Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

This week, this quote fits perfectly!

"August in sub-Saharan Los Angeles is one of the great and awful tests of one's endurance, sanity and

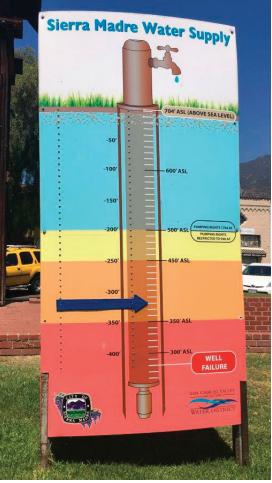

Henry Rollins

The beginning of last week was an absolute nightmare, weather-wise, just as we were returning from Texas where we celebrated granddaughter, Emily's, 7th birthday and her mommy's somewhat older birthday. Gosh, it was just like Texas here.. hot and humid. Then it cooled down into the high 90's. Woo hoo!

We continually offer thanksgiving to the fine minds who came up with air conditioning and, thanks to Wikipedia, here's something you might not know about this best invention ever: The basic concept behind air conditioning is said to have happened in ancient Egypt, where reeds were hung in windows and moistened with trickling water. The evaporation of water cooled the air blowing through the window. Neat! This process also made the air more humid, which was beneficial in that dry desert climate (got that right!). In ancient Rome, water from aqueducts was circulated through the walls of certain houses (think mansions!) to cool them. 2nd century Chinese inventor Ding Huan of the Han Dynasty invented a rotary fan for air conditioning, with 7 wheels, 10 ft. in diameter, manually powered by prisoners of the time. Emperor Xuanzong (712-762) of the Tang Dynasty had the "cool hall" built in the imperial palace which used water-powered fan wheels for air conditioning, as well as rising jet streams of water from fountains. In the 17th century, Cornelis Drebbel "turned summer into winter" for James 1st of England by adding salt to water. And we, here in the 21st century just press a button and enjoy instant relief... thank you modern technology! We are beyond grateful!

Walking Sierra Madre has been a challenge when it's in the mid-70's at six in the morning. All the succulents around town look fabulous and we don't look at the lawn anymore. You probably don't either. We are, however, talking seriously with our landscape expert Gerardo Jimenez about covering the lower part of our yard with wood chips, which would look so much better than the dirt and dead grass that is all that's left of the tons of sod we put in down there a few years back, well, 18 to be exact, when daughter, Crissy, was planning her wedding reception here. It was beautiful, friends and neighbors, and we watered it constantly. And that's when we first met raccoons, who rolled up our new sod when it was just a week or two old, and cast it aside to look for worms and grubs.

Going to the bank this morning, we noticed this nifty thermometer thing in Kersting Court, giving us a terrifying visual about our water situation, which promptly covered us with guilt as we haven't been as good about water usage as we were when the water shortages were first brought to our attention. I have resolved anew to use less and make it go further. Currently we are only trying to keep our trees alive and wish we could have a huge thunder and lightning storm like we had in Texas which was accompanied we're sure glad we didn't have what happened in Acton Just Dessert: A Fall Fantasy a few days ago when the entire town was flooded and folks were being rescued out of their pickup trucks by helicopters. That's more that we need. Seriously!

St. Rita's is doing fabulous renovations and when their students start back to school, they are going to be elated with what they find. New windows, better A/C. Good work St. Rita's! You have such a beautiful church and when it's all spruced up and painted, it will be even more beautiful.

By this time next week, all the kids at Sierra Madre Elementary will be back in school. Go see the Emoji movie, kids, it was great fun!

Speaking of going to Texas, we drove over to Fort Worth to see Dinosaurs Live! This was so cool. Huge robotic dinosaurs that moved their heads and looked as terrifying as possible. This was a tremendous merchandising opportunity and we got out fairly cheaply with just a stuffed dinosaur apiece for Jessie and Emily at a mere $19.95. Here are our girls fearlessly riding a terrifying dinosaur.

May all your students have the best year ever, the best teachers ever, and success in all they do this coming school year.

NEW WATER FEES BEING LEVIED BY THE ATERMASTER ON WATER AGENCIES IN MAIN SAN GABRIEL BASIN TO ADDRESS THE REGIONAL WATER SUPPLY SHORTAGE, CITY CURRENTLY ASSESSING ESTIMATED COST IMPACT

This past week, the City Council held a special study session on Tuesday, August 1, 2017, to discuss significant study fall below the lowest levels ever recorded by this coming issues facing Monrovia in the coming months, including Fall 2017. If that happens, it is likely that 10% of all water developing a strategy on how to address water supply issues in the Main San Gabriel Basin (MSGB) aquifer. As you may be aware, Monrovia gets its water from the MSGB aquifer, which is managed by the Watermaster.

