SKATEBOARDERS JEOPARDIZE PUBLIC SAFETY IN KERSTING COURT

Despite posted prohibitions against skateboarding in the downtown area of Sierra Madre, an increasing number of youth are ignoring the rules and riding their boards downtown, especially in Kersting Court. The frequency and recklessness of their actions has resulted in the Sierra Madre Police Department stepping up enforcement efforts.

On Wednesday a confrontation between as many as 8 skateboarding youth and adults was brought to the attention of city officials. The incident, which included the youth behaving in a rude and aggressive manner, inclusive of foul language and 'photo bombing', resulted in an impromptu meeting of those who witnessed the event and several business owners. Several businesses that could not attend, sent letters expressing their concerns for public safety.

At least one parent was contacted by SMPD and verbal warnings were issued to the other skateboarders. According to City Manager Gabe Engeland, there has also been an uptick in the incidents of juvenile vandalism in Memorial Park including numerous incidents of removing the "H" above the Hart Park House and spray painting. Some of the youth involved are also the skateboarders that were involved in the Kersting Court incident.

According to SMPD Sgt. Edward Delcoure, the proposed new enforcement efforts will include written warning and parental notification with the first offense, an administrative citation and fine with the second offense and should there be a third offense, an infraction citation will be issued which will result in a trip to juvenile court. This enforcement will not only be applied to skateboarding offenses, but also to those who commit acts of vandalism.

Engeland is hoping that parents will assist the city by talking with their children and explaining the consequences of breaking local laws.

Skateboarding is only prohibited in the downtown area.

TRAGEDY AVERTED:

Critically Missing Person Located by the LAPD with assistance from the Sierra Madre Police Department and Sierra Madre Search and Rescue Team

On Thursday evening, residents who lived in the vicinity of N. Baldwin and Miramonte were disturbed when they noticed more than a half dozen unmarked law enforcement vehicles racing up the street. The vehicles, which were initially thought to be federal agents, were actually members of the Los Angeles Police Department. According to Lt. Barkley of the LAPD Hollenbeck Division, the officers were trying to apprehend a critically missing adult who was deemed to be a danger to himself.

According to Barkley, the family of the unidentified man notified LAPD of his disappearance and informed the police that he was a suicide threat. They also indicated that he had taken an Über to get out of the LA area.

Additional information lead police to Sierra Madre where it is alleged that the Uber driver dropped him off in the 400 block of N. Baldwin.

LAPD notified the Sierra Madre Police Department who assisted in trying to locate the man. At some point he made his was to the Mt. Wilson Trail and disappeared.

LAPD also brought in 2 canine officers and their bloodhounds. In addition to the dogs and SMPD, the SM Search and Rescue team was called out.

Chuck Stoughton of SMSR said the team was notified about 11:30pm and went up the Mt. Wilson Trail looking for the man. They found him at Rescue Ridge and walked him back down the trailhead where the Sierra Madre Fire Department's Rescue Ambulance transported him to a nearby hospital.

Lt. Barkley could not praise the efforts of Sierra Madre's first responders enough. "We would have never been able to find this guy without the help of SMFD and Search and Rescue".

SIERRA MADRE SEARCH AND RESCUE RESPONDS TO MUTUAL AID CALLS THROUGHOUT CALIFORNIA

If a hiker twists an ankle one mile up the trail, or a mountain biker becomes lost near where they left their car, local search and rescue teams can usually staff these calls by themselves. But when operations get more complicated, teams call each other for assistance.

The Sierra Madre Search and Rescue Team (SMSR) is one of eight teams in Los Angeles County, and one of dozens of teams in California. Each team has a local area they are primarily responsible for, but all teams work together in mutual aid when their neighbors need help.

The California Office of Emergency Services (OES) works with search and rescue teams to coordinate mutual aid. If a county needs 50 searchers to assist with a search for a missing hiker, they can make one call to OES who will handle the logistics of organizing the needed searchers from neighboring counties.

SMSR is ready and able to assist in these mutual aid calls by living up to their motto, "Anywhere in the wilderness that someone needs help."

In March SMSR participated in the search for Marine 1st Lt. Matthew Kraft. He was overdue from a ski trip in the Sierras, and the massive search area along his 200-mile long route was in dangerous terrain with high avalanche danger. The Marine Corps, National Parks, multiple aircraft, and search and rescue teams all responded. A SMSR crew was inserted by helicopter to their search assignment, and they searched for two days, spending the night in freezing temperatures before being extracted by helicopter. . Unfortunately Lt. Kraft is still missing.

Thirteen members from SMSR participated alongside searchers from across southern California. On day 5 a crew of three SMSR searchers on a grueling 2 day assignment found boot prints leading to the subjects. Eric Desplinter and Gabrielle Wallace were found alive and well and extracted by helicopter.

In June the Team again participated in a long search with a happy ending. When 73 year old Eugene Jo went missing near Mt. Waterman, Bristlecone Pine Forest. On day 4 of the search, ties. Throughout the week SMSR fielded 23 team members, logging over 650 hours, providing boots on the ground and support in the command post by running operations and by planning search assignments. On day 7 Mr. Jo was found alive.

In July Inyo County Search and Rescue was looking for Sheryl Powell and her dog Miley who went missing from their campsite near the a crew from Kern County found the dog, which prompted the search managers to redirect several of the field crews. Shortly thereafter, a crew from SMSR located Powell who was then extracted by helicopter and flown to a local

Later in July, Wesley Welch and his dog Davie were reported overdue from a backpacking trip in Los Padres National Forest. The Santa Barbara Search and Rescue Team was aided by teams from across southern California, including SMSR, and early on day 2 of the search, Welch and Davie were found alive and well.

SMSR is proud to respond and help their neighboring teams in mutual aid. The Team is also grateful when neighboring teams respond when SMSR needs help.

