Historical Preservation Society Meets To Discuss Preservation and Restoration By Dean Lee

Tensions ran high Sunday afternoon preservation, there is at one point, Preservation Society met with Council Members John Buchanan, Joe Mosca and Mayor Pro Tem Maryann MacGillivray to discuss unprotected landmarks at One Carter, increased permit fees and the possible reestablishing of Sierra Madre's Cultural Heritage Commission. The onehour meeting was led by Historical Preservation Society President, Dane

MacGillivray introduced the idea of reinstating the commission. It had been disbanded by a former council she, as well as others, said. "That's a great idea Maryann," said long-time real estate broker and community volunteer, Judy Webb-Martin. think that's what we need to do."

Webb-Martin also said she did not think the planning commission Lenton continued. should be dealing with preservation issues, something it is now charged with. Webb-Martin sat on the original Cultural Heritage Commission, along with Lenton. At that time it was a seven member board. commission does not have the time," Webb-Martin said. "Having a historic preservation commission again to do the work that need to be done, with people that have knowledge, who have education..."

Buchanan said they needed to plan out exactly what a new commission would do. "An ordinance would establish the commission," he said. "It says it will review certain things and when it comes to historic

> Others noted that the last commision was silenced for those very specifics Buchanan pointed out. They said the prior commisson went so far as to regulate the colors homes could be panted. Webb-Martin said "that was iust a rumor."

Lenton said the former commission was restricted by former city attorney, Charlie Martin.

We were told that if we wanted to talk with Charlie Martin we could pay his fee," Lenton said, explaining they were not allowed to contact residents. "He [Martin] said you cannot contact any landmark residents because it could be considered harassment."

Buchanan noted that he did not approve of dissolving the first commission and was not on the council at the time. "One of the questions you have to ask is, just how much authority the Cultural Heritage Commission will have in relation to property rights?", adding later, "You have to think about how you're going to dispel the notions about the overauthoritarian nature of the Cultural Heritage Commission."

MacGillivray suggested that the timing was right relative to updating the General Plan. She explained that historic preservation had been added as an element for long range strategic planning. (continued on page 3)

For many who have knowledge of the incident, it is outrageous that cleaning up after someone else's dog could land this popular resident and business owner in jail. It is also inconceivable to others that the water violation, a civil fine, has already cost Smock over two days in jail, a cash outlay of $30,000 plus attorney's fees. This amount does not include the costs that may be assessed by the courts and attorney's fees or any additional jail time that Smock may be facing. The majority of citizens spoken with, however, are most upset that there is either no flexibility in administering the code or in the judgment of the code enforcement and arresting

The catalyst of the entire incident is the dog walker who failed to clean up after their dog. That too, is a violation of the city's municipal code. It is a problem city wide. Recently, neighbors and parents near Sierra Madre Elementary School staged signs along the streets bordering the schools because of the unsanitary conditions created by irresponsible pet owners.

Under normal circumstances, those in violation of most aspects of the city's municipal code are warned before a citation is issued, said SM Police Chief Marilyn Diaz. It was noted that Smock had been warned in the past.

Smock has brought the issue of trash and debris on the sidewalk to the city's attention in the past. He said he had even taken Mayor Zimmerman up on his invitation to call Zimmerman on his cell phone for assistance. Smock said Zimmerman never returned the

"I actually added that this year," she said. "And we're going to be looking at the General Plan, rewriting the General Plan, and all those elements should be in the General plan. So it's probably a good time, if the commission were ever reinstated." She also said it was the council's job to drive out any negativity associated with it.

Mosca also told the group of about 20 attendees that they needed to speak up. "Go to the council and suggest that the Cultural Heritage Commission be reinstated," MacGillivray said, adding to the comments made by Mosca. "You should be putting together a plan of what you're feeling and your thoughts on what we should be adopting for thoughts on what we should be adopting for preservation, and standing behind that, and rallying behind that, you are the constituents for that," he said.

He also encouraged, "Speak with every one of my colleagues and tell them how important it is to have that type of agenda in the city." Mosca was referring to Mayor Kurt Zimmerman and Councilmember Don Watts, who were not there.

Webb-Martin said the group should put together a 10-item list and present it to the council and include those things which were not currently being done addressed by the planning commission, such as drive by inspections.

The group also wanted to see immediate protection of the historic buildings at One Carter, and not have landmark designation fee waivers cut. They also wanted to question the city's Preservation Report Card "C" grade last year, and stop a moratorium on the MILLS act.

Lenton also suggested there should be a demolition penalty for landmarks. The group wants to restore the city's original historic districts. Without the historic district the city's Los Angeles Conservancy grade low.

"Somehow the city does not see clearly what their contribution toward preservation should be," he said, before MacGillivray arrived.

The Mills Act is a state law that allows cities to enter into contracts with homeowners to preserve the upkeep of landmark homes in exchange for a reduction in property tax. Lenton said the city places a limit on applications of three per year. "We are the only city in the state that does that."

Lenton also brought up One Carter, a hot button issue that some said, in 2002, led to former Mayor Glenn Lambdin asking the planning commission to assume the Heritage Commission duties.

Around the same time, the state Office of Historic Preservation had criticized the Heritage Commission's evaluation of the Maranatha High School Project. Although they agreed that the Willis House, built in 1941, was eligible for listing on the state's historic register, something Lenton said never happened.

Lenton also said the historic cabin and Carter Barn were not protected at all. The Home of Nathaniel Cater, for whom the site was named, had been demolished years earlier according to reports. Lenton said there was nothing stopping a developer from doing the same to the other structures.

'There were preservation issues that were supposed to be taken care of at One Cater," he said, later adding, "The Macomber Cabin and Carter Barn could be demolished tomorrow and there is no penalty.

Mosca brought up historical preservation at a past meeting but did not get the three votes needed to agendize it.

Michael Ross, CEO of the Pasadena Convention Center mirrored Melekian's excitement.

"We have worked hard to have the center ready and are thrilled that the first event we are hosting will honor two of our own prestigious citizens."

Robert McGowan, retired Pasadena police chief and past president of the California Police Chiefs Association, will be honored with Melekian at a special dinner during the conference.

Handbills and Flyers Discussed

On Monday night the city council will consider asking the city attorney to return in 60 days with a recommended amendment for no solicitation signs according to Public Information Officer Ann Erdman.

In 1998 the ACLU of Southern California filed a federal civil rights suit against the City of Pasadena on behalf of several community activists challenging a new ordinance that restricted the distribution of handbills, leaflets, fliers and other such unsolicited materials to businesses and residences where the owners had listed themselves on a do-not-deliver registry and/or where a No Solicitation sign had been posted.

Recent developments in this area of the law have created the opportunity for the council to discuss a potential amendment to the ordinance that would enable the city to enforce it with certain restrictions.

NAACP Calls for Release of Information

A cousin of Barns Looks for answers

By Dean Lee

Almost a week after a traffic stop in northwestern Pasadena turned deadly —in which Pasadena police shot a 38-year-old alleged armed man in the backseat of a car community leaders and family members are still demanding answers?

they might get answers Monday night during a packed council meeting Police Chief Bernard Melekian instead only said an investigation would be done.