In May 2017, the Watermaster instituted a new fee on all water producers in the San Gabriel Valley, including the large purchase of water – 40.7 billion gallons, which will cost City of Monrovia. This new fee was implemented to help remedy the water shortage that currently exists following an extended drought environment here in our region. We have had years of drought conditions in the MSGB, and despite Governor Brown's declaration in April 2017 that the drought in California is over, for us here in the MSGB, the reality is that we are still in the midst of a serious drought situation.

In order for the MSGB aquifer to be considered healthy, groundwater levels at the Key Well need to consistently be above 200 feet. Currently, the groundwater level is at around 177.8 feet – and falling – due to years of drought that drew rain thinking that there was plenty of water to go around.

To put the situation into the proper context... the lowest that our groundwater levels have ever fallen was to 172.2 feet, in October 2016, right before the most recent winter r water infrastructure.

production wells in the Main San Gabriel Basin - including water production wells in Monrovia - will go dry by the end of 2017. This could prompt widespread water shortages throughout the region.

In response to the situation, the Watermaster has made a more than $100 million. That water will be transported into the MSGB to replenish the aquifer and ensure continued water supply for our residents and businesses. The cost of purchasing and importing this water will be split between all of the communities and agencies that use this water, including us here in Monrovia.

What this means is that water will become more expensive for all of us in the MSGB. The City is currently working to analyze the issues surrounding our water supply and the anticipated associated costs that will be impacting Monrovians in the coming months and years, down our water reserves. Additionally, communities have and we should have our assessment completed and slowed or stopped their conservation efforts following the ready for review in September 2017. In the meantime, to address the challenges impacting our region's water supply, it is crucial for Monrovians to continue to conserve water. This will help to both reduce water costs

HELP CONSERVE WATER DURING THE HOT SUMMER MONTHS – PHASE IV WATER RESTRICTIONS STILL IN EFFECT

It is crucial that we, as a community, continue to conserve watering should be limited to: water as we deal with the effects of a nearly decadelong drought. During the summer, water use spikes dramatically as individuals use extra water on their lawns and plants. Unfortunately, much of this water is wasted due to overwater, water runoff, and evaporation. Remember to water early in the morning or late at night by law. to minimize water loss, and only water once every four days. Limiting our outdoor water use can add up to huge water savings, and is a key tool in conserving water.

to support Senate Bill 12 (Beall) which seeks to increase access to postsecondary education for foster youth.

"Access to financial aid and an awareness of how to navigate what is considered a complex and complicated financial aid system prevent many foster youth from even considering postsecondary education as an option after high school," said Supervisor Barger. "SB 12 streamlines the process and addresses some of the challenges that prevent foster youth from achieving their academic goals by providing much-needed support and guidance." "Because of factors outside their control, youth in foster care often have lower levels of educational attainment compared to their classmates," said Supervisor Hilda L. Solis. "Youth in foster care face tremendous challenges in their young lives, including suddenly changing schools and unexpected absences, and they need additional resources to meet their full potential. It is my hope that if we can alleviate these issues, we will see more youth in foster care graduate from high school and succeed in college."

Many foster youth are entitled to financial aid but are unaware of its availability, and do not have support or assistance in filling out Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) forms.

The key provisions of SB 12 include:

- A requirement for each county child welfare agency to identify a representative to assist foster youth with applications for postsecondary education and financial aid.
- Streamlining the financial aid verification process for foster youth who apply through Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)
- Expanding an existing on-campus based support program from 10 to 20 community college districts, thereby enabling foster youth to receive the support they need to succeed.

KEEPING IT COOL WITH YOUR CANINE

If you are a dog owner in Sierra Madre or in one of the neighboring foothill communities, you are most in the heat, and keep a good healthy exercise regimen for them at the same time.

We all want to do what it takes to keep our four legged furry friends cool during the summer months, but at the same time we don't want them becoming calorie-collecting canine couch potatoes due to lack of exercise. A client of mine told me about a creative and fantastically fun way she chose to beat the heat with one of her pups in the summer months, and I immediately thought her story was worth sharing.

When I first moved to California in 1984, I lived in the Redondo Hermosa communities. I have happy memories of playing fetch in the sand and swimming animal adoption and education programs. and wading through the breakers with "Lady", my dog at the time, followed by leisurely walks on the strand in the late afternoon cool ocean breezes.

Back then, in the South Bay, there were a couple of spots where you could get away with having a dog on the beach, so I took full advantage of that privilege, particularly on a hot summer day. I truly treasure those memories, because living in Sierra Madre makes driving to the beach a lot less convenient, and finding a beach that will allow dogs is not as easy as it used to be. Although there are still a few caninekind beaches and when you find them it is definitely worth the drive, if it means keeping your canine cool.

