Volunteer Ham Radio Operators Lend A Helping Hand

Volunteer Člub Provides Extra Help For The City

Allen Wolff and members of Sierra Madre's Ham Radio Operators Club

By Dean Lee

Any reasonable person might immediately think it difficult to get lost wearing a bright green dragon suit complete spiked scales and a long pointy tail but among thousands vampires, skeletons, witches, princesses, Wars droids and what ever else people could think up, getting lost on Halloween was not so unusual, in fact it happened while interviewing this story. A crackle came through Sierra Madre Emergency Communications Team leader Allen Wolff's radio, "Police have found a small child wearing a green dragon suit." The operator announced. "He is on his way to the information booth and we will have further information there."

Wolff explained the situation. "Well right now what we have is a lost child so what we're hoping is that someone will see us. That's why we keep waving the flashlight, and they'll ask. We want to look for someone that might look confused, disoriented or lost.

Later... "Matthew's dad has been found," came over the radio as Wolff shows up at the information booth. "So there you have it," he said as an obvious frantic (continued on page 3)

Ad Hoc Committee Report To Recommend Utility Users Tax To Council

By Dean Lee

Sierra Madre's Ad-Hoc finance committee met for the last time Thursday night, sending a unanimous recommendation to the city council - double the Utility User Tax This recommendation was agreed upon by all even though the committee had doubt that doing so would cover the city's current projected budget shortfall. A raise in the UUT could generate as much as $1.5 million yearly, according to the committee's final report.

The report also says that a little under $2 million is needed for police and ambulance services. The pending Police Officer's Association Initiative alone has been estimated to cost as much as $1.3 million according to the report.

Committee member Tom Janzen suggested the council place on the next available ballot, after the UUT, another measure for a parcel tax to cover the extra costs. The original language, underlined and later amended by councilmember and chair of the ad-hoc committee John Buchanan, stated, "If public safety services are not funded with additional revenue, the city will be forced to shut down services."

Some took this original wording to mean that, no matter what, even if the UUT passed, the city could still lose the library, senior or youth services. Buchanan said the report should more clearly reflect that cuts in city services might be necessary.

City Manager Elaine Aguilar said the council packet needed to be sent out that night and asked if the committee wanted to wait to send the council a revised report. They said no, but agreed an update should be sent Tuesday. Monday is a holiday and City Hall is shut down every other Friday.

Committee members Jansen, Scott Hood, Dennis Keegan and Mike Comer, all at one point or another, said the recommendations should not include a sunset clause, which would require having the UUT reviewed every five years. They did, however, agree that the council should review and explain the UUT level needed, ranging from 0 to 12 percent.

"If we know the money will always be needed then I don't see a need." Jansen said. "We should avoid repeating the uncertainty that surrounded measure F."

Buchanan agreed, even though every resident who spoke said removing the sunset clause was a fatal mistake that could lead to disapproval by the voters. To the surprise of many, only three residents showed up and stayed throughout public comment.

Longtime resident Fay Angus suggested a flat library tax could free up money in the general fund. "I think, $100 or even $150, people would go for that," she said. "People want their beloved library."

She also expressed adamant opposition to any parcel tax saying, "There is no possible way it could be fair."

City Clerk Nancy Shollenberger also opposed any parcel tax, and said a sunset clause should stay. Shollenberger announced this week she plans to seek re-election in April during the same election as the UUT. Buchanan and Councilmember/Mayor Enid Joffe will also both be up for re-election in April. The Mayor's position rotates each year among the five elected members of the City Council.

In the recommendations, the committee also agreed to say that a minority of the body thought the creation of a parcel tax was the better way to go, even though it required a 2/3 vote. Janzen said people would support it as long as they knew what it was for. The tax would be based on 2.5 cents per square foot and has a potential of generating $1.8 million, $300,000 more than the UUT, he said.

Other parcel tax proponents said the amount could be raised to cover all of the funds needed. Fay Angus pointed out the largest flaw in the tax, reiterating that "religious institutions are likely excluded from tax," as stated in the report. She also pointed out that some of the largest property holders in town are churches.

At the last minute, Buchanan brought up the idea of adding an advisory vote, saying that voters should decide how much and where the money goes, similar to the advisory attached to South Pasadena's UUT measure which passed Tuesday with 53 percent of the vote in that city.

"It should be something like measure 'AV," he said.

He later pointed out that South Pasadena's advisory vote itself got 75 percent approval. "Obviously people wanted to make sure where the money was going, even if they might not [have] supported it," he said. (See related Pasadena story on page 4.)

The committee also unanimously supported advising the council to adopt a "Citizen's Budget Oversight and Advisory Committee." The citizen committee should evaluate how city services can be delivered more economically or efficiently, Buchanan said.

Both committee and council members Kurt Zimmerman and Buchanan abstained from the final vote on the recommendations, saying they wanted to stay impartial when the report came in front of them at next Tuesday's council meeting. Joffe sat quietly in the back of the chambers throughout the two hour long finance meeting.

Note: The City of Pasadena will be putting a Utility User Tax on the ballot next year. See story on page 4.

Sierra Love Madre

By Rich Johnson

Imagine this. Two of my cousins flew out last weekend from Minnesota just to see me in the play, "The Good Doctor." (Hope

I'm relatively sure the sticker shock on the price of housing will keep Joe and Dawn from following Horace Greeley's dictum "Go west young...". Nevertheless their enthusiasm toward Sierra Madre inspired me and reminded me of an antique plate my mom had on the wall of our dining room. Viewed from across the room the plate looked magnificent. Rich, glorious colors, interesting design, and a beautiful country setting. However, when you got real close to the plate you discovered there were thousands of little cracks and scratches invisible from any distance. I think many of us have been standing too close to the decorative plate we call Sierra Madre. We have trouble seeing the overall beauty, as we get caught up at all the little cracks and scratches. Maybe it's time to take a step back and enjoy our town for its beauty. I just happen to have the perfect solution. Make your way downtown, say to Kersting Court around dusk, and just mill around. Have dinner at one of the fleet of restaurants, dessert at Coldstone's and a brew at the Pub, or whatever's brewing at Bean Town, Starbucks or Steamers. Then sit outside and solve the world's problems with whoever else happens to be outside. For the purposes of this excursion, don't try to solve Sierra Madre's problems. Leave that for the people sitting around Old Town Monrovia.

Restaurant Report: I finally made it to Lozano's restaurant on North Baldwin here in Sierra Madre. And again, I was fortunate enough to have the talented, brilliant and beautiful Loretta Weeks join me. We had great service by server Michelle. We quickly learned Michelle was the mother of four boys so Î kept waiting for her to correct my table manners or rap my knuckles, but she proved graciously reserved. Yours truly, Brutus Carnivorous, ordered the Rib Eye (the manly thing to do). Loretta, always so classy, ordered an exotic vegetarian dish called Roasted Vegetable Chilaquiles (a vegetable tortilla casserole). Oh, my gosh. We sampled each other's fare and, as good as the rib eye was, the Chilaquiles was extraordinary. What's more, nothing I could do or say could get Loretta to trade with me. For goodness sakes, go to Lozanos and order the Chilaquiles. And if you get lucky enough to have dinner with Loretta in the future, order what she orders.

