SIERRA MADRE POLICE LOCKDOWN SCHOOLS IN SEARCH OF BURGLARY SUSPECT

-Duarte

Just as school was about to be dismissed for the weekend, the Sierra Madre Police Department informed local school officials to lockdown their campuses while the department attempted to apprehend a burglary suspect. The request was sent to all the schools near the 400 block of Auburn and included Sierra Madre Elementary School, Gooden School, and Bethany Christian School. St. Rita School was on spring break and the Sierra Madre Middle School was not near the crime scene. The general public was also advised via social media, to stay away from the area. The lockdown lasted approimately 1/2 hour.

SMPD was responding to a burglary that was discovered on Auburn. A large window had been broken, the front door left open and the house had been ransacked. The homeowners were not home a the time. Efforts to catch the thief or thieves included assistance from the joint task force helicopter and the Arcadia and Pasadena Police Departments. A canine unit was also brought in to assist.

After the authorities determined that the burglar(s) was no longer in the area, the search was called off and the schools returned to their normal activities.

This incident happened around 2 pm on Friday and the investigation is ongoing. If anyone has information regarding this crime, please contact the Captain Donna Cayson at the Sierra Madre Police Department 626-355-1414. IF YOU SEE SOMETHING, SAY SOMETHING!

JEWELRY STORE CLOSES AFTER 47 YEARS

Last week, Mountain Views News was contacted by the owner of Charlotte's Fine Jewelry with the sad news that the establishment, which has been in existence for 47 years, was calling antun/21 it quits.

According Charlotte Waddingham, she and the business are relocating to Edmunds, Washington.

closing store may leave the city with another vacant downtown business for a while, however public records show that the building has already been purchased.

In the case of Charlotte's the relocation is unrelated to another problem commercial businesses are having in Sierra Madre, i.e., escalating rents. One business at a recently remodeled location on Sierra Madre Blvd. has already closed its doors and another is rumored to also leaving due to high rents. "Attracting new businesses to Sierra Madre has been a challenge over the past decade and having 3 or 4 empty commercial sites in downtown is certainly not desirable", said one member of the local chamber of commerce.

There was a time in Sierra Madre's history when downtown offered everything residents needed: (partial listing) a grocery store, a car dealership, a barber shop, a haberdashery, a fresh fish market, a furniture store and much more. Today, with the proliferation of Big Box stores and online retailing, the city will need to maintain and support the kind of brick and mortar businesses that are trendy and attract today's

In the meantime, according to Charlotte's Fine Jewelry social media posts, the store will only be opened Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturdays from Noon to 6 pm and Wed, Thurs, Fri, Sat. 12 noon to 6 pmis scheduled to officially close its doors on May 17, 2017. Photo by D.Davis/MVNews

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"Laissez les bon temps rouler!"

And the good times did, indeed, 'rouler' last Thursday at Sierra Madre Elementary's Spotlight Show. Gayle Bluemel invited me to share in the good times as the First Graders, about 100 strong of them, took us to New Orleans. Ms. Bluemel and her husband, Dan, laid down some very cool jazz, she on piano, he on bass guitar. The kids were filled with Mardi Gras spirit, draped with Mardi Gras beads, feathered headbands, straw boaters, some excellent white fedoras and assorted t-shirt costumes.

This was my second Sierra Madre Elementary "Road Trip USA" adventure, having been to Nashville with the Second Graders and their guest professional musician, Evan Marshall, a few weeks ago. I was wowed then and I was wowed again! The first graders were joined by guest artist jazz cornet-trombone-clarinet player, Corey Gemme. Corey is one of Gayle Bluemel's former students, having been in her first 5th grade class ever at Washington Elementary in 1973. He is a product of several Pasadena schools, including Muir and PCC, going on to finish at Cal State LA. Corey is a member of about half a dozen groups, including The Wabash Wailers, Corey's Dixiebop Quartet and – my favorite – Corey's Rolling Figs Jazz Orchestra. Inspired by the Big Bands radio station his parents listened to, he picked up the trumpet at age ten and hasn't stopped playing. He credits early influences like Herb Alpert & The Tijuana Brass and all the great jazz legends, Louis Armstrong, Red Nichols, Harry James, Bunny Berrigan, Bix Beiderbecke, to name a few, for his love of jazz.

Needless to say, when Corey joined the First Graders, it was fantastic. They sang "Choo Choo Ch'Boogie," "Come on, lemme show you where it's at....I said the name of the place is I Like It Like That!" and so many more. We had a dance break parade off the stage, down in front of the audience complete with tambourines, fringed umbrellas, maracas, triangles, gloves and scarves waving to the beat. I tell you, folks, you had to be there!

The program wound up with "When the Saints Go Marching In" and, as we had been given a lesson on how to clap for Jazz music, which, in case you didn't know, is on beats 2 and 4 as opposed to 1 and 3, which is for Country, this went perfectly. Corey was more fun than you can imagine, playing a different instrument for each song and really enjoying the kids, the music, and the moment.

Lynnanne Hanson Miller, the dance instructor for all the schools in the district, who gives classes and designs choreography for special events such as this, loves working at Sierra Madre Elementary as it's an exceptional school, focusing on positive energy and the arts. Miss Emily, the music teacher, proved once again that she truly is a force of nature, by coaxing some really great singing out of these little guys and gals. Think about it: First Graders are seven years old! They sang and danced a whole lot of exciting music and their stage presence was incredible with all eyes on Miss Emily!

