EXTREME HEAT WARNING EXTENDED THROUGH AUGUST 26, 2020 FOR SAN GABRIEL VALLEY!

The Los Angeles County Health Officer has extended an Extreme Heat Warning as high temperatures have been forecast for the following areas:

East San Fernando Valley through Wednesday, August 26
West San Gabriel Valley through Wednesday, August 26
East San Gabriel Valley through Wednesday, August 26
West San Fernando Valley through Wednesday, August 26
Santa Clarita Valley through Monday, August 24
Antelope Valley through Monday, August 24

Public Health reminds everyone to take precautions to avoid heat-related illness, especially older adults, young children, outdoor workers, athletes, and people with a chronic medical condition who are especially sensitive to negative health impacts from extreme heat. Public Health offers the following recommendations during high temperature days:

Drink plenty of water and keep hydrated throughout the day.

If you must go out, plan your day to avoid going out during the hottest hours, and wear sunscreen. Wear lightweight, light-colored clothes, and bring a hat or umbrella with you.

Cars get very hot. Never leave children or pets in cars and call 911 if you see a child or pet in a car alone.

Beware of heat-related illness, like heat stroke and call 911 if you see these symptoms: high body temperature, vomiting, and pale and clammy skin. Check on those at risk, like those who are sick, older adults, pregnant women, and children, and those who live alone.

Avoid strenuous work outs wearing face coverings or masks not intended for athletic purposes; this means avoiding contact with others while you work out.

Visit your power company's website or contact them by phone to determine if you are scheduled for a rolling power outage.

To find a location near you, visit <https://ready.lacounty.gov/heat/> or call 211.

SIERRA MADRE IS GOING 100% RENEWABLE

OP ED By Robert Parkhurst

Based on data for the first half of the year, NASA, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and other scientific organizations forecast that 2020 will be either the warmest or second warmest year since records began in 1850.

This troubles me. I do not want my children growing up in a world with increased wildfires, droughts, floods, and famine. We are at a critical point in the fight against climate change and the actions we take in the next few years will determine the type of world our children and grandchildren inherit.

Thankfully, Sierra Madre is not sitting on the sidelines - we are demonstrating our long history of environmental leadership. Earlier this year the City Council voted for all residents to start receiving 100% clean, local and renewable electricity starting this October. This electricity will come from projects like the Azalea solar and energy storage project in Kern County, which will generate enough electricity to power more than 25,000 Southern California homes. That is enough electricity for 5 Sierra Madres! This project will come online in December 2022 and create more than 450 local construction jobs.

This electricity comes to us through the Clean Power Alliance, an organization of 32 cities in Los Angeles and Ventura Counties who have banded together to purchase electricity on behalf of their residents. Not only does the Alliance provide us the ability to purchase clean energy at a lower cost than Southern California Edison, it gives us local control over purchasing our electricity and gives us the ability to design and implement programs that directly benefit the residents of Sierra Madre. We were one of the first cities to sign on to the Alliance. As members of the Alliance, a representative from the City reviews and votes on every one of the Alliance's projects, ensuring that Sierra Madres receive maximum benefit of those renewable energy projects.

In addition to buying renewable electricity, the Alliance will be launching programs this year that benefit our

City and community. These include residential solar panel and storage projects in disadvantaged communities and incentives for publicly accessible and affordable electric vehicle charging stations.

The cost of going to 100% renewable is a modest increase of between 7 and 9%. Of course, not everyone can afford a little extra on their bill. Thankfully, we all have options. You can switch back to "Clean Power", which is 50% renewable. The Clean Power rate keeps your costs the same as they are today and you get more renewable electricity than that provided by Southern California Edison. If money is tight, there are other options that can reduce your energy bill by as much as 30%. Just call 888-585-3788 and an Alliance customer service representative will ensure that you are enrolled in a plan that is right for you. For those, like me, who believe that it is important to do our part to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, paying a little more on our electricity bills for 100% local, renewable energy is a reasonable price to pay. We will prevent tens of thousands of tons of CO<sub>2</sub> from entering the atmosphere every year while creating sustainable jobs for local residents.

Sierra Madre has shown tremendous leadership, first in joining the Clean Power Alliance, and now in voting to default to 100% renewable energy. This is one of the reasons I decided to run for City Council. I want to build on our commitment to provide affordable local and renewable electricity to our residents and community. Together we can reduce the most significant impacts of climate change, but only if we act now.

Robert Parkhurst is the vice chair of Sierra Madre's Energy, Environment, and Natural Resources Commission and vice chair of the Community Advisory Committee for the Clean Power Alliance, Sierra Madre's electricity provider. He is also running for Sierra Madre City Council and one of his priorities is keeping Sierra Madre an environmental leader.

PLAYHOUSE LAUNCHES ORAL HISTORY PROJECT

Despite its shuttered windows, the Sierra Madre Playhouse has been hard at work planning our 2021 season while venturing into the new reality of streaming virtual content online. With weekly marquee messages, virtual readings, and social media presence, the theater is as busy as ever.

Sierra Madre Playhouse is launching an oral history project intended to tell the entire story of the building's nearly 100 years as an entertainment venue in Sierra Madre. Production began this summer on a series of video interviews detailing its history, as told by those who worked or enjoyed it as a movie house as well as a performing arts theater.

Valentina de la Pena, SMPs Social Media Summer Intern

The project will shed light on the Sierra Madre Playhouse's history from its conversion from a furniture store and undertaker's shop to the Wistaria Theater in 1924 to the Sierra Madre Playhouse, as it is known today.

This summer, Sierra Madre Playhouse staff has received research assistance and production support from seventeen-year-old PUSD intern Valentina de la Pena, a senior at Marshall Fundamental in Pasadena. Over the past six weeks, she has had a deep dive into the history of Sierra Madre while preparing a timeline of the Playhouse's role on its main street.

The Playhouse is now inviting the community at large to join in our effort. We ask those who have photos, memorabilia and their own stories to share from the theater to participate in our interview series to be displayed on the Sierra Madre Playhouse's website. If you or someone you know might be interested in participating in this oral retelling of the Sierra Madre Playhouse's history, please contact Volunteer Coordinator Pamela Winters at prwinters@sierramadreplayhouse.org or <http://info@sierramadreplayhouse.org>

WALKING SIERRA MADRE - The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

OK, it's hot, we're tired of being hot, nothing tastes good, even chocolate and we've been eating too much anyway. You're sick of Covid-19, facemasks, not being able to go anywhere and there's nothing on TV you haven't seen twenty times. However, I have to say that Turner Classic Movies had Cary Grant day yesterday and it was delightful to watch him in To Catch a Thief with the equally gorgeous Grace Kelly. So! How about a rip-roaring true adventure tale! This story was written by my Dad, Kim Weed. It's about his brother Harold, and this really happened, friends and neighbors! The picture is one mean-lookin' rattler! As Indiana Jones says, "Snakes! Why does it always have to be snakes!"

