In a nutshell, the City is now importing more than 50% of its water to meet consumption their voices heard with complaints billing structure. In addition, focus is needed for both short- and longterm infrastructure repairs as pipes are aging and leaks are becoming more prominent. The snag in adopting the current draft was the result over infrastructure concerns, which City Manager Gabriel Engeland referred to as in "crisis mode" despite $2.2 million put aside in the budget to combat the problem. Water loss in Sierra Madre is currently at 24%. It's demands. Residents have made a multi-generational fix that won't be resolved quickly by throwing a lot of about the complexity of the current money at it, according to Engeland. Mayor Pro Tem John Harabedian, who chimed in remotely, supported the City Manager's sentiments and suggested that we need a "bolder plan" to repair infrastructure concerns. Council Member John Capoccia also voiced concerns on how much of an increase in water rates would be acceptable to the community in much repairing would be tolerable at come back to the table with a revised version for adoption at a later date.

As of this meeting, the recommendation was to set July 24, 2018 at 9 a.m. for public tabulation of protests, and 6:30 p.m. for a public hearing on the matter at City Hall. With this delay, this date may change as well. A copy of the full study of Proposition 218 is

A CELEBRATION OF THE LIFE OF JOHN ROBINSON

The residents of Sierra Madre and all lovers of our San Gabriel Mountains are invited to congregate at Lizzie's Trail Inn and the adjacent Mount Wilson Trail Park on Saturday, June 2, from 10 a.m. to noon. We will be celebrating the life and achievements of John W. Robinson, educator, historian and author, who passed away on April 24.

Just as the Red Car and mountain resorts boosted our community from the 1890s through 1950, John was responsible for many of the nature-loving hikers and Robinson on Mt. Wilson Trail, 1996 campers passing through our foothill community. His many books and his participation in Dr. White's Hikes into History brought an awakening among a wide group of Southern Californians regarding our own treasure of the Sierra Madre—our mountains.

Bring your stories of John Robinson and meet with friends and fellow lovers of the best "backyard" in the San Gabriel Valley! There will be speakers, videos and displays. Docents will be at Lizzie's, and water and lemonade will be available. The event is coordinated by Dr. Bill White with generous support of the Sierra Madre Historical Preservation Society, the City of Sierra Madre, the Los Angeles Corral of the Westerners, and the Big Santa Anita Historical Society.

WALKING SIERRA MADRE... The Social Side By Deanne Davis

"You can't buy happiness, but you can buy books, and that's kind of the same thing."

"I have always imagined paradise as a kind of library." Jose Luis Borges

"Books are a uniquely portable magic." Stephen King

According to Wikipedia, Johannes Gutenberg developed, circa 1439, a printing system, adapting existing technologies to printing purposes. That changed the world. Time passed, more printed works were available, more people learned to read and eventually there were local libraries, like ours, sacred palaces filled with books of every kind. Then, glory of glories, those libraries took to having Used Book Sales. When we were young and first moved to Sierra Madre, we had lots of children, no money, and had just bought our house, a beautiful place, now 102 years old. Oldest daughter, Leah, and I had a common bond. We read. I don't mean we read now and then, I mean we READ! Usually two or three books at a time. In fact, twelve year old Leah never left the house without three books; the one she was reading, the one she planned to read next and one more just in case.

The Used Book Sales were a little slice of heaven for us. Arriving on the appointed day well in advance of the opening, we bought shopping bags filled with goodness knew what treasures for $1.00. Novels went for a dime or a quarter and we staggered away with delicious booty that kept us happy for weeks.

We, of course, used our Library with gay abandon, taking the limit of books every few days, wallowing in words. Leah got special permission from our Librarian, Mary Tumilty, to have an adult library card so she could devour all the Perry Mason mysteries. I vividly remember telling her she was not to read Forever Amber or Lydia Bailey as I felt they were far too racy for her. Compared to what is available now along the lines of 50 Shades of Grey, they were about as racy as Dick, Jane and Spot, whom we met in the First Grade.

Time marched on and we could buy the latest books fairly cheaply when they came out in paperback at Costco. Time continued to march inexorably on and we became Kindle readers. I have published several things on Amazon Kindle and, occasionally, get a dollar or two in royalties.

So, all those Used Book Sales and purchases here and there have made it possible for me to have a bookcase in literally every single room of my house and I add to them still with various hard or soft cover books. I love how they look. I love the fact that I have read them all, many more than once, and there is something about being surrounded by books that is immensely comforting. Have you ever visited someone and discovered they have no books anywhere? How do they exist?

However...and you knew one was coming...I now must divest myself of many of these beloved books as my partner in life and fellow book lover, John, is now residing - and reading, I'm sure - in heaven and I must let our house go to another family, hopefully, with children who will love growing up here.