"The matter is under intense investigation," he said. "That report will be completed as expeditiously as possible. The results of that will ultimately be made public."

Headded that information would also be submitted for further review by both the district attorney office and the FBI.

Beforeimmediatelyleaving the chambers Melekian said the department also gave their sympathy to media, claiming it was the family, which were there, and then made the comment, "And certainly gratitude that our officer survived," which outraged the public.

Many in the community also dismissed the notion Leroy Barnes' criminal record justified the events surrounded the shooting. According to police Barnes had been convicted for drug sales, domestic violence, and robbery. Reports also say he once shot at officers at Brookside Park.

They instead focused on conflicting police information first given out Feb. 19 the day of the shooting. Police first said Barns shot at officers after getting out of the car. Melekian later said the incident took place in the backseat and that Barns never got out of the car.

Nicholas Whitaker of Although many thought Long Beach, Barnes' brother, spoke Monday.

"No police or city members have come to my house," he said. "To speak to my mother in any regards, in any way." Reports later said Whitaker met Wednesday with Melekian and City Councilmember Jacque Robinson. No other details were given.

He also said, "The lack of information and communication that was given to me, I feel has not been up to par and at the proper level of conduct form the city."

He than said all the information needs to be brought out through the defaming his brother.

"Also to the comment that the Police Chief made that his officers were safe. or survived the incident. seeing as they were the only ones firing shots, I'm sure they had no problem surviving."

The NAACP on Wednesday filed a public records request on behalf of a number of news organizations. They are requesting, among other things, all reports written pertaining to the shooting, all dispatch records, the corner's report, interviews with the driver of the car, any tests done on a retrieved weapon, all audio and video tapes, as well as a number of department policies as they relate to officer involved shootings.

Other members of the public also spoke.

One long time resident said, "It could be my brother, your brother, my son, anybody so the fact that the way it was handled, I'm from the city born and raised, and I'm embarrassed totally embarrassed."

Resident Clarence Nelson told the council police are coming through their neighborhood like "The wild wilderness." He said they expected

Barns bother Nicholas Whitaker addresses the council to be treated as they wanted to be treated,

"Like when you go to your fine neighborhoods," he explained.

Nelson later held up pictures of a young girl with bruises on her face and arms.

"I'm holding up the brutality of some of the witnesses and people that were standing around when the police came to clear the scene." He said. "Some people could not move fast enough..."

He then graphically give details of what happened.

"So you know what happened to this young lady, about five police officers, who immediately rushed her, picked her up slammed her on the police car, grabbed her under her under arms, brutally bused her, hand cuffed her, and then let her go."

"Do you think we are going to be quiet about that," he later asked.

He then said northwest Pasadena was out for justice.

In related news, a memorial set up for Barns near Washington Boulevard and Mentone Avenue was taken down by city workers Tuesday angering residents even more. City officials said workers were told to clean up the area after trash had started to collect in the area. They also said the memorial was blocking a public sidewalk and not a lack of respect for the Barns Family.

A Weekly Sierra Spotlight on Madre Volunteers Darlene Crook Children's Champion

When you read Darlene Crook's "resume," you realize that she is an advocate for children. Children's welfare is uppermost in Darlene's life which makes her a champion of children.

As a docent for years for Eaton Canyon Nature Center, Darlene taught kids from all over L.A. County about the canyon and everything it had to offer: the animals, their habits and habitats, and of the plants that Native Americans used years ago in their everyday lives.

"Many of these children would never have known these experiences without the Eaton Canyon hikes," Darlene said.

Another of Darlene's favorite activities was helping kids take advantage of RIF (Reading Is Fundamental), a national organization. Second graders in the Pasadena School System learn reading skills, taught by docents such as Darlene, with books donated by the Pasadena schools. "Children even get to keep the books which they have read," Darlene pointed out.

The Sierra Madrean also coached baseball and soccer when the five Crook children were little. She was a Camp Fire leader in Sierra Madre and assisted with Girl Scouts.

But her volunteerism doesn't stop there. Darlene has delivered Meals-on-Wheels for 15 years and works on the Friends of the Library Winetasting Committee. She is an active member of Civic Club (this year working on Huck Finn Day) and assists at the Friends of the Library Art Fair in May. She also finds time to participate in the Wistaria Festival in March.

During much of her life (for 12 years) she was a sought-after caterer, assisting several clubs around town with their meals. This year she and Marlene Enmark will cater the Civic Club's April luncheon, the club's largest fundraiser of the year. People are already scrambling for tickets; they know how Marlene and Darlene cook. Still another sidebar of her life was singing with the Sweet Adelines, a very popular vocal group in the area. For 22 years she sang bass with the group.

Darlene is a native Californian, having been born in Huntington Hospital. She graduated from Monrovia High School and attended PCC. It was there that she met her husband, Richard, who went on to become a geologist and still works as a consultant.

The Crooks have a son and four daughters, will all but one daughter living in California. And that daughter is moving back to California this year. There are six grandchildren, and the whole family enjoys camping together. They are able to do that often, Darlene said.

"I really enjoy being with people, and I urge others to volunteer because they'll get more out of every event if they do. I've just never been bored because I like keeping busy."

PUSD TO SUE FOR RETURN OF MEASURE Y FUNDS Civil Litigation Will Target Yzaguirre, Kingsbury and Peterson

Pasadena, CA -- Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) officials today in overseeing the Washington Middle PUSD, Superintendent Diaz ordered an announced their intent to file a civil lawsuit against Jessie Yzaguirre, Mark Kingsbury and Eric Peterson for involvement in fraudulent activities related to the expenditure of Measure Y school facilities bond funds.

The Board of Education elected to pursue civil litigation after the District Attorney's office upheld its decision to forgo criminal prosecution. In December, Superintendent Edwin Diaz requested that the District Attorney reexamine evidence collected by an independent investigator hired by PUSD, which implicated the three individuals' involvement in fraudulent activity.

"We continue to maintain that the evidence uncovered by our forensic investigator clearly demonstrates that improve the quality of education for in overseeing the Washington Middle School modernization project," said Superintendent Edwin Diaz. "Based on the advice of our attorney, we will pursue civil litigation to punish these individuals and recoup the taxpayers' funds."

"As we initiate project planning and management for a new school facilities bond, it is especially important that we send a strong message to our community, employees, and our current and potential contractors that we will not tolerate fraud. The Board of Education, Citizens' Oversight Committee, staff and contractors will meet the highest standards for accountability, management, and ethics to safeguard against any future misappropriation or mismanagement of funds intended to internal analysis of the policies, procedures and management of the District's facilities and Measure Y construction projects.

When the analysis revealed the possibility of illegal activity, he hired an external forensic auditor to examine records. The forensic investigation determined that contractors had been paid but that work products were not delivered.

The investigation resulted in the reorganization of the facilities division, and the application of rigorous standards, management and record-keeping practices. Strong citizen oversight and accountability are an integral part of the recently approved Measure TT.

