COMMUNITY DISCUSSES PROPOSED LIBRARY 'RE-PURPOSING'

Library - Sierra Madrean's LOVE their library. However, how to move forward in terms of the facility was the issue at hand. The meeting was held at the Hart Park House and attracted the entire spectrum of citizens, long time residents, new residents, civic leaders past and present, etc. Last month, the City Manager introduced the idea of moving the existing library to the Recreation Center, creating a new facility by selling the current library site. The discussion was passionate and yielded many new ideas. Former Mayor Mary Ann MacGillivray and well-known resident Bill Patzert both shared their concerns about the library's repurposing.

COUNCIL APPROVES REFINANCING OF CITY'S WATER BONDS

Refinancing to yield cost savings of approximately $1,097,000.

Tuesday, the Sierra Madre City Council/Board of the Public Financing Authority approved the refinancing of the Water Revenue Refunding Bonds Series 1998A and Water Revenue Parity Bonds, Series 2003. The staff report says that, "The bond refunding would result in interest savings of over a million dollars over the term of the loan. Debt service is paid from the water fund, not the general fund. The bond refunding will result in an annual savings of approximately $68,600".

The City's Water Operation has two bonds outstanding, the 1998A and 2003 Bonds, with an outstanding balance of $7,245,000. The current low interest rate environment provides the City with the opportunity to refund current bond debt at significant savings. The refinancing would not only result in interest savings but would also eliminate the need for making balloon payments toward the end of the 2003 bond term.

or more institutional investors. They are a good alternative for smaller loans, say under $10 or $12 million, because the fixed costs of issuing bonds (legal, accounting, underwriting, insuring, rating) make those kinds of debt instruments relatively more inefficient and therefore more costly to borrowers.

Former Sierra Madre Mayor Bart Doyle, after reviewing the terms and conditions of the loan said the decision to refinance the bonds is "an excellent decision, especially in light of the precarious condition of the City's Water Enterprise Fund. The 1998 and 2003 bonds, which were refinancings of preexisting debt, were issued to take advantage of the significant drop in interest rates that had occurred. This refinancing continues the process and further reduces the interest rate, the payment amount, and the total amount of interest owed. The 3.6 percent rate is attractive-current tax-exempt bonds in California are being issued with coupons in the 4 to 5 percent range for seven year maturities, and this loan goes out 16 years. The only negative

The fact that Sierra Madre was eligible for refinancing is noteworthy for as recently as 2013,the water company's credit rating according to Moody's Investor Service was "considered non-investment grade." (http://mtnviewsnews. com/old/?t=MVNews&v=7&n=50). The rating has since improved and allows the city to negotiate refinancing at lower interest rates.

The company that will be handling the refinancing is Holman Capital. According to sources familiar with municipal bonds. Holman Capital has been in business since 2009. It is one of many companies that have started up in recent years to provide new financial options for public agencies. These firms commonly place the loans with one

The refinancing of the bonds is one of many difficult situations undertaken by Sierra Madre's new City Manager Gabe Engeland, however he credits Assistant City Manager Marcie Medina for doing a fantastic job of putting this refinancing together.

The Sierra Madre Fire Department's future will be on the agenda at the September 26th City Council meeting. At the last meeting, City Manager Gabe Engeland made a brief presentation on the current status of the SMFD and his projections that it is time for the city to go to a fully paid Fire Department, with increases in the number of firefighters in the department and cross training in order to maximize the efficiency of the each member of the department. One of the suggestions made is to have all firefighters and paramedics cross-trained.

"The attacks of September 11th were intended to break our spirit. Instead we have emerged stronger and more unified. We feel renewed devotion to the principles of political, economic and religious freedom, the rule of law and respect for human life. We are more determined than ever to live our lives in freedom." --Rudolph W. Giuliani. December 31, 2001.

So we've been for our walk, delighting in all the little kids and their parents heading for St. Rita's to kick off the second week of school. It's cloudy and humid and my walking buddy isn't feeling quite like himself so we readjusted our plans for the day and I realized it was the perfect time to finish off the two batches of strawberry preserves I started on Friday. Easiest recipe in the world:

2 lbs. of strawberries, 2-1/2 cups sugar ¼ cup lemon juice

1 TB butter

Hull and wash the strawberries, put half of them along with half the sugar and the lemon juice in the big pot you intend to cook this in, crush them and add the rest of the strawberries and sugar. Mix well, bring to a rolling boil (one you can't stir down) and pour the mixture into a 9 x 13 dish. Let it sit overnight, uncovered, or, if you're busy, stick it in the refrigerator till you get around to it. When you're ready, pour it all back into that pot and boil it, stirring pretty constantly till it drips off the spoon in a sheet, rather than a drip. Add your butter here. This keeps that annoying foam you have to skim off from ever forming. Pour your preserves into your sterilized half-pint jars, seal and turn them upside down so they're sitting on their heads for a while. This is so all the strawberries are evenly distributed instead of crowding up at the top which does not make for a beautiful jar of preserves. You'll end up with 3 half-pints and a little left over you can put on your toast tomorrow, which will make you so proud of yourself.

Anyway, sat down to look at the newspaper and realized today is 9/11, the 16th anniversary of the September 11 attacks, a series of four coordinated terrorist attacks on the United States Tuesday morning, September 11, 2001. The attacks killed 2,996 people, injured over 6,000 others, and caused at least $10 billion in infrastructure and property damage. This day also showed acts of heroism and playwrightdd

"The number of casualties will be more than most of bravery that are beyond imagination. Our daughter, us can bear." - Then-New York City Mayor Rudolph Patti, posted a wonderful picture on her Facebook page which depicted the two towers as the American flag cascading down the side of these landmarks which live now only in our memories.

> NEVER FORGET. SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Is what it says under the picture and we just simply couldn't let this day go by without a shout-out to the families of all the Police and Fire people who sacrificed their lives to save others.