Too many books, the real estate people say. Too cluttered. Books are not necessary. They are in the way. How is that even possible, I ask? But, happily, the Sierra Madre Library is willing to take back their books and use them in yet another Used Book Sale. So, I've rolled up my sleeves and put together dozens of cardboard cartons that John had bought for some reason or other and I've spent the last week wandering through the house taking books off shelves and placing them in boxes. I've been to The Bottle Shop and looted their box pile and; although I don't think my back will ever be the same; I have gathered 442 hard cover and 75 paperback books. The Library Super People, Martha Troedson and the Mountain Views News' own Jeff Brown came and took them all away. I was relieved the job was done but sad at the same time.

I am comforting myself with the thought that next month at the June Used Book Sale there will probably be another mother-daughter team, like Leah and me, who will be in book heaven as soon as they walk through the door. If you hadn't planned to go, change your plans! It's Friday, June 1, from 3:00 – 7:00 p.m. and Saturday, June 2, from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. As I'm sure you already know, the sale will be held at the rear of the Library, 440 West Sierra Madre Blvd.

Editorial:

If there is anything to be learned from the last two years, it is the importance of every single eligible voter making informed decisions about candidates and then voting! We should have also learned that our decisions need to be the result of doing our homework, distinguishing between facts and hyperbolic campaign rhetoric, and choosing who we believe, based on their qualifications, will best serve

On June 5th, Californians will have the opportunity to narrow the field of candidates so that we will have viable choices in the November General Election. In 2010, we approved the Top Two Primary system for most offices. As such, all candidates running for office are listed on one ballot, regardless of their party preference. (Previously your ballot only listed the candidates from your stated party preference.) Now, a candidate's party has no impact on how the election is conducted or who is allowed to advance to the General Election. Instead, candidates go on to a run-off election based solely on how many votes they receive in the Primary. The Top Two Primary applies to most of the offices that were previously known as "partisan" and are now known as "voter-nominated" offices.

Many voters do not feel a sense of urgency when it comes to Primary Elections. That may have been tolerable prior to 2016, but it is now 'Captain Obviously' clear that every voter needs to vote in every election! We cannot let being overwhelmed with the current political climate, especially what is going on in Washington, take away from our responsibilities in California. Regardless of where your political views are, as Californian's we must "put our oxygen masks on first". In other words, let's take care of our business in our home state.

The Mountain Views News Editorial Board includes a diverse group of political thinkers. The endorsements listed are a reflection of our opinions and we hope they are useful in your choice of candidates.

Whatever you do, whether you agree with our choices or not, make certain you vote. Vote as if your future depends on it.....because it does!

JUNE 5TH PRIMARY ENDORSEMENTS:

Governor:

There are far too many candidates listed on the ballot. Our choices have been narrowed down to 3. In our opinion, any of those listed below would make a very fine governor.

John Chiang – His background as State Treasurer makes him super qualified. California has the 5th or 6th largest economy in the world (depending on who you ask), and Chiang has managed the state's finances well through good times and bad.

Delaine Eastin – As a former California State Superintendent of Public Instruction and a former member of the Assembly, she has not only a thorough knowledge of state governance, she has demonstrated her commitment to making California a better place to live for all Californians.

Gavin Newsom – Considered to be the front runner by many, he definitely has the political support and track record as Mayor of San Francisco to lead the state. As Mayor, he was willing to take a stand in the midst of fierce opposition, something sorely needed when dealing with the Trump Administration.

Lt. Governor: Ed Hernandez Attorney General: Xavier Becerra Secretary of State: Alex Padilla Controller: Betty Yee Gary Conlon Treasurer: Insurance Commissioner: Steve Poizner Superintendent Public Instruction: Tony Thurmond – Supporter of Public Education

US SENATOR: Dianne Feinstein CONGRESS - 27TH DISTRICT: CONGRESS - 28TH DISTRICT: Judy Chu Adam Schiff

BIRD BRAIN BRILLIANCE

I remember as a kid, hearing the term "bird-brain" often used in a derogatory manner, directed at someone who'd just done something really stupid. To me, it seemed rude, but un-like many other words that we kids could have used to convey the mimic sounds and words with no knowledge same sentiment, bird-brain was one we knew we could get away with in front of the adults.

assumed to have been derived from a similarly and how to appropriately respond to them. insulting moniker, "bird-witted", which dates back to the early 1600's. The original term was used to 'attention deficit disorder', presumably applicable because a bird appears to lack focus when flying to and fro in rapid motion, with no apparent direction. Ironically, in reality, this notion could not be further from the truth.

The presumptuous premise behind the Le-Qing Wu and J. David Dickman was published use of the idiom, "bird-brain" is based on the in Science, the world's leading journal of original human's erroneous perspective that birds have proportionately small brains and therefore must lack intelligence. In applying that thoughtless theory to calling someone a bird-brain indicates that a person who acts foolishly must have a small brain like a bird, and therefore he must be stupid.

The remarkable irony behind this theory lies in the fact that birds are far-and-way more focused than the average human believes or perceives. As a matter of fact, some species of birds are even considered to be among the most intelligent wild creatures in the animal kingdom, and certain species of birds possess some amazing brain capabilities that God apparently did not see fit to instill in the human being. I'm not talking about instinctual behaviors only, I am referring to scientifically proven facts about the biological properties of a bird's brain that equate to higher intelligence as we humans define it.

