DARLENE CROOK SELECTED 2018 SIERRA MADRE OLDER AMERICAN OF THE YEAR

Sierra Madre, CA. – April 12, 2018 The City of Sierra Madre and the Sierra Madre Senior Community Commission are happy to announce Darlene Crook as the 2018 Sierra Madre Older American of the Year. In recognition of her dedicated volunteerism and community service, the City of Sierra Madre will honor Darlene at the Older American of the Year reception on Friday, May 11th at the Hart Park House from 4:30 P.M. to 6:00 P.M.

Every May, the Administration on Aging, part of the Administration for Community Living, leads our nation's observance of Older American's Month. The 2018 theme, Engage at Every Age, emphasizes that you are never too old (or young) to take part in activities that can enrich your physical, mental, and emotional wellbeing. It also celebrates the many ways in which older adults make a difference in our communities. Darlene Crook and her husband Richard raised a family of 5 children and have lived in Sierra Madre for 54 years. When her children were younger she coached girls' softball and was involved with the Campfire Girls. She was also team mom for her son's baseball teams. She volunteered as an aide at Sierra Madre School and delivered Meals on Wheels to home-bound seniors for as long as the volunteer program existed.

Darlene was a docent in Eaton Canyon for over 15 years, leading school children on nature tours of the canyon. She specialized in helping handicapped youth make the nature connection.

She works with 1st graders at Sierra Madre School to help them with their reading. She also does dental education for 1st graders, and helps with Reading is Fundamental (RIF) with 2nd graders.

As if that isn't enough, Darlene is also a member of the Friends of the Library and helps with their fundraising programs including the Annual Wine Tasting and the Art Fair.

She is also a very active member of the Sierra Madre Civic Club and works on the Mount Wilson Trail Race and Halloween Window Painting. And, we can't forget that she is the one that weighs the fish every year at Huck Finn!

For more information on the Older American Reception, or on how you can assist with honoring Darlene Crook, please contact the Senior Services Center Desk at (626) 355-7394.

56TH SIERRA MADRE PUBLIC LIBRARY ANNUAL ART FAIR

The Featured Artist for the 56th Annual Sierra Madre Art Fair is Lucia Friedericy. Lucia grew up in an artistic family, making dolls and puppets and various projects. She and her siblings put together a traveling marionette show known as the "Friedericy Family Puppeteers" that performed locally with their hand-made puppets while they were in junior high school. She attended college for theatre at UCI, then for fashion design at Woodbury University, and eventually began working on staff at USC, Occidental College, and Cal State Los Angeles as a costume designer for the stage.

In 1989, Lucia began to make art dolls as a full-time profession from her home studio. Initially she worked with her brother, painter and sculptor John Friedericy. They collaborated with her painting and costuming his porcelain heads and exhibited their dolls in New York. John sadly passed away in the early 1990s, and she then worked with her mother, Judith Friedericy, longtime art teacher at the Frostig Institute in Pasadena. They produced one-of-a-kind artist dolls for the next twenty-five years that have been shown and sold world-wide to collectors.

About 10 years ago, Lucia began experimenting with sculpting in paper clay instead of porcelain. This lead to her current body of work that she shows at art fairs. She likes to create and attempt to capture all manner of facial expression and life-like movement in her miniature characters that she displays in shadowboxes to hang in the home. People often remark upon the humor and whimsey of her work, and she herself feels it is more accurate to view the figures as 3D illustrations of characters, than to think of them as dolls. She travels all over the country to attend top art shows, but Pasadena has been her home for 20 years. So, for that reason, and the charm and beauty of the show itself, she says the Sierra Madre Art Fair from the Friends of the Sierra Madre Public Library is a joy to do.

The Art Fair is being held in Memorial Park on Saturday, May 5, from 9:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., and Sunday, May 6, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Be sure to stop by Lucia's booth (#4) to admire and purchase her inspiring creations. For more information visit our web site www.sierramadrelibraryfriends.org or call 626-355-7186.

DO YOU HAVE A STORY TO TELL?

Do you have a Sierra Madre memory to tell? This is your chance to have it recorded on video and stored at state and local archives. You will be part of the state historical record! AND there will be a presentation here in town of all the Sierra Madre videos created.

Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society members have regaled us with all kinds of wonderful memories of their lives in town – we know you have stories to tell! If you were raised here, what experiences and adventures did you have? If you moved to Sierra Madre, what was it like then compared to now? Do you have a memory connected to a place, or to a person - maybe a leading citizen of our town, or even a local character? These are just a few ideas to get you thinking what memory you'd

Part of this memory-gathering project, California Listens, is a free 2-day workshop to create your little video (photos or memorabilia relating to your story are a big plus!). The workshop team will work with you all the way through, and you'll end up with skills that could be useful for recording memories for your family, or doing other video projects. The California Listens Digital Storytelling Workshop is set for Friday and Saturday May 11-12, 2018 from 9 am to 5 pm at City Hall, located at 232 W. Sierra Madre Blvd. in Ŝierra Madre.

In the workshop, participants will make a short video on a computer and will learn: how to make a great video story, how to write a narration script and record it, how to prepare a visual treatment for a story, and the basics of video editing in WeVideo. Powerful and fun! Anyone can contribute regardless of experience or technical level.

The deadline to apply is April 28th. To apply, visit: storycenter.org/sierramadre or submit a paper application to the Sierra Madre Public Library. You can drop your application off at the library or mail it to them (Sierra Madre Public Library, 440 W. Sierra Madre Blvd. Sierra Madre, CA 91024). Or you can apply online at the website storycenter.org/sierramadre.

The workshop is free, but pre-registration is required. Those taking part must commit to preparation time, attendance during the entire two days.

Collected video stories will be shared at a presentation during the summer and will become part of state and local archives of stories about what it means to be Californian. View collected stories at californialistens.org

WALKING SIERRA MADRE

be answered in wondrous ways. The dry seasons in life do not last. The spring rains will come again." Sara Ban Breathnach

'In days of yore, Opening Day of the baseball season was special, signifying that spring had come at last. Today, however, Opening Day sort of dribbles into existence, and the spiritual start of Spring now belongs to the Masters Golf Tournament where the azaleas, magnolias and dogwood bloom." Frank Deford least as far as the Dodgers are concerned, isn't going too

Spring starts for me when the lemon trees outside our kitchen window are covered with blossoms and bees and hummingbirds in record numbers feast at this table set before them. Have you noticed the Hawthorne blooming all over town? Those pink flowers are another bee and hummingbird buffet and, if you sit quietly, you can enjoy these little guys flitting from blossom to blossom. We need them, too. Of course you already know that bees perform a task that is vital to the survival of agriculture: pollination. One third of our global food supply is pollinated by bees. Simply put, bees keep plants and crops alive. Here are just a few of the things we love best pollinated by bees: Almonds, apples, apricots, avocados, blueberries, cantaloupes, cashews, coffee, cranberries, cucumbers, eggplants, grapes, kiwis, mangoes, okra, peaches, pears, peppers, strawberries, tangerines, walnuts and watermelons.

