COUNCIL APPROVES REORGANIZATION OF SIERRA MADRE FIRE DEPARTMENT

The Sierra Madre City Counstaff report is as follows: cil unanimously approved the reorganization of the city's fire department in an effort to correct the current deficiencies in staffing. City Manager Gabe Engeland brought the issue to the council's attention at a previous meeting in September noting that due to changes in among other things, personnel, Sierra Madre could no longer afford to have a fully or partially Volunteer Fire Department and provide the services the city needs.

Currently the department is woefully understaffed and is not capable of receiving Auto-matic Aid from neighboring departments.

Several former Firefighters including recent retiree's Bob Burnett and Christine Lowe and retired SMFD and LA City Firefighter Gary Hood were among those who spoke and stressed the importance of making the necessary changes to restore SMFD to Automatic Aid status.

The plan presented is Phase I of the department's overhaul said Engeland. The goal in Phase I is to bring the department to what is known as a 3/2 model. The second phase to be implemented in the future is known

The current staffing structure of the Fire Department consists of a Fire Chief, three (3) full-time Captains, along with one (1) part-time Captain, five (5) part-time Engineers, sixteen (16) part-time paramedics, and seven (5) auxiliary Firefighters.

After evaluating the operations and structure of the Fire Department and the realization that our current model is not adequate, staff is recommending implementing a 3/2 model consisting of a full-time Captain, Engineer, and a Firefighter/Paramedic to operate the fire engine and two single-function paramedics in the rescue ambulance (RA) for each of the three shifts. The term "3/2" indicates three paid personnel on the Fire Engine and two paid personnel staffing the ambulance.

In order to move forward with the transition, staff is recommending creating four new classifications of fulltime Engineer, full-time Firefighter/ Paramedic, full-time singlefunction firefighter, and full-time single-function paramedics. If adopted, the new staffing structure of the Fire Department will consist of a Fire Chief, three (3) full-time Captains, three (3) full-time Engineers, three (3) full-time Firefighter/Paramedics, fulltime single-function firefighters and paramedics, part-time paramedics, and auxiliary firefighters. (The new classification descriptions for the full-time Engineer and full-time Fireas the 4/2 Model. An analysis of fighter/paramedic classifications are the changes as presented in the attached to the Resolution 17-52) able on the city's website.

S. Henderson/MV

As part of the reorganization, the following positions will be eliminated: five (5) parttime Engineer positions, and one (1) part-time Captain position. The newly created positions will be posted as an internal promotional opportunity and any current employ-ee meeting the minimum criteria of the position will be eligible to apply.

Staff recommends the reorganization go into effect immediately upon approval and that staff be directed to begin implementing the new Fire Department staffing structure; by beginning the internal promotional recruitment as soon as possible. The City will implement its existing layoff procedures for any employee in an eliminated classification who does not promote into one of the newly created classifications.

The proposed changes to the Sierra Madre Fire Department will make the Sierra Madre Fire Department more like our peer agencies in the Verdugo system. This is important to maintain our mutual aid relationship with our peer agencies.

Engeland has identified the funds to support the changes in the city's existing budget without increasing taxes or cutting other city services. He will begin the process with a search for the Fire Chief who will in turn lead the selection and training of all personnel.

The complete report is avail-S. Henderson/MVNews

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

"I'll miss you most of all, Scarecrow!" L. Frank Baum The Wizard of Oz

Being a connoisseur of scarecrows, when I came across this lovely couple, I had to stop and take their picture for posterity. Now I ask you, are these guys not

It's officially Fall and persimmons are appearing here, there, and everywhere and I, being a persimmon lover, want to share my persimmon story with you, dear friends and neighbors..

Some years ago, my Dad lived on four acres of lime trees in Valley Center, a community up in the hills between Temecula and San Diego. As Valley Center is not far from the Mexican border, my Dad always had plenty of guys who were looking for work to help ½ tsp. cinnamon (I like cinnamon so my tsp. tends to him with the trees. He would practice his Spanish with be heaping) them, give them food, spend time talking to them about their lives in the country they had just left and what they hoped to find in America. My Dad loved to talk to people, any kind of people. Many of these guys who wandered into his vard were from Guatemala, which is a very long way from the border. They told tales of murder, desperate hunger, desperadoes waiting to rob these migrants and were beyond grateful for a few sandwiches and a bottle of water. But I digress...we were talking about persimmons.

While he still lived in Valley Center, before his wife passed away and he moved to Ajijic, Mexico himself, he had an extremely prolific Hachiya persimmon tree. I would go down for the day to visit them and he would give me a big bag of persimmons. I would send some to my cousin, Cindy, eat a lot of them and occasionally make persimmon cookies. I'm still mad that he sold that lovely home and moved to Mexico. He's been in heaven for a while now, but I treasure the memories of those days in Valley Center, Dad's persimmons, and the delicious champagne we occasionally sampled together.

At one time a persimmon tree grew down in the lower reaches of our yard. It sat down there doing its job for years and then one day, apparently tired of life, it broke in two. What a disappointment, as the fruit was delicious and I had finally learned how to do something with them, other than just wait greedily for them to ripen and devour them.

Fortunately, it was overlooked. No one was in a hurry to tear it away from the last shred of stump the tree was still clinging to. For a while, I forgot about it and then one morning walked down to look at it, and discovered there was more fruit than I could count! Hard and pale orange, but they would ripen beautifully by November. Persimmon cookies!

One windstorm too many separated the tenuous coupling between branch and root and that was that Some years later I planted a persimmon down there in the lower region, a Fuyu. I have never had even one persimmon from that tree. It's really in a bad spot, forced to fend for itself as far as water and sunlight are concerned. If it ever bears anything, the squirrels get to

Now that our persimmon tree is gone, Dad and his persimmon tree are no longer within my reach, I look longingly at the few persimmon trees in our area and consider introducing myself to their owners, somewhat like Oliver Twist, "Please sir, could I have some more?"

Persimmon Cookies Preheat oven to 350 degrees

1 tsp. baking soda

1 cup persimmon pulp (Hachiya persimmons, not Fuyu)

2 cups flour

 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. ground cloves

½ tsp. nutmeg ½ tsp. salt

½ cup butter (softened) 1 cup sugar

You can also add a cup of chopped nuts, raisins, chocolate chips or some of all three.

Puree persimmon pulp in blender. If you cut the top off the persimmon and squeeze the ripe fruit over the blender, it will spill right out. Then dissolve the soda into the pulp. It will become very thick, like pudding. Blend together flour, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and Stir in dry ingredients, persimmon-soda mixture and raisins/nuts/chocolate chips.

Drop by teaspoonfuls onto well-greased cookie

Bake at 350 10-12 minutes. Makes 5-6 dozen. These freeze well.

