WALKING SIERRA MADRE - The Social Side

by Deanne Davis

"I have always looked at life as a voyage, mostly wonderful, sometimes frightening. In my family and friends, I have discovered treasure more valuable than gold." Jimmy Buffett

"If there's a heaven for me, I'm sure it has a beach attached." Jimmy Buffett

"I don't get tired of playing Margaritaville. It's paid my bills for years." Jimmy Buffett

From the moment I first heard, "Pencil-thin Moustache" years and years ago, I became a life-long Jimmy Buffett fan. Yes, I have most of his CD's and when cars had CD players, that's pretty much all I played in mine. When I heard he had passed away a few days ago I was shocked and sad. John and I and Crissy and I attended several of his concerts and had the best time ever as they are all sing-alongs and the fragrance of a familiar herb in the air made everyone there relax and enjoy being a Parrot-Head. Recently, we

One particular JB song has been going 'round and 'round in my mind these last few days...

"But there's this one particular harbour So far but yet so near Where I see the days as they fade away And finally disappear. And there's this one particular harbor, Sheltered from the wind. Where the children play on the shore each day, And all are safe within. A most mysterious calling harbour, So far but yet so near. I can see the day when my hair's full gray, And I finally disappear.'

I expect that's where Jimmy Buffett is now, that One Particular Harbour, with a blender full of margaritas, a bunch of friends and that lost shaker of salt.

"Some of it's magic and some of it's tragic, but I've had a good life all the way." (He Went to Paris)

You might not have realized this, but September is National Friendship Month. Henry David Thoreau, one of America's most famous naturalists and philosophers, gave this definition of friendship: "A friend is one who incessantly pays us the compliment of expecting from us all the virtues, and who can appreciate them in us."

Most of us know a lot of people. But the majority of those are acquaintances. People we see here and there, work with, say hi to, but they're not real friends. My best friend for most of my life was my husband, John. What I remember most is walking together, laughing together, just doing life together for 50 years.

Friendships are so important. They are the source of joy, companionship and love. (Doing life together.) We need friends to give us comfort, encouragement, appreciation. A true friendship is like food for your soul, it nourishes you and keeps you going when you'd just I watch American Ninja Warrior every Monday night and I see the friends and family of each of these amazing people yelling up at them: "You've got this!" "You can do it!" "Go for it!" We need cheerleaders in our lives. Friends who can stop us from making big mistakes, celebrating victories and just being there. I am so blessed that my children and grandchildren are the cheerleaders in my life. Columnist, Harvey Mackay gave a few tips for hanging on to friendships in one of his recent columns: Be open, share feelings honestly. Be receptive, everyone's opinion may not match yours, but they're still entitled to it. Listen! Without interrupting or trying to fix things (practically impossible but necessary). Express Gratitude, let your friends know how much their friendship means to you.

A good friend is someone who thinks you're a good egg, even though you're slightly cracked.

The picture today is another pumpkin, possibly a more gentle, benign one after last week's Halloween Horror Story. Speaking of pumpkins: I have pumpkin ice cream in my freezer. Tremendous self-control needed here.

Pasadena Central Library Retrofitting to Start in 2025 approved last week a plan to move forward and begin the process of seismically retrofitting and repairing the Pasadena Central Library with construction expecting to start in fall 2025. The council was given an estimated cost of $195 million for construction.

City staff presented three earthquake retrofit approaches Monday that were identified by the design team. The development of these three retrofit approaches were guided by goals and objectives established with input from library stakeholders, including the Mayor's Technical Oversight Committee and various outreach events and surveys. Those goals include seismic performance, life safety, historic preservation, accessibility, function, upgrade, and public benefit. The City Council selected the Concrete Shear Wall earthquake retrofit approach and directed staff to proceed with a detailed design of the project.

With construction projected to commence in fall 2025 pending funding, the retrofitting and repair process will unfold in multiple phases, culminating in the anticipated re-opening of Mayor emphasized the project's and to view the complete significance, "The Central time line, please visit Library holds a special place PasadenaPublicLibrary.net.

The Pasadena City Council in the hearts of Pasadena's residents, and its retrofit and repair marks a pivotal moment in the city's history. By fusing historical reverence forward-thinking engineering and design, the City of Pasadena is steadfastly committed to creating a resilient and inviting Central Library that will stand for another century and beyond."

According to city staff a second Community Town Hall is scheduled for September 21, at the Robinson Park Recreation Center. The event will offer residents an opportunity to gain insights into the recommended seismic retrofit approach and to stay informed about the latest developments in the journey of the nearly centennial Pasadena Central Library.

On May 3, 2021, City officials closed the Central Library as a result of a seismic evaluation of the building's structural system. The evaluation indicated that the building is an unreinforced masonry (URM) structure and is not in compliance with Pasadena Municipal Code nor meets the minimum structural should performance earthquake occur.

NASA's Psyche Mission on Track for Liftoff Next Month

Bound for a metal-rich asteroid of the same name, the Psyche mission is targeting Oct. 5 to launch from NASA's Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The spacecraft's solar arrays are folded like an envelope into their stowed position. Xenon gas – fuel for the journey to the asteroid belt - is loaded. All four thrusters have passed their final tests. Engineers have confirmed the massive high-gain antenna is set to transmit data. The software is tested and ready. The science instruments – a multispectral imager, magnetometer, and gamma-ray and neutron spectrometer - that will investigate the asteroid Psyche are poised for action.

NASA's Psyche spacecraft has less than 30 days to go before the opening of its launch period, which runs from Thursday, Oct. 5 through Wednesday, Oct. 25. What the mission learns from the metal-rich asteroid may tell us more about how planets form.