I was delighted to see my friend, Lisa Dunn, one of the First Grade teachers, along with Mr.

Griffiths, Ms. Keck, Mrs. Richey and Mrs. Spigai-Perez. BUT...the best was yet to come, the Spotlight Awards. Principal Lewis called the names of about fifty students who were each presented with a certificate for achievement in things like: Kindness, Friendly Attitude, Cooperation, Increased Work Production, Polite-Well Mannered & Fair, Cheerful. Yes, there were also awards for math improvement and all those other things, but isn't it wonderful, friends and neighbors, to see that kids are rewarded for being good citizens, too.

You can check out Corey Gemme's website: corevgemme.com where there is information on his Rolling Figs Jazz Orchestra CD - Gathering No Mold Since 2012 - entitled "Let's Get Rolling! Who remembers what station it was that played Big Band music back in the 1970s? KLAC? KMPC?

One more thing...You just gotta get to the Sierra Madre Playhouse for "Belle of Amherst" before it closes on April 23rd. We went last Sunday and was fantastic. Emily Dickinson, portrayed by Ferrell Marshall, will touch your heart, and make you laugh, too. You don't want to miss this...trust

55TH ANNUAL SIERRA MADRE ART FAIR FEATURED ARTIST HAS BEEN SELECTED

The Friends of the Sierra Madre Library are proud to announce that the Featured Artist for 55th Annual Sierra Madre Art Fair is Karen McLean-

McGaw. Karen McLean-McGaw, nationally acclaimed artist and Santa Barbara native, has been capturing the essence of California and European landscapes for the past 30 years with her vibrant and sensitive paintings. Her small format paintings are executed "en plein air." Larger compositions are created in her studio utilizing the small plein air paintings as studies recording her passion for the color and light of each unique landscape. Karen is well known for her sensitive expressive watercolor and oil landscapes of California, Hawaii, Italy and France where she travels annually teaching workshops. She is frequently invited to jury shows and demonstrates her painting techniques. In addition to major corporate and private collections, her work has been featured on magazine covers and has won national awards.

"My approach to plein air painting is direct. I strive to convey the uniqueness of the landscape and the feeling of a fleeting moment in time. It may be the angle and subtle color of a shadow or the reflective mesmerizing qualities of water that grab my attention."

Her "Estuary Reflections" watercolor painting will appear on all post cards, posters, flyers, and other promotional materials.

This year's Art Fair is being held in Memorial Park, 222 W. Sierra Madre Blvd in Sierra Madre, on Saturday, May 6, from 9:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., and Sunday, May 7, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Be sure to stop by Karen's booth (#33) to admire and purchase her inspiring creations.

All proceeds from this event help support the Sierra Madre Public Library. For more information please visit www.sierramadrelibraryfriends.org or call 626-

South Pasadena Police Arrest Child Molestation Suspect

A man in Alhambra was arrested Thursday morning in connection with attempted child molestation in South Pasadena. The suspect Edwin Linares was arrested at about 7:00 a.m. by SPPD.

According to police on Wednesday at about 12:30 p.m., a female juvenile was walking eastbound on Oak Street in front of the South Pasadena Middle School. She noticed that an adult male, driving a red Toyota Corolla, was slowly pacing her. The male drove ahead of the juvenile and stopped at the intersection of Marengo Avenue and Oak Street. He asked the juvenile if she needed a ride. After she refused the ride, the male asked her again. She then pulled out her cell phone and took a picture of the suspect vehicle, which fled eastbound on Oak Street. The juvenile was subsequently able to pick the suspect out of a photographic lineup.

Linares was also wanted by the Alhambra Police Department for felony child molestation. If you have additional information call SPPD Detectives at 626-403-7280.

ARCADIA HIGH STUDENTS NAMED NATIONAL MERIT SCHOLARSHIP FINALISTS

ARCADIA--Arcadia High School made another exceptional showing in this year's National Merit Scholarship Program, with 25 Apaches named as National Merit Scholarship Finalists. This is the 24th consecutive year that Arcadia High School has had over 85 percent of its students advance from semifinalists to finalists in this renowned program.
Students honored each year by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) represent less than one percent of high school seniors in the United States. The 2017 National Merit Scholarship Program had approximately 1.6 million juniors from more than 22,000 high schools to consider at the onset of this year's program. From these entrants, the NMSC recognized about 50,000 academically talented high school students, with 75 AHS students making the first round of recognition.

In the next round of applicant evaluation, nearly 16,000 student scholars were selected as semifinalists. This figure was further refined to a finalist pool comprised of 15,000 students. Among these finalists are 25 Apaches who are currently in the running to receive one of about 7,500 National Merit Scholarships whose combined total reaches nearly $33 million.

"AHS students have received recognition from the National Merit Scholarship Program each year for well over 20 years now," reflected Arcadia

District Superintendent Dr. David Vannasdall. "Most of our Arcadia High students are products of Arcadia Unified's K-8 schools. ARCADIA HS'S AWESOME GOVERNMENT CLASS AGAIN TRAVELS TO "WE THE PEOPLE" FINALS

By Joan Schmidt

For thirty years, there's been a very special tradition at Arcadia High School. This year, it's Megan Leahy's AP US Government Class participating in the "We the People: The Citizen and the Constitution" program. This instructional program on the principles of the US Constitution and Bill of Rights includes all school age students with the goal of promoting understanding of the principles and values on which our political institutions are based.