Our own Sierra Madre Police and Fire Departments observed this day of infamy at 6:45 this morning, specifically to honor the 343 firefighters and 60 police officers who perished that day. To end on a lighter note, the 6th Annual Scarecrow Festival is coming, sponsored by the Creative Arts Group here in town. There will be free shuttle tours of all the scarecrows on October 7th. This is one of my favorite times of year. Our house is already filled with Fall stuff and we keep checking out the Parker's giant pumpkins just down the street. These monsters are now covered with shade cloth so they don't burn and, quite frankly, I don't know how they re going to move them, they're so big! The picture is one of the window painting winners that I especially liked. The workshop

When he's not munching on timothy hay, you'll find him stretching his legs in our bunny enrichment area. Sadly, Lance was found running loose in a park. He's sure glad he made his way to the Pasadena Humane Society where he'll be neutered, microchipped and placed with a loving family.

The adoption fee for rabbits is $35. All rabbits are spayed or neutered and microchipped before going to their new home. Adopters can pick up rabbit supplies in the Pasadena Humane Shelter Shop before they take their new bunny home.

New adopters will receive a complimentary healthand-wellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information about how to care for your pet.

Call the Pasadena Humane Society & SPCA at (626) 792-7151 to ask about A442973, or visit at 361 S. Raymond Ave. in Pasadena. Adoption hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday; and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

CALIFORNIA STATE LEGISLATURE APPROVES SB 478 ENSURES STUDENTS RECEIVE TRANSFER DEGREES

Sacramento, Calif. - SB 478, authored by State Senator Anthony J. Portantino (D - La Cañada Flintridge), passed the California State Legislature with bipartisan support and is heading to the Governor's desk. The bill requires California Community Colleges to automatically award degrees to students who have completed their requirements for the Associate Degree for Transfer. It further improves the data collection system by also adding the students subcommittee. to an identification system that is electronically available to the California State University and the University of California. This measure helps students receive what they have earned and improves efficiency and data management.

When I learned that the community college system was not set up statewide to award degrees upon attainment, which resulted in many students transferring without their degrees in hand, it struck me. A bright student who earns a degree should get it, and the information that follows that student's journey should be up to date and accurate. It's good for the student and will save the state money," stated Portantino.

SB 478 is supported by the California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office, California State Student Association, The Campaign for College Opportunity, and The Institute for College Access & Success. Senator Portantino chairs the Senate Education Budget

Sen. Portantino represents nearly 930,000 people in the 25th Senate District, which includes Altadena, Atwater Village, Bradbury, Burbank, Claremont, Duarte, Glendale, Glendora, La Cañada Flintridge, La Crescenta, Lake View Terrace, La Verne, Los Feliz, Monrovia, Montrose, Pasadena, San

San Marino, Shadow Hills, Sierra Madre, South Pasadena, Sunland-Tujunga, and Upland.

GOLDEN WORDS: ADVICE FOR STUDENTS & PARENTS

THE SECOND PILLAR OF WELLNESS FOR TEENS AND COLLEGE STUDENTS: PRACTICING GOOD "SLEEP HYGIENE"

"9.25 hours of sleep. A night. That's what brain researchers tell us your teenager needs for regenerating cognitive and body functions." Dr. Gene Block, Chancellor at UCLA and noted sleep expert, offered this insight when he spoke at my high school to an audience of intrigued parents and drowsy students. "Yeah, right! Fat chance," a couple of parents shrugged, having endured daily battles with sons and daughters about when and how to get to bed, when to get up on school days and weekends, how to wrest iphones out of the hands of their children after dinner, and related struggles to achieve good sleep hygiene. High schoolers often stay up too late and have to arise too early.

Dan Golden, PhD

We know more today about the deleterious effects of early school start times on the health and academic performance of middle and high schoolers. Though barely 20% of America's schools have deliberately shifted start-times to 8:30 AM or later, there's a growing trend towards delaying school to better accommodate to the simple glandular reality of teen students, whose pineal gland doesn't time its release of their sleep-inducing Melatonin until quite late in the evening. So, if it takes longer to get to sleep and you're an active high schooler with a 7:30 AM team or club responsibility, the day has a pretty groggy start. If you self-medicate with a Venti double-shot or an energy drink, your cobwebs might lift, sure, but at an adrenalizing price.

Chronic sleep deprivation in teens is life-threatening for the student and many others. Road safety experts estimate close to 2000 teen drivers and/or passengers die every year because of drowsy driving. Stress of sleep deprivation erodes many body functions, and it's no accident that as more and more teens sleep less and less, they're vulnerable not only to more colds and flus, but more frequently can experience Mononucleosis, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and other immune challenges once primarily seen as illnesses of college-age students.

College-age? Yes, the national patterns of sleep deprivation continue with college students, notably those who live away in residence halls. Noise and light pollution, disruptive roommates, hallway toga parties, fire drills and other forces conspire to make it unlikely most residents can study, let alone sleep, until well after 11 PM. And there's another insidious force in our social media generation that works against developing good sleep rhythms--captured conveniently in the slang acronym "FOMO," or "fear of missing out." Many college students report not only pulling regular all-nighters to get their studies done, but also being hopelessly drawn to interrupting or delaying their sleep to hang out, party, make midnight pizza and beer runs (note: alcohol use has a soporific effect, but at the expense of undercutting the regular 90 minute cycle of sleep stages that recur during the night).

So, what to do? Naps? For teens, a nap of perhaps an hour at most can remediate some sleep deprivation. Sleeping in on weekends? The experts tell us that you can't really "catch up", and as Dr. Block told our audience, any extended sleep on weekends beyond two hours will wreak havoc on our circadian rhythms. At that point in his talk, a student sitting next to me bolted to attention and said, "hey, I must have a problem with my Cicada rhythm!" Hmm, more true than he knew, I guess!

