Media Gets Close-Up 2020 Rover

Members of the media walked the clean-room floor at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California, on Dec. 27 to glimpse the agency's Mars 2020 rover and speak with experts working on the mission. It was the media's only opportunity to see the rover from inside the clean room prior to its shipment to Cape Canaveral in February.

"It was a great opportunity for the media not only to see our work close up, but to meet some of the women and men who have dedicated several years of their careers ensuring this next Mars rover lives up to the legacy of those that were built here before it," said David Gruel, the Mars 2020 assembly, test and launch operations manager at JPL.

The clean room, also known as the Spacecraft Assembly Facility's High Bay 1, is where all four of NASA's Mars rovers were constructed: the microwave-oven-sized Sojourner, which landed in 1997; the golf-cart-sized Mars Exploration Rovers Spirit and Opportunity, which landed in 2004; and Curiosity rover, about the size of a Mini Cooper, which has been exploring the Red Planet's Mount Sharp region since Scheduled to launch in July or August 2020, the Mars 2020 rover will land in Jezero Crater on Feb. 18, 2021. There it will search for signs of past microbial life, characterize Mars' climate and geology, collect samples for future return to Earth and pave the way for human exploration of the Red Planet.

Both to ensure that as few Earthly microbes as possible keep out particles that could interfere with the rover's operations, High Bay 1 comes with strict cleanliness standards: Anyone entering the clean room, whether a technician or a journalist, must wear a "bunny suit," booties, a hair cover, a face mask and latex gloves. Because notepads and writing implements could shed dust and other particles, speciallyapproved paper and pens were provided to visiting media members on request.

In the coming weeks, engineers and technicians will pack the 2020 rover into a specially-designed container. After it arrives at the Cape, Mars 2020 will undergo final processing and testing before JPL built and will manage operations of the Mars 2020 rover for NASA. NASA's Launch Services Program, based at the agency's Kennedy Space Center in Florida, is responsible for launch management.

Mars 2020 is part of a larger program that includes missions to the Moon as a way to prepare for human exploration of the Red Planet. Charged with returning astronauts to the Moon by 2024, NASA will establish a sustained human presence on and around the Moon by 2028 through NASA's Artemis lunar exploration plans.

BONDERIZED

SO close to article

having a new for you. Started and everything, but things came up, you know how it is. So sorry.

I feel guilty recycling old stuff yet again. But at least the picture's kinda' interesting, right? Promise I'll finish it for next week. It's about Gerry Brooks. Look him up on YouTube if you want a funny sneak peak!

Sometimes inspiration comes from the most unusual places. I was in the ladies' room at work and, for the first time, actually read the label on the peeling off a door like an onion.

It was probably meant to impress us. And indeed I was impressed, because I certainly wouldn't know where to begin building a bathroom stall door myself. Anyway, I noticed the label said, "Bonderized."

I'd heard of bonded, as in, "The step-father bonded with his wife's son during their fishing trip." And then there's bonded like, "Triglycerides were discovered when scientists bonded hydrogen to carbon; making the miracles of margarine and 'Cheese Whiz' possible." But "bonderized"... The first thing that came to mind was Bond. James Bond.

Working from this definition, to Bonderize something means to infuse it with stealth, danger, a Scottish accent, promiscuity, or all of the above. A Bonderized drink is shaken, not stirred.

Since 007 is known for nifty gadgets, uninspired house ware can be Bonderized into more fashionable items. For example, you might cringe if someone saw your nose/ear-hair trimmer lying in plain view on the bathroom counter. But if it looks like a remote control, they might think, "Ooh, I bet he has a TV or stereo hooked up in here somewhere!" 'Cuz we all know a secret hidden bathroom entertainment system is sexier than a nose hair

The rest of the stall door sticker was worn with age, and I could barely read, "Sanyware: Guaranteed life long quality." I looked them up, and it appears they're still operating, specializing in different stall arrangements and galvanization.

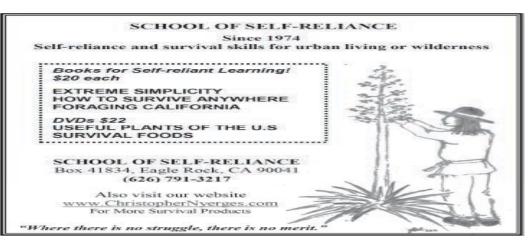

My mom told me about a bathroom at her school that was built by the WPA during the Depression. Someone by the name of Peter Goodwall engraved his name a floor tile in one of the stalls for posterity to contemplate while relieving themselves.