Sierra Madre residents, Mike Bieber and Jennifer Cichocki, are pleased to be the proud owners of three delightful and absolutely gorgeous dogs named "Sid", "Elijah" and "Utah". Their 3 beloved 'boys' sure got lucky when they found a home where they are treated with the utmost respect and unconditional love that they indeed deserve, and for that they are very grateful dogs. I enjoy spending time with Mike and Jennifer's babes when they call on me for walks or to stay over with them while they are away. I consider it an honor to call them my canine companions.

dance floor! In fact, as it turns out, Sid is a rather impressive paddle-

That's right, Sid is one cool canine whose balancing act on a board is potentially more impressive than that of some humans you might see on the surf. And, what better way for a canine to keep it cool than by hanging out with his favorite humans, taking a dip in the refreshing ocean water and strutting his stuff in front of the other doggy dudes at the beach?

When I heard about Jennifer & Sid's weekend water likely among the many locals who've become quite excursion in San Diego, it prompted me to look into concerned about how to protect their pets from harm dog-friendly water sports in hopes of sharing a few fresh ideas on ways to help pet owners avoid the heat with their dogs while ensuring that they are still getting the exercise they need.

> Apparently one of the most popular water sports for canines is dock diving which I find quite fascinating, but to me the most impressive canine water sport is dog surfing! I'd had heard about it before, and had seen a few dogs known to be skilled surfers on Animal Planet, one of which appeared on a float in the Tournament of Roses Parade. But I had no idea how popular dog surfing had become until I saw a video on Youtube of an annual dog surfing event designed to benefit

I must say even if this fantastic fund-raiser didn't help place animals into loving homes, I would still be in absolute awe of those darling dogs riding the waves on their surfboards! Anyone who loves dogs and enjoys a good laugh should see the surfing video entitled 'Best of 2010 Helen Woodward Surf Dog Surfing Contest' posted by user: SoCalBeachesMagazine. There may be more videos now posted on Youtube of the annual event held in more recent years, but this one is guaranteed to give you a good gut laugh.

After seeing that video, I am sure you will want to attend the next event with your own cool canine. This year's Surf-A-Thon will be held on Sunday, September 10th beginning at 8:30am at Del Mar Dog Beach. For more information and to register your pet to participate, visit animalcenter.org/surf-dog-surf-a-thon.

There are lots of other ways to keep it cool with our canine right here at home, too. Backyard doggie pools and sprinkler parties are a great alternative for beating the heat if you are not up to taking a drive to the beach. Whichever method you choose to keep your canine cool, remember to enjoy the time you have together.

Take good care of your pets, give them lots of love and respect, don't leave them out alone in the heat all Some readers might remember a story I wrote in day. Their systems need cooling just like ours and there this column several months ago, about 'Sid doing are laws I place to protect them from such neglect. the twist'. Well, while I am still very impressed with If you do right by your furry four legged friends, I Sid's dancing talents, I recently learned this precious promise they will reciprocate in more ways than you

MIND THE GAP

Malia Obama just finished helped me get back into shape. her gap year, and now she is starting college as a Freshman.

She wisely decided to wait until after her father left the Presidency to begin school. The gap year is a uniquely British concept. It is a period, typically an academic year, taken by a student as a break between secondary school and higher education. I think it is a fantastic idea; I imagine that a young person would grow tremendously and it is a time of great introspection. A gap year seems quite healthy. I had a gap decade, and it wasn't healthy at all. I do not remember my 30's. I can logically reconstruct the period if I think hard, I worked on my career and raised my daughter. I have very few memories of that time because I was merely going through the motions of life, but I wasn't living. I remember honesty, maturity, and openness. It is also quite that I had developed the terrible habit of wearing CP Shades all of the time. They are glorified silk pajamas, but I was wearing them in public. They had an elastic waistband and provided too much room to spread. My wake up call came when I was on the news. When I saw myself on television, I was

It was my first encounter with unconsciously existing rather than living. For me, staying conscious required effort and awareness. I began to notice the gap between the life I was living versus the life that I wanted.

It is not easy to identify and recognize a gap; it requires rigorous honesty.

Another area that requires honesty is the desire for a romantic connection. Many single women I know over forty years old have stopped being honest with themselves about their desire for a romantic partner. They believe the lies they tell themselves: that love is not for them. That they don't need love or that they are too old for love. Being in an intimate relationship is demanding. It requires rewarding and fulfilling. Being in a mature intimate relationship is available for all of us. To cross the gap from wanting to having is going to require us to grow. Are curious about what you can do to make love welcome? # NASA RECOMMENDS THESE SAFETY TIPS FOR VIEWING THE AUGUST 21 SOLAR ECLIPSE

More than 300 million people in the United States potentially could directly view the Aug. 21 total solar eclipse, and NASA wants everyone who will witness this celestial phenomenon to do so safely.

