Caltrans Releases Final 710 EIR

Tunnel Alternative Not Named Preferred Alternative

The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) Last week released the Final Environmental Impact Report/Environmental Impact Statement (EIR/EIS) for the SR 710 North Project. The final report identifies the Transportation Management/ Transportation Demand Management Alternative as the Preferred Alternative out of the four build options, including a freeway tunnel.

"The final EIR is a historic step in the right direction," said Assemblymember Chris Holden. "I look forward to working with all my colleagues in the legislature to support local efforts to improve mobility, and pass policies to affirmatively remove the tunnel option from any future consideration."

In April 2017, the Los Angeles Metro Board of Directors passed a motion recognizing the lack of funds needed to construct a single bore freeway tunnel, and instead recommended the Transportation System Management/ Transportation Demand Management Alternative for the 710 North Study Area while allocating remaining measure funds for new mobility improvement projects in the designated area.

Holden first pursued a state level solution early in 2017, and advocated that LA Metro move away from the tunnel option. Legislation previously introduced Hölden included provisions that would give greater local control to future developments, and specified that State Route 710 is only from Route 1 to

Pet of the Week

Nikee (A466206) is a calm, mellow 7-year-old brindle Pit Bull mix. He's always happy to see you with his tail wagging and enjoys long walks in the park where he can watch the squirrels. He walks nicely on a loose leash, enjoys singing with the fire engine sirens, and curls into you to be petted and gives kisses. He's been at the Pasadena Humane Society for 2 months so we thought he might need to be wearing business professional attire to find the right home. What do you think?

The adoption fee for dogs is $130. All dogs are spayed or neutered, microchipped, vaccinated before going to their new home.

New adopters will receive a complimentary healthand-wellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information about how to care for your pet.

Pets may not be available for adoption and cannot be held for potential adopters by phone calls or email.

to have had many pets throughout my childhood years. I remember my parents letting our family dogs roam freely at will, knowing they would most likely wander through the woods in our back yard, head off to play with the neighbor's dogs for a bit, then eventually make their way home just in time for supper. That was such a privilege for us and our pets, and I imagine there are many locals here in Sierra Madre who have similar childhood memories

Those were the days, weren't they? With acres of undeveloped land, ample space between neighbors and way less traffic passing through our communities, the risks were minimal for a pet with a nose for wanderlust to venture out and explore the great outdoors. After all, it just seems natural for a dog, right?

Well, unfortunately the open acreage and broad land gaps that used to exist between the homes in our local area have shrunk dramatically over the years, and few & far-between are the moments of silence without a vehicle passing swiftly by on our neighborhood streets. Let's face it folks, for those of us who live in highly populated areas such as this LA suburb, the days of "free-range" pet ownership are far-and-away long-gone.

Not only is it extremely risky to allow a dog to wander free these days, it is also against the law. Pet owners in Sierra Madre and other parts of Los Angeles County should know better than to think it is okay to let their dogs roam off-leash outside the boundaries of home or fenced yard. I learned my lesson several years ago while living in Hermosa Beach with my dog, Lady.

Lady was a very friendly and social dog, so I was never concerned that she might hurt anyone - human or canine - and back then it never occurred to me that she, herself could be hurt. I lived two blocks from the beach and I loved letting Lady follow me on foot as I rode my bike down to the strand during the off-season months when there was minimal traffic and few tourists in town.

One day I was riding my bike with Lady following behind when a police officer stopped and cited me for having her off-leash. The leash laws were new to me, so I was taken very much by surprise and quite irritated when I had to take a day off work to appear in court and pay roam free. I admit it seemed ridiculous at the time, but behalf. If you love them, you'll leash them.

As a youngster growing up in the south, I was fortunate
I've since learned to respect the leash laws where I live and I suppose I've become somewhat of a compliance advocate, for the safety of the animals.

While we all like to think our dog is smarter than most others, certainly smart enough to stay out of the street and respond promptly to a re-call command, it is simply an unsafe assumption that amounts to nothing less than ignorance. Notwithstanding the fact that our pups have come to be more like family members than pets, a domestic dog is still a creature driven more by instinct than taught intelligence, regardless of how much training he's received.

With all due respect to those responsible owners who invest the time and effort to properly train their pets, there will inevitably come that time - when you least expect it when the canine will default to his inner instincts and behave accordantly. And the instinctual behavior of a canine is most definitely not aligned with the safety rules standards that we human beings know enough to live by.

Think about it. Even a well-trained, very obedient dog harbors a tendency to chase a squirrel up a tree or a cat meandering by on the opposite side of the street, and when such playful prey makes it's way into a dog's field of vision, his instincts are likely to override the obedience training he may have had, prompting him to take chase after whatever it was that caught his attention.