I guess there's something admirable about that. Some continuity between the past, present, and future. All connected (Ha, bonded!) through the necessity of work and public toilets. Kind of deep when you think about it.

And if the idea of Bonderization wasn't thoroughly captivating enough, I noticed the bottom of the sticker read, "To be removed after architect's inspection." Not only was this a really old bathroom stall, but apparently it wasn't even been inspected. I suppose using an uninspected stall adds a certain flair of danger to the ladies' room. So in that sense, it's

WALKING SIERRA MADRE - The Social Side

"Sunrises Shout Hope! Though it seems the night will never end, There's a sunrise waiting, Joy is coming, hope is coming, Right around the bend.

Lift your eyes toward the sunrise, God, Himself, The Creator of the Universe, Has created a brand new day! Every day a new beginning, Hope is on the way.

> Look to the east, sunrise exploding! The darkest night will end. Joy is coming, hope is coming, Right around the bend."

That's the poem that graces the back cover of my book, "Sunrises and Sunflowers Speak Hope." And the front cover is the picture this week. Yes, I know, blatant self-promotion, but it's so full of hope that I want to share that with you.

There's a concept going around, brought to my attention by Michelle Griep, successful author and blogger. Look her up, check out all her books and be amazed. I've quoted her before as she's always right on the mark. Anyway, the concept is to pick one word to be your New Year's resolution or mission statement for the year. There was even a book a few years back: My One Word: Change Your Life With Just One Word by Mike Ashcraft and Rachel Olsen. This is so cool as you can immediately dump those high-minded and probably impossible resolutions like vowing to exercise every day of the coming year. I'm good with this one except that it usually doesn't work out for me the way I hope it will...there's that word again, hope! I set out this morning a little after 7:00 stuffed with good intentions to do a really good walk; then I discovered that it was 43 degrees and a nasty little breeze made it feel way colder than that. I got all the way around the block and decided it would make much more sense for me to go inside, have a cup of coffee and pay some bills, with the heat on. Maybe tomorrow.

Then there's that ever popular favorite: Lose Weight. I'm not even going to go further with that one except to say that I need to. The Keto diet is the current fad and isn't actually that difficult. You can have seafood, which is great with me, low-carb veggies, i.e., cauliflower, squash, kale and broccoli. Step away from that potato and don't even think about a sandwich. My Sierra Madre daughter, Leah, and I were reminiscing about all the diets we've been on over the years and decided the absolute worst was The Beverly Hills Diet which, at that time, was based on eating vast quantities of fresh pineapple and other fruits. I don't remember if we lost any weight or not, but all that pineapple made my teeth hurt so I gave it up. There's a New Beverly Hills Diet, I just discovered, that is much more forgiving and even permits champagne, considered a neutral entity and you can have it with anything. I like that!

I'm still smiling thinking of the theme of the Rose Parade, "The Power of Hope."

The word I picked last year is: HOPE!

And I'm picking it again this year. I'm going to lean heavily on HOPE to help me make wise decisions about my future. I'm HOPING for a number of children I know who have medical problems, HOPING that this year will bring what they all need in the way of healing.

So much has been written about HOPE:

"HOPE is the little voice you hear whisper "maybe" when it seems the entire world is shouting "No!" "H.O.P.E. – Hold On, Pain Ends"

"The only difference between those who threw in the towel and quit and those who used their energy to rebuild and kept it going is found in the word...HOPE."

"Once you choose HOPE, anything is possible." Christopher Reeves

"Where there is HOPE, there is faith. Where there is faith, miracles happen."

Optimism is the faith that leads to achievement. Nothing can be done without HOPE and confidence." Helen Keller

So that's my word again for the year, HOPE. I'm hoping you'll pick one that will work for you.

"For I know the plans I have for you, declares the LORD, plans for good and not for evil, to give you a future and HOPE." Jer. 29:11 My book page: Amazon.com: Deanne Davis Blog: www.authordeanne.com

ARGENTENIAN SWEETHEART OF A RESTAURANT

Peter Dills checks out Malbec

You know I'm trying to love this restaurant, I really am, but for now I'm in the like stage. I know I'm in the minority. It could be I'm ordering the wrong items. Before I get into the recent night, I went back to my previous visit (lunch) some many years ago and pretty much the same results. Do I have some kind of vendetta? Was I left at the alter? No, not that I can recall.