Finally, I would love to hear what you like about Sierra Madre. Email me, and I just might mention it next week ... rich@versatape.com.

Community Calls for Civic Investment in School System

By Teresa Baxter

Civic leaders and community organizations Nov. 4 invited model cities from around the state to partake in a public forum offering examples of successful measures taken to create a positive city-school partnership. They met at the Pasadena Senior Center. Guest speakers included Burbank Ĉity Manager Mary Alvord, Santa Monica-Malibu School Board member Ralph Mechur and Hydra Mendoza from the San Francisco Mayor's Office, who is also a Board member of the SFUSD.

Local dignitaries were also on hand to present the current steps being taken to engage every resident of Pasadena, Altadena, and Sierra Madre that has a stake in the success of the Pasadena Unified School District and the children it serves. It was the consensus of most of the speakers is that it does indeed take a village to guarantee student achievement.

Mendoza opened the forum by sharing that the City of San Francisco has been proactive in forming a joint effort with the SFUSD by combining forces to enact the Partnership for Achievement.

"There are a lot of things we have been doing and so much of it is based on relationship and understanding each other's side," said Mendoza. "We've really taken a partnership approach as a city to talk about the priorities of the school district."

Burbank's City Manager, Mary Alvord, reaffirmed that it takes long-term goals, stating, "The elected come and go but at the end of the day it is all about the kids. What is unique about Burbank is that we have chosen to make the focus on the children," she said. The City of Burbank gives BUSD grants as part of Youth Endowment Services (YES) program. Since 2002, the money from these grants has largely been used revamp athletic facilities. The city has also awarded all middle schools with a grant to prevent bullying and violence on campuses. The grant enables schools to conduct a variety of activities that promote mutual respect and civility. Alvord's glowing report prompted the moderator, USC Professor Manuel Pastor to humorously add, "This is not supposed to be an initiative to move to Burbank."

Sierra Madre Mayor, Enid Joffe added a local perspective by sharing that the city of 11,000 and their school district has received funding from a library grant given by the federal government to establish Internet communication and enabled electronic capability.

'We also have a youth master plan that has been able to measure the reduction in bullying, truancy and lots of negative behaviors," said Joffe. "This is the kind of town that Altadena Town Council member Keith Gibbs stressed the importance of unification in the community. He implored that most events should be standing room only with parents because it whould be in the best interests of the children and the community.

'We have to come together to make this state work. You can't sit at home and say I want something to happen and do nothing about making it happen," Gibbs said. "We need to support each other."

Pasadena Vice-Mayor Steve Haderlein added that community involvement is at levels never seen before.

"The City of Pasadena's most efficient use of knowledge is to provide the services and the backbone of the day to day," said Haderlein. "We are all [as a community] valued."

Then, PUSD Superintendent Edwin Diaz spoke, without notes, about extemporaneously goals for PUSD regarding civic involvement. "This discussion is so important at this time in regards of engaging the whole community,"

He also refrained from calling the all volunteer, 18 member team, "a club." Years ago they all "just came together," he said. operators differ from radios used by fire or police. "They operate on frequencies we operate on bands," he said. "Police, taxicabs, radio stations, they are all assigned a frequency." A band is a range of frequencies, he explained.

Now retired, Wolff said he had taught classes in the city on ham radio operations for years. "There are three classes of ham radio operator's licenses. Each one of them giving different privileges, the lowest is Technician, the middle is General and the top class is Extra Class." Extra Class."

Licenses are renewed every 10 years he said boasting that he had been an Extra Class for years, "I'm allowed to operate on all ham radio frequencies allocated

All police, fire, paramedics and his team members were given strategic event plans for the night and his job was to pace the street.

Wolff also said team members humbly helped people through crosswalks and other situations as they were stationed at both ends of the 100 block of East Alegria. Police estimated, Halloween night, 7,000 people had visited the street by night's end although a number of residents said there is usually well over 10,000.

You might not see them during the many city festivities but Wolff said but they are the essential communications for a number of other events including the 4th of July parade, the Wisteria Festival and the Mt. Wilson Trail Race. Each event has very different problems and needs he said.

"The trial race, we might radio for help for an injured runner, you can't use cell phones up the hill. At the Wisteria Vine we make sure the busses run and that people get picked up and dropped off."

"Here tonight we are looking for lost children and reuniting them with their families."

Pasadena Set To Vote Next Year On Utility User Tax

Similar UT Measure Narrowly Passed In So. Pasadena

By Dean Lee

All eyes were focused on South Pasadena Tuesday when 53.47 percent of the voters said yes to a utility tax increase of three percent. The cities of Pasadena and Sierra Madre paid particular attention as they also have User Utility Tax measures going before the voters in 2008.

South Pasadena's also had an advisory Measure AV which was of particular interest to Sierra Madre where city officials are bracing for an uphill battle. Measure AV asked: "If the 3% increase in the Utility User's Tax is approved, should not less than 65% of the funds generated by the increase be expended Shocking to some was the fact that 75 percent of the voters said yes to the advisory measure, meaning 21 percent said no to the tax but yes to where they wanted it to go. According to Sierra Madre city council members any advisory measure on their ballet in April would mandate that all the UUT funds would go to police and a newly created paramedic program.

In Pasadena, the city council unanimously agreed on Monday night to set their own similar UUT Measure D for a special February 5, 2008 election. However, this was not before first declaring an emergency deeming that the city could lose $10.4 million in vital funds for city services such as their own police and fire if language in the existing UUT was not changed to keep up with current codes.

The special election will cost Pasadena a surprising estimated $450,000 compared with $30,000 for a regular election.

Critics of Measure D have already opposed the language used saying it's misleading. The measure was written by former Sierra Madre City Attorney Michael Colantuono and states that the UUT ordinance will be updated to treat taxpayers equally regardless of technology used. Some considered this the first move towards a tax on the internet if the federal government were to ever lift a ban currently in place.

The need for a special election had been criticized previously although no public comment was given at Monday's

Pasadena City Manager Cynthia Kurtz said their intention was not to tax the internet. An internet tax ban, first approved in 1998 and twice renewed, was set to expire Nov. 1st, just one week after the UUT was brought before the council. Last week a bill passed the U. S. House of Representatives unanimously extending the moratorium again for another seven years. The bill now waits for President Bush's signature.

Kurtz said the changes reflect new wireless technology and cell phones.