Since 1951, the all-volunteer Sierra Madre Search and Rescue Team has responded to calls for help in the local mountains and beyond. SMSR also provides a range of wilderness safety programs. The Team never charges for any of these services, and is funded entirely by charitable donations. For more information, to donate, or to arrange a wilderness safety demonstration for your school or group, visit www.

Fire Damages Two Homes in South Pasadena

Heavy smoke and flames shot out of a home in South Pasadena Wednesday after a fire broke out causing part of the house to collapse and partly damaging a neighboring home.

According to reports and fire officials, six local fire departments, with 45 firefighters, responded to a two-alarm house fire in the 700 block of Charter Oak Street shortly after 3 p.m. South Pasadena Fire Chief Paul Riddle said two adults and a number of children, possibly five, where in the house at the time. The home may have been used as a daycare. No one was hurt he said.

There were also five cats at the home, two of them were located outside by firefighters. It was unclear if the other three were inside at the time of the blaze, they were unaccounted for at the time.

One of the children called 911 after she heard something pop in the bathroom and then saw flames. Riddle commended the 9-year-old girl for doing the right thing.

Support Needed Now for Historic Preservation Tax Credits in California

Senate Bill 451, which would establish a California State Historic Tax Credit, passed unanimously through the Senate in May. The Bill would establish a 20 percent credit for qualified rehabilitation expenditures of historic structures, or up to 25 percent for affordable housing, properties on designated census tracts or federal surplus property, or TOD projects. The bill will be discussed and voted upon by the Assembly Appropriations Committee. If it passes, a major incentive for historic preservation and rehabilitation projects would be closer to reality. The shortened days and lengthening shadows portend the transition from summer into all things autumnal. Don't you love this picture? This is my granddaughter, Nicole Simon, and her rescue dog, Pigeon, or "Pidge." Let me tell you Pidge's story, as shared with me by

"This poor little girl, who is half Australian Cattle Dog and half lab (the shelter folks think) has had a rough life. She's only eleven months old and has spent at least ten of those months in shelters. She started at one as either a hoarding seizure (if you haven't watched "Hoarders" on TV, you can't imagine what life as an animal in one of these nightmare houses is like) or a stray. She was transferred to another shelter, went to a foster home for a while but they returned her to the shelter (talk about rejection!). When we walked into the shelter and asked about her, the shelter folks kind of deep sighed, took us back and told us they'd already had three families in that day to look at her and they all said "no." show, but in an instant her life is shattered and she finds herself waking up This was, apparently, a common thing that had happened the whole time from a coma a year later wondering what on earth happened. Great family she'd been there; again, ten months. They said she is super scared of people At any 'meet and greet' they tried to do, she would just cower and hide, tail tucked, ears back. Any time someone got close or tried to touch her, she'd growl a little and show her teeth. Even their behavioral team hadn't been able to make much progress with her. But she seemed to like other dogs. When we walked in with Wyatt (Nicole's other dog) her tail was tucked up under her body and she was clearly very anxious. However, Pidge was very interested in Wyatt and followed him around, sniffing him. We spent an hour there and these two played, ran around and she loved to chase the ball, too. She even came up to us, sniffing and let me touch her a couple of times with no growling! The shelter staff were taking photos and videos and commenting on how they had never ever seen her act like that before. "A

Since then she's been adjusting. I know it's going to be a long road but I see so much potential in her and progress already. As you can see from the photo, this girl just needed someone to sit and love on her without any expectations that she be engaged. I really feel in my heart that this is going to be the best and Wyatt is going to be so good for her and she for him.

One more thing, she was a candidate for euthanasia because of her "behavior problems." An 11 month old puppy. This is why adopting dogs

Pidge is adjusting to her new home with Nicole, Wyatt, and Nicole's two roommates. All of these young women work at the Wildlife World Zoo, Aquarium and Safari Park in Arizona as sea lion trainers so Pidge is home alone a little more than she needs to be at this stage of her life. There's been a little destruction, not too terribly much, but with plenty of exercise and trips to the dog park to play ball, Pidge is going to settle down and become an ideal pet. Besides, we all know that with a puppy you need to plan on one full year of destruction!

I was so delighted to see the upcoming event, the "Pooch Parade and Pet Adoption" on Saturday, September 21st from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Memorial Park right here in Sierra Madre. There's even a pancake breakfast for just $6! You'll be seeing the ad right here in the Mountain Views News every week from now till then, I'm sure. If you've been thinking about acquiring a pet, wait till September 21st and go see who steals your heart.

KATIE Tse....This and That

Another prime week for recycling an old article. But I rose to the occasion and came up with something new for you. I almost even drew you a picture. I had a great idea for one. The rabbit was going to be a rooster inside someone's head who was sleeping. After you read the article that will all make sense. It would've been great, but as you can see, it didn't come to fruition. But you can use your imagination.

I've only been back to work for about three weeks now, but it feels like so much longer. At the beginning I told myself I'd develop better sleep habits so that I wouldn't be the walking dead stumbling into work in the morning, but my good intentions fizzled after a few days, or nights, I should say.

Thank goodness I've never actually been late to school. I used to have this great carpool buddy, we'll call her Beryl, but she retired. Gosh, I miss riding with her! She's such a riot. Really made the drive to work memorable. I still get together with her every now

This last time she mentioned how she always feared she'd sleep in and be late to school, but that luckily she always woke up in time, though some mornings it was close.

"Did you just sleep through the alarm?" I asked.

"What alarm?"

And that was how it came out that in all her years teaching, Beryl never used an alarm clock.

"Oh, that's alright," I replied to this unexpected revelation. "I guess your husband woke you up when his alarm clock went off."

"He never used one, either."

What!? How do you go through an entire teaching career without the reliability of an alarm clock?

"Do you mean other teachers use them?" Beryl asked me.

I told her I was nearly one hundred percent sure all of our coworkers went to sleep every night resting in the certainty that a familiar ringing would greet them in the morning.