No problem with the atmosphere, service is spot on. It's just the food doesn't, well you know, wow me. Spelling aside I ordered, the Malbec Salad, a take on the traditional Caesar Salad. They have just added cucumbers, bravo well done. Ordered a sausage and the octopus as an appetizer and they were kind enough to do the sausage al la Carte ($7). The octopus was just too salty ($14). My eating companion said, "is this supposed to be salty "?

Main course was the Gnocchi ($19) and also comes with aforementioned sausage. I'm sure it is a crowd pleaser, but for me I just shrug my shoulders, it's ok .

I did mention the service was spot on - my only suggestion is that the server never asked how any of the dishes were.

Seems common nowadays that that key question is omitted. Will I be back? Not sure. It's my fourth time and those shoulders keep shrugging.

For something new try the Urbane Café on South Lake. It's a fresh take on salads and sandwiches with a twist. Fusion? I guess, a bit Vietnamese and American all under one roof. Try the UC Banh Mi chicken sandwich with pickled radish, chili aioli and soy gingered chicken, a complete yum experience.

Chu Votes to Restore SALT Deduction for Middle Class

TheHouseofRepresentatives voted late last month to restore important tax cuts for the middle class that were stripped out of the tax code by Republicans in their 2017 Tax Scam. H.R. 5377, the Restoring Tax Fairness for States and Localities Act of 2019, eliminates the $10,000 limit on the state and local tax (SALT) deduction for 2020 and 2021 and it eliminates the marriage penalty for 2019 to allow married couples filing jointly to claim a SALT deduction of $20,000. The bill also increases the existing above-the-line deduction for teachers' out-of-pocket classroom expenses from $250 to $1000 and establishes a new $1000 above-the-line deduction for the unreimbursed outof-pocket work expenses of professional first responders. millions while forcing states These provisions are paid for by restoring the top marginal income tax rate from 37% to 39.6%. Rep. Judy Chu on Dec. 19 issued the following statement:

"Nobody should be taxed twice. This is the principle behind the state and local tax (SALT) deduction. And it has been incredibly successful at helping millions of middle class families afford homes while supporting local governments that struggle to provide important services like education, public safety, and infrastructure. But by capping SALT, Republicans effectively raised taxes on and localities to choose to either raise taxes or cut

Since the Republicans passed their tax cuts for the wealthy, we have seen how these cuts have made the richest richer while the rest of us foot the bill. Today is the culmination of over a year of work to restore these vital deductions and restore fairness to our tax code."

SECURE Act: How It Will Affect You and the Beneficiaries of Your Retirement Accounts

On December 20, 2019, Consider Additional Trusts President Trump signed the Setting Every Community Up for Retirement Enhancement Act (SECURE Act). The SECURE Act, is effective as of January 1, 2020. The Act is the most impactful legislation affecting retirement accounts in decades. The SECURE Act has several positive changes: It increases the required beginning date (RBD) for required minimum distributions (RMDs) from your individual retirement accounts from 70 ½ to 72 years of age, and it eliminates the age restriction for contributions to qualified retirement accounts. However, perhaps the most significant change will affect the beneficiaries of your retirement accounts: The SECURE Act requires most designated beneficiaries to withdraw the entire balance of an inherited retirement account within ten years of the account owner's death.

The SECURE Act does provide a few exceptions to this new mandatory ten-year withdrawal rule: spouses, beneficiaries who are not more than ten years younger than the account owner, the account owner's children who have not reached the "age of majority," disabled individuals, and chronically ill individuals. However, proper analysis of your estate planning goals and planning for your intended beneficiaries' circumstances are imperative to ensure your goals are accomplished and your beneficiaries are properly planned for.

Under the old law, beneficiaries of inherited retirement accounts could take distributions over their individual life expectancy. Under the SECURE Act, the shorter ten-year time frame for taking distributions will result in the acceleration of income tax due, possibly causing your beneficiaries to be bumped into a higher income tax bracket, thus receiving less of the funds contained in the retirement account than you may have originally anticipated.

Your estate planning goals likely include more than just tax considerations. You might be concerned with protecting a beneficiary's inheritance from their creditors, future lawsuits, or a divorcing spouse. In order to protect your hard-earned retirement account and the ones you love, it is critical to act now.