Senator Bob Huff Introduces School Open Enrollment Bill

Legislation Would Create Equal Education Opportunities for All Students

Sacramento — Senator Bob Huff (R – Diamond Bar) today introduced the Open Enrollment Act, which will allow students across California to attend any K-12 public school in the Current law requires students to attend the public school they are assigned according to their home zip code. This means that a student's education is determined entirely by what neighborhood they live in - and not by what parents think is best for their

Senate Bill 266 will not only ensure all California students have equal education opportunities but will also hold schools more accountable. By empowering parents to choose which school is best for their child, SB 266 dramatically shifts the accountability of schools from administrators to parents. This puts healthy pressure on schools to innovate and perform well in order to maintain student enrollment.

"Parents would effectively have the authority to vote with their feet," said Senator Huff. "If a school is not meeting their child's specific needs, parents would have the freedom to choose a school that does. Let's face it: education reform is meaningless if the voice of the parent is not heard."

As home schooling enrollment continues to rise and parents choose private school over public, the state is in a new era of declining public school enrollment. But by giving parents more options, California could retain more of the students whose parents have the means to remove their children from public education and also help those students who are unable to home school or go to private school. "This legislation will help California use the existing education infrastructure more efficiently, by applying a market based model which encourages excellence in public education," stated Senator Huff. "In essence, the Open Enrollment Act will reward polices that work and discourage policies that don't."

Muir Reinvention Progress Monitored By County By Teresa Baxter

With the oversight of the Los Angeles County Office of Education School Assistance Intervention Team, the John based grade level appropriate instruction that the state wanted Muir High School administrative leadership team provided a to ensure was occurring in the classrooms," said Perry. "The way mid-year progress report regarding student performance, professional development and campus management at the Pasadena Unified School District Board of Education meeting last Tuesday.

"It's always a good idea, mid-year, to take a rigorous look at the progress and evaluate implementation," said Superintendent Edwin Diaz. "I want to give thanks to our support team from the county office for their work and leadership?

The L.A. County SAIT program was established to deploy support teams to help schools review and analyze data and implement research-based strategies to improve curriculum, instruction and assessment. SAIT also offers assistance in data analysis, planning, access to technical assistance with school support and evaluation services.

Marci Perry, a representative for SAIT commended the dedication and efforts of the administrative leadership team, but noted areas of weakness that need to be addressed for a successful reinvention.

"We are still not seeing, on a regular basis, the standardsthat is being addressed is that the administrators are frequently visiting classrooms and leaving specific recommendations during their informal observations to let the teacher know what they expect to see differently in classroom practice."

Last year teachers and counselors had to reapply for their positions as part of the reinvention process based on the poor performance of students achieving their academic potential. Statistics show that Muir has failed to meet California's Academic Performance Index (API) targets for the past five years. Following the SAIT report findings, Board member Renatta Cooper expressed concerns over the lack of accountability currently going on in the classrooms.

'I don't think that it should be up to the administrators coming into the classroom and catching [the teacher] not doing what they are supposed to be doing," said Cooper.

"Everyone who is teaching at Muir knows what the deal is and they shouldn't need to be told what to be doing in the classroom."

MountainViews-Observer Mission Statement The traditions of the community newspaper and the concerns of our readers are this newspaper's top priorities. We support a prosperous community of wellinformed citizens. We hold in high regard the values of the exceptional quality of life in our community, including the magnificence of our natural resources. Integrity will be our

A Brief Word From The Editor/Publisher...

Every so often, given that life is so short and so precious, I like to take time out and say thanks. Today I want to especially thank the staff of this community newspaper for their patience, commitment and enthusiasm. Last week, we had the chance to gather for a celebration of our accomplishments thus far and share our common goals for the future. It was a wonderful, warm event.

While we were together, we acknowledged how grateful we also are for the subscribers, supporters, friends and readers of the MountainViews-Observer. We realize that it doesn't matter how talented we may be, without you, this effort would not be worthwhile. To All of You....Stay Tuned....The Best Is Yet To Come!

By the way, of late we have been subjected to a great deal of vandalism - papers and racks stolen, cars egged, etc. Please report any such suspicious behavior to your local Police Department. And, if you can't find the paper, call 626-355-2737 - we'll get one to you as soon as possible.

Susan Henderson

One of my favorite jokes goes as follows: Do you know the word for

'yes" in Yiddish?

No, I don't.

Why not?

It never came up. I've been telling that joke for years, even though I can't remember anyone else ever laughing. I tell it because it so well expresses my own understanding of my secular Jewish heritage. Question everything! It never hurts to keep your brain awake while you are listening to somebody else's version of the truth. As a result of this peculiar attitude I am frequently an annoyance to others, who more easily accept assertions and "want to get on with it", rather than to clarify and understand. Consequently, it really came as no surprise to me that while attending a seminar this weekend and asked to pick a side, I was on one side while the other thirty people or so in the room were on the other side. I kind of felt bad for them because obviously I was right and they were wrong and I felt certain that, if given a chance to speak, I could explain to them the reason for their error. I was given the chance and certainly convinced myself and perhaps the seminar leader as well, who responded that even though my analysis was correct, everyone else was also correct and we all had a good laugh and proceeded ahead with the material.

She segued beautifully into a discussion of how important it was to question everything and moved into a discussion of how there could be no mistakes because every mistake, and everything else, was an opportunity for new learning and growth. Suddenly there appeared on the monitor at the front of the room the statement---

WE EITHER GROW OR DIE"

Scary isn't it? But I think it's true. Once we think we've succeeded and killed the dragon and start patting ourselves on the back and resting on our laurels, growth has stopped and, although we have won the battle, we are in the process of losing the war. I'm referring specifically to the nationwide back-patting that occurred after the election of President Obama. Hooray we did it! Now there will be no racism, no war, no economic crisis, no global warming, no overpopulation, no threat of terrorism, even no stupidity. Well, as all of us have already noticed none of these former problems have quite disappeared—in fact some loom larger than ever. What did we do wrong? Obviously, it isn't that we did something wrong, it's just that there's so much to do. There are opportunities everywhere to ease suffering, but I am afraid for a short while we all believed that we could rely on someone else----the smart good guys I guess--- to do it all by themselves.

I think this belief in the absolute power of "experts" does not empower us; but rather infantilizes us and lulls us to sleep with a false feeling of security. The seminar this weekend constantly emphasized that everyone of us is greater than we think we are, as is everyone else. Although it's quite understandable why we might want to question this premise, it's a great way to view the world. Furthermore, from what I observed this week-end, every single person, if given a nudge to break out of old limiting ideas and assumptions, can make the choice to utilize their personal and collective life experiences and wake to help change the world. Furthermore, believe it or not; in a way we are all connected. As one of us learns something we all acquire more knowledge and power. Really, we are all playing the game of life and involved in the excitement of not knowing what 'might' happen but, as explained in this seminar, without expectations, there cannot be disappointments and each of us immediately becomes empowered to experience all there is and that's pretty awesome to say the least.