"These missions take so many people and so much meticulous, rigorous, personally driven work," said Lindy Elkins-Tanton, principal investigator for Psyche at Arizona State University. "I am ready to be ecstatic. We all are, but we are not ecstatic yet. Let's launch and establish communications - then we can scream, jump, and hug each other!"

Within two weeks, technicians will begin encapsulating the spacecraft in its payload fairing – the cone at the top of the rocket – and the spacecraft will move to SpaceX facilities at NASA's Kennedy Space Center in Florida. Psyche is set to launch atop a SpaceX Falcon Heavy from the center's Launch Complex 39A at 10:38 a.m. EDT on Oct. 5.

"It's getting increasingly real," said Henry Stone, Psyche's project manager at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Southern California. "We are counting the days. The team is more than ready to send this spacecraft off on its journey, and it's very exciting."

After escaping Earth's gravity, Psyche will use solar electric propulsion to accomplish its six-year journey to the asteroid. The efficient propulsion system works by accelerating and expelling charged atoms, or ions, of the neutral gas xenon - creating a thrust that gently propels the spacecraft with a force akin to what you'd feel holding a single AA battery in your hand. Technicians recently loaded 2,392 pounds (1,085 kilograms) of xenon onto the spacecraft over the course of about two weeks.

Measuring roughly 173 miles (279 kilometers) at its widest point, the asteroid Psyche presents a unique opportunity to explore a metal-rich body that may be part of a core of a planetesimal, the building block of an early planet. Once the spacecraft reaches Psyche in the main asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter, it will spend about 26 months orbiting the asteroid, gathering images and other data that will tell scientists more about its history and what it is made of.

Arizona State University leads the Psyche mission. A division of Caltech in Pasadena, JPL is responsible for the mission's overall management, engineering, integration and test, and mission operations. Maxar Technologies in Palo Alto, California, provided the high-power solar electric propulsion spacecraft chassis. A technology demonstration called Deep Space Optical Communications (DSOC) will fly on Psyche in order to test high-data-rate laser communications that could be used by future NASA missions. JPL manages DSOC for the Technology Demonstration Missions program within NASA's Space Technology Mission Directorate and the Space Communications Navigation program within Space Operations Mission Directorate.

Psyche is the 14th mission selected as part of NASA's Discovery Program, managed by the agency's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Alabama. NASA's Launch Services Program, based at Kennedy, is managing the launch service.

FALL TABLE MANNERS

Must admit with all the past Labor Day notes and trivial trivia, I almost missed National Martini Day, and what type of foodie would I be, but fear not friends, I did partake in a Martini and lobster. I have to take my Andy Rooney Card out again and give you my fellow diners the rules of Etiquette 101. I love my daughter, and some of my friends kids. But here goes.

I am asked frequently asked about etiquette and table manners, so I compiled this simple list based on the most common questions.

Your napkin goes in your lap, folded in half, as soon as you sit down. Many people wait until the food arrives, but the proper form is to be prepared.

If you leave the table, place the napkin to the left of your plate, loosely draped.

A napkin is never for blowing your noise or wiping your mouth. Use it to dab at the corners of your mouth or your fingertips. If you need to cleanse further, leave the table and use the appropriate products in the restroom.

In formal dining, a charger will be under the place setting. It remains there during the starter course and is removed at the main course.

Your eating utensils go in the order of use, starting from the outside (furthest from the plate) and working their way in. Forks go on the left; knives and spoons on the right, as you face the plate. Dessert utensils are placed at the top of the plate, sideways.

The bread and butter plate goes to the left, above the forks.

The water glass goes above the knives (behind the wine goblet, if there is one).

Food should be passed counter-clockwise.

It is considered impolite to start eating before everyone is seated and served, including your host.

Only the meal settings and food belong on the table. Do not place your elbows, eyeglasses, notebook, pen or other objects on the table.

Cut no more than two bites of any item at a time. When it comes to bread, tear off one bite at a time and butter it, rather than buttering a whole roll.

Do not season your food until you have tasted it.

It is permissible to use a piece of bread to wipe up excess gravy, as long as you use your fork and not your fingers.

If you need to leave the table, place your utensils on the edge of your plate so that the tips point to the plate's center, in a V-shape. To signal when you are finished, lay your utensils

FIRST WEST NILE VIRUS DEATH REPORTED IN LA COUNTY FIRST DEATH OF 2023 REINFORCES NEED FOR ALL RESIDENTS TO TAKE PRECAUTIONS AGAINST MOSQUITOES

The Los Angeles County Department of Public Health (Public Health) has confirmed the first death due to West Nile virus (WNV) for the 2023 season in Los Angeles County. The patient, a resident of the San Fernando Valley area, was hospitalized and died from West Nile virus -associated neuro-invasive disease. 'I send my deepest condolences to the family and friends of this resident who sadly passed away from West Nile virus," said Muntu Davis, MD, MPH, Los Angeles County Health Officer. "Their death reminds us how important it is to protect ourselves from mosquitoes and prevent them from breed-ing near our homes. Using mosquito repellent and keeping mosquitoes out of our homes can help prevent West Nile virus. Let's all work together to keep our homes and neighborhoods mosquito-free for everyone's safety." Humans get West Nile virus through the bite of an infected mosquito. Most mosquitoes do not carry the virus; therefore, most people bitten by a mosquito are not exposed to the virus. Those who do get West Nile virus may experience mild symptoms including fever, muscle aches, and tiredness.

In some cases, especially in persons over 50 years of age and those with chronic medical conditions, such as cancer and diabetes, severe WNV infection can occur and affect the brain and spinal cord causing meningitis, encephalitis, and paralysis. There is no specific treatment for West Nile virus dis-ease and no vaccine to prevent infection.