The most blatantly obvious example of experiment conducted by animal psychologist, to brain brilliance!

Irene Pepperberg at Harvard University. Doctor Pepperberg purchased an ordinary pet-store parrot that she named "Alex" (a cute, catchy acronym for Aviary Language EXperiment), and went right to work, teaching and observing him. By the end of the experiment, Pepperberg wrote in her book, Alex & Me that Alex could identify 50 different objects and recognize quantities up to 6; that he could distinguish 7 colors and 5 shapes, and understand the concepts of "bigger", "smaller",

"same", and "different", and that he was learning the concepts of "over" and "under" when he passed away on September 6, 2007.

Yes, it is true that a parrot will sometimes simply of what they mean, but they are also capable or learning a wide vocabulary of terms and concepts The teasingly taunting term, "bird-brain" is with a complete understanding of what they mean

In case the brain power of a parrot does not convince the average human that a bird's brain is describe a person with what we might call today, indeed brilliant in spite of its size, a particular very remarkable trait possessed by the pigeon is enough to turn anyone green with intelligence envy. The pigeon has an internal GPS (global positioning system) inside his 'tiny little' bird brain.

The results of a recent study conducted by Drs. scientific research (April 26, 2012), describing the fact that "neuronal responses in a pigeon's brain stem show how single cells encode magnetic field direction, intensity and polarity - qualities that are necessary to derive an internal model representing directional heading and geosurface location." To put it in a nut shell, the pigeon possesses a unique neural substrate for a vertebrate magnetic sense. In other words, a bird-brained pigeon is capable of finding any location he wishes to find on the earth's surface without having to strap on a Tom-Tom! Now run and tell that, Getting, Parkinson and Easton! Oh, and by the way, that thoughtless theory about birds lacking focus and direction goes right out the window when it comes to the common park

So, the next time you are tempted to call someone a bird-brain when they've done something stupid, think again. The fact is, our seemingly flighty 'bird brain brilliance' was proven through an feathered friends have got it going on when it comes

GREENLAND TELESCOPE OPENS NEW ERA OF ARCTIC ASTRONOMY

To study the most extreme objects in the universe, astronomers sometimes have to go to some extreme places themselves. Over the past several months, a team of scientists has braved cold temperatures to put the finishing touches on a new telescope in Greenland.

Taking advantage of excellent atmospheric conditions, the Greenland Telescope is designed to detect radio waves from stars, galaxies and black holes. One of its primary goals is to join the Event Horizon Telescope (EHT), a global array of radio dishes that are linked together to make the first image of a supermassive black hole. The Greenland Telescope has recently achieved two important milestones, its "first light" and the successful synchronization with data from another radio telescope. With this, the Greenland Telescope is ready to help scientists explore some of the universe's deepest mysteries.

"We can officially announce that we are open for business to explore the cosmos from Greenland," said Timothy Norton of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics (CfA), Senior Project Manager for the telescope. "It's an exciting day for everyone who has worked so hard to make this happen."

In December 2017, astronomers were able to successfully detect radio emission from the Moon using the Greenland Telescope, an event astronomers refer to as "first light." Then in early 2018, scientists combined data from the Greenland Telescope's observations of a quasar with data from the Atacama Large Millimeter/submillimeter Array, or ALMA, in Chile. The data from the Greenland Telescope and ALMA were synchronized so that they acted like two points on a radio dish equal in size to the separation of the two observing sites, an achievement that is called "finding fringes." "This represents a major step in integrating the telescope into a larger, global network of radio telescopes," said Nimesh Patel of CfA. "Finding fringes tells us that the Greenland Telescope is working as we hoped and planned."

The Greenland Telescope is a 12-meter radio antenna that was originally built as a prototype for ALMA. Once ALMA was operational in Chile, the telescope was repurposed to Greenland to take advantage of the near-ideal conditions of the Arctic to study the universe at specific radio frequencies.

The Greenland location also allows interferometry with the Submillimeter Array in Hawaii, ALMA and other radio dishes, to become a part of the northernmost component of the EHT. This extends the baseline of this array in the northsouth direction to about 7,500 miles—nearly the Earth's diameter.

UNCLE SAM STEPS IN FOR YOUR TIPS

My dearly departed pappy Elmer Dills would tell me, don't argue sex, politics and or religion, I must add tipping to the list. I have used this topic many times on my radio show, Dining with Dills on

AM 830 KLAA Radio to get the phones buzzing.

There is a new law on the books, actually an old law that is now being enforced. Since January 1, the IRS will classify automatic gratuities as service charges that are taxable as regular wages and subject to payroll tax withholding. That might sound like a bunch of tax law mumbo jumbo, but what it means is that restaurants have to treat those tips like regular wages.

Typically, the IRS left it up to the waiter or tipped employees to declare that money. But with this new change the waiter won't see those "tips" until payday—instead of the end of the shift. And restaurants will have to withhold federal income, Social Security and Medicare taxes on that money, too.

What it means for the diner is that those automatic 18% gratuity charges on tables of 6 or more may well be a thing of the past. The addition has been added onto large parties to ensure that servers are paid for catering to a large group. That doesn't mean you should use this an excuse to start stiffing people.