If you knew Beryl, you'd appreciate what a truly Beryl-eque thing this was, just trusting you'd get up in time based on your body's circadian rhythm. When I relayed this to my dad he said it sounded perfectly reasonable, because your subconscious programs itself to wake up at the same time each day, etc.

That may be all well and good, but I don't have that kind of faith in my subconscious. Sure, life needs a little excitement to keep things interesting. But I'm not ready to live on the edge just like that yet.

CHU STATEMENT ON PLANNED PARENTHOOD BEING FORCED OUT OF TITLE X PROGRAM

On Monday afternoon, Planned Parenthood medical advice. announced they would be withdrawing from the the Title X federal grant program, which provides administration funding for contraception, cancer screenings, is making funding for contraception, cancer screenings, is family planning, and STI testing for 4 million healthcare low-income patients a year. The decision comes after a federal appeals court in California failed to block the Trump Administration's "Title X gag rule" which prohibits any Title X grantee from providing or even referring patients to abortion services, even if a patient requests such information. About 40% of Title X patients received their care through Planned Parenthood. Rep. Judy Chu (CA-27) issued the following statement:

"Title X ensures 4 million patients each year have access to necessary health care like cancer screenings and STI testing. It has successfully done this with bipartisan support for half a century. But now, Donald Trump and Mike Pence, two men without a medical degree between them, are making that healthcare contingent on patients being denied full and accurate information about their own bodies. Even if she asked her doctor a direct question about her healthcare options, a patient would be denied accurate information by this detestable gag rule. Unable to control women's bodies directly, Trump and Pence are instead trying to control the conversations they can have with their doctors, violating the doctorpatient relationship and creating a situation where women are given incomplete or inaccurate because often, Planned Parenthood is the only provider they can access in their communities. Those women and their families are now victims of this gag rule and the awful choice it forces on doctors. Fortunately, Planned Parenthood has committed to keeping its doors open and providing medically accurate care to its patients. However, the loss of this funding is a substantial threat to providers like Planned Parenthood and smaller Title X clinics, who could shut down without this funding, leaving some women without an affordable healthcare option in their community. I'm deeply concerned for the millions who are now at risk of having no place to go for contraception, family planning, health screenings, and more. I am proud the House of Representatives passed a funding bill for FY2020 that repealed this discriminatory gag rule, but this rule must be repealed outright. #### SCHIFF INTRODUCES LEGISLATION TO CREATE A FEDERAL DOMESTIC TERRORISM CRIME

Rep. Adam Schiff, Chairman of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, introduced legislation last week – The Confronting the Threat of Domestic Terrorism Act - that would create a federal domestic terrorism crime. It would cover, among other things, terrorist acts by domestic actors without links to foreign organizations; and thus ensure that attacks like the one in El Paso, the Tree of Life Synagogue in Pittsburgh, and the Emanuel African Episcopal Church in Charleston can be punished for what they are – terrorism.

Even though Americans today are more likely to be killed by white-supremacists than international terrorism organizations while on American soil, treating these terrorist acts, including racist or anti-Semitic shootings, differently than other acts of terrorism makes the public take it less seriously. This legislation will tackle that challenge by providing new and necessary tools to prosecutors and investigators to respond to the rising threat of domestic terrorism.

Schiff stated: "The attack in El Paso by a white for the first time create a domestic terrorism crime, and thus provide prosecutors with new tools to combat these devastating crimes. When violence fueled by homegrown, hateful ideology poses a more immediate threat to the safety and security of Americans on American soil than an international terrorist organization, it's time for our laws to catch up. The bill is also narrowly tailored to violent terrorist acts, and includes a variety of civil liberties protections to ensure against its misuse."

The legislation is narrowly crafted and includes protections to ensure it is not misused. Among other things, it requires that before any charges may be brought, the Attorney General or their deputy provide a written certification that in their judgement the crimes committed meet the standards of the statute - including the requirement that the offender intended to intimidate or coerce a civilian population or to influence government policy through coercion or intimidation. It further requires the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board (PCLOB) to prepare a public report on the civil liberties implications of the statute within four years supremacist is only the most recent in a disturbing of passage. Finally, unlike the international and growing trend of domestic terrorism, terrorism context, it does not establish a list of fueled by racism and hatred. The Confronting domestic terrorism organizations, something that the Threat of Domestic Terrorism Act would potentially raises serious First Amendment issues.

AVANTI ITALIAN BISTRO POST ROLLING STONES HANG OVER CURE

Over the past few months I have made it a point to let my readers know that I am in a constant search for the family owned restaurant. You may accurately say, it is the Holy Grail for this Restaurant Critic. It is the American dream for many and a business which has put many a child through diapers and college. It may stem out of some kind of shameless guilt which I carry. For I have written about the Big Chains almost exclusively these past few months, but I vowed that I would return to my true love, the Local Corner Restaurant. I think I found the Grail. Tap your heels together three times and just repeat the words, "There's no place like home, there's no place like home." It has been there right in front of me the whole time!

Avanti Italian Bistro uses a wood fire pizza oven. They are responsible for some of the area's best gourmet pizzas. On my last visit I was to enjoy the glazed Apple Pizza ($16 Range) and a traditional Pepperoni Pizza for ($13 Range). One of the tests I put to each restaurant that I review is their soup. Avanti makes an unbelievable Chicken Barley Soup, all I can add is, Wow. If you live in the area for any length of time you have certainly passed the Avanti countless times. Need another reason to stop the next time. The Giuseppe Pizza ($17.95) is loaded with Spinach, Ricotta, Chicken Breast, Mushrooms and Red Peppers, all very fresh and perfectly baked in these

The setting at Avanti is as you would expect a restaurant like this; unpretentious and very welcoming. There is a small parking lot in the back, seating is fairly limited here but Avanti maintains a nice selection of beer / wine and a small bar. It has won the appetite of many loyal customers, along with numerous awards, which it can showcase. I give it thumbs up. Well worth the drive from wherever you are reading this. My daughter Lauren has to have the Garlic Knots with each visit. She knows her stuff, and you will love them too!!!