By the way, the seminar I went to is called IPEC COACHING and it certainly seemed a step on the road to making the world a better place. Let me know if you're interested at noeltrauts@ earthlink.net.

Deceptive Timeshare and Travel far as Club Sales—Part 2

This is the second in a series of two articles about timeshares, and is based on my experience recently at the Hilton Waikoloa Beach Resort as part of their effort to promote timeshare ownership with the Hilton Grand Vacations Club. It is also based on my research of timeshares. Contractual Obligations of Timeshare

By Hail Hamilton

Agreements Timeshare sales contracts usually include clauses that disclaim any promises made during the sales pitch. The contract you sign will ask you to agree that you are making the purchase only on the basis of the representations in that contract. Prospective purchasers who notice differences between what is in the contract and what was promised by the salesperson are likely to be told that the contract is only "legal jargon."

If a timeshare salesperson will not put a promise in writing, don't go through with the sale. You will be forced to argue afterwards that you relied on that promise, even though you have signed a contract that explicitly says you did not rely on any verbal promises.

Timeshare Maintenance Fees

What you may not be told is the extent to which the annual maintenance fee will increase over time. If the seller claims the fees will stay the same, beware. Beautiful properties today may be run-down in five or ten years without sufficient maintenance. Timeshare operators also may force owners to pay unexpected but obligatory special assessment fees.

Secondary Market for Timeshares

timeshares for investments: they rarely appreciate in value. In fact, the likelihood is that you will lose money on the sale of a timeshare. The original price may have included premiums of up to 40% to cover sales costs. As a result, a resale will yield as little as 60% of the purchase price. Then you will have to pay a new commission (often as high as 20%) to the broker who sells the property for you.

If you decide to buy a timeshare or membership in a vacation club, be aware that resales are difficult, if not impossible. In general the market for resales is poor and may vary considerably, depending on the location and time of year. One recent survey found that only 3.3% of owners reported reselling their timeshares during the last 20 years. Still, desperate to sell, many owners have been taken in by timeshare resale scams.

Last Word on Timeshare Presentations So as you can see, you could be in for quite a ride. Some tourists know what to expect — but they take the tour anyway for the free goodies or cash offers they receive for sitting through the whole thing. So if you don't mind wasting precious vacation time in one of these presentations, and you are ready to resist the pressure, then go for it.

The best way to make it as painless as possible is don't ask questions, make comments or give excuses for not buying. Remember, they have an argument to counter anything you might say. "We'll think about it," is always your best response. Then go about enjoying your vacation.

No Way Forward

Gregory J. Wellborn

In listening to President Obama's speech to Congress and the nation last Tuesday night, it occurred to me that never had so much been promised to so many with so much irrationality. I was of course reminded that President Obama is a gifted speaker, and if he wisely uses his access to the bully pulpit he could do much to relieve the sense of fatigue that has beset so many in our nation. If he actually coupled that with the right policy prescriptions, he could be one of our greatest presidents. Sadly, Tuesday's speech showed only that this president has much to learn about how the real world works.

Americans are looking for leadership and want desperately for their new president to succeed. We all understand that if he fails we will pay the price. America faces economic challenges domestically and military challenges overseas, and while President Obama acknowledged both, his proposed solutions will do inexorable harm on both counts.

Domestically, we face a tough economy, which may not have hit bottom. What's needed is for that great engine of growth, that has always been the entrepreneurs and risk takers, to be unleashed and encouraged to start new ventures, invest in new projects and seek new inventions. The easiest way to do that is to assure those who would take on those challenges that their efforts will be rewarded by reducing taxes across the board. This isn't even that bold a proposition. There's plenty of history which shows that every time taxes have been lowered economic activity grows and the economy prospers.

Instead, President Obama admits to seeking a tax increase on the most productive 2% of Americans, but he hides the fact that his spending requests would ultimately necessitate massive tax increases on the rest of us as well. The stock market recognizes this, and values have been plummeted with every proposal made by this new administration.

In addition to the rather straight forward increases in income taxes, President Obama also called for a vigorous "cap and trade" policy which would tax carbon emissions. Included in this is a call by Obama's environmental advisors for carbon dioxide to be regulated as a pollutant under the Clean Air Act. These two programs would increase tax rates on almost every form of production. At the very least, they would drive even more manufacturing overseas. At their worst, their onerous tax burden would cripple economic activity worldwide.

As a companion piece, the entire notion that we can pursue an energy independent economy without expanding our nuclear capacity is childish naivety. There is no other form of energy production which promises to fulfill our energy needs better than nuclear power. The much ballyhooed wind farms are a joke. It would take 200 square miles of windmills to produce the same energy as one nuclear plant. Perhaps it makes sense to have some wind farms, but let's not kid ourselves into believing that they can ever compete with the efficiency of nuclear plants. If we want to have the energy to grow our economy and improve our living standards, we either accept our reliance on fossil fuels or we start getting serious about building more nuclear plants.

President Obama's promises to provide universal government run healthcare, to further bail out financial institutions and to refinance mortgages will add trillions in financial commitments to the trillions that have already been promised or spent. There is simply not enough tax revenue to fund all this spending. The only possible way to pay all of this, should these plans come to fruition, will be inflation. If the government can't tax its way out of its spending binge, it will simply print more money. Many of us remember the devastation which attended Gerald Ford's and Jimmy Carter's attempts to use inflation as a policy tool.

Lastly, President Obama's near neglect of the military conflict in which American sons and daughters are engaged is reckless to say the least. He has dismissed the near universal advice of his military commanders and set a hard deadline for withdrawal from Iraq. We have won the war in Iraq but still need time to insure that the fledgling democracy becomes strong enough to stand on its own. Withdrawing too early on a strict deadline threatens that outcome.

The President's commitment of 17,000 additional troops to Afghanistan seems like a step in the right direction – we need to win that war, too – but it coincided with an administration trial balloon suggesting that the U.S. would accept the re-imposition of Sharia law on the poor people of Afghanistan if the U.S. were allowed a face-saving exit from the country.

Appeasement, diplomacy and peace treaties have never succeeded in defeating the enemies of democracy and freedom. They didn't prevent Hitler's invasion of Poland, North Vietnam's conquest of South Vietnam, Pol Pot's genocide against Cambodians or Yasser Arafat's intifada against Israel. They won't be much more successful against Al Qaeda or the resurgent Taliban.

President Obama gave another stirring speech on Tuesday night, and at times it even had me believing that everything would be just fine if only the government spent more money domestically or negotiated long enough internationally. As someone quipped on one of the morning shows, "socialism and defeatism never sounded so attractive". Let's hope that President Obama learns how the real world operates before the costs we're paying for his on the job training get too high.