That Monday, a partial eclipse will be visible in every state. A total solar eclipse, which is when the Moon completely covers the Sun, will occur across 14 states in the continental U.S. along a 70-mile-wide swath of the country.

It's common sense not to stare directly at the Sun with your naked eyes or risk damaging your vision, and that advice holds true for a partially eclipsed Sun. But, only with special-purpose solar filters, such as eclipse glasses or a handheld solar viewer, you can safely look directly at the Sun.

NASA recommends that people who plan to view the eclipse should check the safety authenticity of viewing glasses to ensure they meet basic proper safety viewing standards.

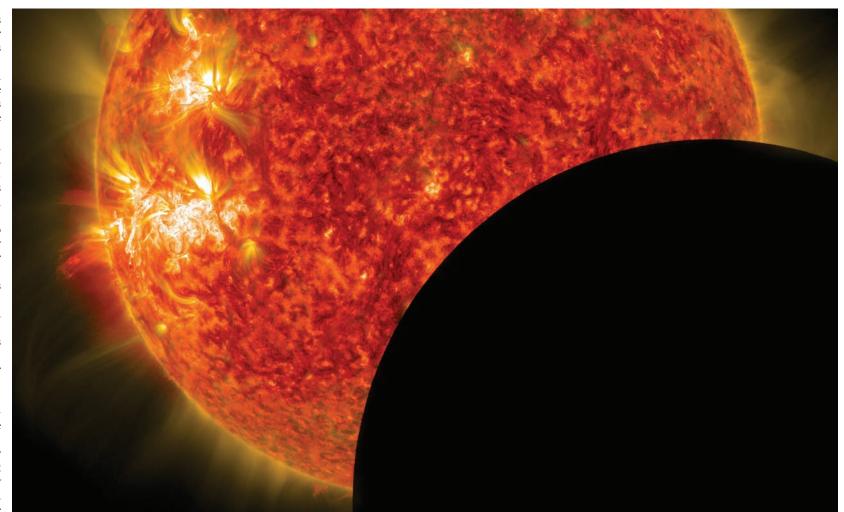

Eclipse viewing glasses and handheld solar viewers should meet all the following criteria: * Have certification information with a designated

- ISO 12312-2 international standard
- Have the manufacturer's name and address printed somewhere on the product
- * Not be used if they are older than three years, or have scratched or wrinkled lenses
- * Not use homemade filters

* Ordinary sunglasses -even very dark onesshould not be used as a replacement for eclipse viewing glasses or handheld solar viewers.

"While NASA isn't trying to be the eclipse safety glasses 'police,' it's our duty to inform the public about safe ways to view what should be a spectacular sky show for the entire continental United States," said Alex Young, associate director for science in the Heliophysics Science Division at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland. "It's important that individuals take the responsibility to check they have the proper solar eclipse viewing

An alternative method for safe viewing of the partially-eclipsed Sun is with a pinhole projector. With this method, sunlight streams through a small hole such as a pencil hole in a piece of paper, or even the space between your fingers -- onto a makeshift screen, such as a piece of paper or the ground. It's important to only watch the screen, not the Sun. Never look at the Sun through the pinhole—it is not safe.

NASA has coordinated with medical and science professionals to provide additional safety information: https://eclipse2017.nasa.gov/safety

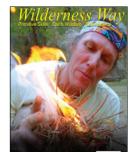

More than 6,800 libraries across the U.S. are distributing safety-certified glasses. Many are working with scientists to hold viewing events and activities before and during the eclipse. Listing of participating libraries: https://www.starnetlibraries. org/2017eclipse

NASA Television is offering a special live program, "Eclipse Across America: Through the Eyes of NASA" with real-time coverage of the event from coast to coast. The nearly four-hour program will include unprecedented images of the Aug. 21 eclipse from numerous spacecraft (including the International Space Station), high-altitude aircraft and balloons, and ground observations. Each will offer a unique vantage point for the eclipse. Additionally, the broadcast will include live coverage of activities in parks, libraries, stadiums, festivals and museums across the nation, and on social media. to get something for her birthday two days later. I could not plan it out any better had I tried.

I was celebrating but I'm not allowed to mention the one my wife was celebrating. I did that once, but I learned my lesson and I will never, ever do it, ever again. Did I mention ever? Our week was so busy we really did not have time to formally celebrate our birthdays. We try to do that every year, but this year our schedules did not permit such a celebration. The following week, however, went a little bit slower

"You," I said as I always say, "pick out the restaurant you would like to go to and we'll celebrate our birthdays

This has been the procedure all through our life. She gets to pick the restaurant, and I get to pick up the ticket. This has worked most famously for us and as far as I'm concerned, I'm not going to change anything that still works. I have been married too long to jeopardize anything that works.

We got ready and got in the car, I allowed her to drive as I always do, and we headed for the restaurant of her choice. I love it when a plan comes together.