At the high school level, the culmination of the Program is in late April, a three-day National Competition with 1300 high school students and teachers from the fifty states, the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands participating. The first part of the competition is held on the campus of George Mason University and narrows the group down to ten. These ten advance to the finals at the US House of Representatives.

It's not an easy journey to reach the Nationals. The students have been working tirelessly since last summer. Their coaches include their teacher, Megan Leahy, Kevin Fox (also a teacher and past "We the People" course instructor)), and their volunteer coaches-a special group of attorneys - Miriam Lopez , Carl Nielsen, Bob Garret, and Gary Kovacic (also Former Mayor). Every Monday night, the students were at City Chambers from 7-10 pm. They did research, gave presentations, answered questions and heeded constructive criticism. The

Unit 3: Studies the ways in which Constitutionalism Ideals are applied today: Julia Wang, Hannah Chiu, Vivian Chan, Chelsea Lee, Cathleen

Unit 4: Studies modern government institutions and practices: Jenny Wu, Hugh Cheon, Katherine Hsu, Vivian Long, Clara Lee.

Unit 5: Studies Bill of Rights and its applications to modern legal system: Katie Nigolian, Melissa Morris, Neal Narvekat, Brandon Lu, Samantha Vuong.

Unti 6: studies challenges that face the American Constitutionalism in the 21st Century: Jake Walsh, Lucy Zhang, Emily Pham, Brianna Sun, Stanley Yu.

To reach the Nationals, the Arcadia team placed 2nd in Bakersfield in the state finals and were awarded a wildcard bid. This is the third straight year they are going to the National Finals and last year, won the Bronze. In 1993 and 2010, they came in FIRST! This weekend I will be thinking of Ms. Leahy's awesome class. All these months of hard work, total commitment and dedication are to be commended. No matter where they place in the finals, they are true champions to me.

A WOMAN 'ABOUT TOWN' BRINGS GUIDE DOGS TO AMERICA

Prior to the late 1920's, the idea of a dog helping a blind man navigate the layout of his own home, much less city sidewalks, was unheard of in America. There were certain dogs trained to do military and police work at that time, but training canines to assist the seeing-impaired had not yet been considered on our continent.

This would soon change after a forward-thinking Swiss woman named Dorothy Harrison Eustis introduced the concept of blind-assistant service dogs to the United States, in an article she wrote in the November 5, 1927 issue of Saturday Evening

At 41-years-old, Eustis had made a name for herself in Switzerland as a skilled police dog trainer. Then one day, in early 1927 she visited a school she had heard about in Germany where canines were being trained to assist veterans who'd lost their eyesight while fighting in WWI.

Inspired and enthused, Eustis returned home from Germany smitten by the prospect of transforming the lives of countless people through the training of canines to assist the blind. Soon after, her observations from her visit at the school, in the Saturday Evening Post article.

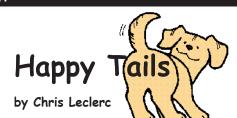

Over the course of 4 months she'd watched trainers lead the dogs through increasingly challenging exercises in concentration, obedience, and obstacle work. Wearing a rigid harness, the dogs learned to slow and slacken to indicate a curb, stop and sit before stairs or traffic, and carefully lead past objects such as trees or trash cans. After the initial training, the school paired 15 dogs with their masters who spent the next month bonding and training together.

"The first days were difficult", wrote Eustis. "The blind man is nervous, distrustful and supercritical, as well he might be." But he listened to lectures on care, feeding and authority, as well as memorized raised maps of the city. Then one day a crop of men called for their dogs. Each ran to his master, laying his head on his hand to let him know he was there. In order to graduate, they each had to venture into the city.

"I shall never forget the change that came over one man as he turned away from that gate", she wrote. "It was as though a complete transformation had taken place before my eyes. One moment it was an uncertain blind man tapping with a cane, and the next it was an assured person with his dog firmly in hand and his head up, who walked toward us quickly and firmly, giving his orders in a low, confident voice.'

Eustis asked permission to join one of the teams on their first venture out. Weaving through crowds of shoppers, avoiding bicyclists and navigating barriers, the team of two maneuvered their way through town with remarkable ease. Not once during the hourlong walk was the dog's attention distracted. They returned to the school, whereupon Eustis knew she had been converted!

Many of the men who arrived at the school were weak from inactivity, too ashamed to rely on family or friends to lead them, Eustis observed. "In four short weeks, they are remade; life takes on a new interest; shoulders lost their droop, back straighten up and feet forget to shuffle."

In response to her article, Eustis received a flood of mail including a letter from a gentleman who lived in Nashville, Tennessee named Morris Frank. Being blind himself, Mr. Frank offered to help Eustis start a blind-assistant canine training school in the United States, if she would be willing to teach him how to work with a trained dog of his own.

In April of 1928, Morris Frank met his first dog, a German Shepherd named Kiss which he later changed to Buddy. In fact, Frank chose the same name for all of his subsequent 6 guide dogs. In an interview, Frank stated, "As I put my hand down on Buddy, I knew she was going to be my Declaration of Independence, and give me back the freedom I so long desired to come and go as I please."