The new rule actually went into effect in June of 2012, however the IRS postponed enforcement until recently to give restaurateurs enough time to adjust and properly comply.

While it might seem great to have some freedom as a customer, the service industry isn't so excited about the idea. Tips... To insure proper service. Here is my rundown and no it hasn't changed in twenty years of reviewing restaurants.

Anyone in any country that provides a service should be rewarded. 10% buffet plus $2 directly to busboy that brought you water and had to clean up after the kids through

Jell-O on the ground. $1 for each drink at the bar

$2 for a to go order, as long as they got it right

12% fair service, means they brought you the food and came back with your check

15% Good service brought you your food and drinks and refilled drinks and asked how was it

18% Very Good service all of the above plus asked you if your meal was prepared to your liking 20-25% All of the above, brought items in proper order, waited for you to ask for check, asked if there is a validation needed and please ask for me next time.

One more note... I subtract 5% when the server blames the kitchen for a mistake, got it !! This a fun conversation please listen in AM 830 KLAA on Sunday at 5 PM and join me and the crew at Paco's Mexican Restaurant on June 3rd for an after the races mixer, open to all.

"Self-Sufficient Home," "Foraging California," and other books. He can be reached at www.SchoolofSelf-Reliance.

It was just one of those days. I had a few hours before my next appointment, and I was driving towards the direction of home and there was the cemetery where my parents had been buried. I hadn't said "hello" for some months, so I pulled in and began looking for the spot. Right away things looked a little different. A road had actually been removed and it was the road that took me right to their tombstone. So I had to drive a little further away, as I was a bit disconcerted. And a movie was being made with the various lights and crew, a distraction from my inner communion with my parents. Still, after some guesswork and wandering, I found the tombstone and kneeled before them to chat

As usual, I just shared some news and thoughts that were swirling in my mind. My mother seemed to respond first, as if she was more alert. Conversation ensued. My father slowly awoke, and passively joined the conversation. Was this all in my mind? Who cares? It was real enough to me, to be there with my memories of them, to feel their presence, to listen to what I think they would have said. I sprinkled some sage on their stones, and then I walked back erratically to my car, always amazed at the diversity of tombstones and messages over such a long period of time. I understood the solitude, and the sacredness, of the cemetery, this place of timelessness where the dead and the living meet. Regardless of whatever hurly-burley is happening in my life, in the cemetery I realize that the physical life has its limits, and will one day end. THE ZORTHIAN

Nearly to my car, I happened upon the tombstone of two old friends, Dabney and Jirayr Zorthian. I knew Dabney much better, for she often attended my field trips and we would have long conversations after Jirayr died. I knew Jirayr most through his reputation, and from our many phone conversations. Why had I happened upon their grave this day? For those of you unfamiliar with the Zorthian family, Mr. Zorthian had long been considered the most famous eccentric artist of Altadena, and the parties held at their sprawling foothill property were legendary. Everyone has a story about the Zorthians. The "last words" engraved next to Dabney's name were "I want to know." What a perfect

[Nyerges is a naturalist and thing to express! I want to know. She didn't state that she wanted to know a specific this or that, just that she wanted to Know! The quest for knowledge, and the drive to do more and try more, was such a signature of Dabney's. In our conversations, she often asked many questions, always listened sincerely, truly trying to learn and to know. Our conversations seemed like true communing, unlike so many of today's conversations where one party is not listening and is just waiting for the talker to stop so they can say what they are waiting to say. Jirayr's tombstone said "Make my heart my mind."

> Beautiful! I took that to mean that Jirayr's quest was to think with feeling in all that he does. Even though most of my interactions were somewhat commercial and mundane, I found him to be a creative thinker, thinking outside of the box and finding creative solutions to problems. His tombstone carried a second phrase also: Give me a pleasureful life." Indeed! Jirayr didn't wait for someone to give him such a life, but he pursued pleasure in his art and parties and interactions with other. I don't believe that he experienced any shortage of pleasures. Though I doubt anyone would ever inscribe a phrase about pleasure on my tombstone, the fact is that I'm not Jirayr, and it did seem appropriate for him. As I stared at the phrase, it made me think of all the pros and cons of pursuing pleasure, the excesses of pleasure, but also the simple pleasures of life which money cannot buy. As I sprinkled some sage on their tombstone, I felt blessed to have had some interaction with one of Altadena's most unique and eclectic couples. And I could not help but feel the shortness of life, that one should never wait in the pursuit of knowledge, that one should pursue new knowledge with every breath, and that one should also do so by allowing the heart to be the mind. In death, Dabney and Jirayr imparted their final lessons to me, and it made me again acknowledge that they indeed had a most wonderful life.

hill. My forgetting has nothing to do with age because I have been forgetting as long as I can remember.

Of course, with age comes an excuse for forgetting something. Don't let anybody know this, but sometimes I use my age to say I forgot something which in reality I had not forgotten. Sometimes forgetting something is the best expression of valor.