At Monday's meeting Pasadena council member Steve Haderlein asked Kurtz how "low income" families would be treated under the new UUT. "It is (regarding low income) a different definition being used right now for the UUT than is used with some of the other programs that the city offers low income, senior and disabled reductions or wavers for." Kurtz said. "We think it's appropriate to look at that and bring something back."

She also said any adjustment would have to be amended in the city code but did not say what amount defines low income. A low income code amendment will come back to the council at their Nov.19 meeting. Kurtz said the later date was set not to confuse it with the ballet initiative.

According to Citizens for Responsible Government, a group set to defeat the measure, Pasadena's low income exemption limit is $12,000 per household.

Councilmember Margaret McAustin questioned UUT annual audits. "It is not entirely clear to me, independent audits of what?" she asked. "Are we auditing tax, are we auditing the fund? When I read this it's missing those last few words."

Kurtz said the council had discretion over what was to be audited. "What we found in talking to people was, they wanted to know whether the expenditures from this fund would be audited." She explained. "It's not the only thing, we can audit revenue coming in, service providers collecting the tax on our behalf."

According to Pasadena city staff, the lowest UUT rate in California is 1 percent and the highest is 11 percent. Sierra Madre's ballot measure calls for 12 percent thus, if passed, may become the highest rate paid in the state. Pasadena's UUT varies from 7.67 percent to 9.40 percent depending on the utilities and would stay the same.

In both Pasadena and Sierra Madre the UUT needs only a simple majority to

Arts Bus & Dial-a-Ride Drivers Threaten Strike

By Dean Lee

A possible bus driver's strike announced Monday by Teamsters at Pasadena's regular city council meeting not only has Arts Bus riders on alert but the company in question, First Transit, just acquired LaidLaw who operates the Dial-a-Ride services for a number of San Gabriel cities including Sierra

The acquisition was so quick; some Dial-a-Ride drivers said they don't know who they work for. "That's a good question?" a Sierra Madre Gateway Coach driver said. "We were just notified of the merger but I don't know if this bus is operated by First Transit yet or not.

Ēric Tate the business representative for the Teamsters Local 848 said 41 Pasadena drivers were given a final contract offer from First Transit a week ago, to which all but one driver turned down Sunday

The drivers said if negotiations could not be met they would strike asking for the city to end its contract with First Transit. "My reason for coming tonight is to advert a strike from happening in the city of Pasadena," Tate said. "First Transit is a contractor known for tying to push substandard wages off on their employees."

He said they were asking that a clause, "terminate for convenience," in the city's contract with First Transit be enacted giving the transit operator 90 days notice

One bus rider spoke on behalf on the drivers saying the invisible work they do should be acknowledged and that the city should stand for "quality of life."

"It really would be sad to see the city suffer for something that could be diverted."

Pasadena City Manager, Cynthia Kurtz said the city had been notified by First Transit who was prepared if the labor dispute ended in a strike.

"We would not be able to intervene in us services."

A driver said their contracts, as well as the one offered, still makes them the lowest paid transit operators in Southern California. The deal turned down was so ridicules Tate said none of them wanted

A driver later said they were offered a base pay of $9.25 per hour with a 25 cent

Kurt said the city's contract was a flat fee but should be covered by the city's living wage ordinance. "That's something we could look into," she said. "We could definitely look into whether these wages meet our standards."

The drivers also claimed some of the city's busses were unsafe although Pasadena city staff said they are all check by driver daily before going out as well as having to pass State CHP mandated inspections annually.

Sierra Madre Community and Personnel Services Director, Michelle Keith assured residents that any strike would not directly affect services in Sierra Madre. The cities drivers themselves said none of them are a part of any union so a strike would be impossible.

One Sierra Madre bus driver said, "It's the drivers that are going to lose, we live paycheck to paycheck and in the strike last year, it went on so long because First their labor negotiations," she said. "They have assured us they have a plan to allow have it go longer than a few days."

Local Coffee Roasters: There's No Place like Jones

By Teresa Baxter

Jones Coffee Roasters has been a part of the Pasadena caffeine scene since 1994, but with conglomerate shops located on virtually every street corner it can be easy to overlook this hometown gem. Jones not only serves the best brew around, they are also the grower, roaster and importer of their premium specialty coffees.

Mireya Jones oversees business along the with her son, Chuck. Mireya's passion for coffee was inherited from growing up on the family-owned coffee farm in Guatemala that has spanned three generations. The Finca Dos Maria plantation has a reputation supporting humane working conditions and environmentallyfriendly farming practices. Originally, the farm only sold their beans to Europe, prior to the coffee craze that took hold of the U.S.

"Then my father suggested we see what we could do in the Unites States," she said. "I was raised on the coffee estate and was very excited about bringing it here."

It was a slow building process due to the fact that many were not aware, at the time, that coffee came from anywhere but Columbia. ## Owners Re-Open Burger Continental

Fire Officials Had Declared Landmark A Total Loss

Despite assessments that had declared the restaurant a "total loss" and predictions that the 'People's Landmark' would never be the same, Burger Continental has re-opened. A beloved Pasadena area hangout, and home to Harvey Hyde's weekly radio broadcasts was only out of action for a week. The restaurant is so popular that while a reporter for this paper was gathering facts less than 24 hours after the fire, 40-50 patrons came by with their condolences, well wishes and questions about when the restaurant would reopen. The fire, which damaged part of the ventilation system and kitchen, was no deterrent for die hard fan's of the eatery. The restaurant has resumed regular business hours, seven days a week. ## Sierra Madre Fire Safe Council TIP OF THE WEEK

From Caroline Brown

The Angeles National Forest and the Mt Wilson and Bailey CanvonTrails reopened, November 8, 2007, after having been closed for two weeks. It is important for the public who uses these areas to have access to them when high fire alerts are over so that people will understand and respect the restrictions when they are in force.

Some of the cooler, foggy mornings that proceeded the opening, led people to think they could go hiking again. We have to remember that these conditions for the most part made it just better fire fighting weather. There are still fire fighters on the line in the Santiago Canyon area.

Richard Halsy, director of the California Chaparral Institute in San Diego, was the guest speaker at the recent So. Calif. Chapter of the American Society of Foresters. His admonition to us all: Make your home fire proof. The chaparral ecosystem is there as nature intended. Brush directly under your control can and should be correctly modified, but learn what you need to know and act on it in making your structure as fire proof as possible.

Look on line at www.firecenter.berkeley.edu and link to toolkit or home assessment and you will get a look at how to reduce the vulnerable parts of your home.

There will be no regularly scheduled Fire Safe Council meeting in December. A Thermo-gel demonstration will be on November 18, 12-2 P.M. at Mary's Market in the Canyon. For more information contact the Sierra Madre Fire Safe Council at 355-0741 or 355-9350. E-mail: smfiresafecouncil@hotmail.com.