DO UNTO ANIMALS

A Highly Recommended Read For Every Animal Lover

A dear friend recently gave me a book that I have found to be one of my favorites so far. Authored by Tracey Stewart and illustrated by Lisel Ashlock, DO UNTO ANIMALS - A Friendly Guide To How Animals Live and How We Can Make Their Lives Better takes the reader on an amazing journey of understanding and loving our fellow creatures with a fresh perspective on the reciprocal relationships we can and should Tracey Stewart is truly a woman after my own heart. She begins the book with a short bio about herself, telling how she came to be such an avid animal lover. Throughout her life she has had the privilege of getting to know animals in various scenarios, both domestic and wild. Drawing on her countless experiences with a wide variety of species, Stewart shares how getting to know the animals has taught her how to be a more giving, mindful individual in all aspects of her life.

Animals at Home, Backyard Wildlife and Falling in Love on the Farm. Each section is filled with sub-titled categories, each offering several chapters on interesting and informative subjects such as 'Giving back to My Furry Family Members' (I related so well to this part, I felt like I could have written it myself!), 'A Mindful Nature Walk' and 'My Superheroes'.

Within each categorized section, Stewart includes detailed chapters on important facts and concerns related to the specific animals that apply to their respective categories. For example, in the Animals at Home portion, she includes a full chapter not only on the dog itself, but also one specific to caring for a dog's skin, one on watching for communicative clues from a dog's body language, one on the significance of a dog's tail & ears, and so on.

Through her delightful use of the English language, and with the remarkably creative means by which she expresses her thoughts, Stewart draws the reader into the stories she tells, holding them in three-dimensional imaginary suspension throughout the book. It didn't take long for me to see that Tracey Stewart and I think a lot alike when it comes to animals and the importance of their humane treatment.

On one hand, cultural changes in civilized society have occurred over many millennium which have brought us to a higher standard of how we treat animals overall. However, with regard to domesticated animals, some folks have really missed the boat on moral progress. The human's relentless need to breed in an attempt to produce the "perfect pup", for example, has brought us to an unprecedented low.

Stewart's take on breeding is much like mine. Please, just stop! There are so many pets that have already been born and are not being loved and cared for. Until we can clean up the messes we have made, we don't deserve to procreate any additional pets that will inevitably be left by the wayside and ultimately euthanized. We humans have a lot to make up for, and today is a good time to get started.

In Do Unto Animals, Stewart offers a plethora of practical ways we can get back on track with loving and respecting the animals and she has an amazing way of saying how giving back will benefit not only the animals, but us humans as well. It is the balance of nature that our Earth is lacking and craving more than ever today, and we humans hold the key to re-achieving that balance.

It has been said that no man is an island unto The book is broken into three main sections; himself, therefore what happens in one area of life on earth affects every area of life on earth. With this in mind, we humans each need to do our part to start spreading some good to all of earth's life forms. And what better place to start than with our closest fellow beings - our pets, our local wildlife and our farmed animals?

Do Unto Animals is an amazing read that offers some very practical ways to do right by our fellow beings. I highly recommend it to all of my animalloving friends. Although it has been in print for a couple of years (Published 2015 by Artisan, New York) it's content is absolutely timeless. With beautiful illustrations of animals both inside and on the cover, it would make a great Christmas gift.

After reading the book, I felt like I had gone on an enchanting trip to a place where Stewart has been and kindly recounts. It is a place where the animals are understood, loved and respected. I learned some very interesting facts about dogs, cats and the other animals I see almost every day. I learned what I can do to make their lives better and I was inspired to adore even more, the wildlife I am blessed to cohabitate with here in Sierra Madre. Do unto the animals as you would have them do unto you...love and let live!

THE JOY OF YOGA TUCK THE CHIN, CALM THE MIND

you ever of heard tucking the chin is exercising your humility muscle? Accessing the power of the chin lock in yoga is available to practitioner. every

The chin lock, or Jalandhara Bandha, is one of the three energetic locks of the body. These locks (Bandhas) help to collect energy in the body and generally help build vitality.

The chin lock is the very first one to learn because the others build upon its foundation. Think of it as the wall or lid at the top of a container. In this case, the container is the body. To engage the chin lock, tuck the chin and slightly draw the head back, making the back of the neck long. Keep the breath steady, even and through the nose. There are several poses in which to practice this: a normal seated posture, warrior I pose, downward facing dog, seated forward fold, and many more. The chin lock is soothing and can often relieve strain and tension in the neck. Many practitioners have gotten into the habit of leading with the chin and overarching the neck. Doing this, they are missing some of the wonderful benefits that come with engaging the chin and exercising this humility muscle.

Every time I engage this chin lock, I know that I am containing energy-- precious energy that is built during practice. It makes sense to hang onto it! There is also an unmistakable effect of soothing lightness. The chin lock helps to calm the mind, create a state of introversion, and it cultivates one-pointed awareness. Add the benefit that it helps to lower blood pressure and decrease the heart rate which makes this pose a powerful place in the body.

There is a more mystical explanation of the benefits too. It is said that the throat holds the nectar of enlightenment and immortality flowing down from the heavens (or center of the head). Tucking the chin holds this rich nectar of enlightenment and prevents it from falling into the digestive fire. Ultimately, we hang onto more prana or energy.

Become aware of this powerful tool for deepening your voga practice and hanging onto the beautiful energy you dream; no one else can do it for vou. In the face of all difficulties and against all the odds, it is imperative that we stay tuned into our desires and allow them to direct our steps and our lives. There is a legend of a warrior that is recounted by Napolean Hill in his book, Think and Grow Rich:

"A long while ago, a great warrior faced a situation which made it necessary for him to make a decision which insured his success on the battlefield. He was about to send his armies against a powerful foe, whose men outnumbered his own. He loaded his soldiers into boats, sailed to the enemy's country, unloaded soldiers and equipment, then gave the order to burn the ships that had carried them. Addressing the men before the first battle, he said, "You see the boats going up in smoke. That means that we cannot leave these shores unless we win! We now have no choice—we win—or

Those soldiers won, as they had no choice and in doing so they came alive. What does it mean to burn the boat? Decades ago I wanted to be a lawyer more than anything. I was unwilling to wait until a time it was more convenient or when it might be easier. I had a burning desire. There was nothing to indicate that I would be successful. I had no plan to pay for my living expenses or school, but I would not be deterred. I gave up my apartment and moved to another city. I rented a room and shared a bathroom with a man I didn't know. I did not have a plan, but I did have a dream, and that dream fueled me more than anything. I was willing to go into uncertain terrain, even though my future seemed unclear. People told me to wait, to delay, to save my money and then return with a cushion. I said, no and pushed forward. There were times when I didn't know how I would eat or pay my rent, but I stuck with it. I am so glad that I did because I learned just how resilient I am and it created a firm foundation for the rest of my life. I learned how to take a step, even when I am afraid. I look back at that time in my life and see places where I could have pushed myself further, but I can only see that now. I couldn't have seen it then. I

You have got to stand up for your also know that I can recover from a mistake, but only if I am willing to try.