I've heard it said that you can take the dog out of the wild, but you can't take the wild out of the dog, and I believe there is some truth in that saying. Protect your pets from the potential harm of fast-moving traffic. It only takes once being in the wrong place at the wrong time to end the life of a four-legged friend, so set your pet pride aside and take proper precautions. The risk is simply not worth it, and you'd have only yourself to blame if such a tragic accident should happen.

In closing, I also want to mention that there are some very serious risks inherent to off-leash hiking on the local trails as well. I'm sure the members of our search and rescue team have stories of being called out to assist in locating and rescuing a dog that slipped off the side of the trail into a canyon or wandered too far and went missing in the forest. Again, it seems so natural to let a dog hike alongside us without a leash, but the fact is our pets need a fine. That was the last time I ever allowed my dog to us to protect them. Please do the right thing on their

Then the water flows down into the cement channel of the Arroyo Seco, ultimately equestrians ride, the most common tree is the to the L.A. River and the beach. Part of the "original sin" of all this is that the stream that once was the Arroyo Seco River is now a cement channel, designed to rush the water away to the ocean, with no chance for water to soak into the local water table. One argument is that if the water level flowing southward was ever too cemetery located just to the south at the site high, it could flood certain neighborhoods, of today's Shelton Reservoir, at today's Arroyo such as the Busch Gardens area as the river passes through South Pasadena. Has anyone living today ever seen the water level rise even to feed the orange and fruit plantations to the half way up the walls of the cement ditch? I've south. A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

HA, HA, I KNEW I WAS RIGHT!

Did you ever experience a and had the evidence to prove you were right?

I know that for me, it does not happen very often. In fact, I cannot think of a time that it really did happen to me. Well, until recently. I want to remember this incident as long as I live.

The Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage was together. It takes her weeks to get everything prepared; she is so meticulous and will not allow anything to go wrong from her point of view. Everything has to be done just so.

Experience has taught me during this time of the year to stay out of the kitchen! That is why I am still living to this very day.

However, it does have its advantages. I can relax in my "man cave" and stay out of her way. I know that if I ever get in her way she always, without exception, has a job for me to do. I like working, but not under those circumstances. If she cannot see me, she cannot give me work to do.

One thing she is most focused on are vegetables. collaborated by the "TV news media." According to her, there has to be a balance of vegetables and the greener the better.

I, on the other side of the "I Do" aisle, have very little patience for vegetables. I was losing the battle for this vegetables war until recently.

I was haphazardly watching the news one night when they came out with a very scary bulletin. It seems that a certain vegetable (I will not name table. You do not know how hard it was for me it because I am not a vegetable person and a vegetable to me is a vegetable) was infected and giving people E. coli.

When I first heard that news, I thought I heard it wrong. After all, I have been told all my life that vegetables are good for you and will not harm you. A healthy diet includes lots of veggies. Then they come along with this warning that you should not buy this certain vegetable.

"Hey, my dear," I cheerfully said, "come and look at this news report."

I love modern technology because by the time she got into the room the television report was I remembered what the apostle Paul said about over. Very nonchalantly, I pressed the rewind button and was able to replay that news report about a certain vegetable.

I was as quiet as long as I possibly could be, and then I blurted out, "See, I told you, vegetables are not all good." She gave me one of "those looks" and walked back into the kitchen.

I grew up in a farm community in Pennsylvania and one of the sayings my grandfather had was, "When you have a cow you need to milk it." And I was about to milk this for everything I could.

I grabbed my coffee cup and went out in the time when you were right kitchen to get another fresh cup of coffee and when I was there, I happened to mention, "I always knew vegetables could be dangerous."

> She looked at me and then said, "That is only one incident and I'm not sure it's even true."

"If it's on TV it has to be true," I spurted very sarcastically.

Then I had an idea burning in my head that preparing for our Thanksgiving family get- I had been wanting to share with her for a long time but never had an opportunity. She is always getting on my case about my apple fritters, and how harmful they were to me. When saying that she was always staring at my fully developed

> "There has never been," I began as seriously as possible, "any news report that apple fritters are harmful to your health. Certainly, not like this vegetable on the news today."

> She looked at me and smiled, but as I walked away, I could see out of the corner of my eye she was sticking her tongue out at me. It feels so good to be right about something and have it

> This is a novel experience for me to be certain. It might be the only one so I plan to enjoy it as long as possible. During the next few days whenever we crossed paths I always smiled victoriously at

> At our family Thanksgiving get together, I noticed that a certain "vegetable" was not on the not to mention that. Every once in a while I would glance in my wife's direction and smile. She knew vhat I was smiling about, but just let it go.

> I guess that is what married life is all about. Sharing secrets between one another.

> Every time I eat an apple fritter from now on, I am going to be smiling in remembrance of that "vegetable." I am not that accustomed to victory and so I was taking advantage of it. However, I knew I had to be careful because sometimes things can backfire. I know this by experience.

> I was enjoying my victory at the time, and then victory. "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 15:57).

> God has for us victory that supersedes any victory we could have in this world. His victory is always through the Lord Jesus Christ.