Life without avocados? Seriously? Coffee?? Eek! I make it a practice to help bees out of the water when they fall in and have planted milkweed, which they like, and try to stay out of their way so we don't have an encounter of the most unpleasant kind. My son and I are both highly allergic to beestings and have to have medical help if we fall afoul of one of them. So, needless to say, I am a bee's most distant admirer!

Since my best friend and roommate, John, changed his address to heaven, I've been in the "let's clear some of this stuff outta here" business. I don't know if you've noticed, but there's a move afoot, mostly in decorator magazines I think, lauding people who are moving out of their big comfortable houses into tiny places which any self-respecting dog would reject as being too small. Having occupied the same house since 1970, which was perfect at that time for my adorable, very handy-

"Expect to have hope rekindled. Expect your prayers to can fix anything, husband, our four children, a series of German Shepherd dogs, the occasional unhappy cat and me, it is now way too big for just me. All the children have grown up, have their own homes and I've been out of the pet business for years. The house sits on 2/3 of an acre featuring what used to be beautiful lawns, roses, gardenias, azaleas, fruit trees and now that we've had a little rain, even the back lawn which I thought was a goner has shown signs of coming back to life.

When I think of "The Joys of Less," what comes to According to all reliable sources, baseball season, as mind is that I really should give my bread machine to the Salvation Army as I haven't made bread with it in probably ten years. So I did, along with a lot of mismatched mugs, plastic wine glasses, towel sets in a color I don't simply adore anymore, a bunch of really nice cookbooks that I never cooked a single thing out of, salad bowl sets, chip and dip sets, 15 decorative pillows, 3 gravy boats - who needs 3 gravy boats! And I've passed along a lot of John's outdated stuff to our daughter, Patti, who is having a yard sale soon.

Cleaning out my closet is a great idea. There are sweaters I haven't worn in years, some even have shoulder pads! T-shirts with stains, pants that never did fit well but every time I open the door to do that, I close it again and go do something else. The moment is going to hit me, though, when I'm ready to tackle that.

Tuesday Trivia at Corfu last Tuesday was a lot of fun. I think the next Trivia night will be April 24th. I'm really enjoying this a lot and you guys need to come out and try it. It starts at 6:30 and they have wine, beer and great food. Here's a question for you: Which five of the eight listed sports will be included in the next Olympic Games: Baseball, Golf, Surfing, LaCrosse, Karate, Sportclimbing, Cricket, Skateboarding. Answer: Baseball, Surfing, Karate, Sportclimbing and Skateboarding.

Spring is a great time to walk Sierra Madre... flowers abound and bees and hummingbirds. And you might even see a splendid rock garden like the one my neighbor, Javier has put together.

FOOTHILL GOLD LINE UPDATE: UTILITY WORK HAS BEGUN

In just over a month, the Request for Proposals (RFP) will be sent out to the final four shortlisted design-build teams vying for the Glendora to Montclair project. As you know, an Industry Review draft of the procurement and engineering documents were distributed to the teams and project partners earlier this year for review and comment. As the Construction Authority finalizes the RFP, which provides the competing teams all information necessary to bid the job, the Construction Authority continues to refine the information and add details that reduce unknowns that lead to risk money being added to the bids. An example of that effort (photo below, right) is work underway this week at Indian Hill Boulevard in Claremont. Geotechnical experts are out in the field documenting the soil characteristics in the area where a grade-separation will be built in the coming years.

Also in advance of the design-build contract, W.A. Rasic Construction last week began construction for the strategic utility relocation effort. After several months of preparation, including pulling permits from several corridor cities and third parties, the first site to be worked on was in the City of La Verne (photo above, left). Crews re-routed a water line, eliminating use of the portion of the line that crossed the railroad corridor.

Over the next few months, as the Construction Authority completes the procurement for the design-build contract, ten other similar utilities sites will be relocated or protected in place to prepare for major construction to begin.

JUST FOR BEST FRIENDS THE MYTHICAL, MYSTICAL, MAGICAL OWL

I so enjoy observing the wildlife that resides in and around Sierra Madre, and I adore hearing the musical sounds of birds echoing through the air. I especially love hearing the audacious calls that come from the enormous birds of prey living among us. In fact, when I hear the unique, low-tone hooting of an owl, I feel a sense of inner warmth that is hard to describe. Just knowing that owls nest in the trees close to where I live brings comfort to me. We are truly blessed with nature's goodness in our hillside village!

I once read an article entitled Homeless Owls Need Homes, Too, about a project that provides alternative habitation for owls rendered homeless due to development in the San Gabriel Valley. I contacted the author, Steve Scauzillo to ask him a few questions about our local owls, and he was quick to admit that he is not an owl expert. His column covers a variety of issues and concerns regarding the environment, and this particular article happened to be about owls. He suggested that I call Kimball Garrett at the LA Museum of Natural History, who really is an expert on owls, so I reached out to Kimball.

Kimball Garrett was more than willing to share what he knows about the owls that inhabit our foothills. Apparently there are a few types that might be seen nesting in the local forest and in our village, but the ones we typically hear exuding resonant hooting back and forth to one another are Great Horned Owls (Bubo virginianus pacificus). He explained that this particular owl is more prominent in our parts because they are adaptable to changes in the environment, so they are able to find alternative nesting spots when preferred locations are no longer available.

Great Horned Owls prefer nesting in very tall trees, but when the tall trees go missing - which seems to be more of a trend now than ever in our town - the Great Horned Owl is wise enough to take up residence in lower lying canopies. Some will even nest in manmade boxes built on stilts where they are protected from predators, high winds and hard rains. Thus the importance of the alternative owl habitation project Steve Scauzillo wrote about.

Like all living things, owls play a very important part in keeping nature in balance. With this in mind, the next time you are tempted to complain about having too many rats running around on your property, let it be a reminder of how important the elder trees are. Big, tall trees provide a place where owls and other birds of prey can stay and help keep that rat population in check. That's why we should make it a priority to keep the trees on our property healthy and well-watered.

I had a remarkable experience with a couple of owls on the morning my dad passed away. I slept in a little later than usual that Saturday morning, so I was still lying in bed around 8am when I heard two owls calling out in unison, one slightly higher pitched than the other. They were so loud that the huge picture window on the north wall of the room seemed to vibrate. My husband was there to witness the experience, so I can rely on his confirmation when I share this story.

