (JPL) in Pasadena, California. "Cassini will make bend Cassini's flight path. Cassini's orbit then will shrink so that instead of making its closest approach to Saturn just outside the rings, it will begin passing between the planet and the inner edge of its rings.

In mid-September, following a distant encounter with Titan, the spacecraft's path will be bent so that it dives into the planet. When Cassini makes its final plunge into Saturn's atmosphere on Sept. 15, it will send data from several instruments—most notably, data on the atmosphere's composition-until its signal is lost.

friends who seem to have all day to create beautiful gardens with beautiful rows with wind chimes and special bricks lining the paths and vegetables that such gardens, but I do not spend the time that it takes to create such showplace gardens, where you can invite friends and community to regale in your productivity.

Nevertheless, I seem to be the type of person who cannot live without a garden. A garden of some sort, even if all the vegetables are in pots and tubs in a tiny back yard. I insist on all organic, and those plants that require the least amount of work for the return.

Years ago, when I taught an "Integral Gardening" class at a local junior college, students constantly wanted to know why certain plants did not grow well in their yard. They asked about roses, petunias, lettuce, corn, broccoli, and on and on. In general, when they wanted to know why a particular plant did not grow well, I directed them to the Sunset Gardening book where they could analyze their plant. Or I directed them to the Rodale book which shows pictures of which bugs are eating your plants, and which leaf discolorations indicate which mineral deficiencies, or other problem.

However, I always tried to impress upon the student two basic principles of my lazy man's guide was with New Zealand spinach. I originally dug to gardening.

One, wherever you live, look at your yard. Each land, the way the sun and wind affect that land, the and over the course of several years, it covered type of soil, and the types of trees already growing at least a thousand square feet in a succulent, there, such as eucalyptus, for example. Observe edible groundcover. Unlike regular garden what already grows well in your yard. Then, as spinach (which is an annual), New Zealand you begin to plant various herbs and vegetables, spinach leaves can be harvested year-round, a you will observe that some do well, and some do little here, a little there. It is even tastier than not do well. Focus on those which do well. Those regular spinach, and can be added to salads, that consistently do not grow well in your yard are soups, sandwiches, stews. perhaps not suited for your area.

Potatoes are easy to grow. I usually take potatoes should be on the cover of some magazine. I admire from the store which have sprouted, and then plant them in a big mulch pile. Onions are another easy crop which is easy to grow, and they are perennial if you only pinch off the greens and leave the roots for multiplication. I love variety. And wherever possible, I like to grow In fact, when left in the ground, onion bulb multiply every season, and you can separate them to increase the size of your onion patch. All that guilt I felt for years about drinking too much coffee has really been for nothing. Therefore, in a show of good faith, I plan to drink as much coffee as I jolly well please.

Then there was the episode about chocolate. According to those people who hate other people enjoying themselves, chocolate is supposed to be bad for you. Or so they opined.

For years, I have been secretly eating chocolate behind the back of the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage. She is one who takes these warnings rather seriously. Rather, I should say, she takes them out on me. For years chocolate was a forbidden substance in our otherwise merry domicile.

Then I read a report revealing the health benefits associated with eating chocolate. No wonder I am such a healthy rascal these days. The only exercise I have had for years is exercising caution in smuggling chocolate into

The Census Director said, "Our review concluded there was no federal data need to change the planned census and ACS subjects." Rep. Schiff led a letter for FY 2017 and FY 2018 to House appropriators requesting funding for the U.S. Census Bureau to conduct data collection on the LGBT community. Rep. Grijalva and Sen. Baldwin introduced the LGBT Data Inclusion Act last year which would require federal agencies to collect data on this population in federal population surveys to ensure policymakers have the data necessary to address the communities' needs.

Thefederalgovernment, states, and local communities use census data to determine how to allocate resources to meet the needs of certain populations. Despite this critical mission, no comprehensive federal population survey currently asks respondents to share their sexual orientation and gender identity, meaning that even the most basic of statistics – the number of people who identify as LGBT – is undeterminable.

