GOURDIKIAN PLEADS GUILTY TO ILLEGAL GUNS SALES

A former Pasadena police Lieutenant pled guilty in court Thursday, to federal charges related to selling at least 108 firearms without a license, as part of a plea deal with Vasken Kenneth Gourdikian of Sierra Madre also pled guilty to making false statements about the gun sales. As part of the deal with the U.S. Attorney's Office, Gourdikian is expected to be sentenced to 30 months in prison, three years of supervised release and pay a fine. His sentencing is set of Feb. 4.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jennifer Chou said Gourdikian was a gun dealer and not a hobbyist as he claimed.

"He was buying them, acquiring inventory, he was advertizing them online, he was selling them direct to buyers." Chou said. "He was selling them very quickly after he was able to take physical custody of the firearms."

According to court documents, of the guns Gourdikian sold, 80 were "off-roster" firearms, guns that cannot be purchased or sold by the public in California.

Mark Werksman, Gourdikian's Attorney said he could have sold the guns legally if he had paid $25 for the license.

'Vasken Gourdikian meant no harm to the community, "Mark Werksman, Gourdikian's Attorney, "In fact at times he didn't know he was violating federal law and it's really a shame that his distinguished career in law enforcement ended this way"

Gourdikian resined from the Pasadena police force in March. He was a 23 year veteran and the departments pubic spokesperson.

Gourdikian's troubles started when a firearm he had sold was recovered at a crime scene by a neighboring police department and traced, by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, to him in 2016.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HIGH INTENSITY DRUG TRAFFICKING AREA REPORTS THAT THE LEGALIZATION OF RECREATIONAL MARI-JUANA HAS HAD NEGATIVE IMPACTS IN COLORADO

Last week, the Rocky Mountain High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (RMHIDTĂ) Strategic Intelligence Unit published their annual report on the impact of the legalization of marijuana in Colorado. RMHIDTA has published annual reports every year since 2013 to track issues related to marijuana use in Colorado.

Of note, the RMHIDTA was established by the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) in 1996. As of 2017, the program has 30 RMHIDTA designated counties in 4 states (Colorado, Montana, Utah, and Wyoming), and the group's mission is to support the national drug control strategy of reducing drug use.

A copy of the report can be found on the RMHID-TA website, and additional information about the RMHIDTA can be found online at www.RMHID-TA.org. In addition, some of the startling highlights in the report have been compiled for your to 2016) reference below.

As of June 2017, there were 491 retail marijuana stores in the state of Colorado, compared to 392 Starbucks and 208 McDonald's.

Since recreational marijuana was legalized, marijuana related traffic deaths increased 151%, while all Colorado traffic deaths increased 35%.

Since recreational marijuana was legalized, traffic deaths involving drivers who tested positive for marijuana more than doubled from 55 in 2013, to 138 people killed in 2017.

This equates to one person killed every 2 ½ days compared to one person killed every 6 ½ days. The percentage of all Colorado traffic deaths that were marijuana related increased from 11.43% in 2013, to 21.3% in 2017.

Colorado past month marijuana use for those ages 12 and older is ranked 3rd in the nation and is 85% higher than the national average.

The yearly rate of emergency department visits related to marijuana increased 52% after the legalization of recreational marijuana (2012 compared

The yearly rate of marijuana-related hospitalizations increased 148% after the legalization of recreational marijuana (2012 compared to 2016) 65% of local jurisdictions in Colorado have banned medical and recreational marijuana businesses.

WALKING SIERRA MADRE... The Social Side By Deanne Davis

"Experience the magic of the floats before they make their debut in the 2019 Rose Parade. During the final stages of preparation a variety of seeds, bark, fruits and vegetables, grasses and of course, flowers are being applied to the floats by experienced professionals as well as hard working volunteers."

"The optimist sees the rose and not its thorns; the pessimist stares at the thorns, oblivious to the rose." Kahlil Gibran

Dick Sappington, our "go-to" guy for the Sierra Madre Rose Floats for the past 21 years or so is way more concerned about being sure our float is within all the parameters of the Rose Parade Rule Book than whether the roses have thorns or not. Said Rule Book, over the 100 years of the Tournament of Roses, has grown from a few hazy details - including the famous "Never on Sunday!" Rule - to a volume 3/4" thick as new rules are added whenever something goes wrong. Float builders must now be sure they follow rules to the letter as they will most definitely be enforced by the Tournament inspectors. Most important rule of the Tournament of Roses: You Don't Stop The Parade!! If your float is so foolish as to stop the parade, that means an immediate $1,000.00 fine. If there's some way you could have prevented your float from having the bad taste to stop the parade then you're really in trouble. Our fantastic floats have been towed four times. Each time our float folks end up in front of a group where you are judged guilty till proven innocent. Needless to say, Dick's major concern is to be sure beyond a shadow of a doubt that our float will keep going and not break down in any way at all.

Building the float is fun, Dick says. It's built by people who enjoy creating mechanical things. The basic system is a custom-made chassis, out of industrial steel and truck components per Tournament regulations. Any repairs or upgrades to the chassis must be completed early in the year. A metal lattice is created out of 1/4" steel rods, welded together to form the shape of the float. This year's float design is based on the oriental garden at Sierra Madre Elementary School. Once the design is approved, the builders start with the bare chassis.

Great detail is used to make sure every curve is just right. Individual structures are built that will go on top of the float. These structures, like one of the lanterns this year will often be assigned to one person who might spend a number of months building it with great care.