"Did You Know?" The Great Escape

Every winter, the energy equivalent of all the oil that flows through the Alaskan pipeline in a year leaks through American windows! Since the energy crisis of the 70s, experts have been telling us regularly that insulating is one of the best ways to save energy. Frankly, energy conservation cannot be taken seriously without making sure your home is properly insulated.

Insulation Facts:

- * If every gas-heated home was properly caulked and weather-stripped, the natural gas saved annually would be enough to heat 4 million homes.
- * Nearly half of all the energy used in our homes is wasted. It goes "out the window," or through the attic, cracks or other leaks, in the form of heat-or, in summer, air conditioning-lost to the outside.
- * Attic insulation can save 5% or more on heating costs-15% on air-conditioning costs (depending on the climate). Simple Things to Do:
- * If there is no insulation in your home, you're costing yourself and the environment a fortune. If you do have insulation, check to see if you have enough. Have an "energy audit" to find the heat leaks in your house or apartment. If you are a do-it-yourselfer, this can range from simply going around the window frames and sashes of your house with a lighted candle (if the flame flickers, you need caulking or weather-stripping) - If you are not, the utility companies usually do this at no charge. Give them a call...

Altadena's Art Deco Elementary School ...

Photos and Story By Virginia Olive Hoge

Some things in life aren't fair, and one of them is that tiny Altadena, California has not one but two beautiful Art Deco architectural masterpieces: Eliot Middle School and Altadena Elementary School.

It is to the latter this column is devoted, though I promise to write about Eliot later. This beautiful Altadena

Elementary school was built in 1915 by the architectural firm Marsh, Smith and Powell (which specialized in educational institutions and designed, among other buildings, Hollywood High and Barnum Hall in Santa Monica) in the Art Deco style - one of the most "optimistic" of architectural genres. The style began in reaction to the high optimism of the early twentieth century, when there were so many truly important developments in science and technology, which made the future look so full of promise. Architecture of the period was pressed to look "modern" and this freedom allowed many architects to be more inventive than they had ever been. Artistic inspiration was drawn from geometric sources, borrowing imagery from sources such as machinery and ship design.

There is something indescribably "shiplike" about Altadena Elementary, and the design is a pre-cursor to the Streamline Moderne style of the 1930's; you feel it walking towards the main octagonal portico with its beautiful deco grillwork. It is important to remember that the Art Deco style was seen as the "latest" thing for a city witnessing, on Mount Wilson, the field of astronomy taking massive, unprecedented leaps forward with discoveries and developments that were attracting world-wide attention (and visitors to the city from all over the world, many who stuck around). One of the most striking elements of the design of Altadena Elementary (and Eliot) is the horizontal red brick-work, set in snowy white concrete that creates such an interesting, graphic effect in each building. The planning of this brick design work is done to aesthetic precision, and yes, it is very modern! Interestingly, the design is so good that it remains "modern" even to today's eyes.

It is also important to remember that this was not the first "new" architectural style seen in the area. Arts and Crafts (a "new" movement in the late 1900th century) has many representatives in architecture seen here as well. But certainly, this was the first "modern" architectural style, and despite the relatively short life of the Deco movement, so many treasures were many, so I urge you to call the school and ask for a tour; you will be glad you did! When there, check out the highceilinged hallways or the classroom window design (some of the original interior elements have been altered, but some remain). Also, don't miss the 1915 school bell timer encased in its original wooden box in the front office, still operational!

Local Maestra Earns Bravas From Women In Theatre

PASADENA, Calif. Conductor Rachael Worby is used to taking a bow to bravos after a performance of The Pasadena POPS, the orchestra she has served as Music Director since 1999. But on Saturday, October 20, in honor of National Arts Awareness Month, the maestra received applause for her performance' as a supporter of the live theatrical arts in greater Los Angeles when Women in Theatre presents her with a Red Carpet Award at a special luncheon at the Castaways Restaurant in Burbank. Award presenters will include director and choreographer Cate Caplin, actress Wendie Malick, and singer Marianne Murphy.

"We are so excited to be able to recognize and honor Rachael as one of our Red Carpet Awardees this year," says Talmadge Ragan, President of Women in Theatre. "The judging committee selected her to receive the award this year because she exemplifies the spirit of our mission with Women in Theatre and she sets a sterling example of achievement."

Joining Worby as award recipients are a diverse group of women from a variety of fields who share one interest, to vigorously and tirelessly promote the arts. Honorees include: Sharon Graine, writer and director; Robin Lithgow, Elementary Arts Coordinator for Los Angeles Unified School District; Beverly Sanders, actress; Estherleon Schwartz, cantor and founder of Voices of Hope; Jenny Sullivan, actress and director; Penelope Torribio, master puppeteer and singer-songwriter; Gloria Watts, children's theater director; and Lisa Wolpe, Artistic Director of the Los Angeles Women's Shakespeare

"When I learned that I'd been selected to receive a Red Carpet Award, I was thrilled," recalls Rachael Worby. "It's always gratifying to have your hard work recognized. But when I saw who my fellow recipients were, I felt this overwhelming sense of humility. These are such illustrious women, working veritable miracles in our community on a daily basis. I'm honored to share this award with them."

Worby may not be giving herself quite enough credit. Under her guidance, The Pasadena POPS has not only tripled the number of its performances from four to twelve - with performances on Gardens in La Canada Flintridge – but dramatically increased its reputation for artistic excellence.

As Robert Thomas, music critic for the Los Angeles Newspaper Group recently remarked, "The evening was also pure Worby...In an excruciating format (musicians will tell you that an entire program of short pieces is much harder to play well than a Mahler symphony), the orchestra delivered sharp, sensitive playing throughout the evening." The Los Angeles Times has hailed Worby - who is also Artistic Director and Conductor of the American Music Festival in Cluj, Romania, and

Laureate Conductor of the Wheeling West Virginia Symphony Orchestra – as "inspiring and accessible."

Worby has earned equally enthusiastic accolades for her expansion of The Pasadena POPS' education programs. These include: Let Music Ring, an intensive three-year program for underserved children at Middle Schools in Pasadena and Los Angeles County that brings POPS musicians and their conductor back each month to the same school to interact repeatedly with the same children; Exploring Music at the Sycamores, a year-round program especially tailored for the boys at The Hathaway-Sycamores residential treatment center, providing them with lessons in music and lifeenriching experiences; and Side by Side by Symphony, a mentoring program for aspiring young musicians that provides a side-by-side rehearsal and performance experience with professional musicians.

"Too often people tell children to hang onto their dreams. But dreaming is not enough," says Worby. "You can only keep a dream alive with extremely hard work. So, I work to inspire the children by teaching them discipline and the reward that comes from setting a goal, then doing what it takes to reach it."