The text of the lawmakers' letter is below.

Dear Directors Thompson and Mulvaney

We write to express our strong disapproval of the Census Bureau's decision to not include consideration of data collection on lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals in the 2020 Census and American Community Survey. While the Subjects Planned for the 2020 Census and American Community Survey (ACS) report released on Tuesday, March 28th appears to have initially considered including sexual orientation and gender identity as a proposed subject, we are concerned that the finalized report does not include any reference to proposed inclusion of LGBT identities in the Census or ACS. Additionally, we are deeply troubled that in follow-up statements, Director Thompson claims that the rationale for excluding LGBT identities is that there is no federal need for such information.

As you know, the Bureau routinely collects demographic information through the decennial census and the annual ACS. The federal government, states, and local communities rely on Census and ACS data to determine how resources should be allocated to meet the needs of certain populations. Despite this critical mission, neither of these assessments, nor any other major federal population survey, currently asks respondents to share their sexual orientation and gender identity. This means that even the most basic of cannot be counted.

A number of pieces of federal legislation passed by Congress, implicitly or explicitly, include protections on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity. Countless programs implemented under these, and other laws, serve LGBT people; some to a distinctly disproportionate extent. There is no doubt that there is both a statutory benefit and a programmatic need to collect sexual orientation and gender identity data if we want federal agencies to undertake their work in the most efficient and effective manner possible.

Despite tremendous progress in the fight to secure equal recognition under the law, LGBT Americans continue to face discrimination in facets of everyday life such as in employment, housing, and even in the justice system. There is also compelling evidence that many, particularly transgender people, are at greater risk of being victimized by violence and experience significant health disparities and vulnerability to poverty. While the Census Bureau took an important step forward in 2013 by including the marital status of same-sex couples as part of ACS data on families, the fact remains that we know little else about the social and economic circumstances of the LGBT population

Expanded data collection on LGBT people is needed to help policymakers and community stakeholders understand the full extent of these disparities, as well as identifying the needs of these communities so they can be better served. It is also crucial to our ability to respond with effective and sensible policy solutions that address the unique needs of this vulnerable population. For these reasons, we believe that the Census Bureau should advance plans to expand LGBT data collection in future national surveys and urge you to assist us in reaching this goal.

In your recent statement, you said that the Census Bureau's goal is to conduct a "complete and accurate census." If this is indeed the goal, then the availability of data on the size, location, and circumstances of the LGBT population should be taken into account. Therefore, the Bureau must acknowledge the concerns regarding the lack of reliable data on the LGBT population in the United States. We ask that you provide additional explanation as to why sexual orientation and gender identity were not included in the Subjects Planned for the 2020 Census and American Community Survey (ACS) report, including justification for stating there being no federal need for data on the LGBT population.

The Census Bureau's data collection efforts have always played a significant role in our ability to understand the communities that we represent and how best to serve them. LGBT Americans - like every American - deserve to be counted and recognized in all federally-supported surveys. We appreciate your attention to this important matter and look forward to

This Saturday a little after noon, the trailer FINALLY pulled up near Bob Baffert's Barn and Arrogate, America's richest racing horse arrived at the Great Race Place. He and his traveling partner Hoppertunity had arrived at LAX shorting before 11:00 AM and a nice little crowd patiently waited. THE 33RD ANNUAL JUSTICE FOR HOMICIDE VICTIMS MEMORIAL: STRENGTH, RESILIENCE, JUSTICE AND WHY WE MUST HEED MIKE GATTO'S WORDS

By Joan Schmidt

A few years ago, after I attended the 1st Crime Victims Summit and learned about Justice for Homicide Victims, I went home and cried. Seeing photos of victims-from toddlers to seniors-brutally murdered and taken away from loved ones was unbearable. That memorable day I met three remarkable women: Marcella Leach, Jane Bouffard and LaWanda Hawkins. Marcella Leach and Ellen "Lenny" Dunne founded JHV after their daughters (Marsy Nicholas Leach and Dominique Dunne) were brutally murdered by former boyfriends. Jane Bouffard is current President of the JHV Foundation; her parents were the victims of a home invasion robbery. LaWanda Hawkins lost her beloved son Reginald Reese and founded Justice for Murdered Children.

