SIERRA MADRE COMMUNITY EMERGENCY RESPONSE TEAM ADDS 30 NEW MEMBERS

The Sierra Madre Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) graduated 30 new members this week from their CERT Basic Training class. The training, which took place over two Saturdays and three nights, is a 25 hour FEMA certified course. The class is designed to ensure citizens have the basic skills to act safely while assisting themselves, their families, and neighbors during a major disaster. CERT members may also volunteer to assist the city when resources are stretched to the limits.

In addition to the 30 graduates there were another 15 trainees who completed at least a portion of their CERT training or completed training for other local CERT programs. The participants were mainly from Sierra Madre but also included residents from Arcadia, Claremont, Monrovia, Montclair, Pasadena, and South Pasadena.

A total of 86 people were involved in the final day's exercise included half a dozen firefighters from the Sierra Madre Fire Department. CERT President Dennis Burton oversaw the training which involved more than 15 members of Sierra Madre CERT who ran the Incident Command Post. Sierra Madre Middle School's Service Club provided 16 "victims" who suffered from an array of cuts and bruises, severe burns, arterial bleeds, broken bones, and severe head wounds. Special thanks goes to Sierra Madre resident Nichole Rinker of www.fancyfacez.com for providing the moulage (makeup) services. Photographic and video documentation of the event was provided by Gary Hood and Steve Wylie, including the use of a drone to get a birds-eye view of the disaster exercise.

CERT particularly expresses gratitude to Sierra Madre City Manager Gabriel Engeland for fully supporting CERT and allowing the use of the Sierra Madre Emergency Operations Center for the training. Administrative Assistant Laura Aguilar helped coordinate the week's activities, including the use of the City Council Chambers for the search and rescue operations. Captain Goth helped coordinate the fire department's training in fire suppression and cribbing which was supervised by Captain Christmas on Saturday.

After the training there was a written test and evaluation, and then the graduates were awarded FEMA certificates by Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department volunteer CERT Instructor Dudley Rainey. As part of the training, graduates receive a CERT backpack Angeles County Office of Disaster Management Area D Coordinator, fundraiser each year selling glow sticks on Halloween. For information Diana Manzano-Garcia.

The Sierra Madre CERT program, which has over 170 members, an email to info@sierramadrecert.org. got its start in Sierra Madre in 2009 under the guidance of Caroline Brown, Gary Hood, and Mike Kinney. CERT's purpose is to educate citizens for emergency preparedness and to assist the City of Sierra Madre when called out by the Fire Department. As part of educating the citizens of Sierra Madre in disaster preparedness, CERT distributes informative material at numerous city events.

Funding for Sierra Madre CERT is made possible through grants from the Los Angeles County Office of Disaster Management, Sierra Madre Civic Club, Sierra Madre Woman's Club, and Wayne Williams with their personal protection equipment provided by the Los of Professional Advisory Services in Arcadia. CERT also holds a about CERT, our monthly meetings, or the next Sierra Madre CERT training, check our website www.sierramadreemergency.org or send

by Deanne Davis

This guy has obviously been waiting 29 years to see These creatures rule the darkness, the Dodgers in the World Series! The last time they As long as Mom and Dad are handy. won was in 1988 when Orel Hershiser led the team to victory. Ticket prices are through the roof, but this guy is ready to pay, no matter what it costs!

All Hallows Eve...Be Afraid...Be Very Afraid!

All Hallows Eve.... is coming, A deadly.... dreadly night..... When ghouls and ghosts and creepies, And other awful blights, Are free to roam and wander, Anywhere they might.

Creating scary terror everywhere they can, And scream inducing, faint-producing, hair-raising, bone-melting, What's that right there behind me... Quivery, shivery...Fright!!

They creep out of their crypts and graves, These creatures of the night. They haunt the roads and byways, Run rampant through the park. They hide between the bushes, And everywhere it's dark.

All Hallows Eve.... is coming, A deadly.... dreadly night..... When ghouls and ghosts and creepies, And other awful blights, Are free to roam and wander, Anywhere they might.

Up and down the streets of town, They race in search of plunder, These ghouls and ghosts and monsters, About three feet tall or under! They shriek for treats and threaten tricks, But are satisfied with candy.

All Hallows Eve.... is coming, A deadly....dreadly night.... With ghouls and ghosts and monsters, And other awful sights, Dancing through the shadows, Into circles of street lights.

Beware...take care,

Who knows what's waiting, Just around the bend. Could be Jack the Ripper, come to call again, Or Dracula or Frankenstein, the undead walk tonight.

Maybe just stay safe inside...and turn off that porch light.

Suspect Arrested for Attempted Kidnap, Attempted Murder

Police arrested a 73 yearold Pasadena man Monday after witnesses said he tried to kidnap a woman and her dog near the Sierra Madre Gold Line station and later cutting the neck of a second woman 600 block of South Arroyo Parkway. Police believe both attacks were without provocation.

'The quick actions of witnesses to aid victims and call 9-1-1, and the alert observations of the police helicopter unit and patrol officers in locating and apprehending the suspect, likely prevented further violence by the suspect," stated Police Chief Phillip L. Sanchez.

Lance A. Semkus, 73 year old, Pasadena resident, was arrested for attempt kidnap and attempt murder. He was held with no bail.

According to police, on Monday, at approximately 4:04 p.m., police responded to the 3300 block of Sierra Madre Villa regarding an attempt kidnap.

Semkus allegedly attempted to drag the first victim and her dog toward a black SUV. A witness came to the victim's aid, causing the suspect to release her and her dog. He Approximately an hour and a half later, an adult female victim was sitting against a retaining wall when Semkus approached her from behind and allegedly attacked the victim with a knife cutting the area of her neck. The victim screamed causing the suspect to stop the assault.

The second victim was hospitalized in stable

Council to Hear Strategies for SR 710 Stub

The Pasadena city council is set Monday night to hear strategies for repurposing the SR 710 stub that occupies 50 acres south of Old Pasadena. At issue is what to do with the freeway extension now that the Metro board and Caltrans have dropped support of the embattled 710 freeway tunnel project.

Pasadena Councilmember Steve Madison has said that the mile long ditch, now being used as a concrete batch plant, would become "surplus property" by Caltrans and required to be given back to the city. Madison said the city and council could take legal action to assure that

Last year a group of local transportation, economic and land use experts formed the Connecting Pasadena Project. The group's mission states, "To reconnect Pasadena by restoring the pattern of city streets and buildings, homes, businesses, parks, gardens." Connecting Pasadena Project, led by architect and urbanist the group envisioned zoning Stefanos Polyzoides, included two concepts.