"The Rattlesnake Bite"

(An Excerpt from "A Treasure Map, A Drunken Owl and 47 Rattlers in a Bag")

"In 1927, when my dad was just six, a farm laborer clearing brush out there in the wilds of Imperial Valley, was bitten by a diamondback rattlesnake. He was lying near death in the Holtville Hospital as staff members looked on helplessly, except for one doctor who was frantically telephoning every hospital in Imperial Valley, trying to locate some anti-venom, or Toxin-Anti-Toxin, as it was called in those days. There was none. The nearest vial was at the San Diego Zoo, more than a hundred miles away.

Obtaining a vial of anti-venom would be a piece of cake in this age of freeways, planes and helicopters, but this was 1927. No airplanes were available and the two-lane road from Holtville to San Diego was bad and downright dangerous along the fifty or so miles where it crossed the mountains, with long sections washed out, unimproved, graveled, and cut out of cliffs bottoming into canyons hundreds of feet below; little changed since stagecoaches crossed it two decades or so earlier with teams of eight and sometimes ten horses. This road was never attempted at night!

Harold Weed, my dad's big brother, was sixteen and a junior at Holtville High School. As the laborer grew weaker, it looked like just another day for Harold with late season football practice to look forward to, a string of cows to milk and the rest of his farm chores before he settled down to tackle his homework. But plans were afoot to put another of Harold's talents to use. He was also a hotshot motorcycle rider and had the fastest, according to him, motorcycle in all of Imperial Valley. He had salvaged a World War I vintage Harley-Davidson from a junk yard, lovingly tinkered and tuned it to near perfection, mechanically, though it was described as something of an eyesore otherwise. But, hey! When your engine purrs, who needs paint!

Late that afternoon, desperate hospital officials went to Holtville High, pulled Harold out of his last class, grabbed this kid by the shoulder and said, "Harold, get on that motorcycle and ride like the wind. You've got to get to San Diego and pick up the serum. A man is dying and his life is in your hands!"

Harold, burning with that thrill of high adventure ahead, and, being a true romantic, took the challenge! He listened to a few directions, after all, he hadn't been to San Diego since he was five, kicked that Harley into life, rocked forward on the clutch and took off, burning rubber out of the high school parking lot!

He stopped at the Weed Ranch for just a few minutes to tell his parents where he was going, topped off his tanks, threw a few tools and a tire pump into one saddle bag and a can of gasoline with a potato plugging the spout into the other, and took off in a cloud of dust. But in his haste, he left his leather jacket with gloves in the pocket hanging on the limb of a tree. A significant oversight.

From there, Harold was on his own, full throttle through El Centro, on into the desert, past Coyote Falls, climbing through Devil's Canyon with a red-hot exhaust pipe, on through treacherous winding grades high into the mountains, then down the long descent into San Diego where the curator of reptiles for the zoo was anxiously awaiting him, vial in hand.

Harold slowed down just long enough to secure the vial and started back, giving the smoking engine all it could take, but more than a little frightened now as it was getting cold and he had to cross those cursed mountains again, this time in the dark as his beloved Harley, alas, had no lights.

It was deep dusk when he descended the treacherous Via Viajos Grade, but didn't become dark until he was on the desert straight-away. There was no moon, but Harold managed to stay on the ribbon of narrow road, trusting to starlight as he pushed along at eighty where the road was paved.

Bad luck struck before he reached El Centro, running over a piece of barbed wire, puncturing his rear tire. From there he had to stop every few minutes to pump up the tire but it soon became hopeless and the last few miles were run on the flat. Finally, he arrived at the hospital where everyone was anxiously awaiting him, having heard the roaring of his burnt-out muffler for miles. The tire was in shreds and Harold, in just shirtsleeves, was nearly frozen, having made the fastest trip ever recorded between the Imperial Valley and San Diego, a little under four hours!

Yes, the man was saved, Harold was the town celebrity for a day, the Holtville Tribune gave him a front-page write-up and the hospital staff were most appreciative and thankful. With gratitude in their hearts, they persuaded the high school to give Harold the following day off school as a reward for his heroism, saving a man's life at considerable risk to his own. Harold later confided to his little brother, Kim, "I'll tell ya, Kim, I thought I was gonna freeze to death! And if I didn't freeze, I'd sure as hell ride right over a cliff and never get home again!"

It's going to cool off sometime, folks, I'm sure of it. And life is going to get back to some sort of normal. If you want to read more of my Dad's adventures, look on my Amazon.com book page.

HEAT ALERT:

Sierra Madre To Open Cooling Station in Police Department Lobby

Temperatures over the weekend are expected to reach up to 100 degrees in some areas. In response to the anticipated heat, the City has made the decision to open the Sierra Madre Police Department lobby to be used as a cooling site for our residents.

The lobby will be open to the public over the weekend each day. Anyone entering the lobby must wear a face mask and must practice social distancing protocols.

The City recommends limiting your time in direct sun. Keep yourself and your pets cool by staying indoors or in well-shaded areas outdoors. Take extra precaution when exercising. Limit your exercise to early morning or evening hours and remember to stay hydrated. Please call 9-1-1 if you are experiencing a medical emergency.

THE SIERRA MADRE PUBLIC LIBRARY BEGINS NEW CHECK-OUT SYSTEM IN RESPONSE TO COVID-19 CLOSURE.

In an effort to continue supporting our patrons during this difficult time, the Sierra Madre Public Library will offer a single, over the phone check-out per patron. To the extent to which we can, a Library Staff Member will take patron requests for materials over the phone, and materials will be checked out to the member's card and prepared for pick up. Upon arriving at the Library, patrons will call from a designated waiting area outside of the building, and a staff member will check their identification and transfer materials to them, in keeping with social distancing standards.

We at the Sierra Madre Public Library believe that everyone has the right to access materials and information; however, this opportunity will be revoked out of a greater concern for the Sierra Madre Community and City Staff, should the need arise.