At Rose Hills Cemetery stands a beautiful white monument immortalizing victims; Dr. Henry Nicolas, Marsy's brother, provided the funds for this. Each year, a beautiful Memorial is held there, the Sunday that begins Crimes Victims Week.

The program was so beautiful, but heart-wrenching. Former Monrovia Mayor Mary Ann Lutz gave the Invocation and Guest Speakers included former Assemblyman Mike Gatto, LASD Chief Earl Shields of the Detective Bureau and three brave women who lost their children. The wonderful International Peace Choir performed Let There Be Peace, This Song is for Children, This Little Light, I'll Make a Difference at various times during the Program, and We Are the Survivors as the balloons were released.

Three-and-a half years ago, former Assemblyman Mike Gatto lost his loving gentle 78-year-old father who was murdered in a home invasion. His killer walked off with maybe a few hundred bucks and still has not been caught. "Dealing with death is a part of the human condition, but there is something about murder, and not being able to say good-bye...that hurts far worse than a Mike spoke of AB 169 and 30,000 felons being sent to over-crowded county jails, so many are paroled early. Mike wonders, "Why can't politicians realize that in criminal justice, we have to strike a balanced path? In the past few years, we've seen Prop 47, Prop 57, a judicial attack on our state's DNA testing laws and this year, a proposal to get rid of bail entirely. I want to stress that if these activists get their way, a person could steal a gun that is later used in a murder, get caught with date-rape drugs, rob someone, get arrested repeatedly for similar crimes and never have to submit to DNA testing nor have to pay any bail whatsoever and never spend a day in jail. Is this fair? Does this provide justice for families?

Three mothers-Colleen Campbell (son Scott), Lee Bertha Pickett-Allen (son Ernie) and Jennifer Lundy (daughter Brittany) spoke of the brutal parole hearings for their children's murderers. One drove seven hours, only to find out it was cancelled. One spent so much time getting letters, testifying, but none was put in the final report. One spoke of sitting in a room with a killer who had no remorse. Jennifer, Lee Bertha and Colleen will NEVER give up.

Colleen has two crosses to bear. Her late brother Mickey Thompson and wife Trudy were murdered by Mickey's disgruntled former partner. For years, he walked free and terrorized Colleen.)

Jennifer lost her much-loved toddler Brittany. It has been over twenty years; she has remarried and has other children. But that hole in her heart from losing Brittany will never go away. Jennifer spoke of calls to Sacramento and gave a link to a website with parole hearing dates six months ago. All three mothers told us to fight for your rights and never give up.

The doves were released, people wrote messages on balloons to their loved ones and released the balloons. . It was truly a beautiful uplifting day. Please visit www. justiceforhomicidevictims.com.

SEX MAY BE KEY TO A HAPPY MARRIAGE!

MNT Knowledge Center Written by Honor Whiteman

What is the recipe for a happy marriage? According to a new study, sex is a key ingredient. Researchers have found that sexual intercourse produces an "afterglow" that lasts for 2 days. What is more, this afterglow may boost long-term relationship satisfaction. Researchers suggest sex leads to an afterglow that plays a role in long-term marital satisfaction. A number of studies have shown that sex contributes to short-term bonding between partners, but the researchers note that the majority of couples do not engage in sexual activity every day. According to the International Society of Sexual Medicine, only 21 percent of married men and 24 percent of married women have sex on 4 or more days each week.So what bonds partners in between sexual activity? Meltzer and colleagues speculated that sex produces an afterglow, or a period of sexual satisfaction, that enhances partner bonding in the periods between sexual activity, and that this boosts relationship satisfaction in the long term.Stronger sexual afterglow linked to greater marital satisfactionNot only was sexual activity associated with same-day sexual satisfaction, but also the researchers found that a single act of sex produced an afterglow that persisted for 2 days.Lead author Andrea Meltzer, of Florida State University, and colleagues recently reported these findings in the journal Psychological Science.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

DO IT NOW: NAME A GUARDIAN FOR YOUR MINOR CHILD(REN)

I know it's hard. Thinking about someone else raising our children stops us all in our tracks. But we must. If we don't, and something happens to us, a stranger will determine who raises our children - and your child's guardian could be a relative you despise or even a stranger you've never met. It happens.