Dick's wife, Kay, is head of decoration and she does the floral design. She's also the one who deals with the hundreds of volunteers in December. This year the building crew of construction guys numbers nine. Dick works two days a week on this hobby of his - Sunday and Thursday, where you can find him at our barn. Over the years, he has worked on all the independent floats, South Pasadena, Burbank, Cal Poly - Dick is still an advisor with the Cal Poly gang. He really likes working with 50 or 60 engineering students who are not, as Dick puts it, "millennials!" For Dick, the fun part is the design engineering aspect - every float is a new toy. He has acquired a massive cross-section of skills over the years: mechanical engineer, hydraulics expert, automotive genius and electrical-electronic know-how. As a motorcycle rider-builder, car builder and rider, exmilitary and even farming, Dick learned it all along the way. He's one of those guys who can create whatever's needed. His training has been living a mechanical life, playing with many many toys.

There will be more hydraulic lifts on our float this year than ever before. A lift is raised or lowered 14' and we will have 9 vertical functions this year! 4 cattails, 3 trees, 2 lanterns and a waterfall in the back. Dick builds for the crowds along Colorado Blvd., not necessarily for the television cameras. His final words were, "If I can't weld it, I can't work with it!" No problem, our float is one weld after another.

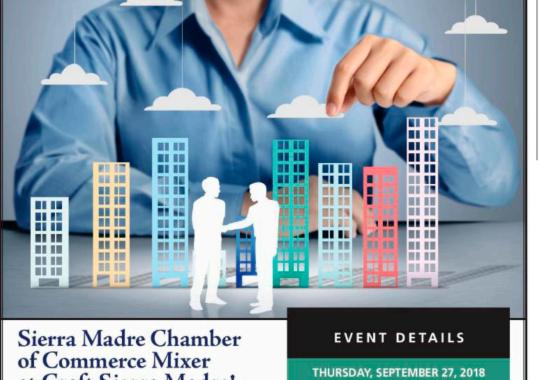

The Sierra Madre Rose Float would not be possible without the volunteer builders and the many residents who donate to the Rose Float Association. To donate or volunteer to work on the float, visit their website at www. smrosefloat.org or just show up any Thursday or Sunday at 10:00 a.m. You'll be glad you did!

Pasadena Tax Return Preparer Shut Down

A federal court has issued last week an order that permanently bars a tax return preparer who operated offices in Pasadena - as well as other cities in California, Colorado and Kansas - from preparing federal income tax returns, United States Attorney Nick Hanna announced Wednesday.

Maria Del Consuelo Vazquez is the subject of a permanent injunction filed Monday by United States District Judge Fernando M. Olguin. In Monday's order, Judge Olguin also prohibited Vazquez from owning a tax return preparation business.

Vasquez operated tax preparation business in Pasadena; Corona; Santa Ana; Brighton, Colorado; and Hutchinson, Kansas under a Nevada corporation she called MCV Business Network, Inc. In recent Vazquez thousands of tax returns for clients under her IRS-issued Preparer Tax Identification Number (PTIN).

According to a lawsuit filed by federal prosecutors on July 13 and testimony presented to the court, Vazquez substantially inflated or completely fabricated charitable contributions and unreimbursed employee expenses business illegally generate federal income tax refunds for her clients or to substantially understate clients' liabilities.

"Vazquez prepared and filed a total of 9,216 tax returns from January 1, 2015 to May 21, 2018 with her PTIN," Judge Olguin wrote. "Based on the average deficiency of $2,830.29 from her audited returns, that suggests Vazquez's fraudulent returns have resulted in harm of over $26 million to the United States from January 1, 2015 to present."

Governor Signs Suicide Prevention Legislation

Governor Jerry Brown this week signed SB 972, suicide prevention legislation authored by Senator Anthony J. Portantino, D-La Cañada Flintridge.

"I would like to thank Governor Brown for signing SB 972 and his support on this important issue. As a father and a legislator, the safety of our children continues to be a priority. My hope is to foster an open dialogue about suicide and to help prevent these horrific tragedies. If one life can be saved through this bill then all of our efforts will have been worth it," commented Senator Portantino.

Senator Portantino is a strong advocate for suicide prevention and mental health policy. SB 972 requires public, charter, and private schools that serves pupils from 7 - 12 and higher education to print the National Suicide Prevention Hotline telephone number on student identification cards. Adolescent suicide and selfinflicted injury are a serious social and public health concern. According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, suicide is the second leading cause of death among young people ages 15-

Sergeant Yolanda Juarez and Police Officer Ian Venderburg were the individuals who responded to the service call, and according to Ms. Ali, "they empathized with me as if I were their sister."

Based on the overall situation, the MPAC asked if they could come by the Monrovia Police Department yesterday, September 18, 2018, with a group of around

LOVING LIFE AND LIVING FREE

Happy Tails

by Chris Leclerc

surprised that I had never before heard of the organization, as they are located here in Southern California, and have been in operation for 34 life, I try to support as many rescue and rights advocate groups as I can, so I was quite anxious to learn more about this one.

Living Free Animal Sanctuary is a 501(c)3 non-profit organization that I think is uniquely worthy of support because of their commitment to rescuing otherwise euthanized pets from highkill shelters and promising them a loving home outside of a cage for the duration of their lives. There are many non-profits that rescue animals and work hard at finding them homes through foster and adoption programs. However, due to limited space and resources, the animals are often kept in cages with no guarantee of a home where they can roam freely and receive all the love and attention they need.