Don't litter! Period. OK, now that I've gotten that out of my system, here's another perspective.

Did you all see the movie "The Gods Must Be Crazy"? A bush pilot drops a soda bottle out of the plane and falls into the midst of some aboriginal people. They have never seen such a device before and they all use it for a dozen or so practical uses. As far as they were concerned, the gods in heaven dropped them this new tool to make life easier.

An aluminum can is another of those multi-purpose objects that can literally be a life-safer if you're lost or stranded. With an aluminum can - and a bit of skill and your Swiss Army knife - you can make a fire, purify water, cook, signal, and do a few other things! That makes the discarded aluminum can a "multi-purpose tool."

Let's take a look at the many uses of an aluminum can that you happen to find.

I was a bit skeptical when I first heard about making a fire using the bottom of an aluminum beer or soda can, but it actually works. The very bottom of an aluminum can is not a true parabolic dish, but when highly polished, it can be used to focus the sun's rays to a point and ignite tinder.

Polishing the bottom

The best polishing agent I've found for this is fine steel wool. However, it's always good to know several ways to do each task, and if you don't have steel wool, try tooth paste.

Polish the bottom of the can for about 10 minutes, until you have an obviously-bright and highly reflective surface. Once the bottom of the can has the high polish, you are ready to make fire.

Point the bottom of the can towards the sun, and then move your tinder into the bottom area, watching for the point where the light focusses to a point. When you find that point, keep your tinder there until you get your coal. PURIFY WATER

One of the most important skills in the back-country is the ability to purify your water. If you're just out for the day without all your normal equipment, you might not have a water filter or purification pills. So just fill the aluminum can with your suspect water, and boil it over a fire. Boiling will kill any of the biological contaminants that might make you sick. If the water has stuff in it, then by all means pour the water through a cloth first.

CANDLE HOLDER LANTERN

I have seen several versions of candle lanterns using a beer can, but the easiest is to simply cut two "doors" into the can, and set the candle into the can securely with a bit of hot wax. You then use the tab on the top to hang the lantern wherever you want it. The doors can be adjusted so that the light reflects where you want it, and to help protect the candle from the wind.

SIGNALLING MIRROR

It's easy to make an emergency signaling mirror from an aluminum can. Just cut a circle or a square from the can. Aluminum is soft and you can do this with the scissors on your Swiss army knife, or with any knife.

If you've ever used a regular signaling mirror, you know that it helps to have a little hole in the middle of the mirror to sight through. If the sun is in the ideal spot in the sky, and if the person flying overhead happens to be looking your way, perhaps someone will notice your signal mirror and hopefully someone will respond appropriately. Who knows?

LEAVING A NOTE

You're lost with nothing, but there's an aluminum can. You can cut a piece of the aluminum and write a note on it for other people to read. You don't need a pencil -- just find a thin stick to carve your letters into the aluminum. Then hang it in a prominent place for others to see whatever you need to communicate. The piece of aluminum will be shiny and will be more obvious than a paper note which might get blown away, or rained on. This is akin

NEW STATE REGULATIONS HAVE FURTHER ERODED LOCAL CONTROL OVER HOUSING DECISIONS

As the City prepares to consider several large-scale development projects, one housing note that we wanted to share with everyone relates to the impact that recent State legislation has had on our local land use controls as it relates to housing development. As you may recall, in 2017 and in 2018, the State approved a series of legislative amendments to the Housing Accountability Act (HAA), which combined has reduced local government authority to deny or reduce the density of proposed housing development projects.

To highlight how those pieces of legislation impact a municipality's ability to regulate development, a full memo on the matter can be found online. In particular, I wanted to highlight some of the key changes that staff is currently grappling with:

The new regulations adopted by the State stipulate that if a project conforms to a City's applicable development standards (i.e., no variances or exceptions are sought), it will be extremely difficult for the City to legally deny any housing project.

Furthermore, while a City can still institute a design and neighborhood compatibility review process, the City essentially now cannot deny a housing development project, or impose conditions that the project be developed at a lower density, unless strict findings can be identified which indicate that a project would have a specific, adverse impact on public health or safety.

Again, a memo outlining all of the new State mandated housing development regulations that we are contending with can be found online.

EDUCATION & YOUTH

BACK TO SCHOOL, BACK TO THE FUTURE

By Dr. Edward C. Ortell, Citrus College Area 3 Trustee

The signs of fall are upon us. No, not cooler days and autumn leaves. Rather it's the abundant information about college courses and dorm room decor and the deluge of ads for school supplies that are popping up in mailboxes, magazines, and just about everywhere we go.

If you are thinking about upgrading your lifestyle with a new career or better paying job in 2020, now is the time to act.

Education pays—especially in today's job market. Middle skill jobs, those that require more than a high school diploma but less than a bachelor's degree, make up some of the fastest growing employment sectors in the country.

Affordable local community colleges offer career training in fields as diverse as nursing, real estate, construction management, and performing arts. A community college can place you on a low-cost pathway to a bachelor's degree. Or, you can upgrade your skills and earning potential by taking a few courses that will give you advanced technical training or up-to-date computer skills.

If you are a first generation college student, have limited finances or are unsure about navigating complex admission procedures, a community college is the place for you. Student support services abound and friendly staff will walk you through registration, the financial aid process, creating an educational plan, tutoring options and much more. Work with them to design a program that fits your current work and family responsibilities and will lead to college success.

What could be more exciting than starting this fall with a viable plan for achieving the career of your dreams? As Mark Twain so famously said, ""Find a job you enjoy doing, and you will never have to work a day in your life."