DILLS PRACTICAL SPARKLING TIPS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

With the Holidays here, I will spend my efforts focusing on Sparking Wines. All the Sparklers came from wineries that are in the best grape growing regions of California. Note: 80% of all sparkling wines are consumed at weddings and during the month of December. That stat makes perfect sense to this writer! This entry is our first chapter in our month long look at Sparkling Wines.

1) There are some great wines from Sonoma, Napa and other regions of Northern California. 2) All the wines that I have covered follow the strict guidelines of the French region of Champagne, utilizing their time-tested method of making sparkling wines.

Here are a few tips to get you through the holidays in style

*While pouring your bubbles keep the glass as still as possible, no need to swirl, leave that for

"still" wines *Hold your glass by the base, the warmth of your hands will take some of the fizz from the champagne

*Glasses should be at room temperature, bubbles could get over-

*Serve bubbles in a narrow glass, the CO2 will take longer to dissipate *You drink champagne as just as you pour it, very slowly

A PERFECT CHRISTMAS GIFT: FIRST STAR I SEE TONIGHT

By Bob Eklund

This book invites the scientist and poet to set aside their differences for a night—to come outside, stand very still as the sun sets, feel the earth turning eastward, be dazzled by a moonrise, catch a falling star, walk with constellations, ride a rocket to Jupiter space, and finally look back at the Home Planet with new eyes. In poetry, prose, and picture, author/poet Robert Eklund and illustrator Virginia Hoge have created a unique mix of astronomy and art that asks you to join them in the billion-year mission of "descrambling the wonder, outside and inside."

FIRST STAR The evening burns, The dark earth turns, The mountains loom against the sky; One star looks down To bless the town, While sunset clouds sail grandly by. And if the light Of noon's delight Moves on, and leaves us where we are, The darkest night But aids our sight-

The better to reveal the star. Excerpt: Introduction

One starry night many years ago, while driving alone up the wild and rocky Big Sur coast of California, I pulled over and stopped mycar for a break. Stepping out into the starlight, I walked a few feet to the edge of the cliff and looked down. From somewhere farbelow came a growl of surf. As my eyes grew accustomed to the dark, I looked with awe at the brilliant Milky Way stretching overhead and down the sky to the southwest, out over the sea. Then I did a double-take—and thought I was going to fall off the cliff.

down, below what must have been the horizon and deep into the sea itself. The dizzying impression was that I was standing on a flat earth and seeing stars beyond and below its edge. What I was of feet below me—but I was not immediately aware of that, and so startling was the impression on my senses that I panicked. Feeling ran for my car! I only felt safe again when I had the engine running, lights on, and the car in motion.

As other recollections of that trip faded, that single moment of bedazzled stellar awe and panic remained with me as one of my most cherished memories. Later, when I began to read Japanese haiku poetry, I realized that my Big Sur night was exactly the kind of experience that the best haiku poems are able to record and transmit to others. The great haiku-master Matsuo Basho perhaps summed it up best. His own experience on the cold, lonely coast of northern Japan, on a dark night in the 1600s, must have been much like mine.

> How wild the sea! And, stretching over Sado's isle, The Galaxy!

The poignant sense of space, of loneliness, felt in Basho's encounter with the night sky becomes all the more intense when you know that, in his time, Sado's isle was a penal colony.

A poem can intensify, compress, and store our experiences and emotions, just as a painting intensifies and preserves an artist's vision—or as a capacitor stores and holds an electric charge. This is a book of experiences under the sky, most often the sky of night. In recording such moments, I frequently have used the compact, 17-syllable haiku form of poetry, borrowed from the Japanese. This form seems especially suited to encapsulate and preserve meaningful encounters with nature, to "call forth in 17 syllables the limitless nuances of earth and sky," as the classic haiku poet Masaoka Shiki

When I was a child, it was my good fortune to grow up on the grounds of Yerkes Observatory, a major astronomical observatory in southern Wisconsin, where my grandfather was employed for many years as a photographer and lecturer. No doubt the seeds for these poems were sown in those early years when, as a six-year-old, I would sometimes be roused out of sleep by my mother at midnight to go outside and watch a display of the aurora borealis or a shower of meteors. Over the years, while pursuing other careers, I have learned a few things about astronomy, but always as an amateur-What I thought I was seeing was the Milky Way continuing down, in the original meaning of that word: a lover. The naturalist John Burroughs said it so well: "To know is not all, it is only half. To love is the other half."

A word about the organization of this book may be useful. I really seeing was the Milky Way reflected on the ocean hundreds have endeavored to so blend science and art that readers may gain unexpected insights in the twin realms of the mind and the heart. The book is structured as an encounter with a starry night—from lost, disoriented and frightened under that vast sky, I turned and nightfall through moonlight and starlight and on to bedtime—with excursions, along the way, into both outer and inner space. You may find it helpful to refer to the "Endnotes" section (starting on resources for further learning.