Founded in 1980, Living Free was among the first privately-funded, no-kill sanctuaries to rescue dogs and cats from imminent shelter euthanasia. The sanctuary's founder, Emily Jo Beard (1923-1989), was strongly passionate in her belief that freedom, reverence and justice mission to find loving, forever adoptive homes should prevail for all life, not just human-kind, for their rescued friends. So, if you think you and that philosophy is what drove her to carry out are ready to share your life with a precious pet, her mission. Beard understood that the human's that might be something for you to consider. For position of "dominion" over animals means obvious reasons, the folks at Living Free are very guardianship and stewardship, versus power and tyranny. Inspired by the beliefs of Albert Schweitzer, and with a goal to provide hope and dignity to animals, she decided to devote her life to the cause.

Today, the staff and volunteers at Living Free forget to love and let live - freely!

Sanctuary continue to carry out Beard's original mission with equal compassion. Located at 54250 Keen Camp Rd. in Mountain Center, CA off highway 74, the sanctuary offers animals a gorgeous setting in the San Jacinto Mountains. They are open to the public 11am-4pm daily, except Wednesdays, for visitors to come and see the good work they are doing with the animals.

During a recent conversation with a client, she They also hold annual fund-raisers during which told me about an animal rescue group that I donating supporters are given the opportunity to immediately became intrigued with. I was actually socialize and enjoy good food and entertainment, all on behalf of the animals.

Living Free recently completed a renovation and expansion of their facilities to allow for more years. Because animals are such a big part of my optimal care of the younger furry four-legged friends they take in. As we all know, puppies and kittens have unique needs that require more specialized attention than that of adult dogs and cats, and the good folks at Living Free recognize what it takes to accommodate those particular needs. The newly renovated facility provides a safe haven where the babes will be cared for as they grow into mature, less dependant adults.

Living Free has a variety of events scheduled in the coming months to help fund operations and educate the public. One of the more interesting workshops I noted on the list is titled "Natural Horsemanship with Tim Hayes", a 2-day clinic to be held on October 20-21st. Be sure to visit their website at www.living-free.org for details, and to confirm the date for their next annual Howl and Yowl Musical fund-raiser. You can also follow them on Facebook to read current updates about their activities and to view adoptable pets.

While Living Free ensures a life-long home for the animals they take in, they also make it their selective when it comes to placing their animals, but in my mind that just proves that they truly care about the animals they assume responsibility for. CHEF MIA WASILEVICH COOKS WITH WEEDS

Speaking in Sierra Madre this coming week

[Nyerges is an educator and author. His web site is whenever it rains in the early spring and winter www.SchoolofSelf- Reliance.com.]

Mia Wasilevich is a chef, photographer, and naturalist who has learned to combine wild foods with her love of cooking. She is the author of a cookbook focusing on invasive and naturalized weeds entitled Ugly Little Greens (Page Street Publishing 2017). She's currently a food stylist in Los Angeles, California. On Thursday, September 27, you can listen to her talk about local wild foods at the Sierra Madre CERT meeting, 7 p.m. at the Hart Building in Memorial Park.

GETTING STARTED WITH WILD FOODS

As a young child, Mia traveled to many countries, including Central and South America, Australia, New Zealand and Europe. It became evident to her that what Americans consider "weeds" or wild plants are often regarded as food in many parts of the world.

Mia noticed that weeds and invasive plants make an appearance as food in many cultures. For example, morning glories in Asia, various types of nettles in Africa, and lambs quarters in Mia began to wonder why this art of wildcrafting had faded from our own culture, except for in a few vintage cookbooks. Eventually, she met a prolific set of teachers, foragers, and "foodies" in the Los Angeles area and it inspired her to use weeds in everyday cooking. She calls these "everyday weeds" which she attempts to make into recipes as interesting as possible, while keeping it simple.

She's experimented with unique dishes made from many wild foods, but mainly focuses on invasive plants, non-native plants which were brought here or have migrated here, or whose seeds hitched a ride on travelers inadvertently. Some of the native wild plants she uses include the acorn. One of her first creations was the acorn burger, which is a substantial and tasty meat substitute. She also developed elderberry ketchup and barbeque sauce that have become yearly staples of hers when the berries are abundant.

Among the invasive green plants she uses, most can be used interchangeably and can substitute familiar vegetables such and spinach, lettuce and mustard greens. For example, chickweed (Stellaria media) and miner's lettuce (Claytonia perfoliata) are two greens that pop up seemingly everywhere and carpet most backyards and hillsides. They have a lovely, delicate texture and can replace lettuce or anywhere you want a cool, fresh, and green taste. They are excellent raw but can be cooked as potherbs, as well. The chickweed is a common European plant, while miner's lettuce is

"My favorite plants to harvest are droughttolerant black sage (Salvia melifera) when it grows profusely and, of course, the stinging nettle (Urtica dioica) which many people forage when they are first learning to identify plants," she explains. Mia likes to infuse creams and chocolates with black sage for a wonderful heady, mint-like experience. She also likes the nettle plant, which she says is "completely unique and I refuse to believe it tastes like spinach." Mia describes nettles as a plant which embodies "medicine as food," lending a complex green flavor to whatever dish it graces. She also makes a "Nettle-ade" which uses dried nettle tea, preserved lemon, sparkling water and a bit of honey or agave.

She has created menus for special events that have included cactus and tequila paletas (popsicles) with habanero ants, lambs quarters (Chenopodium) seed croquettes with corn milk and sweet white clover (Melilotus albus), white fir (Abies concolor) sugar beignets and cream among other creations.

Mia, who is half Native American (from the Southwest) and half Russian (via Argentina), grew up in Nevada and Southern California.

That's a lot of food culture right here," she explains. "During my many childhood travels, the very local ingredients made the foods of various places we traveled very special and memorable to

She points out that living in the Los Angeles area, she doesn't have to drive far to have an authentic ethnic food experience from just about anywhere in the world.