We both sat still, listening and amazed at how loud those owls were. They had to be very close, in the avocado tree in our yard. To me, having owls visit my property is a blessing, like nature's reward for being a good steward on behalf of the earth. I'm not a saint, but I do try my best to treat our planet with kindness by recycling, re-using, cleaning up trash and abstaining from the use of toxic chemicals. I also allow fallen leaves to remain where they lie, so they can return to the soil and nourish the trees and fauna they fell from. And when I am out walking, I tell the trees how much I appreciate them because I believe that respect toward every living thing is my duty as a human being.

When I heard those owls hooting so loudly near my window, I thought is sounded like some sort of heavenly choir singing a sacred hymn. About an hour passed and I was having coffee with my husband when we got the call from my family, telling us that my father had passed away earlier that morning. When I hung up, I sat for a while crying, trying to take it in. With such shocking news, the owls had left my thoughts until later that day when it dawned on me; my dad died at the same time I was lying in bed listening to the amazing sound of two owls hooting by my window, louder than I'd ever heard before.

There are many mysterious myths associated with the owl, passed down through the traditions of ancient peoples. One says that the owl is an omen of death soon-to-come. Another regards the owl as the bearer of the deceased soul as it passes from this world into the next. I'd never subscribed to mythical theories about animals before, but I must say that the experience I had on the morning my dad passed away made me think twice about whether those ancient legends might hold some truth.

One thing I know for sure is that I love the amazing birds of prey. I love them because of their beauty and elegance, their tenacity and their symbiotic relationship with nature. And I love the fact that they provide an excellent example to us humans through their loyal, familial way of living. They work very hard to overcome life's hurdles, just to survive in today's world where fast-paced development is so quickly stealing away the places where they used to stay. I thank God every day for this beautiful earth and all the creatures he placed on it, particularly the mythical, mystical, magical owl.

The very first pranayama to learn is called sama vritti, or equal wave breath. This means making inhale and exhale even, smooth and equal length. While this sounds simple enough, this can be challenging because people establish patterns in their breathing, favoring one over the other. The highly motivated, driven person typically has a stronger inhale. Healers, teachers and meditators find exhale to be easier. In this pure breathing (sama vritti) technique, it allows the scales to balance and both sides of the breath are addressed. The inhale Namaste, and Love, brings power and vitality, while exhale facilitates a Keely Totten, calming, restful, releasing response.

THE COUNTER, REVISITED PART 4

Over the last year there are two restaurants which I reviewed that I left scratching my head. It was my initial visit to each, and maybe it is intuition or too many Twilight Zone episodes, but I could not escape a feeling that something more was going on at these restaurants. I hate to admit it, but sometimes I may just concentrate on enjoying my meal too much and only give a cursory once over to the restaurant. Even when I am at the height of awareness it is often necessary to make a second visit to fully appreciate a restaurant. One of the restaurants that has haunted me is Malbec, on Green Street. The other is the topic of today's conversation, The Counter, on Shoppers Lane, in Pasadena. It's has been a year since my last visit to The Counter. So, when my race track buddy Jon Davenport asked if I wanted to go to The Counter for lunch, I accepted with a sharpened pencil

I enjoyed my last experience at The Counter, but I don't think that after my initial review the owners would be booking a limo for this return trip.

The Counter Restaurant has been open for over eight years in Pasadena. The Pasadena located is in the Old Indian Restaurant, Raddika's. You will not be confused in the slightest because the layout of The Counter is entirely different. Guess what, you may be surprised, but there really is no counter, Jon, bravely offered that the bar was the counter, but I thought it looked like, you guessed it,... a bar. We sat at the counter and were treated to some real stellar service from Steve( I think) an aspiring student at PCC.

We started off our meal with the French fries, shoestrings fries for $7, I have had worse. Jon was pleased with them and thought they were good. These fries are cooked in a French fry style. Ok, let's move past the appetizers and on to the main course. The Counter gives you the option of build your own burger, or you can create your own from the menu. I determined to fly the coop on this trip and go with the Bison Burger, a 1/3 lb for ($16). I doctored it up with mustard and green Ortega chilies. I thought it was well prepared. Jon had the Old School ($10.50). This is an All-Natural ground beef burger, cover in a rich slice of Tillamook Cheese that warmly ripples over the top. It is completed with a leaf of lettuce, an onion, a pickle and a splendid red radish sauce.

Now, I partook of a less daring adventure at The Counter, but I recommend you try the burger. Grab a sheet and start checking off what you'd like from the menu, begin with step #1 and finish with step #4. A convenient way to engineer your own beautiful burger, it is a little more expensive but you get it your way.

Jon and I give the experience two forks up. It was nice to get another opinion, just to make certain that I have not lost the old character of palate. The Counter 140 S. Shoppers Ln., Pasadena. www. thecounterburger.com

THE GOOD LIFE

IS YOUR BLOOD PRESSURE TOO HIGH?

Dear Savvy Senior,

What numbers constitute high blood pressure? I use to be pre-hypertensive, but they keep changing the guidelines, so I'm not sure where I fit in now.

Approaching 60

Dear Approaching,

If you're unsure what your blood pressure levels younger with risk factors for hypertension should should be, you're not alone. Recent changes in the hypertension guidelines made by the American Heart Association and the American College Cardiology mean that roughly 30 million more Americans than previously thought are now considered to have high blood pressure (hypertension).

According to the new guidelines, anyone with a blood pressure reading above 130/80 is considered to have high blood pressure.

between 120/80 and 139/89 would have been put in the prehypertension category and wouldn't have been considered hypertensive until they got to 140/90.

But the new guidelines eliminate the prehypertension category, putting everyone with 120 and 129 and a diastolic reading (bottom medication, regardless of age, plus lifestyle number) below 80 in a new "elevated" category. changes. And those with a reading of 130/80 or higher fall rundown of the new five category blood pressure ranges:

- Normal: A top number less than 120 and a bottom number less than 80.
- Elevated: A top number between 120 and 129, and a bottom number less than 80.
- Stage 1: A top number between 130 and 139, or a bottom number between 80 and 89.
- bottom number of 90 or higher.
- Hypertensive crisis: A top number over 180 or a bottom number over 120.

Get Checked

Millions of Americans with high blood pressure don't know they have it because it usually has no outward signs or symptoms. But high blood pressure, over time, can damage your arteries and increase your risk for heart disease, stroke, kidney damage and even dementia. To guard against get their blood pressure checked at least once a

If you find that your blood pressure numbers fall in the "elevated" category, you should take steps now to get it under control. Lifestyle changes like eating a healthy diet, losing weight, exercising, watching your salt intake, quitting smoking, and cutting back on alcohol is often all you need to get it back to normal.