ORDINANCE NO. 1287

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SIERRA MADRE, CALIFORNIA AMENDING CHAPTER 9.32 BY ADDING PROVISIONS RELATING TO POWERED GARDENING EQUIPMENT

WHEREAS, the City Council of the City of Sierra Madre makes the following findings: 1. Powered gardening equipment, such as leaf blowers and hedge trimmers have a negative impact on the public health and welfare by disrupting the rest and relaxation of our residents through the excessive noise that these devices generate. For this reason, it is essential that nonwork hours, weekends, and holidays be protected and reserved for the benefit of our community without the intrusion of excessive noise; 2. Powered gardening equipment endangers the health and welfare of our residents by dispersing dust which may at times contain harmful pollutants. This Ordinance is designed to protect our community from the potential harmful effects of dust;

WHEREAS, this Ordinance is categorically exempt from the provisions of Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 21000) of Division 13 of the Public Resources Code (California Environmental Quality Act(CEQA)) pursuant to the State CEQA Guidelines Section 15308 in that the provisions of this Ordinance protect the environment from noise, emission, and dust pollution.

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SIERRA MADRE, CALIFORNIA DOES HEREBY ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. Section 9.32.020 of Title 9 is hereby amended by adding a definition for "holiday" and "powered gardening equipment" to read as follows:

'Holiday' means and includes New Year's Day (January 1), Martin Luther King Day (the third Monday in January), Washington's Birthday (the third Monday in February), Memorial Day (the last Monday in May), Independence Day (July 4), Labor Day (the first Monday in September), Columbus Day (the second Monday in October), Veteran's Day (November 11), Thanksgiving Day (the fourth Thursday in November), and Christmas Day (December 25)."

'Powered gardening equipment' means any portable equipment powered by a gas or electric selfcontained engine used for landscape maintenance."

SECTION 2. Section 9.32.060 of Title 9 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"A. Daytime Exceptions. LA County Issues Warning: Beware of Tax Scams

"Don't be fooled! Solicitation notices are being mailed by companies promising to help negotiate property tax reductions-and charging hundreds of dollars in unnecessary fees. They are even imposing late fees," Molina warns. "Don't get ripped off! You NEVER have to pay for a review of your property's assessed value. The L.A. County Assessor's Office does this service for free."

L.A. County property owners have reported receiving mailings offering to lower their property taxes from companies using solicitation letters that look official. Many of these notices could be confused for forms from the State of California or the L.A. County Assessor's Office; and may even feature bar codes and the property's Assessor J.D. number. "Neither Los Angeles County nor any other government agency approves or endorses these companies' services," Auerbach said. "Furthermore, companies offering to lower property taxes must clearly show they are not a government agency-and failure to do so is a violation of California law." The L.A. County Assessor has initiated an automatic review of approximately 500,000 single-family residences and condominiums purchased between June 1,2004 and June Property owners, who believed they were 30, 2008 to determine if there is a decline in value.

After April 1: A list of the properties included in the review will be listed on the L.A. County Assessor's website.

By June 2009: Property owners will receive a letter with the review results.

Through December 31, 2009: Property owners who disagree with the results of the review may contest the outcome. If a property was not included in the automatic review, the owners are always able to file for an assessment review.

July 2, 2009 to November 30, 2009: Property owners, who disagree with the assessed value, may also file with the independent Assessment Appeals Board. Property value reassessment reviews are permitted under Proposition 8 which allows a temporary reduction in assessed value when the current market value of a property is less than the value shown on the property tax bill. Assessed value of property is established when it is either purchased or built; this is called the "Proposition 13 value". Owners who purchased their home or condominium at or near the top of the market may have a Proposition 13 value higher than its market value. Decline-in-value reassessment applications are easy to complete and can be obtained by contacting the L.A. County Assessor's office at (888) 807-2111 www. assessor.lacounty.gov.

Looking Up with Bob Eklund Looking for Water Ice on the Moon

NASA's Lunar CRater Observation and Sensing Satellite, known as LCROSS, has just made the trip from Northrop Grumman's facility in Redondo Beach to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida in preparation for a

The satellite's primary mission is to search for water ice on the Moon in a permanently shadowed crater near one of the lunar poles. LCROSS is a low-cost, accelerateddevelopment companion mission to NASA's Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter, or LRO. At Kennedy, the two spacecraft will be integrated with an Atlas V launch vehicle and tested for final flight worthiness. LCROSS and LRO are the first missions in NASA's plan to return humans to the Moon and begin establishing a lunar outpost by 2020.

After launch, the LCROSS spacecraft and the Atlas V's Centaur upper stage rocket will fly by the Moon and enter into an elongated orbit to position the satellite for impact. On final approach, the spacecraft and Centaur will separate. The Centaur will strike the chosen lunar crater, creating a debris plume that will rise above the surface. Four minutes later, LCROSS will fly through the debris plume, collecting and relaying data back to Earth before striking the Moon's surface and creating a second debris plume. Scientists will use data from the debris clouds to determine the presence or absence of water ice.

^tThe LCROSS project has had to work within very challenging cost-cap and schedule-cap constraints," said Dan Andrews, LCROSS project manager at NASA's Ames Research Center in Moffett Field, Calif. "The shipping of our spacecraft is a testament to our balanced approach and the great people working on this project."

To remain within budget and a short schedule of 26 months, the LCROSS project team developed a simple yet innovative spacecraft that uses existing NASA systems, commercial, off-the-shelf components modified to survive the harsh conditions of space, and the spacecraft design and development expertise of integration partner Northrop Grumman Space Technologies.

Water ice is thought to exist on the surface of the Moon, delivered over geological timescales by the regular bombardment of the lunar surface by comets, asteroids and meteoroids. Energy from sunlight usually splits this water into its constituent elements, hydrogen and oxygen, which generally escape to space. Rock samples collected by Apollo astronauts near the lunar equator are thus extremely dry.

However, some deep craters near the lunar poles never receive any light from the Sun, and are permanently shadowed. Any water that eventually ended up in these craters could remain frozen and stable for extremely long periods of time-perhaps billions of years, depending on the stability of the orientation of the Moon's axis.

The presence of usable quantities of water on the Moon is an important factor in rendering lunar habitation cost-effective, since transporting water (or hydrogen and oxygen) from Earth would be prohibitively expensive. Water ice could be mined to provide liquid water for drinking and plant propagation, and the water could also be split into hydrogen and oxygen by solar panelequipped electric power stations or a nuclear generator, providing breathable oxygen as well as the components of rocket fuel.

THE GAS COMPANY'S ENERGY RESOURCE CENTER HELPS BUSINESSES 'GO GREEN' IN RECORD NUMBERS

A growing interest in energy efficiency and other ways to "go green" helped make 2008 the most popular year ever for the Energy Resource Center, the Downeybased energy-efficiency education and training facility operated by Southern California Gas Co. (The Gas

"Our seminars and equipment demonstrations are helping thousands of business customers learn how energy efficiency reduces costs and helps the environment," said Mark Gaines, director of customer programs for The Gas Company. "We also provide information on about our energy-efficiency rebate and incentive programs, which can save our customers millions of dollars."

In 2008, the Energy Resource Center drew 39,262 visitors, the most in its 13-year history. The facility offered seminars on dozens of energy-efficiency topics, such as industrial waste heat management; boiler system efficiency; foodservice appliances; heating, ventilation and air conditioning; and energy-efficiency software for new and existing business processes.