Review/Amend Your Revocable Living Trust (RLT) or Standalone Retirement Trust (SRT)

Depending on the value of your retirement account, you may have addressed the distribution of your accounts in your RLT, or you may have created an SRT that would handle your retirement accounts at your death. Your trust may have included a "conduit" provision, and, under the old law, the trustee would only distribute required minimum distributions (RMDs) to the trust beneficiaries, allowing the continued "stretch" based upon their age and life expectancy. A conduit trust protected the account balance, and only RMDs--much smaller amounts--were vulnerable to creditors and divorcing spouses. With the SECURE Act's passage, a conduit trust structure will no longer work because the trustee will be required to distribute the entire account balance to a beneficiary within ten years of your death. You many now need to consider the benefits of an "accumulation trust," an alternative trust structure through which the trustee can take any required distributions and continue to hold them in a protected trust for your beneficiaries.

For most Americans, a retirement account is the largest asset they will own when they pass away. If you have not done so already, it may be beneficial to create a trust to handle your retirement accounts.

While many accounts offer simple beneficiary designation forms that allow you to name an individual or charity to receive funds when you pass away, this form alone does not take into consideration your estate planning goals and the unique circumstances of your beneficiary. A trust is a great tool to address the mandatory ten-year withdrawal rule under the new Act, providing continued protection of a beneficiary's inheritance.

Review Intended Beneficiaries

With the changes to the laws surrounding retirement accounts, now is a great time to review and confirm your retirement account information. Whichever estate planning strategy is appropriate for you, it is important that your beneficiary designation is filled out correctly. If your intention is for the retirement account to go into a trust for a beneficiary, the trust must be properly named as the primary beneficiary. If you want the primary beneficiary to be an individual, he or she must be named. Ensure you have listed contingent beneficiaries as well.

If you have recently divorced or married, you will need to ensure the appropriate changes are made because at your death, in many cases, the plan administrator will distribute the account funds to the beneficiary listed, regardless of your relationship with the beneficiary or what your ultimate wishes might have been.

What Happens Next

If you are a client, we'll be reaching out to you over the coming weeks if your plan is affected by the SECURE Act. If you are not a client, and don't have an ongoing relationship with a trusted advisor, we'd be happy to review your plan to determine if it is affected by the SECURE Act. And if you have yet to get an estate plan in place, there's no better time to get that process started. Let us know if we can help and happy new year!

THE HUMAN COMEDY AT SIERRA MADRE PLAYHOUSSE ON JANUARY 27

The next selection in the Off the Page series of monthly play readings at Sierra Madre Playhouse will be a new stage adaptation of William Saroyan's classic American novel, The Human Comedy. The playwright/adaptor is Thom Babbes.

"I thought a fellow would never cry when he got to be grown up, but it seems as if that's when a fellow starts." – Homer Macauley

Set in warfront America 1942, this coming-of-age tale tells the story of Homer Macaulay, a 15-year-old boy who delivers telegrams at night to make money for his family. During the course of two days, Homer grows from an idealistic boy to a mature young man as he struggles with the unfairness of the world around him and the pain of families to whom he delivers the War Department's death notices. But in the midst of the decaying idealism of small town America, and the loneliness of growing up, Homer finds hope in humanity through Mr. Grogan, the old alcoholic telegrapher and Mr. Spangler, the manager of the telegraph office who becomes a father-figure. In these men, Homer learns to see the goodness in people no matter how desperate or broken they may be. He also finds the true meaning of home. In the end, it is a timeless American tale that celebrates our common decency. In our present society that is so divisive, THE HUMAN COMEDY has a lot to show us about our humanity and the important things that bring us together.

Thom Babbes' screenplays for the films Body Chemistry and Deadly Dreams were produced by Roger Corman's Concorde- New Horizrons company. Babbes also wrote The Audition and co-wrote X-Treme Weekend, two prize-winning shorts. He is a resident director at Actors Co-Op in Hollywood, where his credits include Wait Until Dark, Summer and Smoke, A Man for All Seasons, and Ah, Wilderness! He is a graduate of Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts.

Christian Lebano directs the reading. He is the producer of the Off the Page series and the Artistic Director of Sierra Madre Playhouse, where he recently directed his own adaptation of Little Women.

William Saroyan (1908-1972) won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1940 for his play The Time of Your Life. He won the Academy Award® in 1943 for his film adaptation of The Human Comedy.

DOES MEDICARE COVERS COUNSELING SERVICES?