Thank you for your patience as we continue to work together in service of our community.

City Releases Video of Police Shooting

Officials also release video of confrontations with an upset public at the scene.

By Dean Lee

Pasadena police released a series of videos Thursday related to a shooting in Northwest Pasadena that left an 32-year-old African American man dead and the community demanding answers. Pasadena Police Chief John Perez said the videos were released to be, "Transparent."

According to a written police statement, the officer involved shooting occurred on Raymond Avenue and Grandview Street August 15, around 8 p.m. Two officers stopped the car for a vehicle code violation, not having a front license plate. During the stop, "the passenger in the vehicle elected to run away. While running, the passenger removed a handgun from his waistband..." The driver cooperated with officers, they said.

Anthony McClain was shot at least twice in the back after police said he pulled out a gun with his left hand something McClain's family disputes. Attorney Caree Harper, speaking on behalf of the family said he was holding his belt buckle, not a gun.

Police investigators said a handgun was recovered at the scene. I photo of the gun shows a an illegal weapon made out of different parts, with different serial numbers, they said.

McClain died shortly before 10 p.m. at Huntington Hospital from gunshot wounds to his torso.

In another mostly burred video, officers push back a small crowd yelling, calling the officers "cowards." At one point an officer says their just "trying to preserve the scene."

Later that night, reports said officers used pepper spray on a crowd in La Pintoresca Park, at one point hitting a 10-year-old. The mother then pepper-sprayed police who tried to held the child. Another officer fired his stun gun into a protester's chest, video shows him drop to the ground.

The OIS incident is actively being investigated by the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office and the City of Pasadena will also initiate an independent third party review.

Anyone with information about this case is encouraged to call Pasadena Police at (626)-744-4241 or anonymously at "Crime Stoppers" by dialing (800) 222-TIPS (8477).

Senior Center to Show Civil Rights Documentary Free

In Civil Rights history, national leaders such as Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Medgar Evers, John Lewis and Julian Bond rose to prominence and captured the public's attention. But in Mississippi, the success and power behind the movement was a grass roots base of ordinary black women whose acts of defiance and courage were able to make great headway in that state. Yet most people have never heard of Victoria Gray Adams, Unita Blackwell, Mae Bertha Carter, Annie Devine, Fannie Lou Hamer, and so many other women who saw an opportunity to emerge as activists in Mississippi's Civil Rights movement.

The award-winning documentary "Standing on My Sisters' Shoulders" will be shown for free Thursday, Aug. 27, at 2 p.m. online via Zoom, presented by the Pasadena Senior Center as part of its Cultural Thursdays series. It chronicles the vital role played by women in the Mississippi Civil Rights movement from the point of view of the women who lived it and changed history in the face of a hostile and violent segregated society. Members as well as non-members of the Pasadena Senior Center are invited to participate. Residence in Pasadena is not required. The one-hour screening will be followed by a conversation between the online audience and Laura Lipson, the documentary's writer, co-producer and director.

The film features archival film footage as well as video interviews with Unita Blackwell, a sharecropper turned voting rights activist who marched, led voter registration drives, was jailed several times and became Mississippi's first female black mayor; Mae

Bertha Carter, a mother of 13 whose children were the first to integrate Drew County schools in Mississippi in the face of violent opposition and who, along with Marian Wright Edelman, successfully sued the district to challenge Mississippi's "freedom of choice" law that was the backbone of the segregated system; white student activist Joan Trumpauer Mulholland, who was a Freedom Rider, participant in the Jackson Woolworth's sit-in and the marches on Washington and from Selma to Montgomery, all of which led to her being physically attacked, disowned by her family and hunted down by the Ku Klux Klan for execution, and who was a 2015 recipient of the National Civil Rights Museum's Freedom Award; and Victoria Gray Adams, Annie Devine and Fannie Lou Hamer, who organized the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party to confront discrimination in that state, attempted to unseat the all-white Mississippi delegation at the 1964 Democratic National Convention and were invited to a 1965 hearing of the U.S. House of Representatives in Washington, D.C., to challenge the seating of five newly elected white members from Mississippi on the grounds that African Americans had been prevented from participating freely in the election - a challenge that put pressure on President Lyndon B. Johnson to sign the groundbreaking Voting Rights Act.

To register for the screening or for more information, visit: pasadenaseniorcenter.org and click on Lectures and Events, then Online Events or call 626-795-4331. Everyone who registers will receive email instructions for joining accessing this Zoom activity.

The incident was not captured on surveillance footage.

6. At 8:17 a.m., an officer responded to R.J. Collins Plumbing, located at 205 North Second Avenue, regarding an attempted vehicle theft. ## ROTATING POWER OUTAGES ENERGY CONSERVATION TIPS

Last week the California Independent System Operator (CAISO) has declared an ALERT due to low power reserves and high demand for electricity on the California electric grid. The CAISO ALERT is expected to be in effect until 9:00 pm Friday. At this time, CAISO rotating outages have not been declared but could be later.

CAISO rotating outages may begin if the CAISO declares a stage 3 emergency, most likely during peak hours from 5:00 pm to 8:00 pm. Rotating outages typically last one hour. To see the impacted jurisdictions and for additional information, please visit: sce.com/rotatingoutage

Conservation Tips

The California Independent System Operator (CAISO) issued a statewide Flex Alert calling for voluntary electricity conservation, beginning Sunday and extending through Wednesday. The Flex Alerts are in effect from 3 p.m. to 10 p.m. each day. For more information, visit: www.flexalert.org

CAISO highlighted three simple actions individuals and businesses can take to reduce energy consumption:

Set your thermostat to 78° or higher between 3 and 10 P.M.

Refrain from major appliance use between 3 and 10 P.M.

Turn off unnecessary lights and appliances

Additional steps and guidance for individuals & businesses:

Adjust Your Thermostat

During peak hours or when you're not home, remember to set your thermostat at 78° or higher. Setting your air conditioner 5° higher can save up to 20 percent on cooling costs.

Pre-cool your home by running air conditioning at 72 degrees in the early part of the day (when it is more efficient) then turn your system to 78 or higher during the hottest part of the day when demand is the highest.

Use smart or programmable features to help maintain energy savings when you're not home.

Close Windows and Doors

Keep windows and doors closed to prevent the loss of cooled or heated air.

On summer nights, open windows to let cooler air in when safe. In the morning before the day starts to heat up, close windows and blinds to keep warm air out.