"Once I reached adulthood and was introduced to wild plants and foraging, I couldn't think of a reason not to use them for food as long as it was sustainable. Foraging is a practice in being selfreliant. In addition, the plants that are in my book are authentic to my environment, and they are also universal. This means that these plants grow in many places all over the world and are used by so many cultures in so many different ways. I think that's neat."

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

FINANCIAL TIP OF THE WEEK: PAY ATTENTION

Enjoying a casual evening at home, reclining in my favorite easy chair reading, while the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage was chatting on the telephone. I seldom pay attention to phone conversations. After all, I only get one side of the conversation, which may be misleading at the very best. I've been caught in that trap before with some pretty dire consequences. I am not going to get caught again, if I can help it.

Then an odd phrase caught my attention: "plastic surgery." My ears perked up and I heard my wife say, "I certainly agree with that article and I'm going to do some plastic surgery myself." Well, you can imagine what thoughts were racing through my head. When she hung up the telephone, I queried her about it.

In my book, plastic surgery is a big step. You do support me in this plastic surgery plan, don't you?"

There are times to disagree with your spouse, but as a husband for over 45 years, I have never discovered that time. Forcing a smile, I nodded in the affirmative and told her she had my full support in whatever she

I had to admit that the "time" had finally come to our humble abode. Who am I to fight it? I go by this motto, "He who smiles and agrees with his spouse wife. lives to smile another day."

I plan to smile until the day I die.

I never really thought about plastic surgery, but perhaps my wife was right. Perhaps she could use a little face-lift. For me to get a face-lift, the surgeon would need a huge construction crane. Then comes the awkward part, what do they do with my face after

Women, more than men, are a little sensitive about their appearance. For a man, "appearance" means he showed up. A woman has an altogether different approach to the term "appearance."

Some women look in the mirror and see where some improvements could be made. For example, they see bags under their eyes that could not get through the airport carry-on luggage size requirement.

Then there is the problem with their nose, which could stand a little tweaking. For all practical purposes, one of those double chins has to go. Moreover, what woman couldn't use a tummy tuck and other snippings of the flesh? Believe me; I never would have brought it up, but if that makes my wife happy, then whatever it costs, we can put it on a credit card. The only problem with putting something like this on a credit card is that by the time you pay it off you need another procedure. But, she is worth it in my checkbook. I have no compunction whatsoever of writing out that check. Each day I checked the appointment calendar hanging on our refrigerator to find out when she would be going in for the surgery. Day after day, I looked, but could never find any appointment.

I supposed she was a little sensitive about the whole thing and did not want it staring at her day after day on the appointment calendar. Whatever the reason, she had my silent support, for all it was worth. I am sure she would do the same for me. That is what marriage is all about. Supporting one another in the developments of life, whatever that development might be.

I decided to tuck this little bit in the back of my mind and, however it developed would be all right with me.

One day this week, I went to the Slurp N' Burp Café for a quiet lunch. The issue was far from my mind as I enjoyed a delicious lunch. As I finished my last cup of coffee, the waitress brought my bill and I pulled my wallet out to pay for it.

In searching my wallet for a credit card I discovered. much to my chagrin, that there were no credit cards to be found. Somehow, I had lost my credit cards. Perhaps, in the morning when I was getting dressed they dropped out of my wallet as I was placing it in my

The problem with that theory was that all the other cards in my wallet were intact.

Fortunately, I had my cell phone and called my

"Honey, I've lost all my credit cards. I'm here at the restaurant and I can't find any credit cards in my wallet. Do you have any idea what I did with my credit cards?'

"I cut them all up." "You did what?"

"You said you supported my plastic surgery plan, didn't you?"

"But, I thought..."

"You, thought what?"

Dear reader: please disregard the first part of this column. If you happen to read my obituary in next week's newspaper, you will know that my lovely, vivacious, eternally youthful wife did not disregard the first part and I'm currently Resting In Pieces.

I must confess that my hearing is good; it is my understanding that falls so far short. The only exercise I'm really good at is "jumping-to-conclusions."

This is common among many people who call themselves Christians. Their hearing is good but their "doing" is not up to par. The apostle James understood this truth quite well. He writes, "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves" (James 1:22). It is not so much what you hear that pays dividends in life, but what you do.

EXPLORING STRANGE NEW WORLDS: "STAR TREK" PLANET VULCAN FOUND, NEW PLANET COULD BE SPOCK'S HOME WORLD

Among the TV series Star Trek's many charms are its rich universe of characters and planets. Now, the Dharma Planet Survey, in a new study led by University of Florida (UF) astronomer Jian Ge and team including Tennessee State University (TSU) astronomers Matthew Muterspaugh and Gregory Henry, has shown that science fiction may be a little less so; the Dharma project has discovered what may be Star Trek's famed planet Vulcan.

"The new planet is a 'super-Earth' orbiting the star HD 26965, which is only 16 light-years from Earth, making it the closest super-Earth orbiting another Sun-like star," says Ge. "The planet is roughly twice the size of Earth and orbits its star with a 42-day period just inside the star's optimal habitable zone." The discovery was made using the Dharma Endowment Foundation Telescope (DEFT), a 50-inch telescope located atop Mt. Lemmon in southern Arizona. The planet is the first "super-Earth" detected by the Dharma Survey.

"The orange-tinted HD 26965 is only slightly cooler and slightly less massive than our Sun, is approximately the same age as our Sun, and has a 10.1-year magnetic cycle nearly identical to the Sun's 11.6-year sunspot cycle," explains Muterspaugh, who helped to commission the Dharma spectrograph on the TSU 2-meter automatic spectroscopic telescope. "Therefore," he adds, "HD 26965 may be an ideal host star for an advanced civilization."