The 44,000-square-foot facility also houses a foodservice equipment center, which features one of the largest collections of commercial cooking equipment in the country. The Energy Resource Center invites restaurants and other foodservice customers to "test drive" this equipment to help them make better purchase

"We used the Energy Resource Center to demo out some equipment, and a representative was there to answer any questions we had," said Brian Rocha, Operating Partner and General Manager for Silvergreens, Santa Barbara. "The Gas Company rep was also very helpful in educating us about their rebate program, in addition to the benefits of energy-efficient equipment."

To learn more about The Gas Company's Energy Resource Center, visit www.socalgas.com/business/ resourceCenter/ercHome.html. The Ğas Company will hold its Fourth Annual Energy-Efficiency Expo May 19 at the Energy Resource Center from 8:30am to 1:30pm.

All rebates and incentives are subject to change without notice and will be offered on a first-come, first-served basis as long as funding is available. These programs are funded by California utility customers and administered by The Gas Company under the auspices of the California Public Utilities Commission.

Southern California Gas Co. has been delivering clean, safe and reliable natural gas to its customers for more than 140 years. It is the nation's largest natural gas distribution utility, providing safe and reliable energy to 20.5 million consumers through 5.7 million meters in more than 500 communities. The Mountain Clymer by Kim Clymer-Kelley This past week a friend of mine, Sharon Pevsner a little more... that firm tradition has begun there is a lot of evidence in the streets and on (best known in town as the fastest woman in to fade. A few of our beloved members have Sierra Madre and four-time women's winner of the Mount Wilson Trail Race), contacted me to moved away from town. The morning crowd tell me of her fight to get a smoking ban in Sierra is still somewhat intact, albeit a bit thinner Madre. The issue has been put forth to the city council, who heard cases for both sides at their February 10th meeting. Sharon was emailing everyone in town that she thought might help her in her fight, asking for their support. She asked that I use my voice here in the paper to let others know what is happening.

bans of various scopes are now in affect in the towns of Pasadena, Monrovia, South Pasadena, La Canada, Glendora, El Monte, Burbank, neighboring Village Pizza has been affected. Whittier and West Covina (to name a few). Some prohibit smoking in public outdoor dining areas, some extend it to shopping Twice in the couple weeks, I have stopped by areas as well, and some have put an outright ban on all smoking in public places. Those outside to eat my meal, but was driven away unpleasant and unnecessary threat. who support the proposed ban in Sierra by the heavy smoke. Apparently everyone else Madre are seeking to ban smoking within a had been too, since I was the only one dining set distance of all areas where food is served. The businesses that would be affected in town would be Bean Town, Village Pizza, Casa Del Rey, Lozano's, Ugo's, The Only Place in Town, Sierra Madre Thai, Coldstone, Lucky Baldwin's, The Charcuterie, Steamers, Starbucks, Sierra Juice Company, Sierra Madre Pizza Company, Mountain View Sushi, 322 Café and in the canyon, Mary's Market. The Buccaneer would not be affected entirely, though because of its close proximity to Ugos' outdoor dining area, Buc patrons who wish to light up will have to offensive intrusion on everyone's senses do so in the back and not outside the Sierra Madre Blvd. entrance.

I have mentioned here before that I have been a loyal patron and supporter of Bean Town for years. It has been my home away from home Facebook profile for their cause. They since before its expansion somewhere around 13 years ago. Most of the good friends that I have here in town I have met while sitting outside of Bean Town. All of these years I have sat with them most mornings, afternoons, or evenings and shared countless hours of conversation and laughs over our morning eats. No matter when that all smokers are pretty foolish, I do not any of us would stop by, there was always a make the generalization that all smokers familiar face there with whom we could sit and are inconsiderate and slovenly as this passed on this last year and a half. Others have these days, but the rest of the day belongs to the smokers who have descended upon the town in the last year or so...this is their last refuge since most other towns in the area have enacted smoking bans for such areas.

I have stopped coming those times of day... so have most of the regulars. Many now As some of you may be aware, smoking sit down at Kersting Court seating area... others now frequent places such as Mary's Market (myself included). It is sad. Even the I have noticed a sharp decline in the number of people sitting at their outdoor dining area. at the previously packed eating area. I have no respiratory or other health problems as some people do...I am very tolerant of most things and can usually enjoy myself in uncomfortable situations....I am not a fuss budget...I simply cannot stand the smell of cigarette or cigar smoke...the latter can literally make me nauseous...I usually get a bad headache and burning eyes from both. Most non-smokers are like me, or worse...it is simply a very and a hazard to everyone's health. Those who most vocally oppose the ban are currently passing around a petition. They have also set up a webpage and a are insisting that the U.S government supports their claims that there is no harm in second hand smoke. I think that they should check out the official E.P.A. position on the subject. (see insert)

Though I will make the generalization chat. Over the course of the last year...maybe group accuses non-smokers of doing. But the sidewalks that would tend to confirm that this particular group is just that. While many smokers have learned to respect the people and public areas in which they smoke (perhaps this respect comes with age and experience), those who usually smoke outside of Bean Town have not. I have not once been asked by any of them if I minded if they smoke when I occupied a nearby table. This is usually considered the polite thing to do. Perhaps it is the arrogance of youth, perhaps it is their generation's feeling of entitlement, perhaps it is a result of some negligence in their upbringing...I don't know...but clearly they have no respect for others or concern for what harm their disgusting, deadly, and ill-chosen habit has on other people. Second hand smoke is a major health concern and it is time that the town

I urge everyone in town to show Tuesday, March 10th for the council's vote on the proposed smoking ban.

Smokers Fight for Smokers' Rights By Allison Kirkham

Many of you know me, though you may not be aware of it. I am Allison Kirkham, and for almost two years, I was making your cappuccino at Beantown Coffee Bar. For the last year you've been seeing my work - I am the Art Director of the paper, creating page layouts and calendars for you to read each week. I am also what some call a "Cigarette Kid" – meaning that I am one of the smokers that you probably see on the street everyday. Smoke has recently become a big issue, and that's what I'm writing in response to.

The Sierra Madre City Council has announced that a proposed smoking ban in patio dining areas is in the works. This has become a hot-button topic, and since smokers rarely are heard in smoking ban debates, I am answering the City Council, as well as the citizens of Sierra Madre in print.

Two major reasons have been presented by the City Council as motivation for a smoking ban to be put in effect. First is the issue of litter that comes from discarded cigarette butts. Second, and of highest import to the City Council and Sierra Madre residents, is the issue of second-hand smoke as a threat to public health.

It seems a little ridiculous to me (and should to anybody) that a smoking ban would be the most effective way to lower the amount of litter clogging the gutters of the city. If the City Council is really bothered by littering, that is what they should enforce – littering laws already on the books. Proper enforcement and fines for littering have been proven as the most efficient ways to keep trash off the streets. Creating a smoking ban to minimize litter will keep some cigarette butts off the sidewalk, but will not solve the problems of discarded newspapers, drink cups and food wrappers that most commonly clog the storm drains when rain comes into town.