Alternative 1 —leaves the office space at the north end ditch of the 710 freeway in place extending Old Pasadena. and works around the existing topographic conditions. A center and at the bottom of the existing 710 right-of way. All thoroughfares are reconnected and turned into two-way circulation. The volume and manner of access to the 134 and Pasadena 210 Freeways is maintained and neighborhood traffic is slowed for more information, down and dispersed. There are development blocks located on either side of the parkway.

Alternative 2 —fills the entire ditch and reestablishes the topographic level of the site as it existed before the construction of the freeway. A major boulevard replaces Pasadena Avenue and serves to both direct traffic going into and out of the freeway, and disperse replacing the stub highway with traffic to the neighborhoods to the south, east and west through reestablished two-way streets.

Along with new park space

Doo Dah Judges Select Parade Queen and King

For the first time in many years, judges and officials chose a parade King Sunday night along with a Doo Dah Queen to reign over the 40th Doo Dah East Pasadena.

Over twenty-five judges gathered at the American Legion Bar to decide who would become this year's Queen of the Pasadena Doo Dah Parade. In an unexpected move, the mysterious Pied Piper of Pasadena was chosen King after being a contestant for Queen. He wowed the judges after explaining his long affiliation with old town Pasadena and the early days of Doo Dah.

"If you get this guy, you get it," said Tom Coston president of Light Bringer Project the nonprofit organization behind

As for the Queen, among a boisterous crowd of onlookers and typically atypical cast of royal hopefuls, Imani Phoenix wowed everyone over with her inspirational story and vivacious Aretha Frankli impersonation.

MONROVIA - DUARTE

SENATE BILL 415 REQUIRES THAT THE CITY CHANGE ITS REGULAR MUNICIPAL ELECTION DATE, COMPLIANCE WITH THAT STATE MANDATE MEANS MONROVIA MUST MOVE OUR ELECTIONS TO EITHER NOVEMBER OR MARCH OF EVEN NUMBERED YEARS MOVING FORWARD to be a stand-alone election. Recently, the State of California approved Senate Bill (SB) 415, and given the provisions of that measure, the City will have to transition our stand-alone election to one that is consolidated with a statewide election. Under the provisions of SB 415, all municipalities who have "a significant decrease in voter turnout" for municipal elections must consolidate their municipal elections with a statewide election (which is defined as "an election held throughout the

The provisions of SB 415 articulate that Monrovia falls into the category of having "a significant decrease in voter turnout" for our municipal elections. Based on the definition provided in SB 415, Monrovia must have a turnout rate of at least 46.62% (defined as the average rate of voter turnout during the past 4 statewide elections, less 25%) in order avoid consolidating our elections with a statewide election.

Monrovia's voter turnout for our most recent April 2017 election was 13.4%, and additionally, our voter turnout for the April 2015 election was 23.15%. Both of those turnout rates are below the minimum 46.62% turnout rate required to maintain a non-consolidated, stand-alone municipal

Of particular note, it must also be pointed out that nearly every jurisdiction in California that currently holds a standalone election will be required to consolidate elections with the State schedule, given the provisions of SB 415.

Given these factors, Monrovia will have to consolidate its municipal election with an election held throughout the State in order to comply with SB 415. Given the vagaries of State law as it relates to terms of office (per the State Elections Code, no term of office may be increased or decreased by more than 12 months as a result of an ordinance consolidating November 7, 2017, meeting!

Currently, the City holds its municipal elections in April of elections), there are two options that the City can consider, every odd numbered year, which is considered by the State including consolidating our elections in November, or consolidating our elections in March. An overview of each option is outlined below. November Consolidation

If the City opts for a November election plan, it could reschedule elections from March of odd numbered years to November of even numbered years.

Under this option, the next City elections could be rescheduled to occur in November 2018, and then again in November 2020.

March Consolidation

The City could alternatively choose to consolidate municipal elections with statewide primaries held in March of ven-numbered years.

Under this option, the next City elections could be rescheduled to occur in March of 2020, and then March 2022. At our most recent City Council Study Session on Tuesday, October 17, 2017, the options available to the City were reviewed, and the City Council identified their preference for staff's recommendation that Monrovia consolidate our municipal elections in March of even numbered years. There are multiple reasons that staff made this particular recommendation, and chief among them is a desire to try and keep local municipal elections as non-partisan as possible. Many local government jurisdictions have aligned their municipal elections as stand-alone elections to avoid partisan conflict in community-based issues, and when looking at the options available to the City, a March election would certainly be less partisan than a November election. Moving forward, we plan on discussing this issue in greater detail at the

WATER RATE INCREASE SCHEDULED FOR INITIAL CITY COUNCIL REVIEW ON NOVEMBER 7, 2017 - RESIDENTIAL CUSTOMER COSTS EXPECTED TO INCREASE INITIALLY BY AROUND $17 / MONTH IN 2018

our regional water supply over the past several months, along with the anticipated associated costs that will be impacting Monrovians in the coming months and years. As a result, staff will be seeking the City Council's authorization to begin the Proposition 218 Protest Hearing process on November 7, 2017, to adjust our current water rate to absorb the enormous added costs being passed down to water agencies in our

Please note that we are still working to finalize the levels of adjustment needed for the different types of water customers and various meter sizes. However, the majority of customers in Monrovia are single family residences with a 1-inch water meter or smaller. Based on our preliminary rate modeling, our updated rates will likely recommend a water cost structure where residential customers see an increase of between $17 / month on their monthly bill beginning in 2018. In addition, at build out in FY 2021/22, the new cost for water is expected to increase by around $37 / month more than what the typical residential customer pays today. Also, it is important to emphasize that all of these new costs are pass-through costs which will be paid to the San Gabriel Basin Watermaster and the Upper San Gabriel Valley Municipal Water District for the purpose of importing water into our region.

Ultimately, the proposed water rate adjustment is being coordinated because of new water supply costs that the Main San Gabriel Basin Watermaster (Watermaster) and the City staff has continued to assess the issues surrounding Upper San Gabriel Valley Municipal Water District (Upper District) are levying to address the water supply shortage in the Main San Gabriel Basin. As you may know, the decadelong drought that we have experienced in our region has had a devastating impact on the groundwater levels in Main San Gabriel Basin aquifer, where Monrovia and many other water agencies draw their groundwater from.

Last May, the Watermaster (which is the agency that regulates who gets to draw water from the Main San Gabriel Basin aquifer and how much they can pump) instituted a new fee on all water producers in the San Gabriel Valley, including the City of Monrovia. This new fee was implemented so that they could make a large purchase of water – 40.7 billion gallons at a cost of over $100 million. This purchase was made after careful consideration and an examination of all available options to restore the health of the Basin after it reached historically low levels.

A video explaining the drought related issues that have driven the need for this particular rate increase can be found online at the City's dedicated water conservation website.