I can't remember all the things I have forgotten, however, the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage remembers everything, even things I did not forget. Her memory is impeccable and I just have to live with Often she will start a conversation with, "Do you remember...?'

Being married as long as I have, I always go with the affirmative nod, which I never forget to do.

When I was a young husband, I remember very distinctly correcting her about what I remembered about an incident she was talking about. I have remembered never to make that mistake again.

I am forgetting everything these days. It may be my keys. I get to the church office, check my pocket and realize I forgot my keys. Then I have to get on my cell phone (when I don't forget that) and call my wife explaining that I forgot my keys. Once we went for supper with some friends, I was to pick up the tab, and when the tab came, I had forgotten to bring my wallet. I am definitely not going to do that Once I went on a trip and forgot where I was going. Fortunately, I had the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage with me who is an expert in telling me I can't tell you how many lectures she has given to

Yours Truly in this area of forgetting. I think she should win some kind of a prize or a doctorate in this area. Maybe I should begin calling her, Dr. Never Forget. I could not remember all of the things that I have forgotten. I could ask my wife, but that would take a day and a half for her to get them all on the table.

Our relationship is defined this way; I forget everything and she remembers everything. It can be good, but also it can have a negative impact upon a person's life, like mine. I just thought I would have to live out the rest of my life under this cloud of forgetfulness.

Then the most incredible thing happened, something that has changed the rest of my life. My wife left early to go to the office and I was about a half-hour getting ready to go and when I went to the door, I noticed on the table was a key ring with a bunch

When it comes to forgetting anything, I am king of the of keys on it. At first, I thought it must be my wife's and maybe I should pick it up and take it with me. I realized one very important thing though. My wife never forgets anything. If I pick up these keys and take it to her, I am in more trouble than I could really handle at this stage of life. After all, if her keys are on the dining room table there is a pretty good purpose behind the whole thing. For me to sabotage that purpose would get me in a great deal of trouble, I

I went out the door, got in my vehicle and started on my way to the office. As I was backing out of the driveway, my cell phone rang. I noticed it was my wife. I thought I was in trouble. What could I have done now or what didn't I do that I should have done?

When I answered the phone, I heard a meek voice say, "Did you see any keys on the dining room table?" I answered in the affirmative not really understanding the situation. "Could you," she said most sweetly, "bring them over? I forgot them."

There was a dramatic pause on my side of the cell phone. It took a few moments for the situation to sink

As I went back into the house, I was chuckling all the way in and picked up the delinquent keys. When I got to the office, I handed them to her with the biggest smile I've ever had on my face that I can remember. She looked at me and then said rather softly, "You're not laughing are you?" I recognize I will forget a great deal of things in life.

But this incident, I will never forget and it will always strike a chuckle cord in my heart. Every once in a while, when nothing is going on, I will look at my wife and say, "Do you remember the Glancing away from me she will say, "Don't you think it's time to forget that?"

Never in a million years!

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 3:13-14). Some things are worth forgetting as the apostle Paul points out here. The key to a happy life is knowing what to forget and what to remember.

HOW TO CHOOSE A GOOD ESTATE SALE COMPANY

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can you provide some tips on how to choose a good estate sale company who can sell all the leftover items in my mother's house?

Inquiring Daughter

Dear Inquiring,

industry over the past decade. There are roughly 22,000 estate sale companies that currently operate in the U.S., up nearly 60 percent from just 10 years ago. But not all estate sale companies are alike.

companies, estate sale operators are largely unregulated, with no licensing or standard educational requirements. That leaves the door open for inexperienced, unethical or even illegal operators. Therefore, it's up to you to decipher a good reputable company from a bad one. Here are some tips to help you choose.

Make a list: Start by asking friends, your real estate agent or attorney for recommendations. You and market your sale. EstateSales.net is a leading can also search online. Websites like EstateSales. net and EstateSales.org let you find estate sale companies in your area.

Check their reviews: After you find a few companies, check them out on the Better Business Bureau (BBB.org), Angie's List (AngiesList.com), Yelp (Yelp.com) and other online review sites to eliminate ones with legitimately negative reviews.

Call some companies: Once you identify some estate sale companies, select a few to interview over the phone. Ask them how long they've been in business and how many estate sales they conduct each month. Also find out about their staff, the services they provide, if they are insured and bonded and if they charge a flat fee or commission. The national average commission for an estate sale is around 35 percent, but commissions vary by city and region.

You may also want to ask them about visiting their next sale to get a better feel for how they operate. And be sure to get a list of references of their past clients and call them.

The estate sale business has become a huge Schedule appointments: Set up two or three faceto-face interviews with the companies you felt provided you with satisfactory answers during the phone interviews.

During their visit, show the estate liquidator Unlike appraisal, auction and real estate through the property. Point out any items that will not be included in the sale, and if you have any items where price is a concern, discuss it with them at that time. Many estate companies will give you a quote, after a quick walk through the home.

> You also need to ask about their pricing (how do they research prices and is every item priced), how they track what items sell for, what credit cards do they accept, and how and where will they promote site used to advertise sales, so check advertising approaches there.