On January 29, 1929 Morris Frank kept his promise to Dorothy Harrison Eustis by joining her in co-founding The Seeing Eye, America's first guide dog training center. With such a unique specialty, no facility and a lack of trainers, the first several years proved challenging.

In 1932, having realized that Nashville's climate was too hot for sustained activity, they settled the non-profit in Whippany, New Jersey. But the Depression depleted their resources quickly. Besides Eustis' small fortune, the Seeing Eye sought support from donations, trust incomes and endowments.

In 1934, they decided to fix the price of a dog at $150 which would include travel, training, boarding and lifetime follow-ups. Those who served in the military paid $1. These prices have remained the same to this day and no one has ever been denied a dog due to financial inability. The Seeing Eye has ever accepted government assistance. They rely solely on contributions from their loyal supporters.

Thanks to the inspired compassion, vision and drive of one remarkable renaissance woman, countless seeing-impaired people have benefited from a unique partnership with a willing and welltrained four-legged friend! It just goes to show what a difference the life of one person can make when one chooses to follow their heart to help make a better life for those less fortunate than themselves.

SAY CHEESE

Cheese any one? A popular party question is: if you were stranded on a deserted island what food would you want to have with you? What wine would you drink? I hope this island has crackers, because for me it would be champagne and cheese. There have been many articles written (and I have read a ton of them) on how to select cheese to go with wine. For me, however, any food goes with champagne, but not every cheese goes well with certain wines.

Recently I hosted a wine and cheese party, always a great way to try new wines - everyone who attends has to bring a description of their cheese and why they selected it. A couple of pointers on selecting cheese and how to serve it: much like I have said "don't put your wine in the fridge until you are ready to drink it", don't cut your cheese until you are ready to serve it. Cheese should always be served at room temperature, so take it out of the fridge about 30 minutes before serving. Many French wines can be paired with cheeses from the same region, though there are many great cheeses produced stateside. My trick is to find a great local artisan cheese produced in the European style. Here are a few of my selections.

Merlots are very popular right now, and San Simeon has an award-winner that would pair great with goat and/or all aged cheese. I love Domaine Carneros' sparkling wine - it goes great with stilton, aged blues or gouda. Everyone's favorite, Wild Horse KLAA Radio visit my website www.peterdills.com a triple cream or camembert brie. How about a fruity Sangria? Bodega makes a very tasty one, and I suggest a pepper jack cheese on a Triscuit. Yes, a Triscuit cracker.

I kept the wine prices under $20, and as far as the cheese goes you can expect to pay around $15 to $20 for a nice portion. San Simeon Merlot is available at Vons for about $20. Domaine Carneros Sparkling Wine can be found at Gelsons for $28. Bodega Sangria is available at Whole Foods for $10. Wild Horse Chardonnay is in wide distribution, at grocery stores including Vons, for $12.

HABITABLE REGION WITHIN SATURN'S MOON ENCELADUS?

Scientists from Southwest Research Institute (SwRI) have discovered hydrogen gas in the plume of material erupting from Saturn's moon Enceladus. Analysis of data from NASA's Cassini spacecraft indicates that the hydrogen is likely produced through chemical reactions between the moon's rocky core and warm water from its subsurface ocean. The SwRI-led team's discovery suggests that Enceladus' ocean floor could include features analogous to hydrothermal vents on Earth, which are known to support life on the seafloor.

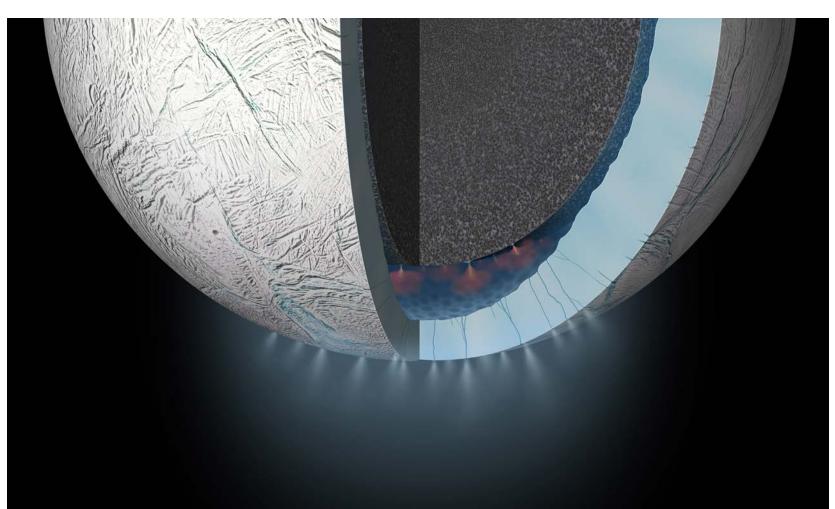

"Hydrogen is a source of chemical energy for microbes that live in the Earth's oceans near hydrothermal vents," said SwRI's Dr. Hunter Waite, principal investigator of Cassini's Ion Neutral Mass Spectrometer (INMS). "Our results indicate the same chemical energy source is present in the ocean of Enceladus. We have not found evidence of the presence of microbial life in the ocean of Enceladus, but the discovery of hydrogen gas and the evidence for ongoing hydrothermal activity offer a tantalizing suggestion that habitable conditions could exist beneath the moon's icy crust."