Dear Savvy Senior:

Does Medicare cover outpatient counseling services for its beneficiaries? Since the death of my sister last year, I've struggled with depression and anxiety and would like to get some help. Sad Senior

I'm sorry for your loss. Yes, Medicare covers both outpatient and inpatient mental health services to help beneficiaries with depression, anxiety and many other needs. Here's what you should know.

Outpatient Coverage

If you have original Medicare, your Part B coverage will pay 80 percent (after you've met your $198 Part B deductible) for a variety of counseling and mental health care services that are provided outside a hospital, like individual or group therapy, family counseling and more. They also cover services for treatment of beneficiaries who struggle with alcohol and drug abuse.

You, or your supplemental insurance is responsible for the remaining 20 percent coinsurance.

Medicare also gives you the option of getting treatment through a variety of mental health professionals such as psychiatrists, psychologists, clinical social workers and clinical nurse specialists. To get this coverage, you'll need to choose a "participating provider" that accepts Medicare assignment, which means they accept Medicare's approved amount as full payment for a service.

If you choose a "nonparticipating provider" who accepts Medicare but does not agree to Medicare's payment rate, you may have to pay more. And if you choose an "opt-out provider" that does not accept Medicare payments at all, you will be responsible for the entire cost.

To locate a mental health care professional in your area that accepts Medicare assignment, use Medicare's online Physician Compare tool. Go to Medicare.gov/PhysicianCompare and type in your ZIP code, or city and state, then type in the type of profession you want to locate, like "psychiatry" or "clinical psychologist" in the search box. You can also get this information by calling Medicare at 800-633-4227.

Inpatient Coverage

If you need mental health services in either a general or psychiatric hospital, original Medicare Part A covers this too (after you've met your $1,408 Part A deductible). Your doctor should determine which hospital setting you need. If you receive care in a psychiatric hospital, Medicare covers up to 190 days of inpatient care for your lifetime. And if you use your lifetime days but need additional care, Medicare may cover additional inpatient care at a general hospital.

In addition to the outpatient and inpatient mental health services, Medicare also covers yearly depression screenings that must be done in a primary care doctor's office or clinic. Annual depression screenings are covered 100 percent.

And if you have a Medicare prescription drug plan, most medications used to treat mental health conditions are covered too.

Medicare Advantage

If you happen to get your Medicare benefits through a private Medicare Advantage plan, they must provide the same coverage as original Medicare does, but they may impose different rules and will likely require you to see an in-network provider. You'll need to contact your plan directly

And for more information, call Medicare at 800-633-4227 and request a copy of publication #10184 "Medicare & Your Mental Health Benefits," or you can read it online at Medicare.gov.

Even at my age, I love to have fun.

It was a Monday on our vacation that we went down to have lunch at the Village Inn.

Someone once asked me what my favorite pie was, and I gave them an answer that my uncle always gave, "The one I'm eating at the time." And this restaurant has very delicious pies.

It was Monday, however, and the pies were free only on a Wednesday. That did not stop me from trying, though.

The restaurant host escorted us to our table, wife commented. and we sat down. Then the waitress came to giggling at the top of my head. That is always a dangerous situation. I decided to go with it.

"Ma'am," I said as seriously as I possibly could, "I am a Yahooist, and according to our religion, your Monday is our Wednesday."

I am sure she never heard of a Yahooist because I never heard of one either. She looked rather strangely at me, and I continued, "Does I have found that it always pays, and pays that mean I can have the Wednesday free pie wonderfully, to make somebody smile.

TOM PURCELL DON'T TAKE CYBER SCAMMERS' BAIT IN 2020

One of 2019's biggest stories will be bigger in 2020: Cyber scams are on the rise.

"As people increasingly conduct business and live their lives online, more and more criminals are leveraging the internet to steal," reports Forbes' Stu Sjouwerman.

The dirty rotten scammers continue to evolve, too, targeting businesses, government organizations and individuals alike with increasingly sophis-ticated schemes.

One is ransomware – malicious software that blocks access to computers until money is paid.

Scammers also send phony "phishing" emails – often spoofing emails from big retailers – with fraudulent links or attachments that, when clicked, give scammers unfettered access to computer users' data.

Google "ransomware attack" and you'll see a sizable list of big companies and entire cities that have been completely shut down by scammers.

They also spoof text messages. Apparently from reputable companies, such as banks, these messages trick individuals into revealing passwords or credit card numbers.