I allowed myself to be pulled into the feeling of the excitement of crossing into the bar of justice, addressing the court and speaking to juries. It is such a glorious feeling, and not everyone gets to do that. There are thousands of lawyers in California, but being a trial lawyer is a unique experience, and there was no way I was going to let fear stop me. I was more afraid not to try than I was of failing.

Guess what happened once I started, once I tried. Everything came together. The school created a financial aid package that I could handle, while friends and family pinched in too. None of that could have happened if I hadn't tried. I had to succeed because I didn't have a plan B.

Living from your Core Desired Feelings requires you to stand up for yourself in ways that you never have before. You're going to need to talk to yourself differently and to entertain possibility.

You will have to give some "ish" up too.

It will require you to ignore what others will think to stop you. You will have to tell your fear to shut the hell up and keep going. Sometimes you will have to keep going because you have burned the boat behind you.

We are always evolving. We are never going to stop wanting because we are alive. We want this breath and the next one and the one after that. We should never stop dreaming. To get to your best life, give up good enough, go ahead a try excellent. When the choices are good, better, best... Take the BEST, it's your birthright.

So now I do this coaching because I want more people to experience living wildly fulfilling lives, not sometime off in the future, right now.

It is so exciting to step into an active role in creating a life worth living. The joy is in taking a step, and then another

ROUNDS BURGER

Happy National Cheeseburger Day

I am asked frequently, as I am sure that all of us who are asked to pen our restaurant experiences are, "how did you find this restaurant?" In the case of Rounds Restaurant on North Lake, my friend Robin Salzer of his namesake restaurant turned me on to it, and Joe Caiello of Nikki C's seconded the motion that I needed to check out Rounds which features, of course, hamburgers. Sorry if you are getting burgered out, but this one here is something special. I spoke to owner, Charbel, who said "we are re-inventing ourselves so if you are a fan come on in and if you weren't give us another try!" He told me that they are indeed busy at lunch and that they are working hard to spruce up the place.

Upon entering the restaurant one late Tuesday night, I was a little nervous that there wasn't much going on. If this place is so hot where is everyone? I guess it's up to me to get the word out. The restaurant interior is simple (maybe they like it that way or are waiting for the chandeliers to arrive?) There is a large screen TV in the back room, a few signs on the wall, and the menu board, but that is it!! Fortunately, I don't write for Good Housekeeping; I am here for a cheeseburger. Self-service is fine by me, and the menu is right above the register. The choices have expanded from my last visit to include wings, hot dogs, a pulled pork sandwich and other items. The western Cheeseburger ($6.75) is spot on - lean beef medium rare, with cheddar cheese, onion strings, lettuce, and tomato. I asked if the fries were fresh cut, and the answer was "every day"!!! Now I am excited -- fresh cut fries and hand made patties, throw in a craft beer, and you are thinking this might fall into the $20 range? Nope, it was all under $16. I even had enough to throw my change in the bucket.

When my name was called, "Peter your order is ready!" I could tell just by looking at the fries that they were fresh cut, and I was ready to grind on my burger. The bread was not toasted, as I prefer, perfect!! The fries were hot so I munched on them first – they were as good as Islands or In and Out, this tough fry fan says!!! I didn't have the chili cheese fries, but my buddy Craig gives those a thumbs-up. All and all, it is still one of the best values for a burger and fries combination I have ever had. Check out Rounds Burger it's a winner!! Rounds Premium Burgers 46 Lake Ave. Pasadena (626) 304-9810

P.S. Joe Caiello's Sena in Monrovia makes a pretty darn good burger too. It's called "Burger by Nik"

HOW TO FIND A BETTER MEDICARE PRESCRIPTION DRUG PLAN

Dear Savvy Senior,

I think I'm paying too much for the medications I take. I have a Medicare Part D prescription drug plan and my out-of-pocket spending is over $4,000 thus far in 2017. When and how can I change my Medicare drug

Inquiring Carol

Dear Carol,

You can change your Part D prescription drug plan during Medicare's open enrollment period, which runs from October 15 through December 7. During this time, beneficiaries can switch drug plans or join a drug plan if you didn't have one before. They can also switch from Original Medicare to a Medicare Advantage plan, or vice versa if they wish. Any changes to coverage will take effect January 1, 2018.

In September, you should also keep your eyes peeled for your "annual notice of change" from your drug plan. It will outline any changes in coverage, costs or service that will take effect in January.

If you take no action during open enrollment, your current coverage will continue next year. Yet even those who are happy with their coverage should review their plan for any changes to come.

a computer, you can easily shop for and compare all Medicare drug plans in your area, and enroll in a new plan online.

Just go to Medicare's Plan Finder Tool at Medicare. gov/find-a-plan, and type in your ZIP code or your personal information, enter in how you currently receive your Medicare coverage, select the drugs you take and their dosages, and choose the pharmacies you use. You'll get a cost comparison breakdown for every plan available in your area so you can compare it to your current plan.

This tool also provides a five-star rating system that evaluates each plan based on past customer service records, and suggests generics or older brand name drugs that can reduce your costs.

When you're comparing drug plans, look at the "estimated annual drug costs" that shows how much you can expect to pay over a year in total out-ofpocket costs, including premiums, deductibles and

Also, be sure the plan you're considering covers all of the drugs you take with no restrictions. Most drug plans today place the drugs they cover into price tiers. A drug placed in a higher tier may require you to get prior authorization or try another medication first before you can use it.