All the way to the restaurant, we were smiling, giggling and just enjoying ourselves.

At the restaurant, the hostess took us to our seat and gave us our menus. We still were smiling and giggling because we had a whole night with nothing to do except celebrate our birthdays.

About halfway through our meal the manager of the restaurant was going around greeting his customers. He came to our table and cheerfully said, "How's everything going tonight?"

I'm the kind of person that does not like to miss opportunities. Since we were in a state of giggleization, I forgot my manners and responded back to him.

Once I'm there, it's a hard road for me to back out. So I said to her, "I was just talking to your manager, Michael, and he said if I mentioned to you how lovely you look today you would give me a discount on my bill."

All the patrons around us were laughing and she looked at me and said, "Okay, I'll talk to him about it and see what we can do."

I thought she was just joking and everybody around us was laughing and giggling about it.

Then, she brought the bill for our birthday supper. As I looked at it, I noticed there was a discount line on our ticket. The discount was for one cent. I looked at it, showed it to my wife and we both burst out laughing. A penny discount, as my father used to say, is a penny in my

I think that was the first time that ever happened in that restaurant and I'm so glad it happened what we were celebrating our birthday together.

Inventory is tightening and days-on-market is falling. But demand as measured by the Market Action Index is also trending down. The market is not giving strong up or down signals from these data.

Supply and Demand

The market has been cooling over time and prices plateaued for a while. Despite the consistent decrease in MAI, we're in the Seller's zone. Watch for changes in MAI. If the MAI resumes it's climb, prices will likely follow suit. If the MAI drops consistently or falls into the Buyer's zone, watch for downward pressure on prices.

The Market Action Index answers the question "How's the Market?" by measuring the current rate of sale versus the amount of the inventory. Index above 30 implies Seller's Market conditions. Below 30, conditions favor the buyer.

PROPOSITION 64 AND CANNABIS REGULATIONS IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY

OS ANGELES COUNTY

CANNABIS MANAGEMENT

By Joan Schmidt

Proposition 64, the Adult Use of Marijuana Act ("Prop 64" or "AUMA"), was approved by California voters on November 8, 2016 and became effective immediately. Proposition 64 legalizes the cultivation, possession and use of cannabis by adults (age 21+) for nonmedical purposes. It establishes state regulatory framework for the commercial cannabis industry, including cultivation, lab testing, manufacturing, distribution, and sale of cannabis products licensed businesses.

Although Prop 64 became effective immediately, the state will not begin licensing businesses that grow, process, or sell cannabis until January 1, 2018.

What is LA County doing to address the legalization of recreational cannabis? First the County established the Office of Cannabis Management (OCM) to implement the cannabis policies of the County Board of Supervisors and to coordinate with County Departments and community stakeholders to develop regulations for cannabis and cannabis businesses that protect public health and safety, preserve quality of life, promote equality and protect the environment.

Visit cannabis.lacounty.gov/connect to stay informed and receive updates.

The Board of Supervisors has directed County Departments to develop cannabis regulations for the unincorporated areas. The County convened eighteen listening sessions to hear suggestions and concerns from unincorporated communities. Fellow Town Council Member Linda Sells and I attended an AWESOME session at the Altadena Library. Thank you OCM and Community Partners.

When we entered, we were given a packet. It contained the Agenda and six colorcoordinated worksheets for table discussions. The session began with background on Prop 64 and cannabis regulations. The County is seeking public's feedback on appropriate regulations; that is why these sessions were held.

There were six different topics for discussion; but only four half-hour sessions, so you chose the four you felt were most important. The topics included "Youth Access and Exposure", Should "Where Cannabis Businesses "Personal Locate", Cultivation", "Taxation and Revenue", "Equity Economic and Development, and "General Concerns About Cannabis Legalization and Regulation".

Each table had a facilitator, and a notetaker. The worksheet's front side had one or two "discussion topics" and extensive background. On the back were several questions pertaining to the topic and each of us voiced our opinions/

I jotted down a lot of good info. It was very interesting to see how people felt and how different their ideas were-but that depended on their background. For instance, one lady had serious medical issues. There had been discussion on whether one could use marijuana while driving. Someone said the smell of cannabis made them nauseous. What if your neighbor used it and the odor was blown into your yard?

There isn't enough space to do justice to this topic and the comments I heard. PLEASE VISIT cannabis.lacounty.gov/listening-sessions.

DO IT NOW: NAME A GUARDIAN FOR YOUR MINOR CHILD(REN)

I know it's hard. Thinking about someone else raising our children stops us all in our tracks. But we must. If we don't, and something happens to us, a stranger will determine who raises our children - and your child's guardian could be a relative you despise or even a stranger you've never met. It happens.