No one will ever be you or parent exactly like you, but you can't let that stop you from naming a guardian. In fact the guardian of your children would easily become the most important person in their lives and could be the difference between them surviving the tragedy of losing you and going on to be happy, healthy, and successful or not. And while the likelihood of your guardian actually having to take over is slim, the consequences of having a stranger make that incredibly important decision could be dire.

If you have not named a guardian and something happens to you - a stranger who does not know you, your child, or your relatives and friends - will determine who will raise your child.

Anyone can ask to be considered, and the judge will have the authority to decide. Keep in mind, too, families tend to fight over children, especially if there's money involved. And fights can lead judges to order the child into foster care until the matter is resolved. On the other hand, if you name a guardian, all of that can be avoided.

How to Choose a Guardian

Your child's guardian can be a relative or friend. Here are some of the factors to consider when selecting guardians (and don't forget to select back up guardians, too).

 How well the child and potential guardian know and enjoy each other

• Parenting style, moral values, educational level, health practices, religious/spiritual beliefs

• Location - if the guardian lives far away, your child would have to move from a familiar school, friends, and neighborhood • The child's age and the age and health of the guardian-

• Grandparents may have the time, but they may or may not have the energy to keep up with a toddler or teenager.

o An older guardian may become ill and/or even die before the child is grown, so there would be a double loss. o A younger guardian, especially a sibling, may be concentrating on finishing college or starting a career.

Remember, it Doesn't Count if You Don't Document it I know it's not easy, but don't let that stop you. I'm happy to talk this through with you and legally document your wishes. And know that you can change your mind and select a different guardian anytime you'd like - also - the chances of needing the guardian you've named are small; but, you're a parent and your job is to provide for and protect your children no matter what, so if you haven't taken care of naming legal guardians yet, stop procrastinating and get it done.

Dedicated to empowering your family, building your wealth and securing your legacy,

SEAN'S SHAMELESS REVIEWS:

By Sean Kayden

GENERATIONALS LIVE FROM THE TERAGRAM BALLROOM

Generationals, a new wave duo from New Orleans, Louisiana returned to Los Angeles last Friday night after an absence of a few years to showcase new jams and fan favorites. The Teragram Ballroom, located in downtown Los Angeles was buzzing on this crystal clear night as the true, zealot fans made it out to support a band that's been around for nearly decade. Ted Joyner and Grant Widmer are the masterminds and beat makers behind Generationals. They focus on vivid, buoyant snyth-pop tunes that are very appealing and deliver good vibes for the listener. The two core members switch off on vocal duties as well, which always keeps things fresh. The opening band was Raindeer, a psychedelic pop band from Maryland that generated a fair amount of momentum from the crowd seemingly in attendance for Generationals. Joyner and Widmer have a deep catalogue of songs to shuffle through and that's exactly what they did that night. Over the course of 17 performed songs, Generationals made sure to touch upon each of their 4 LPs and 2 EPs as well as showcasing their strongest tracks to date, 2017's "Avery," "Turning The Screw," and "Keep It Low," all of which are expected to be found on a future fifth LP due out sometime later this year. The crowd, a diverse group of 20 and early 30 year olds shared a rewarding experience that was both exciting and in a way, nostalgic. Generationals may be seasoned veterans, but with new songs coming out and a rejuvenated attitude, the duo, in more ways than one, are new all over again.