"Star Trek fans may know the star HD 26965 by its alternative moniker, 40 Eridani A," says Henry, who collected precise brightness measurements of the star at TSU's automated observatory needed to confirm the presence of the planet. "Vulcan was connected to 40 Eridani A in the publications 'Star Trek 2' by James Blish (Bantam, 1968) and 'Star Trek Maps' by Jeff Maynard (Bantam, their 1991 letter. 1980)," explains Henry. In a letter published in "Vulcan is the l with Sallie Baliunas, Robert Donahue, and George Nassiopoulos of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center a mission shared by the Dharma Planet Survey."

for Astrophysics confirmed the identification of 40 Eridani A as Vulcan's host star. The 40 Eridani star system is composed of three stars. Vulcan orbits the primary star, and the two companion stars "would

"Vulcan is the home planet of Science Officer Mr. the periodical "Sky and Telescope" in July 1991, Spock in the original 'Star Trek' Sci-Fi series," says Gene Roddenberry, the creator of Star Trek, along Henry. "Spock served on the starship Enterprise, whose mission was to seek out strange new worlds, unlike the host stars of most of the known planets discovered to date. Now anyone can see 40 Eridani on a clear night and be proud to point out Spock's stars," says Ge. "I am very grateful to the donor gleam brilliantly in the Vulcan sky," they wrote in home," says Bo Ma, a UF postdoc on the team and the first author of the paper just published in "Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society."

"This discovery demonstrates that fully dedicated telescopes conducting high-cadence,

"This star can be seen with the naked eye, near future will continue to play a key role in the discovery of more super-Earths and even Earthlike planets in the habitable zones around nearby of our Dharma Planet Survey, Mr. Mickey Singer, who recognized the importance of this project and has continuously provided support to make this and future discoveries possible."

ARCADIA UNIFIED CUTS RIBBON ON NEW $7.5 MILLION FACILITIES AND MAINTENANCE YARD

Arcadia Unified School District (AUSD) officials cut the ribbon and introduced the new Jim Leahy Maintenance Yard in a private ceremony on Tuesday September 18. The new yard and accompanying facilities are the concluding projects of Measure I "Arcadia Neighborhood Schools Health, Safety and Repair Measure," which spanned over 10 years and poured $218 million into AUSD school improvements.

The initial school bond measure passed in 2006 and helped update 11 schools with much needed safety and upgraded renovations. Longtime resident and former Citizen of the Year (2015), Jim Leahy, was also honored at the event. Mr. Leahy, who is retired, dedicated much of his life to helping area schools and supervised the Measure I project as Executive Director of Facilities. Along with AUSD School Board President Cung Nguyen, and other school board members, Mr. Leahy cut the red ribbon to kick off the celebration which included keynote refinanced last year saving Arcadia tax payers $80 million.

speakers, area boy scouts, the Arcadia High School Marching Band, and a beautiful spread of food, drinks and desserts, including a 'Happy Retirement' cake for Mr. Leahy.

The new maintenance yard, which will accommodate the Facilities, Maintenance, Transportation, Operations, and Nutritional Services Departments, was not part of Measure I's initial plan. But due to the hard work of Mr. Leahy, and countless, devoted staff members, upgrades to area schools were completed ahead of schedule and under budget, which gave the district wiggle room to build this facility.

Other projects completed as a result of Measure I include a Performance Arts Center, Aquatics Center and Career Technical Education Center at the High School, as well as upgrades to electrical wiring, smoke detectors, roofing and earthquake safety classroom upgrades. The bond was

THE GOOD LIFE

CHOOSING A CONTINUING-CARE RETIREMENT COMMUNITY

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can you give me some tips on picking an allinclusive residential retirement community that offers independent housing along with assisted living and nursing care? My husband and I are looking to downsize and simplify, but we want our next move to be our last.

Approaching 80

Dear Approaching,

If you want your next move to be your final one, an all-inclusive retirement community - also known as a continuing-care retirement community (or CCRC) - is a great option to consider, but they aren't cheap.

CCRCs are different from other types of senior housing because they provide all levels of housing, services and care in one convenient location.

While they vary greatly in appearance and services, most CCRCs offer apartments or sometimes singlefamily homes for active independent seniors. In addition, they also offer onsite assisted living for seniors who require help with basic living tasks like bathing, dressing or going to the bathroom, and nursing home care for residents when their health CCRCs also provide a bevy of resort-style amenities and services that include community dining halls, exercise facilities, housekeeping, and transportation, as well as many social and recreational activities.

But be aware that all these services come at a hefty price. Most communities have entry fees that range from the low to mid-six figures, plus ongoing monthly fees that can range from around $2,000 to over $4,000 depending on the facility, services and the contract option you choose.

With more than 2,000 CCRCs in operation throughout the U.S, finding a facility that fits your lifestyle, needs and budget will require some legwork. Here are some steps that can help you proceed.

Make a list: Start by calling the Area Agency on Aging (call 800-677-1116 for contact information) in the area you want to live for a list of CCRCs, or search websites like Caring.com.

Call the facilities: Once you've located a few, call them to find out if they have any vacancies, what they charge and if they provide the types of services

you want or need.

Take a tour: Many CCRCs encourage potential residents to stay overnight and have a few meals in their dining hall. During your visit, notice the upkeep of the facility and talk to the current residents to see how they like living there. Also, check out the assisted living and nursing facilities, and find out how decisions are made to move residents from one level of care to another.

To check-up on a facility, call the state long-term care ombudsman (see LTCombudsman.org) who can tell you if the assisted living and nursing care services within the CCRC have had any complaints or other problems. You can also use Medicare's nursing home compare tool at Medicare.gov/ nursinghomecompare.