Tilt blinds up and close drapes and shades on windows that receive direct sunlight.

Smart Energy Use

Turn off unnecessary lighting and use task or desktop lamps with LEDs instead of overhead lights.

Enable "power management" on all computers and turn off when not in use.

Unplug phone charges, power strips (those without a switch) and other equipment when not in use. Taken together, these small items can use as much power as your refrigerator.

Access and Functional Needs

Check in on neighbors, friends and family who may be at risk.

Charge medical devices in off hours and have back up plan for if the power goes out.

In addition to traditional community support channels, individuals with access and functional needs should reach out to local government for assistance.

Contact local utilities companies if you are dependent on power for assistive devices.

Major Appliance Use

Postpone using major appliances like the oven, dishwasher, clothes washer, and dryer until cooler times of the day to avoid heating up your home.

Run your dishwasher and clothes washer only when full. Wait until after 9 p.m. to use these and other major appliances.

When possible, wash clothes in cold water. About 90 percent of the energy used in a clothes washer goes to water heating.

Clean or Replace Your Filters

A dirty filter forces your air conditioner and furnace to work harder, wasting money, using more energy or natural gas.

Adjust Your Water Heater

Turn your water heater down to 120° or the "normal" setting. Water heating accounts for about 13 percent of home energy costs.

Conservation Programs

Consider participating in your utility's demand response program. These voluntary programs are short, temporary measures to reduce energy consumption when power supplies are critically low and a Flex Alert has been issued. Contact your local electric utility to learn about your utility's program and incentives they may offer to participate.

Caps Placed on Delivery Platforms In South Pasadena

As the pandemic continues, the South Pasadena City Council has taken significant steps to help support local businesses. On August 5th the City Council approved a resolution continuing the declaration of a local emergency and adopted by reference the Los Angeles County Ordinance to place a cap on the fees that third-party delivery platforms (i.e., GrubHub, UberEats, DoorDash, Postmates) can charge restaurants during the pandemic. This will help prevent delivery services from overcharging local businesses that are currently struggling to stay open.

In addition, the City Council has authorized a phased approach for the Al Fresco Dining and Retail Pilot Program. The Program will provide local businesses with an opportunity to expand and utilize outdoor spaces to operate their business while providing adequate space for social distancing. Staff is standing by to work with local businesses to develop their proposals ranging from dedicated curb-side pick-up locations to lane closures. For more information regarding the program please visit the City's Economic Development Webpage: southpasadenaca.gov search "economic-development."

LA COUNTY COVID-19 RENT RELIEF TO LAUNCH AUGUST 17

In an effort to assist renters with limited means affected by the COVID-19 crisis, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors has provided $100 million in CARES Act funds to create a COVID-19 Rent Relief program, operated by the Los Angeles County Development Authority (LACDA). The program is set to launch on Monday, August 17, 2020, and will remain open for a two-week period, closing on August 31, 2020. The program's goal is to assist between 8,000 to over 9,000 households.

The emergency rental assistance provided is intended to meet the needs of low-income renters who have struggled to pay their rent and/or who are behind on paying rent due to the economic impacts caused by the pandemic. Those who are most at need will be targeted with more assistance.

The program is available to all residents of the County who qualify, with the exception of residents living in the City of Los Angeles, as the City also received its own allocation of CARES Act funds. A W-9 and participation agreement are needed from the property owners to receive rental income on behalf of their qualified tenant; property owners must agree to the terms of the participation agreement. Citizenship documentation will not be requested from any party (renter or property owner). A list of Frequently Asked Questions with more program detail is available at rentrelief.lacda.org

Public Health Sees Increase in MIS-C Cases in L.A. County Children and 46 New Deaths and 1,759 New Cases of Confirmed COVID-19 in Los Angeles County

The Los Angeles County Department of Public Health (Public Health) is reporting nine additional cases of multisystem inflammatory syndrome in children (MIS-C). This brings the total cases of MIS-C in L.A. County to 25 children.

Twenty-eight percent of these cases were between the ages of 0 and 5 years old, 44% were between the ages of 6 and 12 years old, and 28% were between the ages of 13 and 20 years old. The majority of cases (68%) were Latino/Latinx.

No children with MIS-C in L.A. County have died.

MIS-C is a condition that affects children under 21 years old across the country who may have been exposed to COVID-19 or had COVID-19. Different body parts can become inflamed, including the heart, lungs, kidneys, brain, skin, eyes, or gastrointestinal organs and there can be lifelong health impacts.

Public Health advises physicians to consider for MIS-C in patient children under 21 years old and to notify the department immediately of any cases.

TABLE FOR TWO by Peter Dills thechefknows@yahoo.com

Helter Skelter in a Summer swelter or something like that, you remember that Don Mclean song, American Pie. Well, It's hot out there so here is a cool drink for your back(or front) yard gatherings.

El Presidente is a classic rum cocktail that originated in Havana, Cuba in the 1920s and was named for President Gerardo Machado. The cocktail was traditionally made with Bacardi, the biggest name in Cuban rum at the time. Combining light rum with dry vermouth, orange Curaçao, and grenadine, El Presidente is slightly sweet and dry, yet balanced. For the best results, try making your own grenadine, which is far superior to the fake-colored bottled stuff, and will really let this drink shine.

Ingredients

1.5 ounces light rum (I prefer Bacardi rum for this cocktail)
3/4 ounce dry vermouth
1/2 ounce orange Curaçao
Dash grenadine

Garnish: orange twist
Cocktail Glass (martini glass)

Directions

1. Add ingredients to a mixing glass with ice and stir until chilled.
2. Strain into a chilled cocktail glass.
3. Garnish with an orange twist.

ChefSecret: Here's how to make homemade Grenadine Syrup—it's easy. This simple sweet syrup is made with only 2 ingredients—pomegranate juice and granulated sugar. It is the perfect sweet syrup for most of the well-loved frou-frous drinks famous at beach front bars and tiki joints. Homemade grenadine syrup is much better than the embalming fluid used for maraschino cherries.

You will need 2 cups 100% pomegranate juice (such as Pom Wonderful) and 2 cups granulated sugar. Add the pomegranate juice to a nonreactive saucepan. Bring the juice to a boil over high heat. Add the sugar and stir with a wooden spoon until dissolved, about 1 minute. Remove from heat and let cool. Pour into a lidded bottle or other sealable container and store in the refrigerator. This recipe makes 3 cups. The syrup will keep, refrigerated, for several weeks.