Even if your blood pressure numbers are Previously, those with a blood pressure reading in the "stage 1" category, lifestyle changes are recommended first, unless you've had a heart attack or stroke, or you're at high risk for cardiovascular problems because you smoke, have high cholesterol or type 2 diabetes. Then medications may be prescribed.

But if your blood pressure falls in the "stage systolic pressure readings (top number) between 2" or higher category, the new guidelines suggest changes.

There are several different kinds of drugs in some stage of hypertension. Here's a complete used to lower blood pressure. It usually makes sense to start with the oldest, safest, and least expensive drug: diuretics, or water pills, such as chlorthalidone or hydrochlorothiazide. But these meds can drive up blood sugar levels, so if you have type 2 diabetes or are at risk of it, your doctor may prescribe another drug, such as an ACE inhibitor, ARB or calcium channel blocker.

You should also be aware that blood pressure • Stage 2: A top number of 140 or higher, or a drugs could cause side effects including dizziness, gastrointestinal problems, fatigue and headaches. They can also cause a decline in kidney function so make sure your doctor periodically monitors your potassium levels.

KATIE Tse ......This and That

TINY BUBBLES

This is an article that I wrote several years ago, before we were thrust into the brave new world of Common Core and computerized "smart" tests. I hope you enjoy this quaint look at what standardized state testing used to be like.

Spring is here! Blossoms perfume the air as I walk through our beautiful town. While this season is a time for celebrating nature's rebirth, it comes with the ominous raincloud national security. of Standardized Testing! I feel sorry for high school students facing this academic adversary; it seems like the competition grows fiercer every year. When I was in high school I had a healthy concern about the test, but I didn't give myself an ulcer signing up for tutoring or pouring over SAT study guides (okay, I bought one, but I didn't pour over it). What did strike fear in my heart was the dreaded GRE (Graduate Record Examination) which I had to pass in order to enter grad school. If you haven't had the pleasure, the GRE is sort of like the SAT on steroids.

I've tried to repress memories of this daunting experience, but I still recall the practice CD Rom with its algebraic equations and writing prompts such as "defend or refute the use of trade embargoes." I frantically typed while watching a red time clock tick down (because a test is always scarier if it's timed!). I wondered what any of this had to do with my future in Health and Human Services. All's well that ends well, I think that CD eventually found its way into a celebratory bonfire.

If you have elementary school kids you've probably received newsletters alerting you to the upcoming crucial week(s) of standardized state testing. Make sure they're well rested, fed, and at school on time! When I was a student my teachers always stressed having a good breakfast on testing days, but I never felt any smarter for it. The truth is, however, that it's the teachers who are really stressed out over these fateful booklets (Ha! Booklets! How 20th century!). API (Academic Performance Index), which in turn can taint the district's AYP (Adequate Yearly Progress) report. Next thing you know, home values drop because the neighboring city's kids did better on this one test, taken one week, targeting what is sometimes a very narrow range of skills. Since this test is of supreme importance, it used to require teachers to sign a statement testifying that they'd been trained in the handling of test booklets. Every day after school, the booklets were collected and locked in bins in a secure location (I kid you not!). Of course these days it's all online, so schools don't need to reinvent Fort Knox on their campuses. Children's work was stowed away with the same level of protection given to documents of

Considering the magnitude of this exam, it is understandable that teachers were tempted to become irate when students casually flipped over reading sections, filled in random bubbles, and turned in a seven-page exam after three minutes. While we all hope our kiddos will put their best effort into this ordeal, you can't help but understand why some kids burn out after hours of math, science, writing, and reading about gripping topics such as mural artists and memoirs of a childhood in England during the Industrial Revolution.

One of my Mom's teacher friends is fond of telling about one of her students (nearing middle age by now) who spent a considerable amount of time on his test before turning in an answer sheet with all the "B's" bubbled in except the last item, which was blank. When she asked why he didn't fill in that one he said, "I didn't know the answer." Seriously, you can't make this One careless kid can swing the school's whole stuff up! Moral of the story: sleep well, eat a good breakfast, and color in a variety of letters (or, these days, click on a variety of answers).

NASA'S JUNO MISSION PROVIDES INFRARED TOUR OF JUPITER'S NORTH POLE

Scientists working on NASA's Juno mission to Jupiter shared a 3-D infrared movie depicting densely packed cyclones and anticyclones that permeate the planet's polar regions, and the first detailed view of a dynamo, or engine, powering the magnetic field for any planet beyond Earth.

Juno mission scientists have taken data collected by the spacecraft's Jovian InfraRed Auroral Mapper (JIRAM) instrument and generated the 3-D flyaround of the Jovian world's north pole. Imaging in the infrared part of the spectrum, JIRAM captures light emerging from deep inside Jupiter equally well, night or day. The instrument probes the weather layer down to 30 to 45 miles below Jupiter's cloud tops. The imagery will help the team understand the forces at work in the animation—a north pole dominated by a central cyclone surrounded by eight circumpolar cyclones with diameters ranging from 2,500 to 2,900 miles.

"Before Juno, we could only guess what Jupiter's poles would look like," said Alberto Adriani, Juno co-investigator from the Institute for Space Astrophysics and Planetology, Rome. "Now, with Juno flying over the poles at a close distance it permits the collection of infrared imagery on Jupiter's polar weather patterns and its massive cyclones in unprecedented spatial resolution."

NASA/JPL-Caltech/SwRI/ASI/INAF/JIRAM

Another Juno investigation was the team's latest pursuit of the interior composition of the gas giant.

"Prior to Juno, we could not distinguish between extreme models of Jupiter's interior rotation, which all fitted the data collected by Earth-based observations and other deep space missions," said Tristan Guillot, a Juno co-investigator from the Université Côte d'Azur, Nice, France. "But Juno is different—it orbits the planet from pole to pole and gets closer to Jupiter than any spacecraft ever before. Thanks to the amazing increase in accuracy brought by Juno's gravity data, we have essentially solved the issue of how Jupiter's interior rotates: The zones and belts that we see in the atmosphere rotating at different speeds extend to about 1,900 miles.

"At this point, hydrogen becomes conductive enough to be dragged into near-uniform rotation by the planet's powerful magnetic field."

The same data used to analyze Jupiter's rotation contain information on the planet's interior structure and composition. Not knowing the interior rotation was severely limiting the ability to probe the deep interior. "Now our work can really begin in earnest—determining the interior composition of the solar system's largest planet," said Guillot.

beginning to discover hints on how Jupiter's interior dynamo works.

Juno is only about one-third of the way through its planned mapping mission and already we are Juno has logged nearly 122 million miles to complete 11 science passes since entering Jupiter's orbit on July 4, 2016. Juno's 12th science pass will be on May 24.