If you need some help choosing a new plan, you can call 1-800-MEDICARE and they can help you out over the phone. Or, contact your State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP), which provides free one-on-one Medicare counseling. They also conduct seminars during the open enrollment period at various locations throughout each state. To find the contact information for your local SHIP visit Shiptacenter.org, or call the eldercare locator at 800-677-1116.

If you find yourself struggling to pay your If you have Internet access and are comfortable using medication costs, check out Medicare's "Extra Help" program. This is a federal low-income subsidy that helps pays Part D premiums, deductibles and copayments. To be eligible, your income must be under $18,090 or $24,360 for married couples living together, and your assets must be below $13,820 or $27,600 for married couples. It's important to stay clean, especially after a breakdown of municipal sanitation. Watch what you touch, and re-consider whether or not to shake people's hands. Be extra conscious about putting your finger in your mouth, or scratching your eye.

When people take hot water and soap for granted, they are less likely to immediately be extra cautious after some disaster, which might be accompanied by an outbreak of cholera or some other infectious disease.

"We drink and wash with this vinegar preparation every few hours," they answered. The judge made a shrewd bargain. The thieves would be given their freedom in exchange for their "anti-plague recipe."

This recipe is recorded in Dian Buchman's Herbal Medicine book. Buchman writes, "this recipe has been used for centuries, but legend has it that it was discovered during a devastating bubonic plague."

MY SNEEZE IS NO GENTLE BREEZE

It has been days (or has it been vears) since I have enjoyed a sneeze free day. The Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage told me it is simply that time of you possibly can. That'll take care of it for sure." the year and I should learn to deal with it. "After all," she opined, "you're not going to die."

That news was not quite encouraging, because it was time it has) I probably could remember when I felt worse. However, it does not matter how I have felt in the past it is knows when you drink as much OJ as I have been drinking how I'm feeling right now that really matters.

I have gone through a million boxes of tissues this past

I would not mind an occasional sneeze every now and then. For example I could live with a simple "aah-choo," and be done with it. But, oh no, my nose has different ideas about the whole thing.

It is what I call the unholy Trinity. It goes something like this.

Aaaaah Chooooooooooo. Aaaaaah Choooooooooooooo

Aaaaaaaah Choooooooooooooo.

Each sneeze tries to outdo the previous one. I can never sneeze one time, it always has to be in multiples of three.

Of course, sometimes my nose tries to outsmart me. For example, when a sneeze comes I gear up for three in a row. Then my nose will sneeze two times and I am ready for the third one and it does not come. It will do this several times in a row, then it will sneeze twice, there is a small pause, and I think it is over and the third thunders forth.

Notwithstanding, this has made certain inconveniences in the life I once enjoyed. For example, in the middle of the night when nature calls I try to be as careful in getting out of bed and going as I possibly can. I never open my eyes so as not to become fully awakened in the middle of the night. Once awake I find it difficult to go back to sleep.

Just the other night I was responding to nature's call as I normally do and was just about ready to get back into bed when my nose realized what was happening and called forth three mighty sneezes.

Not only did it bring me to full awake status, but also the lady sleeping in my bed was aroused to full alertness, and yelled, "What happened?"

I live by one basic rule. Never wake up grouchy.

I've learned one thing about what not to do when you have this condition. That is simply never brush your teeth during this condition. My mirror in my bathroom will be shiny bright and never have a cavity, guaranteed.

I have noticed when you are sick and people find out about it they feel obligated to share with you their medical expertise on the situation at hand.

One person said to me, "What you need is plenty of vitamin C. I recommend you drink as much orange juice as I don't know who is worse. The one giving advice or the

I had a ferocious attack of the sneezes. When the storm

Hurricane Charley. I tried explaining this to my wife but she only crossed her arms, looked at me and raised her eyebrows in a way I knew she did not buy what I was saying. While I was still in this sniffling-sneezy-stuffy condition,

I ran into a friend of mine. It is hard to hide your condition when all you are doing is sneezing and sniffling. He understood, of course, and then offered me his expert

"I have found the perfect cure for your condition." You would think by this time I would have learned my lesson, but I was feeling so down I was grasping at straws. "When I get what you have I always take a laxative

Had I been in my right mind and had my mind been clear I would have considered this as stupid advice. However, being in the condition I was in it somehow it sounded plausible.

"This laxative regimen," he explained, "flushes all the poison contributing to your condition out of your system." Either, my friend had never tried the remedy himself or, he had forgot to warn me about a very serious side effect. One sneeze can trigger a flush. Don't ask me how I know. In the midst of all of this nonsense, my bleary, teary eyes rested on an old familiar friend. It is found in Psalms 103:1 (KJV), "Bless the LORD, O my soul: and all that is within

CALIFORNIA SCHOOL OF THE ARTS COMES TO DUARTE

By Joan Schmidt

The California School of the Arts-San Gabriel Valley (CSARTS-SGV), a public charter school is now operating in conjunction with the Duarte Unified School District at the former Northview Intermediate campus at 1401 Highland Avenue. On September 1, I attended the official "Ribbon-Cutting Ceremony".

What makes California School of the Arts so special and desirable? The school teaches four broad groups of art: dance, music, theater and fine and media arts. In those categories, students can specialize in anything from creative writing to art design. If a student really is serious about a future in the arts, CSARTS-SGV is a perfect fit. It offers a path of study that enables them to become experts before they graduate. schools. After their academic studies, they participate in conservatory from 3 to 5:20 pm daily.

and academic instruction to more students. Abbe Levine, Something very wonderful has happened in Duarte. Dean of the Arts also had a key role bringing the CSARTS to Duarte. After several meetings and much planning, the school became a reality.

At a prior reception, Dr. Mucerino said, "On behalf of the Duarte Unified School District and our Board of Education, it is with great pride that we include the California School of the Arts among the DUSD family of schools."