As the video outlines, the cost of purchasing and importing this water will be split between all of the communities and agencies that use this water, including us here in Monrovia, which means that water will become more expensive for all of us in the San Gabriel Valley moving forward. However, the importation of water will also ensure that when we turn the faucet on, we'll still have running water available.

local dogs in our community, as a dog walker and pet sitter. On every occasion that I spend time with my furry four-legged friends, I make it my practice to observe their behaviors. And while we are out walking, I enjoy accommodating their apparent desire to sniff and investigate certain spots here and

There is nothing quite like being a partner to a pup on a walk around the block. As I have written before in this column, dogs are excellent teachers. They live in the moment, and they appreciate all the little things that we humans often pass up. I don't know about you, but I am overdue for that very important "in the moment" life lesson.

When a dog is on a walk, the main thing that interests them is the smells they detect along the way. The physical exercise they benefit from is important, but definitely secondary to the enjoyment their nose gets from sniffing the scents their fourlegged predecessors left behind. For a dog it is like reading the newspaper, or as we often say in this new age of technology... they love reading their "pee-mails".

There are many reasons why it is healthy to allow your dog to take in the smells he finds during a walk. First and foremost, a canine's nose is it's window to the world. Not only does it allow the dog to learn who stopped where previously, it also acts as a stimulator for brain activity as well as other important systemic operations within the body.

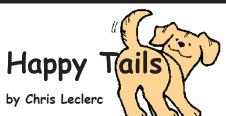

Relatively recent research indicates that the canine's olfactory senses help stimulate it's 'urge to purge'. So, if you want "Buster" to do his "business" while on a walk, it behooves you to allow him to check his "pee-mails" along the way. Beyond the benefits of allowing your pup to investigate the evidence of previous passers-by, there are other aspects of the dog's daily outing that can play a part in his overall

What makes us humans think we need to be the ones to decide when a dog gets to stop and check the scents on a patch of grass? While I agree it is important to get the dog's heart rate up for a period of time, the human's tendency is to be large and in charge, keeping the dog briskly moving for the entirety of the walk. I've seen folks dragging their dogs along behind them during an intense run or bike ride. Once I even saw a dog having to relieve himself in motion, to accommodate the human's need to keep moving!

In most cases, I believe this behavior has emerged due to cultural conditioning on how we humans are supposed to deal with dogs. Nuances in our society tell us that we are doing the right thing by forcing our pets to be compliant to our every command, regardless of how unreasonable it may be. I say let's not be "sheeple" to someone else's warped ideology. I practice mutual respect, always, regardless of the species I am counter-

Unfortunately, there are some folks who view the human-canine relationship as an opportunity to implement their innate need to be in control. Perhaps they lack a sense of control in other aspects of their lives, so they use their helpless pets as an outlet for their frustration. It is quite tragic for the animal. I have seen a couple of dog walkers around town recently whom I believe fall into this category.

The dogs they walk (typically several at a time) look fearful. Their leashes are fastened to the walker's belt - a sign that the human prefers to be detached physically and emotionally from the animals they

For the past 7+ years, it has been my pleasure to be friend lots of consider themselves to be dominate over. And the dog's chance of stopping to smell the roses is comparable to a snow ball's chance in hell. It doesn't take John E. Douglas to interpret that brand of body language. I'll leave it at that, in an effort to keep this "Tail" happy!

I personally prefer a one-on-one relationship with each of the dogs I walk. I will never get rich that way, in terms of the time I spend with a single dog versus gathering up the troops, but you can't buy the heart-felt contentment I get by having mutually respectful, intimate bonding relationships with the kind canines I get to spend time with. Indeed, that is the reward I look forward to daily to as a dog-walker.

I consider my animal friendships to be of an equally reciprocal nature. I respect the dog's desire to take a break during a walk and sniff around a bit. A lot of times I let them decide when and where they take those breaks. Now and then I allow them to choose which direction we will take, assuming it fits our time frame. I ensure they get their exercise, while letting them take part in the decision-making process. I believe they pick up on that and, over time, begin to behave in a way that keeps us moving efficiently for the workout.

This sense of equality and reciprocated respect in my friendships with pets has served me very well over the many years I've had animals in my life, and in more recent years as a dog walker it has been most helpful. Rather than demanding obedience from the dogs, I make it my practice to maintain a loose leash (remaining ever-ready to tighten when necessary) and I talk to them in light pitches using uplifting words known to translate into positive terms in the Research has proven that dogs respond best to positive terminology. So, if your pup has a tendency to get overly excited at the sight of another dog, instead of using strong commands such as "No!" or "Stop that!", (or God forbid, using hand or foot to enforce your demands) try keeping your voice in a mild tone and say such things as, "Good girl/boy, I am so

Begin these positive chants as soon as the other dog comes into view and continue until you've passed the other dog. Add a gentle pat when your dog behaves well. I believe you will be pleasantly surprised with the results. It may take time, perhaps days or weeks for some pups, but I guarantee your kind words will serve you far better than using harsh commands or physical reprimands to bring the dog under control.

Be kind to your canine. Let him/her stop and smell the roses. After all, isn't that we tell ourselves to do? The "WALK" is supposed to be for the dog, right? Try to forego your need to be large and in charge. Speak kindly to your dog and let him/ her be enfranchised in the decision-making process. You'll be amazed at how easy a dog walk can be.

is through practice that we cultivate a stable, calm, clear and content state of being. This content state is not irritated or rushed, nor is it inert or stuck in any way. It is the perfect in-between -- pure and balanced.

We can create real change in our lives and provide lasting support in daily living by identifying the practices drinks. that bring balance. Creating stability is the best place to start. In creating stability and taming restlessness, we must talk Vata. Vata is one of the three doshas or mindbody types in Ayurveda, one of the world's oldest holistic medicinal systems. It's one of three attributes that make up who we are.

Vata is made up of air & ether which is closely related to wind or vayu. As wind generates movement, so does Vata. In fact, Vata governs all movement; it is the FIRST to change and (often) to fall out of balance. The other yogamadre.com.

HOW TO GET OVER IT!