A total of 19 cases have been documented in Los Angeles County so far this year (excluding Long Beach and Pasadena as cases identified in those cities are reported by their local health departments). Human infections will likely continue to occur through the rest of summer and fall, with the highest number of cases typically arising in this month, September. West Nile virus -infected mosquitoes and dead birds have been identified across Los Angeles County. Public Health monitors cases of West Nile virus infection and collaborates with local vector control agencies to reduce the risk of West Nile virus to humans by promoting prevention and mosquito reduction.

Resident are encouraged to take the following precautions to reduce their risk:

- Protect yourself: Mosquito repellents can keep mosquitoes from biting you. EPA-registered repellents containing DEET, picaridin, IR3535, 2-undecanone, and oil of lemon eucalyptus are the longest lasting and most effective. They are available as sprays, wipes, and lotions. Con-sider wearing long-sleeved clothes and pants when outside.
- Mosquito proof your home: Make sure that your doors and windows have tight-fitting screens to keep out mosquitoes. Repair or replace screens with tears or holes.
- Reduce mosquitoes: Mosquitoes lay their eggs on standing water.
- Empty items that hold water inside and outside your home once a week 0 Cover water storage containers such as buckets and rain barrels. If no lid, use wire mesh with 0
- holes smaller than an adult mosquito
- Clear standing water in flower pots, saucers, birdbaths and other outdoor containers 0
- Clean and maintain swimming pools, spas and drain water from pool covers 0 Throw away old items in your patio or yard that can hold water, e.g., old car tires and children's toys 0
- Call 2-1-1 or visit www.socalmosquito.org to report persistent problems to your mos-quito control

For more information on West Nile virus, visit publichealth.lacounty.gov/media/westnile. To find a lo-cal vector control district, visit http://www.socalmosquito.org. Other information sources:

The Right Is Ours! is about the extraordinary friendship of two women, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. "The Right is Ours!" is a powerful slogan created by Elizabeth.

Lloyd J. Schwartz directs the musical and has also written the book of the show. Two of his other plays, An Evening with John Wilkes Booth and Independence: The Story of Dr. Mary Walker, were performed at Sierra Madre Playhouse last year. He is the author of 43 produced plays, including A Very Brady Musical; Gilligan's Island- The Musical; You and I; Classic Couples Counseling; Four Pilots for the Price of One, and many more. He has also been a writer or Emily Abeles as Elizabeth Cady Stanton producer for many of your favorite television shows, including The A-Team, Alice, Love American Style, The Munsters Today, The Brady Bunch, What's Happening? and many more.

The Right Is Ours! is the exciting story of brave and daring women who changed the world to give women a greater voice in their lives. One century later, there are still places within the United States threatened with voter suppression, so this new musical is especially relevant.

The right is ours! It still is.

ST. RITA SCHOOL'S MOCK TRIAL TEAM VISITS THE LOCAL COURTHOUSE

St. Rita School's Mock Trial team took a small break from their summer vacation to learn about the

On June 12, 2023, the Mock Trial team observed criminal court proceedings at the Alhambra Courthouse. Students sat in the jury box and learned the procedures of court cases, as well as more about the role of the Judge, Attorney and Jury. This is an experience they will never forget and our students are looking forward to applying these skills once the school year begins!

Mock Trial is a competition in which students simulate a real trial. This involves analyzing evidence and using it to build an argument, public speaking, developing useful knowledge about the law, and critical thinking.

The Constitutional Rights Foundation (CRF) of Los Angeles is the sponsor of the upcoming 2023-2024 school year mock trial competition, which had over 50 schools last year in the middle school competition.

Mock Trial is offered to St. Rita students in grades 6th-8th and is moderated by Daniel Lopez, a retired Judge of the Los Angeles County Superior Court. The Mock Trial team is scheduled to compete in October/November 2023 against other middle schools in presenting the prosecution and the defense involving a felony criminal case.

MODERATION IN ALL THINGS

There was a popular comic strip back when I was a child about a lone cowboy. I think it was called Hipshot, or something like that. He lived in a little log cabin, sparsely furnished, with a framed saying on the wall that read "Moderation in all things." I always thought that made sense. Don't go too extreme either way. Remain balanced.

A few people responded to my writing about how fear can be a great motivator. And for me, my fears definitely got me moving, and learning, and doing. But I would not want to reside in the paranoid mindset of fear and conspiracies behind all closed doors. Oh, I admit that conspiracies abound: a conspiracy is simply when at least two people conspire and plot for some end, usually self-serving. But I cannot do anything about most such conspiracies. To live in fear of such things is to destroy one's physical and mental and emotional health.

Fear can motivate, but don't stay there. Be positive, based on your education and your experi-ence. The opposite of fear is blind faith and extreme over-enthusiasm. You know, "Nothing can hap-pen to me," "the Lord will protect me," "Do you know who I am?" That sort of thing. It all sounds good, except some people have no idea what voice they are listening to, and get into all sorts of trouble. George Bush Jr. had stated that "God" told him to go to war. Is that really what "God" does? Enthusiasm is good, but it should be tempered with reality, and fact-based. Wild enthusiasm gets you killed, or hurt, such as the over-enthusiastic wild mushroom hunter. "Of course I can identify wild edible mushrooms, I read all about it on-line," says the man on his deathbed.

Moderation serves me well. I try to not gush enthusiasm when I start a project, when many of the obstacles are not even known to me yet. That doesn't mean I am negative either; I am just pragmatic, taking things slowly and handling each challenge as it comes. To me, the path of pragmatic moderation means being honest, not exaggerating my abilities or the time something takes. It also means to me that I do not boast or strut around like a rooster as if I am spe-cial. After all, if I achieve any goal, it is sweeter if done with others working in tandem. I find it a richer experience to cross the finish line with my friends and allies.

Enthusiasm is good, but you don't want the path of blind faith, where somehow you act as if you are always protected by some unseen force, when in fact, you're probably not! Be moderate. Don't be the one who has to be rescued. Work to be strong, with a balanced mind, but not im-practically enthusiastic.