CHRISTOPHER Nyergeres

CONSIDER CREATING A BACKYARD “SURVIVAL CAMP”

Nyergeres is the author of “Foraging California,” “Guide to Wild Foods,” “How to Survive Anywhere,” and other books. He can be reached at [www.SchoolofSelf-Reliance.com, or Box 41834, Eagle Rock, CA 90041]

These days, there are a lot of good reasons to increase your personal survival quotient. And there are several distinct benefits to creating a “survival camp” right in your own backyard.

For example, once you create a backyard camp, you can use it to teach your children survival skills without having to take all the extra time of travel that actually going to a remote camp might require. And in the comfort of your own backyard, you can teach your children all the essential skills that will help them lifelong – and let them have a great time learning it all.

WHAT’S A BACKYARD SURVIVAL CAMP

First, what exactly should be in a backyard survival camp? Think of it this way. Your home was just ravaged by an earthquake, and it’s unlivable. There’s no power, and the gas is out. You’re now going to be living in the backyard camp that you had set up so long ago.

You’re going to need everything that you’d have in camp in the woods, and it all needs to be self-sustaining.

You’ll need a shelter, a toilet, a way to cook, a way to wash, and somewhere nearby, a supply of water, food, and basic hygiene gear and probably some tools.

If you’re any sort of camper or prepper, you probably already have all the elements of this camp here and there in your garage, and closets, and storage areas. But now we’re going to set it all up so you can “camp” in your backyard, alone, or with family and friends, for a short while, or overnight and longer.

Let’s look at each part of the camp.

THE SHELTER

For most of you, this can just be a pop-up tent that you purchased at a backpacking store. Even if you don’t plan to keep it up all the time, find a spot that is level, and maybe shaded. If a nylon tent is out in the sun for prolonged periods of time, it degrades and falls apart in a year or so. The reason most tents last for years is because they are used for a few days once a year, and then they are packed up and stored. But if you’re going to keep the tent up more or less regularly, you’ll want to keep it out of direct sun, and possibly also treat the fabric with one of various products on the market to protect it from the UV rays of the sun, and extend its life.

COOKING

Cooking outdoors is easy on just a grill set on rocks, and you also need to have a supply of firewood to burn. Firewood is easy to come by, and it needn’t be large. Small twigs start easier, and if you’re just heating a small meal, a handful is usually enough to heat coffee or soup. Keep your firewood up off the ground somehow, and covered from the rain.

But cooking with an open fire can get old. You might consider having an old barbeque handy, as well as an hibachi. Both of these are easy to cook on, easy to store, and require minimal fuel for cooking.

Maybe you want something more like your kitchen stove. I’d suggest a Coleman camping stove, which typically has two burners and requires a can of fuel. These are durable, long-lasting, and easy to operate.

CLEANLINESS

We’ve found old sinks in the past that were discarded on the street. We’ve taken them, built a frame to hold them up, and used them to wash dishes, or clothes, or our hands. If you have the space, this is worth having in the back yard.

Another necessity is a shower. In the past, we’ve heated water in a can, and then taken a “shower” with a half-gallon of hot water and a wash-rag. However, these days solar showers are sold everywhere, and they are highly recommended. I would not leave home for a camping trip without one, and I always keep one at home for possible backyard use. These are heavy-duty plastic bags which you fill with water, lay in the sun for a few hours til hot, and then hang up to take your shower. They come in various sizes, and I think the 2.5 gallon is the ideal size in terms of weight and time it takes to heat the water.

TOILET

There are several possibilities for a toilet in your survival camp.

The easiest, of course, is just a hole in the ground, that you cover with some soil after each use. Location is critical, for privacy, and other concerns, such as underground water supply. The details of how you set up, use, and clean an outdoor toilet will depend on several factors, including the need for privacy, and the need to avoid the glance of peering neighbors.

A bucket with a toilet seat cover is a bit better, and this allows you to move it about as needed, and then to bury the contents as needed.

These days, backpacking stores and camping stores sell a variety of camping and “emergency” toilets which are useful for car-camping, or camping in the backyard. These are worth considering. Don’t forget to stock up on a little extra toilet paper.

Keep in mind that using a backyard privy is probably against the health codes of most cities, so you’ll want to do this in a way that does not attract odors or insects, and let everyone know that your having a backyard toilet is part of your “survival education” process.

OTHER

A backyard survival camp has a lot of benefits. It allows you the luxury of testing your gear and your skills, and you might actually have to use it in a real emergency.

You might make something very temporary, or more permanent, depending on your particular situation in terms of yard size, visibility to neighbors, and other factors.

COVID-19 CHILDCARE FUNDING

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors allocated $15 million in CARES Act funding for childcare vouchers to serve essential workers and low-income families in the County. The Office for the Advancement of Early Care and Education is contracting with the Child Care Alliance, a network of LA County Resource and Referral /Alternative Payment agencies, to distribute vouchers.

Families seeking early care and education services may call 888-92-CHILD (888-922-4453). Eligibility for these vouchers is set by the state.

At this time, Child Care Alliance are still in the process of implementing the program in partnership with LA County. Interested families are encouraged to call Child Care Alliance and provide contact information and zip code. The zip code will help them search their database for a Resource and Referral agency, which is where they will forward the family’s information. Once the program is implemented, a local Resource and Referral agency will reach out to the families to provide further details.

A PLEA FROM LIFELINE FOR PETS

Playful Purr-man!

Happy purrrr master Clay. Loves to get your attention and give you big lovable meows. If you sit down Clay will sit in your lap, but he expects kisses in return. Clay has a blast playing with his siblings and never saw a toy that didn't catch his attention. Clay finds great pleasure in the 1000 kisses his foster mom gives him daily and meows to show approval. He'll jump up and greet you whenever he sees you, is always curious to see what you're doing, looks at you with the sweetest face, is friendly, social, and sweet. He's a calm, loving, playful, and gentle boy. Once you start scratching his face and back he'll start purring like the engine of a nascar. Clay loves his siblings and gets along great with other cats. Clay would like to be adopted with his twin brother, Houdini. Both would do best in a quiet home, maybe no dog. See more pictures, adoption information and application on our website at the Young Cats page at www.lifelineforpets.org

Pet of the Week

Five-year-old Dan (A490941) is sweet and attentive, and loves resting his head on his foster parent's lap. He enjoys watching his foster parent chop vegetables, and even gets a healthy, crunchy carrot to snack on sometimes! Dan came to us as a stray, but with a little patience he's warmed up to so many people and discovered that he especially loves back scratches. Dan would do best as the only dog in the home, and just wants to be your one-and-only.