"He who learns must suffer. And even in our sleep tached to the event that we are pain that cannot forget falls drop by drop upon the heart, and in our own despair, against our will, comes wisdom to us by the awful grace of God." Aeschylus

Whoa, it has been a rough few weeks! Now that I am coming out to the other side I am experiencing more growth and clarity. There have been tears, loss of sleep plus moments of exhilaration. To cope, I have let my people love me, and I have enjoyed their support. I have been more social and more curious. Sometimes I have been angry, but It is difficult to heal when we keep repeating the most of the time I have been sad. That's what it's like to be in grief. You just have to roll with it. I have been looking for the lesson, and there are a few. I strengthened my meditation practice, and I studied how others have handled suffering in the

Why do we suffer? Well even for me, after years of study and practice, I am reminded that we suffer when we insist on attachment. When we resist accepting circumstances as they are and toy with a nonexistent, alternative reality, we suffer. What it is is what it is. We eliminate suffering when we can color our experiences neutral. It is not easy, but it is necessary. When things don't go the way we planned, resist the urge to label the experience BAD. The only way to do that is not to get too at-

This process has helped me manage seemingly big and small difficulties. Having a gratitude and meditation practice is helpful because I have trained my mind to look for the good in life and every situation. That makes it easier for me to recalibrate and calm myself. SOLO TRAVEL SAVINGS TIPS FOR RETIREES

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can your ecommend some good travel companies that offergood deals for single travelers? I've taken a couple tours sinceIretiredafewyearsago, butthesingle-supplement feereally cuts into my budget.

Solo Sally

Dear Sally,

Solo traveling is a growing trend among baby boomers and retirees. Nearly 1-in-4 who travel today, go it alone according to a recent Visa Global Intentions Study. But one of the biggest drawbacks among solo travelers is the single supplemental fee - which is an extra fee charged to single travelers who stay in a double occupancy room alone.

To help you avoid this extra charge, more and more travel companies and cruise lines are making adjustments to accommodate the growing solo-traveler market. Here are several to check into.

Singles Travel

There are a variety of travel companies today that specialize in vacations for solo travelers, including Singles Travel International (SinglesTravelIntl.com) and Singles Travel Getaways (SinglesTravelGetaways.com). Both companies offer tours, cruises and adventures in the U.S. and overseas, and will match you with a roommate to avoid the single supplement, or won't charge you if a match can't be arranged.

General Tour Operators

Some big operators in this category that have lots of solo travelers include Intrepid Travel (IntrepidTravel. com), which handles more than 100,000 travelers each year, sending them to more than 100 countries. And G Adventures (Gadventures.com), which has more than 700 tours around the globe, and offers a variety of travel styles. Both of these companies can pair you with a roommate, and some tours offer your own room option for an additional fee.

And for higher-end luxury travel check out Abercrombie & Kent (AbercrombieKent.com), which offers a 50 percent single supplement discount on their select small group solo travel trips and cruises, and Tauck (Tauck.com), which has no single supplement on their European river cruises.

50-Plus Travel

If you're interested in trips designed for adults 50 and older consider ElderTreks (ElderTreks.com), Road Scholar (RoadScholar.org) and Overseas Adventure Travel (OATtravel.com).

ElderTreks specializes in exotic adventures worldwide,

KATIE TseThis and That and will match single travelers with roommates on most of its trips, and doesn't charge if a match can't be arranged.

Road Scholar specializes in worldwide learning adventures, and has designated trips that offer the same price for solo travelers as for those traveling in pairs.

And Overseas Adventure Travel, which operates in Asia, Africa, Europe, South America, the Middle East, Cuba, Australia and New Zealand, has free single supplements on all its land tours and either free or low-cost single supplements on its small-ship adventures.

Cruise Lines

If cruising is your thing, there are a number of cruise lines that have some ships with single-occupancy cabins, including Norwegian Cruise Line (NCL.com), Royal Caribbean (RoyalCaribbean.com) and Vantage Deluxe World Travel's river ships (VantageTravel.com).

Or, consider booking a cruise at SinglesCruise.com, which uses a variety of different cruise lines for their single customers. They provide roommate matching.

Solo Women

For solo women travelers, there are a host of tour companies and clubs, like GutsyWomenTravel.com, SerenDipityTraveler.com, Women-Traveling.com, The Womens Travel Group.com and Womens-Travel-Club. com that will either match you up with a roommate, or reduce their single supplement fee.

Travel Partner

If you'd rather find a suitable travel partner before you book your next trip, there are a number of free websites that can help you here too. See Travbuddy.com, TravelFriend.us and TravelersMeeting.com. Or, to find a cruise buddy try CruiseMates.com, which has a message board where users can post roommate requests.

For more information on solo travel, check out SoloTravelerWorld.com, which offers solo travel tips, destinations and stories, and also publishes a monthly list a crest on the top of their heads which resembles a spike, hence my parents' pet's name "Spike."

Despite diminutive stature at 27 grams (that's less than one ounce, and yes, they actually managed to weigh him), Spike lives up to all the spunk and defiance his name implies. One of his favorite past times is stealing food. We've come to realize his fascination with our food has nothing to do with taste --it's all about the forbidden aspect of it. Case in point, when we have salads with tomatoes, Spike is all over them. But when my Dad puts the exact same tomato slices in his food bowl, he couldn't we're not going to try in the near future, but it was care less.

Over time, Spike has become more and more audacious when it comes to his food theft escapades. At first he just sneaked a crumb or two that were left from my Dad's sandwich, but now he's perched on his wrist, wrangling bits of cheese from between the bread! Not to mention the fact that he can be very territorial, bordering on violent. Sometimes if I'm eating something he wants he'll peck my arm repeatedly. Good thing he's as small as he is. If he were a wood pecker I'd think we'd be in trouble!

It's hard to get mad at Spike though, because he's so grandchildren, in that you never tiny and somewhat feather-challenged. Although we think those belonging to other still think he's adorable, his tail is hideous, and he's a people are as cute as your own. little bald around his face. We first got Spike back in June around the insanely What on earth is a bulbul? I'm glad you asked! A hot day when the big fire broke out. My parents' neighbor found him and brought him over because and the Philippines. A number of years ago bulbuls he knows my parents are "bird people" (which is were introduced to this area and have thrived here also code for "nuts."). Like most new birds, Spike ever since. They have a distinctive call that you can wouldn't open his beak for liquid food from an eye > it he lustily chirped for it all the time. One of the problems with keeping wild birds is the transition from baby to adult food, especially is adult food is live. You pretty much have to be retired to care for baby birds or bring them to work with you (Which I've actually done before! The kids at school got a big kick out of it.). Feeding birds live worms can be done, but it's the sort of thing that requires some supervision if you don't want escaped worms crawling around your house. Luckily for us we found dehydrated insects online! They even have a wide variety of dried bugs available for human consumption, interesting to see. Bulbuls can be prone to scurvy, since their bodies don't manufacture vitamin C on their own. That's why it's important to make sure bulbuls have their diet supplemented with fruits that contain vitamin C. Good thing for us that Spike's not

Well, I could say more about my parents' most recent addition, but I see that I've written more than two pages already, and I know how it is hearing about other people's pets... So have a wonderful week and keep an eye out for bulbuls!

MOUNT WILSON OBSERVATORY HAS PUBLIC CELEBRATION OF 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF HISTORIC 100-INCH TELESCOPE NOV. 4

On Saturday, November 4th, you are invited hundred years of space exploration with the 100inch telescope.