I am reminded of the story of the man whose horse had run away, a story first told to me by Jay Watkins in one of my writing classes.

Here is how Jay shared the story.

A farmer in northern China, near the Mongolian border, realized one day that his horse was missing. It was a great inconvenience, in any event, because the farmer needed his horse for the farm work. The farmer's neighbors all came to console him for his great loss, grieving at his great loss. But the farmer told the neighbors not to grieve, pointing out that what had happened was not necessarily so bad, and it didn't warrant grief.

A few days later, the horse returned by itself, and it was accompanied by a magnificent Mongo-lian stallion. The stallion had apparently strayed from its herd, and simply following the farmer's horse back to the farm. This turn of events not only relieved the farmer but now also increased his wealth. The neighbors returned, this time to rejoice the farmer's good fortune, and even to envy his fine new animal. But once again, the farmer would not rejoice with the neighbors, and told them that what had happened was not necessarily so good.

A little time later, the farmer's son was out riding the Mongolian stallion, and since his riding experience had been limited to riding a slow farm horse, the frisky stallion threw the farmer's son. The son's thigh was badly injured in the fall, and meant the son was unable to do some of the farm work. This again inconvenienced the farmer, but he still refused to regard it as a misfor-tune and did not grieve.

In a few months, the barbarian armies of the Mongolian chiefs swept through the farmer's dis-trict of China, and they conscripted every able-bodied man into the army to help defend the em-pire. It was well-known that the mortality rate in the Mongolian army was very high, as they en-gaged in many savage battles. Yet, due to the son's bad leg, he was exempt from this military service.

The point of the story was that the farmer was able to remain calm throughout the ups and downs of his life, without the severe swings of emotion that seem to afflict the average person.

I've learned to accept life as I think it is, not how I've hoped it to be. I'm thankful that I'm still optimistic after all these years, and still willing to stretch my boundaries.

In view of the "Horse that ran away" story, stay mindful that things are not always what they seem.

Apparent outer "success" may be an ultimate failure, spiritually speaking. And our "failures" (though we try to avoid them), can be the stepping stones to our deep, meaningful, true

In my quest for moderation, I also align with no political party. I am in the middle. I have been asked if I am a right winger or a left winger. (I have also been accused of each). "It takes two wings to fly," I always respond.

Katnip News! Beautiful SINEAD!

Meet Beautiful Sinéad: Sinéad, named after the wellknown Irish sing-er, was rescued from a kill shelter along with her sole surviving kitten, Rosie, hours before they were scheduled for euthanasia. Upon getting her to safety, it was discovered that Sinéad had a series of mammary tumors under her front right leg, and was scheduled for surgery right away. Thankfully, the tumors, which were removed, were benign, and she has been given a clean bill of health! Sinéad is a calm, exceedingly affectionate and friendly young cat who is great with kids and would love a home with one or more attentive humans (and their laps) to shower her with the attention she deserves. She was a sweet, loving mama, but now it's her turn to be pam-purr-ed! Born 5/2022. See more of her on our website's "Teen and Young Adult" page, at www.lifelineforpets.org.

THURBER'S TAIL: HOW TO SURVIVE YOUR SHARP-TOOTHED PUPPY

The bloodshed was everywhere.

It was all over my house, my parent's house, my neighbors' houses and splattered at any location in which anyone dared to pet my 9-week-old bundle of joy, Thurber the yellow Labrador.

I was desperate to stop Thurber's reign of puppy-toothed terror, but how?

Why Are a Puppy's Teeth So Sharp?

Puppies, like humans, are born without teeth, but by the time they are 2- to 4-weeks old, they start growing "deciduous teeth" — the sharpest blades known to mankind. In the wild, razor-sharp teeth are needed to help puppies consume meat and soft food.

These teeth also help puppies to develop their jaw muscles and strong biting force, which are also necessities in the wild. About 28 of these Ginsu-teeth are formed by your puppy's sixth week, He'll have about 42 by his 12th week, when his less-treacherous permanent teeth will finally start replacing his deciduous slicers. Which means you are at risk of random bloodlettings for a good month or so until his permanent teeth come in.

How to Protect Your Flesh?

Your puppy has no intention of harming you with his baby daggers. The reason he attempts to bite and chew your hands, reports thelabradorsite.com, is that it helps him relieve the discomfort he is experiencing during the teething process.

One thing you can do during this time is to use voice commands to begin training your puppy not to bite; always reward him with praise and a small training treat when he complies with your

A second step is to provide dental chews, which can reduce dental pains and give your puppy something else to chew on other than you.

According to Kalmpets.com, frozen carrots and watermelons are tasty treats that can help numb your puppy's nerves and decrease discomfort. Frozen puppy toys that are durable and safe can have the same effect.

A frozen dishtowel, wrapped around an ice cube, can also reduce pain, but make sure the material is durable enough that your puppy can't break it apart and digest it.

Corrective Behavior May Help

Though such techniques were helpful with Thurber, they did not stop the biting completely. Desperate, I hired a dog trainer to help me get my puppy under better control.

Her point of view — one that I share — is that most techniques for teaching a dog good behavior should be positive.

However, on rare occasions a corrective action may work best.

To stop him from biting, she placed a rubber "correction" collar on him that had little bumps on the inside of the collar. When he attempted to bite her, thinking he was playing, she gave it a little tug.

Now Thurber was a pup with a lot of energy and rapidly growing muscles. The tug was mild and did not hurt him.

But it was new to him and his response was immediate: he did not like the tug at all and he quickly determined that he better stop the biting to prevent another tug.

I'm not exaggerating here when I tell you after just a few mild tugs — within about a 5-minute period — he never used his sharp teeth to harm anyone again.