The band came out to a dark stage to get things started with their recent single, "Turning The Screw." It featured heavy snyths and distorted vocals while flashing lights flickered behind them to create a distinctive mood. The crowd, maybe not too familiar with this new track, was gearing up as they moved their bodies to the latest beats. There was a huge applause that proceeded and an uproarious cheer when the band started up the following track, "Gold Silver Diamond." The tune is under the guise of R&B pop. The vocals are at the forefront, but it's the infectious beats that carry this tightly constructed tune. "Black Lemon" off the record, Alix, was treated with much exhilaration. The light beats, airy vocals, and hazy feeling make up for one fantastic track that kept the energy alive and strong. In fact, there wasn't a dismal moment to be found on Friday night, as Generationals kept performing at a rapid pace. The audience knew "Black Lemon" very well as they sung along and maintained their dancing ways. In fact, I'm positive there was not a single soul who wasn't dancing or swaying their bodies to the beats of Generationals. Have you heard their songs because I don't see how you couldn't dance the night a way? The band's sound was absolutely addicting and Generationals had a way of conveying songs in a distinguishing manner that had the listener forgetting everything outside the walls of the venue.

One of the band's earlier tracks found on ActorCaster, "TenTwentyTen," was greeted with much adoration and warmth. The same can be said from another one off that record, "Yours Forever." With the band playing former cuts and the crowd exhibiting the most excitement for those, you knew you were surrounded in a room by keen fans. There was also a moment where Joyner stepped down from the stage to perform right in the middle of the crowd on ground level. In attempt to be closer to the fans, it worked seamlessly while all eyes shifted on him garnering all the attention for that brief respect during the set. It think the best of the page that brief moment during the set. I think the best of the new songs was "Avery." It has a vintage Generationals feel to it as it explores the band's sonic palette even deeper. The charming effort shows a lot of new promise for a band with knack for supercharged pop tunes and crafty songwriting. In a strange dichotomy, "Avery" could have been something you heard from the band years ago yet at the same time feels innovative and current for 2017. It just shows Generationals have a grasp on not completely abandoning their original style, but are clever enough to breathe new life into future material.

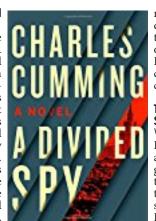

After "Nobody Could Change Your Mind" concluded their set, the band swiftly came back onto stage for a threesong encore. Two of those tracks were found on Heza, "You Got Me" and "Spinoza" that is. The latter cut proved to be enthralling as a sudden burst energy lit up the crowd. It was a crowd, I might add, not willing to part ways with the band's concluding set. "Spinoza," with its dance-to-me vibe written all over it was swiftly performed and featured a breakdown toward the end with the following lyrics: "Holding on to no one / Holding on to nothing / Don't deny it happened / Don't deny me no." Somehow, it was this track, which really had the crowd united as one. The band finished the lovely night with Trust," an early gem in their career that touches upon some surf-y rock elements. Once again, the audience sung along to closing lyrics such as "My friend Olivia said to me / What's the use in trusting more than we have to?" We all knew the end was approaching, but man, we didn't want it to be true. In a fleeting moment, the band thanked everyone and it was suddenly all over with. However, I could tell this LA crowd was longtime fans, probably seeing the band perform on multiple occasions throughout their steady career. I'm glad I finally (and well overdue) had the chance to see Generationals put on a memorable and in many ways, completely enlightening performance. If you want to feel good, listen to Generationals. It's impossible for them to let you down.

One Part of Dodd-Frank That's Hurting Consumers

If I had a dollar for every time a politician tried to push something through Congress they said would protect consumers, I probably would have back all the dollars these efforts have cost me over the years. Somehow things never seem to line up the way they're promised and we all pay the price.

Take the period following the so-called Great Recession.

With Barack Obama in the White House and the Democrats in control of both parts of Congress, they couldn't wait to pass all kinds of new rules and regulations governing banks, mortgage lenders, the consumer finance industry, credit cards, and anybody else they believed we all needed to be protected from. It was crackdown on greed and the voters, aided by a cheerleading cadre of reporters that really don't understand financial issues but write about them anyway, bought it all.