Basho wrote: "Before the light that things give off dies in the heart, it must be expressed." My hope is that this book may inspire readers to go out, observe the "limitless nuances of earth and sky," and then express, in their own words, "the light that things give off." I write for all who love the starry sky, the setting sun, the full moon rising, and even the stormy night full of raindrops and snowflakes. The beauty of these things is never far from us. Robert L. Eklund

THE GOOD LIFE

THE RETIREMENT BENEFITS OF A HEALTH SAVINGS ACCOUNT

Dear Savvy Senior,

What can you tell me about health savings accounts? I've been reading that they are a great investment that can help with growing health care costs when I retire.

Planning Ahead

Dear Planning,

It's true! A health savings account is a fantastic financial tool that can help you build up a tax-free stash of money for medical expenses now and after you retire - but there's a catch. To get one, you must have a high-deductible health insurance policy.

How They Work

Health savings accounts (or HSAs) have become increasingly popular over the past few years as health care costs continue to skyrocket, and because more and more Americans have gotten high-deductible health plans.

The benefit of a HSA is the triple tax advantage that it offers: Your HSA contributions can be deducted pretax from your paycheck, lowering your taxable income; the money in the account grows tax-free; and if you use the money for eligible medical expenses, withdrawals are

And if you change jobs, the HSA moves with you.

To qualify, you must have a health insurance policy with a deductible of at least $1,350 for an individual or $2,700 for a family.

This year (2018), you can contribute up to $3,450 if you have single health insurance coverage, or up to $6,900 for family coverage. Next year (2019) you can contribute slightly more – up to $3,500 for single coverage or up to $7,000 for family coverage. And people age 55 and older can put away an extra $1,000 each year. But you cannot make contributions after you sign up for Medicare.

The money can be used for out-of-pocket medical expenses, including deductibles, co-payments, Medicare premiums, prescription drugs, vision and dental care and other expenses (see IRS.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p502.pdf, page 5, for a complete list) either now or when you retire for yourself and your spouse as well as your tax dependents.

And unlike a flexible spending account, an HSA doesn't require you to use the money by the end of the year. Rather, HSA funds roll over year to year and continue to grow tax-free in your HSA account for later use. In fact, you'll get a bigger tax benefit if you use other cash for current medical expenses and keep the HSA money growing for the long term. Be sure to hold on to your receipts for medical expenses after you open your HSA, even if you pay those bills with cash, so you can claim the expenses later. There's no time limit for withdrawing the money tax-free for eligible medical expenses you incurred anytime after you opened the account.

But be aware that if you do use your HSA funds for non-medical expenses, you'll be required to pay taxes on the withdrawal, plus a 20 percent penalty. The penalty, however, is waived for those 65 and older, but you'll still pay ordinary income tax on withdraws not used for eligible expenses.

How to Open a HSA

You should first check with your employer to see if they offer a HSA, and if they will contribute to it. If not, you can open an HSA through many banks, brokerage firms and other financial institutions, as long as you have a qualified high-deductible health insurance policy.

If you plan to keep the money growing for the future, look for an HSA administrator that offers a portfolio of mutual funds for long-term investing and has low fees. HealthEquity, OptumBank, The HSA Authority and Bank of America are the top ranked HSA providers for long-term investing according to the investment research firm Morningstar. To search for providers, visit HSAsearch.com.

After setting up your HSA plan, adding money is pretty straightforward. Most plans let you do online transfers from your bank, send checks directly, or set up a payroll deduction if offered by your employer. And to access your HSA funds many plans provide a debit card, some offer a checkbook and most allow for reimbursement.

This Week Median List Price: $1,298,000

Inventory is up and Market Action is trending down recently. While days-on-market appears to be trending lower, the overall conditions are weakening a bit.

Supply & Demand

The market has been cooling off a bit in recent weeks, as more homes are available and demand is less. We're already seeing prices move lower as a result. Expect this trend to continue especially if the index falls to the Buyer's zone. Watch for a persistent up-turn in Market Action to signal prices rising again.

The Market Action Index answers the question "How's the Market?" by measuring the current rate of sale versus the amount of the inventory. Index above 30 implies Seller's Market conditions. Below 30 favors the buyer

Again this week we see a downward notch for prices. Pricing has been weak in recent weeks and versus their absolute-high levels. The Market Action Index is a good leading indicator for the durability of this trend.

About 5pm, the Opening Ceremonies began with Jay Cohen on his trumpet. Tim Ritvo, CEO, Racing Division, the Stronach Group welcomed us, and we heard from Odd Market and the Ice Rink representatives. CALTRANS RELEASES FINAL 710 NORTH PROJECT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORT. TUNNEL ALTERNATIVE NOT NAMED PREFERRED ALTERNATIVE

Pasadena (CA) - The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) has released the Final Environmental Impact Report/Environmental Impact Statement (EIR/EIS) for the SR 710 North Project. The final report identifies the Transportation System Management/Trans-portation Demand Manag-ement Alternative as the Preferred Alternative out of the four build options, including a freeway tunnel.