Review contracts and fees: Most CCRCs offer three types of contracts: Life-care, or Type A contracts, which have the highest entry fee but covers all levels of long-term care as needed; Type B, or modified contracts that have lower entry fees but limits longterm care services in the initial fee; and Type C, or fee-for-service contracts, which offer the lowest entrance fees but requires you to pay extra for longterm care if you need it.

You also need to find out what yearly price increases you can expect? How much of your entry fee is refundable to you if you move or die? And what happens if you outlive your financial resources?

Research the CCRC: Find out who owns the facility and get a copy of their most recently audited financial statement and review it, along with the copy of the contract with your lawyer or financial advisor. Also get their occupancy rate. Unless it's a newer community filling up, occupancy below 85 percent can be a red flag that the facility is having financial or management problems.

Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior.org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today show and author of "The Savvy Senior" book.

Mourovia / This Week's Market Update

This Week Median List Price: $988.000

Inventory is tightening and days-on-market is falling. But demand as measured by the Market Action Index is also trending down. The market is not giving strong up or down signals from these data.

Supply & Demand

Home sales continue to outstrip supply and the Market Action Index has been moving higher for several weeks. This is a Seller's market so watch for upward pricing pressure in the near future if the trend continues.

The Market Action Index answers the question "How's the Market?" by measuring the current rate of sale versus the amount of the inventory. Index above 30 implies Seller's Market conditions. Below 30, conditions favor the buyer.

We continue to see prices in this zip bounce around these current levels. Look for a persistent change in the Market Action Index before we see prices deviate significantly from here.

A NEW CHIC BOUTIQUE IN PASADENA: JADE'S

By Rebecca Wright/MVNews

Jade's is a store designed for every woman. Kim focuses on designing with inclusive sizing in mind, and Jade's carriers clothing from size 2 to size 20.

Jade's has been around for three and a half years, first in South Pasadena and then here at Paseo. Marianne says that the move was good because Paseo gets a lot more foot traffic than her South Pasadena location did. She also talks about how she and Kim met: through LinkedIn. Originally Marianne bought all the clothes for her store from showrooms, but she says that when she did this she never got to meet with the designers or discuss things like their inspiration or vision. Last year she happened to meet Kim through LinkedIn and create lasting relationships there as well. Both and brought her on board as a designer for the women love the idea of going into a store where store. Their partnership happened, "naturally, they know the staff and the staff knows them, and organically, and pretty quickly,

Before Marianne owned Jade's, she worked for 30 years in corporate insurance. She knew from the time that she was 16 that she wanted to own her own boutique, and when she had the opportunity to make that dream come true, she took it. Jade's is says that her husband did a lot of the work in their connectedness with their customers. current location to get it ready.

designing because she could not find pieces that she loved and wanted to wear. Her goal in designing clothes- which is a goal that Marianne had in mind for her own store- is to create clothes that her customers feel beautiful in now, not "if I lose five pounds,".

Marianne and Kim share a lot of goals for the store, one of which is to make it a place where young, up and coming designers can find a place to showcase their work and to receive mentorship. The women both talk about how important it is to bring new people to the table. The featured designer changes each quarter; currently Jade's is featuring Clairvoyant by Megan Monroe.

Another goal they share is to source their product as locally as possible; they would love to feature entirely LA designers. This is because both Marianne and Kim prefer to get to know their designers and foster relationships with them. They like knowing about values, creative vision, and the inspiration behind different pieces.

Their third goal is to get to know their customers they wanted to bring that feel to their own store. They describe it as the "missing link," in a lot of stores. Right now, they are the only two people working in their store; down the road they would love to hire more people, but they also say that they want to make sure that at least one of them designed around a "glam" aesthetic, and Marianne is in the store every day, to foster that feeling of

of the word 'adapt' is to become adjusted to new conditions." In many ways, this is what yoga is trying to accomplish-adaptability. Adaptability is the ability to gracefully thrive within the everchanging circumstances of life. In yoga and Ayurveda, we focus on treating the present state of body and mind. What worked yesterday may not apply today. There are a few factors that determine our present state of body and mind. First, what we take in plays a significant role. This is not exclusive to food and includes what we receive through stimulation of the five senses. What are we hearing, seeing or feeling? Have you noticed how aromatherapy improves your health? Or have you felt wonderful after some time in the sunshine? It's helpful to remember what nourishes and what depletes. Second, evaluate your lifestyle. How we live ties into our overall environment. There are many questions for self-inquiry here. What is life like? Ask yourself, "Is my yoga practice contributing to a calm and serene environment overall? Am I around positive people who love me?" Personally, I check myself to see how much wellness I have in my life day-to-day. If I'm taking care of myself through exercise, yoga, meditation, and holistic practices, then I'm enjoyable to be around and I feel happy and comfortable. The challenge comes when our present state of body and mind is overlooked. When we are out of balance, we often ignore our symptoms or put off addressing them. A simple breath practice might feel too simple. Getting more rest or sleep is something we know we should do but don't do. Possibly, we think we SHOULD be at a different place than where we REALLY are. If you are ever uncertain of where to begin with your yoga practice, address where you actually are in that day. What part of your body needs attention? Do you need to stretch or strengthen? Is it the mind that needs settling? A soothing breath practice may be indicated. Remember, little steps add up to greater change in the long run. When we approach the authentic present state and condition, the ability to adapt and thrive increases. This creates flow and balance in the world and in us, individually. Learn more about the practices that can bring you balance and awareness. FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

WHAT HAPPENS TO YOUR FACEBOOK ACCOUNT WHEN YOU DIE?