From 2:00 pm to 10:00 pm the observatory's historic telescopes, including the 100-inch, will be open to the public, with docents on hand to talk about how they ushered in the modern era of astrophysics and revolutionized our understanding of the universe.

Please dress warmly as it can get very cold up on the mountain this time of year. We are over a mile high. Handicapped visitors should be aware that the telescopes have several flights of stairs

From 2:00 to 4:00 pm there will be talks in the museum auditorium on the history of the observatory by longtime docent Nik Arkimovich, and a talk by Sam Hale, observatory trustee and grandson of Mount Wilson Observatory founder George Ellery Hale.

At 4:00 pm, UC Berkeley astronomer Alex to come up to Mount Wilson and celebrate one Filippenko will give a talk in the museum auditorium on the 100-inch telescope. Tickets for this limited-seating event are available at the Observatory website, www.mtwilson.edu. Also check the Observatory website for directions for driving to Mount Wilson.

From dark to 10:00 pm, assuming the weather permits, the 100-inch telescope will be open to the public for free viewing. The telescope will be pointed at different objects during this time, so visitors can file in and take a peek through the famous telescope that Edwin Hubble used to discover our expanding universe.

The 100-inch was first tested on the night of November 2, 1917-in the middle of the FirstWorld War. The small crowd gathered in the new dome at sunset included, along with Observatory staff, the visiting English poet Alfred Noyes, who later chronicled the unfolding drama in his epic poem

"Watchers of the Sky":

. The explorers of the sky, the pioneers Of science, now made ready to attack That darkness once again, And win new worlds.

Observatory founder George Ellery Hale felt that the 100-inch's great light-gathering power would be especially useful in solving the mystery of the spiral nebulae. A debate was raging as to whether these graceful objects were "island universes" or lesser systems tributary to our Milky Way Galaxy, Into the fray stepped Edwin Hubble, who joined the Mount Wilson staff in 1919.

Once at Mount Wilson, Hubble used the 100-inch to attack the spiral nebulae problem.

Believing them to be "island universes" (now called galaxies), Hubble looked for variable stars

Telescope was named after him. (which vary in brightness) in the Andromeda nebula. One proved to be very important. It was a Cepheid variable, a type that had been shown MtnViewsNews.com.

to be useful as an indicator of distance. The search for Cepheids was expanded to other spiral nebulae, and dozens were found, all of which indicated that the distances to the nebulae were far too great for them to be a part of our galaxy. Hubble's discovery with the 100-inch had proved beyond question that nebulae were external galaxies comparable to our own. It opened the last frontier of astronomy, and gave, for the first time, the correct conceptual value of the universe.

Hubble used the 100-inch for decades to push back the limits of the universe. He measured galactic distances and speeds to prove that the universe is expanding, changing our perception of the nature of the universe and leading to the "Big Bang" theory of its origin. In recognition of his achievements, the 94-inch Hubble Space

DIET

First, a bit of personal background. I was always the guy who got eaten alive by mosquitoes. To this day, I hardly wear short pants because when mosquitoes are out and about, my legs look like rodents chewed on them. Over the years, I have experimented with dietary solutions. Garlic in the diet was said to reduce mosquito bites, but it didn't work for me, nor did taking Vitamin B12 pills. However, once I began to include raw apple cider vinegar in my diet, I found that the incidence of mosquito bites has dramatically diminished. These days, I regularly add about a teaspoon of this particular vinegar to approximately each cup of water of fruit juice, especially in the summer, and I have been amazed at the results. [For more on vinegar, see "Vermont Folk Medicine" by D.C. Jarvis.]

PLANTS

You can also grow certain plants around your property which are reputed to repel mosquitoes, and others you must rub on your skin to help repel bugs. And still, some plants must be burned so that the oils in the smoke repels the insects.

has been shown to repel mosquitoes. According to the paper titled "Plant-based insect repellents: A review of their efficacy, development, and testing," by M.F. Maia and S.J. Moore, published in 2-11 in the Malaria Journal (10, supplement 1, S11), both lantana in general, and specifically Lantana ukambensis can be somewhat in pots around a residence. The smoke of the burning lantana leaves is even more effective.

Just so the seriousness of this is clear, the Malaria Journal published the results of dozens of plants used to protect from mosquitoes. Some of the plants were rubbed on the skin, some burned, and some simply grown around residences. The study can be found on-line and is far more extensive than Illinois Extension. this article.

ROSEMARY & LAVENDER

Rosemary and lavender are an old world herbs that are now found commonly in nurseries. They are easyto-grow, somewhat drought tolerant plants that pretty much takes care of themselves.

The fresh leaves can be crushed in the hands and rubbed over the exposed body parts. Also, when tossed into a campfire or backyard fire, the smoke is somewhat repelling to insects. It's not perfect, of course, because you need to stay near the smoke for this to be effective.

LAUREL SUMAC

Laurel sumac is a shrub found in the chaparral and foothill regions of the west and Southwest. I learned decades ago that the Native Americans of the Los Angeles County region would rub the crushed leaves

Lantana is a commonly-planted ornamental which and try to bite. I regarded it as adequate under the circumstances, and certainly better than no repellant.

The genus Artemisia includes such plants as mugwort (A. douglasiana), California sagebrush (A. californica), and great basin Sagebrush (A. effective in repelling mosquitoes just by planting them tridentate). Artemisias grow all over the world in a great variety of environments.

Crush the leaves and rub them over your exposed skin. The mosquitoes just don't like the strong scent put off by these herbs, and they will tend to bite less. This was documented and suggested in the publication "Use Plants for Pest Control," published by Cole County Yard and Garden, University of

To know the difference between a legitimate practicing being a husband. If the husband learns are." anything in his marriage, it is this.

I know people ask questions in order to get information. Not all people ask a question in order to get information. Some people ask questions in order to trick somebody into saying something that is compromising.

Of course, we all know the old joke about Honest Abe and his wife when she asked him, "Does this dress make me look fat?"

What does a person do in a situation like that? If a person is honest and tells the honest truth, it may not fare too well with him. It is not so much the question being asked as it is the answer that goes along with that question. this "answer" scenario. How he answers his wife's questions will determine the quality of his life. To ignore the question is only going to induce more questions and what husband really wants that? The art of answering a trick question is the only thing that keeps some people on the positive side of marital bliss. If, for one moment, the husband thinks his wife is simply seeking an answer, he is in for a lot of trouble and heartache. I certainly would not have liked to have been in Honest Abe's shoes if he ever was presented with such a question from Mrs. Lincoln. Personally, I would have loved to hear how he dealt with that question, after all he was known as Honest Abe.