Waite is the lead author of "Cassini Finds Molecular Hydrogen in the Enceladus Plume: Evidence for Hydrothermal Processes" [http:// science.sciencemag.org/content/356/6334/155], published in the April 14, 2017, issue of the journal

On the Earth's ocean floor, hydrothermal vents emit hot, mineral-laden fluid, allowing unique ecosystems teeming with unusual creatures to thrive. Microbes that convert mineral-laden fluid into metabolic energy make these ecosystems possible.

"The amount of molecular hydrogen we detected is high enough to support microbes similar to those that live near hydrothermal vents on Earth," said SwRI's Dr. Christopher Glein, a co-author on the paper and a pioneer of extraterrestrial chemical oceanography. "If similar organisms are present in Enceladus, they could 'burn' the hydrogen to obtain energy for chemosynthesis, which could conceivably serve as a foundation for a larger ecosystem."

28, 2015, INMS detected molecular hydrogen as the spacecraft flew through the plume of gas and ice flybys provided evidence for a global subsurface ocean residing above a rocky core. Molecular hydrogen in the plumes could serve as a marker for hydrothermal processes, which could provide the chemical energy necessary to support life. Often during this time of the year, I get an allergic reaction when I've been under and around the trees that produces lots of pollen and cottonyfluff, like willows, and cottonwoods, and cattail, and oak. I've tried numerous remedies over the years to combat the allergy, but all with limited success. It just won't work to stay out of the woods. But finally, one of the natural remedies seemed to have good results. Nettle tea. I've long heard of the many health benefits of eating nettles and drinking the nettle tea. I've eaten the greens like spinach for decades. But once I heard about using an infusion of the nettle leaves (dried or fresh) for allergy, I've starting drinking it pretty regularly in the evenings. It has helped to relieve congestion and improve my ability to breathe. It seems to work even better than my old standby,

Since I've used up my limited supply of dried nettle, and since I don't want to keep paying high prices for the tea packages at Whole Foods, I went out to collect a large bag of it. I know of a field that gets mowed down every year, so I knew that the nettle was not valued. I went there with my cloth bag and my scissors. I found it easiest to clip off the tender tops with a pair of sharp scissors, and just let the nettles drop into the bag without touching it. After a while though, I was simply cutting with scissors and putting the tops into my bag with my other hand. I got nettled a little but they don't seem to bother me that much Nutritionally, nettles is a good source of Composition of Foods, 100 grams of nettle contains 6,500 I.U. of Vitamin A, and 76 mg. of Vitamin C.

It felt good to be alone in the field where it was uiet and green and misty. But I wasn't totally alone. There were people walking by. One woman just looked at me as she and her friend walked by, and it was a very telling look. "Wow, I really pity you!" was written all over her face. Oh, well. I've heard worse.

A guy wandered over and wondered what I was doing. Collecting nettles, I told him, and maybe if David Letterman ate them, and changed his diet, he wouldn't have needed a quadruple bypass surgery. Ok, so the man, Harold, wasn't so interested in what I thought about Letterman. But he just watched a bit, perhaps amused, and then he told me a story.

He said that he's collected nettles before for food, because he liked to eat them. He didn't know they were good medicine too.

Anyway, one day while picking nettles all by himself, someone wandered over and wanted to know what he was doing. Not knowing who the man was, Harold just said, "picking nettles." And then he added, "to eat." The stranger looked closely and finally said, "You think I'm dumb, don't you? That's marijuana you're picking." Harold was a bit dumbfounded, and wanted to say "You really are far more stupid than you look," but instead, said, "of course not." The stranger just smiled a knowing look, and then hung around. Harold soon wandered off and then hid behind a tree. He saw the stranger pulling up bunches of nettle and walking off with it. Harold laughed, thinking that the man would probably go home, dry the nettle, and try to smoke it.

I finally left with my very full bag of nettle Vitamin C and A. According to the USDA's greens. Some of the tops went into our evening soup, and the rest I cleaned and set out to dry for future tea. The soup was very enjoyable and tasty, and I realized that nettle is one of the tastiest wild greens out there, and widely

MARKET UPDATE: WILL WASHINGTON DISRUPT MOMENTUM?

Carl Davis, CIMA*, CRPC* Financial Advisor/Vice President Financial Ameriprise Services, Inc

Caution sets in

Market momentum stalled in March after solid gains in January and February, based on the generally flat performance in the S&P 500 Index since the beginning of March. Although the S&P 500 is up roughly 10.0% since the November election, investors appear increasingly concerned about significant obstacles President Trump faces as he tries to turn his pro-growth agenda into real world policy.

House Republicans were unable to pass health care reform last month. The next priority, tax reform legislation, may be even more challenging. This only amplifies investor anxiety. During the first quarter, the U.S. dollar gave back roughly half of its peak gains since the election, with small-cap stocks (i.e. stocks of companies subject to the highest tax rates) substantially underperforming large-cap equities.

Lower oil prices during the first quarter also crimped risk appetite in March. That proved contrary to the desired outcome sought by OPEC and non-OPEC members in cutting production levels. Though the economy continues to show improvement, a recent surge in consumer and investor confidence has been slow to translate into real world economic benefits.

Combined with already elevated equity valuations and the apparent desire by the Federal Reserve to boost interest rates from historically low levels, investors grew more cautious as the quarter came to a close.