The adoption fee for dogs is $140. All dog adoptions include spay or neuter, microchip, and age-appropriate vaccines. New adopters will receive a complimentary health-and-wellness exam from VCA Animal Hospitals, as well as a goody bag filled with information about how to care for your pet. View photos of adoptable pets at pasadenahumane.org and fill out an online adoption application. Adoptions are by appointment only. Pets may not be available for adoption and cannot be held for potential adopters by phone calls or email.

LOOKING FOR A BEST FRIEND?

Meet Saweetie! Saweetie is a very high-energy 6-month old brown tabby. She has warmed all of the shelter staff's hearts with her sassiness. Saweetie requires someone who can be attentive to high-energy qualities. She's a very independent girl, who loves to run around & play with her toys! When she's done releasing all of her energy, she does love to have someone to snuggle with. Since she is very active, she does play a little rough, so she would go best as possibly a single kitty or with a dog/cat that can match her energy. Her adoption fee is $99, which includes spay surgery, microchip, first vaccinations and a free wellness check-up at a participating veterinarian. Call the San Gabriel Valley Humane Society 626-286-1159 to schedule a "Meet and Greet" appointment with Saweetie. Website: www.sgvhumane.org.

2020 Census Operational Adjustments Due to COVID-19

The 2020 Census is underway, and more than half of the households across America have responded and more are responding every day. Online, phone, and mailed self-responses will continue throughout the data collection process. In light of the COVID-19 outbreak, the U.S. Census Bureau has adjusted 2020 Census operations in order to:

- Protect the health and safety of the American public and Census Bureau employees.
- Implement guidance from federal, state, and local authorities regarding COVID-19.
- Ensure a complete and accurate count of all communities.

The Office of Management and Budget and the Office of Personnel Management have provided federal agencies with guidelines for resuming operations on an epidemiologically sound, data-driven basis, adhering to the latest federal, state, and local guidance. The Census Bureau continues to monitor the changing conditions at the state and local level, and in consultation with the appropriate officials, update its planned start dates for selected operations in selected states.

The information the Census Bureau receives daily from FEMA and state and local authorities guides Census Bureau decisions on timing. As a result, selected field operations will resume on a phased schedule on a geographic basis.

Under the adjusted 2020 Census operational plan, the Census Bureau is conducting a series of preparatory activities so we are fully ready to resume field activities as we continue to advance the mission of the 2020 Census to ensure a complete and accurate count. In-person activities, including enumeration, office work, and processing activities, will always incorporate the most current guidance from authorities to ensure the health and safety of the public and Census Bureau employees.

Activity/Operation	Original Schedule	New Schedule
Self-Response Phase (online, phone, mail)	March 12-July 31	March 12-October 31
Group Quarters (e-Response and Paper Enumeration)	April 2-June 5	April 2-September 3
Update Leave—Stateside	March 15-April 17	Selected Area Census Offices starting May 4

AN EXECUTOR'S GUIDE TO SETTLING A LOVED ONE'S ESTATE

Dear Savvy Senior:

My aunt recently asked me to be the executor of her will when she dies. I'm flattered that she asked, but I'm not sure what exactly the job entails. What can you tell me about this? Inquiring Niece

Dear Inquiring

Serving as the executor of your aunt's estate may seem like an honor, but it can also be a lot of work. Here's what you should know to help you prepare for this job.

As the executor of your aunt's will, you're essentially responsible for winding up her affairs after she dies. While this may sound simple enough, you need to be aware that the job can be time consuming and difficult depending on the complexity of her financial and family situation. Some of the duties required include:

Filing court papers to start the probate process (this is generally required by law to determine the will's validity).

Taking an inventory of everything in her estate.

Using her estate's funds to pay bills, including taxes, funeral costs, etc.

Handling details like terminating her credit cards and notifying banks and government agencies like Social Security and the post office of her death.

Preparing and filing her final income tax returns.

Distributing assets to the beneficiaries named in her will.

Be aware that each state has specific laws and timetables on an executor's responsibilities. Your state or local bar association may have an online law library that details the rules and requirements. The American Bar Association website also offers guidance on how to settle an estate. Go to American-Bar.org and type in "guidelines for individual executors and trustees" in the search bar to find it.

Get Organized

If you agree to take on the responsibility as executor of your aunt's estate, your first step is to make sure she has an updated will and find out where all her important documents and financial information is located. Being able to quickly put your hands on deeds, brokerage statements and insurance policies after she dies will save you a lot of time and hassle.

If she has a complex estate, you may want to hire an attorney or tax accountant to guide you through the process, with the estate picking up the cost. If you need help locating a pro, the National Association of Estate Planners and Councils (naepc.org) and the National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys (naela.org) are good resources that provide directories on their websites to help you find someone.

Avoid Conflicts

Find out if there are any conflicts between the beneficiaries of your aunt's estate. If there are some potential problems, you can make your job as executor much easier if everyone knows in advance who's getting what, and why. So, ask your aunt to tell her beneficiaries what they can expect. This includes the personal items too, because wills often leave it up to the executor to dole out heirlooms. If there's no distribution plan for personal property, suggest she make one and put it in writing.

Executor Fees

As the executor, you're entitled to a fee paid by the estate. In most states, executors are entitled to take a percentage of the estate's value, which often ranges anywhere from 1 to 5 percent depending on the size of the estate. But, if you're a beneficiary, it may make sense for you to forgo the fee. That's because fees are taxable, but Uncle Sam in most states doesn't tax inheritances.

For more information on the duties of an executor, get a copy of the book "The Executor's Guide: Settling A Loved One's Estate or Trust" at Nolo.com.

SWEEPING CHANGES TO ESTATE TAX POLICY IN PLAY THIS NOVEMBER

The 2020 Democratic National Convention just wrapped up and Vice-president Joe Biden was officially nominated as the Democratic candidate for president. The Republican National Convention will kick off next week with President Donald Trump slated to be nominated for a second term. With the major candidates set, It's sure to be an exciting (if you're a political junkie like me) campaign season until the final votes are cast on November 3.