> Additionally, ask how many days will it take them to set up for the sale, how long will the sale last, and will they take care of getting any necessary permits to have the sale.

You also need to find out how and when you will be paid, and what types of services they provide when the sale is over. Will they clean up the house and dispose of the unsold items, and is there's an extra charge for that? Also, make sure you get a copy of their contract and review it carefully before you sign it.

For more information on choosing an estate sale company, see National Estate Sales Association online guide at NESA-USA.com, and click on 'Consumer Education" then on "Find the Right Company."

12 Rules for Life: An Antidote to Chaos by Jordan B. Peterson What does everyone in the modern world need to know? Renowned psychologist Jordan B. Peterson's answer to this most difficult of questions uniquely combines the hard-won truths of ancient tradition with the stunning revelations of cutting-edge scientific research. Humorous, surprising and informative, Dr. Peterson tells us why skateboarding boys and girls must be left alone, what terrible fate awaits those who criticize too easily, and why you should always pet a cat when you meet one on the street. What does the nervous system of the lowly lobster have to tell us about standing up straight (with our shoulders back) and about success in life? Why did ancient Egyptians worship the capacity to pay careful attention as the highest of gods? What dreadful paths do people tread when they become resentful, arrogant and vengeful? Dr. Peterson journeys broadly, discussing discipline, freedom, adventure and responsibility, distilling the world's wisdom into 12 practical and profound rules for life. 12 Rules for Life shatters the modern commonplaces of science, faith and human nature, while transforming and ennobling the mind and spirit of its readers.

DO YOU GET DIABETES FROM EATING TOO MUCH SUGAR?

There is a widespread belief that sugar is the sole cause sugar does not cause type 2 diabetes on its own. of diabetes. After all, the disease is characterised by high levels of sugar in the blood.Diabetes was first identified through the sweet smell of urine, and it later became apparent that sweet, sugary urine signified a high level of blood sugar. Over time, diabetes treatment has swung from eating primarily sugar (to replace what is lost), to avoiding sweetness (to limit high sugar levels). Today, the debate on amounts and thresholds of sugar and its role in diabetes seems as fierce as ever. Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease, where genetics and environmental factors interact. Some research suggests that sugar intake may play a role in the development of type 1 diabetes, but the research isn't conclusive. There is nothing special about sugar that sets it apart from other foods, and Generally, people eating lots of sugar tend to have poorer diets and unhealthier lifestyles. These, as well as other factors including urban growth patterns, the built environment, the food environment, stressful jobs, poor sleep and food pricing probably contribute more to the rising incidence of type 2 diabetes than dietary sugar.Sugar doesn't cause diabetes. But there is one way that sugar can influence whether a person gets type 2 diabetes. Consuming too much sugar (or sugary foods and drinks) can make people put on weight. ... Weight gain from eating too much of any food can make a person's chance of getting diabetes greater.Consult your doctor about any questions regarding this information.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

I DON'T HAVE KIDS, SO WHY DO I NEED ESTATE PLANNING? PART 1

It's a common misconception to think that if you don't have children, you don't need to worry about estate planning. But the fact is, it can be even MORE important to do estate planning if you have no children.

Some of the common thoughts behind this mistaken belief may take one of these forms: "If I die, everything will pass to my spouse anyway, so why bother?"

"I'm single with little wealth, so who cares who gets my few meager assets?"

"Estate planning is an expensive hassle and it doesn't even benefit me because I'll be dead, so I'm better off letting a judge sort things out."

This kind of thinking ignores several basic facts about both estate planning and life in general. Regardless of your marital status, if you don't have children, you face potential estate-planning complications which those with children do not. And this is true whether you're wealthy or have very limited assets.

So even if you're childless, consider these inconvenient truths before you decide to forego estate planning.

Whether you're rich, poor, or somewhere in between, in the event of your death everything you own will be passed on to someone. Without a will or trust, your assets will go through probate, where a judge and state law will decide who gets everything you own. In the event no family steps forward, your assets will become the property of more information.

Why give the government everything you worked your life to build? And even if you have little financial wealth, you undoubtedly own a few sentimental items (including pets) you'd like to pass to a close friend or favorite charity.

However, it's rare for someone to die without any family members stepping forward. It's far more likely that some relative you haven't spoken with in years will come out of the woodwork to stake a claim. Without a will or trust, state laws establish which family member has the priority inheritance. If you're unmarried with no children, this hierarchy typically puts parents first, then siblings, then more distant relatives like nieces, nephews, uncles, aunts, and cousins.

Depending on your family, this could have a potentially negative outcome. For instance, what if your closest living relative is your estranged brother with serious addiction issues? Or what if your assets are passed on to a niece who's still a child and likely to squander the inheritance?

And if your estate does contain significant wealth and assets, this could lead to a costly and contentious court battle, with all your relatives (and their lawyers) fighting over your estate which is exactly what's happening with Prince's family right now.

Finally, if you have a spouse and your assets are passed to him or her, there's no guarantee they'll live much longer than you. In the event of their death without a will or a trust, everything goes to his or her family, regardless of whether you like them or not.