No one will ever be you or parent exactly like you, but you can't let that stop you from naming a guardian. In fact the guardian of your children would easily become the most important person in their lives and could be the difference between them surviving the tragedy of losing you and going on to be happy, healthy, and successful or not. And while the likelihood of your guardian actually having to take over is slim, the consequences of having a stranger make that incredibly important decision could happens to you - a stranger who does not know you, your child, or your relatives and friends - will determine who 91024. Schedule an appointment to sit down and talk will raise your child. Anyone can ask to be considered, and the judge will have the authority to decide. Keep in if there's money involved. And fights can lead judges to order the child into foster care until the matter is resolved. On the other hand, if you name a guardian, all of that can be avoided.

How to Choose a Guardian

Your child's guardian can be a relative or friend. Here are some of the factors to consider when selecting guardians (and don't forget to select back up guardians,

- How well the child and potential guardian know and enjoy each other
- Parenting style, moral values, educational level, health practices, religious/spiritual beliefs
- Location if the guardian lives far away, your child would have to move from a familiar school, friends, and neighborhood
- The child's age and the age and health of the guardian-
- Grandparents may have the time, but they may or may not have the energy to keep up with a toddler or teenager. • An older guardian may become ill and/or even die before the child is grown, so there would be a double
- A younger guardian, especially a sibling, may be concentrating on finishing college or starting a career.

Remember, it Doesn't Count if You Don't Document it

I know it's not easy, but don't let that stop you. I'm happy to talk this through with you and legally document your wishes. And know that you can change your mind and select a different guardian anytime you'd like - also - the chances of needing the guardian you've named are small; but, you're a parent and your job is to provide for and protect your children no matter what, so if you haven't taken care of naming legal guardians yet, stop procrastinating and get it done.

BEWARE OF JOB PROMOTIONS THAT CREATE A PAY CUT

Before you step up to accept a promotion to move into a management position, be sure you're not simply taking on more work for a lower hourly pay rate. The distinction of being classified as an exempt versus a non-exempt employee is sometimes more about a perceived career status than it is about higher overall compensation for a more prestigious position. Although there are specific legal distinctions, one of the most commonly understood beyond their regularly-scheduled hours.

There are advantages to working as a salaried employee but you want to be certain that the advantages outweigh what you may be giving up as an hourly employee. A colleague of mine recently spoke with me about applying for a job to replace her supervisor who had left for a high-paying job at another company. Initially she was very excited about the possibility of moving into a salaried position with more responsibility in her current department. With her current compensation at about $24 per hour (roughly $50K annually), she was being lured by the prospect of earning up to $7K more per year. It seemed like a no brainer until she considered the extra hours that she would be expected to work above and beyond the maximum of eight per day, or 40 per week in her current role – that is, unless she was going to be paid overtime at a rate of $36 per hour.

She shared that the other employees in the supervisor positions were routinely expected to work a minimum of two to three extra hours each workday, as well as being required to put in an average of five extra hours each weekend just to keep up with their workloads. This did not include the numerous last minute "other duties characteristics of exempt employees is that they are paid a as assigned" that seemed to disrupt or derail personal salary. This is in contrast to non-exempt employees who plans for the other supervisors on a routine basis. She are paid an hourly rate and must be paid extra for working took time to do some calculations and discovered that the big promotion would result in a raise of $3.37 per hour – and that was true if it only entailed working 40 hours per week.

> Once she added the extra hours that required for the new position, she discovered it would require a commitment of at least 55 hours per week. This meant the big raise dropped to an increase of only $1.87 per hour. Since she worked at least five hours of overtime each week at an overtime rate of $36 per hour, it added up to an extra $9,375 per year – at least $2,375 more than she would earn in salary as a supervisor. For now, she's chosen the less prestigious, yet better paying position that doesn't include all of the stress of endless meetings, nor the unreasonable expectation of extra hours with no opportunity to earn

TRUMP (AND AMERICA) AS VICTIMS - THE IMPLICATIONS

For decades civil rights organizations in the United States have toted up hate crimes, tracked and reported on the growth (and decline) of extremist organizations, and filed lawsuits against bigots who engage in illegal or tortious behavior. Their efforts have chronicled an America that is far more tolerant and accepting of differences than it was thirty, forty or fifty years ago.

The advocates of inter-group progress knew that political leaders (Southern leaders excepted for decades) were supportive of the general thrust for inclusion and diversity and the reduction in inter-group hostility. It's hard to recall a national politician with much traction, other than George Wallace, who flaunted open hostility to ethnic, racial or religious minorities.

However, the metrics that we have relied on are questionable in their applicability to the political situation we have today--a president who flaunts the usual norms of civil behavior, who invokes unfounded conspiracy theories, who demonizes minority groups (Latinos and Muslims), who habitually lies, who traffics in conspiracy theories, who ignores conventional notions of truth and untruth, who evidences no humility or remorse in the face of error and who constantly claims to be a victim of others' acts.