CHRISTOPHER Nyerges PLANTS GONE WILD

[Nyerges is the author of "Nuts and Berries of California," and several foraging books. Information about his books and classes is available at www.SchoolofSelf-Reliance, or Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CA 90041.]

In my "Nuts and Berries of California" book, I describe native nuts and berries that have long histories of use by Native Americans throughout California and North America.

Many generations of rural Americans grew up collecting nuts and berries as a family tradition: going out to collect black walnuts, hickory nuts, pine nuts, blackberries, wild strawberries, and other foods from the forest. These are some of the foods that people from just a few generations ago took for granted.

I also include many of the introduced ornamental plants in my book which seem to have firmly established themselves in California. They are not natives, but they are everywhere anyway.

I wondered, what should we call these plants? We thought of calling them FUN plants, for "Feral Urban Neighborhood" plants, but that seemed to convey a misleading message, that introducing nonnatives is somehow fun or good or desirable.

HIP VS. "hip"

HIP seems to be the best term, for Horticulturally Introduced Plants. The thing is, when these introduced exotics were planted, it was often because the gurus of horticulture of the day were pronouncing them as the greatest new thing since sliced bread. Grow these bushes and trees and you too will be hip! Really! And lots of people fell for that idea. This is the "in" plant to grow this season, and then yards and backyards fill up with new "hip" plants with great colors and much to talk about at dinner parties. Sometimes the new hip and HIP plants are edible and useful, sometimes not - as in the case of oleanders.

And just like the idol-worshippers who adore the newest rock star of the season, when a new one comes around, the old one is forgotten. Maybe forgotten, but all the HIP "hip" plants are still here, about many of these individually.

hip or not, and often they expand their habitat into

And since we're calling these plants HIP, it's worth commenting on the "rose hip," which is the common way of referring to the fruit of a rose. I am not sure how the term "hip" came to mean fruit, but one theory is that the ovary of the flower become the fruit, and the enlarged fruit might seem visually similar to a woman's hips. Hmmmm. If that were the case, why isn't every fruit called a hip?

Regardless, the rose is one of the unique plants in this book since there is a native rose (and so we included it with the native plants) but there are also many HIP roses. HIP roses are probably in everyone's yard, which are the commercial hybrids with multiple petals of all hues of the rainbow. Our wild rose is not a HIP!

The plants in the HIP section of my book are not what we'd call "wild" plants. These are bushes and trees that have been widely planted for landscaping, street, or yard trees, which sometimes survive well when they are no longer tended. All of these are commonly used as ornamentals, though the fruits are typically allowed to fall to the grown and then discarded as if they were just trash.

I have observed every one of these plants in wilderness areas where cabins once existed. After the cabins were destroyed by fires or floods, these plants survived for years and decades with no human intervention. These are survivors. And, that means that if we grow these plants, they can provide us with food with very little work and care. Furthermore, they are probably already growing in or near your neighborhood, just waiting for you to discover and to appreciate them.

Some cultivated plants, which can also survive on their own, are just so common that we decided not to try to include all of them. Such as citrus, for example.

Rather, we're including many of the ornamentals which are common, but are either not commonly known, and not commonly used for food. They are HIP, but not necessarily hip... Some of the very common HIP plants included in the book are ficus trees (figs), loquats, mulberries, pyracantha, olives, ginkgo, and others.

giggles and sticks her icy nose into my life.

so long, but not as long as it's been this year. Either like my wife. I'm getting old and cannot remember or this has been a very long winter. Shivering is not my favorite activity, although it's the only activity I get to do

The Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and I were talking; rather she was talking and I was listening. That is what makes us a great pair. She talks, I listen and our world goes rolling on.

What she was talking about was summer. "When," she asked, "will summer really get here?"

Of course, we can look at the calendar and pick out a date when summer is going to get here, but it is like playing the lottery, which I believe is rigged. I think picking the date of summer is rigged as well. I like to know who has rigged it because I would like to give them a piece of my wife's mind.

We talked a little bit about summer coming, when it is going to come and what we are going to do when summer actually gets here. She had a long list of activities she was anxious to jump into. Unfortunately for me, most of those activities were visiting thrift stores.

I often wonder why they are called "thrift" stores. When my wife goes, thriftiness goes out the window. She can bargain Scrooge out of his last dollar.

I know this and she was talking about the upcoming summer that her eyes were twinkling which meant only one thing. "Thrift stores, here I come."

Unfortunately, we did not solve the problem concerning the weather. If you think about it, the weatherman who is paid to predict the weather cannot predict the weather accurately. Oh, for a job like that.

Soon the wife had to get up and do something in her craft room. I do not know what is in that craft room. I do not go in for fear of my life. She is very crafty and I am not going to second-guess anything in that room.

When she left I got to thinking about the upcoming summer. What in the world can we do to hurry summer along?

If it were up to me, winter would only be one month long and the rest of the time it would be summer. That is how I would parse things out. As you know, Mrs. Winter has a domineering spirit and wants to be here all the time, even when she is not As I was thinking about this, I thought there must be some way we can trick Mr. Summer into coming earlier. After all, everybody can be tricked com.

Just when you think summer has come, winter into something, whether they like it or not. I know I've been tricked into many things and it's hard to Not being much of a fan of winter I can stand it for untrick yourself when you get tricked by someone > Surely there something we can do to scam summer into coming a little earlier. I am sure Mr. Summer has its weaknesses like the rest of us. Our problem is to try to find that weakness. Once you find the weakness, then you are in control.

I thought of a few things but nothing seemed to stick in my mind. I am not used to thinking on my own and I was a little fearful of pulling in the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage to this "Think Fank" on an early summer.

Then a thought hit me. When I got up off the ground, for I am not accustomed for a thought to hit me, I sat back in my chair and smiled very broadly. I think I know what we can do. I believe I know how to trick good old Mr. Summer.

Everybody is really invested in themselves to some degree. The same can be said for Mr. Summer. Why not convince him that he is not needed anymore in

Get up in the morning when it's very cold, put on a coat, go outside and dance and sing and just enjoy the coldness of the weather. Maybe one song we could sing is, "I Don't Need Summer Anymore." Just pretend that we love the cold and the colder it is, the more we love it.

I don't think it would take long for Mr. Summer to get jealous of Mrs. Winter and want to come back as soon as he can. Nobody likes to be out flagged on anything particularly in this category.

I was sitting in my chair with a smile all over my face and my wife came in and said, "Why are you

"I was just thinking," I said, "how nice it is on such a cold winter day to spend the time indoors with

She smiled and went back to her craft room. I guess it really does work. I thought of one of my favorite Bible verses. "The Lord is not slow to fulfill his promise as some count slowness, but is patient toward you, not wishing that any should perish, but that all should reach repentance" (2 Peter 3:9).