Senator Anthony Protantino, Mayor Pro Tem John Fasana, and Field Rep Veronica Lopez for Congresswoman Blanca Rubio presented Certificates of Recognition to CSARTS-SGV for establishing a school with a unique culture where students from the San Gabriel Valley and beyond can develop as artists and scholars. In addition, attendees included the Duarte Unified School Board, For grades 9-12, the day is much longer than traditional Duarte City Council Members, Martin Howard of Howard CDM, CSARTS-SGV Board of Trustees and CSARTS-SGV founding administrative team.

In its first year in Duarte, the CSARTS-SGV has an enrollment of 700 students, Grades 7-11, from several school districts. Students must audition to be accepted into the school and all who applied were admitted.(Next year the school will have a 12th grade.)

How did CSARTS-SGV come to Duarte? A couple years ago, Duarte Superintendent Dr. Mucerino was in a Starbucks and met a former student, now connected to CSARTS. Dr. Mucerino thought the school outstanding and wondered if it could be brought to Duarte. At the same time, the Orange County School of the Arts Board of Directors, Board of Trustees, and Founder and Executive Director Ralph S. Changes included soundproofing music practice rooms and Opacic had a vision to provide the same award-winning arts

What powerful tension and depth this provides!"-Aimee BenderFourteen-year-old Linda lives with her parents in the beautiful, austere woods of northern Minnesota, where their nearly abandoned commune stands as a last vestige of a lost counter-culture world. Isolated at home and an outlander at school, Linda is drawn to the enigmatic, attractive Lily and new history teacher Mr. Grierson. When Mr. Grierson is charged with possessing child pornography, the implications of his arrest deeply affect Linda as she wrestles with her own fledgling desires and craving to belong. And then the young Gardner family moves in across the lake and Linda finds herself welcomed into their home as a babysitter for their little boy, Paul. It seems that her life finally has purpose but with this new sense of belonging she is also drawn into secrets she doesn't understand. Over the course of a few days, Linda makes a set of choices that reverberate throughout her life. MY BIG LESSON FROM 9/11

Like many of you, I watched the remembrances and commemorations covered on television Monday, September 11, this past week. I thought a lot about that fateful day 16 years ago, my memories of watching the towers come down still vivid in my mind. The horror, the sadness, still heavy on my heart. The heroic actions of so many brave men and women still giving hope to my soul.

And then on Tuesday, the very next day, I was listening to motivational speaker Winn Claybaugh, as he addressed the Sierra Madre Rotary Club about experiencing the very same feelings I myself had just the day before. We shared the knowledge that those thousands of people, trapped in airplanes or buildings, suddenly realized they were in the very last your wealth and securing your legacy, moments of their lives. And we both thought about how that must have felt - but of course we can't really know. The one thing we do know, however, beyond a shadow of a doubt, is that many of those people, comprehending they only had moments left to live, phone calls.

call their bosses, or their employees, to complain Sierra Madre, CA 91024. Schedule an appointment about stress in the workplace. We know they didn't call a neighbor or relative they were having a dispute and financial security for your family by calling with to take one final parting shot. most in the world. And we know the simple message they conveyed was a message of love. "I love you," they said. "No matter what happens, know that I love

Because in the end – the literal end – nothing else mattered. At all. To a person, they just wanted to hear their loved one's voice one last time. They wanted to send one final message: "I love you." That was their priority; the most important thing in the world. Nothing else mattered. Can there be any doubt love is stronger than hate? Can there be any mistake that what's most important, when everything is all said and done, is the love we have for our families?

How amazing is that?! What a tribute to us as human beings. And yes, pure evil does reside in some human beings. That's always been the case. But there is also such pure goodness and love in so many of us. And ultimately, this all speaks to why I love doing what I do. Because at the very end, nothing matters but the love we have for our families. Estate planning is the way - the only way, in fact - to guarantee that last message of love and hope comes through to our loved ones loud and clear.

And when it comes right down to it, that's the only thing that matters. So, my question is this: have you taken the necessary steps to ensure your final message will be clearly heard and unequivocally understood by the people you love most in the world? Estate planning can – and should be – about so much more than just legal documents. It is – and must be – about successfully communicating the most important message of your life to the most important people in your life. And in the end, that will be the most important thing in your life.

If you haven't gotten it done yet, stop procrastinating. Get your estate plan in place. Don't lose the most important opportunity of your life.

WELLES CROWTHER -24 YRS.OLD -HERO!

On September 11, 2001, minutes after United Airlines Flight 175 struck the South Tower between floors 78 and 85 Crowther called his mother from his office at 9:12 a.m., leaving the message, "Mom, this is Welles. I wanted you to know that I'm OK." Crowther made his way to the 78th floor sky lobby, where he encountered a group of survivors, including a badly burned Ling Young. Young had been one of approximately 200 people waiting at a bank of elevators to evacuate when the plane hit the tower, and one of the few survivors. Crowther, carrying a young woman on his back, directed them to the one working stairway. The survivors followed him 17 floors down, where he dropped off the woman he was carrying before heading back upstairs to assist others. By the time he returned to the 78th floor, he had a bandana around his nose and mouth to protect him from smoke. He found another group of survivors, which included Judy Wein, who was in pain from a broken arm, cracked ribs and a punctured lung. According to Wein, Crowther assisted in putting out fires and administering first aid. He then announced to that group, "Everyone who can stand, stand now. If you can help others, do so." He directed this group downstairs as well. As occupants of the Tower headed for the street, Crowther returned up the stairs to help others. He was last seen doing so with members of the FDNY before the twin Tower collapsed at 9:59 a.m. According to survivor accounts, Crowther saved as many as 18 people following the attacks.

NEW LAWS NEEDED IN FACE OF DISASTER

Millions of Texans and Floridians are facing the prospect or small business owners who must await the restoration of financial disaster in the aftermath of hurricanes Harvey and Irma. It is heartwarming to witness the humanity of fellow Americans extending every possible effort to help others in need. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for some landlords who have notified tenants that they are still expected to pay rent for homes that tenants were unable to occupy due to standing water. Such is the case in Pasadena, Texas where some tenants have been told that rent is still due and late fees will be applied.