Drop a dozen in a Ziploc bag and give them to someone you love, or someone who needs to be loved. Or hide them in your freezer and eat them all yourself one rainy day (I use that term laughingly as Southern Californians get a spoonful of rain infrequently) in February.

Watch for scarecrows! They're popping up everywhere!

Director of Earthquake Center Jailed Over Scheme

A former director of South Korea's Earthquake Research Center at the Korea Institute of Geoscience and Mineral Resources (KIGAM) was sentenced to 14 months in federal prison for using a local bank account to launder bribes he received from two seismological companies, one based in Pasadena.

Heon-Cheol Chi, of South Korea, was sentenced last week by United States District Judge John Walter on one count of engaging in financial transactions with criminally derived property stating that this sentence "should send a clear message that this will not be tolerated by the law." Chi was convicted in July of the money laundering charge following a four-day jury trial in United States District Court.

According to trial testimony, from 2009 through 2015, Chi used his official position at KIGAM to demand and receive over $1 million in bribes from two seismological companies in exchange for unfair business advantages in the South Korean seismological market. Evidence showed that Chi advocated the purchase and use of equipment from these two companies by KIGAM and other South Korean customers. He also provided these companies with market intelligence and inside information, including confidential information about their competitors and the KIGAM bidding process.

Pasadena based Kinemetrics, a company that works closely with Caltech, JPL and the USGS to prototype and test seismological equipment, was named in the criminal case.

The case against Chi is part of FBI's International Corruption Squad in Los Angeles.

Arroyo Group Launches One Arroyo

SurveySurvey Results to be Part of the Arroyo Advisory Group's Report to City Council

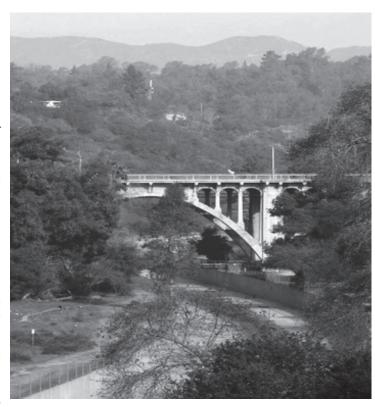

The Arroyo Advisory Group (AAG) announced last week that the survey for public input on Pasadena's One Arroyo, "great city park," has launched online at: onearroyo.org/survey. It will remain there until midnight, November 30.

"The One Arroyo survey is a vital component of our outreach effort and the data gathered will guide AAG in identifying opportunities consistent with public input", said AAG Co-Chairs Doug Kranwinkle and Bill Bogaard. "Moreover, it will help refine the One Arroyo vision and ultimately the AAG's recommendations to City Council."

According to the group, the One Arroyo concept was identified by the AAG after extended review and discussion as a way to unite the three areas of the Arroyo—Hahamongna, Central Arroyo and Lower Arroyo under a singular vision.

The survey will also be available at Mayor Terry Tornek's One Arroyo Walks with the Mayor. #### MARIJUANA ORDINANCE REVIEWED BY PLANNING COMMISSION, WHICH RECOMMENDS THAT OUTDOOR CULTIVATION BE ALLOWED regulating marijuana cultivation and commercial marijuana uses in Monrovia. Based on discussions with the City Council, the proposed measure was drafted to prohibit all commercial cannabis uses, such as retail sales or commercial cultivation. However, the manufacture and / or testing of cannabis would continue to be classified as a manufacturing use / research and development use, and would be regulated as such as long as there was no retail commercial activity occurring at the business location. The proposed regulatory framework is similar to how the City regulates alcoholic beverage production.

Additionally, the ordinance as it was drafted sought to allow personal cultivation on residential properties consistent with State regulations, with a maximum of six plants per dwelling. The initial ordinance also only allowed for marijuana plant cultivation in an enclosed structure (e.g. house, accessory structure or green house).

At the public hearing, there was only one speaker (Phil Cannon) who advocated allowing retail sales of marijuana in Monrovia. The Planning

At their most recent meeting, the Planning Commission had a spirited discussion, and after Commission reviewed a proposed ordinance considerable dialogue, voted to recommend that the City Council expand the allowance of residential cultivation to include outdoor cultivation with the following restrictions: Cultivation must be in a rear yard.

Cultivation must not be visible to the general public.

Cultivation must occur in a secured location, such as behind a locked gate.

During the discussion, staff shared that one of our primary concerns about outdoor cultivation is the odor associated with live cannabis plants. It was for that reason that the initial ordinance was drafted to require that the plants be grown in an enclosed structure. While the Planning Commission did discuss the possibility that the regulations make the property owner responsible for containing the smell, ultimately, the group left the ordinance silent on the matter and simply allowed for outdoor cultivation with the limited exceptions outlined above.

This overall matter will come before the City Council for formal consideration at our October 17, 2017, meeting.

JUDSON STUDENTS ENHANCE STEM LEARNING THROUGH FIELD TRIPS

Judson International Students at La Brea Tar Pits L to R: Marie Petrosyan, Taleesa Ofumbi, Jihoo Kim

One of Judson International School's core values is knowledge through investigative learning. This focus enhances Judson's STEM program, teaching children the value of research at an early age. Judson's International Christian Curriculum, developed uniquely for Judson International School, is an integrative curriculum that teaches children from the earliest age about understanding the world through research and investigation. Judson make a priority for students to get out exploring the world in order to learn by doing and seeing. Already this school year our Judson elementary teachers have learning.

been busy taking their students on field trips. The first and second graders went to the La Brea Tar Pits as part of their student of paleontology. To learn about astronomy, the third and fourth graders went to the Griffith Observatory. Fifth and sixth graders went to the California Science Center to learn more about anatomy and physiology. 8th graders went to the Los Angeles Arboretum to sketch nature. Such investigative learning opportunities complement our STEM curriculum and provide students with memorable experiences that enhance their classroom important subject for students to master, students are exploring ways to better understand the subject of math and improve their test scores.

Tips to Improve Your Child's Math Scores

To help students stand out from the pack and increase their math grades and scores, consider the following.

Don't Skip Ahead

One math skill builds on another. The same way that skipping an episode of a plot-driven show will make you feel lost when you return to the program, missing a math lesson can create confusion all semester long. To keep up, be sure to pay careful attention in class, taking copious notes, doing all your assigned homework, and being sure to talk to the teacher about what you missed on sick days. Don't move to the next chapter until you have full comprehension of the current chapter. If the class is moving at a pace that feels too fast, visit your teacher before or after the school day for some extra help, or consider working with a tutor.

Better Math Gear

Higher level math courses require the right tech tools and study habits.

At a time when math is becoming an increasingly tools. Since tests are most often timed, be sure to select a calculator with fast processing speeds, an easy interface that reduces the amount of time it takes to work out an equation, and is permitted on standardized tests.