The bigger issue is, of course, the health of the non-smoking citizens of Sierra Madre. The City Council has said that second-hand smoke is a danger and a threat to public safety that must be eliminated. I, as a journalist, would like to see their sources.

While it is incontrovertibly true that cigarette smoke is annoying, and that smoking cigarettes is dangerous, there is no conclusive proof that outdoor smoke can in any way impact the health of anyone

But studies have been conducted, by the Government, no less, that prove that second-hand smoke kills! That is completely true - there have been studies done that prove that second-hand smoke is dangerous. The most valid of these are collected into a 1992 document released by the Environmental Protection Agency titled "Respiratory Health Effects of Passive Smoking: Lung Cancer and Other Disorders." It's all right there in the title – second-hand smoke causes lung cancer, and how can you argue with that? It is not my intent to argue with that report. What I do wish to point out, however, is also right on the title page. The report was mostly funded by the Indoor Air Division of the Office of Atmospheric and Indoor

All of the conclusive proof in the EPA document that second-hand smoke kills came from studies conducted entirely indoors, and the subjects of the studies were people who spent vast amounts of time indoors with smokers. Years of exposure are required for second-hand smoke to have a provable impact on an individual's health – exposure like that which waitresses in smoking bars or the spouses of indoor smokers experience. This report did not seek to prove that outdoor smoke is dangerous, and all subsequent reports and studies have been inconclusive as to whether or not outdoor second-hand smoke is a health risk at all under normal circumstances.

smoking ban that it is for public health and welfare are argued that outdoor smoke is a health risk – simply another annoying nuisance, like an overabundance of strong cologne or a cloud of diesel fumes that you might pass and be irritated by, but that would not be destination just down the road. detrimental to you in any tangible way.

Now, having faced the reasoning behind the proposed ban from the non-smoking side, the opponents of the ban also have two reasons to support their attitude.

The first reason we "Cigarette Kids" think the ban is a bad idea is because of the local economy. Smokers come to the city to seek refuge. While this may seem like a negative, it's actually a good thing. I live in Glendora, but I come to Sierra Madre to spend my money. I don't just buy cigarettes, coffee and beer -I also shop at all of the restaurants in the business district, I buy gifts in the shops, I buy books from the library, and generally do all that I can to give my money to local concerns. The money that Sierra Madre would turn away by enacting a smoking ban wouldn't just be from tax on cigarettes - it would be coming out of the pockets of all of the small businesses that make the city as wonderful as it is.

Typically with a smoking ban, businesses see a drop in spending for about six months, then sales go back up. Burbank has seen this, Pasadena will see this, but Sierra Madre will not. Sierra Madre is a tiny city that is not attractive to many outsiders. While that may seem nice, at some point it will mean that without as many customers as possible, all of the local businesses that make Sierra Madre so great will lose money, and may have to leave for more forgiving pastures. Several

Therefore, the arguments from those in favor of a businesses in town are trying to fight the smoking ban that it is for public health and welfare are ban – and with good reason. When the smokers go, invalidated. Since it has not been proven that anyone so will a portion of their livelihood. Sierra Madre is has ever suffered from long-term health problems on a tourist destination like Pasadena, or a business because of outdoor second-hand smoke, it cannot be center like Burbank. The city doesn't have the attractions needed to keep customers coming to the doors of the local stores when smokers have been chased away and Oldtown Pasadena is a more hip

> The other reason that the "Cigarette Kids" are fighting the smoking ban is a pretty simple one. When we were children, we were told that we live in a country that would allow us the freedom to make our own choices, our own decisions - good or bad. That we would be allowed to rise or fall on our own, and that we could be free of discrimination. Some parts of what we were told are true – and some parts aren't. There is no liberty in being told what's good for you it's a choice that you have to make. Smokers have a right to smoke, and we're trying to claim that right. "But," people say, "Where to smokers' rights end and mine begin?" At the front door of any business you enter. You can choose to go inside where we cannot. We have been pushed outdoors, and now an attempt is being made to push us away from buildings and into the alleys - out of sight and out of mind. We were told that we could not be discriminated against because of our race, our weight, our age, or sex, or faith – and we're not. We're only being discriminated against because of our choices.

> That is why we are fighting the smoking ban, more than anything else. Because it is just another sign saying that we will not be living in the liberty provided by an America that was promised to us, but has not vet been delivered. Visit StopTheSmokingBan.Com for more information.

TABLE FOR TWO By Peter Dills

Raise the Anchor!

A riddle for my readers, what is the name of the ship that never leaves its port and is not named after a Queen? A small clue: Football, Baseball and Basketball. The repairs have been made and she is ready once again for another lengthy excursion after having been safely secured in San Gabriel. As I grow older and wiser, and as my vision blurs, my recollection of past events heighten in their glories and leave me with escalating memories of a loftier station then was once granted in an earlier era. Time does have a way of majestically giving lift to incredible heights to what was once before an ordinary bird. At times I almost trick myself into believing that I was the high school quarterback and my lips only met cheerleaders after the winning touchdown was thrown, by me. If we only had cheerleaders at my High school it would make the thought acceptably plausible. Speaking of old things, one is back showing off a new facelift.

"The Galley" AKA "The Boat" in San Gabriel has re-opened and received a revamped attire. Sure the Old Boat had character and a sense of comfortable ease of an old chair but the termites would have finished the wooden edifice off at some point and sunk the ship without firing a torpedo. Kohl's Department store has opened on site of the old location but The Boat still retains the familiar area of the same parking lot. What to expect when dining at this vessel? Many curious and devoted patrons from the past have made dinner a lengthy wait. Just like the days of old, you grab a trusted tray as the mariners of a distant age sported an oar and get in line. "If it is not broken don't fix it," is noticeable relevant here. You give the cooks your selections and in many cases it will be prepared while you wait in line. The tested favorités are still to be found. For starters there is the Tangy Red Cabbage; cheeseburgers, chicken dinners, sandwiches, and the unforgettable Blue Cheese Salad. One modification, is now they offer a full bar with a healthy list of beer and spirits. I had a very large Heineken for $7.50, well worth it. In fact everything on the menu is reasonably priced; my intuition tells me that they stuck with the popular, feed the masses strategy which has served them well for decades. They also have new 16 HD TV's. Unless you are a stuffed shirt you and the family will enjoy the reasonably priced and easily likable and new rendition of The Boat.

I was a little inquisitive as to the why on a couple items. The Boat has refrigerators in the cooking area that are in full view of the hungry masses. The inviting open kitchen scene exhibits boxes of frozen patties and bags of frozen fries. Not the Kodak that stirs a furious hunger in this Critic!!! In light of all the nostalgic reminiscing you conjure in me, I will give you a reluctant pass for this detail. This is a fun time for any group of friends wanting to watch a sporting event in a comfortable setting.

All references above to a real boat are to be deemed with satire. You will not be directed to lifeboats in case of emergency, no life vests are to be donned in high seas and aside from tipping an abundance of cocktails, you should not require seasick medication for this trip.