Cherish Time with Your Puppy

Looking back, I regret not taking advantage of Thurber's sharp teeth to make some money.

I could have carried Thurber into a liquor store or bank, while shouting "Give me your money or the puppy makes you bleed!"

In any event, it will seem like an eternity, but by the time your puppy reaches three months of age, his permanent teeth will be in and the little sharp ones will have either fallen out or been harmlessly swallowed.

Be sure to enjoy every moment you can as your puppy blossoms — sharp teeth and all — into a healthy adult, because the transition happens all too fast!

BEST STAIR LIFTS OF 2023

Dear Savvy Senior:

Because of chronic arthritis, I have a very difficult time going up and down stairs anymore and am interested in purchasing a stair lift for my two-story house. Can you recommend some good companies? Arthritic Andy

Dear Andy:

Yes, of course! A good home stair lift is a great mobility solution for anyone who is unable, or has a difficult time climbing stairs. To help you choose a quality stair lift that meets your needs and budget, here are a few shopping tips along with some top rated companies.

What to Know

There are two basic types of stair lifts that are sold today: straight and curved. The type you need will depend upon the design of your staircase.

A straight stair lift is one that travels in a straight line up a flight of stairs uninterrupted by landings, bends or curves, and costs anywhere between $2,000 and $5,000 installed. Curved lifts, however, are much more elaborate and will go around corners, bends and changes in direction. Curved lifts are also much more expensive, typically running between $8,500 and $15,000 or more depending on the complexity of the installation.

Most stair lifts available today also have seats, armrests and footplates that fold up out of the way, and swivel seats that make getting into and out of the chair easier. They also come with standard safety features like seatbelts, braking systems and footrest sensors, push-button or rocker-switch controls located on the armrest for easy operation, and "call send" controls which allow you to call or send the unit to the other end of the stairs. Make sure the lift you choose has all these features.

If you are a large person, you may need to get a heavy-duty lift with a wider seat and bigger lifting capacity - all companies offer them. Or, if you're tall, find out about raising the seat height during installation.

Depending on the company, you may also have the option of choosing between an electric (AC) and a battery powered (DC) stair lift. Electric stair lifts are simpler and cheaper than battery powered units, but if your home loses power so does your lift. While battery powered lifts work even if there's a power failure.

Best Stair Lifts

To help you choose a great stair lift the National Council on Aging, which is a national nonprofit organization that advocates for older Americans, put together a review team to research the different companies. Their list of best stair lifts of 2023 includes:

Editor's Pick: Bruno (bruno.com) Most Affordable: AmeriGlide (ameriglide.com) Best Customer Reviews: Acorn (acornstairlifts.

Most Supportive Design: Harmar (harmar.com) Most Adaptable to the Home: Access BDD (accessbdd.com)

Best for Arthritis: Stannah (stannah-stairlifts.com)

See NCOA.org/adviser/stair-lifts/best-stair-lifts to read their detailed reviews.

Unfortunately, health insurance including original Medicare does not cover home stair lifts, but some Medicare Advantage plans may help pay. Or, if you have long-term care insurance it too may cover a portion of the costs.

If you qualify for Medicaid, many states offer waivers that may help pay for a lift, and the VA has several grant and benefit programs that may offer assistance too if you're a veteran.

To save some money, you may want to consider purchasing a used or refurbished model. Or, if you need a stair lift for only a short period of time, consider renting one. Most companies offer these options, and many offer financings too.

To get started, contact some of the previously listed stair lift companies who will put you in touch with a dealer in your area. All dealers provide free inhome assessments and estimates and can help you choose an appropriate lift.

GETTING STARTED

by Michele Silence

You know you need to exercise. It's time to get out there and move, but it just seems so daunting. How do you get started? Taking that first step might just be the hardest thing of all, more difficult than any exercise. Why?

What's the holdup? First, give some serious thought to what has been holding you back. It could be time pressure, not knowing what to do, wondering what exactly will be beneficial, or maybe it's connected to emotions - feelings of not being coordinated or ever having engaged in any physical activity. Take a few moments to tune in and discover not just how you feel about exercise, but also about your ability to move. Will you get easily winded? Or are you hesitant that you may look like an obvious newbie? What is it that plays in your mind and undermines getting started? Once you are aware of that, it's easier to take steps to keep your thinking geared towards moving forward. Put possible fears to rest. Think about solutions to real barriers that you may face. Come up with a plan that addresses all the things making you say, "Not Now."

Why is it important? What is the single most important reason why you want to start exercising? Is it because you want to improve your health? Did the doctor advise you to start engaging in more physical activity to control a chronic condition? Are you having a hard time keeping up with children/grandchildren? Maybe you don't like being out of breath when walking to the mailbox and back. Whatever it is, hold that thought. Use it as your primary motivation to begin and keep going.

What are your expectations? One of the biggest reasons why people abandon an exercise routine is because they don't think it's yielding any benefits. The results don't match what was expected. If you're aiming for weight loss, remember that anything more than 1-2 lbs. of weight loss a week isn't realistic. It takes burning 3500 calories to shed one pound. Walking for 30 minutes a day can burn a few hundred calories. Combine that with consuming 500 fewer calories a day, and you're on your way to that 1-2 lb. weight loss per week. Also, measure yourself before starting your program and then every 3 months thereafter. Avoid relying solely on the scale, which doesn't provide information about whether you're burning fat or gaining muscle. It doesn't account for positive changes like an increased metabolism, reduced bad cholesterol, elevated good cholesterol, lower blood pressure, and decreased reliance on some medications. Be patient; progress takes time.