"The final EIR is a historic step in the right direction," said Assemblymember Holden. "I look forward to working with all my colleagues in the legislature to support local efforts to improve mobility, and pass policies to affirmatively remove the tunnel option from any future consideration."

In April 2017, the Los Angeles Metro Board of Directors passed a motion recognizing the lack of funds needed to construct a single bore freeway tunnel, and instead recommended the Transportation System Management/Transportation Demand Management Alternative for the 710 North Study Area while allocating remaining measure R funds for new mobility improvement projects in the designated area.

Assemblymember Holden first pursued a state level solution early in 2017, and advocated that LA Metro move away from the tunnel option. Legislation previously introduced by Assemblymember Holden included provisions that would give greater local control to future developments, and specified that State Route 710 is only from Route 1 to Route 10.

Churchill: Walking with Destiny by Andrew Roberts

"Unarguably the best single-volume biography of Churchill . . . A brilliant feat of storytelling, monumental in scope, yet put together with tenderness for a man who had always believed that he would be Britain's savior." Wall Street Journal.In this landmark biography of Winston Churchill based on extensive new material, the true genius of the man, statesman and leader can finally be fully seen and understood--by the bestselling, awardwinning author of Napoleon and The Storm of War. A perfect holiday gift. When we seek an example of great leaders with unalloyed courage, the person who comes to mind is Winston Churchill: the iconic, visionary war leader immune from the consensus of the day, who stood firmly for his beliefs when everyone doubted him. But how did young Winston become Churchill? What gave him the strength to take on the superior force of Nazi Germany when bombs rained on London and so many others had caved? In Churchill, Andrew Roberts gives readers the full and definitive Winston Churchill, from birth to lasting legacy, as personally revealing as it is compulsively readable. Roberts gained exclusive access to extensive new material: transcripts of War Cabinet meetings, diaries, letters and unpublished memoirs from Churchill's contemporaries. The Royal Family permitted Roberts--in a first for a Churchill biographer--to read the detailed notes taken by King George VI in his diary after his weekly meetings with Churchill during World War II. This treasure trove of access allows Roberts to understand the man in revelatory new ways, and to identify drive.We think of Churchill as a hero who saved civilization from the evils of Nazism and warned of the grave crimes of Soviet communism, but Roberts's masterwork reveals that he has as much to teach us about the challenges leaders face today--and the fundamental values of courage, tenacity, leadership and moral conviction.

Awakening to Infinite Presence: The Clarity of Self-Realization by Robert Wolfe

The deeply-felt recognition that the Absolute is all that is, and consequently that must include you, is the lifechanging substance of enlightenment. All things are That, you as well as all other human beings: there is only That, in the sense of ultimate, permanent reality. How, then, does one live one's life when the present awareness is "I am That, and all else is That"; when the perception of being a "separate individual" has dissolved, and the ego (Latin for "I") is no longer at the center of one's perspective? "Real-i-zation" (the "enlightenment" the aspirant has sought) means "to make real". How do we make the real—the essence of timeless reality—the central expression of the Absolute perspective we have now discovered to be inevitably our own? To "make real" in one's life and activities the awareness that "all that is, is That" is unavoidably a life-altering engagement. Are you prepared to "live" with this discovery today?

An Innocent Client (Joe Dillard Series Book 1) by Scott Pratt

A preacher is found brutally murdered in a Tennessee motel room. A beautiful, mysterious young girl is accused.In this bestselling debut, criminal defense lawyer Joe Dillard has become jaded over the years as he's tried to balance his career against his conscience. Savvy but cynical, Dillard wants to quit doing criminal defense, but he can't resist the chance to represent someone who might actually be innocent. His drug-addicted sister has just been released from prison and his mother is succumbing to Alzheimer's, the hidden forces fueling Churchill's legendary but Dillard's commitment to the case never wavers despite the personal troubles and professional demands that threaten to destroy him. Smart and sophisticated, with a plot twist that will leave you shaking your head in wonder, "An Innocent Client" -- the first in the acclaimed Joe Dillard series -- will also leave you begging for more. FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

HOW TO INCLUDE YOUR DIGITAL ASSETS IN YOUR ESTATE PLAN

Today, estate planning encompasses not just tangible property like finances and real estate, but also digital assets like cryptocurrency, blogs, and social media. With so much of our lives now lived online, it's vital you put the proper estate planning provisions in place to ensure your digital assets are effectively protected and passed on in the event of your incapacity or death.

Last week I discussed some of the most common types of digital assets and the legal landscape surrounding them. Here, I offer some practical tips to ensure all your digital property is effectively incorporated into your estate plan.

Best practices for including digital assets in your estate plan

If you're like most people, you probably own numerous digital assets, some of which likely have significant monetary and/or sentimental value. Other types of online property may have no value for anyone other than yourself or be something you'd prefer your family and friends not access or inherit.