The bulls remain in charge

a recent Investors Intelligence report with data through next two quarters. the week ending April 4th. This followed a decline to 49.5% the previous week, a move that coincided with they report earnings, it will likely be a factor in helping the S&P 500 snapping a 109-day streak on March 21st. equities move higher in the months to come.

The streak's tally recorded the number of days without a 1.0% or more negative move in a single day for the S&P 500, and there have only been eleven prior streaks of 100+ days going all the way back to 1928, according to Bespoke Investment Group.

However, stocks have generally performed well in the weeks and months following the end of such long stretches of price stability. Additionally, while investor confidence retreated from peak levels achieved in early March (the highest readings since 1987), bullish sentiment remains well above those seen prior to the November election.

The S&P 500 appeared to be overbought by late February, but this perspective has dissipated after the market's pullback in March. In our view, that development synchronized well with investor confidence and allowed markets to catch their collective breath after an already outsized post-election stock run. Where we go from here

A concern for investors may be the ongoing dysfunction in Washington, highlighted by the recent decision of Republican lawmakers to overhaul Senate rules in order to confirm Neil Gorsuch to the Supreme Court. However, reflationary themes such as lower taxes and increased infrastructure spending are two items that could help bridge the divide. Markets will be watching closely to see if both parties can agree on a common path forward.

Importantly, earnings season starts this month, and investors will get another update on the health of corporate America. Don't overlook the fact that stronger corporate fundamentals have also played a role in the recent equity market rally.

We anticipate that markets could be more heavily influenced in the near term by corporate earnings reports that will be released over the coming weeks. S&P 500 earnings per share (EPS) are expected to grow by roughly 9.0% year-over-year in the first quarter and Bullish sentiment rebounded to 55.8%, according to analysts also expect similar earnings growth over the paradigm-smashing chronicle of entanglement that will make you acknowledge your own entanglement in the ancient and evernew web of being."—Charles Foster, author of Being a BeastAre trees social beings? In this international bestseller, forester and author Peter Wohlleben convincingly makes the case that, yes, the forest is a social network. He draws on groundbreaking scientific discoveries to describe how trees are like human families: tree parents live together with their children, communicate with them, support them as they grow, share nutrients with those who are sick or struggling, and even warn each other of impending dangers. Wohlleben also shares his deep love of woods and forests, explaining the amazing processes of life, death, and regeneration he has observed in his woodland. After learning about the complex life of trees, a walk in the woods will never be the same again.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

SAFEGUARDING YOUR ESTATE PLAN AGAINST THREE WORST-CASE SCENARIOS

There is no such uncertainty as a sure thing. -Robert Burns

Even with an estate plan, things can always happen that may cause confusion for the estate-or threaten the plan altogether. Below are three examples of worst-case scenarios and ways to demonstrate how a carefully crafted plan can address issues, from the predictable to the total surprise.

Scenario One: Family Members Battle One Another

Despite your best intentions, what happens if the people you care about most get into a knockdown, drag-out fight over your estate? Disputes over who should get what assets, how to interpret an unclear instruction from you, or how loved ones should manage your business can open old

Lawsuits between family members can drain your estate and tarnish your legacy. Family infighting can lead to less obviously dramatic problems as well. For instance, let's say you name your daughter as the executor, and she holds a deep grudge against your youngest son. Your daughter cannot do something as drastic as rewriting your will to leave him out. However, she could drag her feet with the probate court, interpret the will "poorly" (unfairly privileging herself and your other son over your youngest), or engage in other shenanigans. In all of these cases, your youngest son would have to hire a lawyer and potentially get involved in a protracted legal battle. This is a bad outcome for everyone.

To prevent such scenarios, consider using an impartial (e.g. third party) trustee or executor. Moreover, speak with a qualified estate planning attorney to prepare for likely future conflicts among family members.

Scenario Two: Both Spouses Die Simultaneously

Many estate plans transfer assets to a surviving spouse, but what happens if both spouses die at or near the same time? This situation may be even more complicated if both spouses have separately owned assets or if the size of the estate is significant. In that case, asset distribution may depend on who predeceased whom, the amount of estate tax paid, and other factors. There are, however, ways to address this in an estate plan making it easier for your family to understand your intent, including:

· A simultaneous death clause that automatically names one spouse as the first to die:

· A survivorship deferral provision, delaying transfer of assets to a surviving spouse, thus preventing double probate and estate taxes; and

· A so-called "Titanic" clause that names a final beneficiary in the event all primary beneficiaries die at once.

Scenario Three: Passing Away Overseas

Expatriates may need particular care in estate planning. If a death occurs outside the U.S., foreign laws may conflict with provisions of an American-made estate plan. Thus a plan may need to be reviewed both for the US and other nations' laws. If you intend to live abroad for an extended period, it may be smart to draw up a second will consistent with those nations' laws, too. However, the starting point is completing your estate planning (will, trust, and other documents) here in the United States first.

If you have concerns as to whether your current estate plan is safeguarded against these three worst-case scenarios or anything else you might be worried about, we are here to

It is administered by "laying on hands" and is based on the idea that an unseen "life force energy" flows through us and is what causes us to be alive. If one's "life force energy" is low, then we are more likely to get sick or feel stress, and if it is high, we are more capable of being happy and healthy. The word Reiki is made of two Japanese words - Rei which means "God's Wisdom or the Higher Power" and Ki which is "life force energy". So Reiki is actually "spiritually

Many have reported miraculous results. Reiki is a simple, natural and safe method of spiritual healing and self-improvement that everyone can use. It has been effective in helping virtually every known illness and malady and always creates a beneficial effect. HAVE YOU TALKED TO YOUR CHILDREN ABOUT MARIJUANA?