Now that a little bit of time has passed we can see how Dodd-Frank and the Consumer Protection Act of 2010 have actually harmed the same consumers they were meant to help. The worst example of this may be the price controls imposed on debit card transaction fees on the merchants who accept them by the companies that issue them.

This came about as the result of pressure from Illinois Democrat Dick Durbin, for whom the amendment instituting the caps is named. He thought consumers were being taken advantage of, and thought that capping the interchange fees imposed by the banks would get us all a break.

The nation's leading "big box" retailers greatly benefit from the use of debit cards. Transactions process faster (which they like) and that keeps lines moving (which consumers like) and are very convenient (which everybody likes). As soon as the Durbin Amendment passed they started looking for ways to get around the now capped at 21 cents per transaction interchange fees -- down from an average of 1.15 percent of the transaction total value -- many of them felt were unnecessarily punitive.

What got lost in the discussion were the high costs associated with the use of debit cards. Convenience comes at a price. So does network maintenance, theft protection, reissuing cards to update their security and a host of other things. Banks and other card issuers used to use the income generated by interchange fees to pay for all that. Once the Durbin Amendment capped what could be charged, card issuers had to look elsewhere to recoup their expenses.

Card companies are now charging the same maximum processing fee for smaller transactions as they do for large transactions, saddling small businesses with a sharp increase in business expenses. Debit card use is now limited in many cases and many places have some minimum transaction amount. Free checking has just about gone the way of the passenger pigeon while fees on checking and savings accounts have increased by three to five percent. Just how is any of this better for you and me?

If all that were not bad enough, the higher costs the cap has imposed on merchants are, according to a study conducted by George Mason University law school, being passed along to everyone who buys anything in the form of higher prices.

Price controls are never a good idea. The ones the Durbin Amendment to Dodd-Frank instituted are especially pernicious because they are hidden so far below the surface. That's the kind of government-directed activity that produces cronyism, limits consumer choice, raises the price of goods at the point of sale, and redistributes wealth by creating an environment in which smaller Mom and Pop operations and coffee shops are subsidizing more expensive, higher volume purchases made at national chain stores and big box

Whatever Sen. Durbin's intentions, his amendment did not work out the way he said it would. He should be gracious enough to acknowledge this an offer the language necessary to repeal it as the Senate takes up Dodd-Frank reform and repeal. At the very least, if he would rather just forget the whole thing, he shouldn't fight to save it when someone else introduces language to knock it out. It is bad policy that produced higher prices and left consumers with fewer protections and conveniences than they had before it became law.

IS BILL O'REILLY TOO BIG TO FAIL?

Fox News, where women work at their own risk in a misogynist lture frozen somewhere in the 1950s, is back in crisis mode. Nine months after chairman and accused sexual harasser Roger Ailes was forced out, we're wondering whether accused sexual harasser Bill O'Reilly will be forced out, too. Don't hold your breath.

I don't write much about O'Reilly, although it was fun two years ago to recount his phony boasts of covering a war that was actually 1,000 miles away from his hotel. But now attention must be paid, because his new flap is for the highest stakes. It's morals

Advertisers are currently fleeing "The O'Reilly Factor," indicating in press releases that they prefer not to be associated with an old-school male chauvinist who has cost his company $13 million to settle sexual harassment claims. The news about O'Reilly - who allegedly made sexual advances to his five female accusers, and when rebuked, hurt the women's careers broke bigly over the weekend, and more than dozen bailing sponsors have scrambled onto the Mercedes-Benz is patting itself on the back: "The allegations are disturbing and, given the importance of women in every aspect of our business, we don't feel this is a good environment in which to advertise our products right now." Ditto clothing company UNTICKit: "It is important that our corporate partners reflect the same principals of inclusivity and equality upon which we have built our brand." Ditto the pharmaceutical company Bayer, which says it supports a safe, respectful and non-abusive environment for women."

All very noble. But let's not get carried away, because the firms are ultimately beholden to the business of making money.