PLAYDATE - CELEBRATING 40 YEARS OF KIDSPACE

PASADENA, CA (August 23, 2019) Calling all adults! Why should kids have all the fun? This fall Kidspace Children's Museum will celebrate 40 years of PLAY by hosting its second annual PLAYDATE. On Thursday, September 19 from 6:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., guests will be treated to an evening of signature cocktails and tasty bites. Guests will explore the campus with friends and have the chance to 'be a kid again' as they ride adult tricycles, participate in drum circles, race rubber duckies, and of course, sing and dance. This after-hours event will give guests the opportunity to play their way through this one-ofa-kind museum experience.

"I am very proud of the impact Kidspace continues to make in Southern California - 40 years is a true accomplishment. From excited first time student visitors, to parents who enthusiastically remember their favorite exhibit from childhood, to delighted grandparents who play alongside their grandchildren, it seems that everyone has fond memories of 'growing up at Kidspace'." Mike Bryant, Board President, went on to say, "We created PLAYDATE as a fun and unique way for adults to 'be a kid again' at Kidspace, while building and strengthening the museum's annual fund for today's guests and future generations.'

PLAYDATE gives the community an opportunity to come together in support of Kidspace's annual fund, which includes Kidspace for All access programs and daily activities. In 2018, the museum served nearly 380,000 guests, 90,000 of whom gained access through Kidspace for All free and discounted programs. This represents a lot of splashing, mud-pies, tugs on the lever, puppet shows, walks across the rope-bridge, and animal encounters. Life-changing moments are made possible each year because community supporters believe in the power of play at Kidspace.

Kidspace for All programs include: Free Family Nights, Museums Free-For-All day, Kidspace on the Road outreach programs, military members discounts, My Masterpieces art program for Pasadena Unified School District's kindergarten students, and EBT reduced cost admission.

PLAYDATE tickets start at $40. Patron and sponsorship opportunities are also available. Please visit kidspacemuseum.org/playdate or call (626) 243-4508 for more information.

This event is made possible by the following sponsors: Armanino LLP, Firestone Walker Brewing Company, JACMAR Foodservice Distribution, Kikori Whiskey, O'Melveny & Myers LLP, Outlook Newspapers, Pasadena Now, Payden & Rygel, Playhouse District Association, and Tito's Handmade Vodka. ## FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

HOW WILL THE COMING WEALTH TRANSFER AFFECT YOUR FAMILY?

Whether it's called "The Great Wealth Transfer," "The Silver Tsunami," or some other catchy-sounding name, it's a fact that a tremendous amount of wealth will pass from aging Baby Boomers to younger generations in the next few decades. In fact, it's said to be the largest transfer of intergenerational wealth in history.

Because no one knows exactly how long Boomers will live or how much money they'll spend before they pass on, it's impossible to accurately predict just how much wealth will be transferred. But studies suggest it's somewhere between $30 and $50 trillion. Yes, that's "trillion" with a "T."

A blessing or a curse?

And while most are talking about the benefits this asset transfer might have for younger generations and the economy, few are talking about its potential negative ramifications. Yet there's plenty of evidence suggesting that many people, especially younger generations, are woefully unprepared to

Indeed, an Ohio State University study found that one third of people who received an inheritance had a negative savings within two years of getting the money. Another study by The Williams Group found that intergenerational wealth transfers often become a source of tension and dispute among family members, and 70% of such transfers fail by the time they reach the second generation. Whether you will be inheriting or passing on this wealth, it's crucial to have a plan in place to reduce the potentially calamitous effects such transfers can lead to. Without proper estate planning, the money and other assets that get passed on can easily become more of a curse than a blessing.

Thereareseveral proactive measures you can take to help stave off the risks posed by the big wealth transfer. Beyond having a comprehensive estate plan, openly discussing your values and legacy with your loved ones can bekey to ensuring your planning strategies work exactly as you intended. Here's what we suggest: Create a plan: If you haven't created your estate plan yet—and far too many folks haven't—it's essential that you put a plan in place as soon as possible. It doesn't matter how young you are or if you have a family yet, all adults over 18 should have some basic planning vehicles in place. From there, be sure to regularly review your plan (and update it immediately after major life events like marriage, births, deaths, inheritances, and divorce) throughout your lifetime. Discuss wealth with your family early and often: Don't put off talking about wealth with your family until you're in retirement or nearing death. Clearly communicate with your children and grandchildren what wealth means to you and how you'd like them to use the assets they inherit when you pass away. Make such discussions a regular event, so you can address different aspects of wealth and your family legacy as they grow and mature. When discussing wealth with your family members, focus on the values you want to instill, rather than what and how much they can expect to inherit. Let them know what values are most important to you and try to mirror those values in your family life as much as possible. Whether it's saving and investing, charitable giving, or community service, having your kids live your values while growing up is often the best way to ensure they carry them on once you're gone. Communicate your wealth's purpose: Outside of clearly communicating your values, you should also discuss the specific purpose(s) you want your wealth to serve in your loved ones' lives. You worked hard to build your family wealth, so you've more than earned the right to stipulate how it gets used and managed when you're gone. Though you can create specific terms and conditions for your wealth's future use in planning vehicles like a living trust, don't make your loved ones wait until you're dead to learn exactly how you want their inheritance used. If you want your wealth to be used to fund your children's college education, provide the down payment on their first home, or invested for their retirement, tell them so. By discussing such things while you're still around, you can ensure your loved ones know exactly why you made the planning decisions you did. And doing so can greatly reduce future conflict and confusion about what your true wishes really are.

Secure your wealth, your legacy, and your family's future
Regardless of how much or how little wealth you plan to pass on—or stand to inherit—it's vital that you take steps to make sure that wealth is protected and put to the best use possible. A good plan should facilitate your ability to communicate your most treasured values, experiences, and stories with the ones you're leaving behind so you can rest assured that the coming wealth transfer offers the maximum benefit for those you love most.