> For example, the intuitive icon-based menu of the fx-CG50 PRIZM from Casio, has a natural textbook display that makes it easy to use. Supporting students from middle school to college, it also offers USB connectivity that helps students take their lessons from calculator to computer. More information can be found at CasioEducation.com.

Form a Study Group

The benefits of being in a study group are numerous, from accountability to expanded opportunities to explain the material to others. Different students will bring different skills to the table, helping everyone fill in knowledge gaps. Consider forming such a group with classmates, and setting regular meetings to go over the latest material together.

Math class doesn't need to seem so formidable. Improve your grades and test scores with the right to Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Math. And these subjects are growing in importance, as more industries require a strong mastery of the concepts and skills involved.

What are 'STEAM' Subjects and Why Do They Matter?

What's more, a growing body of research shows that exposure to the arts can have a positive impact on one's performance in science and math-oriented subjects. As your children prepares to succeed in all their classes, keep these things in mind:

The Right Classes

Talk to your children about ensuring they stack their class schedules with courses that challenge but don't overwhelm them. It's easy to overload a schedule with far too many advanced science courses in one semester that can make success unattainable. By the same token, it's important to ensure that your student is taking enough of the right classes to build a strong foundation for future endeavors. A guidance counselor can help your child strike the right balance.

The Right Tools

STEAM success is built on having the right tools, so today's students and offer expanded features that give subjects.

(StatePoint) If you've heard your child's educators students the ability to easily draw three dimensional talking about "STEAM" subjects, they are referring graphs and view them from various angles to better analyze their shapes. For example, the fx-CG50, the newest model in Casio's calculator portfolio, features a picture plot function and color LCD with a full textbook-style display.

> Likewise, students can build a strong arts foundation by learning to play an instrument. Modern music students may prefer using the most cutting-edge instruments, such as Casios Compact Grand Piano CGP-700, which features a touch display that gives them the option to choose tones, select rhythms and split and layer sounds, as well as the ability to record and playback music. This digital piano has been engineered to have an authentic piano feel and concert grand piano sound.

The Right Programming

After school programming can be an ideal opportunity to reinforce STEAM learning in a way that is fun, creative and social. From the robotics club to the orchestra, find out what your school and larger community offer, and encourage your child to get involved. This programming will likely improve grades and test scores, as well as help your child draw connections between disciplines.

While not all trends are worthy of your attention, the be sure students are well-equipped. New models of importance of STEAM learning can't be understated calculators are taking into account the demands on and, as a parent, you can help bolster success in these

"TWO FUR TWO"

A Second Dog in the Household

There are various reasons why people choose to find a mate carry it out. for their four-footed friend. Among the most common reasons are companionship for their canine and hopes that the new dog will act as a help-meet in buffering the blow of saying goodbye to the older dog, when his time comes.

These are reasons why people choose to have a second dog, but there are times when such a scenario can play out for reasons other than intention or choice. A few years ago, I suddenly had a second dog in my home due to the unexpected passing of a very dear friend, and I learned some valuable lessons through the experience.

When my next door neighbor called saying he felt sick and asked me to come over, I went immediately. At the time, I had no idea he would be rushed to the hospital, never to return home, leaving his 3-year-old dog "Molly" in my care. I never gave it a second thought as to whether I would take care of Molly, but I would be lying if I said I wasn't overwhelmed by the sudden loss of my friend and the addition of a second dog

You see, I already had a 10-year-old bloodhound named "Tatertotts". I had adopted Tater when she was 18 months old because she was aggressive in the show ring. Her unpredictable behavior may have been the result of inbreeding, at least that's what I believe caused her social shortcomings. For this reason, Tater was a challenge when it came to interaction with others. She was fine at home with me and my husband, but as soon another person - human or animal - was introduced, trouble ensued.

For the first two weeks, Tater and Molly got along fine and I was so relieved and happy that Tater would not have to live out the rest of her life lonely with no social interaction other than her human mom and dad. Unfortunately, the fun-loving ended about halfway through the third week of having Molly

I guess Tater got tired of sharing her space and decided it was time to put her foot down! (In case you never met Tater, I'll tell you, she had a big foot to put down!). That's when the "fun" started for me. I soon found myself rotating the 2 dogs one in the crate, the other out of the crate...one into the yard, the other back into the house. Our home had become a threering circus.

Finally, I called my vet and asked her what I should do to help facilitate the new relationship. Her first bit of advice was that I continue giving Tater lots of positive reinforcement. I was to allow Tater to be "top-dog" on her turf. She also gave me some very specific tips on how to deal with Tater and Molly to ensure the best outcome.

yell or get excited (easy for her to say), rather I should keep an an harmonious home with more than one pup on the even tone and talk to Tater calmly, saying such things as "It's ok girl, I know you're just protecting your territory, and "We know you're number one, now let Molly have a little space too, and "Just be yourself and Molly will know you're the boss".

The bottom line was I needed to confirm Tater's position over Molly, and not reprimand her for behaving according to her instincts. Well, I'll tell you that was a challenge when I found my 108-pound bloodhound holding Molly, who weighed about 40 pounds, down on the floor with her two enormous front paws. Still, I got the logic behind my vets advice and I trusted her opinion, so I did my best to

At first I kept Molly and Tater separate most of the time, but I worked toward allowing short, closely monitored visits together in the back yard. I took them on frequent walks around the block together because the leash seemed to act as a gentle equalizer and I continued to practice the tips my vet had given me. It took about a year, but eventually I was confident enough to let Tater and Molly to be alone together

My situation was one in which I did not choose to adopt a new dog, but I loved Molly and made a promise to Fred that I would always be there for her, so I was committed to making it work. Eventually, my two girls were able to cohabitate and tolerate one another and we were able to enjoy them both without the risk of blood shed.

Unlike my situation, most pet owners make the choice to adopt a second dog, and with so many in shelters  $\boldsymbol{I}$  think that is a wonderful idea! But it is important to find the best match for your existing pet. Although each dog is an individual, some handle change better than others.

There are some basic factors to be considered before adopting dog #2. Age, gender, size and energy level are among the most important to be considered. It is also important to recognize that, unless the existing dog allows otherwise, the new dog will most likely have to play 'second fiddle'. If your dog has lived in your home for a long time, unless he happens to be very passive and allows the new pup to dominate, he will likely assume the position of "top dog".

Another concern to be aware of is that the new dog should not be too energetic or hyper-active, compared to the energy level of the existing dog. For example, bringing a rambunctious puppy into the home of an elderly, perhaps even deaf or blind dog could create a disaster for all involved. If the purpose is to find a friend for an older dog, do your best to find a younger dog that will follow the lead of his elder rather than take over like a tornado.