Do you really want your spouse's sister, brother, parents (or the new spouse he or she marries after you die) inheriting what you've worked so hard for? Maybe you do. Maybe you don't. The point is, without any planning, you lose all control of what happens. Dedicated to empowering your family, building your wealth and defining your legacy,

FOR MEMORIAL DAY -SERVING THOSE WHO SERVE US

Every Memorial Day, we remember those who died during active military service. But the day gives us a special opportunity to serve those who serve

According to the Department of Veterans Affairs, nearly 42 million American men and women have served during wartime. Nearly 1.2 million died while serving. Nearly 1.5 million were wounded. Since 9/11, nearly 7,000 U.S. service members have died in Iraq and Afghanistan. More than 50,000 have been wounded - many have debilitating injuries and mental challenges that have changed their We may debate the rightness or wrongness of various engagements, but we know that freedom comes at a steep price - and we honor those who have secured it for us. But we can do more. We can serve them back. "There are many small things people can do that can make a world of difference," said Jerry Newberry, assistant adjutant general at the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW).

Such as assisting the family of a service member who has been deployed. "Family members go through a long period of wondering, worrying and waiting," said Newberry.

"But they still need to deal with the car breaking down, a child getting sick, a death in the family. If you know of such families, reach out to them."

Or write an e-mail or letter. The troops - particularly those recuperating in military hospitals - love receiving e-mails, letters and care packages. You can do so at amillionthanks.org. Donate time. Your local Veterans Affairs office, VFW and other legitimate organizations are in desperate need of volunteers. Organize a toy drive for children of deployed soldiers. Support the Marine Corps Toys for Tots program. Provide gift cards to troops through aafes.com.

Donate money. You can give to a variety of needed services for military members - or support the Red Cross to provide basic necessities to service members in military hospitals. Go to vfw.org and click on "Donate" or "Troop Support."

Lori Felix at Military.com offers additional suggestions that are simple and inexpensive. One is to volunteer to place flags on the grave sites of fallen servicemen and women. Your local American Legion or VFW will have the details.

Felix writes that holiday weekends can be challenging times for those who are serving away from home. She suggests contacting the community relations office at your local military base to invite a service member or two to dinner.

Or do something kind for a wounded vet. The Walter Reed National Military Center has a Facebook page that provides inspiration and ideas for brightening a wounded vet's day. CNN offers some great suggestions.

Some disabled veterans are unable to drive. You can volunteer to give them a ride to their medical appointments at Disabled American Veterans (dav.org).

You can donate your frequent flyer miles so that family members can travel to the bedside of a hospitalized service member. That can be done through the Fisher House Foundation's Hero Miles Program (fisherhouse.org).

CNN reports that more than a third of the men and women who served in Iraq and Afghanistan "have or will experience post-traumatic stress disorder." The Puppies Behind Bars program trains companion dogs for veterans with PTSD. You can sponsor a dog at puppiesbehindbars.com. Hey, Memorial Day is upon us. ### PRESIDENT DONALD HAS A FARM

President Trump's latest assault on undocumented aliens reached a new low last week when he said, "These aren't people, these are animals." Essentially, the president believes undocumented aliens are subhuman, or "Untermensch," which was part of the justification used by leaders of Nazi-Germany to herd "undesirable" groups into death camps. These undesirables included Jews, Roma (Gypsies), Jehovah's Witnesses, homosexuals, political opponents of the Nazi hierarchy, and anyone else Adolf Hitler and his cronies didn't like.

Whatever most normal people's opinion of undocumented aliens is - positive or negative - it's unlikely that the majority of Americans view them as "animals." The exception to that statement, of course, is if they concur with the opinion of the president. Or Adolf Hitler.

But why resort to sticks, stones, and names that never hurt you? That would merely put those of us who disagree with the president's perception of humanity - or inhumanity - on his level. Which is a place on earth most Americans have indicated they would rather not be. Note to the president: you lost the popular vote and, according to numerous polls, less than half of all Americans approve of you or your regime.

It's mind-boggling that this president has called many of the supporters of the neo-Nazis and white supremacists who marched in Charlottesville last year "very fine people." Clearly, in his worldview, undocumented aliens are not. Because they "aren't people," they're "animals." And while the president subsequently back-peddled a bit, saying he was referring to the violent, pre-dominantly Latinx gang MS-13, he fails to recognize that gang members are people as

In the president's mind and in the minds of many around him, including John Kelly, his Chief-of-Staff, it's perfectly acceptable to separate children from their undocumented parents should they all be rounded up at the border and routed to immigrant detention facilities; or, as Kelly said, "foster care or whatever." Attorney General Jeff Sessions summed up the administration's policy on undocumented migrants succinctly, "If you're smuggling a child, then we're going to prosecute you, and that child will be separated from you. If you don't want your child separated, then don't bring them across the border illegally." The terminus - literally and figuratively - for many of those arriving at Nazi concentration camps was frequently the scene of children being separated from parents. Infants didn't fare as well. On more occasions than not, they were immediately eliminated. That's a tame euphemism for what actually happened.