Personally, I have never voted based on party. I always take a long hard look at the issues and who I think will best address them before casting my vote. While there are many, many issues to consider before voting, I'm going to focus on taxes for this article. And of course, there are many, many different tax issues, but I'm going to limit this discussion to inheritance and estate taxes, two issues I deal with on a professional level, every day.

Under current law, heirs receive a "stepped-up basis" in inherited assets. That means an heir's basis (for tax purposes) is equal to the fair market value of the asset on the date the asset is inherited, not the original cost of the asset. This valuation scheme often saves heirs tens and even hundreds of thousands of dollars (sometimes even millions) in capital gains taxes on inherited assets.

Trump is likely to continue this system while Biden's plan is to eliminate the step-up. It's not clear whether Biden's proposal would assess the full tax to the heir upon the sale of the asset or make the decedent's estate pay the tax before the asset is passed to the heir. And while that distinction becomes important for the final amount of the tax, either way, the bottom line is that Biden's plan will cost our heirs a lot—the current inheritance tax savings on an asset's increased value equals 15 to 20 percent.

As for estate taxes, the law under Trump provides an exemption amount of $11.58 million per individual (indexed for inflation). That means, only those with a net worth above $11.58 million are subject to the current 40% estate tax. I can help clients above that net worth legally reduce or even avoid those taxes with advanced estate planning techniques, but that comes at the price of additional legal fees, both now and for their heirs. Biden has yet to commit to all proposals, but the joint Biden-Sanders Unity Task Force recommends returning the estate tax to its historical norm which likely means rolling back the estate tax to the 2009 levels of a $3.5 million exemption and a 45% tax. That would mean the government would take 45% of any decedent's net worth above $3.5 million before the decedent's heirs got what was left. Again, with advanced estate planning techniques, my clients in that category would be able to reduce or eliminate those taxes, but their legal fees (and those of their heirs) would increase.

While I do believe tax policy is an important consideration when electing our government officials, in no way do I mean to suggest you should vote for or against any candidate based solely on his or her tax plan. My goal, as always, is to provide whatever education I can to help you make informed decisions for yourself and your family. And whether you ultimately favor Biden or Trump (or one of the third party candidates), I do encourage you to vote. Countless servicemen and servicewomen have sacrificed, bled, and died to ensure we have the right to determine the leaders who will tackle our important issues. In November I for one plan to honor all those who have sacrificed so much to give me that right. I hope you will join me.

Dedicated to empowering your family, building your wealth and defining your legacy,

MARC

OUT TO PASTOR

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

OH, FOR THE LIFE OF MY KITTY

The other night the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and I were watching the news on TV. All it showed was riots, looting, and chaos, which has become the normal. When will they ever get back to broadcasting good news? After a while, I heard a deep sigh on the other side of the room, and somebody say, "What's wrong with people?" Being a veteran husband, I knew that was not a question I was supposed to respond to with a very logical answer. I knew the person asking that question was not looking for any response from me. I kept from looking in her direction. Although I did not say it aloud, I did have to agree with her that we are living in some very crazy and chaotic times. Oh, if only I could go back and live in the 60s again with those hippies! I just let that go, realizing that there is no way to answer such an inquiry. People will do what people will do. Many of those people are not good people. Thinking about this, I remembered a little change that came into our house about a month ago. Getting up one morning as I looked out the glass doors onto the back porch, I saw a little kitty looking at me. It could not have been more than a month old. I had no idea where this little kitty came from. I assumed it was just passing through, and the mama was somewhere around the corner. As my wife came into the kitchen, I said, "Look at that little kitty on the porch. Isn't it cute?" Even before she looked, she said very sternly, "Don't you dare feed that kitten."

I think the problem between husbands and wives is that husbands can hear, but have a hard time listening. I am sure I heard what she said, but it never registered in my brain. Of course, nothing really registers in my brain.

I began sneaking out little bits of treats for this little kitty, and to my surprise, it stayed around for a month so far.

After getting up in the morning, I would go to the glass door, look out, and sitting in front of the door looking at me was the kitty. It would look at me, then turn and look at the food dish, which was empty at the time, and then look back at me and meow.

I have as many problems with a little kitty's meow as I do with a Girl Scout's brown eyes when they are selling cookies.

Trying to do it with as much sleuthfulness as possible to keep my little secret from my wife, I fed the little kitty every morning and evening. Sherlock Holmes, I am not, but somebody in our residence comes very close to that.

Of course, my little secret was discovered.

One afternoon I went out to sit on the porch with the kitty two have a conversation.

The kitty lay down, facing me, and I began our little conversation.

"What do you think all of this nonsense and chaos and looting that's going on in the world today?"

The little kitty yawned a big yawn and stretched like it was getting ready to go to sleep. It acted as if it had no idea what I was talking about. It was very calm, cool, and collected and seemed to be enjoying resting on the back porch.

"What do you think about all this mask-wearing people are doing today? Do you understand what that's all about?"

Nonchalantly, the kitty laid his head down on its paws and closed its eyes as though it was no concern.

I had more questions I asked the little kitty and got the same answers.

Then, the little kitty stood up, looked at me, looked over at the food dish, looked back at me, and softly meowed.

Although the kitty was not too interested in my questions, it was interested in her question, "When are you going to put food in my dish?"

I got some food, put it in the dish, and watched as the little kitty ate. Watching her, I could not help but be just a wee bit jealous. This little kitty had no idea what was going on in the world and could live on my back porch as though nothing in the world was wrong.

All that concerned this kitty was having her dish filled with food.

That little kitty's world is one of peace, serenity, and "kitty food." Nothing else had her attention for the least bit of time.

I have tried talking to this kitty about the latest news that was happening in the world and how nervous everybody was and how much fear there was, and it never influenced her one bit.

After all, no matter how bad the world was out there, this little kitty could not fix the problems. The only problem this kitty could fix was conning me into giving her food every morning and evening.

Sitting there, watching the kitty, I thought of a verse of Scripture. "Put them in fear, O Lord: that the nations may know themselves to be but men" (Psalm 9:20).

That kitty knows that it is a "kitty." Today's problem is that people do not realize they are "but men" and do not have the solution for the world's problems.