Homeowners with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) fare a bit better. Traditionally, the FHA imposes a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures of federally-insured loans after the current president issues an official declaration. After the 90-days, those who have not been able to make the payments have to try and negotiate for additional relief.

In addition, mortgage lenders typically make accommodations for borrowers in response to proclamations by banking regulators and government mortgage agencies. This includes guidelines that align with regulators like HUD or foreclosure outlines from Fannie Mae and Freddie Mack and applicable state and local agencies. The relief is helpful, especially if the homeowner is able to resolve the past due amount with a lump sum payment or payment arrangement. Ultimately the lender has the cataclysymic disregard for the masses that keep them in discretion. For individuals who have no jobs to return to,

of electricity to resume business, 90 days is not sufficient. Even with the allocation of federal relief available through FEMA for some, millions are faced with the prospect of financial ruin.

It seems that a reasonable "bail out" for everyone impacted would be appropriate in this type of situation. Perhaps similar to what was granted to the financial sector in October 2008 in response to the disaster that was not by an act of nature, but instead by acts of greed. After being rescued by the $700 billion dollar taxpayer-funded bailout, many of these same institutions showed little to no regard in working with individuals to help them save their homes.

The recent wave of natural disasters can serve as a wake up call for citizens to advocate for and demand more compassionate laws in the wake of these situations. Laws to ensure some baseline of "bail out" assistance for everyone facing displacement, homelessness or loss of employment due to hurricanes, tornados, fires and similar events, would make a lot of sense.

We have been inspired by the scenes of strangers who have nothing except concern for other humans, going out of their way, assuming risks and sacrificing to extend a helping hand. In contrast, financial institutions that have amassed billions from the masses are demonstrating a

AN IGNORANT AMERICA ENDANGERS DEMOCRACY

Donald Trump famously declared, "I love the poorly educated!" and we know why. An electorate that's ignorant about the basics of democracy is ideal grist for an authoritarian.

I was reminded of that this week when I read the latest civics survey conducted by the Annenberg Public Policy Center. The stats speak for themselves. Only 26 percent of Americans can name all three branches of government (executive, legislative, judicial), and 33 percent can't name any branch of government. Only 14 percent know that freedom of the press is guaranteed by the First Amendment, while 37 percent can't name any of the rights guaranteed by the First

This lamentable obliviousness has been tracked for years. In a 2010 survey, roughly 33 percent couldn't even name the correct century of the American Revolution, and more people could identify Michael Jackson as the composer of "Billie Jean" than could identify the Bill of Rights as a list of constitutional amendments. In a 2015 survey, roughly half of college students at 55 top-ranked institutions didn't know how long a senator serves (six years) or a congressman (two).

There's no empirical proof that Trump's narrow path to victory was plowed by the poorly educated. After all, Barack Obama won twice with the same electorate. But someone with authoritarian instincts, once entrenched in power, is perfectly positioned to exploit civic ignorance. It's easy to trample on democratic norms when so few Americans recognize and value the democratic norms.

It's easy for Trump to attack the integrity of judges when millions can't even identify the judiciary as an independent branch of government. It's easy for Trump to attack journalists as "enemies of the people" when millions are clueless about First Amendment press freedom. It's easy for Trump to trample our history - he says that Andrew Jackson "was really angry that he saw what was happening with regard to the Civil War" (Jackson died 16 years before the Civil War) - when millions of Americans, according to the 2010 survey, couldn't even say whether Revolution preceded or followed the Civil War.

And it's easy for Trump to attack immigrants when, according to the Annenberg Survey, 53 percent of Americans don't know that even illegal immigrants have some constitutional rights. Due process, under the 14th Amendment's equal protection clause, has been guaranteed since the Supreme Court said so 131 years ago.

Where does this ignorance originate? Two prominent educators, Richard Kahlenberg and Clifford Janey, recently nailed the biggest reason: "Public schools are failing at what the nation's founders saw as education's most basic purpose - preparing young people to be reflective citizens who would value liberty and democracy and resist the appeals of demagogues."

Basically, the public schools don't teach civics anymore. Back in my day, at the risk of sounding ancient, we had "social studies," which compelled us to know the three government branches, the basics of voting, and the democratic values embedded in the Constitution (plus, the correct century of the Revolution). We were even tasked with learning and naming all nine members of the U.S. Supreme Court.

But as Kahlanberg and Janey point out: "The explicit civics curriculum has been downplayed in recent years. With the rise of economic globalization, educators have emphasized the importance of serving the needs of the private marketplace rather than of preparing citizens for American democracy. On one level, this approach made some sense. As the country celebrated two centuries of continuous democratic rule, the paramount threat seemed to be economic competition from abroad, not threats to democracy at home.

"So the bipartisan education manta has been that education should prepare students to be 'college-and-career ready,' with no mention of becoming thoughtful democratic citizens. In a telling sign, in 2013, the governing board of the National Assessment for Educational Progress dropped fourth- and 12th-grade civics and American history as a tested subject in

They argue that "rigorous courses in history, literature, and civics would cultivate knowledge of democratic practices and a belief in democratic values." True enough. But even if school curricula were miraculously overhauled, we're still left with the grim reality that several generations have already been lost. And we're left with an electorate (or a huge slice thereof) that's potential putty in the hands of a demagogue who knows as little as they do about constitutional norms.

As James Madison, the father of the Constitution, wrote in 1822, "A popular Government without popular information, or the means of acquiring it, is but a Prologue to a Farce or a Tragedy, or perhaps both." Both indeed.

WHERE WAS THIS HILLARY LAST YEAR?

There's a line in Hillary Clinton's new memoir of the 2016 campaign that may be among the most searingly honest utterances of her long career in public service:

"I have come to terms with the fact that a lot of people — millions and millions of people — decided they just didn't like me," Clinton writes in the unimaginatively titled -- if perfectly appropriate -- "What Happened."

"Imagine what that feels like," she concluded.