Michele Silence, M.A. is a 37-year certified fitness professional offering semi-private/virtual fitness classes and a weight management support group.

enjoying meeting new people and forming relationships? Group fitness classes or lessons would be a good fit for you. Alternatively, bring a friend along to encourage you to show up at the gym. Having someone else who can motivate you when you're not feeling up to it goes a long way in keeping you on track. If you're more introverted and prefer doing things alone, perhaps plan events that involve nature. Even walking your dog daily is great exercise and will add joy to your dog's life too.

How to succeed? Set realistic goals. For example, if you know you can't possibly go for a walk at 7 am every day, don't set that as a goal. Aim for a number you can consistently achieve - three days, four days, whatever you think you can realistically do to set yourself up for success. Another aspect to consider is the type of activity you're going to engage in. If you dislike sports, taking up pickleball isn't going to work. Like to dance? Try an aerobics or Zumba class. If you feel uncoordinated, you'll want to keep it simple with activities like walking, hiking, or cycling. If you haven't worked out in 20 years, bootcamp-style workouts are not a suitable choice. Select an activity that aligns with your lifestyle, interests, and fitness level.

Be cautious though, check with your healthcare professional before jumping in. It's best to be on the safe side and ensure that you have the OK to get started. If not, you might encounter setbacks or obstacles that you didn't anticipate. If there's anything you need to be cautious about or personalize, it's good to know that upfront.

Taking that first step can be frightening. Expecting yourself to initiate and sustain physical activity, especially if you've never been active, can be intimidating. But the greatest fear is not doing anything at all. Not doing some form of exercise could negatively affect your health and happiness for many years. So, take that first Social or solo? Are you a social creature, step. Give it a try. You only have to do it once.

WHY DO SOME CUTE BABIES GROW UP UGLY?

year. Since then, it has been a delight to watch her grow.

I will not say she is the cutest baby in the world, but I haven't met any cuter. She was born cute, and I'm not sure what part of the family she got that.

Sometimes, when in the hospital, I walk by the maternity ward and look at all the new babies. Looking at them, I can see how cute everyone is. I have not found an ugly baby in the maternity ward yet.

The other day, I had to go to Walmart to pick up some items. Walking down the aisles, I saw a few babies pushed around in shopping carts. I looked at each one and smiled, noticing they were all very cute.

Walking down the last aisle was another baby in a shopping cart, and I stopped to look and smile. Then I did something I had not done before. I looked up to see the mother that was pushing the shopping cart. Boy, was I shocked.

I'm not an expert on ugly, but that mother was the ugliest mother I have ever seen. It got me thinking about that cute baby. Will she grow up to be as ugly as her mother? I have never seen an ugly baby, so I had to ponder why some babies grow up ugly. That evening, as I was getting ready for bed,

I looked into my bathroom mirror. Staring back at me was one of the ugliest persons I have seen in a very long time. I was shocked. How in the world did I get so ugly? Was I born ugly?

The next day, I got out one of my old photo albums to look through it and see what I looked like as a baby. Sure enough, there were several baby pictures of me. You won't believe it, but I was a cute baby. I never gave that a thought before.

Growing up, I never thought of my parents as ugly. After all, they were my parents. I noticed some of my school friends had really ugly parents. I tried to keep their secret because I didn't want to embarrass them. Looking through my photo album, I saw all those pictures from when I was a cute baby up to my wedding. I will not brag, but I was a cute little guy when I was young. After looking in the bath-room mirror, I wondered what happened to make me so ugly.

The only thing different in my life was that I got married. I'm not going to go there for obvious reasons. If a baby is born cute, why doesn't it stay cute derministries.com.

Our second great grand baby | for the rest of its life? What happened to me was born at the end of last | that I lost my cuteness, as I got older?

Following this thought about cuteness, I was in Walmart and happened to go down the aisle of beauty products. This is the first time I have looked in this aisle, so I was unsure what I was looking at. All of those products guaranteed that if I used them, I would look beautiful.

I don't want to look beautiful; I just want to look cute! [Sigh!]

I was tempted to get some of the products, but I didn't know where to start. Where does the journey back to cuteness start?

As I was looking at these products, one of the workers at Walmart came by and said, "Can I help you with anything?"

You do not know how tempted I was to ask her what I needed to restore my cuteness. I stuttered and said, "No, ma'am. I'm just looking for some products for my wife." That got me out of a sticky situation. My wife does not need anything to look cute; she has maintained it since I met her. I have been tempted many times to ask her her secret, but then I was afraid she would tell me.

Maybe when I was young, if I had paid more attention to my cuteness, I might have retained it much longer than I did. But nobody told me what to do along this line. I blame my parents who should have told me how to retain my cuteness. Maybe I can find a lawyer to help sue them for allowing me to become so ugly. How much is ugly worth? I may have to settle with the fact that I'm just not cute. Maybe the secret is not to regain my cute-ness but to slow down my ugliness.

If I'm as ugly as my mirror suggest, how in the world do people around me tolerate me? I'm not sure I could tolerate me. I don't have an inferiority complex, but I do have an exterior complex and I'm not sure what to do about it.

In my devotions recently, I read this verse. 'And even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you" (Isaiah 46:4).

That verse got me thinking about growing old. I don't need to worry about the past because God will carry me through everything. The secret to this is allowing God to be God and allowing Him to do what only He can do in my life.

happened to see a documentary about chimpanzees. Chimpanzees are the nearest relative of human beings. The documentary Chimp Empire narrated by Mahershala Ali describes the lives of chimpanzees as one of never ending conflict. The chimp world is hierarchical with each individual doing his utmost to move up within the hierarchy. The biggest and toughest chimp is the alpha male. Life is not all that simple. There are threats from other groups of chimpanzees who seek more territory and access to more fruit bearing trees. Additionally there are threats from within the empire. Younger and powerful members seek power on their own and attempt to overturn the existing empire. Nevertheless, the older alpha males realize that these young upstarts are of great value to the empire in the potential fights against enemy groups.