Dogs are, by nature, territorial, so if a dog has lived in his home for a significant period of time, he will defend his territory against a potential predator, even another dog. Be aware of your dog's level of territorial tendencies, do not punish him for such behavior, and try to find another dog who will respect those boundaries.

There is much more to know before adopting a second dog, so take the time to research the issues and ask questions. Retain a good trainer who can guide you through the process. The more you know and understand about the nature of dogs First of all, she said that if a fight broke out, I should not and how they interact, the better your chances of maintaining rejuvenation are list when it comes to yoga. Yoga and the sister science to voga, Avurveda, promote healing and surrender to innate peace and joy. In midst of life, stress accumulates as we navigate our way through. This stress contributes to worry, fear, or anger, over circumstances or people which we cannot control! Left unchecked, this leads to disturbances in the mind and stagnant energy in the body. We know exercise and yoga work well for the body, but what about the mind? Worry and disturbance are draining. It's important to remember that bringing rejuvenation to the mind is just as important as rejuvenating the body.

Here are a few ways to conserve, rejuvenate, and reconnect with your inner spirit which gives the mind the rejuvenation it needs:

- 1. Silence. From the sacred scriptures, the Vedas, supports clearing accumulated waste in the mind. Additionally, many answers can be found in silence.
- 2. Connect with Sound. Calming mantras such as OM, So-Hum, and others are excellent sources of inspiration. Longer mantras such as the Gayatri come later. Remember OM is said to be the sound of Teacher Trainer Nourishment and creation itself. What could be more connected?

3. Give the senses a break and enjoy time in at the top of the nature! This changes perspective and helps to clear the mind, allowing us to soak in the beauty of our surroundings.

4. A pure diet of easily digestible foods is ideal for calming the mind. Avoid stimulants as much as possible and eat organic, freshly cooked meals.

5. Don't hesitate to add aromatherapy into your routine. Oils such as sandalwood, rose, rosemary, or lavender are excellent for the emotions.

6. Get still through meditation and monitor the physical level of exertion. You can conserve energy by not spending it and gather energy through devotion and openness to the divine.

These are just a few of the ways to deeply restore balance and equanimity. Pay attention to the body but give the mind what it needs too! When the mind is less disturbed, functionality in the world increases and we gravitate toward opportunity, gratitude, and positive experiences.

Two are better than one, because they have a good return for their labor: If either of them falls down, one can help the other up. But pity anyone who falls and has no one to help them up.

invite you to imagine the relationship of your dreams. What if having such a relationship could be fun? What if the love you seek is seeking you? As you design your very best life, do not neglect the area of relationship. It is tempting to believe that having a fulfilling relationship is impossible; it's not. When you feel the temptation to give up, ask yourself why? A fulfilling and connected relationship is not only possible it could be an essential component of you living your best life and sharing it. What will be required of you to have love? Who will you need to be?

We live in a connected universe. It is natural and healthy to seek, create and celebrate connection.

The process of building a committed romantic relationship can seem arduous and even impossible. I Authenticity and genuine sincerity are needed. You need to be fully you. I often speak of truth-telling. The first person to get honest with is yourself. The first step is to admit that you want a relationship. The next is to give real consideration to what such a relationship would look like for you. Do you long to share your life on a day to day basis? Do you want a lifelong partner? Would that include cohabitation? Do you want to get married?

Many women get into a relationship, and they won't want to reveal they're true desires from the beginning. That's a mistake because the best foundation of the relationship is one built on truth. As you start designing the love of your dreams, get clarity on what you're seeking. It will be easier to attract what you want and reject what you don't. Your potential mates will be most appreciative, and some will self-eliminate when they know their desires are not a match to yours.

FOOD AND DRINK & MORE

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

TO REVIEW OR NOT REVIEW?

This is the question: when is a restaurant fair game for a review? With the popularity of Yelp and message boards on the internet, it seems that the feeding frenzy of reviews begins as soon as a restaurant opens its doors. We can't blame social media, however. Even before everyone and their sister became a restaurant blogger, newspapers big and small wanted "their guy" to be the first to review the new kid in town. What is the difference between a movie review and restaurant review? In my mind, plenty. A movie will be edited to pieces and previewed a hundred times before it hits the screen - many times the ending will be changed or the musical score played with - you get the picture. I have been doing this long enough to know the opening day general manager and executive chef probably won't be around by the first anniversary anyway.

Merrill Shindler from KABC Radio feels that if a restaurant is charging full fare they are open to a full review. My dear departed dad, Elmer Dills, thought six months was sufficient time to iron out any kinks. He'd say, "the paint isn't dry yet!" and that's actually what led me to this article. I went to the new Nick's Restaurant on South Lake the other night, and I could smell the paint (I really could!). Pasadena "godfather" of restaurants, Gregg Smith, told me he felt six weeks was plenty of time to get the act together - if you can't succeed in six weeks, you are in trouble. The smart restaurants do what is called a soft opening - limited hours, limited menu, and discounted food. That gives the restaurant plenty of time to get to know their community and the guests can sample the menu. I tend to get pretty good vibes about a restaurant, maybe you do too? Will it make it, is there parking, is the bar area cool? Sure, during the first week the food may be slow to come out or your chosen drink isn't quite like the one by your favorite bartender, but the restaurant itself is fluid; it has life. My approach is simple: I'll write a "first impression" review, and then go back in six months for an update. I will usually find a totally different restaurant at that point. Or at least I hope I do.

GETTING A HANDLE ON PRESCRIPTION MEDICATIONS

Dear Savvy Senior,

I'm concerned that my 80-year-old mother is taking too many medications. She currently takes 10 different drugs prescribed by three different doctors, which I think is causing her some problems. She also struggles to keep up with all the drug costs. Any suggestions?

Concerned Daughter

Dear Concerned,

There's no doubt that older Americans are taking more prescription medications than ever before. According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, around 40 percent of seniors, age 65 and older, take five or more medications. And the more drugs a person takes, the higher their risk for medication problems, and the more likely they are to take something they don't need.

Brown Bag Review

To help you get a better handle on the medications your mom is taking, gather up all her pill bottles - include all prescription drugs, over-the-counter medications, vitamins, minerals and herbal supplements - and put them in a bag and take them to her primary doctor or pharmacist for a thorough drug checkup. This "brown-bag review" will give you a chance to check for duplicate meds, excessive doses, and dangerous interactions, and for you to ask questions.

Medicare Part B covers free yearly medication reviews with a doctor through their annual wellness visits, and many Medicare Part D plans cover medication reviews with a pharmacist too.

You should also note that October 21, is "National Check Your Meds Day." A number of pharmacies – Albertsons, Costco, CVS, Sam's Club, Target, Walmart and many independents - have agreed to support the effort. Some may even have extra staff on hand to help you review your meds. Ask your local pharmacy whether it is participating.