This past week I was presented with such a question, it caught me a little bit off guard, and I did not know how to deal with it.

I noticed my wife was walking through the house looking at everything. It may be curious, but I tried to keep out of that situation. Finally, she came to me and said quite sincerely, "Have you seen my glasses?"

It sounds like a very simple question and it should deserve a straightforward answer. But I did not know what to say. What kind of trouble would I be in if I told her where her glasses were?

I stuttered a little bit, and she being very nervous at the time, turned and started searching the house again. What do you do in situations like this?

I knew that her glasses were very important to her, but I was in a position where I did not know if this was a trick question or if I was in serious at 352-687-4240 or e-mail jamessnyder2@att.net.

Trying to do the right thing, I said to her, "No, I don't know where your glasses are? Where did you

I thought if I said that it would solve the problem and I could go on with a very happy afternoon.

Looking at me, she said rather smartly, "If I knew question and a trick question takes years of that I wouldn't have to ask you where my glasses

> She came back into the room and I looked at her and smiled very cheerfully, hoping that that would kinda solve the problem. She looked at me and said, What are you smiling about?"

> Now I was a bit confused. Are we facing a real situation here, or, is this a trick to see if I am really on board? I could not understand any of this at this

I thought to myself, "Can a person live with It is the smart husband who is an expert in another person as long as we have and not know what's going on?"

Finally, I looked at her and rolled my eyes up and down, hoping that she would take the hint. However, it was a useless gesture.

"Have you seen my glasses? I need them right

At this point, it was all I could do to keep from laughing hysterically. I knew if I did that sort of thing, I would be in a lot of trouble. How can you keep from laughing when the situation before you is of hysterical proportions?

My wife stood in front of me both hands on her hips during me and then she lifted her right hand to scratch her head and discovered her glasses were on top of her head.

'Oh," she said as she spun around to leave, "here they are on the top of my head."

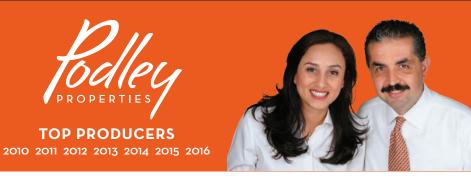

Now what do I do with that? Do I laugh or pretend I do not know what happened? Then, she turned around and looking at me said, "You better not laugh."

It reminded me of a verse in the Bible. "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known" (1 Corinthians 13:12).

Sometimes what we are looking for is right in front of us, but we can't see it.

On October 15, 2016, Deputies Macias and Channel 7's Jovana Lara was Mistress of Ceremonies, Morales were reaching the end of their shift, driving back to Temple Station when they noticed smoke rising nearby. They drove towards it, and it was coming from a residence. The deputies exited their vehicle and knocked on the door. After two minutes, an elderly man came to the door, but didn't want to leave and there was a language barrier. The deputies entered the residence and escorted the man out. Deputy Macias went back in and crawled on his hands and knees to see if anyone else was inside, but was forced to leave because of the heavy smoke. A neighbor arrived and said the man's wife was still inside. The Deputies again entered to search for her but were unsuccessful and forced out again. After pausing they reentered and located her at the back of the house with a walker, unable to walk. Deputy Macias carried her outside and the deputies entered one final time to check for any other persons. The two deputies and couple were transported to the hospital and treated for smoke inhalation.

Arcadia resident 81-year old Jerry Brascia came across a violent struggle between Deputy Joshua Lambert and a felony suspect. Jerry parked his car, exited it, approached Deputy Lambert and the suspect,

MARIA FAGLIONE:

Apprentice Jockey and Veteran Actress!

Pasadena Edition: Pasadena - South Pasadena - Altadena - San Marino

By Joan Schmidt

A few weeks ago, Bob and I attended the races. As I looked down the program, I saw "Maria Faglione". "Oh my goodness...Do we have an Italian jockey?" (That really caught my eye!)

After the race, I rushed downstairs and stopped Maria on her way to the Jockey Room. Yes, Faglione is an Italian name, but she was born in the US, and yes, she'd like to do an interview.

A week later, Maria and I met at Clocker's Corners after morning workouts. Maria explained she was born in Lexington, North Carolina, but raised in Nebraska. I asked when her interest in riding began, and she explained that she'd been riding horses her entire life-was on a horse before she learned how to walk! Her grandfather had a cattle ranch in Nebraska. She rode there and on hunter-jumper class horses before coming to California to pursue an acting career.

Maria's acting career included "Indie films, TV shows, commercials and the lead in both the New York and Las Vegas productions of the off-Broadway play, Tony and Tina's Wedding" in which she played the bride. Maria quipped, "I got married six times a week for 21/2 years and had 75 wedding dresses!"

The next shock was her age of 38-older than most apprentices-but fortunately, she is able to keep her weight down. I am not surprised after learning of her stint on stage and her riding habits.

goal was to race thoroughbred horses. Many jockeys begin their careers by "galloping" horses. The day we met Maria had already ridden 12 horses-20 minutes each! She gets up at 3:30am, as workouts begin 4:45am. It is no wonder she eats dinner at 5pm and PHOTOGRAPHY for the awesome photo!) is ready for bed by 8 or 9 pm. Many jockeys also spend time at the gym and I commented to Maria about their lifestyle and she agreed it's much easier for jockeys to have relationships with people in the relationship with them...also takes horses off the racing profession who understand the grueling Maria's first thoroughbred mount was at Del Mar on Tee Em Eye, a 4-year old California-bred filly, daughter of Cyclotron and trained by Mike Machowsky. Maria guided her in a sweeping move turning into the stretch in a 5 ½ furlong $16,000 claiming race and won by 3 ½ lengths. With great enthusiasm, Maria called it her GREATEST ACHIEVEMENT winning her first race at Del Mar and being a female jockey! She said it was "The coolest thing I have ever one in my entire life. Three years ago Maria came to Santa Anita. Her The filly was really good to me; she just carried me around there. She was a good girl. IRAS, ANNUITIES AND GUARDIANSHIP:

Providing for Your Minor Children if You Die Before They Reach Adulthood

Deciding on a guardian for your minor children may very well be the most important decision you'll make regarding your estate planning. Not only must you trust the appointed guardian to raise your children as you'd want them raised, but you also need that person to be financially responsible with your children's inheritance. For example, if you have an IRA or an annuity that you wish to pass to your minor children, how can you ensure those funds will be used properly—especially if the person you trust most to raise your kids isn't necessarily the best with finances?

This question is multifaceted, so let's unravel one aspect at a time.