If you're active on social media, Facebook probably plays a prominent role in your life. And now the social media titan can even play a role in your afterlife.

Today, estate planning encompasses not only your tangible assets—bank accounts and real estate—but your digital assets as well, such as cryptocurrency, websites, and social media accounts. Though social media may seem trivial compared to the rest of your personal property, a Facebook account functions as a virtual diary of your daily life, making it a key part of your legacy-and one you'll likely want to protect.

Because social media is so new, there are very few state laws governing how your Facebook account should be handled upon your death. Considering this, Facebook itself is in nearly total control of what happens to your profile after you die. And since roughly 8,000 Facebook users die every day, the company has created a few options for dealing with your account once you're gone:

1. Do nothing

 $Unless\,Face book\,is\,notified\,of\,your\,death, it\,assumes\,you're$ still alive, and your profile remains active indefinitely. While this might not seem like a big deal, your profile will continue to be included in Facebook searches, People You May Know suggestions, and birthday reminders.

Your friends and family likely won't want to be constantly reminded of your absence, and even worse, ex-friends and/or trolls will be able to post potentially hurtful messages on your timeline. To shield your loved ones from this kind of thing, consider going with one of the other options.

2. Have the account deleted

You can notify Facebook that you'd like to have your account permanently removed from its servers upon your passing. Alternatively, a friend, family member, or your executor can make the same request after your death. This will completely delete your profile and all its associated content from Facebook for good.

Additionally, one of these individuals can request that your account's content be downloaded and saved before the profile is deleted. Content that's eligible for download includes wall posts, photos, videos, profile info, events, and your friend list. However, Facebook will not allow any third-party to access or download your personal messages or login information.

3. Memorialize the account

In 2009, Facebook began allowing accounts of the deceased to be "memorialized" at the request of a friend or family member. Once an account has been memorialized, only confirmed friends can see the profile or find it in a search. Your memorialized profile will no longer appear in friend suggestions, nor will anyone receive birthday updates or other account notifications.

When your account is memorialized, the word "Remembering" will be added next to your name on your profile. Depending on your privacy settings, friends and family members can post content and share memories on your timeline. A memorialized account is locked, so its original content cannot be altered or removed, even if an individual has your login info.

In 2015, Facebook created a new policy that allows you to designate a family member or friend as a "legacy contact" to manage your memorialized account. This contact will be allowed to pin a final message to the top of your timeline, announcing your death or providing funeral information. The contact can also respond to new friend requests and update your cover and profile photos. The legacy contact will not be able to log in as you or see any of your private messages.

Preserve your legacy

Since social media and other digital property are such an important part of your life, you should ensure these assets are protected by your overall estate plan.

Furthermore, through our Legacy Interviews, we allow you to create a customized video recording, sharing your values, stories, and life lessons with the loved ones you leave behind. Every estate plan we create includes this component, because estate planning should encompass not only your financial assets and material possessions, but your most precious personal wealth—your wisdom, love, and family leadership. RAGING MODERATE by WILL DURST

THE GOP HOKEY POKEY

Be very careful, because it's getting crazy out there. You don't want to end up collateral damage accidentally straying into the path of the newest dance craze sweeping the Republican Party. Closely related to the St.

Vitus Dance, it is characterized by rapid, uncoordinated jerky movements and commonly referred to as the Donald Trump Two-Step.

It's pretty simple really: swing your arms back and forth, take one step forward, turn right, turn righter, take one step back. And repeat. It's kind of like the Twist meets the Mexican Hat Dance meets the Hokey Pokey, with a heavy emphasis on the Pokey. The goal is a lot of movement without any discernible directional advancement.

There's an election coming up, and the threat of a Blue Wave is spooking conservatives like cobwebs in a closet with the lights out after midnight. So this spasmodic twitching is the direct result of pressure being applied from behind as well as the front, the left, the right, the in and the out. Candidates are suffering from the dreaded Trump Sandwich Effect.

The dilemma is whether to be caught in a clinch, slow-dancing with the president or to waltz away so far, the chief executive can't even be seen due to the curvature of the earth - the norm in almost every swing district. There's a third option, the stutter-step of trying to have it both ways leading to the tortured choreography that a passing priest might describe as demonic possession.

This is a problem similar to what Democratic office-seekers experience with Nancy Pelosi. The difference being, she rumbas a little more under the radar. Unfortunately the president thinks he's John Travolta and can't help discoing into every single spotlight event whether he's asked to or not, including hurricanes.

Florida GOP senatorial candidate Rick Scott, fox trotting in a dead heat with incumbent Democrat Sen. Bill Nelson, was forced by his state's demographics to disown the president's statement that his enemies inflated Hurricane Maria's death toll in Puerto Rico to make him look bad. Paul Ryan said there is no reason to dispute the numbers. And he's not even running for office. You don't need a weatherman to tell which way this wind is blowing.

Each and every GOP candidate has to make the decision whether to risk insulting Trump's base or the intelligence of normal ordinary human beings. Hence the development of this dance of dishonor. Samba of shame. Hypocritical hula.

Whenever Mister Trump shoots out a crude tweet, says something demonstrably false or acts with an oafishness normally attributed to drunken grizzly bears, his loyal backers gravely announce being mildly offended and issue a statement that sort of, but not really, criticizes his behavior. Then claim to be totally satisfied with his intention to make amends, even if he hasn't said anything to that effect.

It's the Donald Trump Two-Step, where you bounce up and down and move in and out, bopping and weaving so you never assume a single position long enough for anyone to get a bead on you. The good news is this slam-dance marathon only lasts another seven weeks. The bad news is many will drop either from exhaustion, confusion or by tripping over their own feet. Or to be more precise, the Oval Office rug cutter's size 12s.