We believe it is our role to support our residents, not to assume complete decision-making authority. #### HOW TO GET SOCIAL SE-CURITY DISABILITY BENEFITS WHEN YOU CAN'T WORK

Dear Savvy Senior:

What do I need to do to get Social Security disability benefits? I'm 60 years old and have some health problems that won't allow me to work, but I've read that getting disability benefits is difficult. Laid Up Lenny

Dear Lenny:

Getting Social Security disability benefits when you're unable to work can be challenging. Last year, more than 2 million people applied for Social Security disability benefits, but two-thirds of them were denied, because most applicants fail to prove that they're disabled and can't work. Here are some steps you can take that can help improve your odds.

Get Informed

The first thing you need to find out is if your health problem qualifies you for Social Security disability benefits.

You generally will be eligible only if you have a health problem that is expected to prevent you from working in your current line of work (or any other line of work that you have been in over the past 15 years) for at least a year or result in death.

There is no such thing as a partial disability benefit. If you're fit enough to work part-time, your application will be denied. You also need not apply if you still are working with the intention of quitting if your application is approved, because if you're working your application will be denied.

Your skill set and age are factors too. Your application will be denied if your work history suggests that you have the skills to perform a less physically demanding job that your disability does not prevent you from doing.

To help you determine if you are disabled, visit SSA.gov/planners/disability/qualify.html and go through the five questions Social Security uses to determine disability.

How to Apply

If you believe you have a claim, your next step is to gather up your personal, financial and medical information so you can be prepared and organized for the application process.

You can apply either online at SSA.gov/applyfordisability or call 800-772-1213 to make an appointment to apply at your local Social Security office, or to set up an appointment for someone to take your claim over the phone.

The whole process lasts about an hour. If you schedule an appointment, a "Disability Starter Kit" that will help you get ready for your interview will be mailed to you. If you apply online, the kit is available atŚŚÁ.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits.htm.

It takes three to five months from the initial application to receive either an award or denial of benefits. The only exception is if you have a chronic illness that qualifies you for a "compassionate allowance" (seeSSA.gov/compassionateallowances), which fast tracks cases within weeks.

If Social Security denies your initial application, you can appeal the decision, and you'll be happy to know that roughly half of all cases that go through a round or two of appeals end with benefits being awarded. But the bad news is with backlog of around 800,000 people currently waiting for a hearing, it can take 12 to 24 months for you to get one.

Get Help

You can hire a representative to help you with your Social Security disability claim. By law, representatives can charge only 25 percent of past-due benefits up to a maximum of $6,000 if they win

It's probably worth hiring someone at the start of the application process if your disability is something difficult to prove such as chronic pain. If, however, your disability is obvious, it might be worth initially working without a representative to avoid paying the fee. You can always hire a representative later if your initial application and first appeal are denied.

To find a representative, check with the National Organization of Social Security Claimants' Representatives (NOSSCR.org, 845-682-1881) or National Association of Disability Representatives (NADR.org, 800-747-6131). Or, if you're low-income, contact the Legal Services Corporation (LSC.gov/find-legal-aid) for free assistance.

Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visitSavvySenior. org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today show and author of "The Savvy Senior" book.

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

IT'S HARD FOR ME TO CONCEAL A GIGGLE

Throughout life, I have discovered many challenges. Some I have handled fairly well and others have handled me pretty badly. That is what makes life so interesting. Every day there is a challenge to face and every day there is a victory to win.

Recently, the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and I celebrated our 48th wedding anniversary. I would not be truthful if I did not admit that those 48 years have been rather challenging. Not so much in a negative way, but each challenge carried with it a life lesson.

At the end of these 48 years, I must confess my wife knows more about me then I know about myself, or her for that matter. How she has come to these conclusions, I do not know. But, to be honest I do not know very much about myself compared to what she knows. Not wasting those 48 years, I never contradict my wife on anything. Even, if I think she may be wrong about something. There are spouses that try to correct their spouse when talking to other people. I am so thankful that while I am speaking to someone my wife will correct me so the person I am talking to has the facts. After all, she knows more about me and my experiences than I do. I am not contesting that one iota.

The biggest secret to a successful marriage is going along rather than being confrontational. It does not matter to me if she corrects me; I've come to appreciate that.

After all, I get so many things wrong these days. I cannot remember birthdays, anniversaries or special occasions. It's not because I'm getting older because when I was younger, I had the same problem.

If I were not married, I probably would not remember my own birthday.

Thinking about this the other day a thought danced into my mind. If I wanted to be right all the time, why in the world did I get married? A married couple is to work together and it seems that we have the ideal connection in this regard. I remember when I wore a younger man's suit; I nonchalantly corrected my wife about a certain thing that happened when she got the day of the week wrong.

"Don't you remember, Honey," I interrupted her, "it was on a Wednesday not a Thursday." She gave me one of "those looks" and said, "Maybe it was a Thursday." That look alone was enough to graduate me from being the corrector of her conversation to being the quiet agreeable guy. Through the years, I discovered being agreeable is a great deal of blessings and I enjoyed each one of those blessings. One thing I have a real difficulty and that is, not giggling. I may be affected with giggle-itis, which is far as I know has no cure. Of course, when I start giggling it is very difficult for me to stop. The only temporary cure I have found is when I start to giggle, I take a deep breath and then think of broccoli. If anything sobers me up and even makes me a little bit angry it is this vegetable. Of course, when I begin thinking of broccoli, the giggle goes away, but a very deep sickness in my stomach begins to develop. That sickness in my stomach is to be preferred over giggling aloud at a very inappropriate time. My giggles always seem to come out at an inappropriate time.

I remember my wife telling a story to some friends about one of our grandchildren. If she knows anything, she knows about the grandkids. She has a Masters degree in grandchildrenology. This time, however, she got the grandkids names mixed up. She had the one doing what another grandchild

Nobody knew the difference except me. As she continued developing this story, it got beyond my giggle control.

When my giggles start, my eyes begin lighting up like a laser beam. Following that, my lips start trembling out of which multiple giggles escape. Once my lips start trembling it is all over.