Even though I am very impatient about many things, like Mr. Summer, I am so thankful that God is patient toward me in all things.

The median list price is $839,000

The Market Action Index has been trending down lately, while inventory is climbing. These trends imply a weakening market.

Supply and Demand

Market appears to have begun to cool. As we're still notably in the Seller's zone, prices have not yet adjusted. If the market continues to cool, then expect prices to follow lower. It may take a few more weeks of slack demand for prices to reflect and begin to fall. Expect this condition if the index falls to the Buyer's zone.

The Market Action Index answers the question "How's the Market?" by measuring the current rate of sale versus the amount of the inventory. Index above 30 implies Seller's Market conditions. Below 30, conditions favor the buyer.

This Week in Monrovia

We are relatively close to the market's highwater mark. Watch for persistent downward shift in the Market Action Index into the Buyer's zone as a leading indicator of the price strength subsiding.

JUSTICE FOR HOMICIDE VICTIMS' 34TH MEMORIAL AND A BRAVE MOTHER'S MISSION

By Joan Schmidt

Recently Bob and I met the bravest woman in the world, Ana Estevez, who suffered horrific pain- the death of her beloved son, Piqui at the hands of his father. What was so upsetting and mind-boggling was this tragedy DIDN'T have to happen. There were so many red flags, ignored by social services and judges.

Ana began telling us it's so difficult just to get out of bed and get started, but felt "deeply honored to be here", and had the "most heartfelt thank you to Chief Johnson, and Detectives Boisvert and Aguilera who brought my boy home".

In 2006, Ana thought she met the man of her dreams, Aramazd Andressian; they dated and were married eight years and seven months. Half of that time she was praying for a child and suffered five miscarriages. On February 19, 2012, her son Piqui was born and she had such a sense of love and joy. On April 21, 1917, her nightmare began. Her ex-husband suffocated their son who was 5 years, 2 months and 2 days old.

bestowed on a person. My son was my world...a gifted child. By four, he could add and subtract, recognize letters of the alphabet. He was passionate about baking; on holidays, baked and decorated cupcakes...he had a vivid imagination...liked role playing...had his own puppet show, so full of love and brought joy to all who knew him."

On Piqui's 4th birthday, Ana told her husband she wanted a divorce. She and her son had suffered. Piqui would return with bruises after weekends with his father and had been threatened. These were reported, but nothing done. Piqui described the abuse but Ana was told, "it wasn't enough to change custody". (Ana and Piqui's father had shared custody) Also in December 2016, a family judge was given evidence of horrible behavior but denied a custody change. On April 12-13, in court, a judge was told Piqui was afraid of his father, but once again, evidence ignored and his father still had joint custody. Eight days later Piqui was dead.

There was not a dry eye during Ana's story. She now is part of Justice for Homicide Victims and her mission is to help others; Piqui would want this.

Yesterday was the 34th Memorial, and it was so beautiful, but heart-wrenching. Jane Bouffard, President of Homicide Victims Memorial Foundation and husband Bill, President, Justice for Homicide Victims (JHV) welcomed us. In addition to Ana, Rose Madsen Ana said "Motherhood is the greatest blessing spoke about surviving her daughter's murder. Two awesome kids spoke, Joseph, 12 yrs., Nathalia, 9; they are a part of for JHV family and help at various functions. Both lost their fathers at an early age.

Also attending were LaWanda Hawkins, who founded Justice for Murder Children. (Her son Reginald was murdered.) Former Sheriff Lee Baca came, and many survivors sought him after the Memorial. Many survivors will speak of his great compassion and support. Baca held the 1st Crime Victims Summit in 2013; there I met Marsella Leach, one of JHV's founders, and the doves and balloons with special messages were late Mickey's Thompson's sister Colleen. It was a great released. Survivors lit a candle for loved ones and said honor to meet Alex Dunne, son of Ellen, other JHV founder. Past Monrovia Mayor Mary Ann and Corey justiceforhomicidevictims.com

Lutz attended.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

SUCCESSION PLANNING WHEN NOT ALL OF YOUR KIDS ARE IN THE FAMILY BUSINESS

Owning your own business can be a great endeavor that takes a lot of passion and drive. Many small business owners focus on the dayto-day management and growth of the business, rather than thinking about a time when he or she may not be in the business. This is a far too common mistake. Future plans for your enterprise are even more important when one child works in the business but the others do not. Keeping the peace among your children after you are no longer able to participate in the business requires careful balancing of your estate plan.

Planning Ahead

Before considering whether or not to pass your business to the next generation -- as opposed to selling it to a third party -- make sure at least one of your children is capable of (and willing to) running the company. Once that has been established, then early planning is the next step in ensuring the best outcome. Ideally, succession planning should start at least five years before you decide to retire. And because life is unpredictable -- you may become incapacitated or pass away without warning -- the best time to start planning is now. There are several things to consider when planning for your small business if not all of your children are involved. It is important to keep in mind that treating your children fairly does not necessarily mean you will treat them equally when 626.587.3058 or visit www.GarlettLaw.com for it comes to your estate planning. For this reason, more information.

being proactive will make sure your desires will be followed even after you can no longer run your

Factors to Consider

First, minimizing the risk of conflict among your children once you are gone requires a mindful weighing of your estate, your successor trustee, and other aspects of your estate plan to ensure your wishes are recorded and can be easily Second, you must consider the value of the business as well as control and management issues. This can be done by clearly identifying the roles and responsibilities of your successor in a written plan. Third, if you have a sizeable estate, there are financial strategies that a knowledgeable estate planning professional can use to equalize distributions. This can also be done with other assets such as IRAs, 401(k)s, investment real estate, life insurance, as well as stocks, bonds, and/ or mutual funds.

Finally, an estate planning professional can analyze how the business is capitalized in order to ensure your estate plan is fair when it comes to your children -- whatever you consider fair to be in your particular circumstance. Notably, how a person's business is organized has a direct effect on how it is treated, taxed, and administered upon his or her death.

Don't Leave It To Chance

Ignoring or delaying estate planning for your small business is not financially prudent. As a successful business owner who already has the next generation involved in the company, you must take charge of the future so that the fruit of your hard work can continue on. More important, clearly writing down your desires will help keep your family from bickering -- a likely result if you just leave the business's future to chance. Give us a call today, so we can craft an estate plan that will allow your business to continue to thrive for generations to come.

WHO ARE THE GIVERS & TAKERS IN YOUR LIFE?

For entrepreneurs it is very helpful to identify individuals involved in your life as either a help or a hinderance to your progress and success. It important to distinguish those who in your circle who are truly supportive, in contrast to people who are simple involved with you to benefit from what they may be able to get from you. Entrepreneurs have enough burden to bear without taking on the load of providing benefits to people lurking on the sidelines to extract what they can for themselves, without making some type of reciprocal contribution.