What the attorney general fails to recognize is that he is referring to human beings. They are not smuggled contraband; not animals. Then again, Sessions isn't exactly known for his sensitivity regarding race, culture, or sexual preference. The president's attempts to muster compassion and emotion at a so-called "immigration roundtable" last week devolved, yet again, into an opportunity to play politics. As usual, his failings as a leader, policymaker, and as a human being were - according to him - the fault of the Democrats, a majority of whom do not agree with most of the president's immigration decrees. Our beneficent leader had this to say to those attempting to cross the border without proper documentation, "I know what you're going through right now with families is very tough, but those are the bad laws the Democrats gave us. We have to break up families. The Democrats gave us that law."

No. They did not. The president and his administration did.

The president doesn't have a clue about the plight of undocumented aliens. He should. According to published accounts in The Guardian and on CNN, historian Roland Paul notes that President Trump's grandfather, Friedrich, left Germany, the president's ancestral homeland, illegally; failing to notify authorities of his intention to emigrate. And escape the draft. Apparently, Friedrich Trump - unlike his grandson - didn't have bone spurs on the

A document Paul found in local archives in Bavaria notes that Friedrich Trump, having already become an American citizen, should leave the area by "1 May... or else expect to be deported." Imagine that, the Trump family was punished for leaving a country illegally rather than arriving in one.

Perhaps if this nation hadn't welcomed the Trump family to America, we wouldn't have the leader we have in office today. Well, as the president told the knights of his round-table, the U.S. has "the dumbest laws on immigration in the world."

Touche.

ROBERT MUELLER'S INVESTIGATION PLODS ON

It's been said that, for the American people, the only thing shorter than their memory is their attention span. Now, more than a year and $10 million later, the investigation into allegations that the 2016 Trump for President campaign dealt with Russian operatives to influence the election outcome is putting that theory to the

Despite signs the country has grown weary of it, the investigation led by Special Counsel Robert Mueller plods on, providing grist for the media, national Democrats and, of course, for President Trump's Twitter feed.

Notwithstanding speculation that the end is in sight, the investigation has careened off in other directions unrelated to its initial task of determining whether, in fact, collusion occurred and whether Trump campaign operatives were a part of it. For instance, the indictment of former Trump campaign chairman Paul Manafort alleges criminal conduct involving business dealings more than a decade earlier unconnected to allegations of election meddling. Mueller has also extracted a guilty plea from former National Security Adviser Gen. Michael Flynn for lying to the FBI and has indicted 13 individuals and three companies related to the note of the public memory/attention span concept as well, arguing the investigation has gone far afield and the American people are so bewildered by the mass of conflicting accounts, charges, counter-charges and multiple investigations they are beginning to believe it's hopeless to attempt to sort it all out and make any sense of it. Tales of spying, secret dossiers, cloak and dagger rendezvous, clandestine contacts, FBI raids, payoffs, Russian billionaires, a blizzard of subpoenas, and millions of dollars changing hands have poured forth for more than a year, creating a surreal air of confusion. An eclectic cast of characters has drifted on and off this stage drama, but none more bizarre than a porno film actress and her lawyer obsessed with public attention. Giuliani, of course, has the well-being of his client at heart when he insists Mueller conclude his work quickly, act on his findings and put the issue to rest before this year's mid-term Congressional elections, diluting - if not eliminating - its impact as a turning point campaign

Trump, in the meantime, continues his daily "fake news, witch hunt, no collusion" Twitter blasts, driving the daily news cycle and providing an enormous amount of television time to academics, consultants, opinion writers and anyone who ever served in government and wants

Mueller has been tight-lipped about the investigation, offering no hint of how far along it is or when he may bring it to an end although Giuliani said last week that Mueller had set Sept.

1 as a reporting date, coincidentally the time when tradition has it that campaigning begins in It's a given that Russian apparatchiks meddled in the presidential election, using cyber attacks to drive messages aimed at influencing public opinion. It's a given as well that the effort was designed to benefit Trump and undermine Hillary Clinton. For all the strum and drang drama, Trump's hard core base has remained steadfast in its belief that Mueller is out to get the president, accepting the witch hunt characterization.

The Resistance has remained equally as steadfast in its belief that Trump is an illegitimate president, his election tainted by Russian interference and carried out with the campaign's participation. Despite persistent rumors that Trump intends to fire Mueller, the sentiment in the Congress favors allowing him to complete his task without arbitrary deadlines or political pressures. Any anxiety they feel about its timeline is kept largely to themselves. Giuliani is certain to ratchet up the pressure in interviews and public appearances, making his case that Mueller has already taken far too much time, has uncovered nothing to implicate the president and has strayed well beyond his initial charter. There is a risk certainly to the president and to Republican congressional candidates if the investigation drags on into the election season. Mueller confronts a risk as well and could open himself to criticism for deliberately prolonging his work, keeping the investigation at the top of the news to influence the mid-term outcome. Îf memories are short and attention spans shorter - as Giuliani appears to believe to some extent - it is in his and Trump's interest to try to force Mueller's hand. Mueller in all likelihood