Enough about chimps, who of course do have their endearing and playful sides; why do I keep thinking about this documentary? Is this model of hierarchy, and battle including predetermined sex-roles instructive about what are the necessary characteristics of human societies?

What are the necessary attributes of an elected leader in our modern American Democracy? Many people, progressive liberal people like myself, bemoan the fact that our President is an octogenar-ian necessarily enfeebled by age and therefore inappropriate in these times of internal, external and existential crisis. Of course the other side presently is led by the aged ex-President and their aged weakened Senate Leader. The ex-President still displays (or attempts to display) the characteristics of a larger than life super-hero who is invulnerable and invincible. He is a man not burdened by ideals but is blatantly interested only in power and public adoration. He is always on the attack, willing to attack and this behavior, although sickening to me, is very appealing to many Americans who feel the need for a STRONGMAN on their side.

of larger than life character is all too reminiscent of the father of our

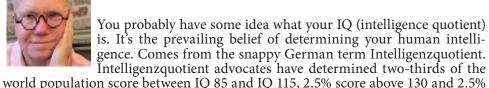

As usual I'm up | Country, General George Washington. The near-by Huntington Library at one time had an exhibit displaying the history of George Washington and that exhibit, combined with my own reading, has given me a pretty complete picture of the man. From a very young age he craved power, always concerned about his appearance and how that affected others. His sturdy appearance on a horse, his great height, and the clothes he chose, were always of great importance. At the time of the Constitutional Convention he appeared already in military dress, as the presiding person at the convention. Washington was a slave-owner who built his glamorous expensive home at Mount Vernon well-aware of the impressive impact that would have upon others. He enjoyed being referred to as "King" by his Vice-President John Adams who was elected as the new country's second

Contrary to Mister Trump, George Washington did have a more reflective side. His well-remembered farewell address warned the nation to avoid the creation of an overgrown military which he saw as a great threat to liberty. He warned against the dangers of sectionalism arguing that the true motives of a sectionalist are to create rivalries between regions and people to gain power and take control of the government. He emphasized that the federal government has the responsibility to look out for the welfare of ALL THE AMERICAN PEOPLE and the great strength of the country resides in its unity. Although not much of a thinker he allowed himself to benefit from the assistance of rivals such as Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, and Thomas Jefferson. His example reminds me not only of both the alpha Chimpanzee and ex-President Trump but also contains much more understanding and compassion. To an extent he was both a 'bleeding heart' combined with an 'iron fist". Such people are rare and if they do exist rarely relish the demeaning arduous process of participating in the American nominating process. It is my hope that such a person can be found that the America in which we all live will remain secure in addition to expressing and representing Ironically this very kind the highest ideals and virtues of human kind.

RICH JOHNSON

NOW THAT'S RICH

below 70.

Anything strike you funny about the percentages above? The geniuses who came up with intelligenzquotient must have scored in the bottom 2.5%. At least scored poorly in math. They completely forgot about 28.4% of the total world population. Not all scientists think highly of the concept of IQ's. My favorite evolutionary biologist, Stephen Jay Gould, (whose your favorite?) criticizes intellgenzquotience as a method to determine intelligence. He compares it to craniometry, popular scientific theory in the 1800's which believed you could measure intelligence by measuring the size of your cranium lol (someone get me a tape measure).

Alright, enough high minded intellectual discourse.

My favorite comedian is Jacob Rodney Cohen. You probably know him better as Rodney Dangerfield.

Rodney Dangerfield was the comical name of a faux cowboy star on the Jack Benny radio program in 1941.

Rodney became a surprise hit one night on the Ed Sullivan Show. Ed needed a last-minute replacement and Rodney Dangerfield was in the neighborhood. Yay! Rodney was on his way.

I thrive on clean humor and though Rodney skates near the edge once in a while, he is mostly okay. Cut out this column and put it in a safe place. You can quickly become the life of any party by memorizing a variety of Rodney's famous lines. Here goes:

'My wife and I were happy for 20 years. Then we met."

"I was so ugly my mother used to feed me with a sling shot."

"I come from a stupid family. During the Civil War my great uncle fought for the

'When I played in the sandbox the cat kept covering me up."

'When I was a kid my parents moved a lot, but I always found them."

"I told my psychiatrist everyone hates me. He said, I was being ridiculous – everyone hasn't met me yet."

"It was the same thing in the army, no respect. They gave me a uniform that glowed

"Don't talk about yourself so much...we'll do that when you leave."

"I bought a perfect second car...a tow truck."

'I found there is only one way to look thin: hang out with fat people."

'My old man never liked me. He gave me my allowance in traveler's checks." "I tell ya, I was an ugly child. I once asked a cop if he could find my parents. He said, I don't know kid. There's lots of places for them to hide." Parents: Love your kids and make sure they know you love them. Tell them often (Remember: Someday your gonna need help getting up from the couch.) Like I've said often, break a rule here and there with your kids. Take them out of school on a Friday at noontime. Tell the school you're taking them to doctors appointments wink, wink, nudge, nudge. And then, take them to a movie. Probably not a good idea if your kid is a teacher or the principal. But, hey, why not?

Have a great week. My band, JJ Jukebox is celebrating my birthday (Halloween), with a rock and roll concert on Saturday, October 28 at Nano Café. (Yeah, I know its two months off). Come in costume. Dine, drink, dance. You can still be in bed by 10:00. Reservations call Nanos (626) 325-3334.

Friend Jane Fuller is performing at Corfu Restaurant Saturday night, September 23. She is the best musician singer of all my friends. Reservations call Corfu (626)

DAN TYREE

HOW ARE YOU IN THE BEST FRIEND DEPARTMENT?

"So, Dan – what are you doing tonight?"