Having been a civil rights activist for over forty years and having been involved in combatting, exposing and monitoring hate groups during that time, I speak with some perspective on these issues; we are in uncharted territory. When the president of the United States engages in conduct that many of us have spent decades teaching young people and our peers to avoid, it's not clear what the measurements we have long relied on mean.

Trump's conduct has the potential to undo years of work. Young people can easily believe that it's now acceptable to make fun of the disabled, to caricature minorities as "criminals and rapists," to demean whole communities as being so forlorn that they "have nothing to lose," to treat women as objects and to assume that criminal suspects are to be roughed up (the Bill of Rights be damned).

But the most insidious aspect of Trump and Trumpism may be his pervasive attitude of being a victim; someone else is ALWAYS to blame for what goes wrong. Prior to November 8th, he alleged that the system was "rigged" against him. The media was biased and in the tank for Hillary, illegal voters would skew the election results, foreign governments were taking advantage of us, trade deals were harming inept and gullible Americans, etc. If he had lost the election, there would be someone, or many someones, to blame. Since January 20th the media remain a foil for him as well as illegal immigrants and inner city dwellers who are still to blame-as are the Democrats- but now, so are the Republicans (post Trumpcare's defeat). America's intelligence agencies, the Secretary of State was recently added to others are all responsible for the administration's missteps and America's ills. This blame shifting, paired with the complete absence of introspection or willingness to entertain the notion that HE has contributed to his failures, all take place while we have an economy that is in decent shape and a world that is not in the grip of an acute crisis (maybe).

the list of victimizers (Tillerson "flinched" on Iran), "leakers" in his White House and assorted

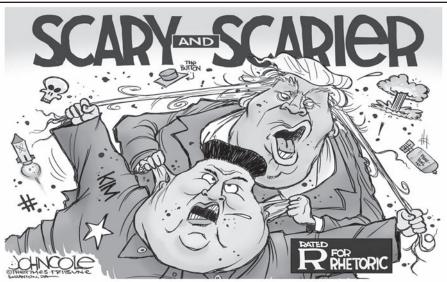

How will the excuses and the blaming of others work when a crisis or crises arise? That may be the measure of where we have come and how much damage Trump and Trumpism is doing to tolerance and civility in society.

Today, the diverse face of America has numerous "others" to blame and Trump has shown no hesitation to blame and target and cravenly exploit differences to absolve himself of any responsibility for what he says is "wrong."

Leaders in Congress of both parties, religious leaders and opinion molders across the country must be vocal and uncompromising in rejecting the insidious victim role that Trump purveys and which he seeks to impose on the country. He wants us all to "split" and "project"; it is a dangerous game to play. It may offer short term political payoff for him, but the long term harm-for him and for us- is inevitable and incalculable.

Rabbi, Jonathan Sacks, years ago warned of leaders and nations that seek to blame others for the problems they face-when their view of themselves no longer comports with the reality of their position in the world. As Rabbi Sacks warned, "Hate harms the hated, but it destroys the hater."

AMERICANS ARE PROUD TO BE GETTING DUMBER

A North Carolina man walks into a popular Washington D.C. pizzeria and opens fire, telling police upon his inevitable arrest that he came to "self-investigate" a widely debunked conspiracy theory involving former Democratic presidential candidate

In Hollywood, actress and model Jenny McCarthy and others wage a campaign against mandatory vaccinations for children, despite mountains of evidence showing they're the key to preventing debilitating childhood diseases.

At the dinner table, your loudmouthed uncle holds forth on the events of the day, insisting he's right and refusing to accept counter-arguments, even as he mangles facts and disregards clear truths.

Separately, these are amusing - and maybe a little disturbing, anecdotes. But taken together, they're part of "the death of expertise," a stubborn insistence by the ignoramuses in our midst that everyone is as smart as everyone else; that expert opinion is meaningless and that any attempt to dismiss such claims is just "elitism."

a professor of national security affairs at the U.S. Naval War College in Newport, R.I., stirred the pot of debate this summer with his new book, sensibly titled, "The Death of Expertise: The campaign against established knowledge and why it matters. Despite having access to more information than ever before, Americans are not only getting dumber, they're also proud of their ignorance and can't be moved off their opinions - no matter how effective the counter-argument with which they're presented.

"The bigger problem is we're proud of not knowing things," Nichols writes. "Americans have reached a point where ignorance, especially of any public policy issue, is an actual

He lays blame for this phenomenon in a couple of places. Among them, the fever swamp of the Internet where "confirmation bias" reigns supreme, the galaxy of "news" sources that exist to reaffirm and stoke those prejudices, and on college and university campuses, where students become "clients" to be coddled rather than challenged.