The ability to distinguish givers from takers is great starting point for entrepreneurs to protect themselves from these parasites. Several years ago was introduced to a simple exercise that has made it easy for me to identify and categorize the "givers" and "takers" in my life. These are the individuals who I have some level of personal interaction with on an ongoing or routine basis. The nature of the relationships or interactions place me in a potential position of vulnerability if I am not crystal clear about the intentions of those who may have the greatest impact on my progress and success.

I'll refer to the exercise as the "List of Givers &

Step #1: Take a hard copy or digital pad and three columns. Make the first column to the left the widest, and the other two need to be large enough to place a checkmark ( $\checkmark$ ).

Step #2: In the first column, list the name of everyone in your life with whom you have close contact, ongoing involvement or routine affiliation. These individuals may be spouses, family, other loved ones, friends, business associates or anyone

Step #3: Place the following headings in columns 2 and 3, respectively: Givers, Takers

Step #4: After completing Step 1 thru 3, starting from the top of the list, go through without hesitation and being honest with yourself, place a checkmark in the "Giver" or "Taker" column next to the name of each person on your list. This checkmark must be based on the actual dynamic that individual has with you, not based on how much you love, respect or enjoy the company of the person.

Do they sometimes pick up the tab on a lunch outing? ... likely a giver. Are they the ones that show up at the family potluck with a car full of people, yet bring three liters of soda from the Dollar Store and empty containers to take leftovers home? .. probably a taker. Perhaps it's a business colleague who has benefited professionally or financially from your business referrals, but has never provided a referral that has resulted in any measurable benefit to you ... probably a taker.

Hopefully this exercise will provide a level of clarity and awakening for you as it did for me the first time I did it. This exercise is now an annual ritual with me, and not surprisingly, it helps me to identify those with whom I choose to truly have in draw two vertical lines down the middle to create my circle. By identifying the Givers, I am able to collaborate, partner and share ideas and resources with the relief that it will be reciprocated at some point in our dealings with each other.

Also, I continue to interact with, be cordial, and even spend time socially with some of the Takers on my list, but I've also quietly and without fanfare, eliminated them from involvement in anything that has to do with my professional or business you consider to be important in your life due to endeavors – unless of course, it's clear there is something for me to take, up front.

TAX-TIME Q&A

The tax season is upon us. I'm no CPA, but let me offer advice and consolation to my fellow taxpayers.

Q. Dear Tom: My CPA told me that a tax bracket is a heavy, metal object that the government uses to hit you over the head every time you succeed in pushing your income up. Can you elaborate? - Annoyed in Minnesota

A. Dear Annoyed: Your CPA is correct! There is one silver lining, however. The recent tax-reform bill includes six brackets that run between 10 percent and 37 percent, but there is no tax on the first $9,525 in income, and the standard deduction almost doubles, from $6,350 to $12,000 for single filers, and from $12,700 to $24,000 for married couples who file jointly. If you have a middle-class income, you've likely seen a nice little bump in take-home pay. But taxes are still high, as the next question will reveal!

Q. Dear Tom: Like you, I contracted my writing services to a big technology firm last year. Well, I received my first 1099 and the taxes I owe are way more than I planned for. Why are my taxes so high? - Desperate in Des Moines

A. Dear Desperate: The short answer is FICA, the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. It requires you to make contributions to Social Security and Medicare. The 7.65-percent contribution rate combines the rates for Social Security (6.2 percent) and Medicare (1.45 percent). When you were an employee, your employer paid half of your FICA bill. As a self-employed person, you must pay both halves on your first $127,000 in income - a whopping 15.3 percent, which is nearly $20,000!

Q. Dear Tom: Despite the considerable taxes we pay, why the heck does the federal government spend billions more than it takes in? - Concerned in Connecticut

A. Dear Concerned: Regrettably, there continues to be a lack of seriousness about budget deficits. According to usdebtclock.org , we have $21 trillion in debt right now. We are poised to resume trillion-dollar deficits in a few years. That's partly due to reckless spending, as demonstrated by the budget Republicans just pushed through. But as the Hoover Institution argued in a recent Washington Post op-ed, it also has to do with entitlement spending. As baby boomers retire, Medicare and Social Security are poised to explode. Hoover says we must reform and restrain the growth of entitlement spending.

Q. Dear Tom: I thought it was Republican tax cuts that are causing the deficit to worsen? - Tax the Rich

A. Dear Tax: Some argue that point. Former Federal Reserve chair Janet Yellen and four other economists penned a Washington Post op-ed in response to the Hoover Institution op-ed. They say tax cuts and unfunded wars, not entitlement spending, are the biggest culprits in our budget woes. However, the Congressional Budget Office says the tax cuts will boost economic growth and create 1.1 million jobs over the next decade, which will generate increased tax receipts. It's a complicated

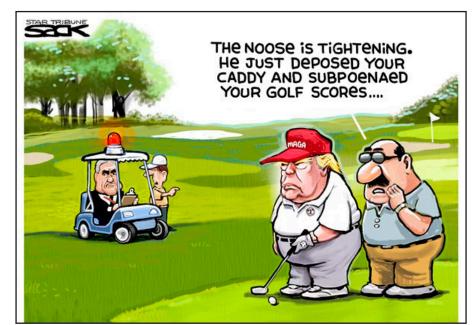

Q. Dear Tom: Let me get this right. After Republicans cut taxes and increased spending, now they are trying to push through a balanced-budget amendment? -Incredulous in Indiana

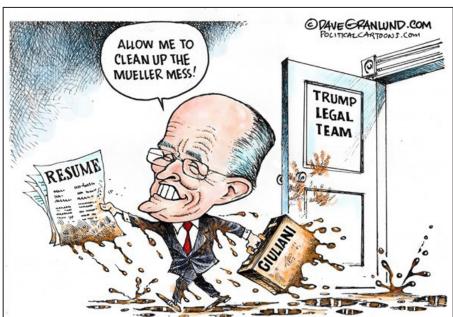

A. Dear Incredulous: As of this writing, House Republicans planned to vote on a balanced-budget amendment. The Washington Post said it has no chance of passing because it would require Democratic support in the Senate, followed by ratification by three-fourths of the states within seven years.