I knew the real story and the names and the way she told the story using the wrong name was so hilarious for anybody who knew the real story. I will not divulge the names now because it was too

As she continued with the story, it got so bad I had to pinch my nose to stop any giggling.

At the time, I was beginning to smile and my wife happened to see me.

For me to keep from giggling, I had to think about something else. So, when she looked at me and said, "What are you thinking about?"

At this point, I was on automatic pilot. When I opened my mouth, I had a choice. Do I giggle or do I mention the word broccoli? I had no control. I opened my mouth and said, "I was thinking about broccoli." The people knew me very well and as soon as they heard that word, they started laughing hysterically. When they started laughing my giggle-itis exploded like I haven't seen it explode before. I thought of what Sarah said after Isaac was born,

"God has brought me laughter, and everyone who hears about this will laugh with me." (Genesis 21:6). Laughter, or a giggle, is recognition of God's blessing in my life.

JOHN MICEK CAN TWO EX-GOVERNORS OFFER HOPE FOR CONSENSUS?

Politics, the Prussian statesman Otto von Bismarck famously said, "is the art of the possible, the attainable the art of the next best."

Surveying our political landscape these days, it's all too easy to conclude that our elected leaders can't even get to the next, next best. Or whatever comes after that. I'm thinking about

Whether it's President Donald Trump's abrupt pivot on gun control this week, or Congress' ongoing inability to pass on-time federal budgets or reach agreements on such issues as infrastructure spending where, we keep failing on areas where there appears to be broad, bipartisan consensus. Meanwhile, news consumers are battered by the constant barrage of tweets, half-baked policy ideas and partisan sniping emanating from both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue. Is it any wonder that we're all cynical? But what if - just if - there was some parallel dimension where government functions according to that Platonic ideal that, well, some of us, anyway, hold

On Sept. 18, on the campus of York College in south-central Pennsylvania, two former Keystone State governors – Democrat Ed Rendell and Republican Mark S. Schweiker -- will try to reach consensus on one of the most intractable public policy issues of our time: immigration reform and state govern-

And they're going to do it in an hour. Yes, an hour.

That's the goal of the "Democracy Challenge," a new effort sponsored by the York County Economic Alliance, a regional economic development advocacy group.

"There was a time in our country, where our leaders would conduct substantial debates on the issues," said Kevin Schreiber, the president and CEO of the York County Economic Alliance. "There was a time where the ability to compromise was seen as a prerequisite for service and not as a weakness.

It's kind of perfect in a way that this exercise in idealism is taking place on a college campus. And there's a lovely irony that Schreiber, a former Democratic member of Pennsylvania's House of Representatives, is the guy who's overseeing it. He's been a roadside witness to plenty of legislative car crashes.

"Politics has become a zero-sum game, one that now picks winners and losers," he said. "Cynicism in government is contagious. Indeed, public trust in government is at "historic lows," according to the Pew

In the Trump era, just 17 percent of Americans told Pew pollsters they trust government "always" or "most of the time." That's down from a high of 77 percent in October 1964 - after President John F. Kennedy's assassination, but before the full conflagration of the Vietnam War.

Schweiker served a little less than two years, from 2001 to 2002, when Republican Gov. Tom Ridge resigned to become President George W. Bush's first homeland security czar in those dark hours after the Sept. 11 terror attacks.

He said in a statement that he hopes the event "will inspire [elected] leaders ... to consider that even with competing points of view that we can come together to create a solution that generates accountability."

Rendell, the former Philadelphia mayor who served two terms from 2002 to 2010, said an agreement on immigration could be achievable because it "isn't an issue that breaks Republican or Democrat."

Clearly, that message hasn't penetrated in Washington. But no matter.

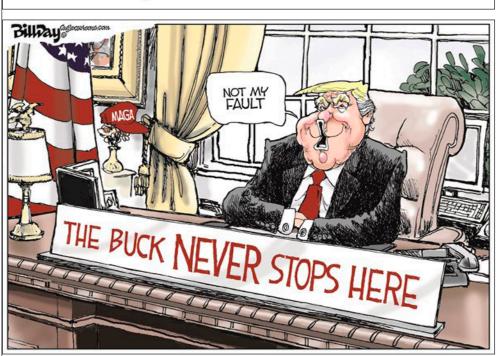

Schreiber said he hopes the Sept. 18 event, which is being co-sponsored by both York College and cable titan Comcast, will become an annual occurrence, drawing in college students and others to work together to find common ground.

And maybe they'll even give our battered a public dialogue a lift while they're at it. Hoping for a return to sanity in government might be a little far-fetched. Especially these days.

But compared to, say, buying Greenland, it's a walk-off.

DEMOCRATS WRONG TO TURN THEIR BACKS ON ANTI-TRUMP REPUBLICANS

derstood that in times of national emergency, was imperative to forge alliances with anyone willing to help - no matter how odious those allies might be. As the British prime minister famously declared in 1941, "If Hitler invaded hell, I would make at least a favorable reference to the devil in the House of Commons."

In politics, as in international warfare, you win by addition, not subtraction. You win by welcoming anyone who wants to join the ranks. That's how successful coalitions are built. But it's amazing how so many litmus-test Democrats seem impervious to reality.

The other day, Oliver Willis, a senior writer at the liberal media website ShareBlue, tweeted his disdain for three prominent anti-Trump Republicans: ex-GOP congressman Joe Walsh, and conservative commentators Bill Kristol and David Frum, all of whom have signaled their willingness to make common cause with Democrats.

good. David Frum isn't good. These people are not worthy allies," Willis wrote. "They're working to undermine what is good. They're just embarrassed at Trump for saying the BS out loud."