At first, Dad and I didn't see eye to eye about moving to The Kensington, but since he did, we're both thrilled

LOOKING AROUND TODAY

As I walked around early this morning in a futile attempt to beat the heat, I of course noticed the exquisite beauty of Sierra Madre Canyon and marveled at how fortunate I was to live here. I moved here 42 years ago when unexpectedly I suddenly became a single parent of two children as my ex-wife decided that Los Angeles was not the place for her and I could have the kids. I couldn't have been happier. The first thing I did as a newly single parent was hunt for a more suitable place to live with my kids. My Law Office was in El Monte and I owned some apartments there but realized through my law practice that El Monte was a neighborhood containing lots of crime, violence, anger, and poverty. I had good reason to know, I represented the Chief of Police.

Anyway, a bit north of El Monte. I spotted what seemed like a residential area in the mountains. I drove up Santa Anita Avenue about as high as I could to a street called Grand View. Good beginning I thought. I went west on Grand View, turned right on a street called Mountain Trail which lead into this very secluded canyon which was, and still is, beautiful. I saw a guy walking and asked if he knew of any property for sale. He told me the Mailman had a house he wanted to sell and I saw the mailman sitting at a cute little store called Mary's. I talked to the mailman and asked about his house for sale and he said "Sure", you want to see it. It was a little 2 bedroom cabin with a wonderful view over the canyon. The mailman said. "Do you want to buy it" and I said "sure" and after a couple of minutes we agreed upon a price. Later I learned that he thought I had paid too high a price. Prices in Sierra Madre have skyrocketed. The mailman is gone now and at the farewell party two weeks before his death all I could say to him was "Sorry Charlie". He laughed and that's how I remember him.

What I'm describing is how easy it was for me to move up here but over my 42 years I have noticed the place is an all-White enclave. A family up the street has adopted a mixed-race African/Caucasian child who is now about 5. A few months ago I was wheeling my infant mixed-race grandchild when the little 5 year old looked into the buggy and began jumping up and down, "She looks just like me", she cried.

As you might imagine, I am troubled. I imagined that real estate agents steered whites away from black neighborhoods and blacks away from white neighborhoods but what else is involved and why have I not cared up until now? A book mentioned in the New York Times entitled The Color of Law by Richard Rothstein caught my eye. I bought the book and read only the first pages of the preface and learned that the US government's methods systematically imposed residential racial segregation in the twentieth century. Devices used to impose "undisguised racial zoning, public housing that purposely severed previously mixed communities, subsidies for builders to create whites-only suburbs, tax exemptions for prejudiced institutions". The book explains how these policies still influence tragedies in places like Ferguson and Baltimore. I do not know if our beautiful white-only enclave is the result of these discriminatory legal policies. I did not really care much about our white only demographic before but it bothers me now. That's how life works I guess. (Did the George Floyd murder reveal anything that was unknown before?) Today, some of the beauty of this place has already vanished for me and perhaps, as you think about it, for you as well.

2020 ELECTION: BIDEN VERSUS 'A GRAVE COUNTERINTELLIGENCE THREAT

We're compelled to interrupt our regularly scheduled program to bring you the latest dire reminder that Joe Biden, now the official Democratic nominee, will be facing off against a willing Russian stooge who welcomed Vladimir Putin's illegal assistance in 2016 and is totally fine with doing so again. This reminder was voiced Tuesday by the Republican-led Senate Intelligence Committee, which released 1,000 pages that truly frames the stakes in 2020.

Page 32 says it all. During the 2016 race, there was a "direct tie between senior Trump campaign officials and the Russian intelligence services." Trump's chief plotter was his campaign chairman, Paul Manafort.

Here's another gem: "The committee found that Manafort's presence on the campaign and proximity to Trump created opportunities for Russian intelligence services to exert influence over, and acquire confidential information on the Trump campaign. Taken as a whole, Manafort's high-level access and willingness to share information with individuals closely affiliated with Russian intelligence services... represented a grave counterintelligence threat."

Indeed, Manafort secretly shared Trump campaign info with a guy named Konstantin Kilimnik, who just so happened to be "a Russian intelligence agent." That jibes with a passage in the Mueller Report that said in the summer of 2016, while the Russians were busy hacking on Trump's behalf, Manafort was sharing "internal polling data" with a Russian suspected of being an intelligence agent - most notably, polling data from the key states of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Pennsylvania.

We've long known that Trump is a Putin stooge - despite Bill Barr's craven attempts to spin it all away - but it's refreshing to see it spelled out by a Republican-led Senate committee. Especially all the dirty details about how team Trump tried to cover up the 2016 Russian connection: "The Trump campaign publicly undermined the attribution of the hack-and-leak campaign to Russia, and was indifferent to whether it and WikiLeaks were furthering a Russian election interference effort."

Ah yes, WikiLeaks - the repository of the Hillary campaign material stolen by Russia's hackers. This new Senate report, vetted by the panel's Republicans, contains the strongest evidence thus far that Trump and his campaign used Roger Stone as a conduit to get the inside skinny on what the Russia-WikiLeaks operation was releasing.

But enough about 2016. What about now?

The Senate report hints - but does not spell out - that the Russians, with Trump's silent indulgence, is trying to meddle on his behalf in 2020. The committee features a statement from one its members, Ron Wyden, who says that the report "includes redacted information that is directly relevant to Russia's interference in the 2020 election."

Ideally, it would've been nice if the report had told us more. But to recognize what's happening, we need only remember what one of our top intelligence officials said publicly earlier this month. William Evanina, a career law enforcement guy who runs the National Counterintelligence and Security Center (and a Trump appointee, no less) said this: "Russia is using a range of measures to primarily denigrate former Vice President Biden...some Kremlin-linked actors are also seeking to boost President Trump's candidacy on social media and Russian television."

But has Trump ever sounded the alarm about any of this? As if.

Miles Taylor, a former chief of staff at the Department of Homeland Security, recalls in a devastating new video that whenever he and other senior security officials tried to broach the Russian meddling issue with Trump, it didn't go well.

"He was distracted, he was disinterested, but ultimately, he denied it. He denied that this was a threat. He denied that this was a concern," Taylor said. "What the president wanted to talk about was how resoundingly he'd won the election in 2016... From that point on, you had people in the administration who were scared to go out and talk about one of the top national security threats facing our country."

Granted, the Trump-Russia connection is not one of the top-tier voting issues in this election. The pandemic and the crashed economy clearly take precedence. And the Democrats, in their virtual convention, are rightly emphasizing the everyday traumas that directly and adversely affecting people's lives.

What the new Senate report does do is remind us that the choice this year is ultimately between authoritarianism and democracy. It's up to us to save our noble experiment.