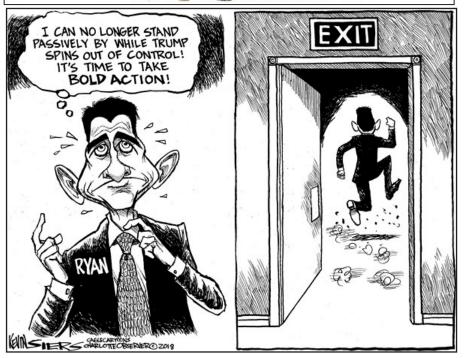

Q. Dear Tom: All this talk about taxes, debts and deficits is making my head hurt. Can we change the subject to something less complex? - Hurting in Houston

A. Dear Houston: Absolutely. I will now accept questions about the many conflicts in the Middle East.

NO, I DON'T HATE CONSERVATIVES. I DISAGREE WITH THEM

Not too long ago, anonymous commenter on one of my columns concluded that I took my stance on a particular issue because I "hate conservatives.'

A couple of days later, a progressive friend who wanted to warn me about a hateful tweet aimed at a Muslim lobbying day at the Pennsylvania Capitol, jokingly observed that she tried to keep her feed "a happy bubble of the like-minded" but this one had slipped through.

These two incidents speak volumes about where we are as a country these days. We're deeply entrenched in our own worldviews, taking comfort among those who agree with us, and peering cautiously over the battlements at those who believe differently from ourselves.

The schism is years in the making. But it feels more pronounced now in a time where bias confirmation is king, and whole communities of the like-minded (on the left and right) are no further than a click away.

An October 2017 Pew poll found fewer Americans, in the time of peak Trump, harbor a mix of conservative and liberal viewpoints than they did during the Bush

Overall, not quite a third of Americans (32 percent) now take a roughly equal number of conservative and liberal positions, that's down from 38 percent in 2015, and off the cliff from the 49 percent who did in 1994 and 2004, Pew pollsters

"Reflecting growing partisan gaps across most of the individual questions in the scale - even those where both parties have shifted in the same direction," Pew pollsters concluded. "Republicans and Democrats are now further apart ideologically than at any point in more than two decades."

I've written at length about the breakdown in our culture when it comes to agreement on the basic facts that underlie our political debates, and the corrosive effect that social media has on our shared dialogue.

And now that we know that foreign agents were actively working to inject misinformation into the 2016 campaign, maybe that breakdown is more easily explained. Though it's no less unsettling.

Still, in the five-plus years since I made the jump from being a political beat reporter to an opinion columnist and editorial writer, I've been struck by this notion, harbored by some (on the left and right alike) that it's no longer enough to merely disagree with someone, you have to "hate" them as well. The premise that I hate conservatives is laughable on its face. And though It feels ridiculous to even have to say it loud, I'll say it anyway: "No, I don't hate conservatives, I disagree with them."

That's because hating someone requires you to actually know them. And I have too many friends from across the spectrum for that ever to be the case.

Yes, my conservative friends and I disagree on matters of policy. And, yes, we debate those policy points vigorously. But we're just as likely to kick back on our bar stools and talk about shared interests in film, music, books, baseball and, oh yeah, our children and families.

One of the great perks of my job as an opinion page editor is that I get to read and publish - some of the best opinion journalism from all across the political spectrum.

Sometimes, the stances taken by the writers I publish drive me absolutely batty. Sometimes, they make smile or move me. But I always come away having learned something new, my horizons expanded.

Yet, here we are, with some of us claiming that we "hate" people we've never met simply because we disagree on politics, which, as has been observed time and again, isn't for the faint of heart.

Disagreements about politics have been with us since Pericles.

Still, they can be healthy because the right kind of disagreement results in the kind of compromise that makes for good policy and law. The my-way or the highway that colors our politics right now isn't the way forward.

The encouraging thing is that potential solution - actual knowledge - lies no further away than the newsstand, your public library, laptop or your mobile phone.

All you have to do is reach out for it and make an honest effort to engage in ideas different from your own. It's no further away than an earnest conversation with someone who disagrees with you. It requires you to actually listen, but the hard work is worth it.

It's always worth it.

THE SAD STATE OF MY CALIFORNIA

You don't want to live in my state.

Sure, it's beautiful. The weather is great. And most people who live here are nice. good, successful, talented, smart - except when it comes to politics and voting.

That's when a majority of Californians fall somewhere between crazy and

For several decades the liberal Democrats that my fellow Californians keep electing to state and local offices have done their best to turn our paradise into Hell for conservatives.

Everyone knows about our criminally high taxes, idiotic environmental regulations, fiscal irresponsibility, unsolvable homeless problem and our Welcome Wagon policy toward illegal immigrants.

Lately we've created sanctuary cities and become a sanctuary state.

But the stupidity of our liberal politicians is infinite, as the supervisors of Los Angeles County proved earlier this month when they approved a $550,000 pilot program to deal with the local homeless crisis.

Proposing a solution that could only have been dreamed up in La-La Land, the county wants to pay homeowners like me to let homeless people live in our backyards.

Not in colorful tents and sleeping bags. In cozy new tiny houses or refurbished garden sheds and converted garages.

I think I'll pass on the idea, without trying to make a NIMBY joke.

But I'm sure all of my goodhearted, Hillary-loving, BMW-driving neighbors will be signing up to make the county's pilot program a big success.

Keeping a homeless person in your backyard like a pet is the kind of solution you get from government when you live in a one-party state run by Democrats.

Unfortunately, because of a dumb constitutional amendment approved by 53.7 percent of our voters in 2010, the future of Republicans and conservatives out here looks grim.

Most people east of the Hollywood Sign have never heard of California Proposition 14, a.k.a. the Top-Two Primaries It's a long shot, but crazy things can hap-Amendment, and have no idea how much damage it did to our state's politi-

MAKING SENSE by

MICHAEL REAGAN cal system. Prop 14 was an amendment that established a type of primary election in which all of the candidates for a specific statewide office like governor or the U.S.

Senate - whether they are Democrats, Republicans, Libertarians, Communists, etc. -- are listed together on the same primary ballot.

The top two vote-getters - even if both are Democrats or Communists - are the only candidates that advance to the general election in the fall.

Though Prop 14 sounds like it was imported from Venezuela or Cuba, it was supported by the likes of Arnold Schwarzenegger and big liberal newspapers like the LA Times.

But the major political parties, the ACLU and anyone with half a political brain saw the phony reform for the disaster it has become.

Opponents charged that Prop 14 was designed to limit voter choice, which it

They knew it would often result in two candidates from the same party facing off in general elections, which it has.

Given the Democrat Party's large plurality in California, in the fall that we usually have two Democrats running for U.S. Senator, two Democrats running for governor and two Democrats running for many U.S. House seats or state legislative offices. The politics of my beautiful state today are rigged and Republicans have become an endangered species.

A Republican's vote no longer counts. The state GOP doesn't really exist.

And a conservative candidate for dog catcher has to be a billionaire because she'll get no money from the Republican National Committee or anyone else.

California's only hope for a better future is that things will get so bad there's a huge backlash that produces a political miracle in 2020 like the one that put Donald Trump in the White House.