Judging by the awards she has won in addition to the Red Carpet Award, Worby practices what she preaches. She has been honored with the Spirit of Achievement from Albert Einstein College, the Women of Excellence award from the YWCA, a Doctor of Humanities from Marshall University, a Doctor of Letters Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and the Presidential Medal of Honor for throughout the summer at Descanso her consummate lifetime achievements from Claremont University. In 1994, she received a Presidential appointment to the National Council of the Arts and, in 1990, was nominated for an ACE Award for programs she created, narrated and conducted for the Disney Channel.

"But the greatest award, by far," says Worby, who often describes herself as 'a chick with a stick," is successfully sharing with others what Leonard Bernstein, a musician I admire more than any other, called the gift and joy of music."

PUSD Board Budget Study Underway

By Teresa Baxter

In the initial step required to formally formulate a set budget for the upcoming year, Interim Assistant Superintendent Michele McClowry presented a budget assumption to provide focus during the Board's budget development process.

In a sense, the Board is predicting, or assuming, the school district's future economic condition based on preliminary revenue projections, budget guidelines and assumptions, enrollment projections, while also discussing issues related to staffing and potential budget reductions.

According to McClowry, the budget is meant as a means to support the goals and objectives of the Governing Board in providing the best possible educational programs for all students. It is a lengthy process with the results not being made to the public until June 2008, at which time it will be refined into what the Board agrees to approve and adopt.

Most projections were met with approval with the exception of the amount allotted and provided regarding students with special education needs. McClowry shared that she intended to analyze the whole Special Ed program so that it may meet a support service level at the same amount as in the prior year if at all possible.

Superintendent Edwin Diaz went on to assert that increased funding is needed to maintain the program, stating "We can't [meet expectations] with the amount given by the State, it costs more than you get." Board member Renatta Cooper also brought to light the recent escalation of children born with autism that will need increased attention in the future educational process and the funding needed to meet those needs. According to a recent study, ten years ago autism was diagnosed in 1 out of 10,000 children and considered a rare disorder. Today, autism is diagnosed 1 out of 150 children—a growing epidemic with no known cure.

In a race that pitted sage wisdom against youthful enthusiasm, the impeccable public service record of one candidate edged out the up-and-coming future hopeful for the coveted seat on the Board of Trustees at Pasadena City College.

Thompson's current posts also include chairing both the volunteer Rose Bowl Aquatics Center Board and the Entrepreneurial Board of the Rose Bowl Operating Company. ## TRISH'S TRUTH Is Thanksgiving More Than Just a Holiday?

By Trisha Collins

It seems like there are certain things, or customs, that happen each Thanksgiving holiday. Like how somewhere, a little kindergarten class is going to put on a play where half the class dresses as pilgrims and Native Americans, while the others are left to be the foods and utensils. Families all over will be going grocery shopping for all the mouth-watering food they'll prepare. You'll find countless mothers across the country spending days on trying to perfect the turkey and getting the stuffing just right. In one school or another, kids will be making paper turkeys from tracing their hands and teachers will mysteriously turn up absent days before the four-day weekend.

Then there's the day before Thanksgiving. Oh what a hectic and frightful day that always is! Markets are overflowing, and you can't find a turkey to save your life. Shoppers can be seen racing to get that last can of cranberry sauce and the last apple pie on the shelf waiting just for them. And then finally, the actual Thanksgiving Day comes. All over you'll find people expecting guests, finishing cleaning up the house, putting the last few touches on the food. Later, relatives arrive, grandparents, cousins, aunts, uncles, and close friends. Everyone can be seen in rooms laughing, enjoying each other's company, and of course, overeating.

Though the Thanksgiving holiday is pretty busy and sometimes chaotic...I love it. I love how on Thanksgiving you can watch reruns of Charlie Brown's Thanksgiving from dawn until dusk. I love watching the Macy's Parade even though I'm a little jealous that it's usually snowing there and never here. I love how everyone just seems nicer on Thanksgiving, people just seem to be much more friendly. I also love all the Thanksgiving sales at the mall! Besides, what do you think that 4-day weekend is for, anyway? So people like me can have plenty of time to save a couple pennies at the mall around the Thanksgiving holiday, of course! And who can forget the football? Not exactly one of my favorite parts of Thanksgiving, but its almost as symbolic as the turkey itself. It's just another familybonding time where family members can crowd around the biggest T.V. in the house, whooping and hollering for their favorite team.

When this Thanksgiving rolls around, I hope you take a little time out of your busy schedule to acknowledge all the blessings that surround you. Most simple things we tend to take for granted, so why not put this Thanksgiving into literal terms, show your appreciation to someone and give thanks.

Letter To The Editor

Stain Removal

On September 9th, 1997, the Sierra Madre City Council passed Ordinance 1136, which revised the City Code's definition of "family" to mean "only persons related by blood, marriage or adoption living together". All others were to be termed ousekeeping units.

If you were in Sierra Madre then, you will recall the outrage. A headline proclaimed, "City Council Defines Family Morality". There was standing room only and hours of protest at City Hall, many angry phone calls and letters, and wide media attention. Pushed by then councilwoman Mary Ann MacGillivray, Ordinance 1136 was widely seen as an effort to define "morality" for Sierra Madre. MacGillivray said, "The City Council should take a moral stand....to maintain the traditional definition of family as separate from any other living arrangement." She reportedly was sending a moral message to the rest of the country "in an era in which family values are under

Many citizens were deeply offended. Quoting one citizen, "... Two people who love each other and live together are a family, not a 'housekeeping unit'. This ordinance is a supreme offense to people who choose not to marry, or who legally can't." Quoting another, "As a teacher, I.....[think] the definition proposed here doesn't represent the values I want the children of our community to learn. The fact that we have this small-town feeling shouldn't mean we are small-minded.'

As a member of a "nontraditional" Sierra Madre family, I recently decided that I was going to research having this offensive ordinance removed at long last from our city

With some research, though, I delightedly learned that on November 25, 2005, the City Council quietly and unanimously passed Ordinance 1234. Section 2 simply reads, "Code Amendment. Section 17.08.020 of the Sierra Madre Municipal Code is hereby amended to repeal the definition of 'family' therein."

Ordinance 1136 had been overturned! The newspapers surprisingly made no obvious mention of it, considering what a firestorm of protest it caused in 1997. Clearly we have evolved. As I was told recently by a member of the Sierra Madre

City Council, "There is no definition of family in the code – at all. The only time you generally see a definition of family in the law is when one is trying to limit certain people...our code is inclusive of all. Most cities in California do not attempt to define who or what a family is....family is whatever you say it is. This way, no one is excluded from the definition.

The fact that there are different types of families here is a reflection of Sierra Madre's wonderful diversity. We have married and unmarried families. We have straight and gay/lesbian families. We have these with and without children--blood-related, adopted, and foster children.

As the church that my family attends frequently reiterates, "Love makes a family."