The Question of Guardianship

Here's the good news: The person who raises your minor children and the person who handles their inheritance don't have to be the same person. If necessary, you can appoint one guardian to serve each function, naming one as the guardian of the person and another as the guardian of the estate. In this arrangement, you entrust one person with your children's assets and another with their care, while enabling each to interact with the other. This dual guardianship model gives many parents peace of mind—knowing they don't necessarily have to risk their children's inheritance while ensuring that they are raised according to the family's values.

Although guardianship of the estate is an option, for many families the best strategy for financially providing for the children is to use a trust. In that case, a trustee fulfills the responsibility that would otherwise belong to the guardian of the estate. The trust assets can be released to the children or the caregiver incrementally according to age and needs. For example, the trustee could distribute money for the children's needs until age 18 and then manage for the money until the child is a financially mature adult. Your trustee may also exercise discretion in investing and distributing the funds for the children's support, education, etc., coordinating with their physical guardian to ensure the children's needs are met until they come of age. This can ensure that the assets are there when they're needed for your

Passing an Annuity to the Children

Annuities pay out regular income—which can make them convenient vehicles to cover ongoing expenses for minor children. If you have set up an annuity for yourself or a spouse, you can name the children as beneficiaries, or you can also name a trust for the benefit of your children. If you are still paying into the annuity at the time of death, your children may receive the balance, or you may give a trustee the option of rolling the balance into another annuity to be paid out to the children at a later maturity date. If you are already receiving annuity payments yourself, the children may simply continue receiving these payments for the remainder of the term. Depending on your annuity contract, payouts may also be made lump sum. Annuities are a very flexible financial product with many different options. If you have annuity now, or if you are considering purchasing one, bring it up with us as we work on your estate plan so we can make sure it meshes with your will or trust seamlessly.

Transferring an IRA to the Children

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) are also excellent vehicles to pass along wealth for minor children's welfare-because, unlike most annuities, they have the ability to grow over time and can provide a lifetime of financial benefit to your children.

When you name the next generation as beneficiaries on an IRA, you effectively extend the IRA's life expectancy. While the required minimum distribution payments to the children will be smaller than they would have been for you (since, according to the IRS's rules, they have a longer life expectancy), the account balance can remain invested for growth over time. Your financial and tax advisor can evaluate your situation to help you decide which type of IRA (Roth or traditional) is the best option for your goals. And we can work with you to set up a trust which fully protects your IRA against your child's creditors, predators, future ex-spouses, and immature financial decision

Planning for the welfare of minor children after your death is neither simple nor pleasant to consider, but it's absolutely necessary for peace of mind. Determining the right person(s) to be the guardian of your children requires careful thought, but you don't have to sacrifice your children's inheritance for their proper care. With the right financial plan, you can manage both facets successfully. As always, we're here to provide assistance and explain your options. Call our offices for an appointment today.

PURCHASING NEW ITEMS & PURGING OLD ITEMS FOR GIFT GIVING

With the holiday season at our doorsteps, it's the perfect time to finalize the annual list of gifts that you plan to purchase, including year-end gifts to a worthy cause or individuals who might be encouraged by a generous show of support. Don't underestimate how appreciative someone may be to receive a gift of something that is old and outdated for you, yet may be welcomed by the recipient as their new favorite thing. As long as what you're giving is in good working condition and looks presentable, you will be surprised at how useful your friend or neighbor may find it to receive your old computer desk that you need to discard because you're replacing it or converting your office into an exercise room.

Look first to determine things that you already possess to give away and bring joy or benefit to someone else. Next, think of some talent you have or some service you could render to bring a smile to someone's face. Put on your thinking cap and get creative with your ideas, then settle on at least one thing that you can actually do and at least one thing that you can actually give to someone. Replacing your older Kindle? Certainly one of the other individuals in your life who loves to read might welcome it as a brand new gadget to master. Other examples of gifts to give, some old, some new, include:

Next time you're dining at one of your favorite restaurants, purchase a gift certificate for an amount at least equal to your tab on that visit, then give it to someone in your life who's never been there. You can let them know that you wanted one of your favorite people to be enjoy a meal at one of your favorite If you're among the folks who still uses elbow

grease to was their own cars, surprise your neighbor by taking your waterhose and washcloth to theirs the next time they jokingly say, "Hey, you washing mine

For those who don't feel comfortable reaching out to give used items or services to individuals they know, perhaps a donation to a local charitable cause will suffice.

Consider blessing yourself by being a blessing to someone less fortunate during this festive season. "It's better to give than it is to receive" is a well-known saying adopted from Acts 20:35 in the Bible. Certainly, anyone who is in a position to be able to contribute to someone else's well-being or advancement is in some ways better off than those who must rely on others to provide the necessities of

We can all brace ourselves for the onslaught of promotional campaigns and advertisements that will consume every available second of airtime on broadcast media, and populate bandwidths with the transmission of digital data to make it easy for shoppers to browse, shop and click to complete purchases through countless websites and related media. We can also adopt a balanced approach to decide on the new items that we wish to purchase, as well as some of our old existing items that we can purge from our environment to become useful to

INAPPROPRIATE HALLOWEEN COSTUMES

Now that everything has become politicized, it only makes sense that Halloween costumes should be politicized, too."

"Ah, yes, you speak of the spate of articles popping up that lecture us on costumes that may be inappropriate or hurtful. Business Insider says, 'Some common Halloween costumes simply take it too far and can become racist, misogynistic, or downright insensitive."

"That's right. I was going dress as a wealthy Arab sheik, but apparently that is out because, says Business Insider, 'It's harmful to reinforce negative and misconceived notions about a region, religion, or group of people."

"The wife loved the idea of dressing up like a reality-TV star. The costume she had in mind had a long black wig and a tight white dress that showed she was with child a satirical outfit that mocks America's fascination with reality stars, in particular the Kardashians, who are famous just for being famous. But Business Insider says that's insensitive, in part, because it body-shames."

"That's an interesting point of view."

"Then the wife was going to dress up as a sexy convict with a short, black-andwhite-striped dress, and I was going to wear a Hannibal Lecter mask and straitjacket, but Business Insider says that would be a mistake."

"I can't wait to learn why."

"The website says, 'Incarceration is not funny,' and my wife's costume would trivialize the U.S. prison system. Business Insider says that a straitjacket and scary mask would reinforce 'harmful misconceptions about mental health in prison."

"I'm pretty sure this one wouldn't fly: When I was a kid, we used to dress as Depression-era hobos." "No way would such a costume be permitted. Many of today's homeless suffer mental-health issues. Besides, Business İnsider says we ought not make fun of people living on the streets."

"Fair enough. What about the trend in recent years in which women dress up in a variety of risque© outfits? Surely, that is a no-no?"
"Cosmopolitan has three words for such outfits: 'Racist, sexist, gross.' It's offensive for women to dress as Geishas, gypsies and other outfits that mock other cultures and reinforce cultural stereotypes.'