That is tough to imagine. It's a big enough hit to the ego if you've been left off the invite list for your office's outing to Panera.

Now imagine that not only does the entire country not want to go to lunch with you, they also prefer the loudmouthed boor who keeps inappropriately touching your leg under the table. That's bound to leave a mark.

Those bruised feelings are on display across the pages of Clinton's memoir, as she heaps blame on former FBI Director James Comey; "the Russian intelligence apparatus;" opponents Bernie Sanders and Jill Stein, and even, as MSNBC notes, the dark prince of Wikileaks, Julian Assange. Sanders, for instance, "didn't get into the race to make sure a Democrat won the White House, he got in to disrupt the Democratic Party," Clinton wrote, adding later, " ... I am proud to be a Democrat and I wish Bernie were, too." The Green Party's Stein, who played the same spoiler role as Ralph Nader did in President Bill Clinton's 1996 win over Bob Dole "wouldn't be worth mentioning," were it not for the fact that she prompted voter defections in such key states as Michigan, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Now-President Donald Trump narrowly won all three states - and with them -- the White House.

Clinton is withering in her criticism of Trump, calling him the "the perfect Trojan horse" for Russian strongman Vladimir Putin.

Her description of Trump's notorious looming in the background during the second presidential debate will surely resonate with any woman who's ever felt herself the object of unwanted male

"It was one of those moments where you wish you could hit pause and ask everyone watching, 'Well, what would you do?" she wrote. "Do you stay calm, keep smiling and carry on as if he weren't repeatedly invading your space? Or do you turn, look him in the eye and say loudly and clearly, 'Back up, you creep. Get away from me. I know you love to intimidate women, but you can't intimidate me, so back up."

As I've noted before, it takes Herculean self-confidence, rapacious ambition, bottomless vanity and not a little bit of self-delusion to convince yourself that you are equal to the task of governing the world's greatest democracy.

Clinton had all that during the perplexingly joyless trudge across the country that ended last November with her winning the battle (the popular vote), but not the war (the Electoral College). But the one thing she seemingly never had was a convincing narrative for why she, above all others, deserved the Oval Office.

That her campaign went through more resets than a failing iPhone was testimony to that fact. Elsewhere, Clinton muses on why she was so disliked by a certain portion of the electorate: What makes me such a lightning rod for fury? I'm really asking. I'm at a loss."

She correctly (and sadly) concludes, "I think it's partly because I'm a woman." In the end, many voters -- myself included -- channeled our instinct for self-preservation and went the "Not Trump" route, opting for Clinton's stolid predictability and marked professionalism to the darkly nationalist rage and narcissistic instability that fired the Republican nominee's

Unlike Trump, who seems to possess no capacity for introspection, Clinton at least has the presence of mind to recognize, ultimately, that her failure was her finally her own.

"I go back over my own shortcomings and the mistakes we made. I take responsibility for all of them," she wrote. "In my more introspective moments, I do recognize that my campaign in 2016 lacked the sense of urgency and passion that I remember from [Bill Clinton's first campaign in 1992]." She also writes:

"I go back over my own shortcomings and the mistakes we made. I take responsibility for all of them. You can blame the data, blame the message, blame anything you want—but I was the

It would have been nice to have seen more of this Hillary Clinton in 2016. With Donald Trump's Washington hamhandedly lurching from crisis to crisis, one wonders how things might have turned out differently.

MAKING SENSE by

WHY NFL GAMES ARE UNWATCHABLE

National Football League TV ratings down 13 percent in Week

"NFL ratings in free fall."

Those headlines don't surprise me one bit.

But the NFL's rapidly declining popularity has nothing to do with televising too many games a week, too many commercials, too much violence or too many mediocre teams.

It has everything to do with politics – liberal politics.

I'm a very political guy, in case you hadn't noticed. But like most normal sports fans, I watch football on TV to relax, to enjoy myself.

I love nothing better than to sit back on Saturday mornings and watch college teams Colleges still let you enjoy the game, but NFL games have become unwatchable.

On Sunday, Monday and Thursday the first thing you see when you tune in to a pro game are players taking a knee during the "National Anthem" because of some political

I don't give a damn what the quarterback, the head coach or the owner of the team thinks or tweets about politics, the president or the Steven King movie "It."

All I care is, "Are you going to win or lose? Can you pass, catch the ball or coach? Will the game be a good one?'

You wonder why so many people are so angry about politics these days?

It's because they can't get away from it – not even for three hours on a Sunday afternoon for a dumb football game. I watch sports to take a break and to get as far away as I can from the 24/7 political news cycle that dominates our daily lives.

But the NFL and ESPN - which is laying off people because its ratings also are plummeting -- have made it impossible to take a respite from politics. ESPN on-air staffers like Jemele Hill think it's OK to go on a rant accusing President Trump of being a white supremacist.

ESPN's liberal bosses should have canned her the way they canned conservative Curt Schilling a few years ago for saying politically incorrect things like Islamist extremists were like Nazis.

But they've accepted Hill's apology and, despite her previous political rantings, still employ her.

ESPN's owners are especially stupid to allow Hill to keep her job, since her attack on Trump offended millions of their viewers in Flyover Country who voted for him.

If it keeps practicing this kind of political bias, ESPN is liable to find itself being challenged by the FSN – the Fox Sports Network.

But I wouldn't like it any better if I turned on "Monday Night Football" and heard Al Michaels and his sidekick Steve Bannon railing about crybaby Hillary Clinton and how awful her new book of excuses is.

If I want politics, I can watch "Hannity," listen to Rush or tune in to one of the liberal Trump-bashing Sunday shows like "Meet the Press."

The NFL should keep political posturing or messaging of every kind out of its games. It's up to team owners to pull up their jock straps and put an end to pre-game kneeldowns and protests before it gets out of control.

The owners need to tell their protesting stars and scrubs that, yes, you have a First Amendment right to kneel or sit during the "Anthem" if you want. But they should add that if a player wants to make a political statement on game day, as owners they also have the right to make them sit out the rest of the season.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.