When you get your mom's review, go over the basics for each medication or supplement, such as what it's for, how long she should take it, what it costs, and any side effects and potential interactions. Also ask if there are any meds she can stop taking, and find out if there are any nondrug options that might be safer, and whether she can switch to a lower dose.

To help your mom avoid future medication problems, make sure her primary doctor is aware of all the medications, over-the-counter drugs and supplements she takes. You should also keep an updated list of everything she takes and share it with every doctor she sees. And, be sure that your mom fills all her prescriptions at the same pharmacy and informs her pharmacist of any over-the counter, herbal or mail order prescriptions she's taking so that there is complete oversight of her medications.

How To Save

To help cut your mom's medication costs, there are a number of cost savings tips you can try. For starters, find out if there are any generic alternatives to the drugs she currently takes. Switching to generics saves anywhere between 20 and 90 percent.

You should also ask your mom's prescribing doctors if any of the pills she takes could be cut in half. Pill splitting allows you to get two months worth of medicine for the price of one. And for the drugs she takes long-term, ask for a three-month prescription, which is usually cheaper than buying month-to-month.

Because drug prices can vary depending on where you buy them, another way to save is by shopping around (GoodRX.com will help you compare drug prices at U.S. pharmacies), and find out if your mom's drug insurance plan offers cheaper deals through preferred pharmacies or a mail-order service.

And finally, if your mom's income is limited, she can probably get help through drug assistance programs offered through pharmaceutical companies, government agencies and charitable organizations. To find these types of programs use BenefitsCheckUp.org.

CALTECH SCIENTISTS AWARDED 2017 NOBEL PRIZE IN PHYSICS FOR GRAVITATIONAL-WAVE DETECTION

The 2017 Nobel Prize in Physics has been awarded to three key players in the development and ultimate success of the Laser Interferometer Gravitationalwave Observatory (LIGO). One half of the prize was awarded jointly to Caltech's Barry C. Barish, the Ronald and Maxine Linde Professor of Physics, Emeritus and Kip S. Thorne (BS '62), the Richard P. Feynman Professor of Theoretical Physics, Emeritus; and the other half was awarded to MIT's Rainer Weiss, Professor of Physics, Emeritus.

On September 14, 2015, the National Science Foundation (NSF)-funded LIGO made the firstever direct observation of gravitational wavesripples in the fabric of space and time predicted by Albert Einstein 100 years earlier. The public announcement took place on February 11, 2016, in Washington, D.C. Each of the twin LIGO observatories—one in Hanford, Washington, and the other in Livingston, Louisiana—picked up the feeble signal of gravitational waves generated 1.3 billion years ago when two black holes spiraled together and collided. Two additional detections of gravitational waves, once again from merging blackhole pairs, were made on December 26, 2015, and January 4, 2017; and on August 14, 2017, a fourth event was detected by LIGO and the European Virgo gravitational-wave detector.

The detections ushered in a new era of gravitational-wave astronomy. LIGO and Virgo provided astronomers with an entirely new set of tools with which to probe the cosmos. Previously, all astronomy observations have relied on lightwhich includes X-rays, radio waves, and other types of electromagnetic radiation emanating from objects in space—or on very-high-energy particles called neutrinos and cosmic rays. Now, astronomers can learn about cosmic objects through the quivers in space and time caused by changes in gravitation.

The Nobel Prize recognizes Weiss, Barish, and Thorne for their "decisive contributions to the LIGO detector and the observation of gravitational waves."

"I am delighted and honored to congratulate Kip and Barry, as well as Rai Weiss of MIT, on the award this morning of the 2017 Nobel Prize in Physics," says Caltech president Thomas F. Rosenbaum, the Sonja and William Davidow Presidential Chair and professor of physics. "The first direct observation of gravitational waves by LIGO is an extraordinary demonstration of scientific vision and persistence. Through four decades of development of exquisitely sensitive instrumentation—pushing the capacity of our imaginations—we are now able to glimpse cosmic processes that were previously undetectable. It is truly the start of a new era in astrophysics."

'The prize rightfully belongs to the hundreds of LIGO scientists and engineers who built and perfected our complex gravitational-wave interferometers, and the hundreds of LIGO and Virgo scientists who found the gravitational-wave discovery. When the signal reached LIGO from a signals in LIGO's noisy data and extracted the collision of two stellar black holes that occurred 1.3 waves' information," Thorne says. "It is unfortunate billion years ago, the 1,000-scientist-strong LIGO that, due to the statutes of the Nobel Foundation, the prize has to go to no more than three people, when our marvelous discovery is the work of more than a thousand."

"I am humbled and honored to receive this award," says Barish. "The detection of gravitational waves is truly a triumph of modern large-scale experimental physics. Over several decades, our teams at Caltech and MIT developed LIGO into the incredibly sensitive device that made the Scientific Collaboration was able to both identify the candidate event within minutes and perform the detailed analysis that convincingly demonstrated that gravitational waves exist."

I ordered my lunch and settled at a corner table. About halfway through my lunch an older angry that I wasn't confident of my plan. But, I couple took the table next to me. Being a "people watcher," which is a fancy way of saying, "I'm nosy," I watched this couple out of the corner of

A friend phoned, asking me if I could help a friend of his who was moving from Florida to Virginia and had nobody to help him. meant I could not groan nor complain about the Immediately I agreed to help all I could. After hanging up my phone, I wondered what I had gotten myself into.

I told him to have this person call me. I figured if he doesn't call, I wouldn't have to help. No sooner had this thought rambled through the little gray cells, then the telephone rang. It was this person requesting my assistance.

I invited him to church on Sunday and we would see how we could help him. I hoped the "we" did not mean "me." After hanging up the telephone, I told my wife the incident and she reassuringly said, "He may not even come to church." I took comfort in her suggestion.

On Sunday morning, an hour before services, this person showed up at church. He introduced himself and we got acquainted.

"All I have," he assured me, "are 25 boxes of books that I need to take to the post office so I can mail them to where I am going."

Well, I mused, this may not be as bad as I thought. On awakening Monday morning, second thoughts about the whole project bombarded my empty head. I was trying to think of some way to graciously bow out of the whole mess. I have a problem pronouncing the word "no." You have no idea the trouble this has brought me. I'm thinking of consulting a speech therapist

It's been such a long time since I got mad or reasoned to myself, it's worth a try.

I found myself running about 45 minutes late. I was grinning to myself, thinking this would be enough to make him say something about my tardiness.

When I arrived, he was waiting for me with everything in readiness. He greeted me in a very cheery voice and made no mention whatsoever about my lateness.

This distressed me.

Surveying the work before us, I figured it would only a few hours to load the truck, drive to the post office, which was only a couple blocks

I had the auspicious job of lifting every box This incident reminded me of something that from the truck up on to the dolly on the dock, several feet over my head. Complicating things even more, the post office personnel supervising the unloading of these boxes was a woman. This strain of lifting boxes several feet over my head.