Of course, there's always been a strain of "know-nothingism," in our politics. The difference now is that when presented with facts proving him wrong, your drunk Uncle Harry will dismiss contradictory evidence as "fake news" and "alternative facts" and go blithely on his way.

But it's not "that people don't trust experts or eggheads," Nichols said in an interview. Nope, it's worse than that: "It's that they have actually come to believe that they're smarter than those experts."

"Increasingly, laypeople challenge experts by trying to explain their own subject back to them," he continued. "Oh, you're an expert on Russia? Well, let me explain Russia back to you.' This is not skepticism, it is narcissism."

And in case you're inclined to dismiss that argument out of hand, think for a moment how many times you've self-diagnosed a malady on WebMD and then quibbled with your family doctor over what actually ails you.

That's the kind of narcissism that Nichols describes.

The "death of expertise" trend reached its absolute apogee in 2016 when billionaire Donald Trump, who pushed the debunked "birther" conspiracy involving President Barack Obama, won the White House.

Trump, who has been caught in seemingly countless fibs and fabrications since, screams "fake news" at the slightest criticism.

And he routinely undercuts the credibility of government institutions, as in the case of his ongoing fight with the intelligence community over Russian meddling in the 2016

Trump's bleating about "fake news" is dangerous because "it makes news the vessel for partisan politics rather than a presentation of ideas or facts. We now distrust the politicians, and the sources that check on the politicians," Nichols says. So where does that leave us? Are we just doomed to get dumber and dumber until the flow chart of human intelligence looks like the "Ascent of Man" drawn in reverse? Unfortunately, according to Nichols, the answer is "Probably, yeah" (and I'm paraphrasing here).

"My concern is that this won't end until a populist fad like anti-vaccines cause a disaster. Diplomacy will come back as a skill when we face war -- or are in one," he said. "We might start consulting economists during the next depression. Populism always drives itself into the ditch, and experts always have to fix it. It's one of the reasons people resent experts;

we're the people who generally have to repair the damage on the morning after.' Note to self: Stock up on both canned goods and economists in the event of the apocalypse.

DISCIPLING TRUMP

Usually it takes a lot of boring three-yard runs and a thick cloud of dust to drive any important piece of legislation across the goal line in Washington.

But at this late stage of the game QB Donald Trump and his Republican teammates are going to need a Hail Mary During the seven months they've been in control of the political football in D.C. they've brought no significant legislation before Congress. Republicans in the Senate deserve most of the blame for the failure of health care reform. But the president -- the owner, head coach, chief publicist and star quarterback of

Team Trump -- remains the biggest problem. Like a reckless rookie unable to learn from his mistakes, QB Trump is repeatedly scrambling out of the pocket, throwing incompletions in every direction -- and then blaming his blockers, receivers and cheerleaders on Twitter for his team's negative

Meanwhile, for him and the GOP the 2017 congressional game clock is running down fast.

It's already August. Congress is going home for vacation. Then you get into September and before you know it, it's time for Congress to break for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Then comes 2018 and the mid-term elections. And then nothing important will happen in Congress, except that Republicans and Democrats will point fingers at each other and work hard overtime at getting reelected.

President Trump and the Republicans have to go into their hurry-up offense and pass something important on health care, tax reform or immigration and put their stamp on it, or they might be looking at a Democratic Senate in 2019. On healthcare, it's clear that we can't completely repeal Obamacare, but we can still completely fix it.

Trump and Republicans, and maybe even some Democrats, now have to find areas where they agree, move forward and get some legislation passed. Then repeat and repeat and repeat. It's frustrating to see how Trump keeps hurting his own cause and the future of the Republican Party. The stock market is soaring and the economy is showing signs of growth, but that good news is never heard in the media because it's drowned out by the coverage of the president's tweeting.

President Trump took a giant step in the right direction last week by making General John Kelly his chief of staff.

It was one of the best moves Trump has made and a sign of hope that he may finally be learning something on the job.

General Kelly will bring some long overdue order and discipline to the White House operations, as he quickly proved when he had the president fire Anthony Scaramucci as White House communications director.

We've written about how important it is for a president to have an adult like Kelly in the Oval Office, but the real issue is whether our president will listen to advice from the adult.

President Trump is never going to change his personality or stop thinking that he makes the Sun come up every morning.

But if he wants to fulfill any of his campaign promises, or even if he wants to push his poll numbers back into the low 40 percent range, he has to become disciplined. He has to learn that presidents never slam their generals in public or talk out loud about firing generals like John Nicholson in Afghanistan. He has to learn to pat his people on the back, to uplift them, not stab them in the back. He has to learn what my father knew – that when you have to attack your enemies your best weapons are a wink and a nod.

Most important, President Trump has to learn that he's now in the business of politics, not the business of business.

And in politics the bottom line is that in the end the blame – like the buck – stops at the president's desk.