So, for all of you who didn't know about Ordinance 1234, rejoice! Know that the stain of Ordinance 1136 has been removed, for good.

Ron Longo, Sierra Madre

Corps Marine Veterans Day

Birthday

By Hail Hamilton

Marine Corps Birthday

November 10th is the birthday of the United States Marine Corps. We've all heard the words from the Marine Corps Anthem: "From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli..." But do we really know why semper fidelis is a lifelong pledge of allegiance among Marines—both active duty and veterans. It is the sacred oath of the one generation of Marines to another, of the living to the dead, a solemn promise that "once a Marine always a Marine". Those of us who have taken this oath will honor it to our dying day. We know the cost in blood, sweat and tears Marines have paid over the more than two hundred years defending the United States of America. We have traditionally been the first to feel the sting of battle. We have also been the first to die in defense of freedom. We have served our country as its knights-in-armor on the wall and at the gate safeguarding the castle of liberty.

We have been the first to fight in all of America's many wars. We were the first to join the French and English on the Western Front in World War I. It was Marines that put the Stars and Stripes atop Mt. Sirabachi giving hope to all the other Marines fighting the Japanese on Iwa Jima in the final months of World War II. It was Marines who landed at Inchon Bay cutting off the Communists in the Korean War. It was Marines who were the first combat troops to land in at DaNang in the Vietnam War. And it was Marines who spearheaded the "War against Terrorism" in Iraq and in Afghanistan. Semper fidelis, "once a Marine always a Marine".

Veterans Day

November 11th is Veterans Day—the day the nation honors all the men and women who throughout our 231 year history as a nation have served in the military. It is that one day of the year when veterans reemerge from the shadow of civilian life into the limelight as heroes. And make no mistake about it; each and every veteran deserves the honor we bestow on them as heroes for their service to the United States. It is there unselfish service in the defense of freedom that we honor.

Although World War I officially ended on June 28, 1919, with the signing of the Treaty of Versailles, the actual fighting between the allies and Germany ended seven months earlier with the armistice that went into effect on the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month of 1918. Armistice Day, as November 11th became known, officially became a holiday in the United States in 1926, and a national holiday 12 years later in 1938. On June 1, 1954, the name was changed to Veterans Day to honor all U.S. veterans.

In 1968, new legislation changed the national commemoration of Veterans Day to the fourth Monday in October. It soon became apparent, however, that November 11th was the date of historic significance to many Americans, especially the veterans of World War I many who were still alive and understood firsthand the relief they felt when the killing stopped. Therefore, in 1978 Congress returned the observance to its original date.

"FIRST LIGHT" IS THE TERM ASTRONOMERS USE for "opening night" of a new telescope. For the Mount Wilson 60-inch, it was December 8, 1908. For the 100-inch Hooker Telescope, it was November 2, 1917. And for Monrovia High School's new 12-inch, it was November 1, 2007. At a ceremony in the high school's main lobby that evening, the refurbished observatory was dedicated and given the name "The Juan O. Escaño Sr. Astronomy Research and Education Center." Mr. Escaño's son, Juan O. Escaño, recruited a number of cosponsors to equip the observatory, and their joint contributions are valued at between $250,000 and $500,000.

Escaño, a television producer, was filming a Spanish-language home-improvement series in Monrovia last April and learned about Monrovia High School's efforts to refurbish an observatory that had been created on its campus several decades ago. He decided to raise the funding and equipment to create a high-quality, state-of-the-art observatory for the high school as a legacy project for Monrovia and a fitting tribute to his father, who died June 24.

In addition to its main instrument—a Meade 12-inch LX200 RC telescope with high-end accessories (including a CCD camera)—the observatory has new floors, new paint, fiber-optic wiring, inlaid wood paneling, and two additional telescopes.

pointed Escaño out that the new equipment gives the observatory the

"This will give us the opportunity," said Escaño, "to home-grow the next Kepler or Galileo.

LAST WEEKEND'S CHANGE TO STANDARD TIME has given me a whole new perspective on morning. Before the time-change I was waking up regularly around 7:00 (without an alarm clock). Now, 7:00 has become 6:00—but my body's internal clock thinks it's 7:00, and wakes me up. Should I roll over and try to go back to sleep for an hour? Not if I listen to the classic Persian poet Rumi. He said, "The morning breeze has secrets to tell you. Do not go back to sleep."

So I've decided to become a 6:00- instead of a 7:00-riser. I'm enjoying watching the dawn, and the sun coming up, and my thoughts seem a bit fresher and more interesting than they do later in the day. The air actually smells fresher, too, and it's nice and quiet in that hour before most people get started. However, to get enough sleep, I guess I'll also have to go to bed an hour earlier, and maybe skip the late-night news shows on PBS. That's the hard part.

FALL: SLOW TIME After the time change: Waiting for time to happen And get on with it!

First Star I See Tonight: An Exploration of Wonder by Robert l. Eklund (2007)

In this brand new publication, Amateur Astronomer Robert Eklund invites the scientist and poet to set aside their differences for a nightto come outside, stand very still as the sun sets, feel the earth turning eastward, be dazzled by a moonrise, catch a falling star, walk with the constellations, ride a rocket to Jupiter and finally look back at the Home Planet with new eyes. In poetry, prose and picture the author, along with illustrator Virginia Hoge, has written about his love for the heavens. David Levy, co-discoverer of the Comet Shoemaker-Levy writes, "In his marvelous book, Bob Eklund follows the tradition of those few writers who don't tell us how to appreciate the sky, but why we must." As to why Mr. Eklund wrote this book, he states, "I write for all who love the starry night. And even the stormy night full of raindrops and snowflakes. The beauty of these things is never far from us." Mr. Eklund was raised among astronomers on the Yerkes Observatory grounds as both his Grandfather and mother worked there. He currently helps with education and public outreach at the Mount Wilson Observatory and writes the weekly Astronomy column in this paper. This book is for anyone who loves the night sky and its wonders.

Following the war, von Braun and many of his colleagues surrendered to the Allies. A few went to the Soviet Union and helped develop the rockets that brought forth Sputnik. Von Braun and a few others came to the United States and became majors developers of the rockets in the U.S. space program. Author Michael Neufeld is chair of the Space

From the Comfort of Your Own Home

Pretty soon it won't be necessary to leave the confines of our homes at all. In this, the age of computers, we can converse with one another via e-mail; pay our bills, order products such as clothing, books, movies and even groceries. Why, we can even meet the man or woman of our dreams without ever getting out of our chairs.

If it isn't on the Internet it comes directly to our doors. Don't know who to hire to trim those trees, re-pave your driveway or re-roof you home? Have no fear- several selections in the form of business cards will be tucked into every crevice of your front door. When you open it, the cards cascade around your feet. They land in the house, outside the house and all points in-between. If you're lucky, a discount coupon for pizza will be among them so while you're pondering who to hire for the tree trimming, the driveway and the roof, you can at least do so unencumbered by lunch preparations as the pizza will come straight to your door.