I guess it must be a man-thing. I was wondering while working, just why he asked for help. Really, this was not a two-man job. He could have done this quite nicely all by Then the real reason slipped out from under a nearby rock where it had been hiding.

"The school where I will be teaching," he began, "will reimburse me for all my expenses in moving. But ..." I was now ready for the rest of the story. "But, I am a little short on cash and was wondering if you could help me? I'll be glad to send the money back to you." Then I got mad.

I thought he wanted a hand up when in reality he wanted a hand out.

Driving home I was reminded of what the Bible said, "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." (Galatians 6:9-10).

Are you Prepared for an Emergency?

As of July 2017, there have been nine weather and climate disaster events this year with losses totaling more than $1 billion in the U.S. alone! More than 80% of Americans live in counties that have experienced a weather-related disaster! However, only 39% of Americans have created an emergency plan for their households. While it's almost impossible to predict when an emergency or natural disaster will occur, creating a plan may help keep your family safe in the event of one. The better prepared you are, the more comfortable you'll be if you have to put your plan into action.

Visit ready.gov/make-a-plan to download an emergency template you can tailor to your needs. MAKE A PLAN that outlines all the information you'll need to know in the event of an emergency. Not only will it help you get to a safe location, it'll also allow you to let your loved ones know you're safe.

STEP 1: PLAN A SAFE EVACUATION ROUTE If you're home when an emergency occurs, you may have to evacuate with little to no notice. Select several safe evacuation routes, and make sure everyone is familiar with them.

STEP 2: CREATE A LIST THAT INCLUDES:

- · Names & Numbers of each Family Member
- Phone Numbers
- Email Addresses
- Names of Doctors
- · Places of Work
- Schools

STEP 3: ASSIGN ROLES

Have someone turn off the utilities, while another person packs the important documents and another grabs pets. Giving everyone a responsibility will ensure nothing important is left behind.

Remember Your Pets!

Our pets are family members, too. Don't forget to include them in your emergency preparation and your evacuation plans. Visit ASPCA.org to get a free Pet Safety Pack, which includes a window sticker to let rescue workers know if your pet is inside or if it has been evacuated.

YOUR PET'S EMERGENCY KIT:

- · 3-7 days' worth of food & water.
- · Documents, includeing copies of medical records & current photos, just in case you are separated.
- · Sanitary items, such as garbage bags, litter and disposable trays for cats, and cage liners for dogs.
- · Miscellaneous pet items, such as extra harness, collars, leashes, a travel carrier and a blanket.

OPEN SUNDAY 1-4PM

From 1932 to 1943, this stunning early California Hacienda-style estate was owned by Herbert Hoover, Jr., son of the 31st president of the United States. President and Mrs. Hoover visited often and the home was known as "The Winter White House". It was originally built in 1928 by local businessman, Frank Picard, and the estate included almost 6 acres of land. In 1932, when the Hoovers moved in, they added a children's wing. Word has it that the playroom (accessed by a slide) was designed by family friend, A. A. Milne, the author of "Winnie the Pooh". This stately property and its colorful link with history reflects the graceful architecture of an earlier era.

CAN YOU RECOGNIZE THE SIGNS? By Jenee' Child

Does Your Home Have Damage? Mold and water damage are clear signs that vour home either has a plumbing problem or other water intrusion issue. The sooner these are identified and addressed, the better chance you have of minimizing repair costs. To avoid incurring unnecessary expenses, do a cursory walk through of the interior of your home.

Knowing what to look for is important in identifying problem areas. Main areas to inspect are the ceilings, walls, cabinets, flooring and baseboards:

- inside bathroom and kitchen sink cabinets - around the base of and behind toilets
- around showers and tubs
- above and beneath your water heater unit near dishwashers, refrigerators and washing
- directly below windows and around sliding glass doors
- near chimneys and fireplaces
- around air conditioning units

It is a good idea to also inspect other rooms in the surrounding areas mentioned above in case water seeps through walls. Look for damage in rooms located on the other side of shared walls where sinks, toilets, showers, tubs and appliances

For example, you may find wet flooring in your dining room on the other side of the wall directly behind refrigerator even though you don't see water in your kitchen. Clothing or shoes in your bedroom closet mav be moldy from a hot water pipe leaking inside the shared bathroom shower wall or from a plumbing line leak in the concrete slab. You could see a stain or bubbling paint on your ceiling directly below your upstairs bathtub or toilet. If your home is single story, a ceiling stain could either be plumbing related or you could have a leaky roof. If you are smelling a musty odor, this could also mean that you have a moisture problem or leak. First, conduct a visual check and then see if your home passes the touch test. The following signs could indicate that you have issues that need immediate attention:

dampness or wetness small puddles or standing water peeling or bubbling paint dark stains or discoloration black, green or white mold mushrooms mildew rust or corrosion of pipes moisture or water on or around pipes and plumbing fixtures

warping or buckling soft, mushy or brittle materials rot or deterioration

In next week's article, we'll review how to recognize a mold problem in your home, health symptoms to look for, who are most at risk if exposed to mold and the do's and don'ts of removing mold.

Sapiens: A Brief History of Humankind by Yuval Noah Harari

From a renowned historian comes a bestseller groundbreaking narrative of humanity's creation and evolution that explores the ways in which biology and history have defined us and enhanced our understanding of what it means to be "human."One hundred thousand years ago, at least six different species of humans inhabited Earth. Yet today there is only one-homo sapiens. What happened to the others? PLANNING FOR THE help them unplug from their devices, get bored, jump-start their creativity, and change their lives Part 1 P. W. CRYSTAL BALL)

Creating a will, trust, or any type of estate plan has always involved dealing with an uncertain future. Consider that just 20 years ago in 1997, the estate tax had an astonishing 55% rate with only a $600,000 exemption. Because of the low exemption and high rate back then, tax-driven estate planning was a mathematical necessity for a large segment

Fast forward to 2017. Not only do we now have a generous $5.49 million exemption and a lower 40% rate, we also have renewed emphasis and action from the President and Congress on repealing the estate tax, as evidenced by the September 27, 2017 Unified Framework for Fixing Our Broken Tax Code. So what does this mean for you, as you're planning for the future?

Estate Tax Repeal Means No Need to Plan...Right? Nothing could be further from the truth! Although there was a lot of tax-driven planning in the past, in recent years estate planning has largely focused on preserving family unity, protecting assets, ensuring privacy, and effectively passing along financial and emotional legacies.

mentioning that estate tax repeal isn't a foregone conclusion at this point either. The Unified Framework still must be crafted into legislation that and pass both houses of Congress before being signed by the President. Given the political division the country faces (and the likely stiff opposition to the President's tax proposal from Congressional Democrats), this will be no small feat.