Scammers continue to succeed with the good old telephone, too. I re-ceived a call this year from a man claiming he was from the Social Securi-ty Administration, who told me my account was blocked and he would help me reactivate it.

Aware that Social Security never makes phone calls (unless you're having a legitimate conversation with it), I knew what the scammer was after: my full name, birthdate, address and Social Security number.

I asked him how he could sleep at night, knowing he was hurting innocent people. He cussed at me and hung up.

The greatest worry about scammers is that elderly people are especially at risk. They're more trusting of callers from government agencies and more likely to fall for one especially mendacious tax scam.

Using phishing techniques, scammers access data on a taxpayer's com-puter, then use that stolen information to file a fraudulent tax return in the taxpayer's name and have the refund – often larger than is actually owed – deposited into the taxpayer's actual bank account.

According to Intuit, the scammers then "contact their victims, telling them the money was mistakenly deposited into their accounts and asking them to return it."

Many victims, fearful of the IRS, readily comply.

According to Pew Research, Americans view cybercrime as their greatest security concern. But what are government agencies doing to combat it?

Not enough.

Americans are often victimized by scammers operating from elsewhere in the world. How can the bad guys be tracked down and forced to make amends?

Nation-states are often behind sophisticated attacks on organizations. Russian-financed scammers are actively targeting our utilities, election systems and other systems.

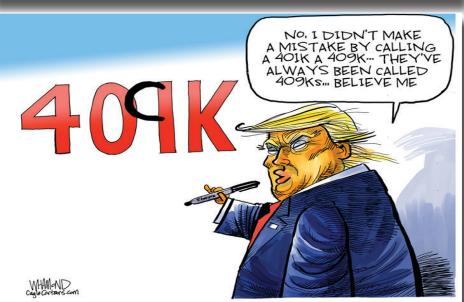

Creating new laws and agencies to combat cybercrime is a daunting challenge. Cybersecurity bills passed by the U.S. House move slowly through the Senate. Even if the Senate passes them and the president signs them, regulators could take months to draft and implement actual policies. Scammers aren't bogged down by such bureaucratic processes.

What it comes down to is that every individual must learn to detect and avoid cyber scams. The Department of Homeland Security has helpful info at https://www.dhs.gov/stopthinkconnect-cyber-tips.

Always verify that an email, text or link is legitimate before you click. Always be suspicious – because that's the only way that cyber scams won't be an even bigger story in the new year.

STUART TOLCHIN NO DONALD TRUMP, THINK MUHAMMAD ALI

This week I have vowed not to write about Donald Trump. It is a challenge in that Mr. Trump seems to be engaged in an attempt to end the social experiment that has been our democracy. I want to assure you that notwithstanding his continual efforts to ignore the United States Constitution and the separation of the branches of government and the probability that he will not be removed by the Senate at the conclusion of whatever facsimile of a trial whenever it begins and ends it is impossible that he will be re-elected in November 2020.

Really I don't want to write or think about Donald Trump anymore. Let us all together just think NO Donald Trump and that WILL be enough. NO MORE DONALD TRUMP. Okay.

Perhaps you are not convinced that further action is not required. All that is required is that we all register and vote. Pendulums swing back and forth and occasionally history seems to be going in the wrong direction but if we can ignore Mr. Trump it is easy to see that beneath the haze caused by social media civilization is moving in the right direction. Each year there are fewer homicides and further recognition of formerly marginalized classes such as women, LGBTQ individuals, religious minorities who are now enjoying consideration that were previously denied throughout history.

I am old enough to remember the abuse heaped upon the young Cassius Marcellus Clay Jr. when he informed the public that he was changing his name to Muhammad Ali after his conversion to Islam. If you recall after he was drafted in 1967 he refused to serve on the grounds that he was a Muslim minister. He was arrested for committing a felony and stripped of his heavyweight world championship title and boxing license. Eventually he was sentenced to five years while appealing his conviction. This conviction was overturned by the Supreme Court in 1971. As I hope you recall Muhammad Ali was known for his continued public stance against the Viet Nam war and his long time courageous battle against Parkinson's disease. Many of us remember Muhammad Ali with his hands trembling and almost completely unable to talk still present enough to light the Olympic torch during the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta, Georgia at a time when many believed that outside of the Pope, he was the most beloved figure in the world.