Although I got vicarious pleasure from the American Dope Growers Union spoof on "Saturday Night Live" in 1977, my curiosity has never led me to sample marijuana, and I hope my preemptive talks with my 13-year-old son have persuaded him to confine HIS curiosity to more productive inquiries.

I bring this up because of a helpful ABC News story ("How To Talk To Your Kids About Pot") by Dr. Carolyn Certo Gnerre. The article is a timely one because one in five Americans now live in a state where marijuana is legal without a doctor's letter, a Yahoo-Marist poll reveals that half of American adults admit having used marijuana at least once in their lives and Canada is poised to become the first industrialized nation to legalize pot.

I recommend you Google the ABC story, but in the meantime I'll supply my own tips on heart-to-heart talks about recreational weed.

If you're going to take a fire-and-brimstone approach with your kids, don't be TOO "over the top." ("Marijuana leads to exposed ankles! And dancing the Charleston! And that legislation in Canada is just the first glimpse of the long-prophesied Four Mounties of the Apocalypse!")

If you prefer to take a more nuanced, open-minded approach, just be aware that your youngsters may have already assembled a pro-puffing PowerPoint presentation. Don't let your kids sway you with that stuff about being on "the right side of history." It's funny that they can cite details of which pharaohs and statesmen used marijuana but can't remember where they last left their expensive cashmere sweater.

Don't let your kids con you into believing that the dope is essential for their "spirituality." Jesus appealed to those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness," not those who "develop a case of the munchies for Funyuns

Watch out for the argument that marijuana is NOT a gateway drug. Such high praise! Too bad other products didn't use the motto to boost their public image. ("The Ford Edsel: NOT a gateway drug!" "New Coke: NOT a gateway drug." "Samsung Note 7...")

If you're afraid to say too much because you experimented with pot in your youth and don't want to be called a hypocrite, at least being called a hypocrite is better than being called at 2 a.m. ("Dad, you'll never guess where I am and what Spider expects for a pack of cigarettes...")

If you are determined to relive your wayward youth through your children, give them a "heads up" on the focus of your talk. ("No, this isn't about your slugging the track coach. Or about texting nude selfies to all county schools.

It's about a little herb that will help you shed your INHIBITIONS...")

If you insist on being the "cool" parent, at least mention that marijuana is a psychoactive drug that impacts brain development and can cause abnormalities until at least the age of 21. Just stay rooted in reality as you encourage your offspring. Remember the Army recruiting slogan: "Be a marginally acceptable level of all that you can be."

And if you're a hardcore current cannabis user/advocate, at least spare your kids the tired old "turned out fine" line.

("My parents let all four of us partake of their stash and WE turned out fine. Four? No, wait -- there were five siblings. Dude, where's my baby sister What's-Her-Name????")

TRUMP'S BROKEN PROMISE COULD BREAK ANOTHER PROMISE

Smoke has been billowing skyward from the Trumpster fire for nearly 100 days - I know, it feels more like 100 weeks - and his refusal to release his tax returns is only stoking the flames.

Basically, his broken campaign promise to release his tax returns (a promise he had voiced repeatedly) is now imperiling his grandiose campaign promise to overhaul a tax system that he supposedly understands "better than anyone who has ever run for president." He promised to roll out a tax reform plan by February, but two months later, his incompetent motley crew has rolled out nothing.

That's because they're not in sync with Capitol Hill because politicians - including a sizeable contingent of Republicans - are wary of passing anything that might wind up enriching Trump. They don't know what would enrich Trump because they're in the dark, just as we are, about Trump's finances. And they're in the dark because Trump refuses to come clean on his tax returns the way every non-authoritarian president has

More than a dozen Hill Republicans - which is a lot in this era of hyperpartisanship are calling for Trump to release his tax returns, and even Trump loyalist Joe Walsh, an ex-House member and polarizing rabble-rouser, surfaced on MSNBC with a plea for Trump transparency: "I do think this issue will come back and bite him on the butt."

It already is. Trump's fantasy of doing a bipartisan tax reform deal is likely dead unless he releases his returns. Democrats say they won't cooperate unless or until they have solid assurances that the reform provisions won't put money in Trump's pocket. And three Republicans in the conservative House Freedom Caucus have signed onto a Democratic bill that would compel Trump to release his returns.

New presidents are usually at their peak of political influence during their first 100 days. Trump hits the 100-day mark at the end of this month, and he will have accomplished nothing (except to tweet and run his mouth). The travel ban is tied up in court. The overhaul of Obamacare crashed and burned. He needed to kill the Obamacare taxes before tackling broader tax reform. Now he says he might try to re-target Obamacare before moving on to tax reform - but that was just something he said last week, and, as we know by now, his word means nothing.

Trump on ABC News in 2011: "I'm gonna do my tax returns when Obama does his birth certificate ... I'd love to give my tax returns. I may tie my tax returns into Obama's birth certificate." (One week later, Obama released his birth certificate. In response, Trump said he'd fulfill his promise and release his returns "at the appropriate time.")