Willis was applauded by many in the lefty Twitterverse. But prominent Trump critics on the right - including George Conway, Max Boot, George Will, and Peter Wehner - give voice to the restiveness within Republicanfriendly ranks. According to recent polling, it appears a sizable number of reality-based Republicans and Republican-leaning independents are loath to vote for Trump again - not necessarily because they now oppose him on policy, but because his tweets and sional staffer, added: "The enemy of my reckless antics have simply exhausted

For instance, Tom Nichols is a Republican who teaches at the U.S. Naval War College who is begging for any reason to vote Democratic in 2020. Or as the old saying goes, "Politics He wrote last Thursday: "I don't care makes strange bedfellows." That's still if Sen. Elizabeth Warren is a mendacious Massachusetts liberal. She could the Republican migrants by building tell me that she's going to make me wear waffles as underpants and I'll vote for her ... I don't care if Vermont Sen.

W i n s t o n Bernie Sanders is a muddle-headed so-Churchill un- cialist from a rural class-warfare state ... He could tell me he's going to tax used kitty litter and I'll vote for him."

Why? Because Nichols is fed up with Trump's "compulsive lying, fantastic and easily refuted claims, base insults, and bizarre public meltdowns ... It is a sign of how low we have fallen as a nation that 'rational' and 'not compromised by an enemy' are now my only two requirements for the office of the president of the United States.

And Boot, an ex-foreign policy adviser to John McCain and Mitt Romney, is rooting for a blue victory. Earlier this month, he pleaded: "Don't mess this up, Democrats. To preserve American democracy, we need to get rid of Trump. Then we can return to debating our normal policy differences."

But because these people have toiled for the red team - George Conway (who calls Trump "a sociopath") helped investigate Bill Clinton's sex history during the 1990s, and Bill Kristol was a cheerleader for George W. Bush's Iraq war - they're deemed to be unacceptable allies in 2019. As one liberal magazine, The Nation, contended 'Joe Walsh isn't good. Bill Kristol isn't recently, "They've had their day. Democrats don't need their votes."

> Really? If I've learned anything while covering national politics for the last 30 years, it's the axiom that a campaign or a party needs all the votes it can possibly get. That's not exactly rocket science. And fortunately, during that Twitter spat the other day, some Democrats seemed to get it.

> Neera Tanden, a former Hillary Clinton advisor who now runs the Center for American Progress, wrote, "Our democracy is under siege. Make allies wherever you can. We can disagree again when Trump is gone.'

Elizabeth Bennett, a former congresenemy is my friend, at least while our mutual enemy is still a threat. Maybe we should just graciously accept the help b/c they can speak to people who won't listen to us.

MANY DEMOCRATS REMAIN UNDETERRED BY LONG ODDS AND LOW NUMBERS

In every election campaign, there comes a point when cruel reality intrudes, forcing candidate and staff to confront the growing likelihood that victory is out of reach and further expenditure of time, money and dedication to a cause is futile.

For more than 20 candidates remaining in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination, that moment has arrived.

It is a personally wrenching decision, a public acknowledgement that one's beliefs and principles have failed to create a deep impression on the public mind and support has diminished to an unsustainable level.

For those Democrats who have consistently failed to exceed three per cent in the Real Clear Politics polling average - national as well as in individual states continuing their quest is a willing suspension of disbelief.

CARL GOLDEN

Using the RCP three percent average as the benchmark measurement to remain in the race, 17 announced candidates would fail to make the cut. While nine candidates have already qualified for the next debate in September, four have failed to break three per cent.

Of the remainder, several - including sitting governors, and ex-Congress members - have failed to achieve greater than one percent. Even four of the candidates whom have qualified for the debate have consistently fallen under three percent and, while hope springs eternal, their candidacies are hanging by a thread.

If all below three percent conceded, the field would narrow to an eminently manageable five - former Vice President Joe Biden, Sens. Bernie Sanders of Vermont, Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts, and Kamala Harris of California, and South Bend, Ind., Mayor Pete

In less than six months, voters in Iowa will make their way to caucuses and, for the moment at least, the third and fourth tier candidates have nothing to lose by continuing their campaigns even though the hopes of a number of them will lie buried under snowdrifts in the state's cornfields.

Seemingly undeterred by the long odds against them, rationales for keeping their candidacies alive range from consideration as the vice presidential running mate, securing a Cabinet or high level post in a Democratic Administration, attempting to influence the party's direction and agenda, building an identification for a later run, or merely because it's fun and ego-boosting.

The size of the field has wrought havoc on the two debates held so far, chaotic and embarrassing exercises in personal insults, raised voices, discourteous interruptions, talking over one another, and - sadly - offering little of substance on issues.

The universal takeaways from these confrontations has been that of a party shoved further and further to the left, embracing out of the mainstream ideas that will come back to haunt the eventual nominee.

Debating proposals to decriminalize illegal border crossings, end private health care insurance, and spend trillions of dollars on social welfare programs plays directly into President Trump's wheelhouse.

Even though the "Moderates need not apply" sign has been posted outside national party headquarters, Biden - the quintessential middle lane contender - has held the polling lead ever since he entered the race. The former vice president has littered the landscape with misstatements and non-sequitur's, raising concerns about his intellectual agility but he's been able to overcome them by remaining the candidate most favored to defeat Trump.

Shrinking the field by persuasion, appeals to loyalty, or emphasizing the overwhelming need to turn Trump out of the White House may succeed, particularly after the Iowa caucuses and certainly after the New Hampshire primary.

Force will not. The party boss days are long gone, replaced by the cult of self-interested personality. Pressure will be met with counter pressure, stubbornness and animosity. Voluntary withdrawal, leaving with dignity intact and pride in having given it one's best shot is the only way to cull the field and assuring that all involved will continue to talk to one

The immense personal difficulty in reaching the decision should not be minimized or dismissed. Belief in one's self is a powerful motivator, even though it occasionally clouds one's better judgment and blinds one to a reality seen and understood by others.

The political environment can be an exciting and exhilarating place, but it can also be a cold and cruel place, bringing down well-meaning individuals possessed of noble aims. By next spring, trees will be in bud, temperatures comfortable, songbirds in full throat and five Democrats will remain standing.