I understand that the Fuller Brush Company might be gearing up for doorto-door service once again, so no need to venture out for cleaning products. In addition to women, Avon is now using men to sell their beauty products door-to-door. When you hear the familiar "Avon calling," it might be in a deep baritone. Somehow I have a problem with someone with hairy knuckles trying to convince me that one shade of lipstick is better than another. Although, come to think of it my mother had an Avon lady with a rather hirsute upper lip and she always wore gloves. Hmmm, I never thought that perhaps they were hiding hairy knuckles.

We don't even need to leave our cozy confines for spiritual enlightenment if we don't want to. Quite frequently that is also brought to our doors via a pair of well-dressed people with bibles at the ready.

One thing that can't be delivered electronically or to your door however is laughter, friendship, camaraderie and the human touch. To quote a line from a Streisand song, "People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

An Ongoing Series of Personal Points of View on Health ... By Mary Carney

Where Did I Put.....

Where did I put my keys? My glasses? I know that word - but it just won't get to my tongue ... What's his / her name? Is this just a "senior" moment? Or is it a beginning symptom of a more disturbing pattern - will I "get" Alzheimer's?

The real question is, what am I feeding my brain? Sugar? Fast digesting carbs but not being physically active enough to burn them up as fast as they digest? Is my brain being clouded by medication side effects? You know ... the ones warning us "don't drive" after taking this? What about those pain killers? Prozac? Valium? Antidepressants designed to alter the brain?

This summer I was introduced to a nutritionally dense, very absorbable liquid fruit juice that tasted a bit like blackstrap molasses. Shortly thereafter I learned (via homemade CD) about a mid-80's gentleman with Alzheimer's whose doctors had given him two weeks to live, and thus stopped his medications. The family arranged to put him in "a home for mom and dad," because of the care needed. The owner asked the family if he could be given a three-ounce bottle of this liquid nutrition a day. Sure, why not? Well ... one week later he was more alert and eating. Two weeks later he was talking, then sitting up and walking. Continuous improvement, alert and smiling when family came to visit, enjoying short car trips, and, when the facility provider took him flying as part of the home's enrichment program, wished he had learned how to fly years earlier. And he was given the opportunity to hold onto the controls and fly on his own.

Several years ago, when we the California Medical Board was investigating how to regulate alternative care providers (viz CA SB 577), Dr. Hyla Cass, MD, ND, Psychiatrist at Cedars-Sinai, testified. An expert on brain function, her testimony focused on the importance of proper nutrition for the brain. She, too, reported instances of reversing Alzheimer's and dementia through simple dietary changes, with some supplementation, accompanied by gentle internal cleansing to support the body's elimination processes. I was so impressed! A doctor testifying to the principles of exactly what I had become convinced were essential for health.

When my eyes or brain are fuzzy, I know I need more nutrients. Fresh veggies and fruits, no sugar or fast digesting carbs, more protein - mixed nuts are a good start. Since I'm not on any medications, I don't have to deal with those side effects. But when I think that at my age most people are on at least 9 to 13 medications a day - all of which interfere with the body's enzyme processes and reduce or cut off information between your body's cells to the brain, what else can we expect?

Taking charge - knowing that what we put inside is what's going to be reflected outside ... may you enjoy this holiday season by eating deliciously and wisely from the inside out.

Monroe "Cottage": Monrovia Founder's First Home

The Monroes lived in a tent on the property while their "Cottage" was built in 1884.

The Lees, new LA residents from Connecticut, decided to purchase a historic Monrovia home earlier this year. After months of search for just the right home, this one tugged at their heartstrings. With its 1884 construction date comes charm, history, tradition, several remodels and additions including indoor plumbing, plus a host of modern day challenges.

Much of what the Lees have learned about the Monroe "Cottage" comes from historical and heritage organizations, old photographs and just plain hearsay. Debi Lee and I made a visit to the Monrovia Historical Museum on Palm, to see what they might have in documentation and history about their home and its builder, William N. Monroe.

We found a wealth of Monroe artifacts there, some framed copies of packing labels from Monroe's fruit company, two books on Monrovia history (copies available for sale) and two charming and articulate octogenarian docents who brought the town's history alive for us. A photo of the town in the late 1800's shows their home with a young tree at the northwest corner, that could be the young fig or rubber tree (both have been mentioned) that grew to shade four homesites by the time it was removed in 2003.

According to the Monrovia Centennial Review book by Peter C. Ostrye from 1986, Monroe was one of four founders of the community, though not the first resident. After a Union Army stint leading to the rank of Major in the Civil War, he joined his father-in-law, Milton Hall, in the construction of several railroad routes in California, Utah, Texas and Mexico. When he "retired" from that venture and vagabond life in his mid-thirties, he set off to Los Angeles in 1875 for a settled down life of raising fruit and a family. In the process of deciding where to build a home, Monroe, always a mover and shaker, became active in Los Angeles business and political circles, though a brief interlude took him back to Texas for construction on Huntington's Southern Pacific Electric.

outhern Pacific Electric.

Upon his return, word was out that

Debi Lee examines framed fruit crate labels from Monroe's company at Monrovia Historical Museum.

E.J. "Lucky" Baldwin was selling 30 acre parcels of his ranch. Monroe bought several, amassing 210 acres, and moved his family into a tent at the current 225 Monroe Place in 1884. A single story cottage was erected that year and the family moved in Only a year later. Monroe went on to his family into a tent at the current 225 Monroe Place in 1884. A single story cottage was erected that year, and the family moved in. Only a year later, Monroe went on to build "The Oaks", a grand residence on Primrose, and Monroe's brother then moved into the cottage.

Along the way, pieces of the homesite were sold off, and the original street address one block south changed as the lot shortened to front on Monroe Place. Improvements ensued, including plumbing, gas, electricity, and a second story evolved. Since indoor plumbing was added later, the pipes and hot water heater run outside and on the perimeter, instead of up the core, as today's homes often do.

When the time came to expand the cottage, the Lees were told by one Monrovian, the entire one story structure was raised to become the top floor of the current home, intricate roofline and all. The Monroe Historical Museum director was doubtful this was the case, yet I heard this story a couple of times when I mentioned the cottage to local history buffs.

The first floor now boasts 13 foot ceilings, with a mysterious "dead space" between the first and second floors. The Lees would love to see pictures of that first remodel, or any other photos of the home if anyone has them. Unearthing the fascinating details of earlier iterations of the structure will require some detective work, as much of the home has undergone updating several times. Word around town is that a local antiques collector owns the iron bed from the cottage's early days. Likely, there are other pieces around, too.