"O.J. Simpson is back in the news."

"Don't even go there. As People makes clear, Simpson is 'still most widely associated with the brutal murders of two innocent people' and it would be wrong to 'make light of their deaths because you think tiny gloves would get a laugh."

"How quickly times change. In 2009, Robert Thompson, director of the Bleier Center for Television and Popular Culture at Syracuse University, explained to me why Halloween had become such a widely celebrated secular holiday. He said it was the only day of the year when people can freely do or say or be anything they want. It is 'the one day where almost anything goes' and 'people can do something outrageous they'd never do normally."

"That's why the wife and I used to enjoy it so much."

"Thompson also told me that people pick costumes to mock or satirize popular culture. In a country that believes in freedom of expression, it is healthy to poke fun at our political leaders, celebrities and cultural trends."

'That's what I used to think."

"It's a fair point that we should be mindful of not offending people from other cultures with the costumes we choose. However, it's troubling that Halloween has so quickly gone from a day when almost anything goes to one when we must tread carefully for fear that someone, somewhere, may be offended by our satirization of politicians, celebrities and cultural trends."

TRUMP JUST KEEPS DIGGING

It's the first rule of crisis communications: When you're in the hole, the first thing you do is to stop digging.

But if you're President Donald Trump, you equip yourself with a hardhat with a miner's light, reflective gear, heavy-duty gloves, and fire up Mary Anne, the reliable steam shovel from Mike Mulligan and His Steam Shovel," and commence digging even deeper.

In the past week, Trump has plumbed new depths of indignity, visiting fresh humiliations on his already degraded office, by picking a fight with a pregnant war widow and accusing her of lying; escalating his feud with U.S. Sen. Bob Corker of Tennessee, and issuing a stern warning to U.S. Sen. John McCain that the Arizona Republican should "be careful, because at some point I fight back."

Trump, who has a glancing relationship with the truth and speaks English only as a second language, has hurled his insults at Corker (whom he said couldn't get elected dogcatcher in his home state) and at McCain -- even as he journeyed to Capitol Hill to try to build support for tax reform.

In case Trump has forgotten, he needs every Republican vote - including Corker's and McCain's - if he hopes to win passage of his deficit-exploding tax plan.

Trump only damaged himself when he attacked "liddle" Corker on Twitter, falsely accusing him of working with former President Barack Obama to "give us the bad Iran deal." He also dismissed Corker as the "incompetent head of the [Senate] Foreign Relations Committee."

As The Washington Post reported, Corker not only voted against the Iran deal, he also marshaled legislative support against it. And as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Corker has the power to bottle up the administration's pick for Secretary of State, in the event that current chief diplomat Rex Tillerson finally reaches a tipping point and decides to quit.

So logic would appear to dictate that Trump try to work past those differences and cultivate Corker's support.

But this is Donald Trump's Washington, where logic has hung a "Back in 2020" sign on its office door and headed out for an extended holiday - perhaps to some far-flung island with non-existent broadband service.

'Sen. Corker is the incompetent head of the Foreign Relations Committee, & look how poorly the U.S. has done, Trump wrote on Twitter. "He doesn't have a clue as the entire World WAS laughing and taking advantage of us. People like liddle' Bob Corker have set the U.S. way back. Now we move forward!"

True, Corker probably didn't help matters by reinforcing his view to "Good Morning America," that the White House is an adult daycare center, later slamming the "same untruths from an utterly untruthful president."

The ongoing war of words between Trump, Corker and McCain - however destructive and uncivil -- could be reasonably dismissed as mere posturing between some towering

But Trump's needless fight with Myeshia Johnson, the widow of one of four Army soldiers killed in operations in the African nation of Niger, proves the case that spats with Corker and other political enemies stem from deeper flaws in the president's character.

Trump at first accused a Florida congresswoman listening in on speakerphone of distorting the content of his call to Johnson. That account was later seemingly confirmed by Trump's chief of staff, former Marine Gen. John Kelly.

Not satisfied with the damage inflicted there, Trump lashed out on Twitter after Johnson told "Good Morning America" that she was unhappy with the tone of Trump's bobbled attempt at a condolence call and complained that the president could not remember her husband's name.

"I had a very respectful conversation with the widow of Sgt. La David Johnson, and spoke his name from beginning, without hesitation!" Trump wrote, needlessly heaping more trauma on a grieving family.

A bigger man would have let that slide. An empathetic commander-in-chief, burdened by the responsibility of sending men and women possibly to their deaths in combat, would have silently absorbed the barbs, recognizing them as coming from someone dealing with incomprehensible loss. But Donald Trump?

He just keeps digging.

MAKING SENSE by MICHAEL REAGAN

OUTING THE WEINSTEINS

The movie producer's casting couch has been a "tradition" since Tinsel Town began.

But Harvey Weinstein must be setting some kind of record. His sexual rap sheet gets longer every day.

Since the New York Times broke the stories about his serial misconduct earlier this month, more than 40 actresses, studio workers and models have come forward to accuse the powerful producer of everything from sexual harassment to rape.

Now the L.A. Times is reporting that the LAPD is investigating charges by an Italian model-actress that Weinstein raped her in 2013 - within the statute of limitations. She's the sixth woman to accuse Weinstein of rape or forcible sex acts. Over the years eight others reportedly received civil settlements from Weinstein's movie company. What a charming guy.

I feel for all these women who are coming out and telling the world what sex acts Weinstein allegedly did to them or in front of them when their dreams and careers were at his mercy.

It takes courage for those women to admit that they too were humiliated, abused and taken advantage of by an A-list Hollywood slime ball.

But everyone knows Weinstein isn't the only powerful producer or director in Hollywood who regularly expected sex in exchange for making someone a movie

There are other Weinsteins, and lots of people in the film community know exactly Actresses and actors warn their friends to watch out for Producer X or Director Y, but they never make their names public. They should.

Instead of merely tweeting "Me too," the women who say they have been sexually harassed and assaulted in Hollywood (and everywhere else) need to start naming

This could be a chance for women in Hollywood to put a stop to the casting couch culture Weinstein took full advantage of for three decades.

Times have changed. Women are listened to now when they report sexual misconduct by their bosses or colleagues.

They're protected by harassment laws and supported by the media. They're no longer shamed publicly for revealing that they have been victims of sexual predators

In the end, Hollywood is all about money. You can even be an open conservative Republican in Hollywood -as long as Hollywood is making money off you.

It's the same with top actresses - the A-listers. They make a lot of money for Hollywood, so they have power to change things.

A-list actresses need to join together and start naming the names of the other

That way they can protect the B-listers and the future young stars â€' girls and boys â€' from becoming new victims of an immoral and rotten culture that has been tolerated in Hollywood for way too long.