To ensure all your digital assets are accounted for, managed, and passed on in exactly the way you want, you should take the following steps:

1. Create an inventory: Start by creating a list of all your digital assets, including the related login information and passwords. Password management apps such as LastPass can help A local attorney and father, Marc Garlett is on simplify this effort. From there, store the list in a secure location, and provide detailed instructions to your fiduciary about how to access it and get into the accounts. Just like money you've hidden in a safe, if no one knows where it is or how to unlock it, these assets will likely be lost forever.

2. Add your digital assets to your estate more information.

plan: Include specific instructions in your will, trust, and/or other estate planning documents about the heir(s) you want to inherit each asset, along with how you'd like the accounts managed in the future, if that's an option. Some assets might be of no value to your family or be something you don't want them to access, so you should specify that those accounts and files be closed and/or deleted by your fiduciary.

Do NOT provide the specific account info, logins, or passwords in your estate planning documents, which can be easily read by others. This is especially true for wills, which become public record upon your death. Keep this information stored in a secure place, and let your fiduciary know how to find and use it.

3. Limit access: In your plan, you should also include instructions for your fiduciary about what level of access you want him or her to have. For example, do you want your executor to be able to read all your emails and social media posts before deleting them or passing them on to your heirs? If there are any assets you want to limit access to, we can help you include the necessary terms in your plan to ensure your privacy is honored.

4. Check service providers' access-authorization tools: Carefully review the terms and conditions for your online accounts. Some service providers like Google, Facebook, and Instagram have tools in place that allow you to easily designate access to others in the event of your death. If such a function is offered, use it to document who you want to have access to these accounts.

Truly comprehensive estate planning

With technology rapidly evolving, it's critical that your estate planning strategies evolve at the same time to adapt to this changing environment. That's why your estate plan should include not only your physical wealth and property, but all your digital assets, too. Dedicated to empowering your family, building your wealth and defining your legacy,

WHY TRUMP SHOULD BE PRIMARIED!

The Week / Michael Gerson, Washington Post

Any Republican thinking about challenging President Trump in the 2020 primaries would take on a "difficult, and perhaps thankless, political task," said Michael Gerson. History has shown that it's almost impossible to topple a sitting president of your own party. Trump is not the usual president, however; he is "a person of horrible character who corrupts everyone around him, undermines essential social standards, and is branding his party with an image of bigotry that will last a generation." Sadly, most Republicans prefer to overlook this president's disgraceful, corrupting behavior because to fight for the soul of the Republican Party.

he's given them corporate tax cuts and appointed a slew of conservative judges, including two to the U.S. Supreme Court. When they think the alternative to Trump is a Democrat, "not many Republicans place that much weight on matters of character." But if a decent, solid Republican such as Bob Corker, Nikki Haley, or Mitt Romney ran, Republicans could have both conservative policy and character. Despite the long odds of success, someone on the Right must step forward, as a principled protest against Trump's cruelty, racism, and corruption, and to prove that traditional conservatism is not dead. Someone has

RELAX YOUR FIRST, OPEN YOUR HAND

Are you someone that's a fighter? When you have a goal, do you attack it, ready for battle? Sometimes getting to the next phase will require you to try a different approach. Most of us have heard the first two

The first rule of Fight Club is: You do not talk about

The second rule of Fight Club is: You do not talk about

The third rule is equally important:

The third rule of Fight Club: Someone yells "Stop!", goes limp, taps out, the fight is over.

It's good to know when the fight is over, right? Would it be okay with you for life to get easier? As a trial lawyer, everything was a battle. I was always ready for the fight. I used to expect things to be hard, but I knew I could handle what came my way. But the truth is that fighting all the time is hard and exhausting. The fact is that not everything requires a battle and a fight. I had to learn to open my hand. I had to learn to ask for help. I relaxed my fist and opened my hand.

When we want something more and feel ready, we don't always know how to start or what to do. That's when it's good to open your hand and make success welcome.

Sometimes you need to turn up the volume on how much success you allow yourself to have in your life. Success is your ability to translate your hidden desires into your lived reality.

One of the most important things you can do to allow more success in your life is to create a structure of support. We need to be aware of the way we think about ourselves.

Our lives are a reflection of what we ultimately believe about ourselves.

Our self-image determines how much success in health, relationships, career, and money we will allow in our lives. When we have a brand new, baby dream, we have to be careful who we tell that dream. That's rule one and two of fight club. But eventually, rule three will come into play. We will need to open our hand and tap out. That's when we decide to discuss our dream with discernment.

You need somebody who believes in you at times when it's hard to believe in yourself.

That's why people work with a coach/mentor. The coach can hold the vision when it gets hard, and it will get hard because you are doing something that you have never done before.

I love using and teaching a more relaxed approach to life. I help my clients get what they want. I help them discover their next chapter. Some want improved relationships. Some want to start something new. Some find the things that they want to stop doing.