The Good Life

FYI:

We are taught to be polite, to be courteous, and to respect and please others. When asked questions feel compelled to respond helpfully. Often times though, a part of us is uncomfortable with the request, sometimes in ways we can't quite define.

Pushy sales people, needy relatives, telemarketers, and charities whose names you "almost" recognize will trigger emotional responses in you as they try for success with your checkbook. Yet with your gut instinct on alert, you still cooperate and Saying no is not selfish, nor is it rude. These pushy people do not want you to stop and think. They do not want you to take the time to analyze the facts and make an informed decision.

Suggestions to help you handle these situations:

1. Take time to think. It is ok to tell anyone that you will be taking time to think and analyze the proposal. This can be the comment, "I need a minute" or "thank you for the information and I'll sleep on it." If the pushy person says the deal must be decided on right now then walk away.

2. Get another opinion. After finding out the details of the request, consult someone else who you trust. Consider their point of

3. If the push is from a salesperson, ask them for references and credentials for you to check out at your convenience.

4. Don't accept the tricky choices of "A" or "B" as though they are the only choices. A salesman will sometimes not ask you if you want it or not, but will ask which of two options you want to choose. The choice of "No" or "waiting" is not given. In the confusion, it is natural to feel you must choose between two choices. Don't respond to this kind of pressure.

5. Flip the situation on the person with the request. If the pressure is from a friend or relative requesting money or something you are not comfortable with, ask this person questions that make them solve their own problem. Offer your advice instead of your money. Offer them alternatives to consider. Do this with a helpful smile and

6. Don't be afraid to say that you can't do what is requested and offer no explanation. You do not have to explain or justify your

7. Do not ignore your instinct. If it seems too good to be true, it probably is. If something seems wrong or confusing, pay attention to your instincts.

8. Do not be embarrassed if you do not understand something. This is especially important in financial matters. If you can't get it clarified to your satisfaction, walk away.

9. When all else doesn't work, just say

NO! Many business people are good reliable folk who offer helpful products. You have the right to think things through carefully and understand the details. Slow things down and be in control. It's your money; it's your life. Choose to control the situation . . and all with a pleasant smile.

Using Tea in the Garden 1-For healthier potted plants, place a few used tea bags on top of the drainage layer at the bottom of the planter before potting. The tea bags will retain water and add nutrients to the soil.

2-To speed up the decomposition process and enrich your compost, pour a few cups of strongly brewed tea onto the heap. The liquid tea will hasten decomposition and draw acid-producing bacteria, thus creating desirable acid-rich compost.

For Your Funny Bone

A guy finds a lamp on the beach and proceeds to rub it. A genie came out and told him that he will grant him just one wish. Well, the guy was caught off-guard and said, "I have always wanted to go to Hawaii, but I'm afraid to fly. Can you build me a bridge to Hawaii?" The genie thought about it and said, "Do you realize how much is involved in building such a bridge? I would have to sink pilings down miles into the ocean. It would take millions of yards of concrete. The labor would be incredible. Can't you think of something else?" By this time the guy has had time to think, and says, "Okay, I've had a question that has bothered me all my life and I wonder if you could explain something to me. Would you please explain how the mind of a woman works?" The genie looked at him and said, "Do you want that bridge two lanes or four?"

Victorian Flavor Perfectly Fitted Into A Thoroughly Modern Lifestyle

Noted local builder, Reggie Tollefson built this home at 604 Fairview for Chris Bertrand himself back in the 1970's. The detailing that Victorian aficionados so love adorns the exterior, with many patterned shingles, tall peaks, inviting porches and much more. One foot stands firmly in traditional style, while updates and upgrades in the last five years have made the home more energy efficient and current.

Inside, though a traditional personality pervades every corner of the home, a thoroughly modern household can be very happy here. Spectacular wood ceilings in the family room and kitchen, intricate box beams in the formal living room and two stunning fireplaces with meticulous, intricate carving set the tone for the décor style without unduly intruding.

Part of the recent remodel included extensive attention to custom cabinetry. The dining room boasts expansive storage, buffet service and glass front display space. The third bedroom, currently configured as a wonderful home office, offers another installation of thoughtful storage especially for those with a book collection, and the master bedroom includes generous builtin storage, as well. As far as I'm concerned a home home have made it easy to clean, green-conscious as well as allergenresistant. The Pella brand windows are a high quality addition, beautifully yet significantly reducing the heat and air conditioning loss. The master bath is a delightful, airy and spacious retreat with a soaking tub, separate shower with plate glass surround, dual sinks plus plenty of breathing room for two to prepare for work simultaneously.

The vignette views are artfully captured throughout the property, adding to the special qualities this home imbues. As you are seated in the living room, the bay windows look out to the beautiful garden. The family room and kitchen windows and the back porch are oak tree that gently arches over the outdoor dining table. The master bedroom and the front courtyard share the best vignette views: Filtered mountain peaks framed by mature trees seemingly make the homes across the street disappear. The finished space over the garage is ready for the new owner's imagination... an artist's studio? Home theater? What a delicious decision!

604 Fairview Avenue, Sierra Madre is 2595 square feet (per assessor) with 3 bedrooms, two and one half baths, a three car garage and a 7850 square foot homesite. Offered at $948,000 by Emily Duggan of Century 21 Village Realty, Sierra Madre. For more information contact her at 626-695-1206 or WhoaEm@aol.com.

Greening Your Thumb: PICK PERENNIALS

Regardless of the size of your garden, perennials should be your first choice over annuals So, what is a perennial exactly? A perennial is a plant that has a much longer life span than annuals or biennials, and thus are a great investment in your landscaping. They are usually sold in nurseries in 1 gallon or 5 gallon containers. (You may be able to find a limited selection of perennials in 4", but choices vary from nursery to nursery.)

Perennials have varying growth habits, some die back at the end of the year only to reappear again in spring of the following year. Others are prone to look a little scruffy come year's end, but will revive and be no worse for the wear when spring appears once again. Then we have the third type that look good all year round and only require (light) trimming throughout the year to keep them looking spiffy and manicured and should get cut back in winter (Jan/Feb) so they can go another year (or more) in your garden.

All perennials require a certain degree of maintenance throughout the year to keep them heathy and looking their

Now, what makes perennials truly indispensable is the incredible selection of textures, colors, and shapes. They can be low growers that spread anywhere from 1' to 4' or more, depending on plant type. Others are upright, either spreading or compact. All bring interest, structure and color to your garden. One of the most beneficial aspects to perennials is they don't have to be replaced every few months -they can actually last for several years with good maintenance.

Some perennials are best suited to sunny locations, while others prefer filtered light or shade. Some need more water than others. The trick to combining perennials in your garden is to group together things that have similar requirements and to locate them in a place where they will thrive and give you years of enjoyment.

Barristers Nursery has classes every Saturday at 9:30 ($5 per class)through April on how the prune, shape and maintain perennial plants. These classes are extremely informative (with a hands-on approach to help the student actually see how plants are pruned and shaped) and will take the fear out of gardening. So, join us if you can.