Today, the focus of estate planning has shifted away from death taxes to other concerns that affect most families. Good estate planners now work with clients to protect their families against costly, public probate, guardianship, or conservatorship court proceedings and also further their legacy goals.

You might be worried about some of these things happening to your family:

A financially irresponsible child or grandchild wasting their inheritance simply because they lack the financial maturity to handle wealth.

A divorcing spouse of one of your heirs taking advantage of family wealth.

Family discord lurking under the surface that tears your family apart, especially after the death of the patriarch or

A lawsuit, judgment, or bankruptcy that causes your family to lose their inheritance.

Alzheimer's or another cognitive impairment affecting you or someone else in your family.

Luckily, we have well-developed, flexible legal strategies (such as lifetime asset protection trusts, standby special needs trusts, and robust incapacity planning, to name a few) for overcoming these issues. Although estate planning can't necessarily repair a damaged family relationship, proper planning can help make sure it does not get any worse. But these strategies only work when you implement or refresh your will, trust, and estate plan.

So, there's no crystal ball. Where should I go from here? According to WealthCounsel's 2016 Estate Planning Literacy Survey, about 74% of Americans find estate planning to be a confusing topic. So, you're not alone if you're unsure about your next steps.

If you don't yet have a will or trust, now is the time to explore getting one. If you have an "old" will or trust, now is the time to talk with us about whether you need an update. Modern families need modern estate planning solutions, and we are ready to help you create a flexible estate plan that works now, and will work in the future, even if the current tax laws change (even though no one has the proverbial crystal ball).

Dedicated to building your wealth, empowering your family and securing your legacy.

LESS WORK, MORE PLAY

I recall reading a passage in one of many books hours on a consistent basis, without little to no written by the late renowned best-selling author, regard for balancing work to allow for personal Steven Covey that went something like this, "I worked hard to climb up the career ladder, then when I got to the top I realized it was leaning against the wrong wall." This conveys the experience of people who are so focused on the next promotion and the next raise until they lose sight of the things in life that are most important. Created from a combination of the words "work" and "alcoholic," a workalcoholic is defined as a person who is obsessively addicted to work.

It is a general belief that the word workalcoholic was introduced into the American lexicon in the late 1960's, but it was not until the 1990's that the term began to be used widely. Initially, being a workalcoholic was viewed as a positive character trait but over the years it has come to be associated with high levels of stress, and in its most extreme form may be classified as a work-related obsessivecompulsive personality disorder.

time, has it's own set of consequences. It is understandable that an employee may put in extra hours from time to time. But when the extra hours become the rule, as opposed to the exception, it's time to take an inventory - especially when the extra hours begin to interfere with one's ability to be available for other important things in life, like family, friends and fun from time to time.

A parent has the best of intentions when they work hard to ensure that their children have everything that they need and much of what they may want. This often requires long hours at work, and when those hours are extended on a regular basis, it reduces the availability of what children want most from their parents – personal time.

In the end, making time for personal relationships and taking time to pursue life's simple pleasures are the types of time investments that add meaning to life. Though I've not been Working to provide for one's livelihood is a fact able to identify the source of this quote, I find it appropriate to provide context, "No man ever said on his deathbed, I wish I had spent more time at

ENOUGH!

ENOUGH: Exclamation: used to express an impatient desire for the cessation of undesirable behavior or speech:

This has been a very difficult week. It's been a very difficult month, in fact, it's been difficult for quite a while. When I awakened this morning, there was a newsflash that says Donald Trump had signed an Executive Order that allows employers and insurers to deny covering the cost of birth control pills for women. Really? We will now not cover pills that have many uses including helping a family decide when they want to bring a child into this world and a plethora of medicinal uses related to women's health issues? Now women will have to pay for these perscriptions? BUT, MEN DO NOT HAVE TO PAY FOR VIAGRA. SERIOUSLY? I don't believe I need to go into all of the reasons why this is a shameful set of circumstances. Women's Health and Family Planning are not a necessity but the ability to 'hang in there' for 4 hours is? (This is a family friendlu publication so I won't go into any more detail.) POLITICS HAVE GONE TOO FAR! ENOUGH OF PLAYING WITH PEOPLE'S LIVES AND USING THEM AS POLITICAL FOOTBALLS.

ENOUGH!

Last week I attended funeral services for a dear friend, Attorney Richard Leonard. Richard and I had many differences, politically mostly, but he was a good man, a good person. I wanted to pick up the telephone and call Richard the other day when I heard about the shooting in Las Vegas because, Richard was an avid believer in the 2nd Amendment. He was a hunter and in fact had recently returned from an annual hunting trip with his friends. And, like my father believed that every law abiding citizen had the right to own firearms. However, even Richard and my Dad if he were alive, would certainly agree that with the changes in our society, we can no longer afford to live with such a broad interpretation of our 'right to bear arms'. I have lost both my father (shot to death in a case of mistaken identity) and my adopted son, shot in a random drive by shooting by a person who did not know him but was just cruising looking for people to shoot. Those are just my personal losses, but I have seen and/or heard so many, many more. So when is our society going to have enough? We don't have to dismantle the constitution, but we do have to be realistic. Weapons of war do not belong in the hands of ordinary citizens. We need bans on the manufacture and distribution of all automatic weapons and accessories that convert them or conceal them (silencers), now! Our tragedies are not diminishing, they are increasing. Being in Nevada, an open carry state, did not save even one life on Sunday. We need to ban the ability to purchase massive amounts of ammunition and explosives. We need to allow the creation of a shared database so that perhaps our federal agencies will have a heads up on who is trying to amass stockpiles of guns, ammunition and explosives. We should have had enough of death and sorrow by now to demand that our Congress create legislation that will protect us. Remember, there were NO automatic or semi automatic weapons when the second amendment was created. (Yes, the first such weapons were gaitlin guns used in the civil war.) By the way, why are we all still wondering why the shooter killed and shot people for no reason? Simple answer, because he could. He could gain access to everything he needed, legally, to destroy so many lives. Get it? ENOUGH OF PLAYING WITH PEOPLE'S LIVES AND USING THEM AS POLITICAL FOOTBALLS.