The home the Lees bought in 2007 was already accepted into California's Mills Act status. This act is a two-edged sword of tax benefit with use, maintenance and preservation restrictions. For a property tax incentive intended to preserve historical homes and the heritage of our communities, the homes require earthquake retrofitting, a historical plaque and strict guidelines on exterior changes to the home. Each individual community oversees the Mills Act homes within their borders, and rules and regulations vary from city to city.

The Lees have been on a steep learning curve for historic home maintenance and preservation, after their previous Connecticut home was of 1950's vintage. Their electrician, Yiannis Arvanitidis, is a frequent visitor, slowly unraveling old crawlspace mysteries of electricians past. They've learned more than they probably wanted to know about earthquake retrofitting and cohabitating with local wildlife in the past few months. Each month new challenges arise to maintain or restore the grace and beauty of the past, while raising a growing family in the technology age. Despite the challenges, I don't think they'd trade this special home for anywhere else in LA.

Red White Bluezz

The deal that I made with the owner here at The Newspaper is that I can write about any restaurant that I want and that I would try to reach the flavor of my friends here in The Sierra Madre area. So, it might be that Red White + Bluezz has an ad somewhere near this column. But, I can also write about the slurpees at The AM PM if I so desired!!!

Red White + Bluezz is the 'new hot spot' of Pasadena. I find myself there at the bar at least once a month; it has a great vibe, nice bar, friendly service and pleasing jazz/blues music on most nights.

One of my favorite afternoons is enjoying a Sunday Brunch there. Le Cordon Blue Chef Brian Haskins has assembled a menu that is very ambitious. This is not a buffet but rather a sit down menu; I sampled four of there dishes. First up... The Pony Up, a 26 oz bone in rib eye with three eggs any style, simply scrumptious ($45). Surf and Turf Benedict, served on toasted sour dough bread, with certified Angus Filet Mignon and Maine Lobster ($29). The Tree Hug... Organic Yogurt served in a granola basket with fresh berries.($11). My favorite...Blue Corn Cakes, served with strips of bacon with wild berries ($11). Yum, the bacon is worth the price of admission alone. Other entrees that looked appealing.....The Monte Cristo ($16) and their signature omelettes at ($14)

No gut wrenching champagne here, Red White + Bluezz offers seven or eight glasses by the glass. If you are into Bloody Mary's, Red White +Bluezz offers a full bar. On my Sunday visit a trio was playing in the bar with the music piped out to the patio where we were sitting.

All in all a great experience

OH YEAH!!! COLLEGE FOOTBALL

College football is the most exciting game played in American sports. Several nights ago I was T.V. channeling, (In case you didn't know, the difference between channeling and surfing is that with channeling you must watch the show up to one commercial.) Well I channeled upon a Mid-American conference football game between the Chippewa's of Central Michigan and the Broncos of Western Michigan. The last five minutes of the game was so exciting I was transformed back forty years to a screaming collegian. I was yelling for my team to get the ball and score or to stop the other team from scoring. These young men on both sides of the field had no quit in them. They took their lumps and blows and kept on trying. If I am not mistaken the lead changed four times within the last two minutes. And to show you what these guys were made of, the last play of the game Western Michigan needed to score. They did not but they kept the ball alive for thirty seconds trying to score. That football was tossed back and forward about six times.

After I finished watching the game I paused for a moment and thought about why we like college ball so much. Part of it is the excitement but a larger part is the pure sport. That is, these kids are playing their hearts out and not receiving any money. I say that not to devalue the fact that they are receiving a college education, which in and of itself is worth a lot of money both at the time of receiving and later

But then, that lead me down another path. When there is an allegation that's proven that a player has accepted money the university takes a big hit. For instance, the rumors had been around a long time about Reggie Bush and family. I hope that Reggie is clean and did not accept any money or gifts. But what can he do about mom and step-dad? If they lived rent-free can the University be punished? I can see it now, Pete goes up to the Bush household and tells them that they cannot accept this house, they must move. Isn't that a bit of a burden to put upon the university? How would the coach know where the parents are living? If the NCAA has placed that responsibility on the university then each school will need a dean of "What's The Family Up To". I want to apply. The job will have to come with perks and a hefty expense account, how else will you be able to keep track of what the parents are doing? There will be a lot of traveling, I mean after all these kids come from all over the country. Then there will have to be some undercover work, you know snooping around to see if the poor kid's family is now suddenly driving upscale automobiles. But will the driving of a new car be a true indication of wrongdoing? The job will be difficult but I think I am up to the position. One other thing I want my salary for my new dean position tied to the salary of the head football coach at most schools and for those with top ranked basketball programs I want it tied to their salary.

Where there is true cheating on the part of the athlete then the university should take the hit, but the parents. That's too much, my thoughts from the couch.

PHS GETS CLOSE BUT MUIR TAKES TUSSLE 13-9

Commentary By Treavor Robinson, PHS Student

The Bulldogs of Pasadena High suffered a crushing defeat to the John Muir Mustangs. This crosstown rivalry 'has been played in the Rose Bowl, where legends have been made and found, for more then 50 years'.

On November 8, 2007, earlier in the day, the Pasadena Bulldogs had their last run through of plays as they got ready for the victory of Turkey Tussle. As the day went on the tension started to build up because you are usually so excited about who is going to win or lose. Not me and my friend Tyler. We knew who was going to win this year because we knew that one of the main stars, Michael Harrison also known as 'Trumpet ' his whole year in football Photo courtesy PHS Athletics and in graduating.

As the time clocked 7:00 and John Muir kicked it off to Pasadena we knew that the Bulldogs were going to win the Victory Bell. So, as the first half ended Pasadena was finally up for once and up strong.

When the Bulldogs were going back to the locker room, my friends and I were talking about them - praying that they just stayed focus and would not get too cocky in the locker room. We didn't want them thinking that they had finished doing what they had to do, because has the night went on the Mustangs were going to get smarter with their plays and stronger on their defense.

was a senior and he wasn't Despite the loss, the PHS Bulldogs narrowed the gap. In going to let the eleven 2006, the Bulldogs lost by 15 points. (pictured above) This year streak of losing ruin year rivalry ended with only a four point difference.

So as the second half started and Pasadena kicks it off to Muir, we pretty much knew that the game was going down from there because a John Muir player ran the ball back to the fifty yard line. In the second half, Muir scored a touch down beating Pasadena by four. The final score was 13 to 9. This was a low scoring game on each side and hard fought hard. The defense for each school handled the offense of the other. It's just that Muir scored that early touch down in the second half giving them the victory.

Talking to people after the game every one was disappointed, but also proud on how our guys played the game of football. Although my friends weren't really disappointed because PHS is just just going to win in basketball, the parents where a little upset because if their son was a senior they where going to have to put up with the sadness of the losing of Pasadena High in the Turkey Tussle, again.