These sponsors are merely shifting their ads to other Fox shows, which means that O'Reilly's notoriety isn't costing Fox News a penny. Plus, the network gets most of its revenue from licensing fees paid by cable and satellite operators, so it's cushioned from any sponsor rebellion. And if the sponsors truly wanted to take a moral stand, they'd bail on Fox News entirely. After all, the network, which claims to have "zero tolerance" for sexual harassment, just renewed its contract with O'Reilly last year after it paid off female accusers. Unfortunately, the sponsors have shown no interest in cutting the cord completely. Granted, ad boycotts have worked on occasion. MSNBC nixed the simulcast of Don Imus' radio show, and Glenn Beck left Fox News after sponsors fled his TV program. But Bill O'Reilly

To use the mob's terminology, O'Reilly is an earner. He makes $18 million a year, which is dwarfed by the bucks his show brings in: $446 million ad-revenue dollars got pumped into Fox coffers between 2014 and 2016. That's likely deemed to be more important to Fox executives than the sex harassment stuff - like, for instance, the allegation that O'Reilly told one woman to buy a vibrator, and serenaded the same woman by phone with masturbation noises.

By the way, O'Reilly says he has never harassed anyone, that he routinely draws accusers just because he's famous, and that he and Fox have paid off the women because "I'm a father who cares deeply for my children...I have put to rest any controversies to spare my children." In February 2016 he lost custody of his children, who said they wanted to live with their mother.

Bottom line is, money talks. One Fox source told New York magazine's Gabriel Sherman (the journalist with the best Fox sources), "The impact of these boycotts can be cosmetic. The feeling is, let's keep our heads down and hope this blows over."

Which may well happen. Here's another remark, from a different source: "We've seen this many times in the past. Some of the advertisers that left will come back, and some will be replaced. Life will go on."

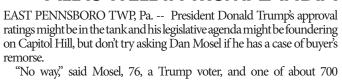

That remark was uttered in 2012 by Michael Harrison, who publishes a talk radio magazine. He was referring to Rush Limbaugh - who, at the time, was hemorrhaging advertisers after he ridiculed a law student, a birth control user, as a "slut" and a "prostitute." You may remember that flap. Scores of big-ticket advertisers, from Capitol One to Quicken Loans, said they would no longer do business with Rush. Critics gleefully tallied the boycotters and awaited Rush's downfall.

Last August, Rush inked a new contract with his overlords at Premiere Radio Networks - for another four years. You get my point.

Perhaps Peggy Drexler, an author and gender scholar, is right when she says that the O'Reilly scandal will ultimately help women - "the more we hear about...the mistreatment of women in the workplace and anywhere, the more women are likely to band together to hasten that change" - but Rupert Murdoch and his old-boy underlings are fine with Fox's toxic culture if it works for the balance sheet.

ALL IS WELL IN TRUMPLANDIA

conservative activists who packed a hotel ballroom just outside Pennsylvania's state Capitol last weekend. The president's Russia troubles? That's a fever dream of Democrats and the press. The collapse of healthcare reform? That's House Speaker Paul Ryan's fault. And don't sweat tax reform - that'll happen by August.

In short, all is well here in Trumplandia.

And Mosel and three of his friends, Rob Boysen, Bill Harper and Don Reimer, were feeling their conservative oats as they plowed through a lunch of deli sandwiches during the Keystone Leadership Conference, an annual shindig mostly put on by local conservative activist and occasional Republican office-seeker Lowman Henry.

Over a rainy weekend at a local Radisson hotel, attendees at this lower-case version of the Conservative Political Action Conference heard from an array of prominent figures from the political right, some of them elected, some of them activists and media personalities

Speakers included U.S. Sen. Pat Toomey, U.S. Rep. Scott Perry, Andy Schlafly, son of the late conservative firebrand Phyllis Schlafly, and conservative media personalities like Ben Shapiro of The Daily Wire and John Gizzi of NewsMax.

The collapse of the Ryancare bill was just fine with the Mosel and his lunchtime colleagues. "The only thing Ryan had to do was introduce the repeal bill that passed 60 times in the House," said Harper, who hails from Bucks County, a purplish Philadelphia suburb. "That would get the Freedom Caucus and a bill that would be acceptable to all sides."