Everyone benefits from opening their hands and opening their eyes. What will you discover about yourself when you give up the fight and make easy

Editor/Publisher REPUBLICANS - YOU DID THIS....OWN IT....FIX IT!

This is not a column bent on demonizing Republicans. However, there are some things that I want to bring to their attention. Things that they alone can do to restore some semblance of democracy to America.

First of all, Republicans have to fix whatever in the hell was wrong with their Party to allow a man who has never served anyone other than himself to become their Presidential nominee. There were 16 other people who all had impressive backgrounds and a long history of PUBLIC SERVICE that, if elected, would allow us to sleep at night.

Instead you drank the Kool Aid and served up an embarassing loud mouth who not only lacks any knowledge of basic civics, is the most self serving person ever to reside at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. The Republican Party's fear that a woman, the most qualified Presidential candidate ever, might win, led them to go for the bull fed to them by consultants thinking that Trump, the populist if elected, would be manageable. How's that working out for you Please Republican Party, get back to your roots. Get some courage and find a candidate that if elected, will serve the people of the United States, including the ones who may not have voted for him or her. Find someone, and you have plenty, who will have the best interest of all Americans at heart, has integrity and a commitment to serve. (Warning to Democrats, you need to do the same thing. This is not the time to sit back on your laurels).

For right now, however, Republicans you can do a lot to rehabilitate your image and regain some of your members if you would just spend the rest of this congressional term actually taking some affirmative actions that will end this renegade administration! Hint: If you do, die hard Republicans may fall in love with you again.

Here's a To Do Before 12/31/2018 List for Republicans

1. Protect Mueller from Donald J. Trump and his hit men.

2. Stand up to the tyrant. Pass a budget without adding the expensive campaign promise of that ridiculous wall. Use that money to educate our children or fix our infrastructure or help with the costs of medical care in this country.

3. Set into motion something to start reducing the spiraling deficit that Trump created.

4. Take the news cycle away from the grandstanding, lawbreaking, and lying (more than 4,000 told since he's been President) and do something newsworthy that we care about, like passing bi partisan legislation that will improve, or at least maintain the quality of life that we have now.

5. Move your party far, far away from 45. He doesn't represent your values. He isn't a conservative, he isn't fiscally responsible, and he doesn't care about Americans, the Constitution or the rule of law.

6. And most importantly, SAVE US FROM THE IMPEACHMENT PROCESS. It is too expensive and too time consuming. We need to be focusing on who the next presidential candidates will be and how to repair the damage by Trump to our democracy. How? Just show him the list below and enlighten him that the best thing for him to do is RESIGN.

The List of High crimes and misdemeanors behaviors Partial - Per The Constitution

- 1. Perjury (This is a perhaps, but his answers to Mueller may prove that he did).
- Abuse of Authority
- 3. Bribery –
- Intimidation
- Misuse of assets
- Failure to supervise Dereliction of duty
- Unbecoming conduct Refusal to obey a lawful order
- 10. Tax evasion.

Pick any of the above, or maybe all of them and 'show him the light'. Persuade him that it is better for him and his children and his empire to leave peacefully now.

You can do it and just think how that will help you repair your party's reputation. You'll stand for something again – something other than the enabler of the worst human being to ever hold the title of President of the United States. (And don't worry about his 'base', he's double crossed them too. They'll be on your side!)

Our future is in your court. You did this. Own it. Fix it.

BUSH-APPOINTED JUDGE CREDITS ROBERTS FOR STANDING UP TO TRUMP

HARRISBURG, Pa. - John E. Jones III doesn't look or sound much like a rebel.

Like a lot of federal judges, he's given to sober suits, long pauses, and thoughtful and deliberative sentences.

But Jones, a judge of the Middle District of Pennsylvania, in the state capital of Harrisburg, is pretty much a legal apostate in our newly narrow judicial universe where all federal judges are "Obama judges," or "Bush judges," or "Clinton judges."

In 2005, in a case that became known as the "Dover Panda Trial," Jones ruled that a central Pennsylvania school district's attempt to teach intelligent design in science class violated the Constitution's Establishment Clause. In 2014, Jones beat the U.S. Supreme Court to the punch by a full year, overturning Pennsylvania's gay marriage ban.

Still, if we're following the rules set down by President Donald Trump in his latest Jeremiad against judicial independence, then Jones, a President George W. Bush appointee, should not have ruled, as he did in Kitzmiller, that "the writings of leading [intelligent design] proponents reveal that the designer postulated by their argument is the God of Christianity."

And in the Trumpiverse, where judges are expected to rubber-stamp the White House's proposals, and not act as the co-equal branch of government, there's no way that a "Bush judge" would have offered an impassioned preamble in the same-sex marriage case about the rights of "all Pennsylvanians have the right to marry the person of their choice and consequently." But Jones did just that.