Trump on Irish TV in 2014: "If I decide to run for office, I'll produce my tax returns, absolutely, and I would love to do that."

Trump on a radio show in 2015: "I would release tax returns ... The answer is, I would do it ... I would certainly show tax returns if necessary ... I do pay tax, but I'm very proud of what I've done. I have no objection to showing any tax return."

Trump on NBC News in January 2016, signaling imminent release: "We're working on that now. I have big returns, as you know, and I have everything all approved and very beautiful and we'll be working that over in the next period of time, absolutely.'

Trump on NBC in February 2016: I'll release my tax returns "probably over the next

The good news is that far fewer people are buying his snake oil. According to the latest Gallup poll, 45 percent of Americans see Trump as a guy who honors his promises. Granted, 45 percent sounds high, given his long trail of broken dreams, but that share has dropped 17 points since February. I doubt that this exchange, from Monday's White House press briefing, will reverse the downward trend:

Reporter: "Is it time to just say once and for all that the president is never going to release his tax returns?"

Sean Spicer: "We'll have to get back to you on that."

Does the Trump regime really believe it can overhaul the tax system, with bipartisan support, by stonewalling a broken promise and further destroying the poseur's credibility? Even his Treasury secretary has told the Financial Times newspaper that Trump's dream of a summer signing ceremony is "not realistic at this point."

Or, to paraphrase Trump: Nobody knew that governing could be so complicated.

MAKING SENSE by MICHAEL REAGAN A SUBJECT THE MEDIA SHOULD COVER

Sometime this month I hope our rabid anti-Trump media find a little time to cover a subject that has been very important to me since I was eight – child sexual abuse.

Child abuse of all kinds is an epidemic here and around the world.

In 2015 about 700,000 American children were victims of neglect or physical or sexual abuse. How many more cases were never reported to authorities is unknown.

Neglect accounted for 75 percent of victims, most of whom were under a year old. About 17 percent suffered physical abuse and 8.4 percent suffered sexual abuse. Some kids were abused in multiple ways.

The long-term affects of abuse on children are well known. Abused children are more likely to end up arrested as juveniles and adults, more likely to commit violence crime and more likely to end up in prison and develop psychological disorders. Child sexual abuse isn't something that affects just poor kids or is committed by a few

"celebrity" predators like Jerry Sandusky, the convicted serial rapist, child molester and retired Penn State football coach. American boys and girls of all ages, races, ethnicities and economic backgrounds are vulnerable. According to the experts, one of every three girls and one in five boys will be sexually abused before they reach 18.

These innocents won't be victimized by random strangers. Sixty-eight percent will be molested by a family member and 90 percent of victims know their abuser in some way.

So it's not just the parish priest, the gym teacher or the odd guy down at the end of the street we need to watch. More than likely, it's Uncle Charlie. And whether it's in the family, in the church or in the school, it most likely will be the abuser who is believed and protected, not the child. A child has to tell someone they've been abused seven times before the first person listens to him or her – and even then they still may not be believed.

One predator will sexually abuse 117 kids in their lifetime. That means when you see someone arrested and charged with a couple of abuses, it's usually because they didn't get caught earlier in their lives.

Predators are quick to attach themselves to vulnerable or troubled children who are looking for someone in their lives.

The guy who molested me at an after-school day camp and took naked photos of me in 1953, when I was eight, taught me how to throw a football and shoot a basketball.

He gave me the fatherly accolades and "atta-boys" I was not getting because my father and mother Jane Wyman had divorced and I was living with my mother.

Every child needs parental love, accolades and "atta-boys." If you don't give them to your child, they might be given by a predator. So be a good father, a good parent.

I never told my mother I had been molested or that the guy who did it took photos of me. I didn't tell anyone until 1987 -- 34 years later, when I was in my forties.

"Why didn't you tell someone when it happened?" I've been asked. But that's the worst possible thing you can say to a kid.

For an 8 year old, it's not in their lexicon - "I went to school, threw a football and was molested today, Mom. What else do you want to know?"

What happened to me 64 years ago, still lingers today. You never outgrow it. You don't

Sexual abuse is the worst possible thing you can do to mess up the young mind and heart of an innocent child. Unfortunately, as I know, death can become a welcome option. April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month.

First established by presidential proclamation by my father in 1983, it's a time for families and communities to make themselves aware of child abuse and neglect and work together There's are many fine government and private social agencies and family organizations devoted to preventing child abuse or helping its victims, and there's bound to be one of them not far from your neighborhood. Sadly, they have a lot of work to do. They could use your help.

Would you like to live in a house under the ocean? It might be possible, but we don't know enough about the world's oceans yet to be able to build cities and live in the sea. Oceanographers, scientists who study the ocean, hope to unlock its many secrets. They study how the ocean affects our earth and our lives. They watch the effect our actions have on the oceans and ocean life.

You can be an "oceanographer" for a few minutes. Look at a flat map of the world or run your finger along a globe to see how the world's oceans join into one huge global or "world ocean." Notice how the continents (large land masses) divide the world ocean into four or five large oceans (depends upon the map or globe).

- 3. Some people say that this ocean is part of the Atlantic Ocean. It is the water north of Asia, Europe and North America.
- 4. This ocean is east of Africa and south of Asia.
- 5. The waters of this ocean surround Antarctica. Some say it is only the southern parts of the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans.