In his speech to activists, Perry predicted an eventual return to healthcare, saying Republicans needed to "get back in the huddle."

"We just want to do what we told our voters we were going to do," he said "I don't want to criticize the play call. From my standpoint, we could have had an alternative. I don't want to replace their version of socialism with our version of socialism," he said.

The Freedom Caucus' reticence prompted an angry Tweet from Trump, who took the bizarre step of threatening to run against them in 2018 if they failed to get onside.

"The Freedom Caucus will hurt the entire Republican agenda if they don't get on the team, & fast. We must fight them, & Dems, in 2018!" Trump wrote.

That move left Mosel and his friends shaking their heads. "If he runs against conservatives, he's going to lose support," Boysen, also a Bucks County resident, said. "Going against the Freedom Caucus is a bad move on his part." The lunch-time gang also said Ryan might run aground if he's not careful. Some activists have said it might be time to change horses in the Speaker's office. "If Ryan keeps doing what he's doing, there'll be a big push to get him out of there," Boysen said. "He pushed this bad bill and the Freedom Caucus saw through it."

With the Senate Judiciary Committee set to vote Monday to send Judge Neil Gorsuch's Supreme Court nomination to the Senate floor, Toomey foreshadowed a major showdown with Democrats led by Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y.

Republicans will do "whatever it takes" to get Gorsuch over the goal line, Toomey told the crowd. And that includes invoking the so-called "nuclear option" to pass him by a simple majority, rather

"In an interview following his speech, Toomey said "to the extent that it's possible for me to be confident, I feel the confident the votes are there," to break the 60-vote threshold and approve Gorsuch with a simple majority.

"I think so," he said, when he was asked about the vote count. "It's not as though we haven't discussed this among ourselves. There's nobody I know in the Republican Conference who is looking forward to having to do that. But there's nobody that I know of in the Republican conference who thinks we should have a four- or eight-year series of vacancies on the Supreme Court."

And when it comes to Trump's Russia troubles and the mess surrounding House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes, the lunch gang shrugged it off.

"It's all the Democrats have been talking about," said Reimer, who hails from Montgomery County, a majority-Democrat Philly suburb.

Asked if he thought Nunez should recuse himself, Mosel snorted and said, "Who's he going to hand it over to? Trey Gowdy," the former House GOP Benghazi inquisitor.

Reimer finished the thought, "It's a Democratic ploy."

Yep ... all is well here in Trumplandia.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: AUDREY D. ANDERSON CASE NO. 17STPB02496

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of AUDREY D. ANDERSON. A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by DAVID L. ANDERSON in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that DAVID L. ANDERSON be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The WILL and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act with limited authority. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 04/25/17 at 8:30AM in Dept. 99 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

World War I How Did the War Begin?
Why Did the U.S. Get Involved? When World War I began in 1914, it was a war that mainly involved European countries and Russia. The U.S. was not involved, but did agree more with one side, called the Allies. Germany, part of the other side, the Central Powers, became angry with bank loans and ships bringing cargo to Britain (its enemy). Germany threatened to use its submarines to sink any ships going to Britain - even American ships. So the U.S. on April 6, 1917, declared war on Germany.

8. during the first Christmas of the war (1914) some on both sides agreed to stop fighting; they sang songs, 13 gave some small gifts of food - and some even took part in a football game 9. France built a fake city of hoping to confuse enemy fighter pilots 10. the U.S. joined in WWI (1917) after Germany's sank American ships and Germany tried 8 to get Mexico to side with them by promising land that Mexico had earlier lost to the U.S.

11. German U-boats sank over 5.000 was the first war fought by countries.

all over the and was so terrible, people felt that it must be the "War to End All Wars" 13. at the end of WWI (1919), Germany,

Austria and Turkey had to sign a giving up their colonies (lands they had taken over) were drawn, some > countries added land. some new countries were created too - the map of Europe changed largely to the one we see today