How's that for a turn around. It is wonderful to see the world right itself from its past error and once more head in the correct more civilized direction. In order to try and understand the colossal error that occurred in the 2016 election I spent the last two days viewing the 7 part Ken Burns documentary describing the life of the Roosevelts. There are multitudes of missteps and regrettable decisions described within the documentary. For me the American public's initial refusal to even provide assistance to the European countries threatened by Hitler later compounded by a refusal to enter the war. However, once America subsequent to the bombings at Pearl Harbor and the declarations of war against the United States by Japan, Germany, and Italy, America realized its error and entered the war with a productive energy that eventually shamed its enemies.

Sure there were missteps. The Presidential decision to inter Japanese American citizens living on the West Coast, the segregation of African Americans from other populations, the refusal to accept European Jews into the country who after being refused entry were taken to Concentration Camps. There were many other missteps and betrayals and secrets and lies and yet the Roosevelts emerge as probably the most heroic family of the Twentieth Century.

My final point is that yes mistakes are made and a terrible error such as the election of an incompetent, untruthful, uncompassionate fraud like NO DONALD may take place, but it is my very strong belief that his actions as President will shock the country in the same way that the bombing of Pearl Harbor shocked the nation and cause a mobilization in the right direction resulting in the greatest of benefits to the nation.

I actually believe that the rejection of NO DONALD will result in a stronger, freer, better educated America which will move in the direction of transparency and equality. It is highly possible that in the near future as America moves to save the planet and prevents the further development of nuclear weapons there will be a recognition that it was all for the best.

REMEMBER TO VOTE.NO DONALD

JOHN L. MICEK CONGRESS HAS TO RECLAIM ITS WAR-MAKING AUTHORITY

It didn't take long for "World War III" to become a trending topic on Twitter in the hours after news broke that a drone strike by U.S. forces resulted in the death of a top Iranian military commander.

Almost simultaneously, those who'd never heard of the now-late

Qasem Soleimani until cable news and social media blared his name began debating whether the latest escalation in tensions between the United States and Islamic Republic of Iran would inevitably result in a hot war between the two countries.

There is bipartisan agreement that the airstrike personally ordered by President Donald Trump meant that there was one fewer terrorist in the world. And there is some wisdom to that, considering Soleimani was believed responsible for the deaths of hundreds of Americans during the Iraq War.

But – and this is a significant but – Congressional leaders had not been briefed on the attack, and expressed fears that the White House was moving toward yet another undeclared war in the region.

While the administration has made positive noises about wanting to draw down the American presence in the Middle East, as was the case during last year's disastrous withdrawal from northern Syria, its actions have not matched the rhetoric.

The Washington Post reported late last week that the U.S. was deploying an additional 3,500 service people to the region in the wake of that Iranian vow to extract "severe revenge." That's on top of the battalion of 750 soldiers sent to Kuwait.

The additional security is undoubtedly necessary, as American installations across the Middle East brace for retaliation. But it's also a reminder of how easy it would be for the United States to slide into another conflict in a part of the world that's claimed thousands of American lives and trillions of dollars in American resources.

As president, Trump has broad latitude to prosecute foreign policy. But the War Powers

Act requires the executive branch to brief Congress within 48 hours of unauthorized military action.

New York Mag's Ed Kilgore writes that the administration is likely to claim it had grounds to act under the congressionally enacted Authorizations of Military Force in 2001 and 2002 that, respectively, gave the nation the Forever War on Terror, and an Iraq War that doesn't seem to want to ever end.

Not surprisingly, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif, raised serious questions about the legality of the attack, saying it had been carried out without legislative authorization. In reality, Republicans and Democratic administrations have been abusing their war-making authority for decades. That includes the Obama administration's pernicious preference for drone strikes.

Think about this: The United States last issued a formal declaration of war after the bombs fell on Pearl Harbor in 1941. Every military action since has come without a formal declaration of war. Though some, such as the Korean War and the 1990 Gulf War, have come with congressional authorizations or through United Nations resolutions, as was the case with the Bosnian War under President Bill Clinton in 1992-93.

It might be too late to get the genie back into the bottle. But this slow creep of executive power is one that badly needs to be reversed. Which means it's a mistake to dismiss Democratic complaints about White House overreach.

The president wields no power more terrifying – nor more broad reaching – than the ability to wage war. But he (and someday she) wields that power in all our names, not just his own.

That's what declarations of war – and congressional authorizations – are for: To ensure we speak, as a nation, with one voice.

It's a quaint notion, perhaps, but it's one worth remembering before we blunder into another endless war.