ENOUGH! I grew up in the 50's when among other things, our country lived in fear of an attack from Russia. Many American's built bomb shelters; every school held regular Air Raid Drills to prepare students in the event of an attack. We lived everyday with the fear that America might be hit with a catastrophic bomb. Well, It's been 259 Days, 1 hour, 14 minutes and 25 seconds at the time of this writing that Donald Trump has been President and guess what?, we are now facing the reality that we may be faced with an attack from foreign enemies just like in the 1950's! Those of us who remember air raid drill days live in the same kind of fear today. Now in many ways, Russia, who has always sought to destroy all democracies in order to propagandize their form of government, is the least of our current problems. Yes, their cyber attacks have inflicted what may prove to be irrevocable damage but what they have done is nothing compared to the threat of an attack from North Korea. A potential attack that is being baited by the President. In addition to that, Trump is hell bent on dismantling the Iran Agreement and thus possibly creating another nuclear enemy of the United States. And yet, there appears to be nothing that we can do to stop this man (Trump). Also as of this writing, there is talk of him removing the only sane cabinet choice he has ever made, Rex Tillerson, a man who understands that bullying is not the answer. I don't know about you, but I am completely done with this President. Yes he was elected and we try to respect the process but leaving the never ending scandals aside, his behavior in and of itself puts our lives and the lives of posterity in danger. This isn't a partisan statement, I've lived through many Presidents from both sides of the fence but never have I ever lived with a man who does not care about what his job requires of him, that is, serving all the people of the United States. A man who puts his popularity before the needs of his people. I've had enough of him, but more importantly I've had enough of CONGRESS (both houses) who cannot or will not find a way to do their job and recognize that this President is not a dictator and is not omnipotent. Their choices aren't easy but the alternative leaves the public at risk. American citizens including those in Puerto Rico are not widgets in a board game. ENOUGH OF PLAYING WITH PEOPLE'S LIVES AND USING THEM AS POLITICAL FOOTBALLS.

To quote Lin-Manuel Miranda, ""You're going straight to hell, @realDonaldTrump," the Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright tweeted at the President. "No long lines for you. Someone will say, 'Right this way, sir.' They'll clear a path." Unfortunately, until we have had enough, he'll be taking all of us with him!

TURN/RIGHT TURN

DICK POLMAN

MEET THE NEW FACE OF REPUBLICAN EXTREMISM Thank you, Alabama Republicans! Thank you for choosing a Senate

candidate whose reactionary ravings and paranoid fictions make Donald Trump look semi-sane.

Seriously, could Democrats have ever imagined receiving a better gift than Roy Moore, the bat-crazy theocrat who has twice been dumped from his post on the Alabama Supreme Court? Democrats are always on the lookout for a right-wing poster child - and few Republicans fill the bill better than this loon from Toontown, who defies federal orders (refusing to recognize gay marriage), and who says (among other things) that lesbian mothers are "a crime against nature" and that 9/11 was God's punishment for sodomy.

Moore, who won Tuesday night's GOP primary (beating Trump's candidate, incumbent Sen. Luther Strange) will probably defeat Democratic nominee Doug Jones in December's special election, because we're talking here about Alabama, where a Democrat hasn't won a Senate race in the last quarter century. But so what. More importantly, he'll resonate nationally - as a lawmaker who believes that "God's laws are always superior to man's laws" - and for Republicans, that's bad

Karl Rove, the ex-Bush guru and party strategist, says it better than I can. Moore will be "the Todd Akin of 2017 and 2018 for every Republican on the ballot." Akin, lest we forget, was the nut who won the Missouri Senate GOP primary in 2012 and lost a winnable election after he insisted that women can't get pregnant from "legitimate rape," because "the female body has ways to shut

Akin, with gleeful Democratic assistance, epitomized Republican extremism and alienated women from the party nationwide. Moore is potentially the same kind of nightmare. As Rove and others point out, the GOP can't afford to get bogged down in God, gays, and rape. And Moore's win last night may well prompt similar reactionary populists to come out of the woodwork to challenge establishment Republican candidates in '18 House and Senate primaries. That too bodes ill for the party's battered image.

Katie Packer Beeson, a Republican strategist and deputy campaign manager for Romney-Ryan in 2012, laments that Moore "longs for the America we see on shows like 'Leave it to Beaver.' That show depicts a time when men were the heads of the house, women knew their place and children didn't question, they just obeyed. A time when homosexuality was whispered about but never displayed publicly. A time when women didn't pursue careers but stayed home, kept the house clean and had dinner on the table for their man."

Beeson acknowledges that Trump won in 2016 with largely-white supporters who yearned for a yesteryear. But women and minorities are still ascendant in the electorate - and she warns that Moore will send the wrong message: "(He) seems to embrace a 1950s Baptist Sunday School view of America and demands that everyone subscribe to that vision or keep quiet. But this vision of America doesn't make room for minorities, career minded independent women, gay people or others who were outside of the 1950 mainstream...A Republican party that is already carrying significant baggage brought on by the president cannot afford to reignite the culture wars with hateful, divisive rhetoric directed at those who disagree with them."

Ousted White House aides Steve Bannon (the white nationalist extremist) and Sebastian Gorka (the guy with Hungarian anti-Semitic links) campaigned heavily for Moore, because they firmly believe that the Trump regime and the Republican Congress are too moderate. That should tell you plenty about today's GOP. And it tells you plenty about Moore that not even Trump could stomach endorsing him.

The irony is that Moore shares Trump's talent for concocting paranoid lies. Just to give you a flavor, here's a recent exchange with a reporter:

Moore said, "There are communities under Sharia law right now in our country. Up in Illinois. Christian communities."

The reporter naturally asked, "Which American communities are under Sharia law? When did they fall under Sharia law?" Moore replied, "Well, there's Sharia law, as I understand it, in Illinois, Indiana - up there. I don't

The reporter said, "That seems like an amazing claim for a Senate candidate to make."

Moore replied, "Well, let me just put it this way - if they are, they are, if they're not, they're not." The reporter said, "I'd like to learn more about the communities in America you think are

Moore replied, "I was informed that there were. But if they're not, it doesn't matter... I don't know if there are. I understand that there are some."

Um, whacko? There are none.

So welcome to the latest devolution of the Republican party, where the Trumpkins unleashed by Trump are in the hunt for candidates who can out-Trump Trump. They actually think they're doing Trump a favor, saving him from the Washington "swamp."

Or perhaps, by saddling him with people like Roy Moore, they'll all sink together.

from the left and the liberal media. Early calls for silencers to be outlawed were replaced by calls to outlaw "bump stocks," which the killer used so he could shoot his arsenal of semi-automatic weapons at a faster

This week's knee-jerk calls for more laws to be passed as a way to prevent future mass murders reminded me again of what I was told right after my father was shot on March 30,

I remember asking the agent in charge of my Secret Service detail, "How can this happen with all the security around my father and family? How do you let this happen?"

The agent said, "Michael, as you know, we train 24/7 to protect you and your family. But one thing we can't train for is the crazies."

That's apparently what we're looking at in Las Vegas – a lone deprayed killer intent on doing as much harm to innocent people as he could.

All the new gun-control laws liberals can dream up will not stop future crazies intent on attacking concerts, ball parks or suburban malls.

The truth is, in the aftermath of the Vegas tragedy we should not look to the government