After 40-plus years, I can still hear one of my best friends from college asking that dreaded question.

No matter how many homework assignments, romantic entanglements and writing deadlines occupied my plate, Jack would invariably cajole me into some series of nerdy antics.

that (a) I drifted away from Jack after college and (b) I failed to visit him before his premature death. (I'm not so overwrought about high school friends who escaped from my orbit. If they failed to "stay cool" and "always remember French class,"

I have felt guilty over the decades. Family responsibilities and work responsibilities (and let's face it - channel-surfing responsibilities) ensured they voided the warranty!) But, ironically enough, I see I have plenty of company in my isolation.

According to figures cited by the Wall Street Journal, 40 percent of Americans say they don't have a best friend at all – up from 25 percent in 1990.

I understand competitor USA Today attributed this statistic to (a) spontaneous combustion from climate change and (b) white supremacists declaring, "I'm so supreme I don't even need other white people, although I would like to borrow a skill saw, and the occasional six-pack would be appreciated"; but I'll try to focus on my original source.

(Speaking of which, the Journal conveniently failed to quote anyone admitting, "After spending thirty bucks a week on the Journal, I don't have any MONEY for tagging along to the @%^& gun-and-knife show!")

Frankly, I feel unworthy of being the recipient of the sort of devotion described in James Taylor's "You've Got a Friend." I don't want someone dropping everything to come to my rescue – especially if they're directing airplanes onto a landing strip. ("Winter, spring, summer or fall...you'll keep working until you pay for airplane and all.") keep working until you pay for airplane and all."

In a perfect world, it's healthy to have a confidente you can use as a sounding board. But considering the news sources some people rely on, your sounding board might be crawling with termites.

Society's mixed signals exacerbate the BFF shortage. "A dog is man's best friend." "A boy's best friend is his mother." "Your spouse should be your best friend." "People, let me tell you 'bout my best friend. He's a one-boy cuddly toy, my up, my down, my pride and joy." And so forth. Apparently, best friends don't roam solo across the hedge; they come in a bulk container from Costco!

The problem may accelerate as people learn to outsource friend duties. I call it the Dirty Dozen strategy. If you can bust a bunch of people out of prison in return for their wearing hideous bridesmaid gowns, what's the point of harassing sorority sisters?

Our culture still offers opportunities for wing men, alibis and designated drivers; but many guys feel awkward and homophobic about the "Do you want to be my best friend - check 'Yes' or 'No" step. ("Sure, I'll keep you company at the DMV - but only, um, if there's a hot tub filled with babes displaying Big American Breasts!")

Make an honest assessment of your own life. Maybe you'll continue muddling through as a loner, or perhaps you'll treasure a co-conspirator who texts you, "What are you doing tonight?"

"Oh, I'm about to touch down after my flight from Little Rock and – where are the lights??? AIIIIEEEE!"

C'mon – Jack would have laughed.

HUDDLE UP

With HARVEY HYDE "WHAT A SHAME"

Finally! The college football season has begun. Week Number One: The PAC 12 had 13 wins and no losses. This provided some welcome positivity after the turmoil of the PAC-12- to PAC-2 events of last month. A great result for the first week, and a little bit sad looking ahead.

What a show the PAC-12 quarterbacks displayed for the conference. All schools were represented with skill and offensive efforts. These talented teams certainly deserved national recognition for this first week of play. Each week, I list my own "Top Twelve" teams. Four of those teams were in the PAC 12. And look at the scores. Utah—24 points; USC--66 points; Washington – 56 points; Oregon – 81 points; and the remaining teams did well also. Oregon State—42 points; Cal – 58 points; Stanford – 34 points; Colorado—45 points; points; Arizona--38 points. No matter how you look at it, these are very impressive numbers.

Now, this week, reality may set in for some. Someone is going to lose. USC vs. Stanford and going forward some stronger opponents, This week: Wisconsin, Nebraska, Baylor for Washing ton State, Colorado and Utah and others. As many of you realize, we are looking at possibly the end of the great traditions of the PAC 8-10-12. Some of the "glory years" of seasons gone by. Traditions and games already changed. What happens to the records made and recorded? I guess now just memories, but what great ones!

How about the Rose Bowl PAC and Big TEN match ups with legends: USC's John McKay, John Robinson, Pete Carroll. UCLA's Terry Donahue, Tommy Prothro. Washington's Jim Owens, Don James. ASU's John Cooper, Stanford's John Ralston, Jim Harbaugh... just to name a few. How about those Big TEN names. Ohio State's Woody Hayes, Earl Bruce. Michigan's Bo Schembechler. Wisconsin's Barry Alverez; Iowa's Hayden Fry; Michigan State's Duffy Daugherty. You old timers out there...,do you remember more? I know I have missed a few of these legends.

For today, let's congratulate Prime Time Deion Sanders (and his QB son). He did it "with style." He sure did! He backed it up. We can look forward to a sold out Rose Bowl when Colorado plays UCLA on October 28th. We'll watch to see if his interviews provide good 'fight talk' to opposing teams to come.

As a side note: Here's hoping for you football fans who won't or can't get to games, (or just want to see everything,) that your teams are able to be seen on television on some channel or network or station. I'm including college and professional games here. This is the new fan challenge (which I have predicted would come.) We will be paying more for our entertainment. Will be learning how to sign up for special shows and highlights. Will have to choose which leagues and teams we want to watch on a regular basis. We can look for the PAC 12 network, the Big TEN network, the NFL network, the Fantasy football network, and if we wish, the SEC network etc. and on and on. Just open your wallets.

This first week has been a good one for the PAC 12 (possible finale year) whether we like it or not, the end. It's going to be hard to see the PACa 12 go away. But as George Allen used to say, "The future is now!" Let's enjoy the final year! Hope your team wins