BLAIR BESS

KAVANAUGH DESERVED BETTER... AND SO DO WE

Judge Brett Kavanaugh was never going to get a fair break during his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The fault lies not with obstructionist Democrats, however, but with Republican leadership and members of the committee.

By not turning over all documents in their possession, Republican members of the committee did the judge and the American people a disservice. And dumping hundreds of thousands of selected pages of documents, emails, and other correspondence on Democrats the night before hearings were scheduled to begin wasn't a solution.

Releasing all relevant material would have provided a fuller picture of Kavanaugh's legal philosophy and writings for both the majority and minority. Not doing so only further riled Democrats still fuming over Republican obstruction of Judge Merrick Garland's Supreme Court nomination in the waning days of the Obama administration. It succeeded in provoking confrontation and partisan conflict. Whether or not Judge Kavanaugh escapes the wrath of Democratic committee members, the real losers are the American people.

Questions have arisen based on actions Kavanaugh took during time spent in the George W. Bush White House, including discussions about detainee torture during the early years of the war on terror, as well as a breach of secret Democratic files on judicial nominations. His writings have advocated broad presidential powers that have implications on ongoing investigations into Russian election meddling and questionable actions on the part of the president. Kavanaugh equivocated when asked whether he would uphold long-standing legal precedents, including those related to Roe v. Wade, LGBTQ rights, and affirmative action.

There are indications that Kavanaugh may have perjured himself, not only during his recent confirmation hearings, but during testimony before the Senate committee when he was originally nominated for the federal appellate court in 2006. These charges have been corroborated in emails and other work product that several committee members brought to light against the wishes of the majority.

And now comes the latest bombshell: allegations that Kavanaugh assaulted a young woman during a party while in high school. These are inflammatory charges that must be explored.

What really needs further exploration is the entire process by which the Senate evaluates nominees for lifetime positions on the high court.

Throughout the hearings, many of Kavanaugh's responses to questions posed by committee members were evasive and rife with subterfuge. His discomfort was, at times, palpable. He did an inadequate job in presenting or defending his legal perspectives on issues that will certainly come before the Supreme Court.

To think that members of the judiciary cannot or do not hold personal beliefs, opinions, or philosophies is naive. We all have opinions, ideologies, codes of ethics and moral conduct. Americans have long lived under the rule of law and a system of government that affords us the opportunity to hold them. That said, we have the right to know if appointees at every level of the federal bench can divorce themselves from personal feelings in relation to the law of the land. That they must, to the best of their ability, make rulings that consider established precedent. Kavanaugh's record must be allowed to speak for itself without obstruction or obfuscation.

Republican members of the Judiciary Committee fueled a smoldering fire by hindering the Democrats ability to fully-explore and accurately gauge where Kavanaugh stands on established law and how he might approach his deliberations as a member of the high court. This would have provided an opportunity for senators from both parties to make an educated choice in determining whether Kavanaugh should earn the committee's blessing for confirmation and a subsequent vote by the entire Senate. Instead, their actions do nothing more than pave the way for Democrats to engage in future games of tit-for-tat in times they hold the majority.

The modern judiciary - the last bastion of independent thought and final arbiter of our nation's laws - has become grossly politicized. This is a bipartisan issue, and members of both parties must be held accountable for this deterioration.

The entire Senate Judiciary Committee treated Kavanaugh unfairly, but we the people

MEDIA IGNORES TRUMP'S ECONOMY

It's surprising that a White House incapable of organizing a two-car funeral - if you believe the mainstream liberal media - is presiding over the most robust economy the U.S. has had in years. One could almost say it makes America great again.

Strange, isn't it? The Obama administration boy and girl geniuses were managing up a storm when it came to the economy, yet growth was sluggish, wages stagnant and economic optimism was nowhere to be found.

Then the Trump clown car crashed into the Resolute desk in the Oval Office and all hell broke loose. And that's in a good way. A man the OpMedia assures us is one drool away from assisted–living or one tantrum away from a rubber room may achieve 3 percent growth in the economy, something that hasn't happened since 2005.

It's almost enough to make you question the credibility of the liberal media!

And still President Trump gets zero credit from the usual media suspects. The only time they take a break from trying to find a pixie dust trail leading to "Russia collusion" is when they try to find equally elusive evidence that Obama is the cause of our present

Let's run down a few of the statistics courtesy of a roundup from The Hill. In August the economy added 201,000 jobs, which was more than predicted.

The unemployment rate stayed at 3.9 percent, which is an almost 18-year low. Wage growth edged up 2.9 percent, which is "the fastest growth since the recession ended in June 2009."

Even better for deplorables, "the bulk of the wage gains are coming for workers who earn lower wages, which is a good sign since pay raises have been slow in those areas during the expansion." This means Trump's immigration policies, designed to stop the flood of low-wage illegals, are beginning to have an impact on paychecks.

When there is less competition from Timpag ampleyers are forced to pay reages that

When there is less competition from Tijuana, employers are forced to pay wages that make sense in Tulsa. Even better for workers who have been out of a job for a long time, employers are going to be adding internal training or apprenticeship programs to train the workers they need, instead of being picky and waiting for the already trained to walk in the door.

It's important at this point that the Trump administration doesn't listen to cheap labor whiners and increase the flow of employer-sponsored visas that import cheap foreign labor.

In the meantime, if the president is waiting for credit for delivering the expanding economy he promised during the campaign, he's going to be waiting a long time. We hope he finds the fact he is making America great again to be more than a little consolation.