And it wasn't because Jones was legislating from the bench. And it wasn't because Jones decided to shred the Constitution and cast it to the four winds. It was because he took a look at the facts, the Constitution, and precedent, and made a ruling that followed the law of the Sometimes it's really that simple.

"It's not that we're going rogue, we're deciding cases according to the law," Jones said when I called him to ask him about Trump's judicial broadsides, the president's extraordinary war of words with U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Roberts, and Jones' own concerns about attacks on judicial independence.

Jones declined to comment directly on Trump, who recently groused loudly, and publicly, about a federal judge's ruling short-circuiting the White House's attempts to turn away a column of asylum-seekers who have now reached the southern border. But he did credit Roberts, who rebuked Trump's attacks on the judiciary, sternly noting that "we do not have Obama judges or Trump judges, Bush judges or Clinton judges." Roberts also smartly observed that an "independent judiciary is something we should all be thankful for." The chief justice's words were "a timely statement for him to make and truly a heartfelt statement," Jones observed.

"As the functional head of the federal judiciary, to see him stand up for his judges was just terrific," Jones said. "I think most of us [judges], if not all of us, feel that way."

Reflecting on the independence of the judiciary, Jones noted that "all we have, as is so often said, is our credibility," he said. "We don't have the purse and we don't have the sword - as Alexander Hamilton said. If that credibility is destroyed and people think they can disregard the rule of law in society, then we are going to a very dangerous and dark place."

We have an appellate system that gives everyone the opportunity to have due process if they disagree," he continued. "Decisions themselves can be roundly criticized. It's a free country. But when those attacks devolve into something that is personal or when a judge's authority is questioned because we're a co-equal branch of government, it's problematic for all of us."

And that's why it's so important for people to respect the independence of the judiciary. There will be times when you don't agree with a judge or his or her jurisprudence (and I have plenty of disagreements with the current U.S. Supreme Court), but they're there for a reason: To make sure everyone gets a fair shake under the law.

And one of these days, it might be your turn. And you won't realize how much you miss that right to a fair shake until it's not there anymore.

"We need to dial back the inflammatory rhetoric that might not be designed to imperil judges but might have that effect," Jones said. "We should be very careful about that."

happened to catch live coverage of Donald Trump's short speech about the "First Step Act," concerning criminal justice reforms. I was bowled over. If I had been reading an unlabeled transcript I might have thought the speaker was Barack Obama.

Imbalances and outright abuses in our criminal justice system are a plague on society. And here was Trump, the law-and-order president, urging passage of legislation to limit mandatory sentences, especially for drug offenses, and advocating new funding for sweeping anti-recidivism programs.

Trump also said this: "Today's announcement shows that true bipartisanship is possible." Yes! He's correct - and that's big news.

I kept expecting Trump to put his foot in his mouth by shifting to "criminals" in the migrant caravan, or ranting about "crimes" he believes were committed in election recounts. He did not. He was entirely reasonable and on message - albeit with a prepared text - about a vitally important issue.

When it ended, however, I had a sinking feeling. What if mainstream media were to under play, or even ignore, this very positive news? After all, members of Trump's team, most notably Kellyanne Conway, have stated repeatedly that media dwell on Trump's problems and fail to give appropriate space to meaningful achievements.

In the hours that followed, CNN devoted almost all of its time to "chaos" in the White House—Trump's mood, Melania Trump's effort to get a national security deputy fired, and charges and countercharges about the election results. The First Step Act was barely mentioned.

I was able to check two broadcast networks. On NBC's "Nightly News," the story was covered reasonably well about eight minutes in. But the "CBS Evening News' never mentioned the story in its half-hour report. Never mentioned it!

The next morning, the story was practically invisible on the nation's front pages with no page-one coverage in The Los Angles Times, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, Chicago Tribune or USA Today.

Only The New York Times, among papers I surveyed, stepped up, making the story its lead of the day, atop page one. In an editorial, The Times added, "In this early test, the president is signaling that he indeed wants to make progress on critical issues that enjoy broad support."

Meanwhile progressive commentator Van Jones told CNN's Don Lemon: "I say, the 99 times I don't agree with the president I'm going to give him hell. But on this one, I'll give him a salute and applause."

What followed was a Twitter backlash against Jones from liberals who were troubled by praise, any praise, for Trump. Jones replied via Twitter: "There are 200,000 people behind bars. They have no hope, no help. We haven't passed a bill to help them in almost two generations."

The president himself has noted that he could work with the new Democratic majority in the House on many issues, from drug prices, to repairing infrastructure and, yes, on criminal justice reform.

Trump's opponents along with media who cover the White House objectively must walk a fine line. They should criticize him when he deserves it and must hold him accountable for his many misstatements. But they can't succumb to temporary blindness when the news is positive.

As the second half of Trump's term begins, reforms are needed in criminal justice - and also in how politicians and media conduct themselves on the rare occasions when good news happens at the White House.
